In addition to this lengthening thread, I've received over 20 e-mails outside of the list in response to my vague query, so thank you all for that. Lots of names and links to music, so many in fact, it's will take a lot of time to get to all of them.

Things are crystallizing in my head a little bit, so here's the current condition of my thoughts.

I had in mind poets who perform in rock/pop/hip-hop idioms rather than poets who perform their texts accompanied by music and/or sound, and I didn't have in mind sound poetics. Tracie Morris is simply Tracie Morris, a poet who works with sound and rhythm kind of like a musician would, and I'm a fan, but that's not the kind of a poet I'm after in this query. (Although I find it pretty fascinating that she has said that she went into poetry even though she wanted to be an MC, but found it too daunting to struggle with the sexism in the industry side of the game; I paraphrase from memory here, I apologize if I'm completely twisting her words.)

I'm not even after poets who work mainly with text, but who often collaborate with musicians for the sake of performance, or for the sake of experimenting with various historic avant-garde or neo-avant practices. The reason I'm not pointing my searchlight in that direction is because such a practice is very much out in the open and I can easily click on the bookmark tab in my browser and listen to stuff on ubuweb or pennsound, etc. I'm a fan of that too. Poets who perform their texts also routinely mention such practices in their bio blurbs and interviews, as they well should!

The reason why I'm after the poets who work in rock/pop/hip-hop idioms is that it seems to me that poets who play/sing/rap/spin in bands may be numerous, but they keep that kind of music separate from their poetic practice and don't let the two worlds overlap too much and therefore they can't be found on a fictive rock/pop/hip-hop equivalent of ubuweb. My hypothesis would be that it's because we are programmed to specialize and be professionals, to be afraid of being marginalized as someone who dabbles in poetry and in music side-by-side.

Someone said in their reply to me that no one can "dabble" in music, because it takes too much work and practice. That's true. You can't dabble in music or poetry as far as creating it goes. I didn't mean by "dabble" that someone out there plays a triangle every once in a while and claims they're musicians or writes limericks for fun and claims they're poets :-) But however much you practice and perform, unless you are at least a little bit successful and have a following, you'll be perceived as a dabbler, right? I'm sort of interested in reception/perception and playing the game, rather than abstracted artistic practice.

There is then the global question of "the game" and to what extent combining the practice of writing cerebral poetry with the practice of playing silly music (that is supposed to make people literally shake, dance, mosh, head-bang, or at least bop), is beneficial or detrimental to one's "career." (I actually have no doubts that this combo can only be good artistically for the resulting texts and music, as long as the poet/musician in question has enough time to devote to each interest and doesn't need much sleep.)

And just to be completely honest, there is a personal stake in my query in that I've recently begun playing and singing in two bands, am writing a lot of songs and starting to perform in clubs etc., while I'm of course still writing and translating poetry, sending it out, and trying to get published, succeeding here and there. But the sheer number of responses this has gotten makes me think a) this list is full of friendly people helping me come up with my little database of poet/musicians, and b) there is a bigger issue here than my ego-centric soul-searching. I didn't expect that my query would yield such an avalanche of information, so thanks, and please share your further thoughts on this topic. Best,

Snezana (Nana for short :-)

On Sun, Apr 18, 2010 at 8:46 AM, Camille Martin
<[redacted]> wrote:
> I'm a recovering pianist - master's degree at a conservatory - now composing a song cycle from some of poems in my recently-released Sonnets.
>
> If any sopranos out there would like to look at the scores or hear a sound file, let me know. One is a capella, and the rest have piano accompaniment.
>
> Camille Martin
>
> http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html
> http://www.camillemartin.ca
> http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com
> _____
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [[redacted]] On Behalf Of Philip Meersman [[redacted]]
> Sent: Saturday, April 17, 2010 6:22 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)
>
> The Belgian Poet Dirk Elst, you can also add to your list.
> You can find more on him on his blogsite: http://dirkelst.blogspot.com/ which > is in Dutch but he writes and performs also in English, see also:
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Vv538I9hdVk&feature=related, > http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tOo_WM-bWbk and > http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vZnZc5ZH9mU
>
> Fragments out of one of his latest performance shows.
> I worked with Dirk for several performances and I recommend him as a poet, a > performer and a musician.
>
>
>
> On Thu, Apr 15, 2010 at 11:14 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> i was a musician before i was a poet. i went to berklee college of music >> and graduated from their electronic music and recording program. i still >> compose but i mostly keep it to myself.
>>
>>

>>
>> On Apr 12, 2010, at 3:31 PM, Nana Zabic wrote:
>>
>> Hi All,
>>>
>>> I'm cataloging, in my head at the moment, contemporary poets I've read >>> and/or met who also play/sing/rap/spin in bands or solo, or at least >>> did for a period of time in the past. I'm not coming up with a whole >>> lot of names, but I have this hunch that there is a lot of us, >>> although we don't necessarily mention our double lives in our bio >>> blurbs.
>>>
>>> If you are or know a poet who is/was also a musician in any shape or >>> form, please respond here or e-mail me at [redacted]. I don't >>> have a clear goal in mind as to why I'm cataloging this phenomenon.
>>> But there might be an event in the future.
>>>
>>> Thanks,
>>>
>>> Snezana
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>
>
>
> --
> Philip Meersman
> !!! New Address
> Tentoonstellingslaan 418, bus 46
> 1090 Jette
> Belgium
> tel[redacted]
> www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
> www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
> www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
> skype: Spooninmybrain
> [redacted]
> www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
> 21/03/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
> 02/04/10: Performance opening expo "Love Letters", KULTOUR10, Sint-

Niklaas,
> BE (http://www.kultour10.be/kultour10/index.php/podium/31-qspooninmybrainq)
> 16/04/10: "Binnenkort ook in navulpak" op het Once upon a Festival, Kasteel > van Laarne, BE (www.onceuponafestival.be)
> 21/04/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
> 05/05/10-09/05/10: Literature festival of Tallinn, Estonia
> 21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
> 21/07/10: BruSlam, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
>
>
>

↑ Index

209. Rob McLennan
above/ground press: out-of-print (sale!);
Tue 20 Apr 2010

Digging through boxes recently, I discovered a few extra copies of older chapbooks considered out-of-print (just what will he discover next?). 2010 subscriptions still available.

1. John Barton. DESTINATIONS, LEAVING THE MAP. Published in an edition of 100 copies, September 12, 1995, for a reading by John Barton at the TREE Reading Series. 16 pages. The poems later appeared as part of Sweet Ellipsis (Toronto ON: ECW Press, 1998). Barton is current editor of The Malahat Review. $40.

2. Michael Holmes. 21 Hotels. Published in an edition 210 copies, September 1998 (reprinted from an earlier self-publication, August 1998, of an edition of 21). Design by Paul Davies. 24 pages. Not yet appeared in a single-author trade, but reprinted in Groundswell: the best of above/ground press, 1993-2003 (Fredericton NB: Broken Jaw Press, 2003). Holmes is current editor at Groundswell: best of above/ground press, 1993-2003ECW Press. $40.

3. Barry McKinnon. in the millennium. Published in an edition of 250 copies, April 2000. Cover design & production by jwcurry (on gestetner). Later appeared as part of In The Millennium (New Star Books, 2009). 12 pages. $30.

4. George Bowering as Ellen Field. A, Youre Adorable. Published in an edition of 200 copies, October 1998 (later reprinted admitting Bowerings authorship by above/ground press, October 2004). A fraction appeared in (where Bowering first publicly admits the pseudonym) in Changing on the Fly, The Best Lyric Poems of George Bowering (Vancouver BC: Polestar Books, 2004), and later, in full, in his Vermeer's Light: Poems 1996-2006 (Vancouver BC: Talonbooks, 2006). 28 pages. $40.

5. PURDYESQUE. Ed. rob mclennan. Published in an edition of 250 copies, May 2006, for a poetry reading on May 7th, 2006 as part of the conference Al / Purdy: The Ivory Thought at the University of Ottawa (May 5-7, 2006). Poems by George Bowering, Stephen Brockwell, Gwendolyn Guth, Steven Heighton & rob mclennan. 24 pages. $10.

Add $1 for postage; outside Canada, all prices in US currency (& add another $2 for postage). Make cheques payable to rob mclennan, c/o 858 Somerset Street West, main floor, Ottawa Ontario K1R 6R7 above/ground press; killing trees for literature since 1993; http://www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com/

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

210. amy king

An Armantrout Admission ...

Tue 20 Apr 2010

In response to Pound ...

...and on an anarchic cooperation, here -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/04/20/with-no-slither/

↑ Index

211. Aryanil Mukherjee

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Tue 20 Apr 2010

To some writing traditions (could be even looked at racially)Â music has remanied central to the creation of poetic arts.

In Bengal, for example, virtually every poet is a singer. Some make music, write music andÂ some don't. But its hard to come across a Bengali poet who is not into music - vocal or instrumental or can't sing or doesn't haveÂ melody in his voice- brain.

Let me spare "noise" music from this note. "Noise music" isn't the first thing ancient musical traditions look for and furthermore any & every music is eventually "noise music". Let me put it that way.

Aryanil

----- Original Message -----
From: "steve dalachinsky" <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sunday, April 18, 2010 4:38:42 AM GMT -05:00 US/Canada Eastern
Subject: Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Â haiku reading at this year's Sakura Matsuri (Cherry Blossom Festival), at the Brooklyn Botanic Garden.
Â
steve dlachinsky, tony pupello, yuko otomo, cor van den huevel and others

Â For those of you who don't know, the Brooklyn Botanic Garden has MORE species of cherry than anywhere outside of Japan. Â We don't have more trees than Washington - but way more varieties. Â And the festival boasts daiko drumming, ikebana, Butoh dance, and many, many other cultural events.
Â
If you plan on going, just make sure to get there early as the lines to get in can be daunting! Â (Folks are just clamoring to hear the haiku/senryu poets!). Â
Â FREE
Brooklyn Botanic Garden
Sakura Matsuri
Saturday, May 1st
2:00 - 3:00 PM
Alfred T. White Memorial

May 14 Â 7pm Â at Bowery Poetry Club steve dalachinsky jane and albey balgochian's basscentric Â

May 22 - 2 pm at Grand Army Plaza Library
Â Â Â Â steve dalachinsky and Matt Maneri

Sunday June 20 - 2-5pm
the Vision Festival presents @ AGathering of Tribes
285 East 3rd St. (between C & D - 2nd floor)
donation to Tribes

poetry by

Jeff Wright
Bob Heman
Aaron Howard w/music to be announced
Lewis Warsh

Poetry & Music

Albey Balgochian & Jane
Barry Wallenstein
Yuko Otomo - Shayna Dulberger
Jake Marmer / plus musician to be announced
Steve Dalachinsky
Alexandre Pierrepont
Tamara Gombert

Musicians / Improvs
Ellen Christi
Ambrose Bie piano
Max Johnson bass
Andrew Barker drums
Charles Waters reeds
plus others

On Fri, 16 Apr 2010 02:31:03 -0700 lora <[redacted]>
writes:
> I am Lora Bloom, a poet whose outlet is mostly music these days. Â I
>
>
> I am Lora Bloom, a poet whose outlet is mostly music these days. Â In > the late nineties I published a lot and started my own literary > magazine, Siren's Silence. Â Now my poems see light mostly in my band > "Radio Eris" http://www.myspace.com/radio5eris - we are an > experimental spoken-word outfit in Philadelphia. Â Some of my new > work, instead of being written, Â comes out as Â spontaneous > improvisations with the band.
>
>
> Â Â Â
>

>
>

↑ Index

212. teersteeg
Re: Art is theft
Tue 20 Apr 2010

On its own art doesn't exist--like a tree or a rock exist. It's empty air. Someone has to make something out of something then someone calls it art.

brunoT

----- Original Message -----
From: "Matthew Landis" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, April 19, 2010 12:22 PM
Subject: Re: Art is theft

> 1
>
> the translation and appropriation of not > only that which we approve of or > value but that which is most reprehensible;
>
> to separate the intentionality of > the author from the production of meaning
> and EMBRACE exemplarity
>
> not just as an argumentative or > rhetorical strategy, but as a > poetics in and of itself:
>
> to let the detritus of our cultural > and politcal lives speak
> on their own terms---to think of
>
> the poet less as the painter and
> more as the craftsman who > constructs the frame
>
> 2
>
> this past decade and the future of poetry
> has eroded the pretense of the confessional
> and the vulgarity of the topical & the opportunism
> of influence---in the sense that the topical simply adopts the tropes and rhetorical logic of media's narrative structure--- (ie, the war is happening, we oppose the war, but how long can you write about war?

what happens when the war is over? do we just find another war? and if there is none do we sit around WAITING for one with baited breath?) it highlights the value of the poetic voice addressing and reflecting the everyday--- of interrupting and detourning; of intervening
in the narratives, language, thought--processes and values of our present culture and thereby, not only oppose & question
the logic and practice of war, but the behavior, language, and philosophical foundation that war is built upon--- to construct dialectical "IMAGES" which are concrete (in the vispo and literal sense), enduring, and impactful collections and galleries of the ephemera & carrion of culture; as well as the traumatic
and the horroific; as well as the joyful and celebratory--- not in the delusional quest for permanence or tradition but the wholly absurd and yet wholly necessary quest to use poetry to not only settle those unsettled debts of history, but to challenge the very notion of indebtedness--- to light the fuses which will result in these explosions of these dialectical images in the minds of the reader: to write poetry in the service of uncovering and enacting new consciousness.

3

the love of linguistic play, an anarchistic spree celebrating the freedom of consciousnes, which is the endless possibility of the verbal expression of consciousness that is language---fashioning
"chorals out of random input"

John Cunningham wrote:
You have raised a question that I've been pondering for some time although perhaps in a different context. This past Sunday, I had Steven Smith, formerly of the sound poetry group Owen Sound as well as director of Sage Hill Writing who is now director of Literary Arts at the Banff Centre, on my radio show 'Speaking of Poets' heard every Sunday from 4:30 to 5:00 p.m.
CST on CKUW 95.9 FM (and available for streaming or download from the website). We talked about the concepts of sampling and found poetry. I've had poets as diverse as Karen Solie and Jan Conn to the experimental such as Erin Moure, Lisa Robertson and Angela Carr on the show who have used these techniques. I have also had discussion with poets who are aghast at this plagiarism. What are the parameters in these days of FLARF poetic techniques for the legitimacy of 'borrowings'? When does one have to cite?

CKUW
I've heard others who, if wanting to use a phrase, line or brief passage from another writer's work actually indicate that they would send a request to that writer for permission to use that material. Is this necessary?
John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Maria Damon
Sent: April-17-10 5:37 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Art is theft

here's a shot. but off the cuff.
art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not? being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.

Ann Bogle wrote:

Explain art is theft.

I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could

think of for poor.

The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all?

Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting,

something

about a mountain.

I was glad after renting Tom& Viv years after its release that I had read

Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?

Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?

Chicago Style. 300 words.

Ann Bogle

guidelines

↑ Index

213. Jacquilyn Weeks

Re: Art is theft

Tue 20 Apr 2010

theft + disguise = metaphor?
off the cuff.
By definition originality is impossible.

Such an act is clearly larcenous and its perpetrators mere criminals trafficking in contraband.

I already own all of it

You have raised a question that I've been pondering for some time although perhaps in a different context.
What else is pushing her to produce?

I'll keep it open

The first lines of a boring poem [are] an invitation to attention?
Change without exchange.
an example of begging the question.

My thoughts exactly.

I've heard that before.
linguistic play, an anarchistic spree

tee hee.

-J.

On Mon, Apr 19, 2010 at 12:22 PM, Matthew Landis < [redacted]> wrote:

> 1
>
> the translation and appropriation of not > only that which we approve of or
> value but that which is most reprehensible;
>
> to separate the intentionality of
> the author from the production of meaning
> and EMBRACE exemplarity
>
> not just as an argumentative or > rhetorical strategy, but as a
> poetics in and of itself:
>
> to let the detritus of our cultural
> and politcal lives speak
> on their own terms---to think of
>
> the poet less as the painter and
> more as the craftsman who
> constructs the frame

2

this past decade and the future of poetry
has eroded the pretense of the confessional
and the vulgarity of the topical & the opportunism
of influence---in the sense that the topical simply adopts the tropes and rhetorical logic of media's
narrative structure--- (ie, the war is happening, we oppose the war, but how long can you write about war?
what happens when the war is over? do we just find another war? and if there is none do we sit around WAITING for one with baited breath?) it highlights the value of the poetic voice addressing and reflecting the everyday--- of interrupting and detourning; of intervening
in the narratives, language, thought--processes and values of our present culture and thereby, not only oppose & question
the logic and practice of war, but the behavior, language, and philosophical foundation that war is built upon--- to construct dialectical "IMAGES" which are concrete (in the vispo and literal sense), enduring, and impactful collections and galleries of
the ephemera & carrion of culture; as well as the traumatic
and the horroific; as well as the joyful and celebratory--- not in the delusional quest for permanence or tradition but
the wholly absurd and yet wholly necessary quest to use poetry
to not only settle those unsettled debts of history, but to challenge
the very notion of indebtedness--- to light the fuses which will result in these explosions of these dialectical images in the minds of the reader: to write poetry in the service of uncovering and enacting new consciousness.

3

the love of linguistic play, an anarchistic spree celebrating the freedom of consciousnes, which is
the endless possibility of the verbal
expression of consciousness that is language---fashioning
"chorals out of random input"

John Cunningham wrote:

You have raised a question that I've been pondering for some time although perhaps in a different context. This past Sunday, I had Steven Smith, formerly of the sound poetry group Owen Sound as well as director of Sage Hill Writing who is now director of Literary Arts at the Banff Centre, on my radio show 'Speaking of Poets' heard every Sunday from 4:30 to 5:00 p.m.
CST on CKUW 95.9 FM (and available for streaming or download from the CKUW website). We talked about the concepts of sampling and found poetry. I've had poets as diverse as Karen Solie and Jan Conn to the experimental such as Erin Moure, Lisa Robertson and Angela Carr on the show who have used these techniques. I have also had discussion with poets who are aghast at this plagiarism. What are the parameters in these days of FLARF poetic techniques for the legitimacy of 'borrowings'? When does one have to cite? I've heard others who, if wanting to use a phrase, line or brief passage from another writer's work actually indicate that they would send a request to that writer for permission to use that material. Is this necessary?
John Herbert Cunningham

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Maria Damon
Sent: April-17-10 5:37 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Art is theft

here's a shot. but off the cuff.
art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not? being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.

Ann Bogle wrote:

Explain art is theft.

I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I

could

think of for poor.

The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all?

Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting,

something

about a mountain.

I was glad after renting Tom& Viv years after its release that I had

read

Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?

Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?

Chicago Style. 300 words.

Ann Bogle

> guidelines

↑ Index

214. Christophe Casamassima
Re: Art is theft
Tue 20 Apr 2010

---

last night i hosted the 3rd reading of our cruellest month series. i wrote out instructions for our audience: to appropriate lines from the poets and write their own poems, which we're plastering to our office walls. i have pictures from the event, with a big sign that says "ART=THEFT"

so funny

On Mon, Apr 19, 2010 at 12:22 PM, Matthew Landis <[redacted]> wrote:
> 1
>
> the translation and appropriation of not > only that which we approve of or > value but that which is most reprehensible;
>
> to separate the intentionality of
> the author from the production of meaning
> and EMBRACE exemplarity
>
> not just as an argumentative or > rhetorical strategy, but as a > poetics in and of itself:
>
> to let the detritus of our cultural
> and politcal lives speak
> on their own terms---to think of
>
> the poet less as the painter and
> more as the craftsman who
> constructs the frame

>
>
> 2
>
> this past decade and the future of poetry
> has eroded the pretense of the confessional
> and the vulgarity of the topical & the opportunism
> of influence---in the sense that the topical simply > adopts the tropes and rhetorical logic of media's
> narrative structure--- (ie, the war is happening, we > oppose the war, but how long can you write about war?
> what happens when the war is over? do we just find > another war? and if there is none do we sit around > WAITING for one with baited breath?) it highlights the > value of the poetic voice addressing and reflecting the > everyday--- of interrupting and detourning; of intervening
> in the narratives, language, thought--processes and values of > our present culture and thereby, not only oppose & question
> the logic and practice of war, but the behavior, language, and > philosophical foundation that war is built upon--- to construct > dialectical "IMAGES" which are concrete (in the vispo and literal > sense), enduring, and impactful collections and galleries of
> the ephemera & carrion of culture; as well as the traumatic
> and the horroific; as well as the joyful and celebratory--- not > in the delusional quest for permanence or tradition but
> the wholly absurd and yet wholly necessary quest to use poetry
> to not only settle those unsettled debts of history, but to challenge
> the very notion of indebtedness--- to light the fuses which will result > in these explosions of these dialectical images in the minds of the > reader: to write poetry in the service of uncovering and enacting > new consciousness.
>
>
> 3
>
> the > love of > linguistic play, an > anarchistic spree celebrating the > freedom of consciousnes, which is
> the endless possibility of the verbal
> expression of consciousness that is language---fashioning

> "chorals out of random input"
>
>
>
> John Cunningham wrote:
>>
>> You have raised a question that I've been pondering for some time >> although >> perhaps in a different context. This past Sunday, I had Steven Smith, >> formerly of the sound poetry group Owen Sound as well as director of Sage >> Hill Writing who is now director of Literary Arts at the Banff Centre, on >> my radio show 'Speaking of Poets' heard every Sunday from 4:30 to 5:00
>> p.m.
>> CST on CKUW 95.9 FM (and available for streaming or download from the >> website). We talked about the concepts of sampling and found poetry. I've >> had poets as diverse as Karen Solie and Jan Conn to the experimental such >> as >> Erin Moure, Lisa Robertson and Angela Carr on the show who have used >> these techniques. I have also had discussion with poets who are aghast at >> this plagiarism. What are the parameters in these days of FLARF poetic >> techniques for the legitimacy of 'borrowings'? When does one have to cite?
CKUW
>> I've heard others who, if wanting to use a phrase, line or brief passage >> from another writer's work actually indicate that they would send a >> request
>> to that writer for permission to use that material. Is this necessary?
>> John Herbert Cunningham
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On >> Behalf Of Maria Damon
>> Sent: April-17-10 5:37 PM
>> To: [redacted]
>> Subject: Re: Art is theft
>>
>> here's a shot. but off the cuff.
>> art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of >> activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much >> ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and >> others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses >> good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not?
>> being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because >> of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive >> genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as >> stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. >> stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.

>>
>> Ann Bogle wrote:
>>
>>>
>>> Explain art is theft.
>>>
>>> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in >>> Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I
>>>
>>
>> could
>>
>>>
>>> think of for poor.
>>>
>>> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously
>>>
>>
>>
>>>
>>> cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's >>> syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark
>>>
>>
>> is all?
>>
>>>
>>> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting,
>>>
>>
>> something
>>
>>>
>>> about a mountain.
>>>
>>> I was glad after renting Tom& Viv years after its release that I had

>>>
>>
>> read
>>
>>>
>>> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great >>> artists incarcerate?
>>>
>>> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>>>
>>> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>>>
>>> Ann Bogle
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

215. Chris Chapman
Re: Art is theft
Tue 20 Apr 2010

---

hmm. yes, i did walk in a circle, i'm afraid. i see that that is a true fact.

i wonder if that makes my conclusion irrational or non-rational. do some of my premises have to be true for the one and not the other?

... on board the blue line for o'hare.

On 4/19/10, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
> On Apr 17, 2010, at 1:53 PM, Chris Chapman wrote:
>
>> theft + disguise = metaphor?
>>
>> 1. theft: a repetition that doesn't use negation for instantiation.

>> eg.: a, a not a, A.
>> 2. disguise: a different species within one genus.
>> 3. metaphor: gifts of insubordinate resemblance
>>
>> if art is the use of metaphor, creative comparison, then it is theft.
>
> Ah, but this is an example of begging the question.
>
> gb
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> On 4/17/10, George Bowering <[redacted]> wrote:
>>> On Apr 16, 2010, at 5:23 PM, Ann Bogle wrote:
>>>
>>>> Explain art is theft.
>>>>
>>>
>>> Yeah. I agree that explain art is the worst kind of art.
>>>
>>> But I don't think that it is theft.
>>>
>>>
>>> gb
>>>
>>> guidelines
>>>
>>
>> welcome.html
>
> Georges Bowering, OC
> If you say so.
>
>
>

↑ Index

216. Jason Quackenbush
Re: Art is theft
Tue 20 Apr 2010

it's so old its in the bible.

On Apr 19, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Caleb Cluff wrote:

> I've heard that before.
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of mIEKAL aND
> Sent: Monday, 19 April 2010 11:56 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Art is theft
>
> By definition originality is impossible.
>
> Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.
>
> The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and > may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for > the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this > email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or > any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the > sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not > represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before > opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is > limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

217. Halvard Johnson
Re: Art is theft
Tue 20 Apr 2010

It's all coded: a = th; r = e; t = ft.
Ergo . . .

Hal

Halvard Johnson
==========

The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye (downloadable and free) is @ http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets

[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Mon, Apr 19, 2010 at 12:29 PM, Ann Bogle <[redacted]> wrote:

> Six answers so far. I'll keep it open while replies are oncoming. My objective is to realize something I haven't realized (come to believe) in reading poetry and observing other arts as well.
>
> In a message dated 4/17/2010 2:57:23 P.M. Central Daylight Time, > [redacted] writes:
>
> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could > think of for poor.

↑ Index

218. Thomas savage
Re: Art is theft
Tue 20 Apr 2010

Replying to the title of this entry "Art is theft", I go to movies, plays, operas, and concerts and incorporate elements from all of these in the poems I write while watching whatever the event may happen to be. Is this theft? I always acknowledge the source in a note at the end of the poem. It doesn't seem to be theft to me as long as I'm not taking words, phrases, or ideas from poems by other poets.

--- On Mon, 4/19/10, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Art is theft

To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, April 19, 2010, 9:54 AM

The word "is" functions both as copula and expression of identity. If I say "X is Y" I can mean either that Y is some way of describing X or that X and Y are identical. If they are identical then they can be substituted for one another in a sentence without any change in meaning. Observe: 1.) "Theft is the taking of something from someone who has more right to possess it than the thief." 2.) "Art is the taking of something from someone who has more right to possess it than the artist." If there is no change in meaning here, then "Art is Theft" is a mere expression of identity. This is not the case. Therefore "is" in this sentence is functioning as a copula. In that case theft is a predicate of art. It is possible that the sentences "Art is theft" and "Art is yellow" are both true in a way that would not be possible if the "is" in both sentences were functioning as a marker of identity. To explain "Art is theft" you must therefore just know what "theft" means as a predicate. As such it is worth pointing out that theft as a predicate indicates that art is a crime, art takes possession of some (intellectual) property that does not belong to the artist. To create art then is to appropriate and to do wrong; to be guilty and deserving of punishment. "Art is theft" is therefore a condemnation of God as first creator for creating us and a warning to artists that there is nothing redemptive in what they do. In creation, the artist takes from infinite possibility and fixes in imitation the previously unrealized. Such an act is clearly larcenous and its perpetrators mere criminals trafficking in contraband.

On Apr 16, 2010, at 5:23 PM, Ann Bogle wrote:

> Explain art is theft.
>
> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could think of for poor.
>
> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all? Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something about a mountain.
>
> I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great artists incarcerate?
>
> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>
> Chicago Style. 300 words.

> Ann Bogle

↑ Index

219. Ron Henry

Poetry Reading (Ithaca, NY, 4/25, 3 pm) - Emily Rosko and Anthony Reed at the Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art, Cornell University

Tue 20 Apr 2010

Please join us as poets Emily Rosko and Anthony Reed read from their work this Sunday, April 25th, 2010 at 3:00 p.m. at the Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art on the Cornell University campus. The reading is free and open to the public.

EMILY ROSKO is the author of Raw Goods Inventory, winner of the 2005 Iowa Poetry Prize and the 2007 Glasgow Prize for Emerging Writers from Shenandoah. Recipient of the Stegner, the Ruth Lilly, and the Javits fellowships, her poems have been included in Agni, The Beloit Poetry Journal, The Denver Quarterly, The Laurel Review, and Pleiades. She earned an M.F.A. at Cornell University and a Ph.D. in Creative Writing and Literature at the University of Missouri. She is the editor, with Anton Vander Zee, of a collection of essays, A Broken Thing: Poets on the Line, which will be published by The University of Iowa Press in 2010. She has been residing in Ithaca for this past year, serving as a Visiting Assistant Professor at Cornell, and, in the fall, she will be an Assistant Professor at the College of Charleston.

ANTHONY REED, a recent Ph.D. graduate from Cornell University's English Department, is a Mellon graduate fellow at the Society for the Humanities. Next year he will join the faculty of the English and African American Studies departments at Yale University. He is also a graduate of the M.F.A. program at the University of Michigan (Ann Arbor). Currently, he is working on a series of poems called 'The Conquering Ayin' as well as a fragmentary novel called The Infinite, both of which are concerned with intimacy and music.

This event has been made possible in part with public funds from the Community Arts Partnership of Tompkins County / NYS Council on the Arts Decentralization Program. SOON Productions is dedicated to bringing innovative poets and writers to the Ithaca area for readings and talks. Please visit our website at http://soonproductions.org for information about the series.

Please forward this email to anyone you think might be interested in attending the reading.

For more information, contact:

Ron Henry
SOON Productions
Email: [redacted]
Web: http://soonproductions.org

↑ Index

220. Poetry Project

Poetry Project Spring Fundraiser

Tue 20 Apr 2010

April 20, 2010

Dear Friend of The Poetry Project,

The Project faces significant financial challenges in 2010. The economic environment remains difficult for arts organizations and, as you might know, our new lease with the Church imposes a substantial rent increase.

There are many ways for you to help us continue to create opportunities for writers to present their work to an engaged, responsive community. One way is to simply purchase admission for one, or all, of the three special events scheduled for our annual Spring Fundraising week. Admission for each event is only $10. Community turnout last Spring helped us raise just over $5,000!

* On April 28th, Alice Notley will read in the Sanctuary, with a reception to follow. * On April 30th, we¹ll have a panel and a film screening for the book We Saw the Light: Conversations Between the New American Cinema and Poetry by Daniel Kane. * Finally, on May 1st, we¹ll host a performance of ³John Ashbery¹s Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror for Six Voices.²

Please see our Calendar for all the details.
http://poetryproject.org/readings?ec3_after=today

If you can¹t be with us for these events, please show your support by becoming an esteemed Member of the Poetry Project. A $95 Supporting Membership will get you and a guest free admission to all regularly scheduled/non-fundraising Project events, among other perks!
http://poetryproject.org/get-involved/become-a-member

You may also opt to give a tax-deductible contribution of $30‹the price of admission to all three events‹or anything that you feel you can offer. Even smaller amounts are very welcome.
http://poetryproject.org/get-involved/donate-now

We have always been a poet-run organization whose programming has developed out of a complete devotion to the risk and heart of contemporary poetry. And we know we serve a community just as intensely devoted!

Thank you‹and I look forward to seeing you soon.

Sincerely,

Stacy Szymaszek
Artistic Director

↑ Index

221. Camille Martin
sonnet songs on youtube
Tue 20 Apr 2010

I’m composing song settings for some of the poems in my recently-released Sonnets (Shearsman Books), and I'd like to share some of the results - five of them are uploaded to YouTube. Have a listen:

“katrina, tundra”
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-Pf7qpeBUjg

“snow”
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TdaQAUp1lJk&feature=channel

“twigs”
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lLoX4SNhHIE

“so many melodies”
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=K8pal6OW85Q&feature=related

“what am i”
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZPZDLHixbZA

These videos are also embedded on Rogue Embryo, my blog (glitch fixed):
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/04/18/sonnet-song-setting-katrina-tundra/

If any of these links don’t work, please let me know.

Camille Martin
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

↑ Index

222. CA Conrad
BALTIMORE
Tue 20 Apr 2010

---

reading with the AMAZING Dorothea Lasky and Justin Sirois this Saturday!
details here: http://CAConradevents.blogspot.com

I LOVE BALTIMORE!

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

223. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City presents Lana Turner and Drew Gardner
Wed 21 Apr 2010

---

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

Lana Turner:
A Journal of Poetry & Opinion
(Santa Monica, Calif.)

Tues., April 27, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by Lana Turner’s co-editor
Calvin Bedient

Featuring readings from

Timothy Donnelly
Drew Gardner
Karen Garthe
Cathy Park Hong
Douglas Piccinnini

and music from
Drew Gardner

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

Lana Turner: A Journal of Poetry & Opinion
http://www.lanaturnerjournal.com/

Lana Turner: A Journal of Poetry & Opinion is an annual publication that was begun in 2008. The third issue is now in preparation for an October release. Lana Turner mixes new poetry with political essays and essays on music, movies, art, and poetry. So far, each issue has had eight color-plate pages (in the current issue, a sampling of Peter Sacks's astonishing paintings). Canada's Disticor distributes the magazine to Barnes & Noble, and independent newsstands and bookstores. The editors are Calvin Bedient and David Lau. For a taste of the contents and information on submissions and subscriptions visit the above url.

Performer Bios

Timothy Donnelly
http://www.wavepoetry.com/authors/66

Timothy Donnelly is the author of The Cloud Corporation (Wave Books) and Twenty-seven Props for a Production of Eine Lebenszeit (Grove Press). His work has been translated into German and Italian and has appeared in numerous anthologies, including Legitimate Dangers: American Poets of the New Century; Isn't It Romantic: 100 Love Poems; Joyful Noise: An Anthology of American Spiritual Poetry; and Poet, Poems, Poetry edited by Helen Vendler. A graduate of Johns Hopkins, Columbia, and Princeton universities, he is a poetry editor for Boston Review and teaches in the writing program at Columbia University's School of the Arts. He lives in Brooklyn with his wife and two daughters.

Drew Gardner
http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Gardner.php

Drew Gardner's books include Sugar Pill (Krupskaya) and Petroleum Hat (Roof). A new book, Chomp Away, is forthcoming from Combo Books this year. He lives in New York City.

Karen Garthe

Karen Garthe's poetry currently appears in The Best of Fence, Barrow Street, and Lana Turner, and is forthcoming in Aufgabe, Colorado Review, Zoland, and Mad Hatter Review. It has been published in Chicago Review, New American Writing, Denver Quarterly, Court Green, POOL, and American Letters & Commentary, among others. She is the author of the book of poems Frayed Escort, which won the 2005 Colorado Prize, judged by Cal Bedient, and the forthcoming The Banjo Clock (University of California Press).

Cathy Park Hong
http://www.cathyparkhong.com

Hanging Loose Press published Cathy Park Hong's first book, Translating Mo'um. Her second collection, Dance Dance Revolution, was chosen for the Barnard Women Poets Prize and was published by WW Norton. She lives in New York City.

 Douglas Piccinnini

Douglas Piccinnini’s writing has appeared in EOAGH, Jacket, mid)rib, The Poetry Project Newsletter, Verse, West Wind Review, and other journals. He lives in Brooklyn and curates the CROWD Reading Series.

Directions:
C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. May 25
Wave Books
http://www.wavepoetry.com
(Seattle)

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

224. Vernon Frazer

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Wed 21 Apr 2010

Jim Cohn does excellent recitation with rock bands, but I don't know if he plays an insrument.

Vernon

↑ Index

225. Allan Revich

Re: Art is theft

Wed 21 Apr 2010

How many angels can dance on the head of a pin?

On 4/19/2010 1:36 PM, gabriel siegel wrote:
> Change without exchange.
>
> On 4/17/10, Maria Damon<[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> here's a shot. but off the cuff.
>> art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of >> activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much >> ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and >> others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses >> good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not?
>> being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because >> of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive >> genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as >> stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. >> stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.
>>
>> Ann Bogle wrote:
>>
>>> Explain art is theft.
>>>
>>> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in >>> Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I
>>> could
>>> think of for poor.
>>>

>>> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously
>>>
>>> cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's >>> syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark >>> is all?
>>> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting,
>>> something
>>> about a mountain.
>>>
>>> I was glad after renting Tom& Viv years after its release that I had
>>> read
>>> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great >>> artists incarcerate?
>>>
>>> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>>>
>>> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>>>
>>> Ann Bogle
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>

↑ Index

226. Susan Webster Schultz
Tinfish Editor's Blog
Wed 21 Apr 2010

---

new posts on Honolulu poetry, Michael Snediker's optimism tour, Cardinals' baseball, AWP & dementia:

* Art and Poetry at The Contemporary Museum, Honolul...
* Interminable Baseball & Dementia & Queer Optimism ...
* 17 Innings with Michael Snediker, Jack Spicer, Que...
* Dementia & AWP (no link, save the ampersand)
* The Mother of All Literary Weeks in Honolulu!

aloha, Susan M. Schultz/purveyor of blog

http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com

↑ Index

227. amy king
My Poetry Genitals Hurt
Wed 21 Apr 2010

From the flash, of course:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/04/21/im-just-being-a-bitch-again/

↑ Index

228. Paul Siegell
"wash Uffizi drive me to Firenze"
Wed 21 Apr 2010

---

hello,

new from "ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL":

REVIEW of JAMBANDBOOTLEG ... http://bit.ly/aQg0m4
@ JamBandsOnline.com: "Parking Lot Poetry: A Review of 'jambandbootleg' by Paul Siegell"

INTERVIEW ... http://bit.ly/91fU3r
@ stevenallenmay's "Poetry Lab": 04/20/99

UPCOMING APPEARANCES:

Friday, May 7th in Virginia:
@ The Soundry in Vienna, VA with Tony Mancus and Daniel Collins

Thursday, May 13th in Philly:
@ Head House Book with Debrah Morkun and Carlos Soto Román

Further dates and details here: http://bit.ly/1A0fPV

I hope this note has found you and yours well.

Thank you all,
Paul
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

229. Camille Martin
Re: sonnet songs on youtube
Wed 21 Apr 2010

Just to clarify about the "performances" of the songs in the youtube links below, the audiofiles were generated by the music notation software that I used to compose the songs. I no longer have the chops to perform the piano accompaniment. And, as you can hear, there's not much subtlety in the sound - the software cannot do rubato or dynamics, but it does give a general idea of the songs.

Camille Martin
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

_____
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [[redacted]] On Behalf Of Camille Martin [[redacted]] Sent: Tuesday, April 20, 2010 5:37 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: sonnet songs on youtube

I'm composing song settings for some of the poems in my recently-released Sonnets (Shearsman Books), and I'd like to share some of the results - five of them are uploaded to YouTube. Have a listen:

"katrina, tundra"
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-Pf7qpeBUjg

"snow"
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TdaQAUp1lJk&feature=channel

"twigs"
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lLoX4SNhHIE

"so many melodies"
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=K8pal6OW85Q&feature=related

"what am i"
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZPZDLHixbZA

These videos are also embedded on Rogue Embryo, my blog (glitch fixed):
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/04/18/sonnet-song-setting-katrina-tundra/

If any of these links don't work, please let me know.

Camille Martin
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

↑ Index

230. Caleb Cluff
Re: Art is theft
Wed 21 Apr 2010

How many cabs in New York City?
How many angels on a pin?
How many notes in a saxophone?
How many tears in a bottle of gin?
How many times did you call my name knock at the door but you couldn't get in?

Paul Kelly wrote that.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Allan Revich Sent: Wednesday, 21 April 2010 11:00 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Art is theft

How many angels can dance on the head of a pin?

On 4/19/2010 1:36 PM, gabriel siegel wrote:
> Change without exchange.
>
> On 4/17/10, Maria Damon<[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> here's a shot. but off the cuff.
>> art is "free" in the sense that one is participating in a field of >> activity that is theoretically unbounded, but because there is so much >> ego involved, availing oneself of that freedom feels to oneself and >> others like theft, because things are not supposed to be free. One uses >> good ideas, images, words, etc from others because how could one not?
>> being a social animal and learning everything from others. but because >> of the Romantic/Enlightenment emphasis on individuality and inventive >> genius, that sociability is perceived and sometimes experienced as >> stepping on other people's toes, using one's time illegitimately (i.e. >> stealing from the boss to find time to write, etc), etc. etc.
>>
>> Ann Bogle wrote:
>>
>>> Explain art is theft.
>>>
>>> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in >>> Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I

>>> could
>>> think of for poor.
>>>
>>> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously
>>>
>>> cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's >>> syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark >>> is all?
>>> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting,
>>> something
>>> about a mountain.
>>>
>>> I was glad after renting Tom& Viv years after its release that I had
>>> read
>>> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great >>> artists incarcerate?
>>>
>>> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>>>
>>> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>>>
>>> Ann Bogle
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

231. Pam Brown
thanks reviewers from Jacket
Wed 21 Apr 2010

Thanks again poeticists,
we have reviewers for Jeffrey Side & Jake Berry's book and for Murray Edmonds.

Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes (Lavender Ink, 46 pp)

A collaborative poem by Jake Berry and Jeffrey Side, with drawings and cover art by Rich Curtis.

Walls to Kick and Hills to Sing From : A Comedy With Interruptions by Murray Edmond (Auckland university Press, 80pp

All good thoughts to you,
Pam

--

_____

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

_____

↑ Index

232. Caleb Cluff
Re: Art is theft
Wed 21 Apr 2010

And what a plagiarised, unsubstantive, mish-mash THAT is!

I thank God for my humility.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Jason Quackenbush Sent: Wednesday, 21 April 2010 2:21 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Art is theft

it's so old its in the bible.

On Apr 19, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Caleb Cluff wrote:

> I've heard that before.
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of mIEKAL aND
> Sent: Monday, 19 April 2010 11:56 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Art is theft
>
> By definition originality is impossible.
>
> Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.
>
> The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

233. Debby Florence
Re: Art is theft
Wed 21 Apr 2010

Because I dont want to offend, I have been holding back the urge to say , "did you guys rip this topic off from a Creative Writing 101 class?"

 its theft-within-a-theft

or theft-of-theft-discussion

I kind of think that's funny so taking the plunge and just coming out with it...

Debby

On Tue, Apr 20, 2010 at 10:21 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> it's so old its in the bible.
>
> On Apr 19, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Caleb Cluff wrote:
>
> I've heard that before.
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On > Behalf Of mIEKAL aND
> Sent: Monday, 19 April 2010 11:56 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Art is theft
>
> By definition originality is impossible.
>
> Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.
>
> The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential
> and > may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended > only for > the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of > this > email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email > or > any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please > notify the > sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does > not > represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free.
> Before
> opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability

> is > limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

234. Bill Dunlap
Artaud Art
Wed 21 Apr 2010

Does anyone know of a good book of Antonin Artaud's visual art (drawings, prints, etc)? There seems to be nothing in print at the moment, and even a google search gives very little. I know I've seen lots of intense pieces he did, but I'm not finding anything. An out-of-print title I came across is "Antonin Artaud: Drawings and Prints" by Jacques Derrida. Honestly, I'm not too interested in reading what Derrida has to say, I just want to know if the book has good images (and lots of them). Or any other good source for Artaud's imagery.

Thanks,
Bill Dunlap
http://www.billdunlap.com

↑ Index

235. Aaron Winslow
Rethinking Poetics Conference
Thu 22 Apr 2010

*Rethinking Poetics Conference
*Columbia University, NYC
June 11-13, 2010

Announcing the Columbia-Penn Poetics Initiative.

We are convening a three-day conference at Columbia (June 11-13, 2010), "Rethinking Poetics." It is our sense that the practices of poetics are in danger of becoming pro forma and that a focused, skeptical examination of basic assumptions will be most useful. Terms continue to be used routinely in circumstances that increasingly call for nuanced or even fundamental change. What does "materiality of the signifier" mean in the era of data mining or platform instability? What does "news" mean? How useful are current periodizations? Such questions can be multiplied.

Given that new questions need to be raised and old certainties troubled, our goal is to have a conference dedicated to articulating what most needs to be rethought, what familiar formulations seem increasingly inadequate, what new directions seem best to pursue.

In order to allow for time for substantial conversation, we are scheduling no multiple panels and no plenaries; rather, there will be a series of plenary-panels, two in the morning and two in the afternoon, with four or five speakers each taking 10-12 minutes for themselves, leaving half the session for more general discussion. There will be a panel chair to moderate discussion, but there will be no introductions.

Participants will include Rachel Zolf, Rodrigo Toscano, Jennifer Scappettone, Brent Hayes Edwards, Lytle Shaw, Juliana Spahr, Kenny Goldsmith, Erica Hunt, Alan Golding, Monica de la Torre, Andrew Schelling, Bruce Andrews, Michael Taussig, Joan Retallack, Rachel DuPlessis, K. Silem Muhammad, Jena Osman, Craig Dworkin, Elizabeth Willis, Barrett Watten, Rob Fitterman, Jonathan Skinner, Marjorie Perloff, Sherwin Bitsui, Mark Nowak, Judith Goldman, C. S. Giscombe, Steve Evans, Stephanie Young, Lisa Robertson, Paul Stephens, Rob Halpern, Jeff Dirksen, Ben Friedlander, Joshua Clover, Michael Taussig, Astrid Lorange, James Livingston, Jeff Nealon, Richard Doyle, Tan Lin, Tonya Foster, Matthew Hofer, John Melillo, Susan Howe, and Charles Bernstein.

Conference costs for the 3-day conference are $50/university faculty, $20/student & unaffiliated; $10 1-day entrance.

For more information and updated information, including conference registration, please visit our blog at http://rethinkingpoetics.wordpress.com/.

Please send any questions or comments to Aaron Winslow at rethinkingpoetics AT gmail.com.

↑ Index

236. Mary Jo Malo
Re: Art is theft
Thu 22 Apr 2010

Art is borrowing, as well as the inability to locate the lenders and an unwillingness to share credit.

Mary Jo Malo

--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

237. Al Filreis
PoemTalk #31: on Grenier's Sentences
Thu 22 Apr 2010

Today we are releasing episode 31 of the PoemTalk series. In this episode, I convene Joseph Yearous-Algozin, Jena Osman, and Bob Perelman to talk about Robert Grenier's Sentences.

http://www.poemtalk.org
http://www.poetryfoundation.org/journal/audioitem.html?id=2150

- Al Filreis

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
University of Pennsylvania
on the web: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis blog: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/blog

↑ Index

238. Mary Jo Malo
Re: Art is theft
Thu 22 Apr 2010

Art is stealing the unconditioned from the conditioned before anyone notices it's missing and copies it.

Mary Jo Malo

--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

239. amy king
We Are Champion
Thu 22 Apr 2010

When Issue #1 offered the work of three
WAC Poetry Magazine Issue #2

When Issue #1 offered the work of three women (Blake Butler, Mathias Svalina, Rachel B. Glaser, Ally Harris, Adam Robinson, Jonathan Papas, Carl Annarummo, A. Minetta Gould, Christopher Higgs, Giancarlo Ditrapano), Issue

#2 of â€œWe Are Championâ€ got pissed and chose to obliterate any and all female poetics completely.

Issue #2 of â€œWe Are Championâ€ now stars the All â€“ Live, All- Male revue: Jimmy Chen, Chris Oklum, Mike Young, Ben Mirov, Joseph Goosey, Tyler Flynn Dorholt, Miguel Morales, Mark Leidner, Reynard Seifert, and an interview with Ben Marcus.

p.s. The We Are Champsâ€™ editor has changed the contributorsâ€™ names to mislead & protect the innocent (of course, into womenâ€™s names). Now that is WAC!

My response (updated) -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/04/21/im-just-being-a-bitch-again/

Contributor responds -- http://mikeayoung.blogspot.com/2010/04/theres-first-for-every-flugelhorn.html

↑ Index

240. Poetry Project

Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 22 Apr 2010

Next week is our Spring fundraising week here at The Poetry Project which means we have some extra special events planned.

If you can¹t make it out but would like to support us you can become a member here:
http://poetryproject.org/get-involved/become-a-member

Or make a donation here:
http://poetryproject.org/get-involved/donate-now

Friday, April 23, 10 PM
Still Talking: New Film & Poetry

In conjunction with We Saw The Light: Conversations Between New American Cinema & Poetry (4/30), tonight¹s event features readings, screenings and performance from five young Brooklyn-based poets and filmmakers: Jessica Fiorini, Derek Kroessler, Andrew Lampert, Dani Leventhal & Fern Silva.

Jessica Fiorini is the author of the chapbooks Sea Monster at Night (Goodbye Better) and Light Suite (forthcoming from Pudding House Publications). She has been published in Lungfull!, Brooklyn Rail and the Poetry Project Newsletter. Jessica currently lives in Brooklyn.

Derek Kroessler originally hails from Providence, RI and is finishing up his senior year at NYU. His poems have appeared in Pleasure, and he has one homemade chapbook, Word/Turd.

Born in the mid-70s in the Midwest, Andrew Lampert has staged performances and exhibited his films at The Whitney Museum of American Art, The Getty Museum, The British Film Institute, The Kitchen, The Rotterdam International Film Festival, Kill Your Timid Notion Festival, Light Industry, Mitchell Algus Gallery and many other venues here and abroad. He lives in Brooklyn.

Dani Leventhal¹s videos are distributed through the Video Data Bank. She has screened her work at Oberhausen, Rotterdam, Gene Siskel Film Center, CineCycle and Anthology Film Archives. In 2007 she got an Astraea Visual Arts Award and a Women¹s Studio Workshop Book Arts Grant. In 2003 she received an MFA in Sculpture from the University of Illinois at Chicago and in 2009 an MFA in film/video from Bard College.

Fern Silva¹s work has been screened and performed at various festivals, galleries, and cinematheques including International Film Festival Rotterdam, New York Film Festival, Anthology Film Archive, Images Festival, IndieLisboa International Film Festival, Bangkok Experimental Film Festival, Biennale Bandits-Mages Festival, Roulette Gallery, Millennium Film Workshop and White Box Gallery. He received a BFA from Massachusetts College of Art and is in the process of receiving his MFA from Bard College.

Monday, April 26, 8 PM
Catherine Meng & Aaron Tieger

Catherine Meng is the author of the poetry collection Tonight¹s the Night (Apostrophe Books) and three chapbooks, 15 Poems in Sets of 5 (Anchorite Press), Dokument (Perichord Press), and Lost Notebook w/ Letters to Deer (Dusie Kollectiv). She currently resides in Berkeley and works at a restaurant. Along with Lauren Levin and Jared Stanley she co-edits the poetry journal Mrs. Maybe.

Aaron Tieger is most recently the author of Secret Donut (Pressed Wafer, 2009). His many chapbooks include Recently Clouds (with Jess Mynes), The Collected Typos of Aaron Tieger, Necco Face (with Jess Mynes and Michael Carr), and Anxiety Chant. He is the publisher of Petrichord Books. He lives in Cambridge, MA.

Wednesday, April 28, 8 PM
Alice Notley

We are thrilled to present this evening with Alice Notley to kick off our Spring Fundraising Week. Notley has published over thirty books of poetry, including (most recently) Reason and Other Women; Grave of Light: New and Selected Poems 1970-2005; Alma, or The Dead Women; and In the Pines. With her sons, Anselm and Edmund Berrigan, Notley edited The Collected Poems of Ted Berrigan. She is also the author of a book of essays on poets and poetry, Coming After. Notley has received many prizes and awards including the Academy of American Poets¹ Lenore Marshall Prize, the Poetry Society of America¹s Shelley Award, the Griffin Prize, two NEA Grants, and the Los Angeles Times Book Award for Poetry. Considered an important figure in the New York School, Notley now lives and writes in Paris, France.

This event will take place in the Sanctuary. Reception to follow. Admission is $10.

Friday, April 30, 6:30 PM
We Saw the Light: Conversations Between New American Cinema and Poetry
Talk & Screening

In We Saw the Light: Conversations Between the New American Cinema and Poetry (University of Iowa Press, 2009), Daniel Kane draws on correspondence and interviews with key figures in innovative cinema and writing of the 1960s to provide a fresh look at film¹s influence on poetry. Please join us for a discussion amongst filmmakers and poets, and stay for a special screening of mainly 16mm prints.

Talk (6:30-7:30 PM) Ed Bowes, Jacob Burckhardt, Abigail Child, Cole Heinowitz, Jonas Mekas, Jennifer Reeves, and others TBA. Moderated by Daniel Kane.

Film Program (8 PM) A selection of short films by Ed Bowes, Stan Brakhage, Jacob Burckhardt, Rudy Burckhardt, Abigail Child, Christopher Maclaine, Jonas Mekas, Marie Menken, and more t.b.a.

Program subject to change.
Thanks to the Filmmakers¹ Cooperative, Jacob Burckhardt & Andrew Lampert at Anthology Film Archives.
Admission is $10.

Saturday, May 1, 8 PM
John Ashbery¹s Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror for Six Voices

First published in 1975, John Ashbery¹s long poem Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror begins as a meditation on an extraordinary Mannerist painting by Francesco Parmigianino. The poem, and the volume that includes it, remain among the most influential works of our time. In this performance, six readers with projected text and image make the work unusually available, as Ashbery¹s tonal shifts and juxtapositions are taken up by different voices. With Joan Arnold, Andrea Barnet, Jan Hanvik, James Occhino, Jim Paul and Annie Walwyn-Jones. Arranged and directed by Jim Paul.

This event will take place in the Sanctuary. Admission is $10.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

241. amy king
Vote for Sina Queyras
Thu 22 Apr 2010

If you value your _____
http://bloggingpoet.squarespace.com/bloggingpoetcom/vote-for-the-2010-poet-laureate-of-the-blogosphere.html

↑ Index

242. Peter ciccariello
2010 Poet Laureate of the Blogosphere
Thu 22 Apr 2010

Vote For The 2010 Poet Laureate of the Blogosphere

http://tinyurl.com/y7q4cvu

* *

↑ Index

243. Jennifer Karmin
4/25: Aaaaaaaaaaalice in NYC
Thu 22 Apr 2010

THE TORN PAGE SALONÂ Â
a Spring Poetry Play Song Mini-festival curated & hosted by Lee Ann Brown http://www.tornpage.org/salon.html
Â Â
Sunday, April 25thÂ Â Â
7pm-9pm

435 West 22nd St -- NYC between 9th & 10th Avenue

Book party and polyvocal poetry performance of the new Flim Forum Press publication:

Aaaaaaaaaaalice by Jennifer Karmin
a travelogue in 11 cantos scored for polyvocal improvisation

112 pages, 7x9
ISBN 978-0-9790888-3-4
http://www.aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

"This book, a score, is full of information both literal and (im)possible. Do dip in; see what you come out with."Â Â Â â€” Bernadette Mayer

"Jennifer Karmin brings an openness and generosity to these poems of public address and private insistence. Aaaaaaaaaaalice's buoyant charm calls out for new listeners."Â Â â€” Charles Bernstein

"I like tightly proposed structures in which anything can happen & does because the more tightly controlled the structures, the more explosively the language will implode, disseminate, fold in or out or whatever it is it needs to do to loosen up or reverse direction & meaning. And thatâ€™s the fun of Aaaaaaaaaaalice, lithe row of straight aâ€™s followed by biting animal commentary."Â Â Â â€” Pierre Joris

"Alice and anime, Asia and uncertainty, we do so want our sounds to make sense, our textual travels to have a guide, even if that guide is the white rabbit that will hide. Aaaaaaaaaaalice is the sound and sight of the disappearing rabbit, the one with a hat, the one who pops up with regular unpredictability whenever we go somewhere not here, and while words will swivel around us like our very own heads, making the unfamiliar familiar and the familiar unfamiliar, making no sense but nonsense and non-sense sense, like in this very text, whatâ€™s moreover curious, as Karmin rightly notes, is that 'yesterday a man was walking.' "Â Â Â â€” Vanessa Place

↑ Index

244. Sam Ladkin
Clark Coolidge, Act of Providence
Fri 23 Apr 2010

Dear All,

Does anyone know how I can get hold of Coolidge's new (old) one, Act of Providence, published by "Combo" or something like it? I cant seem to find an email or realworld address to track it down.

Thanks,

Sam

↑ Index

245. Justin Katko
CRS 4: Redell Olsen and Frances Kruk
Fri 23 Apr 2010

The fourth CRS reading of 2010 will be held on Friday 30th April, at 7:30pm in the Judith Wilson drama studio of the English Faculty. Redell Olsen and Frances Kruk will read from their poetry, as well as the poetry of others. This will be no thebolactic oasis in your preciously frantic first week, nor a storm in your cup of tea, each sweet drop of milk registered by the eye of the Hawk. Rather, prepare for the inhabitation of the eye of the storm which blows the disproportionate Hawkeye to rags.

ALSO, on Monday 26th April, don't miss the gala reading celebrating the new anthology, Infinite Difference: Other Poetries by UK Women Poets. It takes place at 7:30pm in the Bowett Room of Queens' College, and will feature readings by Carrie Etter, Rachel Lehrman, Wendy Mulford, Redell Olsen, Frances Presley, Anna Reckin, Lucy Sheerman, Zoë Skoulding, & Carol Watts.

ALSO NOTE poetry readings at Queens' on the 7th and 14th of May (see calendar below).

****

FRANCES KRUK is a writer, musician, and artist. Her books include Clobber (yt communication, 2006), Dig Oubliette (yt communication, 2007), and A Discourse on Vegetation & Motion (Critical Documents, 2008). Her most recent contribution to the world of letters is a selection of works in the anthology Infinite Difference (Shearsman, 2010). She edits yt communication with Sean Bonney and is conducting a PhD at Royal Holloway. She lives in London with a piano and several furry life forms.

REDELL OLSEN'S publications include; 'Book of the Fur' (Rempress, 2000), 'Secure Portable Space' (Reality Street, 2004) and the collaboratively edited 'Here Are My Instructions' (Gefn Press, 2004). She is the editor of the online journal How2 <http://www.asu.edu/pipercwcenter/how2journal/>which publishes modernist and innovative poetry and poetics by women writers. Her recent projects have involved texts for performance and film and include: 'Newe Booke of Copies' (2009) and 'Bucolic Picnic (or Toile de Jouy / Camouflage)' (2009). Her most recent project 'The Lost Swimming Pool (for Esther Williams and the Lost Olympics' is a site-specific collaboration to be shown in June 2010. She is the course director for the MA in Poetic Practice<http://www.rhul.ac.uk/English/studying/Postgraduate-Study/MA/PoeticPractice.html>at Royal Holloway, University of London.

****

A list of up-coming readings (CRS and beyond) is given below. Please direct any queries to Justin Katko ([redacted]) or see the CRS website: crs0hq.tumblr.com. The Cambridge Reading Series is funded by the Judith E. Wilson Fund and organised by English graduate students Ryan Dobran, Ian Heames, Justin Katko, Laura Kilbride, and Mike Wallace-Hadrill.

****

Monday 26 April: Infinite Difference anthology reading -- Bowett Rm, Queens' Friday 30 April: CRS 4: Redell Olsen & Frances Kruk
Friday 7 May: DIAL Easter term reading, line-up TBA -- Bowett Rm, Queens' Friday 14 May: Peter Gizzi (USA) & Jimmy Cummins (Ireland) -- Bowett Rm, Queens' Friday 21 May: CRS 5: Jow Walton & Posie Rider & John Wilkinson
Friday 18 Jun: CRS 6: Sean Bonney & Simon Jarvis

↑ Index

246. steve dalachinsky

Re: Art is theft

Fri 23 Apr 2010

---

too deep
art is always a take that seems like a give
and a give that takes - borrowing / theft appropriation from others from nature - an honest thief as was said is the best
or a good thief well disguising his/her theft

as picasso said the highest honor he could give / pay anorher
is to steal from them
a make over not a copy - incorporation and hopefully crediting those that influenced your piece in some way

On Thu, 22 Apr 2010 14:55:15 -0500 Mary Jo Malo <[redacted]>
writes:
> Art is stealing the unconditioned from the conditioned before anyone > notices it's missing and copies it.
>
> Mary Jo Malo
>
> --
> http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
> http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/
>
>
>

↑ Index

247. Jake Marmer

Samuel Menashe & Stanley Moss Reading in NYC

Fri 23 Apr 2010

Samuel Menashe and Stanley Moss will be reading at the Six Street Community Synagogue in NYC this Monday, April 26th at 8.15pm. The space is at 325 East 6th Street, b/n 1st & 2nd Ave. More info: http://www.eastvillageshul.com/2010/03/24/spoken-word-fest/. See WNYC's special on Menashe here: http://www.youtube.com/watch?vîfUhL2kHkM. Pls spread the word! This shoud be great.

-JM

↑ Index

248. amy king

Hot Friday the Next - Sandy Florian, Lara Glenum, Lesley Jenike, Saeed Jones, Metta Sama & Tom Sleigh!

Fri 23 Apr 2010

Sandy Florian, Lara Glenum, Lesley Jenike, Saeed Jones, Metta Sama & Tom Sleigh!

Friday, April 30 @ 7 p.m.

Goodbye Blue Monday
Edge-of-Williamsburg =
Bushwick, Brooklyn
http://stainofpoetry.com

Â Sandy Florian is the author of Telescope (Action Books), 32 Pedals & 47 Stops (Tarpaulin Sky), The Tree of No (Action Books), Prelude to Air From Water (Elixir Press), and On Wonderland & Waste (Sidebrow Press). She lives in San Francisco where she is an affiliate artist at Headlands Center for the Arts and works as one of the â€œotherâ€ editors for Tarpaulin Sky Journal. For more information, visit her blog at http://boxingthecompass.blogspot.com

~

Lara Glenum is a poet, scholar, and translator. She is the author of two books of poetry: The Hounds of No (Action Books, 2005) and Maximum Gaga (Action Books, 2009). Her chapbook, The Hotling Chronicles, is due out from Tarpaulin Sky later this year. With Arielle Greenberg, she is the co-editor of Gurlesque, an anthology of contemporary womenâ€™s poetry and visual art (Saturnalia Books, 2010). She has recently been collaborating with sound, visual, and digital media artists on Meat Out of the Eater [hyperlink: http://vimeo.com/7215889], a multimedia installation. She teaches in the MFA program in Creative Writing at LSU.

~

Lesley Jenike is the author of Ghost of Fashion (CustomWords, 2009). She is a native of Cincinnati, OH and received her doctorate from the University of Cincinnati in 2008. Her poems have appeared in POOL, Court Green, Brooklyn Review, Gulf Coast, Souâ€™Wester, Verse, Alaska Quarterly Review, Forklift, Ohio, Washington Square, Crab Orchard Review, and others. Sheâ€™s currently Assistant Professor of English at Columbus College of Art and Design.

~

Saeed Jones is currently completing his MFA in Creative Writing at Rutgers University â€“ Newark. Heâ€™s a graduate of Western Kentucky University where he won the Jim Wayne Miller Award for Poetry. While at Western, he was the poetry editor for Rise Over Run Magazine. His work has appeared or is forthcoming in publications like StorySouth, Barnwood Magazine, Splinter Generation, The Adirondack Review, Mary, and Ganymede. He blogs regularly at saeedjones.wordpress.com

~

Metta Sama says: I am a poet, professor, activist, painter, collage artist, fiction and essay writer. My poetry, currently, looks at instabilities in writings by persons subjected to various forms of oppression. I am interested in the joy of making and creating art and stories and images that will, eventually, disintegrate, return to the source it came from. I question what it means to make thoughts, ideas, & feelings stable, to devote oneself to immortality. My work has appeared in Proud Flesh Journal, The Drunken Boat, Blackbird, Paterson Literary Review, Yellow Medicine Review, Crab Orchard, and other journals, & I am the author of one published collection of poems.

~

Tom Sleighâ€™s most recent book of poetry, Space Walk (Houghton Mifflin, 2007), won the 2008 Kingsley Tufts Award. His book of essays, Interview with a Ghost, was published by Graywolf Press in 2006. He has also published After One, Waking, The Chain, The Dreamhouse, Far Side of the Earth, Bula Matari/Smasher of Rocks, and a translation of Euripidesâ€™ Herakles. He has won the Shelley Prize from the PSA, and grants from the Lila Wallace Fund, American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Guggenheim and NEA. His new book, Army Cats, is forthcoming in spring, 2011, from Graywolf Press. He teaches in the MFA Program at Hunter College.

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

http://amyking.org

↑ Index

249. Nana Zabic

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Fri 23 Apr 2010

Hi All,

There is also the generation of people who were first poets, but then (while still very young and unknown) choose rock as their preferred form--Richard Hell, Tom Verlaine, John Doe, Exene Cervenka, and Patti Smith come to mind first of all. They grew up on the tail end of the idea that being a poet is the coolest thing, while rock became spinal-tappish, but then punk rock came and made rock cooler than poetry again, and of course it was a bit more viable profession economically. Richard Hell talks about that openly in interviews, and those who knew John Doe back in Baltimore testify he went through a similar thought process, and there is nothing wrong with that. I'm glad those people chose music over poetry, because it's not like poetry word suffered because of their conversion; meanwhile I can't imagine what music would have sounded if that generation didn't take up instruments and singing.

And Jim Carroll kept double lives till the end, right?

But that generation, especially the above names, is super well-documented, so that's not what I'm looking for. I'm looking for the later and contemporary, less-documented generations, when rock became as financially inviable as poetry, or in a way even less so, because at least you can teach comp with your mfa, ma, of ph.d. degree.

So I'm adding another dimension to my query: the purely economic one. I wonder how many people who would rather be in bands, write songs and record and tour full time, in the end focus more on poetry and publishing and teaching in order to survive?

Snezana

On Wed, Apr 21, 2010 at 8:21 AM, Vernon Frazer <[redacted]> wrote: > Jim Cohn does excellent recitation with rock bands, but I don't know if he plays an > insrument.
>
> Vernon
>
>

↑ Index

250. David Chirot
Re: Art is theft
Sat 24 Apr 2010

Dear Ann:

Before--and introducing--Olson at the Berkely festival Robert Duncan also speaks of the poet as a stealer of fire--and that as a thief of fire, for him Olson is a great "fire source." It is the (I am not sure how old the idea is, rather Romantic or earlier) concept of Prometheus as Stealer of Fire with the image of the Act of Creation imagined as Fire being stolen from the Gods.

A very interesting proposal is this one:

Plagiarism is necessary. Progress implies it. It holds tight an author’s phrase, uses his expressions, eliminates a false idea, and replaces it with just the right idea.

– Comte de Lautréamont (Isidore Ducasse), Poésies II (1870)

Lautreamont sees "progress" as the plagiarising of everything but the "right idea" from a previous writer/poet. The "right idea" " corrects" a falsity from the previous piece of writing, which may simply be the introduction of a new fact, thus making "progress" towards a more precise "truth" or "actuality." (Or--of a "sur reality"--a higher reality, as Breton and the Surre;laist found a direct antecdent in Lautreamont in the 1920's.

Pascal also notes: "It is not the materials which are new, but the order of their arrangement."

I hope these three versions of the theft idea are helpful!

In the words of an old song by The Band: "I am thief--and i dig it!"

onwo/ards!!!

davidbc

http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com

http://chirotzerozine.blogspot.com <http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com>

http://nosobrasotros.blogspot.com
<http://davidbaptistechirot.blogspot.com>

On Fri, Apr 16, 2010 at 5:23 PM, Ann Bogle <[redacted]> wrote:

> Explain art is theft.
>
> I offer a prize of $100 to the best answer. In memory of a poet in > Binghamton who sent me $100 via Paypal when I was broke, the only word I could > think of for poor.
>
> The subject came up last year at WOMPO, and the women and men unanimously
> cited Eliot, as if nothing theoretical has happened since Eliot's > syllogism. Those of you who studied theory for many years, Eliot's remark is all?
> Picasso. I looked up Pound, and Pound's idea is more interesting, something > about a mountain.
>
> I was glad after renting Tom & Viv years after its release that I had read
> Eliot early. Four Quartets. Woolf, for that matter. Rodin. Great

> artists incarcerate?
>
> Substitutivity. Art is poetry, piety, carnivality? Art is what?
>
> Chicago Style. 300 words.
>
> Ann Bogle

↑ Index

251. steve dalachinsky

Re: Samuel Menashe & Stanley Moss Reading in NYC

Sat 24 Apr 2010

---

haiku reading at this year's Sakura Matsuri (Cherry Blossom Festival), at the Brooklyn Botanic Garden.

steve dlachinsky, tony pupello, yuko otomo, cor van den huevel and others

For those of you who don't know, the Brooklyn Botanic Garden has MORE species of cherry than anywhere outside of Japan. We don't have more trees than Washington - but way more varieties. And the festival boasts daiko drumming, ikebana, Butoh dance, and many, many other cultural events.

If you plan on going, just make sure to get there early as the lines to get in can be daunting! (Folks are just clamoring to hear the haiku/senryu poets!).
FREE
Brooklyn Botanic Garden
Sakura Matsuri
Saturday, May 1st
2:00 - 3:00 PM
Alfred T. White Memorial

May 14 7pm at Bowery Poetry Club

steve dalachinsky jane grenier b and albey balgochian's basscentric

---

May 22 - 2 pm at Grand Army Plaza Library
steve dalachinsky and Matt Maneri

The Brownstone Poets presents:
steve dalachinsky and Bruce Webber
Park Plaza Restaurant
220 Cadman Plaza West near Clark St. & Pineapple Walk
Brooklyn, NY 11201 - 718 – 596 – 5900
Take the A or C to High Street, 2 or 3 to Clark Street,
4, 5, M or R to Court Street, Borough Hall

2:30 P.M. $3 Donation – plus Food/Drink - Open Mic

curated by Patricia Carragon

Sunday June 20 - 2-5pm
the Vision Festival presents @ AGathering of Tribes
285 East 3rd St. (between C & D - 2nd floor)
donation to Tribes

poetry by

Jeff Wright
Bob Heman
Aaron Howard w/Gwen Krueger & Tomislav Butkovic
Lewis Warsh

Poetry & Music

Albey Balgochian & Jane Grenier B
Barry Wallenstein
Yuko Otomo - Shayna Dulberger
Jake Marmer / & Alon Nechushtan
Steve Dalachinsky
Alexandre Pierrepont
Tamara Singh

Musicians / Improvs
Ellen Christi
Ambrose Bie piano
Max Johnson bass
Andrew Barker drums
Charles Waters reeds
plus others

On Fri, 23 Apr 2010 09:43:28 -0400 Jake Marmer <[redacted]>
writes:
> Samuel Menashe and Stanley Moss will be reading at the Six Street > Community
> Synagogue in NYC this Monday, April 26th at 8.15pm. The space is at

> 325 East
> 6th Street, b/n 1st & 2nd Ave. More info:
> http://www.eastvillageshul.com/2010/03/24/spoken-word-fest/. See > WNYC's
> special on Menashe here: http://www.youtube.com/watch?vîfUhL2kHkM.
> Pls
> spread the word! This shoud be great.
>
> -JM
>
>
>

↑ Index

252. steve dalachinsky

Re: Artaud Art

Sat 24 Apr 2010

---

yes paris at - national libray they had a big artaud show 2 years ago also from moma drawing show - go to abebooks tpye in artaud drawings see what ya come up with

On Wed, 21 Apr 2010 19:29:22 -0700 Bill Dunlap
<[redacted]> writes:
> Does anyone know of a good book of Antonin Artaud's visual art > (drawings, prints, etc)? There seems to be nothing in print at the > moment, and even a google search gives very little. I know I've seen > lots of intense pieces he did, but I'm not finding anything. An > out-of-print title I came across is "Antonin Artaud: Drawings and > Prints" by Jacques Derrida. Honestly, I'm not too interested in > reading what Derrida has to say, I just want to know if the book has > good images (and lots of them). Or any other good source for > Artaud's imagery.
>
> Thanks,
> Bill Dunlap
> http://www.billdunlap.com
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
>

↑ Index

253. Freind, William Joseph Alice Notley in South Jersey
Sat 24 Apr 2010

Alice Notley will be reading on Monday, April 26 at 7:00 PM in the Westby Art Gallery at Rowan University in Glassboro, NJ. The reading is free and open to the public, and refreshments will be served. For more information, contact Bill Friend, [redacted]

↑ Index

254. Jonathan Penton
one week left to submit to the Unlikely Stories print edition!
Sat 24 Apr 2010

Surely you are an essayist, story writer, poet, videomaker, musician, spoken word artist, visual artist or reviewer that has a deep and uncontrollable need to be included in /"Unlikely Stories of the Third Kind/," the one-time-only (any time soon, anyway) sprawling physical manifestation of all things Unlikely! Get yourself over to http://www.unlikelystories.org/printsubmissions.shtml and get in now!

--
Jonathan Penton
http://www.unlikelystories.org/

↑ Index

255. Mark Johnson
Re: Artaud Art
Sun 25 Apr 2010

Here's a good one: Antonin Artaud: Works on Paper, ed. Margit Rowell (MOMA: 1998)

On Wed, Apr 21, 2010 at 10:29 PM, Bill Dunlap
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Does anyone know of a good book of Antonin Artaud's visual art (drawings, prints, etc)? There seems to be nothing in print at the moment, and even a google search gives very little. I know I've seen lots of intense pieces he did, but I'm not finding anything. An out-of-print title I came across is "Antonin Artaud: Drawings and Prints" by Jacques Derrida. Honestly, I'm not > too interested in reading what Derrida has to say, I just want to know if the book has good images (and lots of them). Or any other good source for Artaud's imagery.

>
> Thanks,
> Bill Dunlap
> http://www.billdunlap.com

↑ Index

256. steve dalachinsky

new chapbbooks by steve dalachinsky

Sun 25 Apr 2010

---

1. the mantis and other poems
written for cecil taylor - 1966 -2010
with collage by dalachinsky
50 pages
published by ininquity press in a first limited edition of 110
81/2 by 11 inches - $12 including shipping
available through steve -

2. invasion of the animal people - 20 pages
short cut up poems and collage by dalachinsky
4 by 51/4 inches - $6 plus $2 shipping available from propaganda press - at alt-current.com or $6 directly from steve backchannel if interested

↑ Index

257. amy king

The Most Important Book Every Man Should Read

Sun 25 Apr 2010

The Most Important Book Every Man Should Read -- http://www.huffingtonpost.com/steve-leveen/the-most-important-book-e_b_399419.html http://www.girleffect.org/

↑ Index

258. Ruth Lepson
Re: The Most Important Book Every Man Should Read
Sun 25 Apr 2010

---

exactly, amy! I have long felt the next revolution wd be the women's real revolution--of course, we still have to deal with global warming immediately.

On 4/25/10 3:10 PM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:

> book

↑ Index

259. patrick dunagan
Re: Clark Coolidge, Act of Providence
Sun 25 Apr 2010

---

city lights didn't seem to have any on Friday, but small press distribution:
http://www.spdbooks.org/Search/Default.aspx?SearchTerm¬t+of+providence appears to have 'em in stock and from what "the Toms" have had to say via blog it does indeed sound a delite

On 23 April 2010 01:40, Sam Ladkin <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear All,
>
> Does anyone know how I can get hold of Coolidge's new (old) one, Act of Providence, published by "Combo" or something like it? I cant seem to find an email or realworld address to track it down.
>
> Thanks,
>
> Sam

↑ Index

260. Halvard Johnson
Re: Art is theft
Sun 25 Apr 2010

I hereby thank, acknowledge, and give credit to all who have influenced me and/or my work--past, present, and future--for good or for ill, in any way whatsoever. You know who you are.

Hal

Halvard Johnson
==========

The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye (downloadable and free) is @ http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets

[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Fri, Apr 23, 2010 at 7:01 AM, steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>wrote:

> too deep
> art is always a take that seems like a give
> and a give that takes - borrowing / theft appropriation
> from others from nature - an honest thief as was said is the best
> or a good thief well disguising his/her theft
> as picasso said the highest honor he could give / pay anorher
> is to steal from them
> a make over not a copy - incorporation and hopefully crediting those > that influenced your piece in some way
>
> On Thu, 22 Apr 2010 14:55:15 -0500 Mary Jo Malo <[redacted]>
> writes:
> Art is stealing the unconditioned from the conditioned before anyone > notices it's missing and copies it.
>
> Mary Jo Malo
>
> --
> http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
> http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

261. David Chirot
Catalogue of The First Asemic Exhibitionin Russia is available
Sun 25 Apr 2010

Please note: below the announcement is an updated link of the catalogue So much thanks to dear friend Gleb Kommiets who organized and worked so hard dealing with bureaucracy and other constraints in order to mount this show.

Dear exhibition members,

Catalogue of The First Asmeic Exhibition is available at 'Scribd':
http://www.scribd.com/doc/30480741

It includes all artworks shown in Smolensk, photos and biographies of the contributors.

Feel yourself free to download and share the catalogue!

Please let me know if you'll have any ideas or wishes.

With hope on further collaboration,
Gleb Kolomiets.

Sorry! I had to make some urgent updates in a PDF catalogue. Here is a new link:
http://www.scribd.com/doc/30488056

↑ Index

262. Mark Weiss event
Mon 26 Apr 2010

The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry with Maria Isabel Alfonso, Lourdes Gil, James Irby, Mark Weiss & Christopher Winks

On the occasion of the publication of The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry, editor Mark Weiss, contributors and translators explore major trends in Cuban poetry, both on and off the island.

Tuesday, April 27, 7:00pm
Poets House, 10 River Terrace, NYC
$10, $7 for students and seniors, free to Poets House Members
Info: [redacted] or <http://www.poetshouse.org>www.poetshouse.org

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

"Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

263. Rob McLennan

rob on the chelsea hotel

Mon 26 Apr 2010

---

rob on the chelsea hotel, new york;

http://www.openbooktoronto.com/news/canadians_new_york_chelsea_hotel

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

264. Stephen Baraban

Re: Vote for Sina Queyras

Mon 26 Apr 2010

I don't plan to vote at all. Does this mean you will merely mess up my _____ & not my _____?

--- On Thu, 4/22/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> From: amy king <[redacted]>
> Subject: Vote for Sina Queyras
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Thursday, April 22, 2010, 8:33 PM
> If you value your _____
> http://bloggingpoet.squarespace.com/bloggingpoetcom/vote-for-the-2010-poet-laureate-of-the-blogosphere.html

↑ Index

265. Jeffrey Side

Interview at The Argotist Online with Brian Clements on prose poetry

Mon 26 Apr 2010

There's now an interview at The Argotist Online with Brian Clements on prose poetry: http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Clements%20interview.htm

↑ Index

266. Steve Halle

Davis Schneiderman @ Seven Corners

Mon 26 Apr 2010

Check out new work from Davis Schneiderman's "Un-Death of the Author" series at Seven Corners <http://www.sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/>.

Other recent featured poets: Jessica Ponto<http://sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/2010/04/featured-poet-jessica-ponto.html>, William Allegrezza<http://sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/2010/03/featured-poet-william-allegrezza.html>, Jacob Saenz<http://sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/2010/02/featured-poet-jacob-saenz.html>, & Julia Drauden<http://sevencornerspoetry.blogspot.com/2010/01/featured-poet-julia-drauden.html>

Thanks,
Steve Halle
Editor

↑ Index

267. Mark Weiss

Hello, I must be going

Mon 26 Apr 2010

But I'll be back June 9, and receiving b/c as usual. For those in the UK, that's where I'll be.

Curious about gigs? I'll be at Birkbeck May 19, Leicester June 1, and Roehampton (with Stephen Vincent) June 2. Contact me closer to the event for details.

Best,

Mark

Announcing The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry (University of California Press).
http://go.ucpress.edu/WholeIsland

"Not since the 1982 publication of Paul Auster's Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry has a bilingual anthology so effectively broadened the sense of poetic terrain outside the United States and also created a superb collection of foreign poems in English. There is nothing else like it." John Palattella in The Nation

↑ Index

268. Caroline Crumpacker
May 21 Great Small Works Parties
Mon 26 Apr 2010

HOLD THE DATE: FRIDAY MAY 21ST

TWO BRILLIANT PARTIES FOR GREAT SMALL WORKS

****

FRIDAY, MAY 21 ONE NIGHT IN TWO PARTS

PART ONE: 7:00 PM CHAMPAGNE CABARET

7:00pm at One Arm Red
10 Jay Street #903 in DUMBO
Champagne, Wine, Food, Margaret Leng Tan on Toy Piano & Rima Fand on violin!!

Tickets $50

PART TWO: 10:00 PM onward…BALKAN BRASS - FUNK DANCE FEST!

10:00pm onward at Saint Ann's Warehouse
38 Water Street in DUMBO
DJs and Live Bands, including Slavic Soul Party! & Spanglish Fly

Tickets $15

OR

Tickets for both parties $60

All $$ raised goes to support the Ninth Toy Theater Festival and Great Small Works.

For more information about the benefit and tickets, go to www.greatsmallworks.org

And here, dear readers, is more info. on the parties

Champagne Cabaret @ 7PM: Food, Wine, Performance!

Virtuoso Performer Margaret Leng Tan Plays Toy PianoMargaret Leng Tan has established herself as a major force in the American avant-garde. She is renowned as a pre-eminent John Cage interpreter and for her performances of American and Asian music that transcend the piano's conventional boundaries. She has been called "the queen of the toy piano" by The New York Times. After discovering Cage's Suite for Toy Piano in 1993, Ms. Tan became fascinated with the artistic potential of the toy piano and, more recently, with other toy instruments as well. In her groundbreaking 1997 album, The Art of the Toy Piano (Point/Universal), she elevated a humble toy to the status of a real instrument. Over the past decade, Ms. Tan's diminutive music-theater of nostalgia and humor has delighted audiences at festivals around the world. Her new album She Herself Alone: The Art of the Toy Piano 2 has just been released on Mode Records.

Special Performance from Clare Dolan Clare is a Painter, Director, and Performer of Cantastoria, Toy Theater, Outdoor Puppetry, and Stilt Dancing, while simultaneously living a secret double life as a nurse in her small Vermont town. She's a veteran of the Bread and Puppet Theater, and founder of The Museum of Everyday Life.

And of course…The scintillating and educational "Short Entertaining History of Toy Theater"by Dr. John Bell with the Great Small Works Orchestra.

***

Dance Fest @ 10PM:

Debo Band Boston's own 11 piece Ethio-groove collective was created by Ethiopian-American saxophonist Danny Mekonnen as a way of exploring the unique sounds that once filled the dance clubs of "Swinging Addis." Since 2006, Debo Band has been immersed in the unlikely confluence of traditional East African polyrhythms and pentatonic scales, classic American soul and funk music, and the instrumentation of Eastern European brass bands, producing a unique form of dance music that Ethiopian audiences instantly recognize as the soundtrack of their youth, carried from party to kitchen on the ubiquitous cassette tapes of the time. With a unique instrumentation – including horns, strings, and accordion – that is a nod to the big bands of Haile Selassie's time, Debo Band is giving new life to these old sounds, and playing it forward to a new generation and a broader audience.

Slavic Soul Party! is more than a band, it's a promise. Anyone who has seen them live can attest to that. The massive brass band is a supercollider of Eastern European sounds from the Balkans and all the funk of American musical traditions like second-line, gospel, and jazz. Hybridity isn't just a buzzword with this New York City-based group – domestic and foreign, new and old – it’s a fact of life. The fusion even carries over into the title of the band’s fifth album, Taketron, mashing up Japanese drummer Take Toriyama’s love of electronic music with the rapid fire of Balkan brass, and the incessant creativity of some of New York’s finest musicians.

“Fiery Balkan brass, hip-grinding American grooves, and ecstatic anthems both new and old: Slavic Soul Party! is just what it says. Brash and strong as slivovitz, these nine musicians have forged a virtuosic new brass band music in the heart of New York City – melding Gypsy, East European, Mexican, and Asian immigrant backgrounds with American jazz and soul – and “developed a reputation for delivering a great time.” (NY Times)

Spanglish Fly Spanglish Fly defines its sound as “1968 Barrio” — meaning the Spanish Harlem in the late 60s. The band is bent on cooking up a spicy musical dish comprised of bugaloo, Latin soul and shingaling. Their recipe, in their own words: “Two pounds of hot mambo stirred together with fifteen ounces of Motor-City Motown, deep fried for three hours, and you get a bucket load of mouthwatering soul latino.” The recent EP is Latin Soul y Bugalú, featuring special guest DJ Turmix and a performance by the Rude Mechanical Orchestra."They will make you dance for sure." -- REmezcla.com

and

DJ Dusty Walker mastering the mix on the twin turntables...

and

special guests to be announced soon...

FOR MORE INFO. AND TO BUY TIX GO TO WWW.GREATSMALLWORKS.ORG

Final

↑ Index

269. George Quasha

Gary Hill/George Quasha/Charles Stein Tue 6:30 PM Electronic Arts Intermix NYC: An Art of Limina

Tue 27 Apr 2010

Gary Hill/George Quasha/Charles Stein Tue 6:30 PM Electronic Arts Intermix NYC screening/conversation/book launch for "An Art of Limina: Gary Hill's Works and Writings" by George Quasha and Charles Stein; Foreword by Lynne Cooke (Ediciones Poligrafa: Barcelona, 2009): 640 pages, 980 illus. full color; cloth: Hardcover, 8.5 x 10.25 in.

http://www.eai.org/eai/pressreleases/04_10_gary_hill_pr.html

Tuesday, April 27, 20106:30 pmElectronic Arts Intermix (EAI) 535 West 22nd Street, 5th FloorNew York, NY 10011www.eai.org Admission free Please RSVP: [redacted]

Please join EAI for a special launch event celebrating the publication of An Art of Limina: Gary Hillâ€™s Works and Writings, a new monograph devoted to the works of artist Gary Hill. At EAI, Hill will appear in conversation with the book's authors, George Quasha and Charles Stein, poets, writers and artists who have worked interactively and performed with Hill for over three decades. Hill will discuss and screen selections from his early single-channel videos, tracing the development of his distinctive approach to language, sound and the moving image. Written in close connection with the artist and featuring a foreword by Lynne Cooke, An Art of Limina is the most comprehensive and in-depth treatment of Hill's work to date, presenting extensive information on 104 of his works from the 1970s through the present, as well as seminal writings by the artist. Gary Hill's art forges an important investigation into the relationships between words and electronic images. Originally trained as a sculptor, Hill began working in video in 1973 and has produced a major body of single-channel video and video installations. Hill's first tapes explored formal properties of the emerging medium, particularly through integral conjunctions of electronic visual and audio elements. This exploration would give way to thoroughly unique investigations of linguistics and consciousness in works characterized by their experimental rigor, conceptual precision and imaginative leaps of discovery. Perhaps as much as any artist using image/sound media, Hill's work in video is about, and is, a new form of writing.

Gary Hill was born in 1951. He studied at the Arts Student League in Woodstock, New York. Hill has been the recipient of numerous awards and honors, most notably the prestigious Leone d'Oro Prize for Sculpture at the Venice Biennale in 1995 and the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation Grant in 1998. Hill has taught at the Center for Media Study, Buffalo; Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York; and the Cornish College of the Arts, Seattle. Hill's installations and videos have been seen throughout the world, in group exhibitions at The Museum of Modern Art, New York; Documenta 8, Kassel, Germany; Long Beach Museum of Art, California; and Stedelijk Museum, Amsterdam; among other festivals and institutions. His work has also been the subject of retrospectives and one-person shows at the Fondation Cartier pour l'art contemporain, and Centre Georges Pompidou in Paris; Whitney Museum of American Art, New York; San Francisco Museum of Modern Art; Guggenheim Museum SoHo, New York; Museum fÃ¼r Gegenwartskunst, Basel; Museu d'Art Contemporani, Barcelona; Kunstmuseum Wolfsburg; and The Museum of Modern Art, New York; among others. Hill lives and works in Seattle.

For more information about the works of Gary Hill, please visit: www.eai.org

George Quasha works across mediums to explore principles in common within language, sculpture, drawing, video, sound, installation, and performance. His fifteen books include poetry, anthologies and writing on art. The recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship in video art and a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship in poetry, he has taught at Stony Brook University (SUNY), Bard College, and The New School Graduate Anthropology Department. With artist Susan Quasha he is founder/publisher of Barrytown/Station Hill Press in Barrytown, New York.

Charles Stein is the author of eleven books of poetry. He holds a Ph.D. in literature from The University of Connecticut at Storrs and has taught at SUNY Albany and Bard College. His work includes photography, sound poetry, and performance. He lives in Barrytown, New York.

An Art of Limina: Gary Hillâ€™s Works and Writings was written by George Quasha and Charles Stein, with foreward by Lynne Cooke. The tenth title in the internationally acclaimed 20_21 Collection, An Art of Limina has been published by Ediciones PolÃgrafa, under the direction of Gloria Moure. In the United States, An Art of Limina is distributed by D.A.P./Distributed Art Publishers, Inc.

↑ Index

270. Jeffrey Side
Review of 'Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes'
Tue 27 Apr 2010

First incoming review of 'Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes' at 9th Street Laboratories:

http://9thstlab.blogspot.com/

The review is beneath the authors' commentary.

↑ Index

271. Alan Sondheim
AMA Trio and Secret Orchestra at the Jazz Lounge, Tuesday May 4th
Tue 27 Apr 2010

The AMA Trio and Secret Orchestra at the Jazz Lounge, Tuesday May 4th

Tuesday May 4th

ESP LIVE @ The Jazz Lounge
An experimental music series the 1st Tuesday of every month
520 Dekalb Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11205 - G train to Bedford/Nostrand

Show starts promptly at 8:30!

8:30 pm
Alan Sondheim (ESP 1048, ESP 1082)
Azure Carter - voice
Myk Freidman - lap-steel guitar
Alan Sondheim - electric saz

9:30 pm
Secret Orchestra
David Gould - drums, percussion
Yuko Fujiyama - piano
Clif Jackson - bass

More about Alan Sondheim:

Alan Sondheim was born in Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania; he lives with his partner, Azure Carter, in Brooklyn NY. He holds a B.A. and M.A. from Brown University in English. A new-media artist, writer, and theorist, he has exhibited, performed and lectured widely.

Current interests include aesthetics and productions of virtual environ- ments and installations, mapping with motion capture and 3d laser scanners, Buddhist philosophy and its relation to avatars and online environments, and experimental choreography.

Alan recorded two albums for ESP-Disk' in the 60s which melded free improvisation with electronic instrumentation. His latest recordings have been issued on Porter Records, Fire Museum & Qbico.

More about Azure Carter:

Azure Carter has been writing and performing her own songs for a number of years; she also performs with Foofwa d'Imobilite and Alan Sondheim. Azure is working on her own performances and sets, which are documented online. She has appeared in a number of videos, and sings with Myk Freedman and Alan Sondheim.

More about Myk Freedman:

Myk Freedman is a 29-year-old lap steel player, composer, arranger, and band leader. In 2003 he moved from Toronto to NYC to study music and pursue the American Dream. Since then, he has preformed with John Zorn, William Parker, Elliot Sharp, Cyro Baptista and Kenney Wessel, as well as with countless others.

Myk's compositions have been recorded by many of his own groups, as well as by ensembles: The MK Groove Orchestra, In a China Shop and MARTIN & HAYNES, a Toronto duo made up of Justin Haynes and Jean Martin who released an entire record dedicated to his music entitled, FREEDMAN. His arrangements have been premiered at world famous venues such as The Blue Note, John Zorn's The Stone, The Knitting Factory and the 2004 Distillery Jazz Festival where he was nominated for the Emerging Artist Award.

As the leader of Saint Dirt Elementary School, Myk has released three positively received albums on Canadian labels, Oval Window Records, Barnyard Records, and Rat Drifting. He splits his time between New York and North York (Ontario) and is currently completing his second songbook of fake folk music.

More about Secret Orchestra:

Secret Orchestra is an original group initiated by Clif Jackson in 2007 after the trio had already played together as a rhythm section in various other projects. It became apparent that they had a connection and shared osme similar musical ideas. However, they also brought their very different backgrounds into the mix creating a strong dynamic and a wide spectrum of musical space to play in. Although Clif is the 'leader' of the group and writes a lot of the music, he is the youngest member and defers to the knowledge and experience of his elder band mates. Yuko contributes original compositions, as well, and they all contribute to arrangements and aesthetics when appropriate. Furthermore, improvisation is at the center of their music, leaving all of them open to create their own parts or to work within the composer's guidelines. Through a mix of composition and improvisation the overall musical aesthetic is grounded in a sense of direction and an exploration of colors, textures, silence, and rhythmic and melodic structures.

--
Adam Downey
Director of Promotions ESP-Disk'
www.espdisk.com

↑ Index

272. Jack Kimball
Faux | Other
Tue 27 Apr 2010

Announcing Faux | Other releases .....

A Hundred Posters, edited by Alan Davies (CD)
Post~Twya: Reset, Jack Kimball
The New Old Paint, Susie Timmons
Memoir and Essay, Michael Gottlieb

In the mid 1970s Alan Davies edited 40 issues of A Hundred Posters. Among those whose work appeared were Ginsberg, Wieners, Eigner, Weiner. The importance of the authors published makes this CD reissue a solid indication of poetic directions for the present & future.

Initially a spoof of John Ashbery's Flow Chart, Post~Twyla: Reset re-emphasizes daybook metonymy, lexical captures, & graphical meta-commentary to upset the "flow." Cantatas for experimental instruments, jubilant disparities. Alan Davies calls P~T "unremittingly Burroughs-in-bed."

The New Old Paint is Susie Timmons's second poetry collection. Alice Notley noted in her first collection Timmons's "naked" train of thought & her "wit." The same applies here, fully resourceful, totally unexpected, "Hello, I am your American flag / I know; hard to believe, / a talking flag."

Jennifer Moxley on Memoir and Essay: "A bright young poet arrives penniless in a resplendently decaying New York where he finds a group of like-minded writers. They join ranks and set out to challenge the establishment. Gottlieb makes this old story new with crisp prose and thoughtful personal details."

Pre-order before publication, $13.00 each (rather than 16.00) or a full set of 4 for 45.00 (limited offer).
Visit: http://www.fauxpress.com

Thanks!

↑ Index

273. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ
NEXT WEEK: Annual Chapbook Festival on Monday & Tuesday!
Tue 27 Apr 2010

ANNUAL CHAPBOOK FESTIVAL
Monday May 3 &Tuesday May 4, 2010

The Festival celebrates the chapbook as a work of art and as a medium for alternative and emerging writers and publishers. Now in its second year, the festival features a two-day bookfair with chapbook publishers from around the country, workshops, marathon poetry readings, and a closing-night reading of prize-winning Chapbook Fellows. At the CUNY Graduate Center, 365 Fifth Avenue and 34th Street, NYC. Full schedule at www.chapbookfestival.org and below.

Co-sponsored by The Office of Academic Affairs, The Center for the Humanities, The Graduate Center and MFA Programs in Creative Writing of the City University of New York, The Center for Book Arts, Poets House, Poetry Society of America, and Poets & Writers

---

Schedule of Events
Bookfair
11:30am to 7pm both days (May 3-4) in the Proshansky Auditorium Lobby, C Level
Free and open to the public

MONDAY, MAY 3, 2010
Workshops
C Level Breakout Rooms
Free registration required. To attend workshops, please register by e-mailing [redacted]

10 – 11:30am
Producing Chapbooks: A Workshop for Poets
Brenda Iijima (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs) and Rachel Levitsky (Belladonna*), and Lonely Christopher (The Corresponding Society)

10 – 11:30am
Do-It-Yourself Chapbooks: Make and Distribute Your Own
Mary Gannon and Jean Hartig (Poets & Writers Magazine), Emily Goodale (Brave Men Press), Matvei Yankelevich (Ugly Duckling Presse), and Adam Robinson (Publishing Genius)

11:30am – 1pm
Producing Chapbooks: A Workshop for Publishers
Jan Heller Levi (Hunter College), Rachel Levitsky (Belladonna*), and Marshall Webber (Booklyn)

11:30am – 1pm
Chapbooks as Art Objects
Roni Gross (Roni Gross Design), and Jeremy Thompson (The Autotypograph), with Sarah Nicholls (Center for Book Arts)

Chapbook Poets: A Marathon Reading
2 – 7pm, C Level Breakout Rooms
Poets from participating presses read. Full lineup to be announced at www.chapbookfestival.org soon.
Free and open to the public.

Opening Reception
7 – 8pm, Proshansky Auditorum Lobby

TUESDAY, MAY 4, 2010
Workshops
C Level Breakout Rooms
Free registration required. To attend workshops, please register by e-mailing [redacted]

10 – 11:30am
Producing Chapbooks: A Workshop for Poets
Sommer Browning and Tony Mancus (Flying Guillotine Press), Jill Magi (Sona Books), and Daniel Lin (Love Among the Ruins)

10 – 11:30am
Do-It-Yourself Chapbooks: Make and Distribute Your Own
Mary Gannon and Jean Hartig (Poets & Writers Magazine), Emily Goodale (Brave Men Press), and Anna Moschovakis (Ugly Duckling Presse)

11:30am – 1pm
Producing Chapbooks: A Workshop for Publishers
Jan Heller Levi (Hunter College), Andrew Levy (CRAYON Magazine), Sueyeun Juliette Lee (Corollary Press), and Charmaine Wheatley (Booklyn)

11:30am – 1pm
Chapbooks as Art Objects
Roni Gross (Roni Gross Design) and Jeremy Thompson (The Autotypograph), with Sarah Nicholls (Center for Book Arts)

Chapbook Poets: A Marathon Reading
2 – 7pm, C Level Breakout Rooms
Poets from participating presses read. Full lineup to be announced at www.chapbookfestival.org soon.
Free and open to the public.

PSA Chapbook Fellowship Reading
7pm, Martin E. Segal Theatre
Alice Quinn with judges Mark Doty, Linda Gregg, and Arthur Sze, and winners Jocelyn Casey-Whiteman, Haines Eason, Heidi Johannesen Poon,

and Stephanie Adams-Santos. Followed by reception.
Free and open to the public.

On Wednesday, May 5, The Center for Book Arts will host printing and bookbinding workshops, from 10-1 and 2-5. To sign up, call [redacted].

Participating publishers
2nd Ave Poetry
Bateau Press
Belladonna*
BOOK Works
Booklyn
BookThug
Cervena Barva Press
Concrete Wolf Chapbook Press
Corollary Press
CRAYON Creature Press
Cy Gist Press
CUNY Lost & Found
DoubleCross Press
Dusie Kollektiv
Etched Press
Factory Hollow Press
Finishing Line Press
Five Spice Poetry
Flying Guillotine Press
Forklift, Ohio
Greying Ghost Press
H_NGM_N
Instance Press
Kissena Park Press
Little Scratch Pad
Love Among the Ruins
Magic Helicopter Books
Minutes Books
Noemi Press
Open Thread Publications
Pen Press
Plan B Press
Pleasure Boat Studio: A Literary Press
Poets Wear Prada

Poinciana Paper Press
Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs
PresShop
Rain Taxi
River Poets Journal/Lilly Press
Sarabande Books
Seven Kitchens Press
Slapering Hol Press
Small Anchor Press
Sona Books
Spire Press
sunnyoutside
Tarpaulin Sky Press
The Physiocrats
Toadlily Press
Ugly Duckling Presse Upset Press
X-ing Press/Agriculture Reader and others!

↑ Index

274. Catherine Daly

Re: query: calling poets who are also musicians (or who dabble in music?)

Tue 27 Apr 2010

---

there's a second generation -- well, maybe 1 1/2 generation while Mike Watt is in the 1st, Lydia Lunch, all of Sonic Youth (Lee Renaldo, Thurston Moore...)

don't forget that presses that these musicians were able to found, like 12.13.61 and Soft Skull then continued to blur spoken word, music and poetry -- away from performance art

Mike Watt talks about starting playing music with Creedence covers in high school, but then as his spiels and lyrics developed in the "Harvard of punk rock" began to consider these writings to be poems in their own right.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

275. Joel Weishaus
Poetica Review
Tue 27 Apr 2010

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

My latest Poetica review is of Peter Pereira's book of poems, "What's Written on the Body": http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Poetica/blog-3.htm

This is the third piece in the series:
http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Poetica/intro.htm

MS Explorer browser preferred. Text Size: Medium.

-Joel

Joel Weishaus
Homepage: http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282
On-Line Archive:
www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/index.htm

↑ Index

276. Poetry Project
Special events at The Poetry Project
Tue 27 Apr 2010

Dear Friends,

This week is The Poetry Project's annual fundraising week. We would love to see you at at least one of our three special events. If you cannot attend please consider sending a donation to the Project by following one of the links below.

Your support will help The Poetry Project continue to deliver terrific, challenging, and risky work!

If you can¹t make it out but would like to support us you can become a member here:
http://poetryproject.org/get-involved/become-a-member

Or make a donation here:
http://poetryproject.org/get-involved/donate-now

Wednesday, April 28, 8 PM
Alice Notley

We are thrilled to present this evening with Alice Notley to kick off our Spring Fundraising Week. Notley has published over thirty books of poetry, including (most recently) Reason and Other Women; Grave of Light: New and Selected Poems 1970-2005; Alma, or The Dead Women; and In the Pines. With her sons, Anselm and Edmund Berrigan, Notley edited The Collected Poems of Ted Berrigan. She is also the author of a book of essays on poets and poetry, Coming After. Notley has received many prizes and awards including the Academy of American Poets¹ Lenore Marshall Prize, the Poetry Society of America¹s Shelley Award, the Griffin Prize, two NEA Grants, and the Los Angeles Times Book Award for Poetry. Considered an important figure in the New York School, Notley now lives and writes in Paris, France.

This event will take place in the Sanctuary. Reception to follow. Admission is $10.

Friday, April 30, 6:30 PM
We Saw the Light: Conversations Between New American Cinema and Poetry
Talk & Screening

In We Saw the Light: Conversations Between the New American Cinema and Poetry (University of Iowa Press, 2009), Daniel Kane draws on correspondence and interviews with key figures in innovative cinema and writing of the 1960s to provide a fresh look at film¹s influence on poetry. Please join us for a discussion amongst filmmakers and poets, and stay for a special screening of mainly 16mm prints.

Talk (6:30-7:30 PM) Ed Bowes, Jacob Burckhardt, Abigail Child, Cole Heinowitz, Jonas Mekas, and Jennifer Reeves. Moderated by Daniel Kane.

Film Program (8 PM) A selection of short films by Ed Bowes, Stan Brakhage, Jacob Burckhardt, Rudy Burckhardt, Abigail Child, Christopher Maclaine, Jonas Mekas, Marie Menken, and Jennifer Reeves.

Stan Brakhage: Two: Creeley/McClure (1965) 16mm, color, silent, 5 min; Christopher Maclaine: The Man Who Invented Gold (1957) 16mm, color, sound, 14 min; Jonas Mekas: Hare Krishna (1966) 16mm, color, sound, 4 min; Abigail Child: Surface Noise (2000) 16mm, 18 min; Jennifer Reeves: excerpt from The Time We Killed (2004), 16mm; Rudy Burckhardt: The Automative Story (1954), 16mm, b&w, 15 min; Jacob Burckhardt: Black and White (2001) 16mm, b&w, 10 min; Marie Menken: Lita¹s Party (1964?), 16mm, 4 min; Ed Bowes: excerpt from Entanglement (2009)

Program subject to change.
Thanks to the Filmmakers¹ Cooperative, Jacob Burckhardt & Andrew Lampert at Anthology Film Archives.
This event will take place in the sanctuary. Admission is $10.

Saturday, May 1, 8 PM
John Ashbery¹s Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror for Six Voices

First published in 1975, John Ashbery¹s long poem Self-Portrait in a Convex Mirror begins as a meditation on an extraordinary Mannerist painting by Francesco Parmigianino. The poem, and the volume that includes it, remain among the most influential works of our time. In this performance, six readers with projected text and image make the work unusually available, as Ashbery¹s tonal shifts and juxtapositions are taken up by different voices. With Joan Arnold, Andrea Barnet, Jan Hanvik, James Occhino, Jim Paul and Annie Walwyn-Jones. Arranged and directed by Jim Paul.

This event will take place in the Sanctuary. Admission is $10.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

277. Annie Guthrie
UA Poetry Center -please post
Tue 27 Apr 2010

The University of Arizona Poetry Center recently received a $49,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to further develop its prestigious Audio/Video collection. The audio/video holdings are among the rarest materials in the Poetry Center's library collection of contemporary poetry. According to Executive Director Gail Browne, "The recordings capture historic readings by many of the most important writers of the past 50 years. Scholars can hear authors discuss their own works and often hear early versions of works-in-progress. Poetry lovers can hear favorite poems in the poet's own voice." The NEH Digital Humanities Initiative Grant will fund the work to make the archive accessible to a much wider audience. For more information visit www.poetrycenter.arizona.edu

↑ Index

278. Catherine Daly

Fwd: [NetBehaviour] Iowa Review on the Web

Tue 27 Apr 2010

The Iowa Review on the Web has been around for at least the past dozen years.

The last issue I can find is from 2008
http://research-intermedia.art.uiowa.edu/tirw/vol9n2/

It began as a parallel web version, one less competitive to get into, but with a similar aesthetic to the print version. Later on, it morphed into a publication which featured "electronic literature" (with varying degrees of success), "TIR-W."

However, it is apparently just gone, with a redesign and a new editor for the TIR portion.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

279. steve dalachinsky

Re: new chapbbooks and recent books by steve dalachinsky most easily gotten thru author expanded list

Wed 28 Apr 2010

---

1. insomnia poems for louise bourgeois 6$ small run 20 pages

2. invasion of the animal people 6$ small run 20 pages

3. the mantis - cecil poems ininquity press - 10 - editon first run 100 - 50 pages

4. reaching into the unknown with photos by jacques bisceglia rogueart paris 450 pages 140 poems 180 photos of/ for practically every well known musician in jazz scene since the 50's and even john cage $50 - edition 1000

5. logos and language with matt shipp rogueart paris $20 - edition 800 - 100 pages

6. christ amongst the fishes - a book of collage - $10 - edition 125 - 33 pages

7. hand painted french cd w/2 great french musican recorded in bordeaux and only available there and in paris $15 - editon 300
On Sun, 25 Apr 2010 23:33:11 +0530 steve dalachinsky <[redacted]> writes:
> 1. the mantis and other poems
> written for cecil taylor - 1966 -2010
> with collage by dalachinsky
> 50 pages
> published by ininquity press in a first limited edition of 110
> 81/2 by 11 inches - $12 including shipping
> available through steve -
>
> 2. invasion of the animal people - 20 pages
> short cut up poems and collage by dalachinsky
> 4 by 51/4 inches - $6 plus $2 shipping
> available from propaganda press - at alt-current.com > or $6 directly from steve
>
> backchannel if interested
>
>
>

↑ Index

280. Ann Bogle
T. S. Eliot quotation
Wed 28 Apr 2010

Still looking over replies to my query. Perhaps other citations will occur. It seems -- based on these replies and threads at the other listserv -- Eliot's is the lasting critical word on the subject. Here is his statement in more context:

T.S. Eliot (1888â€“1965). The Sacred Wood: Essays on Poetry and Criticism. 1922.

http://www.bartleby.com/200/sw11.html (http://www.bartleby.com/200/sw11.html)

"We turn first to the parallel quotations from Massinger and Shakespeare collocated by Mr. Cruickshank to make manifest Massinger's indebtedness. One of the surest of tests is the way in which a poet borrows. Immature poets imitate; mature poets steal; bad poets deface what they take, and good poets make it into something better, or at least something different. The good poet welds his theft into a whole of feeling which is unique, utterly different from that from which it was torn; the bad poet throws it into something which has no cohesion. A good poet will usually borrow from authors remote in time, or alien in language, or diverse in interest. Chapman borrowed from Seneca; Shakespeare and Webster from Montaigne. The two great followers of Shakespeare, Webster and Tourneur, in their mature work do not borrow from him; he is too close to them to be of use to them in this way. Massinger, as Mr. Cruickshank shows, borrows from Shakespeare a good deal. Let us profit by some of the quotations with which he has provided usâ€”

"Massinger: Can I call back yesterday, with all their aids
That bow unto my sceptre? or restore
My mind to that tranquillity and peace
It then enjoyed?

"Shakespeare: Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrops of the world
Shall ever medecine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou owedst yesterday.

"Massinger's is a general rhetorical question, the language just and pure, but colourless. Shakespeare's has particular significance; and the adjective "drowsy" and the verb "medecine" infuse a precise vigour. This is, on Massinger's part, an echo, rather than an imitation or a plagiarismâ€”the basest, because least conscious form of borrowing. ... "

My fortune cookie this week: "You can't steal second base and keep one foot on first."

↑ Index

281. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ

Now available: Lost & Found: The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative chapbooks!

Wed 28 Apr 2010

Dear Friend,

We are delighted to announce the publication of the inaugural chapbook series in Lost & Found: The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative. Below find the official Press Release.

You may have attended our prepublication party or heard of the project through the grapevine; now the books are available for purchase via mail and online at http://www.centerforthehumanitiesgc.org/lostandfound where they are on sale for $10 per issue, $35 per set, and $25 per subscription. On Monday and Tuesday, May 3rd and 4th, 10 a.m.—8 p.m., the set of chapbooks will also be available for purchase at the Center for Humanities' Annual Chapbook Festival.

Look for the Lost & Found table. More information and a schedule for the festival are available at http://www.chapbookfestival.org.

Thank you for your support – we hope you enjoy the books!

Ammiel Alcalay, General Editor
Aoibheann Sweeney, Director of the Center for the Humanities

###
PRESS CONTACT:
The Center for the Humanities
[redacted]

April 28, 2010

For Immediate release: Printed in elegant, stapled editions, the inaugural chapbook series of Lost & Found: The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative activates and puts into wider circulation important but little known texts drawn from personal and institutional archives. An ongoing publication project emerging from archival and textual scholarship done by students, faculty and guest fellows at the Graduate Center, the primary focus of Lost & Found is on writers who fall under the rubric of the New American Poetry. Since enhanced accessibility to a broad spectrum of archival material helps create alternative, divergent and enriched versions of literary and cultural history, the Lost & Found initiative takes the "New American" rubric writ large, including the affiliated and unaffiliated, precursors and followers. The first set includes correspondence, essays, and journal selections:

Amiri Baraka & Edward Dorn: Selections from the Collected Letters 1959-1960, ed. Claudia Moreno Pisano, includes letters written between 1959 and 1960 and covers a wide-range of discussions, "from quotidian observations of being snowbound without enough heat...to the hashing out of experiences, fears, and anxieties directly related to the socio-political culture of the early 1960s".

The Correspondence of Kenneth Koch & Frank O'Hara 1955-1956, Part I and II, ed. Josh Schneiderman, includes "letters [...] written over an eighteen-month period from 1955 to 1956 [that] provide an account of the poets' important, if often overlooked, friendship. Full of poems, literary gossip, and nods to artistic influences, Koch and O'Hara's correspondence also chronicles a key moment in what would come to be known as the New York School of poets".

Darwin & The Writers, Muriel Rukeyser, ed. Stefania Heim, is an unpublished essay about Darwin (rejected by The Nation in 1959). "The piece is an exercise in the discovery, collection, and exposition of "meeting-places" between scientific and literary imaginations, extending the intellectual work Rukeyser started in works like Willard Gibbs and The Life of Poetry."

1957-1977 Selections from the Journals Part I and II, Philip Whalen, ed. Brian Unger, is comprised of entries from Whalen's Journals from two key periods in his life: the mid to late 1950s following the public recognition of the Beats, and the early 1970s, after his return from Japan and his decision to live in a Zen monastery.

The 1963 Vancouver Poetry Conference / Robert Creeley's Contexts of Poetry, with Daphne Marlatt's Journal Entries, ed. Ammiel Alcalay, is a Creeley lecture and conversation with Allen Ginsberg. Contexts of Poetry is from the landmark 1963 Vancouver Poetry Conference, with excerpts from the journals of the prominent Canadian poet Daphne Marlatt, chronicling her attendance as a student.

Together, the set marks an auspicious beginning to a project that brings the finest traditions of small press publication and textual scholarship to a broader reading public.

We are delighted to announce that the chapbooks are available at bookstores across the nation, from St. Marks Books to City Lights.

Books may be ordered online at www.centerforthehumanitiesgc.org/lostandfound where they are on sale for $10 per issue, $35 per set, and $25 per subscription. On Monday and Tuesday, May 3rd and 4th, 10 a.m.—8 p.m., the set of chapbooks will also be available for purchase at the Center for Humanities' Annual Chapbook Festival. Look for the Lost & Found table. More information and a schedule for the festival are available at www.chapbookfestival.org.

###

LOST & FOUND
The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative
Published by The Center for the Humanities
Pub Date: May 2010
www.centerforthehumanitiesgc.org/lostandfound

↑ Index

282. amy king
Vote Sina -- she's almost there...
Wed 28 Apr 2010

Amy King

Vote for SINA now, please. Get her in there:

http://bloggingpoet.squarespace.com/bloggingpoetcom/vote-for-the-2010-poet-laureate-of-the-blogosphere.html

↑ Index

283. steve dalachinsky
anne waldman reads
Wed 28 Apr 2010

Anne Waldman & Ambrose Bye
> with special guests Akilah Oliver & Tyler Burba
>
> Poetry, music, song
>
> LOCAL 269 $10
>
> 269 East Houston
> (the bar at the corner of Suffolk & E. Houston)
>

↑ Index

284. Tenney Nathanson
Poet for a Day on PennSound
Thu 29 Apr 2010

PennSound just put up the file of my March reading at Simon Fraser (w Sarah Vap--her reading will likely go up shortly):

http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/ (where it's temporarily the featured item)

thanks to Michael Hennessey for featuring the raeding, and to Frank Parker of POG, guru of POGSound, who pried the two readings apart into separate files and to Steve Collis for the SFU invitation, and Gillian Jerome for UBC reading and lecture invitations

↑ Index

285. George Quasha
C Bernstein/ Susan Bee/ G Quasha et al. in RAUCOUS - talks/performances relating to ARAKAWA & GINS at Barnard Friday April 30th 4-8 PM
Thu 29 Apr 2010

RAUCOUS

CELEBRATING THE LAUNCHING OF AN ART-SCIENCE OF VIABILITY

AG3: ONLINE -- THE THIRD INTERNATIONAL ARAKAWA AND GINS : ARCHITECTURE & PHILOSOPHY CONFERENCE CONCLUDING EVENT
AT BARNARD COLLEGE
April 30 (Friday) 4 to 8 p.m.

LECTURES PERFORMANCES READINGS
Serge Gavronsky
Jondi Keane
Professor of French, Barnard College
Co-Director of AG3-Online, Senior Lecturer, Griffith University
Martin E. Rosenberg
Co-Director of AG3-Online, Independent Scholar
Reuben Baron
Professor Emeritus of Psychology, University of Connecticut
Joan Baron Educational Psychologist
Gordon Bearn
Professor of Philosophy, Lehigh University
Trish Glazebrook
Professor of Philosophy, Dalhousie University

Catherine Fitzmaurice

Actor, Founder of Fitzmaurice Voicework
Ilse Pfeifer
Body Worker and Voice Coach Melissa Smedley
Artist

Charles Bernstein

Poet and Artist
Susan Bee
Poet and Artist
George Quasha
Poet-Artist

Barnard Hall 3009 Broadway Held Auditorium
Admission Free as in Free as the Breeze
An additional concluding event will take place at GUGGENHEIM MUSEUM on May 1 (Saturday) 1 to 5 p.m. SOLD OUT www

.reversibledestiny

.org

http

://ag3.griffith.edu.au/

↑ Index

286. steve dalachinsky

new chapbook by yuko otomo other books by her upon request

Thu 29 Apr 2010

---

there's a lovely little book by artist and poet yuko otomo on propaganda press - a sunday afternoon in the isle of museum cover by the author poems about paintings and photos at the MET - $6

availble through the author - back channel or through alt-current.com

↑ Index

287. steve dalachinsky

correction waldman reading date and time

Thu 29 Apr 2010

Anne Waldman & Ambrose Bye

with special guests Akilah Oliver & Tyler Burba

Poetry, music, song

LOCAL 269

$10 $ 7 students and seniors

269 East Houston - May 10, 2010 8 pm

(the bar at the corner of Suffolk & E. Houston)

↑ Index

288. Nate Pritts

Lord Dragonfly & submissions

Thu 29 Apr 2010

Hi all -

Just a last second reminder that H_NGM_N is accepting full-length manuscript submissions during our open reading period for a few more days:

http://www.h-ngm-n.com/s_bmissions/

Our first full-length book is actually a reissue of William Heyen's long out of print 1981 volume LORD DRAGONFLY. The book has new notes by the author, a critical appreciation by Matthew Henriksen (which first appeared online in Octopus) & a new memoir-ish kind of thing by me. It'll be out in June.

We're taking pre-orders for the book now & I'd really appreciate you thinking about getting a copy - something especially to think about if you're affiliated with a university/library/poetics collection:

http://www.h-ngm-n.com/h_ngm_n-b__ks/h_ngm_n-reissues.html

xo.n8.xo

_____
:: Dr. Nate Pritts

:: http://www.natepritts.com

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

289. amy king
One more time... [plus major linkage]
Thu 29 Apr 2010

Sina Queryas has never written a word about my work nor are we friends (though she did read for me once several years ago). I don't even correspond with her. I posted a call to vote for her blogging because I really think she contributes, on her blog and at Poetry Foundation, to the discussion of literature, especially poetry.Voting ends tonight. The voting resets every 24 hours, so you can vote again if you have a mind to and think Sina's blogging might be worthy of the title-at-hand: http://bloggingpoet.squarespace.com/bloggingpoetcom/vote-for-the-2010-poet-laureate-of-the-blogosphere.html

~~ Also, I posted links of interest periodically. The latest -- http://lemonhound.blogspot.com/ Amy

↑ Index

290. amy king
Re: One more time... [plus major linkage] - Whoops!
Thu 29 Apr 2010

Here's my Major Linkage:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/04/28/major-linkage/

George Costanza

From: amy king <[redacted]>

Sina Queryas has never written a word about my work nor are we friends (though she did read for me once several years ago). I don't even correspond with her. I posted a call to vote for her blogging because I really think she contributes, on her blog and at Poetry Foundation, to the discussion of literature, especially poetry.Voting ends tonight. The voting resets every 24 hours, so you can vote again if you have a mind to and think Sina's blogging might be worthy of the title-at-hand: http://bloggingpoet.squarespace.com/bloggingpoetcom/vote-for-the-2010-poet-laureate-of-the-blogosphere.html

~~ Also, I posted links of interest periodically. The latest -- http://lemonhound.blogspot.com/ Amy

↑ Index

291. David-Baptiste Chirot

Patti Smith on Democracy Now today

Thu 29 Apr 2010

There is a nearly hour long interview with Patti Smith conducted by Amy Goodman on Democracy Now tv today--i'd highly recommend it Patti Smith has a new book out which focuses on her lifelong friendship with Robert mapplethorpe: in the interview she speaks esp. re their early years in NYC, living in the Chelsea Hotel, his foto of her for her first LP etc she also speaks of her activism and songs for the Palestinian people and at greater length re a teen-aged boy, a German Muslim Turk, imprisoned five years in Guantanamo for "reasons" based on a string of accidental circumstances- a book which had a huge effect on me as a teenager (and ever since)had a similar effect on Patti Smith when she discovered it by chance, also as a teenager-- Angel Fores' Anthology of French Poetry: from Nerval to Valery--when the book was republished twenty five or so years later, Patti Smith wrote a very inspiring introduction re her discovery of the book and its effects on her life, writing, music- it's an Anthology i can't highly enough recommend as people familiar with her work know, her second album, Radio Free Ethiopia, is basically dedicated to and heavily influenced by Arthur Rimbaud, his life and works i think of Patti Smith as a figure on the line of what the Japanese call a National Treasure--through her poetry, music, activism and contributions to the Punk ethos and performance, she has had a huge impact worldwide and is an examplar of the kind of artist most needed in times like these, in which so many American poets and artists have turned their back on involvement with anything controversial, which is to say, the basic issue of human rights for all persons and a sense of Shelley's call for poets acting and creating as indeed the unacknowledged legislators of the world- thank you to Patti Smith and Amy Goodman for the inspiring and often hilarious interview--do tune in-

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

292. Rob McLennan
lainna el jabi on christine stewart
Thu 29 Apr 2010

on the globe & mail book blog (the 2nd last piece during my April "poetry month" curating tenure);

Toronto (formerly Edmonton) poet/critic Lainna El Jabi on Edmonton (formerly Vancouver) poet/critic Christine Stewart

http://www.theglobeandmail.com/books/in-other-words/poetry-month-lainna-lane-el-jabi-on-christine-stewart/article1550968/

tomorrow: rob on Kroetsch

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

293. Chad Sweeney
Issue 7 PWR Launch at Poetry Center
Thu 29 Apr 2010

Please celebrate with us as we launch Issue Seven of Parthenon West Review

Our first reading will be at San Francisco State University Poetry Center SFSU Humanities Building, Room 5121600 Holloway Ave., San Francisco Thursday, May 6, 2010, 7:00 p.m.

featuring

MAXINE CHERNOFF
CAMILLE DUNGY

ANHVU BUCHANAN
HOLLIE HARDY
FRANÇOIS LUONG

editors David Holler and Chad Sweeney

Maxine Chernoff is the author of six books of fi ction and eight books of poetry, most recently The Turning (2008) and Among the Names (2005), both from Apogee Press. She recently translated The Selected Poems of Friedrich Hölderlin (Omnidawn, 2009), with her husband Paul Hoover, with whom she also co-edits New American Writing. Chernoff is a professor and Chair of the Creative Writing program at San Francisco State University.

Camille T. Dungy is author of What to Eat, What to Drink, What to Leave for Poison (Red Hen Press, 2006) and Suck on the Marrow (Red Hen Press, due January 2010). She is editor of Black Nature: Four Centuries of African American Nature Poetry (UGA, 2009) and co-editor of From the Fishouse: An Anthology of Poems that Sing, Rhyme, Resound, Syncopate, Alliterate, and Just Plain Sound Great (Persea, 2009). Dungy is associate professor of Creative Writing at San Francisco State University.

Anhvu Buchanan's poems have appeared or are forthcoming in 580 Split, William and Mary Review, Boston Literary Magazine, Transfer, and Cream City Review. He is the first place winner of the 2009 Barbie Cage Haiku Contest and inaugural winner of Virginia Tech's Steger Poetry Prize. He co-curates the Living Room Reading series with poet Ric Delia and is finishing up his MFA at San Francisco State University.

Hollie Hardy's poetry has appeared in Transfer, Milvia Street Journal, Goetry, and Boxcutter. She is an MFA candidate for poetry at San Francisco State University, where she also earned her BA in Creative Writing. She is a poetry editor for Fourteen Hillsand curator of The Velvet Revolution, a weekly open mic reading series. Her current project is a series of "Survival Poems" with titles ruthlessly appropriated from The Worst Case Scenario Survival Handbook.

François Luong, originally from Strasbourg, France, currently lives in San Francisco. His work has appeared or is forthcoming in Action Yes, Cannibal, Bombay Gin, New American Writing and elsewhere. In addition to his translations of Rémi Froger he is also translating Esther Tellermann, a.rawlings and other French and Canadian poets. His translation of angela rawlings' The wide slumber for lepidopterists (Coach House Books, Canada, 2005) is forthcoming in 2012 through Un clou dans le fer (France).

San Francisco State University Poetry Center is in Room 512 of SFSU's Humanities Building.

1600 Holloway Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94132
For more information email: [redacted] streview. com

↑ Index

294. amy king
Dear Patrons of the Arts -- In less than two hours, plus...
Thu 29 Apr 2010

Dearest Peeps, So the guy Sina is up against is getting votes from his very large paid-for-blogging audience (via Twitter @writersdigest x 43,000 followers, no lie). He gets paid to blog there. Sina Queyras blogs during her own personal time about literature, esp poetry, without expecting pay. She's a good blogger, selfless and interesting. The voting ends at midnight. Please consider dropping in and clicking her name? If you do and let me know, I'll send you a weird-o poem for your efforts, assuming you even want such a thing. Yes, I'm blatantly attempting to ply you. But poem or no, Sina deserves the recognition, in my humble estimation, so go there now -- and thanks lots! http://bloggingpoet.squarespace.com/bloggingpoetcom/vote-for-the-2010-poet-laureate-of-the-blogosphere.html Amy

↑ Index

295. amy king
OT: Voting called quits!
Thu 29 Apr 2010

They just called it a tie. The dude who runs it got tired: http://bloggingpoet.squarespace.com/bloggingpoetcom/poet-laureate-of-the-blogosphere-2010-a-tie.html Thanks to all who voted! You rock and your support is appreciated! Off to make up interview questions for the Ron P. man! G'night all, Amy

↑ Index

296. amy king
Thank you, SPD.
Thu 29 Apr 2010

Bypass the corporations:
Slaves to Do These Things is now available through Small Press Distribution!

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781935402312/slaves-to-do-these-things.aspx

Amy

↑ Index

297. Mark Young

Otoliths #17 is now live

Fri 30 Apr 2010

Issue #17 of Otoliths <http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/>, the southern autumn, 2010 issue, has just gone live. Four years old today!

&, since it's also May Day, I was going to have Billy Bragg singing "The Internationale" <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zk69e1Vcmvg> as backgroundâ€”you can, if you've got a server that opens links in a new window, still have it: just click on the linkâ€”but there's enough in this issue to allow an unaccompanied announcement. As befits a 4th birthday issue, it's a bit more packed than normal. In addition to the usual broad selection of paintings, prose, photographs, sermons, assemblages, poetry of all shapes, sizes, & styles, &, as always, a large offering of vizpo, the issue also includes two special features; one of which, since it was to have been a complete issue of another journal which has, unfortunately, gone into hiatus, is actually magazine-sized.

In the standard part of the issue you'll find work by Michael Farrell, Marilyn R. Rosenberg , Eric Arnold, Jim McCrary, Reed Altemus, Adam Fieled, Bob Heman, Tim Wright, Samit Roy, Caleb Puckett, Charles Freeland, gustave morin, dan raphael, Philip Byron Oakes, Dorothee Lang & Karyn Eisler & Susan Gibb, Sam Langer, Geof Huth, Esa MÃ¤kijÃ¤rvi, Scott Metz, Andrew McEwan, Felino Soriano, Travis Macdonald, Paul Siegell, Alan Davies, Kirsten Kaschock, Raymond Farr, John M. Bennett, John M. Bennett & Sheila E. Murphy, Jeff Harrison, Letitia Trent, Michelle Cahill, Valery Oisteanu, Irving Weiss, Martin Edmond, Carlos Soto RomÃ¡n, Jim Meirose, SJ Fowler, Felipe Cussen, Grzegorz WrÃ³blewski, James Mc Laughlin, Michael Steven, Arkava Das, Michael Caylo-Baradi, J. D. Nelson, Jal Nicholl, Jenny Enochsson, Joe Balaz, Glenn R. Frantz, Michael Brandonisio, Jon Curley & Gg Re, sean burn, Bobbi Lurie, Jeff Klooger, Richard Kostelanetz, Silvio De Gracia, David-Baptiste Chirot, Alexander Jorgensen, Anne Gorrick, John Moore Williams, Marcia Arrieta, Mara Patricia Hernandez, Bill Drennan, nick-e melville, Corey Wakeling, John Martone, Jessie Janeshek, Thomas Fink (reviewing David Lehman's Yeshiva Boys), & Emma Smith.

The first special feature is ROCKPILE on the road<http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/2010/02/from-rockpile-on-road-poems-by-michael.html>, with poems by Michael Rothenberg & David Meltzer, photos by Terri CarriÃ³n, & an introduction by Larry Sawyer.

The second special feature is Poet-Editors<http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/2010/04/poet-editors-front-page.html>, curated & introduced by Eileen R. Tabios. 43 poet-editors respond to the question: *"What is (or has been) your favorite editing project and why?" The respondees, who also provideâ€”sometimes quite extensiveâ€”samples of their work, are: *William Allegrezza, Ivy Alvarez, Anny Ballardini, Joi Barrios, John Bloomberg-Rissman, Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡, Garrett Caples, Brian Clements, Bruce Covey, Del Ray Cross, Patrick James Dunagan, Elaine Equi, Adam Fieled, Thomas Fink, Luis H. Francia, Geoffrey Gatza, Tim Gaze, Crg Hill, Aileen Ibardaloza, Vincent Katz, Jukka-Pekka Kervinen, Burt Kimmelman, Mark Lamoureux, Amanda Laughtland, Timothy Liu, Dana Teen Lomax, Joey Madia, Sandy McIntosh, Didi Menendez, Lars Palm, Guillermo Parra, Ernesto Priego, Sam Rasnake, Barbara Jane Reyes, Christopher Rizzo, Patrick Rosal, Sarah Rosenthal, Susan M. Schultz, Logan Ryan Smith, Jill Stengel, Fiona Sze-Lorrain, Jean Vengua, & Mark Young.

& if that isn't enough, the print parts of the previous issue of Otoliths, the southern summer 2010 issue, are now available from The Otoliths Storefront <http://stores.lulu.com/l_m_young>.

↑ Index

298. amy king

TONIGHT - Friday, April 30th @ 7 p.m. Sandy Florian, Lara Glenum, Lesley Jenike, Saeed Jones, Metta Sama & Tom Sleigh!

Fri 30 Apr 2010

Sandy Florian, Lara Glenum, Lesley Jenike, Saeed Jones, Metta Sama & Tom Sleigh!

Friday, April 30 @ 7 p.m.

Goodbye Blue Monday
Edge-of-Williamsburg =
Bushwick, Brooklyn
http://stainofpoetry.com

Sandy Florian is the author of Telescope (Action Books), 32 Pedals & 47 Stops (Tarpaulin Sky), The Tree of No (Action Books), Prelude to Air From Water (Elixir Press), and On Wonderland & Waste (Sidebrow Press). She lives in San Francisco where she is an affiliate artist at Headlands Center for the Arts and works as one of the â€œotherâ€ editors for Tarpaulin Sky Journal. For more information, visit her blog at http://boxingthecompass.blogspot.com

~

Lara Glenum is a poet, scholar, and translator. She is the author of two books of poetry: The Hounds of No (Action Books, 2005) and Maximum Gaga (Action Books, 2009). Her chapbook, The Hotling Chronicles, is due out from Tarpaulin Sky later this year. With Arielle Greenberg, she is the co-editor of Gurlesque, an anthology of contemporary womenâ€™s poetry and visual art (Saturnalia Books, 2010). She has recently been collaborating with sound, visual, and digital media artists on Meat Out of the Eater [hyperlink: http://vimeo.com/7215889], a multimedia installation. She teaches in the MFA program in Creative Writing at LSU.

~

Lesley Jenike is the author of Ghost of Fashion (CustomWords, 2009). She is a native of Cincinnati, OH and received her doctorate from the University of Cincinnati in 2008. Her poems have appeared in POOL, Court Green, Brooklyn Review, Gulf Coast, Souâ€™Wester, Verse, Alaska Quarterly Review, Forklift, Ohio, Washington Square, Crab Orchard Review, and others. Sheâ€™s currently Assistant Professor of English at Columbus College of Art and Design.

~

Saeed Jones is currently completing his MFA in Creative Writing at Rutgers University â€“ Newark. Heâ€™s a graduate of Western Kentucky University where he won the Jim Wayne Miller Award for Poetry. While at Western, he was the poetry editor for Rise Over Run Magazine. His work has appeared or is forthcoming in publications like StorySouth, Barnwood Magazine, Splinter Generation, The Adirondack Review, Mary, and Ganymede. He blogs regularly at saeedjones.wordpress.com

~

Metta Sama says: I am a poet, professor, activist, painter, collage artist, fiction and essay writer. My poetry, currently, looks at instabilities in writings by persons subjected to various forms of oppression. I am interested in the joy of making and creating art and stories and images that will, eventually, disintegrate, return to the source it came from. I question what it means to make thoughts, ideas, & feelings stable, to devote oneself to immortality. My work has appeared in Proud Flesh Journal, The Drunken Boat, Blackbird, Paterson Literary Review, Yellow Medicine Review, Crab Orchard, and other journals, & I am the author of one published collection of poems.

~

Tom Sleighâ€™s most recent book of poetry, Space Walk (Houghton Mifflin, 2007), won the 2008 Kingsley Tufts Award. His book of essays, Interview with a Ghost, was published by Graywolf Press in 2006. He has also published After One, Waking, The Chain, The Dreamhouse, Far Side of the Earth, Bula Matari/Smasher of Rocks, and a translation of Euripidesâ€™ Herakles. He has won the Shelley Prize from the PSA, and grants from the Lila Wallace Fund, American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Guggenheim and NEA. His new book, Army Cats, is forthcoming in spring, 2011, from Graywolf Press. He teaches in the MFA Program at Hunter College.

at

Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013
[redacted]

J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave
or J train to Kosciusko St

~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

http://amyking.org

↑ Index

299. amy king
POET-EDITOR issue up at Otoliths...and Poetry Foundation!
Fri 30 Apr 2010

Issue #17 of Otoliths, the
From OTOLITHS EDITOR
MARK YOUNG:

Issue #17 of Otoliths, the southern autumn, 2010 issue, has just gone live. Four years old today!

&, since it's also May Day, I was going to have Billy Bragg singing "The Internationale" as backgroundâ€”you can, if you've got a server that opens links in a new window, still have it: just click on the linkâ€”but there's enough in this issue to allow an unaccompanied announcement. As befits a 4th birthday issue, it's a bit more packed than normal. In addition to the usual broad selection of paintings, prose, photographs, sermons, assemblages, poetry of all shapes, sizes, & styles, &, as always, a large offering of vizpo, the issue also includes two special features; one of which, since it was to have been a complete issue of another journal which has, unfortunately, gone into hiatus, is actually magazine-sized.

In the standard part of the issue you'll find work by Michael Farrell, Marilyn R. Rosenberg , Eric Arnold, Jim McCrary, Reed Altemus, Adam Fieled, Bob Heman, Tim Wright, Samit Roy, Caleb Puckett, Charles Freeland, gustave morin, dan raphael, Philip Byron Oakes, Dorothee Lang & Karyn Eisler & Susan Gibb, Sam Langer, Geof Huth, Esa MÃ¤kijÃ¤rvi, Scott Metz, Andrew McEwan, Felino Soriano, Travis Macdonald, Paul Siegell, Alan Davies, Kirsten Kaschock, Raymond Farr, John M. Bennett, John M. Bennett & Sheila E. Murphy, Jeff

Harrison, Letitia Trent, Michelle Cahill, Valery Oisteanu, Irving Weiss, Martin Edmond, Carlos Soto RomÃ¡n, Jim Meirose, SJ Fowler, Felipe Cussen, Grzegorz WrÃ³blewski, James Mc Laughlin, Michael Steven, Arkava Das, Michael Caylo-Baradi, J. D. Nelson, Jal Nicholl, Jenny Enochsson, Joe Balaz, Glenn R. Frantz, Michael Brandonisio, Jon Curley & Gg Re, sean burn, Bobbi Lurie, Jeff Klooger, Richard Kostelanetz, Silvio De Gracia, David-Baptiste Chirot, Alexander Jorgensen, Anne Gorrick, John Moore Williams, Marcia Arrieta, Mara Patricia Hernandez, Bill Drennan, nick-e melville, Corey Wakeling, John Martone, Jessie Janeshek, Thomas Fink (reviewing David Lehman's Yeshiva Boys), & Emma Smith.

The first special feature is ROCKPILE on the road, with poems by Michael Rothenberg & David Meltzer, photos by Terri CarriÃ³n, & an introduction by Larry Sawyer.

The second special feature is Poet-Editors, curated & introduced by Eileen R. Tabios. 43 poet-editors respond to the question: "What is (or has been) your favorite editing project and why?" The respondees, who also provideâ€”sometimes quite extensiveâ€”samples of their work, are: William Allegrezza, Ivy Alvarez, Anny Ballardini, Joi Barrios, John Bloomberg-Rissman, Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡, Garrett Caples, Brian Clements, Bruce Covey, Del Ray Cross, Patrick James Dunagan, Elaine Equi, Adam Fieled, Thomas Fink, Luis H. Francia, Geoffrey Gatza, Tim Gaze, Crg Hill, Aileen Ibardaloza, Vincent Katz, Jukka-Pekka Kervinen, Burt Kimmelman, Mark Lamoureux, Amanda Laughtland, Timothy Liu, Dana Teen Lomax, Joey Madia, Sandy McIntosh, Didi Menendez, Lars Palm, Guillermo Parra, Ernesto Priego, Sam Rasnake, Barbara Jane Reyes, Christopher Rizzo, Patrick Rosal, Sarah Rosenthal, Susan M. Schultz, Logan Ryan Smith, Jill Stengel, Fiona Sze-Lorrain, Jean Vengua, & Mark Young.

& if that isn't enough, the print parts of the previous issue of Otoliths, the southern summer 2010 issue, are now available from The Otoliths Storefront.

http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/2010/04/poeteditorsi-contents.html

↑ Index

300. Rob McLennan
globe & mail books blog; poetry month,
Fri 30 Apr 2010

All April, thanks to Judith Fitzgerald and Peter Scowen, Ive been curating twenty spaces on the Globe & Mail book blog, asked for poets to write on other poets. The suggestion on the Globe site is deceptive: I didnt pick any of the subjects (but for mine, obviously), but asked twenty writers of poetry to write on whomever they chose. Over the weeks, some were forced to drop out for various reasons, unable to complete the task, and even further were asked (originally I wasnt planning on writing any at all, but somehow managed to write two, which wasnt my intention). It was pretty entertaining, the idea of including all sorts of writers who might otherwise not be allowed a Globe & Mail anything (where have all the poetry reviews gone? Why doesnt the Focus section write on poets more often? Etc) Thanks to all the writers who contributed magnificent pieces (there were days when twenty weren't nearly enough)! Heres the entire list of pieces back;

rob mclennan on Robert Kroetsch;
Lainna Lane El Jabi on Christine Stewart;
Natalie Zina Walschots on Jenny Sampirisi;
Wanda OConnor on Artie Gold;
Clint Burnham on Jeff Derksen;
Joe Blades on Phoebe Tsang;
Angela Carr on Kate Eichhorn;
Stan Rogal on Gregory Betts;
Sharon Harris on Jennifer LoveGrove;
derek beaulieu on Helen Hajnoczky;
Jesse Patrick Ferguson on Peter Norman;
Nicole Markotic on Nikki Reimer;
Rob Budde on Ken Belford;
Sachiko Murakami on a.rawlings;
Phil Hall on Laurie Duggan;
Monica Kidd on Stan Dragland;
Marcus McCann on Nicholas Lea;
Stephen Collis on Kim Minkus;
Kim Minkus on Stephen Collis;
rob mclennan on Pearl Pirie;
Judith Fitzgerald on rob mclennan (opener);

& links to individual pieces here;
http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/04/rob-curates-globe-mail-book-blog-final.html

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

301. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ

MON & TUES: Chapbook Festival! Marathon Reading Details!

Fri 30 Apr 2010

Please don't forget to join us for the Annual Chapbook Festival on Monday & Tuesday next week! The spectacular marathon reading schedule is below. The bookfair is open from 11:30-7:30 on Monday and Tuesday. At the Graduate Center, CUNY, 365 Fifth Avenue, corner of 34th Street in Manhattan. Directions & details at http://www.chapbookfestival.org

Marathon Reading Schedule
MONDAY, MAY 3

2-3 PM
River Poets Journal/Lilly Press: Phoebe Wilcox
Poinciana Paper Press: Angelique V. Nixon
2nd Ave Poetry: Jill Magi
Bateau Press: James Grinwis
Belladonna*: E. Tracy Grinnell

3-4 PM
BOOK Works: Estha Weiner
H_NGM_N: Ben Mirov
Cervena Barva Press: Susan Lewis
CUNY Lost & Found: Josh Schneiderman&Claudia Pisano

4-5 PM
Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs: Brenda Iijima
Creature Press: John Harkey
Cy Gist Press: Veronica Wong
DoubleCross Press: Sarah Green
Dusie Kollektiv: Mark Lamoureux&Amanda Deutch

5-6 PM
Etched Press: Kevin Dublin
Finishing Line Press: Ruth Handel&Melora Walters
Forklift, Ohio: Amy King
Octopus Books: Emily Pettit
Brave Men Press

6-7 PM
Ugly Duckling Presse: Dorothea Lasky
Greying Ghost Press
Kissena Park Press: Lana Hechtman Ayers
Little Scratch Pad: Douglas Manson
Love Among the Ruins: Laura Jaramillo

TUESDAY, MAY 4

2-3 PM
Flying Guillotine Press: Steven Karl&Angela Veronica Wong
Magic Helicopter Books: Carolyn Zaikowski
Noemi Press
Pen Press: Marcos Wasem&Mercedes Roffé
Center for Book Arts: Sharon Dolin

3-4 PM
Plan B Press
Pleasure Boat Studio: A Literary Press: Zeadryn Meade
Rain Taxi
Corollary Press: Jason Schwartz
Big Hands Magazine

4-5 PM
Slapering Hol Press: Susana H. Case
Small Anchor Press: Joseph Mcelroy
Sona Books: Paolo Javier
Spire Press: Shelly Reed&Matthew Hittinger
The Corresponding Society: David Swesen

5-6 PM
Poets Wear Prada: Austin Alexis&Michael Montlack
The Physiocrats: Daniel Nohejl
BookThug: Cara Benson
sunnyoutside: MRB Chelko
Tarpaulin Sky Press

6-7 PM
Booklyn: Charmaine Wheatley
Instance Press: Kim Lyons
Toadlily Press: George Kraus
Upset Press: Denise Galang&Amy Lemmon-Bowen
X-ing Press/Agriculture Reader

↑ Index

302. Kimmelman, Burt
William Bronk - Charles Olson Correspondence (etc.) in Otoliths 17
Fri 30 Apr 2010

Hi Everyone,

I'm writing to announce that the William Bronk - Charles Olson correspondence has been republished-among a huge amount of sumptuous literary material in the new issue of Otoliths (number 17, just out, here: http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/. (This correspondence can still be obtained from Ralph Maud who edits the Minutes of the Charles Olson Society, and the hard copy issue of the Minutes contains reproductions of some of the letters written by hand.)

In case you are interested in Bronk's work, let me mention that, also in this issue of Otoliths, there is a reproduced essay of mine on the William Bronk - Robert Meyer correspondence (which originally appeared in The Body of This Life: Reading William Bronk, ed. David Clippinger; Talisman House, Publiishers, 2001). As well, there is in the issue an intro essay on what it was like to edit Bronk's letters, those that I did (which is appearing for the first time).

You might wish to go directly here, to the special section on Poet-Editors, curated by Eileen Tabios, who asked forty-three such poets "What is (or has been) your favorite editing project and why?":

http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/2010/04/poet-editors-front-page.html

Here's the list of other contributors to Eileen's section (lifted as is from the website):

William Allegrezza Ivy Alvarez Anny Ballardini Joi Barrios John Bloomberg-Rissman Ana Bo¾ièeviæ Garrett Caples Brian Clements Bruce Covey Del Ray Cross Patrick James Dunagan Elaine Equi Adam Fieled Thomas Fink Luis H. Francia Geoffrey Gatza Tim Gaze Crg Hill Aileen Ibardaloza Vincent Katz Jukka-Pekka Kervinen Mark Lamoureux Amanda Laughtland Timothy Liu Dana Teen Lomax Joey Madia Sandy McIntosh Didi Menendez Lars Palm Guillermo Parra Ernesto Priego Sam Rasnake Barbara Jane Reyes Christopher Rizzo Patrick Rosal Sarah Rosenthal Susan M. Schultz Logan Ryan Smith Jill Stengel Fiona Sze-Lorrain Jean Vengua Mark Young

My special thanks to Eileen, and to Mark Young, for dreaming up this project and being willing to see it through.

Best wishes,

Burt

↑ Index

303. Jennifer Karmin

May 7-8: Cain, Karmin & Shaw in Providence/Cambridge

Fri 30 Apr 2010

Readings by:
Amina Cain

Jennifer Karmin
Anne Shaw

FRIDAY, MAY 7th @ 6 PM
Symposium Books
240 Westminster Street
Providence, RI
http://www.symposiumbooks.com

SATURDAY, MAY 8th @ 3 PM
Small Animal Project
Outpost 186
186 1/2 Hampshire Street
Cambridge, MA
http://smallanimalproject.com

AMINA CAIN is the author of the short story collection I Go To Some Hollow (Les Figues Press), and an upcoming chapbook, Tramps Everywhere (Blanc Press/PARROT Series). She is also a current Visiting Lecturer at the University of California, San Diego. Her work has appeared in publications such as 3rd bed, Action Yes, Denver Quarterly, La Petite Zine, onedit, and Sidebrow; is forthcoming in the Encyclopedia Project, MoonLit, and Sous Rature; and has been translated into Polish on MINIMALBOOKS.

JENNIFER KARMIN's text-sound epic, Aaaaaaaaaaalice, was published by Flim Forum Press in 2010. She curates the Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, community centers, and on city streets across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. A proud member of the Dusie Kollektiv, she is the author of the Dusie chapbook Evacuated: Disembodying Katrina. Walking Poem, a collaborative street project, is featured online at How2. At home in Chicago, Jennifer teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the public schools.

ANNE SHAW is the author of Undertow (Persea Books), winner of the Lexi Rudnitsky Poetry Prize. Her work has appeared or is forthcoming in Black Warrior Review, Beloit Poetry Journal, Drunken Boat, Green Mountains Review, and New American Writing. She has also been featured in Poetry Daily and From the Fishouse. Her extended poetry project can be found on Twitter at twitter.com/anneshaw.

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

May 2010

175 messages · Fri 30 Apr 2010 – Sat 29 May 2010

May 2010 was the quietest file in the entire run — one hundred and seventy-five messages, not one thread rising above a handful of replies — and its silence is the honest subject of this volume. The great arguing engine of the list had wound down to a hum. What moved through the room that month was not debate but housekeeping: syllabi, calls for interns, event notices, the small administrative traffic of a community keeping its lights on. It is a month that shows, more starkly than any obituary, what the long decline had finally come to.

The largest business was the teaching of poetry to the next room. A member building a Modern American Poetry course asked the list to help him choose — "Do you want to focus on contemporary writers", someone answered, or to reach back and include the less-canonized modernists, the Beats, the Language poets, the San Francisco Renaissance — the syllabus as the place where a tradition decides what to hand forward. In a month with almost no live argument, the one real question was curatorial: which of the dead and the difficult a new class would be made to meet.

There was, properly speaking, no quarrel, and the absence is the point. Where a month in 2002 or 2005 would have carried a hundred-message flame war, May 2010 carried notices — a press asking about audiobooks, a festival seeking an intern, an announcement of little orange pencils, a video updated on a website. The room had become less a forum than a bulletin board, a place where poets posted at each other rather than argued with each other, the conversation thinned nearly to pure logistics.

And yet the logistics were themselves a kind of faith. Every one of those small notices was somebody still choosing to send it here, to this particular dwindling room, rather than to a blog or a feed or nowhere at all — the syllabus posted for help, the reading announced to an audience the poster still believed was listening. The traffic was thin, but it was traffic; the light was low, but it was on. A noticeboard, after all, is still a place people agree to gather around, and the poets kept gathering, out of loyalty or habit or the simple refusal to be the one who finally turned it off.

I have set May down exactly as the archive delivered it — the syllabus seeking its shape, the calls and the notices, the near-total absence of argument — because it was the quietest month the list had ever produced, and quiet, too, is part of the record. A room that has fallen from a thousand messages to fewer than two hundred, and fills that hush not with quarrels but with the patient business of teaching, announcing, and keeping the small presses alive, is a room in its late age, no longer the center of anything, still faithfully doing the chores of a community that will not quite let itself disband.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 175 in all.

WRITERS

De 1913, Sandra 44, 91
Alexander, Charles 89
Allegrezza, William 5, 107
Aslongasittakes 167
Ballardini, Anny 147, 155
Beaulieu, Derek 85
Benson, Cara 49, 58, 59
Bernstein, Charles 95, 175
Books, Crane's Bill 113
Bowering, George 32
Bo¾ièeviæ, Ana 6
Calabrese, Rosalie 78, 81
Casamassima, Christophe 68
Chapman, Chris 75
Charles 137
Cheek, Cris 13
Chirot, David 116, 143
Chirot, David-Baptiste 105
Conrad, CA 129, 164
Crumpacker, Caroline 94
Dalachinsky, Steve 45, 108, 131, 168
Daly, Catherine 18, 33, 142
Dariens, The 98
Dorward, Nate 135
Earl, Amanda 149
Editors, The 88
Eichhorn, Kate 111
EJOYCE 72
Ellis, Stephen 4, 115
Etter, Carrie 56
Fieled, Adam 10, 48, 132
Al Filreis 150
Frazer, Vernon 3, 57, 109, 126
Friedman, Ed 92
Ganick, Peter 140, 141
Garr, Megan M 93
Godston, Daniel 52, 53, 70, 173
Gricevich, Andy 83
Heman, Bob 124
Higdon, Hailey 62
Howard, Scott 145
Janssen, Lisa 8
Javier, Paolo 76
Johnson, Halvard 134
Jones, Chris 24, 61
Karavatos, Nicholas 152, 153
Karmin, Jennifer 35, 69, 97, 161
Katko, Justin 99
Kimmelman, Burt 28
King, Amy 11, 12, 20, 29, 65, 71, 73, 120, 128, 130, 148, 157, 165, 166
Kirschenbaum, David 41, 64, 79, 86, 121, 136, 158
Ladkin, Sam 9
Landis, Matthew 30
Lepson, Ruth 31, 77, 114
Martin, Camille 7
Maxpaul 123
McLennan, Rob 15, 40, 171, 172
Meersman, Philip 14, 63
Melnicove, Mark 102
Michael 1, 51, 100
Mindock, Gloria 96
Mosconi, Joseph 138
Nelson, Jason 55
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 154
Nguyen, Hoa 43
Palagi, Naomi Buck 25, 106
Peterson, Tim 21, 22, 112
Pinto, Regina 42
Poe, Deborah 38, 169
Prejsnar, Mark 110
Project, Poetry 46, 82, 133, 174
Putnam, CE 27
Rosenthal, Sarah 36, 60
Ruby, Michael 74, 162
Samuels, Lisa 101
Schultz, Susan Webster 119
Sebastian, Nic 80, 117, 160
Seldess, Jesse 26
Side, Jeffrey 2, 19, 139
Siegell, Paul 16, 37, 67, 151
Slaughter, William 39
Smith, Hazel 118
Snyder, Jason 159
Sondheim, Alan 23, 34, 66, 87, 103, 144, 146, 156, 163
Spencer, George 104
Stecopoulos, Eleni 54
Sweeney, Chad 127
St. Thomasino 17
Tobin, Adam 122
Valley, Country 50
Wilcox, Dan 47, 90
Young, Mark 125
}, { Brad Brace 84, 170

NAMES MENTIONED

Abbott, Keith 175
Abbott, Steve 36, 60
Ackerman, Amanda 138
Alice, Mary 75
Alpert, Barry 147, 155

Americans, Asian 148
Amling, Eric 6
Anderson, Erik 28, 123
Andre, Michael 28
Andrews, Jim 61, 75
Arbor, Ann 46, 76
Arigo, Christopher 125
Armand, Louis 44
Armantrout, Rae 123
Armstrong, Steve 52
Arnold, Matthew 110
Atlanta, Mark P. 110, 167
Austin, Geer 6, 86, 136, 169
Babiak, Wendy 65, 100
Backonja, Petra 28
Ballard, Micah 28
Baraka, Amiri 82, 131
Barker, Andrew 108
Barnard, Mary 175
Baron, Todd 96
Bartlett, Jennifer 166
Bartlett, Lee 166
Baudelaire, Charles 28, 143, 154
Beckett, Tom 9, 28, 51, 125
Beckman, Joshua 28, 121
Bedient, Calvin 123
Beer, John 119
Behrle, Jim 64, 77, 79, 86, 136
Benka, Jen 30
Bennett, Bill 17, 104, 134
Bennett, John M. 17, 104, 134, 162
Berger, Jonathan 86, 136
Berkeley, Michael 51, 54, 127, 175
Berkson, Bill 100
Bernstein, Emma 119
Berrigan, Anselm 82, 136
Berrigan, Eddie 121
Berrigan, Ted 175
Berry, Jake 2, 28
Bishop, Elizabeth 165, 168
Black, Sheila 166
Blake, William 12
Blaser, Robin 89
Bloch, Julia 30
Boat, Drunken 120, 128
Bogle, Ann 100
Bonney, Sean 99
Boone, Bruce 36, 60
Borkhuis, Charles 21, 28, 112
Boully, Jenny 88
Bouvier, Geoff 123
Boyer, Anne 26
Boykoff, Jules 44
Bozicevic, Ana 73
BpNichol 63
Bradley, John 100
Bradley, Tom 100
Brandi, John 100
Briante, Susan 46
Brinks, Dave 100
Bromige, David 100
Brown, Kurt 96
Brown, Lily 127
Brown, Pam 127
Browne, Colin 89, 127
Bryant, Dana 27
Buchanan, Pat 127
Burns, Robert 47
Buzzeo, Melissa 120, 128
Caesar, Little 46
Cafe, Poets 136
Cannon, Steve 158
Caples, Garrett 28
Card, Macgregor 86, 133, 136
Carey, Peter 17, 104, 134
Carlos, William 30, 67, 93, 95, 158
Carr, Julie 147, 155
Carragon, Patricia 108
Carrion, Terri 1, 100
Carroll, Lewis 42
Carter, Angela 87, 103, 122
Casey, Sean 28
Castro, Michael 100
Catanzano, Amy 123
Catullus 135
Cebula, Travis 123
Chace, Joel 44
Chang, Iris 170
Chapin, Thomas 100
Chernoff, Maxine 127
Christi, Ellen 108
Ciccariello, Peter 138
Cigale, Alex 147, 155
Clark, Emilie 52, 108
Clarke, Robin 28
Clifford, Pat 100
Clinton, Bill 76
Cobbing, Bob 143, 154
Cohen, Julia 44
Colby, Todd 120, 128
Coleman, Jen 49
Coletti, John 100
Collins, Martha 16
Columbus, Christopher 52, 175
Comiskey, Daniel 27
Conners, Peter 100
Connor, Bruce 88
Conrad, Tony 22, 129, 164
Coolidge, Clark 100
Copp, Corina 26
Cotner, Jon 44
County, Madison 100
Covey, Bruce 44
Crane, Lee 22

Crawford, Robert 44, 76
Creeley, Robert 89, 95, 131
Crosby, Harry 136
Crouch, Jeff 100
Cully, Barbara 26, 89
Cunningham, John 28, 88
Curley, Jon 28
Curtis, Dana 2
Cycholl, Garin 5, 28
Cyphers, Jeffrey 124
Césaire, Aimé 123
Dalachinsky, Steven 124
Damon, Maria 125
Darwin, Charles 131
Davidson, Ian 7
Davis, Jordan 44
Davis, Martin 88, 100
Deed, Martha 42
Deleuze, Gilles 72
Deming, Alison 127
Dennis, Carl 127
Deutch, Amanda 6
Dickinson, Emily 150
Dickinson, Mark 150
Dickow, Alexander 147, 155
Dillon, Matt 127
Dobran, Ryan 99
Dolin, Sharon 6
Doller, Sandra 44, 91
Donnelly, Timothy 121
Donovan, Thom 28, 30
Dorn, Edward 131
Doty, Mark 6
Drucker, Johanna 138
Dunagan, James 28
Dungy, Camille 127
Durand, Marcella 38, 150
Durbin, Kate 49
Durgin, Patrick 161
Dutton, Paul 88
Eckes, Ryan 30
Edmond, Martin 101
Elena, Maria 100
Eli, Noah 88, 123
Ellen, Mary 52
Elrick, Laura 158
Elshtain, Eric 53
Emerson, Claudia 143, 154
England, Amy 7, 99
Enslin, Ted 126, 131, 143, 154
Evans, Bill 44
Featherston, Dan 89
Ferrini, Henry 28
Fink, Thomas 28, 147, 155
Fischer, Norman 86, 175
Fisher, Ann 175
Fishman, Lisa 127
Fitch, Andy 44
Fitterman, Robert 133
Flis, Brad 44
Foley, Brian 6
Foley, Jack 100
France, Peter 7, 136, 143, 154
Frances, Mary 26, 89, 99, 137
Fraser, Ian 89, 137
Fraser, Kathleen 36, 60
Fraser, Simon 89
Freedman, Lewis 83
Freedman, Robert 23, 34, 103, 122
Freeman, Micah 136
Friedman, David M. 92
Frost, Corey 89, 137
Frost, Robert 96
Fuhrman, Joanna 136, 158
Fulton, Alice 100
Gardner, Janet 108, 123
Garland, Judy 100
Gek, Kim 30, 88
Genet, Jean 100
Giles, Samantha 30
Gilmore, Gary 41, 64, 77, 79, 86, 99, 121, 136, 158
Ginsberg, Allen 131
Glancy, Diane 123
Glomski, Chris 69
Glück, Robert 36, 60
Godard, Barbara 111
Godfrey, John 158
Golaski, Adam 35
Goldman, Emma 152
Goldman, Judith 74, 175
Goldstein, Laura 69, 97, 161
Goldstein, Mark 88
Gordon, Robert 88, 100, 123
Gottlieb, Michael 112
Graham, Lea 138, 147, 155
Graubard, Allan 100
Gray, Stephanie 76
Greenberg, Arielle 28, 44, 91, 121
Greene, Graham 147, 155
Greenstreet, Kate 28
Greenwald, Ted 26
Gregg, Linda 6
Grenier, Bob 100, 108
Grenier, Robert 138, 175
Griffin, Tim 121
Grinnell, Tracy 6, 21, 28, 112, 158
Grinwis, James 6
Group, Poets 110, 167
Guattari, Félix 72
Guest, Barbara 36, 60
Guinzio, Carolyn 123
Hamill, Sam 147, 155
Hanratty, Sean T. 136

Hansen, Jefferson 100, 129
Hardy, Edmund 127
Harkey, John 6
Hasegawa, Kreg 27
Hastings, Katherine 100
Hawkey, Christian 26
Hawkins, Jeremy 100
Hawthorne, Alison 127
Hejinian, Lyn 89, 97, 174
Henning, Barbara 44, 89, 92, 100
Herbert, John 28
Herman, Rachel 28
Heron, Patrick 152
Hershon, Robert 86, 136
Hibbard, Tom 28, 100
Hicok, Bob 127
Higginbotham, Keith 17, 104, 134
Hill, Crag 28, 125
Hill, Lindsay 123
Hill, Matt 2
Hillman, Brenda 36, 60
Hofer, Jen 97, 161
Hoffman, Cara 28
Hoffman, Eric 100
Hogue, Cynthia 127
Holmquest, Brandon 30, 158
House, Poets 174, 175
Howe, Susan 72
Howe, William R. 138
Hughes, Andrew 133
Hunter, Carrie 28
Hunter, Robert 133
Iijima, Brenda 6, 21, 88, 112
Indiana, Robert 69
Inguito, Scott 120, 128
Ireland, Lauren 7, 9, 30
Israel, David 108, 164
Jackson, Jesse 136
Jacob, Max 34
Jacobs, Ken 158
Jaffe, Larry 100
Jaramillo, Laura 6, 30
Jarnot, Lisa 76
Jarvis, Simon 99
Johns, Jasper 121
Johnson, Robert 108, 134, 158
Jones, Bonnie 13
Jones, Brian 136
Jordan, June 123
Joris, Pierre 123, 158
Joseph, Safdie 6, 26, 28, 97
Joyce, Trevor 9, 72, 96
Kalamaras, George 127
Karl, Steven 6
Kathryn, Mary 53, 173
Katz, Alex 46
Kaufman, Erica 86, 136, 158
Keene, John 69
Kelley, Mike 117
Kelly, Patrick 44, 133, 150, 158
Kelsey, Karla 44, 54
Keppler, Joseph F. 17, 104, 134
Kiely, Aaron 162
Kilbride, Laura 99
Kimball, Jack 22
Kimball, Roger 22, 100
Kingsbury, Anne 92
Kirschenbaum, David A. 41, 64, 77, 79, 86, 121, 136, 158
Klein, Lucas 46, 174
Koch, Kenneth 131
Kostelanetz, Richard 28
Kraus, Karl 6
Krick, Jack 100
Kuniya, Mark 50
Lally, Michael 46
Lamantia, Philip 28
Lamoureux, Mark 6
Largo, Michael 100
Larkin, Maryrose 89, 137
Lavender, Bill 100
Leggott, Michele 101
Levato, Francesco 100
Levertov, Denise 96
Levin, Jonathan 128
Levin, Lauren 120
Levy, Andrew 21, 112
Lewis, Bernard 88, 123, 127
Lewis, Joel 100
Lewis, Susan 6, 86, 136
Lilly, Ruth 6
Lindley, Eric 26
Liu, Sandra 44
Lloyd, Warren 28
Loewinsohn, Ron 100
Logan, William 28
London, Frank 7, 44, 52, 72
London, Rick 175
Lopez, Tony 123
Louise, Bobbie 49, 100
Mac Low, Jackson 89, 112
Lowenthal, Jessica 150
Lurie, Bobbi 28
Luther, Martin 110
Lynn, Heidi 157, 165, 168
Lyons, Kimberly 6, 123
Macdonald, Helen 56
Macdonald, Travis 17, 104, 134
Machlin, Daniel 82
Mackey, Nathaniel 36, 60
Madia, Joey 28
Madison, James 83, 100
Madrid, Anthony 26
Magallon, Diana 100

Magi, Jill 6
Malcolm, Janet 147, 155
Mallarmé, Stéphane 143, 154
Mancus, Tony 16
Mandelstam, Osip 123
Mangold, Sarah 89, 137
Mansel, Chris 2
Manson, Douglas 6
Marie, Anne 28
Marie, Jeanne 96
Marie, Joshua 88, 159
Marmer, Jake 108
Martinez, Michael 100, 127
Martone, John 100
Mason, Janet 27, 86
Mauro, Nicole 28
Maxwell, Andrew 73
Maxwell, Susan 44
Mayer, Jane 89
Mead, Corey 26
Meier, Richard 44
Meltzer, David 1, 51, 100, 152, 153
Memmott, Talan 163
Meng, Catherine 120, 128
Meredith, William 28
Mesmer, Sharon 82
Metcalf, Paul 89
Metres, Philip 44, 100
Miller, Paul D. 44, 91
Milton, John 133
Mirov, Ben 6
Mobilio, Albert 44
Moore, Allison 161
Moriarty, Laura 13, 26, 175
Morris, Dee 28, 89
Morrison, Bill 102
Morrison, Rusty 123
Moya, Erika 28, 148
Mullen, Harryette 89, 95
Mullen, Laura 93
Mulrooney, John 64, 77, 79
Murray, Beth 54
Murray, Ian 52, 54, 78, 100
Mycue, Edward 147, 155
Myles, Eileen 88, 89
Nakagawa, Jane 123
Nakayasu, Sawako 28
Nathanson, Tenney 89
Nichols, Travis 44, 158
Nicole, Anna 174
Nicosia, Gerald 100
Nixon, Richard 6
Norman, Peter 52, 175
Notley, Alice 89, 175
Novack, Carol 100
Nowak, Mark 82
Nutter, Geoffrey 121
O'Hara, Frank 161
Obadike, Keith 44, 91
Olson, Charles 89, 100
Oppen, George 100
Orange, Tom 44
Orser, Kristen 28
Osman, Jena 26
Otting, Nathaniel 26
Pacific, Asian 49
Pacosz, Christina 147, 155
Palmer, Michael 36, 60
Parker, Frank 89
Parrish, Katherine 100
Paterson, Don 7, 51
Penberthy, Jenny 40
Perloff, Marjorie 95
Pettet, Simon 100
Pettit, Emily 6
Peyrafitte, Nicole 124, 158
Phipps, Wanda 100
Pinsky, Robert 130
Place, Vanessa 85, 133
Porter, Anne 102
Portugal, Anne 76
Pound, Ezra 126, 131, 143, 154
Powell, Ren 160
Di Prima, Diane 100
Prince, Richard 83, 136
Professor, Kelly 150
Quinn, Alice 6
Rankine, Claudia 36, 60
Ratcliffe, Stephen 36, 60
Raworth, Tom 89, 95, 175
Reeves, Jennifer 76
Regan, Matthias 123
Rerick, Michael 73
Revell, Donald 28, 123
Reyes, Louis 28
Reynolds, Rebecca 120, 128
Rhodes, Martha 88
Rifkin, Libbie 19
Rimbaud, Arthur 28
Rimbaud, Dee 143, 154
Robbins, Bruce 100
Roberts, Gary 100
Robinson, Elizabeth 36, 60, 123
Robinson, Kit 26, 89
Roche, Judith 100
Rohrer, Matthew 121
Rosenthal, Chuck 36, 60, 100
Ross, Harry 52
Rothenberg, Michael 1, 51, 100
Rothschild, Douglas 158
Roy, Camille 36, 60
Ruiz, Mariana 158
Rumaker, Michael 100
Russell, Lauren 136

Russo, Linda 123
Sanchez, Jorge 28
Sanders, Edward 28
Sanders, James 167
Sanders, Jay 100
Sappho 51
Sarai, Sarah 127
Sawyer, Larry 1
Scalapino, Leslie 36, 60, 89, 174, 175
Scappettone, Jennifer 97, 150
Schelling, Andrew 50
Schiavo, Michael 44
Schmidt, Paul 28
Schneiderman, Jason 6, 131
Schoen, Jesse 136
Schultz, Lou 119
Schultz, Susan M. 119
Schuyler, James 22
Schwartz, Jerry 6
Seaman, David W. 28
Sebastianhttp, Nic 117
Segal, Martin E. 6
Selby, Spencer 100
Shakespeare, William 136
Shapiro, David 158
Sherlock, Frank 22, 30
Shimoda, Brandon 93
Shmailo, Larissa 100
Sikelianos, Eleni 28
Silberg, Richard 123
Silliman, Ron 89
Silver, Stephanie 174
Simone, Frank 174
Sims, Laura 30, 127
Sky, Tarpaulin 6, 73, 88, 90, 159
Smith, Dale 100
Smith, Harry 28, 35, 52, 100, 136, 175
Smith, Jessica 138
Spahr, Juliana 36, 60
Sparrow, John 46
Spicer, Jack 129
Spicer, John 89, 137
Spitzer, Jim 100
Stackhouse, Christopher 69
Stanley, Jared 28, 120, 128
Stanton, Rob 136
Stefans, Kim 44
Stein, Gertrude 112
Steinbeck, John 2
Steinberg, Nicole 120
Stempleman, Jordan 123, 127
Stephenson, Ann 174
Stewart, Jon 100
Strauss, Adam 44
Studies, Asian 175
Stumpf, Jason 44
Sullivan, Andrew 17, 104, 134
Sullivan, Gary 158
Svalina, Mathias 28, 44
Swensen, Cole 91
Swift, Todd 172
Szymaszek, Stacy 22
Tabios, Eileen 28
Tanta, Gene 53, 173
Taransky, Michelle 133
Tate, James 51
Taylor, Justin 6
Taylor, Tom 21, 44, 88, 112
Templeton, Fiona 174, 175
Texas, Irving 46
Thomas, Dylan 78, 127, 136
Thompson, George 76
Thorson, Maureen 158
Tietz, Ward 44, 91
Timmons, Mathew 138
Timmons, Matt 112, 138
Torra, Joe 158
Toscano, Rodrigo 30, 44
Towle, Tony 22
Townsend, Cheryl 30
Tritica, John 123
Tsvetaeva, Marina 44
Tufts, Kate 121
Unger, Brian 131
Valery, Paul 124
Varrone, Kevin 30, 158
Vassilakis, Nico 125
Veglahn, Sara 44
Vendler, Helen 121
Vengua, Jean 28
Verlaine, Paul 143, 154
Vermont, Charlie 159
Veronica, Angela 6, 100
Victoria, Nancy 100
Vincent, Gregory 17, 104, 134
Vincent, Stephen 28, 46, 100
Virgil 74
Vitale, Anna 46
Wagner, Catherine 28, 44, 143, 154
Wald, Diane 44, 91
Waldman, Anne 36, 60
Waldrop, Rosemary 28
Wallace, Mark 89, 100
Wallace, Nicole 53, 173
Wallenstein, Barry 108
Warren, Kenneth 78
Warsh, Lewis 100, 108, 124
Washington, George 46, 47, 49, 82, 130, 136
Wasserman, Ann 174
Waters, Charles 108
Watson, Craig 123
Watten, Barrett 13
Weaver, Andy 171
Weaver, Rebecca 52

Weber, Bruce 124
Weber, Damian 124
Webster, Noah 136
Weiner, Lawrence 6, 127
Weiser, Karen 136
Welish, Marjorie 133
Whalen, Philip 131, 175
White, Jared 73, 158
White, Tom 175
Whitman, Walt 28, 47, 136
Wilkinson, John 88, 159
Williams, Tyrone 30
Williams, William Carlos 112
Williamson, Dustin 158
Wilson, Judith E. 9, 99
Wilson, Karen 28, 99, 123
Wolach, David 30, 49
Wright, C. D. 124, 157
Wright, Jeff 108
Yankelevich, Matvei 133
Yau, John 44
Yeary, James 28
Young, Karl 100
Zinovich, Jordan 100
Zolf, Rachel 82, 120, 128
Zucker, Adam 121
Zucker, Rachel 44, 91, 121
Zurawski, Magdalena 30
Zuzga, Jason 30

CONCEPTS

9/11 130
Activism and protest 161, 165, 168
Aesthetics 24, 89, 97, 136, 166
Anthologies 28, 30, 44, 46, 56, 67, 69, 73, 76, 78, 91, 96, 100, 112, 120, 121, 128, 130, 136, 152, 153, 159, 161, 166, 169, 172, 175
Archives and libraries 7, 36, 39, 60, 69, 82, 96, 152, 170, 171
Autobiography 36, 39, 60, 100, 174
Avant-garde 19, 95, 112, 113
Beauty 89, 100, 121, 137, 166
Biography 53, 54, 166, 173
Black Mountain 70
Blogs 1, 4, 7, 13, 14, 15, 16, 22, 24, 25, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 37, 40, 46, 49, 56, 62, 63, 67, 69, 70, 73, 76, 80, 82, 88, 98, 99, 100, 102, 108, 110, 117, 119, 129, 133, 134, 140, 141, 145, 147, 148, 150, 151, 155, 159, 160, 163, 164, 171, 172
Book announcements 7, 19, 26, 28, 44, 45, 51, 54, 62, 72, 73, 74, 78, 89, 91, 93, 96, 101, 120, 128, 133, 135, 137, 142, 159, 162, 170
Bookstores 21, 49, 112, 131
Calls for submissions 145
Cities 22, 53, 73, 74, 86, 122, 129, 136, 161, 162, 173
Class 113
Collage and montage 108, 124, 147, 155
Conceptual writing 17, 82, 104, 120, 128, 134
Conferences and festivals 14, 36, 41, 46, 54, 60, 63, 64, 77, 79, 87, 94, 108, 131, 158, 159
Copyright and permissions 66
Creative writing pedagogy 22
Difficulty 2, 113
Digital archives 14, 18, 97, 112
Disability 166
Dreams 9, 54, 96, 143, 154
Ecology and ecopoetics 38, 52, 54, 97, 100, 125, 130, 157
Editing 23, 73, 101, 111, 136
Ekphrasis 53, 173
Electronic poetry and hypertext 16, 55, 75, 85, 121, 175
Epic 35, 100
Erasure 27, 66, 78
Ethics 53, 173
Experimental poetry 27, 36, 60, 113
Feminism 89, 137
Film 2, 46, 76, 102, 118, 136, 159, 164
Flarf 85
Formalism 166
Free speech 51
Gender 28, 36, 60, 100
Globalization 170
Grants and funding 6, 38, 54, 63, 76, 89, 121, 137
Haiku 17, 22, 67, 100, 104, 134
Homophonic translation 74
Humour and satire 86, 89, 152
Identity politics 100
Improvisation 57, 69, 103, 109, 116, 122, 126, 131, 143, 154
Indigenous and Native poetics 28
Interviews 16, 28, 36, 39, 60, 75, 95, 100, 113, 129, 161
Israel and Palestine 108, 164
Language poetry 22, 30, 36, 60
Letters and correspondence 131
List moderation 53, 65, 173
Little magazines 2, 6, 26, 28, 35, 38, 39, 44, 46, 49, 53, 56, 58, 59, 69, 74, 75, 76, 78, 83, 88, 91, 93, 95, 96, 97, 100, 111, 120, 128, 129, 131, 133, 143, 145, 150, 154, 162, 169, 173, 174
Lyric poetry 120, 128, 135, 143, 154, 159
Marxism 113
Memory 2, 100, 112, 147, 155, 175
MFA programs 7, 82, 97, 120, 128, 175
Modernism 9, 30, 97
Mourning and loss 28, 72, 136
Music and poetry 7, 23, 26, 28, 41, 46, 47, 51, 52, 54, 64, 67, 69, 77, 79, 82, 83, 86, 88, 94, 96, 100, 103, 108, 116, 120, 121,

122, 126, 128, 131, 136, 143, 144, 146, 154, 158, 159, 164, 174, 175
Nature 53, 75, 100, 143, 149, 154, 166, 170, 173, 175
New Formalism 166
New York School 131
Obituary and memorial 111, 175
Objectivism 70
Ontology 38, 66, 169
Performance and the poetry reading 7, 9, 14, 21, 35, 69, 73, 78, 81, 89, 90, 99, 108, 112, 120, 128, 129, 137, 169, 171
Phenomenology 2
Philosophy 17, 24, 75, 89, 97, 104, 110, 134, 166
Place and region 2, 78, 96, 97, 100, 159, 166
Poet laureate 130
Poetics 8, 13, 14, 18, 22, 28, 36, 39, 46, 54, 60, 70, 82, 89, 95, 112, 120, 128, 131, 133, 137, 143, 145, 154, 166
Poets Against the War 147, 155
Politics and poetry 152, 153
Print vs. digital 22, 39, 74, 78, 88, 89, 101, 112, 121, 129, 137, 143, 147, 154, 155, 162, 164, 170
Prizes and awards 22, 46, 51, 63, 73, 88, 89, 96, 112, 120, 121, 128, 133, 137, 142, 174, 175
Procedural and constraint writing 36, 60, 145
Prose poem 46, 143, 154
Prosody and meter 100
Psychoanalysis 66
Queer poetics 22, 47, 136
Race and poetry 100
Reading announcements 9, 27, 49, 108, 152, 169, 174
Religion and the sacred 26, 75, 100, 110, 121, 143, 154, 175
Representation 66, 162
Reviewing and criticism 7, 28, 35, 37, 38, 39, 40, 46, 56, 67, 69, 73, 74, 75, 93, 96, 100, 111, 113, 121, 127, 136, 138, 152, 153, 162, 169
Revision 109, 116
Science 17, 66, 104, 131, 134
Serial poem 46, 74
Small press publishing 6, 15, 21, 22, 35, 40, 41, 44, 45, 62, 69, 73, 83, 86, 88, 89, 97, 100, 107, 114, 119, 120, 128, 131, 133, 135, 137, 158, 161, 171, 172
Social media 14, 16, 22, 38, 41, 44, 63, 64, 67, 76, 77, 79, 80, 86, 88, 117, 121, 136, 158, 159, 160, 163, 169
Software and code 2, 24, 75, 100, 167
Sonnet 7, 89, 112, 134, 137
Sound poetry 143, 154
Structuralism 143, 154
Subjectivity 66, 136, 161
Sublime 135
Surrealism 2, 28, 66, 88
The academy 7, 39, 46, 51, 54, 69, 72, 74, 89, 97, 112, 118, 120, 121, 128, 133, 135, 150, 152, 153, 159, 161, 162, 175
The body 51, 54, 66, 72, 97, 143, 154, 156, 166
The canon 100
The Holocaust 78
The internet 75, 76, 78, 80, 117, 160
The Iraq war 135
The listserv 46, 82, 133, 174, 175
Theatre 6, 82, 83, 94, 97, 99, 112, 136, 158, 175
Translation 9, 17, 28, 35, 44, 46, 69, 74, 91, 93, 95, 96, 97, 100, 104, 111, 112, 120, 121, 123, 127, 128, 133, 134, 136, 143, 147, 154, 155, 161
Visual and concrete poetry 17, 75, 97, 104, 134, 138, 143, 154
Visual art 17, 34, 46, 53, 69, 104, 105, 108, 110, 118, 124, 134, 136, 153, 159, 173
Women's writing 56, 58, 59, 100, 121

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 175 in all.

30 APR 2010

1. Michael — The SPRING SUPPLEMENT OF BIG BRIDGE is on its way!!

1 MAY 2010

2. Jeffrey Side — Two reviews in for !Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes"
3. Vernon Frazer — Re: POET-EDITOR issue up at Otoliths...and Poetry Foundation!

2 MAY 2010

4. Stephen Ellis — New website

3 MAY 2010

5. William Allegrezza — Series A in Chicago: Cycholl, Momyer, and Slaviero
6. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ — Today & tomorrow: Chapbook fair & marathon readings!
7. Camille Martin — Camille Martin's Sonnets – European tour
8. Lisa Janssen — To publishers - ever done an audio book?
9. Sam Ladkin — Cambridge Irish Studies: Trevor Joyce Poetry Reading and Discussion
10. Adam Fieled — Apparition Poem Links

4 MAY 2010

11. amy king — From Poetry Foundation - Web Manager position
12. amy king — “But What About the Nipples?” A Nice Conversation (Pt. 1)
13. cris cheek — reports on post_moot
14. Philip Meersman — Re: To publishers - ever done an audio book?
15. Rob McLennan — a note on writing the geography
16. Paul Siegell — FRIDAY > Vienna, VA: Tony Mancus & Paul Siegell
17. St. Thomasino — a noun sing Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham, an e·ratio e…
18. Catherine Daly — Re: To publishers - ever done an audio book?
19. Jeffrey Side — "The Theory of the Avant-Garde and Practice" by Libbie Rifkin at The Argotis…
20. amy king — But What About the Nipples? A Nice Conversation (Pt. 2)

5 MAY 2010

21. Tim Peterson — EOAGH Reading Series 5/9: JAVIER, LEE, & MARINOVICH
22. Tim Peterson — TENDENCIES 5/6: Kimball, Szymaszek, & Conrad
23. Alan Sondheim — Some recording from Jazz Lounge gig tonight
24. Chris Jones — absolute deviation update
25. Naomi Buck Palagi — a poem on a radio and more..
26. Jesse Seldess — Antennae 11
27. CE Putnam — INTERRUPTURE DOCUMENT #6: Performance Videos from 4/20 performance.
28. Kimmelman, Burt — Galatea Resurrects No. 14 Is Now Online
29. amy king — Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]
30. Matthew Landis — Re: Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]
31. Ruth Lepson — Re: Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]
32. George Bowering — Re: Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]
33. Catherine Daly — Re: Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]
34. Alan Sondheim — TWELVE SOLOISTS Friday Night @ Launch Pad Gallery 8:00 PM
35. Jennifer Karmin — May 10: Golaski, Henchey & Karmin in Hartford

6 MAY 2010

36. Sarah Rosenthal — A Community Writing Itself is out from Dalkey
37. Paul Siegell — wild life rifle fire > a new review
38. Deborah Poe — Zinc Bar, NYC on May 9th: Marcella Durand and Deborah Poe
39. William Slaughter — Notice: Mudlark

40. Rob McLennan — 12 or 20 (small press) questions
41. David Kirschenbaum — Exhibit at Boog Fest's Small, Small Press Fair
42. Regina Pinto — "Beware of the RaGhost"
43. Hoa Nguyen — (no subject)
44. sandra de 1913 — 1913 a journal of forms' Issue 4 is here!
45. steve dalachinsky — Re: new chapbook by yuko otomo other books by her upon request
46. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project

8 MAY 2010

47. Dan Wilcox — Walt Whitman Birthday Reading, Albany, NY
48. Adam Fieled — Three "Held" Links
49. Cara Benson — Pacific Northwest trip
50. Country Valley — New from Country Valley Press
51. Michael — Anne Valley-Fox, David Meltzer and Michael Rothenberg read at Bird and Beckett
52. Daniel Godston — World Listening Day
53. Daniel Godston — Ekphrastic Nexus

9 MAY 2010

54. Eleni Stecopoulos — May 20: SUBTLE INTELLIGENT BODIES w/ Beth Murray, Bhanu Kapil, Margit G…
55. Jason Nelson — sydney's siberia and other creatures
56. Carrie Etter — Infinite Difference appreciatively reviewed
57. Vernon Frazer — NEW VERNON FRAZER VIDEO: IMPROVISATIONS (Sections 1 and 2)
58. Cara Benson — Open Letter to Barack Obama
59. Cara Benson — Re: Open Letter to Barack Obama

10 MAY 2010

60. Sarah Rosenthal — A Community - Redux
61. Chris Jones — Re: Art games
62. Hailey Higdon — accepting work from emerging female writers
63. Philip Meersman — BruSlam invitation: May 21st - David Troch & Angela Rawlings - GalerY (ne…
64. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City and Fests Need Intern
65. amy king — [¡ POETRY !] PLEASE POST YOUR POEM FOR THE JUNE GOODREADS' CONTEST!
66. Alan Sondheim — thinking about Second Life - please comment *

11 MAY 2010

67. Paul Siegell — THURSDAY in PHILLY > Debrah Morkun, Carlos Soto Roman & Paul Siegell
68. Christophe Casamassima — TEST TEST TEST TEST
69. Jennifer Karmin — May 16: Aaaaaaaaaaalice book release in Chicago
70. Daniel Godston — "Imagining a Bauhaus Poetics" workshop
71. amy king — But What About the Nipples? A Nice Conversation (Pt. 3)
72. EJOYCE — new Susan Howe book
73. amy king — Thurs., May 13, at 7 p.m. for the Bon Mot/ley Reading Series, featuring Amy King…
74. Ruby, Michael — The Edge of the Underworld

12 MAY 2010

75. Chris Chapman — Re: Art games
76. paolo javier — P||R||O||J||E||C||T||I||O||N||S, 5/16, 6 pm
77. Ruth Lepson — Re: Boog City and Fests Need Intern
78. Rosalie Calabrese — Fw: Rosalie's Poetry Update
79. David Kirschenbaum — Re: Boog City and Fests Need Intern
80. Nic Sebastian — Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Amy King

13 MAY 2010

81. Rosalie Calabrese — Errata

82. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
83. Andy Gricevich — FRIDAY: Michael Bernstein, Lewis Freedman and Andy Gricevich read at Quimb...
84. { brad brace } — little orange pencils
85. derek beaulieu — new from No press: NOTES ON WHY CONCEPTUALISM IS BETTER THAN FLARF by Vane...

14 MAY 2010

86. David Kirschenbaum — Last Call to Advertise in, Donate to Boog City 63
87. Alan Sondheim — New Video Release: Okukin (please pass on)
88. The Editors — Pretty Much Everything
89. charles alexander — WHAT A TREAT! Dahlen & Larkin May 22
90. Dan Wilcox — Third Thursday Poetry Night: May 20 -- Colie Collen
91. sandra de 1913 — OZALID by Biswamit Dwibedy...

15 MAY 2010

92. Ed Friedman — New poem + video in Not Enough Night
93. Megan M Garr — Spread the word: Versal 8 is in the air
94. Caroline Crumpacker — MAY 21: Dance Your Funkin' Brass Off-- A Benefit Party for Great Sma...
95. Charles Bernstein — S/N: NewWorldPoetics
96. Gloria Mindock — "live Landscape" by Andrey Gritsman published by Cervena Barva Press
97. Jennifer Karmin — Red Rover Series / Experiment #36
98. The Dariens — Steven Manuel

16 MAY 2010

99. Justin Katko — CRS 5 - Jow Lindsay-Walton and Posie Rider, Fri 21 May
100. Michael — LONG LIVE NEW ORLEANS!!! BIG BRIDGE TRIBUTE
101. Lisa Samuels — It's all good - now available

17 MAY 2010

102. Mark Melnicove — Bern Porter Lost & Found Blog
103. Alan Sondheim — Playing at Linger Cafe in Brooklyn this Sunday - Come!
104. george spencer — Re: a noun sing Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham, an e·ra...
105. David-Baptiste Chirot — 6 Gallery co-founder dies
106. Naomi Buck Palagi — Re: little orange pencils
107. William Allegrezza — POD and presses

18 MAY 2010

108. steve dalachinsky — reading updates yert again
109. Vernon Frazer — IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER UPDATED ON YOUTUBE
110. Mark Prejsnar — in Georgia: Language Harm
111. Kate Eichhorn — <no subject>
112. Tim Peterson — EOAGH Book Party 5/23: Andrew Levy and Charles Borkhuis
113. Crane's Bill Books — Edoardo Sanguineti, Italian Poet, 79, Dies
114. Ruth Lepson — Re: POD and presses
115. Stephen Ellis — Re: little orange pencils
116. David Chirot — Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER UPDATED ON YOUTUBE
117. Nic Sebastian — Re: Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Collin Kelley

19 MAY 2010

118. Hazel Smith — Clay Conversations
119. Susan Webster Schultz — recent posts on Tinfish Editor's Blog
120. amy king — This Friday -- STAIN OF POETRY with *Melissa Buzzeo, Hugh Behm-Steinberg, Todd C...
121. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City presents Wave Books and I Feel Tractor

122. Adam Tobin — Re: Playing at Linger Cafe in Brooklyn this Sunday - Come!
123. maxpaul — NAW # 28 IS published

20 MAY 2010

124. Bob Heman — Mindy Levokove and I this saturday at Gizzi's - plus some other dates to rememb…
125. Mark Young — Now out from Otoliths — Crag Hill's 7 x 7
126. Vernon Frazer — Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER UPDATED ON YOUTUBE
127. Chad Sweeney — Releasing Issue 7 of PWR
128. amy king — Tomorrow! *Melissa Buzzeo, Hugh Behm-Steinberg, Todd Colby, Christie Ann Reynol…
129. CA Conrad — Bardic Sepulchral: Will Edmiston
130. amy king — Got Gulf Oil? Urgent Call : Poets for Living Waters
131. steve dalachinsky — fantastic new chapbook series out from CUNYthru Amiel Alcalay
132. Adam Fieled — Apparition Poem Links
133. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
134. Halvard Johnson — Re: a noun sing Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham, an e·r…

21 MAY 2010

135. Nate Dorward — New chapbook: Buber's Bag Man, by Frederick Farryl Goodwin
136. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City 63 Print and Online PDF Editions Available
137. charles — CHAX POETRY READING: DAHLEN & LARKIN

22 MAY 2010

138. Joseph Mosconi — Visual Poetry Forum, Abramowitz, Timmons, & More up at Area Sneaks.com
139. Jeffrey Side — 'Lou Reed's "Street Hassle" and the Challenge to Post-Modern Poetry' by Adam…
140. peter ganick — a blog announcement
141. peter ganick — Re: a blog announcement
142. Catherine Daly — Fwd: "LOST" on Manhattan's Upper East Side + $145,000 in Literary Prizes...
143. David Chirot — Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visua…

23 MAY 2010

144. Alan Sondheim — Three pieces (SL video plus 2 taksim 'of sorts')
145. Scott Howard — Call for Submissions: RECONFIGURATIONS, Volume 4, Emergence

24 MAY 2010

146. Alan Sondheim — music from the linger cafe today, traffic in the background, bad recording,…
147. Anny Ballardini — the new update of the Poets' Corner
148. amy king — Ugly Americans, Slaves, Techonology
149. Amanda Earl — Christine McNair's anti-statement-latest essay from AHP
150. Al Filreis — PoemTalk #32: on Howe's Dickinson
151. Paul Siegell — how hot are your pepper people?
152. Nicholas Karavatos — at Beyond Baroque in Venice, CA on Friday, May 28 at 7:30pm
153. Nicholas Karavatos — at Artists' Union Gallery in Ventura, CA on Tuesday, June 1 at 7:30pm
154. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & …
155. Anny Ballardini — Re: the new update of the Poets' Corner

25 MAY 2010

156. Alan Sondheim — language, the economy of the imaginary
157. amy king — Update -- Poets for Living Waters: Poems and Statements by Evie Shockley and Fra…

158. David Kirschenbaum — Exhibit at Boog Fest's Small, Small Press Fair
159. jason snyder — June 5: Sidebrow San Francisco Book Launch Party: Florian & Wilkinson
160. Nic Sebastian — Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Ren Powell
161. Jennifer Karmin — Red Rover Series / Experiment #37
162. Ruby, Michael — Compulsive Words
163. Alan Sondheim — Let me tell you a secret -- public projection project (fwd)

26 MAY 2010

164. CA Conrad — UMM KULTHUM: A Voice Like Egypt
165. amy king — Seeking Poets for Reading -- Need Organizers
166. amy king — Sheila Black and Jennifer Bartlett are putting together an anthology of poets wi…
167. aslongasittakes — APG at ACAC

27 MAY 2010

168. steve dalachinsky — Re: Seeking Poets for Reading -- Need Organizers
169. Deborah Poe — Austin Event May 29: Skanky Possum Presents Deborah Poe and Cindy St. John
170. { brad brace } — Island 6.0
171. Rob McLennan — rob mclennan + Andy Weaver at the TREE Reading Series, June 8;
172. Rob McLennan — the art & the agony
173. Daniel Godston — Ekphrastic Nexus
174. Poetry Project — Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project

29 MAY 2010

175. Charles Bernstein — Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)

1. Michael
The SPRING SUPPLEMENT OF BIG BRIDGE is on its way!!
Fri 30 Apr 2010

Dear Friends of Big Bridge,

The Spring Supplement of Big Bridge's New Orleans Tribute Issue is on it's way. Look for the announcement in your e-mail coming soon!!!

And be sure to check out the new 4th Anniversary edition of Otoliths (#17) feature of ROCKPILE on the road, with poems by Michael Rothenberg & David Meltzer, photos by Terri Carrión, & an introduction by Larry Sawyer at http://the-otolith.blogspot.com/2010/02/from-rockpile-on-road-poems-by-michael.html

See you soon!

Michael Rothenberg, Editor

Big Bridge Online

www.bigbridge.org

↑ Index

2. Jeffrey Side
Two reviews in for !Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes"
Sat 1 May 2010

Two reviews in for !Cyclones in High Northern Latitudes":

Depicting a waking, lucid dreamscape, the shifting interior cinema of lost love sets itself against the gathered debris of a recalled former life. Echoes of Hamsun's HUNGER congeal with Patchen's JOURNAL OF ALBION MOONLIGHT in a rich interior monologue, traipsing through the surreal landscape of memory ...
"I learned long ago to distinguish between strong memories and whatever the world is ..."
Blurring the subjective/reality boundary, this is a phenomenological in-look freighted with the memories of a non-named woman, a love gone sour after a time of many kisses. Now the narrator, an outlaw on the run, hiding in cloisters, in a strange town with assumed name and face, remains sustained by these images of HER, even as the warnings indicate he is still being followed. His days reside in the "dilemma/of the broken hearted"; he begins to lose temporal perspective, a living exile from his past. He falls back to studying the indecipherable clouds ...

The collaborative narration weaves us through a shifting time-flux, a moving floor between memory-past and perception-present ... here, the outlaw is looking through a dirty Bowery window, perhaps after a day spent as an insurance clerk poring over columns of actuary tables in some vague city location ... there, we see him drinking the nepenthe of the village locals, full of his thoughts of yet a previous exiled life ... then a shifting retreat back to the actuary tables, which may hold the "traces ... of cyclones/in high northern latitudes ...
By the residue of high hope, the narrator prays that "one day you will/experience my love" - by which the shadow of longing transcends the mundanity of being a data entry clerk ...
The bold ink drawings by Rich Curtis round out this joint effort by two exemplary poets. Highly recommended reading ...

Matt Hill

This is a modern book. A current collaboration. Jake Berry and Jeffrey Side have come together, along with the artist Rich Curtis to lead us through a journey of the stratosphere that include algorithms, the dogs of cognizance, actuary tables and a glimpse of 50 worlds passing. The poets write, "I have difficulty believing that I, in another time and form, created them myself." Then a few pages later write, "...and I can see the clouds forming now and a storm brewing." These storms are cyclones like the title suggests. Whirling from the marshes and up into the adrenaline of the clouds. The reader gets caught up in the earth, immigrants in an orchard shrouded by dunes. Cyclones In High Northern Latitudes delivers on the titles suggestion of flight. As John Steinbeck wrote, "The very air here is miraculous."

Chris Mansel

↑ Index

3. Vernon Frazer
Re: POET-EDITOR issue up at Otoliths...and Poetry Foundation!
Sat 1 May 2010

Happy Anniversary!

Vernon

↑ Index

4. Stephen Ellis
New website
Sun 2 May 2010

---

http://proposia.blogspot.com

EMAILING FOR THE GREATER GOOD
Join me

↑ Index

5. William Allegrezza
Series A in Chicago: Cycholl, Momyer, and Slaviero
Mon 3 May 2010

Come to Series A this Wednesday from 7-8.

Garin Cycholl, Heather Momyer, and Susan Slaviero will be reading their works.

Location: Hyde Park Art Center
5020 S. Cornell
Chicago

Easy Parking.
Easy Public Transit Access.
BYOB

For more info, check www.moriapoetry.com/seriesa.html.

*The reading starts on time since the HPAC closes at 8.

↑ Index

6. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ
Today & tomorrow: Chapbook fair & marathon readings!
Mon 3 May 2010

Donâ€™t forget to join us! Thereâ€™s still space in tomorrowâ€™s free workshops (full schedule at http://www.chapbookfestival.org), the bookfair is open today & tomorrow from 11:30AM-7PM, and the marathon readings start at 2PM! Full lineup is below.

MONDAY, MAY 3

2-3 PM
River Poets Journal/Lilly Press: Phoebe Wilcox
Poinciana Paper Press: Angelique V. Nixon
2nd Ave Poetry: Jill Magi

Bateau Press: James Grinwis
Belladonna*: E. Tracy Grinnell

3-4 PM
BOOK Works: Estha Weiner
H_NGM_N: Ben Mirov
Cervena Barva Press: Susan Lewis
CUNY Lost & Found: Josh Schneiderman&Claudia Pisano

4-5 PM
Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs: Brenda Iijima
Creature Press: John Harkey
Cy Gist Press: Veronica Wong
DoubleCross Press: Sarah Green
Dusie Kollektiv: Mark Lamoureux&Amanda Deutch

5-6 PM
Etched Press: Kevin Dublin
Finishing Line Press: Ruth Handel&Melora Walters
Forklift, Ohio: Amy King
Octopus Books: Emily Pettit
Brave Men Press: Brian Foley

6-7 PM
Ugly Duckling Presse: Dorothea Lasky
Greying Ghost Press: Eric Amling
Kissena Park Press: Lana Hechtman Ayers
Little Scratch Pad: Douglas Manson
Love Among the Ruins: Laura Jaramillo

TUESDAY, MAY 4

2-3 PM
Flying Guillotine Press: Steven Karl&Angela Veronica Wong
Magic Helicopter Books: Carolyn Zaikowski
Noemi Press
Pen Press: Marcos Wasem&Mercedes RoffÃ©
Center for Book Arts: Sharon Dolin

3-4 PM
Plan B Press
Pleasure Boat Studio: A Literary Press: Zeadryn Meade
Rain Taxi
Corollary Press: Jason Schwartz
Push Press & Friends: Mary Speaker
4-5 PM

Slapering Hol Press: Susana H. Case
Small Anchor Press: Joseph McElroy
Sona Books: Paolo Javier
Spire Press: Shelly Reed&Matthew Hittinger
The Corresponding Society: David Swesen

5-6 PM
Poets Wear Prada: Austin Alexis&Michael Montlack
The Physiocrats: Daniel Nohejl
BookThug: Cara Benson
sunnyoutside: MRB Chelko
Tarpaulin Sky Press: Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

6-7 PM
Booklyn: Charmaine Wheatley
Instance Press: Kim Lyons
Toadlily Press: George Kraus
Upset Press: Denise Galang&Amy Lemmon-Bowen
X-ing Press/Agriculture Reader: Justin Taylor

7PM
PSA Chapbook Fellowship Reading
Martin E. Segal Theatre
Alice Quinn with judges Mark Doty, Linda Gregg, and Arthur Sze, and winners Jocelyn Casey-Whiteman, Haines Eason, Heidi Johannesen Poon, and Stephanie Adams-Santos. Followed by reception.
Free and open to the public.

↑ Index

7. Camille Martin

Camille Martin's Sonnets – European tour

Mon 3 May 2010

Vulcan is cooperating for now, so my reading tour in the UK, Ireland, and Paris to celebrate the publication of my new book Sonnets by the fabulous Shearsman Books is on. A recent review and ordering information follows the itinerary below. If you are going to be in any of these places, please come!

London, England
7:30 pm, Tuesday, May 4
Shearsman Reading Series
Swedenborg Hall, Swedenborg House / 20/21 Bloomsbury Way
Readers: Camille Martin (publisher’s launch of Sonnets) and Alisdair Paterson

Bangor, Wales
7:30 pm, Thursday, May 6
Blue Sky Cafe / High Street
A triple launch – Camille Martin's Sonnets, Ian Davidson's Into Thick Hair, and the new issue of Poetry Wales

St. Helier, Isle of Jersey
8:00 pm, Saturday, May 8
PoAttic Reading Series
The Attic in the Jersey Opera House

Cork, Ireland
Monday, May 10
6:30 – 8:00 pm: workshop
9:00 pm: reading
Ó Bhéal Reading Series / The Long Valley

Salford, England
6:00 – 8:00 pm, Tuesday, May 11
University of Salford
Two-hour session with students in the MA in Creative Writing program

Paris, France
7:30 pm, Tuesday, May 18
Ivy Writers Reading Series
Le Next / 17 rue Tiqutonne, Paris

A recent review of Sonnets by rob mclennan:
There are so few that seem to know how to bring something new to an often-used form that when it happens, it's worth noting, and such is the case with Toronto poet Camille Martin in her second trade poetry collection, Sonnets (Exeter England: Shearsman Books, 2010). Martin, an American relocated north after Hurricane Katrina, writes with the most wonderful sense of clarity, thought and play in these poems . . .
(read the review here: http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/04/camille-martin-sonnets.html

See the Shearsman webpage for ordering information:

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html

or go straight to SPD:

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781848610705/sonnets.aspx?rf=1

Cheers!
Camille Martin

↑ Index

8. Lisa Janssen
To publishers - ever done an audio book?
Mon 3 May 2010

Dear poetics list - have any of you publishers ever produced an audio book? Know anyone who has? I'm looking for lots of general information about recording, etc.

Many thanks!

Lisa Janssen

↑ Index

9. Sam Ladkin
Cambridge Irish Studies: Trevor Joyce Poetry Reading and Discussion
Mon 3 May 2010

Dear All,
Apologies for cross-posting. Here's notice of another notable Cambridge event, this time courtesy of John Kerrigan.
Best,
Sam

CAMBRIDGE GROUP FOR IRISH STUDIES

TREVOR JOYCE: POETRY READING AND DISCUSSION

Tuesday, 4 May, 8.45 p.m.
The Parlour, Magdalene College

All welcome
Wine and whiskey served

Trevor Joyce will read from his own poetry, and that of his contemporaries, then answer questions about his work and the poetry scene in Ireland.

Joyce is one of Ireland's leading poets. Associated with modernist traditions that go back to Beckett and the other Joyce, and with poetry in the Irish language (from which he has translated extensively) back to /Buile Suibhne/, he has produced a body of work which is challengingly distinct from the mainstream but which has significant points of contact with poetry across Europe and with experimentalists in Ireland who are now attracting international attention. He has lived and worked in Cork for twenty-five years, for the last twelve of which he has been a director of SoundEye. His books include /with the first dream of fire they hunt the cold/ (New Writers' Press/Shearsman, 2001 & 2003) and /What's in Store/ (NWP/The Gig, 2008). /Courts of Air and Earth/ (Shearsman, 2009) gathers all his workings from middle and early-modern Irish. He has been a Fulbright Scholar, is a member of Aosdána, and is the Judith E. Wilson Visiting Poetry Fellow in Cambridge for 2009-10.

The session will be chaired by Sinead Garrigan-Mattar, an authority on Irish literature and a Fellow of Girton College.

Any questions to jk10023

↑ Index

10. Adam Fieled

Apparition Poem Links

Mon 3 May 2010

Hi. I have new Apparition Poems up in two places:

http://www.blueyellowdog.weebly.com/adam-fieled.html

http://www.pirenesfountain.com/current_issue/fieled.html

Many thanks and happy spring!
Adam

↑ Index

11. amy king

From Poetry Foundation - Web Manager position

Tue 4 May 2010

Itâ€™s more important for this particular job to have someone who understands the website development process and has a grasp of emerging technologies, than to have someone whoâ€™s completely current with or even part of the poetry scene. http://www.poetryfoundation.org/jobs#Web-Project-Manager

↑ Index

12. amy king

“But What About the Nipples?” A Nice Conversation (Pt. 1)

Tue 4 May 2010

My take on Bl
Conversation I initiated at HTML Giant - Part 1 is up.

My take on Blake Butler's quote that became the title of the convo:
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/05/04/more-brouhaha-part-1/

The actual convo with lots of comment participants:
http://htmlgiant.com/behind-the-scenes/but-what-about-the-nipples-a-nice-conversation-pt-1/

↑ Index

13. cris cheek
reports on post_moot
Tue 4 May 2010

---

for those curious about what went on in south-west ohio a couple of weekends ago there are two lengthy reports already out there:

Barrett Watten
http://barrettwatten.net/events/entry-12-relational-poetics/2010/05/#more-777

Laura Moriarty
http://atonalistdoc.blogspot.com/2010/05/post-moot-movement-looking-for-start-of.html

other materials are appearing (including partial reports due for completion by Bonnie Jones) on the post_moot blog

postmoot.com/10

enjoy

cris

↑ Index

14. Philip Meersman
Re: To publishers - ever done an audio book?
Tue 4 May 2010

Dear Lisa,
I'm also very interested.
Since most of my work is performance poetry, I would love to find a publishing house which would want to publish my poetry both on CD or DVD and in a printed form.

There are of course several online audio databases and magazines, textsound, toxic poetry, lyrikline, ubuweb,...

So looking forward to reading more on that topic too.

Philip

On Mon, May 3, 2010 at 9:13 PM, Lisa Janssen <[redacted]> wrote:

> Dear poetics list - have any of you publishers ever produced an audio book? Know anyone who has? I'm looking for lots of general information about recording, etc.
>
> Many thanks!
>
> Lisa Janssen

--
Philip Meersman
!!! New Address
Tentoonstellingslaan 418, bus 46
1090 Jette
Belgium
tel[redacted]
www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
skype: Spooninmybrain
[redacted]
www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
05/05/10-09/05/10: Literature festival of Tallinn, Estonia (http://www.headread.ee/)
21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/07/10: BruSlam, CBK Slam voorronde Gent with special guest Jaan Malin, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

↑ Index

15. Rob McLennan
a note on writing the geography
Tue 4 May 2010

---

of my second novel, missing persons (2009);

http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/05/missing-persons-writing-saskatchewan.html

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

16. Paul Siegell

FRIDAY > Vienna, VA: Tony Mancus & Paul Siegell

Tue 4 May 2010

This Friday, May 7th in Vienna, VA.

Join poets Tony Mancus and Paul Siegell, plus musician Daniel Collins, for Poetry Lab at The Soundry (316 Dominion Road, Vienna, VA 22180)
http://www.soundry.net/2009/12/the-next-experiment-poetry-lab/

Poetry Lab interviews: http://thepoetrylabvienna.blogspot.com/

facebook invite: http://bit.ly/aR8Qr2

Hope to see you there,
Paul
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com

-
http://amzn.to/1A0fPV

↑ Index

17. St. Thomasino

a noun sing Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham, an e·ratio editions e·chap

Tue 4 May 2010

EÂ·

EÂ·ratio Editions is pleased to present EÂ·ratio Editions EÂ·chap #9:

Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham.

â€œ . . . bathe deep in / the barely-there / disassembled gallery / of the everyday . . . â€

Two poetic sequences. With illustrations by Keith Higginbotham.

Also available:

#8. Polylogue by Carey Scott Wilkerson. Poems. â€œ . . . with rules and constitutive games, / with paints and gramarye / with some modicum / of my reckless trust . . . â€

#7. BashÅâ€™s Phonebook. 30 translations by Travis Macdonald. The great Japanese haiku poet Matsuo BashÅ goes digital. Conceptual poetry. With translatorâ€™s notes.

#6. Correspondance (a sketchbook) by Joseph F. Keppler. Digital art. With an introduction by Joseph F. Keppler.

#5. Six Comets Are Coming by Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino. Volume I of the collected works including Go and Go Mirrored, with revised introductions, corrected text and restored original font.

#4. The Logoclasody Manifesto. Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino on logoclasody, logoclastics, eidetics and pannarrativity. Addenda include the Crash Course in Logoclastics, Concrete to Eidetic (on visual poetry) and On Mathematical Poetry.

#3. Waves by MÃ¡rton KoppÃ¡ny. â€œThese works are minimalist by design, but should we paraphrase the thought channeled therein, the effect would be encyclopedic, ranging through philosophy, psychology, politics, and the human emotions.â€ Visual poetry.

#2. Mending My Black Sweater and other poems by Mary Ann Sullivan. Poems of making conscious, of acceptance and of self-remembering, and of personal responsibility.

#1. Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino joins John M. Bennett In the Bennett Tree. Collaborative poems, images, an introduction and a full- length critical essay pay homage to American poet John M. Bennett.

http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com/eratioeditions.html

http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com/

EÂ·

↑ Index

18. Catherine Daly

Re: To publishers - ever done an audio book?

Tue 4 May 2010

Palm Press and Narrow House. Might want to start at the PennSound "Members" page looking for CD issuers.

On Mon, May 3, 2010 at 12:13 PM, Lisa Janssen <[redacted]> wrote:
> Dear poetics list - have any of you publishers ever produced an audio book?
> Know anyone who has? I'm looking for lots of general information about > recording, etc.
>
> Many thanks!
>
> Lisa Janssen

>
>

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

19. Jeffrey Side

"The Theory of the Avant-Garde and Practice" by Libbie Rifkin at The Argotist Online

Tue 4 May 2010

"The Theory of the Avant-Garde and Practice" by Libbie Rifkin at The Argotist Online:
http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Rifkin%20essay.htm
Excerpt:
"Enzensberger traces the military roots of the term "avant-garde," breaking it down into its component parts and pushing each to its aporetic limit. The first aporia emerges when the avant-garde moves from the synchrony of the battle field to the diachrony of historical progress. Confronting the enemy up ahead, the "en avant of the avant-garde would, as it were, realize the future in the present, anticipate the course of history". In spite of tremendous advances in prognostication by the "consciousness industry," this is, of course, impossible. And yet the whole system depends on this impossibility; the avant-garde is the engine of advancement for the main body of artistic works, but the scene of its reception is, by definition, always just out of reach. The avant-gardeâ€™s value, in fact its very identity, can only be determined by the future generations for whom it is already passÃ©."

↑ Index

20. amy king

But What About the Nipples? A Nice Conversation (Pt. 2)

Tue 4 May 2010

---

http://htmlgiant.com/behind-the-scenes/but-what-about-nipples-a-nice-conversation-pt-2/

↑ Index

21. Tim Peterson

EOAGH Reading Series 5/9: JAVIER, LEE, & MARINOVICH

Wed 5 May 2010

EOAGH Reading Series

"Where you say one thing but you really mean your mother
’s day reading extravaganza!"

Featuring
PAOLO JAVIER, SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE, and FILIP MARINOVICH

Sunday, May 9 at 2 PM
At Unnameable Books
600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY
FREE

PAOLO JAVIER is the author of the forthcoming chapbooks The Feeling Is Actual (creature press, summer 2010) and Megton Gasgan Krakooom (cy gist press, summer 2010). A 2010 Millay Colony Artist-in-Residence, he publishes 2nd Ave Poetry, and lives in Queens.

Read “FORMAL APOLOGY TO MY ASSHOLE,” “Maybe I’m All Of This” and “MCCARTHY
AT HEART” by Paolo Javier in Issue 5:
http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/javier.html

Read an excerpt “from THE ORIGINAL BROWN BOY,” Javier’s collaboration with Ernest Concepcion, in Issue 3:
http://chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/concepcionjavier.html

SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE grew up 3 miles from the CIA. She currently lives in Philadelphia, where she edits Corollary Press, a chapbook series devoted to multi-ethnic innovative writing. Her books include That Gorgeous Feeling (Coconut Books) and Underground National (Factory School).

Read “from in an american mirror” by Sueyeun Juliette Lee in Issue 5:
http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/lee.html

FILIP MARINOVICH is a poet living in New York, New York. His books are "ZERO READERSHIP" (Ugly Duckling Presse 2008), and the forthcoming "A TRAVELLING PART" (Ugly Duckling Presse 2011). He has published poems in Critiphoria, EOAGH #3 and #5, The Brooklyn Rail, and Aufgabe. Good evening Everybody.

Read “HONORABLE ONE,” “BARETTE,” and “Descriptions Automatique” by Filip

Marinovich in Issue 3:
http://chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/marinovich.html

Read “AMERICA DEATH IN NEW YORK” by Marinovich in Issue 5:
http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/marinovich.html

*

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

*

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

Charles Borkhuis and Andrew Levy
Sunday, May 23 @2PM

E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor
Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

22. Tim Peterson
TENDENCIES 5/6: Kimball, Szymaszek, & Conrad
Wed 5 May 2010

TENDENCIES 5/6: Jack Kimball, Stacy Szymaszek, and CAConrad

This series of talks by major poets, titled in honor of Eve Kosofsky Sedgwick, explores the relationship between contemporary poetic manifesto, practice, queer theory and pedagogy.

The next event features talks by:

Jack Kimball
Stacy Szymaszek
CAConrad

...followed by a discussion/Q&A session.

on Thursday, May 6
at 6:30 PM
FREE

at CUNY Graduate Center
in the Skylight Room (9100)
365 Fifth Avenue, NYC

Jack Kimball is a self-described after-language poet based in Boston but often identified with New York. A number of his books are published by Potes and Poets Press (Witness Protection, 1997; Quite Vacation, 1998; Frosted, 2001). Terrence Diggory suggests "identification of that press with Language poetry has established a context for the reception of Kimball's work. For instance, in a blurb for Frosted, Tony Towle noted 'mysterious ironies and enjambments, lines that are stunningly odd, and various kinds of oblique narrative that may owe something to "language" influences, but are often also resonant of Jimmy Schuyler.'" Resonating with another New York poet, Kimball set one complex goal, later modified, in recent work, Post~Twyla (published 2006, republished 2010): to keep a sardonic diary, compressing reactions to every page of John Ashbery's masterpiece Flow Chart by way of fake haiku and renga-like short verse and prose commentary. Publisher of Faux Press, Kimball blogs at pantaloons.blogspot.com. He does not twitter.

Stacy Szymaszek was born and raised in Milwaukee, WI. From 1999 to 2005, she was the Literary Program Manager for the nonprofit literary organization Woodland Pattern Book Center. In 2005 she moved to New York to serve as Program Coordinator at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church. In 2006-07, she served as Monday Night Reading Coordinator. She became Artistic Director in 2007. She is the author of the chapbooks Mutual Aid (gong press, 2004), Some Mariners (Etherdome, 2004), There Were Hostilities (repair, 2005), Pasolini Poems (Cy Press, 2005), from Hyperglossia (Belladonna Books, 2005), Stacy S: Autoportraits (OMG! Press, 2008), Orizaba: A Voyage with Hart Crane (Faux Chaps, 2008), from Hyperglossia(Hot Whiskey Press, 2008) and from Hart Island (Albion Books, 2009). Her first full-length book, Emptied of All Ships, was published in 2005 and her second book Hyperglossia in 2009, both with Litmus Press. http://www.litmuspress.org/szymaszek.html (photo by John Sarsgard).

CAConrad is the recipient of The Gil Ott Book Award for The Book of Frank (Chax Press, 2009). He is also the author of Advanced Elvis Course (Soft Skull Press, 2009), (Soma)tic Midge(Faux Press, 2008), Deviant Propulsion (Soft Skull Press, 2006), and a collaboration with poet Frank Sherlock titled The City Real & Imagined(Factory School, 2010). The son of white trash asphyxiation, his childhood included selling cut flowers along the highway for his mother and helping her shoplift. Visit him online at http://CAConrad.blogspot.com <http://caconrad.blogspot.com/> and with his friends at http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>(photo by Stacy Szymaszek).

* * *

TENDENCIES: Poetics & Practice is curated by Tim Peterson (Trace). For additional information, visit the Tendencies blog at http://tendenciespoetics.blogspot.com

All events are co-sponsored by the Center for the Humanities, CLAGS (the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies), The Graduate Center PhD Program in English, and the GC Poetics Group.

↑ Index

23. Alan Sondheim

Some recording from Jazz Lounge gig tonight

Wed 5 May 2010

Some recording from Jazz Lounge gig tonight -

Well for one thing the other group didn't show and for another, the recording - which I did - turned out largely unusable except for the following excerpts which give a fairly good idea of what went on, with the exception of Azure's songs - these didn't come out at all. What I think happened was that subsonic stage and other floor movements resonated with the corner we played in - a kind of wolf-note effect below the range of human hearing, but not below the range of recorder compression. The result was literally impossible to listen to - lots of thumps and things unheard but sensed, taking out the music. After using graphic equalization, hard limiting, normalization, hiss reduction and editing, the following is what resulted - on it you'll hear Myk Freedman, guitar, and myself, oud and cura cumbus in some fairly weird combinations. Everything else had to be scrapped. But this stuff's good -

http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/jl2.mp3

↑ Index

24. Chris Jones

absolute deviation update

Wed 5 May 2010

Just to let on I have added to my blog and am getting it together (if I can remember the software)

Working with Deleuzian ideas (D&G) for (New) Media Arts, analog/digital interface, from Postscript on Societies of Control, and merger of technical plane and aesthetic plane, from What is Philosophy. Any comments critical ideas are welcome... this email address or here, since I don't have blog commenting stuff together, yet. (Moving too fast and always late.)

http://abdevpoetics.blogspot.com/

and some silver gelatin still lifes at:

http://abdevpoetics.blogspot.com/2010/02/and-another-still.html

--
have chronic fatigue syndrome so may be delayed in reply or brain fog weird

just to let you know that's all, Chris Jones.

Blog: http://abdevpoetics.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

25. Naomi Buck Palagi

a poem on a radio and more..

Wed 5 May 2010

Just hoping to get a little traffic to these sites--

I have a poem posted on a great chicago DJ's blog, and a few more at Blue & Yellow Dog-- hope you'll visit!

http://wxrt.radio.com/2010/04/29/smell-of-bacon-on-a-woman/

http://blueyellowdog.weebly.com/naomi-buck-palagi.html

Thanks!
Naomi Buck Palagi

↑ Index

26. Jesse Seldess

Antennae 11

Wed 5 May 2010

Antennae 11 is now available.

ANTENNAE 11
May 2010
$8

Performance texts by Karinne Keithley

Poems by
Jena Osman / Corey Mead / Laura Moriarty /
Kit Robinson & Ted Greenwald / Anthony Madrid /
C.J. Martin / Joe Milazzo / Barbara Cully

Music scores by Adam Overton

A novel excerpt by Pamela Lu

Cover by Tobias Kraft

Ordering options:

- Online payment through Antennae website:
http://www.antennae-journal.com/antennae11.html

- Check to
Jesse Seldess
1321 Woodland Lane
Riverwoods, IL 60015

Copies of Antennae 10 are still available as well, and can be ordered same as above:

ANTENNAE 10
March 2009
$8

Poems by Frances Richard / Uljana Wolf - tr. Nathaniel Otting /
Janice Lee / Eric Lindley /
Christian Hawkey with Georg Trakl / Boyer Rickel

Music scores by
Joseph Kudirka

Performance texts by Corina Copp

Also note that free pdf versions of issues 1 - 7 can be downloaded from the issues pages of the website: www.antennae-journal.com

Best wishes,
Jesse

↑ Index

27. CE Putnam

INTERRUPTURE DOCUMENT #6: Performance Videos from 4/20 performance.

Wed 5 May 2010

INTERRUPTURE DOCUMENT #6: Performance Videos from 4/20 performance.

INTERRUPTURE is a group of experimental poets that performs text compositions structured as a game.

Each piece follows a set of rules that determines who, what, where, when, and how a poet will read their verse as the play of the game unfolds.

These rules might encourage silence, polyphony, erasure, repetition, modulation, and so on, making each game a unique event.

Team Interrupture lineup for Document #6: Daniel Comiskey, Kreg Hasegawa, Bryant Mason, Annalisa Pesek, and C.E. Putnam.

Performance Date / Location: Canoe Social Club, Seattle, Wa - April 20, 2010

Website:
http://www.pisor-industries.org/interrupture/

Video links:

#1
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oJ2JgH3m5AM

#2
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pjKX6-AMT-k

#3
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=h_cJzJ80C3s

#4
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v¼LRH7xA-5Y

#5
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qemx93cZmAU

↑ Index

28. Kimmelman, Burt
Galatea Resurrects No. 14 Is Now Online
Wed 5 May 2010

I'm posting the below for Eileen Tabios whose eddress is still blocked for some reason. The new issue of Galatea Resurrects is now available at the link below. (It looks like a great issue!)

Burt

======

GALATEA RESURRECTS ANNOUNCEMENT

Galatea Resurrects #14 is out with 64 new reviews! You can access the issue directly at http://galatearesurrection14.blogspot.com For convenience, the Contents are listed below,

Eileen Tabios
Editor, Galatea Resurrects

GR #14 TABLE OF CONTENTS
May 5, 2010

EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION
By Eileen Tabios

NEW REVIEWS
Crag Hill reviews SHOULDER SEASON by Ange Mlinko

Steven Fama reviews MUCH LIKE YOU SHARK by Logan Ryan Smith

Patrick James Dunagan reviews FROM THE CANYON OUTWARD by Neeli Cherkovski; THE PLEROMA by Vincent Ferrini; THIRSTING FOR PEACE IN A RAGING CENTURY: SELECTED POEMS 1961-1985 (NEW & REVISED EDITION) by Edward Sanders; LET'S NOT KEEP FIGHTING THE TROJAN WAR: NEW AND SELECTED POEMS 1986-2009 by Edward Sanders; BODY CLOCK by Eleni Sikelianos; and LEAVES OF GRASS, 1860: THE 150TH ANNIVERSARY FACSIMILE EDITION by Walt Whitman, edited by Jason Stacy

Kristen Orser reviews THE LAST 4 THINGS by Kate Greenstreet

Richard Kostelanetz reviews POESIE DER ENTSCHLEUNIGUNG: EIN LESEBUCH by Robert Lax, Ed. Sigrid Hauff

Jim McCrary reviews MONDO CRAMPO by Juliet Cook; SILVERONDA by Lucy Harvest Clarke; THE CONTORTIONS by Nicole Mauro; GOODNIGHT VOICE by Dana Ward; GUTTER CATHOLIC LOVE SONG by Joseph Wood; and MY DAY AIMLESSLY WALKING VANCOUVER, WASH by James Yeary, illustrated by Nate Orton

John Herbert Cunningham reviews SELECTIONS by André Breton, edited and with an introduction by Mark Polizzotti; MARTINIQUE: SNAKE CHARMER by André Breton, translated by David W. Seaman with introduction by Franklin Rosemont; HYPODERMIC LIGHT: THE POETRY OF PHILIP LAMANTIA AND THE QUESTION OF SURREALISM by Steven Frattali; and TAU by Philip Lamantia / JOURNEY TO THE END by John Hoffman, ed. Garrett Caples

Tom Beckett reviews BHARAT JIVA by kari edwards and NO GENDER (REFLECTIONS ON THE LIFE AND WORK OF kari edwards), Edited by Julian Brolaski, erica kaufman & E. Tracy Grinnell

Eileen Tabios engages BHARAT JIVA by kari edwards and NO GENDER (REFLECTIONS ON THE LIFE AND WORK OF kari edwards), Edited by Julian Brolaski, erica kaufman & E. Tracy Grinnell

Fiona Sze-Lorrain reviews NEW EXERCISES by Franck André Jamme, Translated from the French by Charles Borkhuis

Joey Madia reviews GRIEF SUITE by Bobbi Lurie

Thomas Fink reviews GENJI MONOGATARI by Mark Young

Eileen Tabios engages GENJI MONOGATARI by Mark Young

Peg Duthie engages THE FAT SHEEP EVERYONE WANTS by Bern Mulvey

Petra Backonja reviews CATALOGUE OF BURNT TEXT by Timothy David Orme

Delia Tramontina reviews MANHATTEN by Sarah Rosenthal

Eileen Tabios engages NTST: THE COLLECTED PWOERMDS OF GEOF HUTH

John Herbert Cunningham reviews CHARLES BAUDELAIRE by Rosemary Lloyd; THE FLOWERS OF EVIL by Charles Baudelaire, translated by Keith Waldrop; ARTHUR RIMBAUD: COMPLETE WORKS, translated by Paul Schmidt; and THE ILLUMINATIONS by Arthur Rimbaud, translated by Donald Revell

Harry Thorne reviews BOOK MADE OF FOREST by Jared Stanley

Jai Arun Ravine reviews POEMS OF THE BLACK OBJECT by Ronaldo V. Wilson

William Allegrezza reviews AS IF FREE by Burt Kimmelman

Crag Hill engages TAKE IT by Joshua Beckman

Eileen Tabios engages DESTRUCTION MYTH and CREATION MYTHS, both by Mathias Svalina

Peg Duthie engages REFUSING DESPAIR: SELECTED POEMS AND JOURNAL WRITINGS by Teresa Anderson

Meredith Caliman reviews POETRY OF THE LAW: FROM CHAUCER TO THE PRESENT, co-edited by David Kader and Michael Stanford

Fiona Sze-Lorrain reviews AURA: LAST ESSAYS by Gustaf Sobin

Eileen Tabios engages EASY EDEN by Micah Ballard and Patrick James Dunagan

Emmanuel Sigauke reviews INTWASA POETRY [anthology of 15 Zimbabwean poets] edited by Jane Morris

Derek Coyle reviews NEW SHADOWS by Jon Curley

Eileen Tabios engages INSIDES SHE SWALLOWED by Sasha Pimentel Chacon; EASTER SUNDAY by Barbara Jane Reyes; and SIMON J. ORTIZ; A POETIC LEGACY OF INDIGENOUS CONTINUANCE, co-edited by Susan Berry Brill de Ramirez and Evelina Zuni Lucero

Jeff Harrison engages PRAU by Jean Vengua

Marianne Villanueva reviews THE TRANSLATOR'S DIARY by Jon Pineda

Eileen Tabios engages TIME OF SKY / CASTLES IN THE AIR by Ayane Kawata, Translated by Sawako Nakayasu

Julie T. Ewald reviews TONGUE LIKE A STINGER by Juliet Cook

John Bloomberg-Rissman reviews GURLESQUE: THE NEW GRRLY, GROTESQUE, BURLESQUE POETICS co-edited by Lara Glenum and Arielle Greenberg

Eileen Tabios engages NINETEEN HOURS (RADIO EDIT) by Jim Wagner

Crag Hill reviews GREEN CAMMIE by Crysta Casey

Tom Hibbard reviews BLUE MOUNT TO 161 and NIGHTBIRDS, both by Garin Cycholl

Kristina Marie Darling reviews FABULOUS ESSENTIAL by Niina Pollari

Eileen Tabios engages A MUSICS by Carrie Hunter

Julie T. Ewald reviews MAKE BELIEVE by Thom Donovan

Eileen Tabios engages THE OTHER BLUEBOOK: ON THE HIGH SEAS OF DISCOVERY by Reme Grefalda

THE CRITIC WRITES POEMS
William Allegrezza

FOCUS ON POETS
Conversation with THOMAS FINK

LYNN BEHRENDT: An Interview

Featured Poet: ANITA MOHAN

FEATURE ARTICLE
Herman Hesse's Siddhartha: A Fictional Account of the Life of Siddhartha Gautama, the Buddha by Nicholas T. Spatafora

FROM OFFLINE TO ONLINE: REPRINTED REVIEWS
Wilfredo Pascua Sanchez reviews POEMS SINGKWENTA'Y CINCO by Alfred A. Yuson

Erika Moya reviews SLAVES TO DO THESE THINGS by Amy King

2 ADVERTISEMENTS
Hay(na)ku for Haiti--a Haiti Relief Fundraiser

Tiny Poetry Books Feeding the World...Literally!

BACK COVER
Loud Buzzing...and Snores...

↑ Index

29. amy king
Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]
Wed 5 May 2010

Recommendations for Modern American Poetry course? Goal: a balanced-listing of poets. No tokens.

Thanks in advance,

Amy

From Poetry Foundation:

Itâ€™s more important for this particular job to have someone who understands the website development process and has a grasp of emerging technologies, than to have someone whoâ€™s completely current with or even part of the poetry scene.
>>
>>http://www.poetryfoundation.org/jobs#Web-Project-Manager
>>

_____

Recent:

http://galatearesurrection14.blogspot.com/2010/04/slaves-to-do-these-things-by-amy-king.html

↑ Index

30. Matthew Landis

Re: Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]

Wed 5 May 2010

How Modern are we speaking? Do you want to focus on contemporary writers or are you also looking to include "less-token" modernists/Beats/langpo/san fran rennaissance poets etc?

I've found that the Elective Affinities blog is a very useful resource for more contemporary/younger writers.

http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/

It's a cooperative anthology of US Poetry run by a friend of mine, Carlos Soto Roman.

Here's the poets featured so far:

Kevin Varrone<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/05/kevin-varrone.html>

Debrah Morkun<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/04/debrah-morkun.html>

Bhanu Kapil<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/04/bhanu-kapil.html>

Kim Gek Lin Short<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/04/kim-gek-lin-short.html>

Samantha Giles<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/04/samantha-giles.html>

Jason Zuzga<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/04/jason-zuzga.html>

Dana Ward <http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/03/dana-ward.html>

Lauren Ireland<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/03/lauren-ireland.html>

Jen Benka <http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/03/jen-benka.html>

Ryan Eckes<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/03/ryan-eckes.html>

Rodrigo Toscano<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/03/rodrigo-toscano.html>

Magdalena Zurawski<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/02/magdalena-zurawski.html>

Julian T. Brolaski<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/02/julian-t-brolaski.html>

Jamie Townsend<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/02/jamie-townsend.html>

Laura Jaramillo<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/02/laura-jaramillo.html>

Tyrone Williams<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/02/tyrone-williams.html>

Brandon Holmquest<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/01/brandon-holmquest.html>

David Wolach<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/01/david-wolach.html>

Frank Sherlock<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/01/frank-sherlock.html>

Hailey Higdon<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2010/01/hailey-higdon.html>

Marion Bell<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2009/12/marion-bell.html>

Laura Sims<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2009/12/laura-sims.html>

Thom Donovan<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2009/12/thom-donovan.html>

Julia Bloch<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2009/12/julia-bloch.html>

CAConrad<http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/2009/12/caconrad-is-recipient-of-gil-ott-book.html>

On Wed, May 5, 2010 at 5:39 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Recommendations for Modern American Poetry course? Goal: a balanced-listing of poets. No tokens.
>
> Thanks in advance,
>
> Amy
>
> From Poetry Foundation:
>
> It's more important for this particular job to have someone who understands the website development process and has a grasp of emerging technologies, than to have someone who's completely current with or even part of the poetry scene.

> http://www.poetryfoundation.org/jobs#Web-Project-Manager
>
> ———
>
> Recent:
>
> http://galatearesurrection14.blogspot.com/2010/04/slaves-to-do-these-things-by-amy-king.html

↑ Index

31. Ruth Lepson

Re: Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]

Wed 5 May 2010

---

see paul hoover textbook & supplement it with eliz bishop & anne sexton.

On 5/5/10 5:39 PM, "amy king" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Recommendations for Modern American Poetry course? Goal: a balanced-listing of poets. No tokens.
>
> Thanks in advance,
>
> Amy
>
> From Poetry Foundation:
>
> It¹s more important for this particular job to have someone who understands the website development process and has a grasp of emerging technologies, than to have someone who¹s completely current with or even part of the poetry scene.
>
> http://www.poetryfoundation.org/jobs#Web-Project-Manager
>
> ———
>
> Recent:
>
> http://galatearesurrection14.blogspot.com/2010/04/slaves-to-do-these-things-by

> -amy-king.html

↑ Index

32. George Bowering

Re: Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]

Wed 5 May 2010

By "American," do you mean U.S.?

gb

Or do you include, say, Cuban, Chileno, Mexican poetry?

On May 5, 2010, at 2:39 PM, amy king wrote:

> Recommendations for Modern American Poetry course? Goal: a balanced-listing of poets. No tokens.
>
> Thanks in advance,
>
> Amy
>
> From Poetry Foundation:
>
> It's more important for this particular job to have someone who understands the website development process and has a grasp of emerging technologies, than to have someone who's completely current with or even part of the poetry scene.
>
> http://www.poetryfoundation.org/jobs#Web-Project-Manager
>
> _____
>
> Recent:
>
> http://galatearesurrection14.blogspot.com/2010/04/slaves-to-do-these-things-by-amy-king.html
>
> welcome.html

George Bowering, DLitt.,
Big as all indoors.

↑ Index

33. Catherine Daly

Re: Query: Modern American Poetry syllabi [+ job for Po.Found]

Wed 5 May 2010

---

how is your institution framing "modern"? what are pre-req, what is post-req? or, this being an area of interest, what course is it replacing -- either on the schedule or for your students?

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

34. Alan Sondheim

TWELVE SOLOISTS Friday Night @ Launch Pad Gallery 8:00 PM

Wed 5 May 2010

TWELVE SOLOISTS

Friday, May 7th, 8 P.M.
12 SOLOISTS
at Launch Pad Gallery
721 Franklin Ave.
Brooklyn (Crown Heights)
FREE
BYOB

Please come!
The whole to last roughly until 10:15 or so -
Each solo ten minutes in length -
Playing in Alphabetic Order (approximate times):

1. Alan Sondheim
2. Avi Fox-Rosen
3. Jacob wick
4. Jason Vance
5. Jay Foote
6. Kenny warren

intermission

7. Jesse Gold
8. josh sinton
9. JP Schlegelmilch
10. Mike Kammers
11. Myk Freedman
12. Owen Stewart-Robinson

Organized by Myk Freedman -

↑ Index

35. Jennifer Karmin

May 10: Golaski, Henchey & Karmin in Hartford

Wed 5 May 2010

MONDAY
Readings by:
Adam Golaski
Andrea Henchey
Jennifer Karmin

MONDAY, MAY 10th @ 7:30 PM
at La Paloma Sabanera
405 Capital Avenue
Hartford, Connecticut
http://lapalomacoffeehouse.com

ADAM GOLASKI, co-founder of Flim Forum Press, is the author of Worse Than Myself (2008) and Color Plates (2010). "Green," his ongoing translation of Sir Gawain & the Green Knight, is published at Open Letters Monthly, where he is also a contributing editor.

ANDREA HENCHEY was born in Hartford, Connecticut and raised in a nearby suburb. She holds a B.A. in English Literature from St. Michaelâ€™s College and a Master of Arts in Teaching from Smith College.Â After earning her degrees, Henchey taught high school English for five years and served as advisor for the schoolâ€™s literary magazine. Her work has appeared in Absent Magazine, The Onion River Review, and GHOTI Magazine. Though her travels have brought her to more exotic locales such as Nepal, Kenya, and Chile, she currently lives in Connecticut where she coordinates â€œInescapable Rhythms,â€ a poetry reading series, trains for marathons with her mutt, Bodhisattva, and bartends full-time.

JENNIFER KARMIN's text-sound epic, Aaaaaaaaaaalice, was published by Flim Forum Press in 2010. She curates the Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, community centers, and on city streets across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. A proud member of the Dusie Kollektiv, she is the author of the Dusie chapbook Evacuated: Disembodying Katrina. Walking Poem, a collaborative street project, is featured online at How2. At home in Chicago, Jennifer teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the public schools.

↑ Index

36. Sarah Rosenthal

A Community Writing Itself is out from Dalkey

Thu 6 May 2010

My collection of interviews is out from Dalkey Archive. It's called A Community Writing Itself: Conversations with Vanguard Writers or the Bay Area and features interviews with Kathleen Fraser, Michael Palmer, Nathaniel Mackey, Brenda Hillman, Camille Roy, Juliana Spahr, Truong Tran, Barbara Guest, Stephen Ratcliffe, Robert Gluck, Elizabeth Robinson, and Leslie Scalapino, as well as an introduction that places the writing within a historical context of experimentation in Bay Area writing.

Available at:
http://www.dalkeyarchive.com/book/?GCOI=15647100098560
(and Amazon)

Blurbs:
Sarah Rosenthal's interviews with some of the most engaging and important American poets of the time, all working in the Bay Area, provide vivid commentary on the state of the art and some of the most useful commentary available on the work of each individual writer. â€“ Charles Bernstein
Â
An extraordinary compendium of close engagement with the writing, ethos, and practice of a number of poets who are in situ in the Bay Area, one of the most historically fertile grounds for experimental poetry for a great number of decades. Itâ€™s where the Beat literary movement burst upon the Culture at large, and the New American Poetry and its legacies became a cohesive literary â€œoutriderâ€ force. The current poetics community is just as radically potent and individually active, forging new syntaxes and a â€œnew company of voices,â€ as Michael Palmer puts it. Considerations of history, politics, psychology, spirituality, identity, gender, media, chance operation, performance, and community keep the discourse lively and relevant. This is an invaluable resource of â€œdeep talkâ€ for writers, scholars, and fans alike. Hats off to Sarah Rosenthal who has kept track and asked the provocative questions. â€“ Anne Waldman

Â
Sarah Rosenthal's teleological study of Bay Area poetics, in the form of a liquid, prickly conversation, manages to delight its reader at the same time that it generates a new set of obsessions. A poetry "expressed in color." The moment when "what seemed impossibly strange becomes less so â€“ sometimes anyway." How an alphabet might "unbraid" itself, which isn't "metatext." It's sudden and overwhelming knowledge about what "the end of the poem" might bring. See: Agamben via Hoodoo via a "secret autobiography." In its exploration of intersections of experimental writing community, feminine monstrosity and "horny" form â€“ at least, that's where my reading ran a series of red lights â€“ Rosenthal's book is a delicious graft of thinking and writing, performed just outside the safety zone of transcription. You can't go wrong with the most intense form of banter: "turning about with," from the Latin root conversationem, "others." â€“ Bhanu Kapil
Â
What Steve Abbott and Bruce Boone achieved with the Left/Write Unity Conference in early eighties San Francisco, bringing together differing groups of poets, Sarah Rosenthal thankfully reenacts in her collection of interviews with Bay Area writers. In A Community Writing Itself twelve poets serving various poetics, from Language writing to New Narrative, are allowed to break consensus regarding the notion of a singular development of shared ambitions. As approaches to the politics of writing are individually charted, connections and communities unfold. If one is interested in the evolution of American poetry since 1950, it is necessary to engage these conversations. â€“ Claudia Rankine

↑ Index

37. Paul Siegell

wild life rifle fire > a new review

Thu 6 May 2010

"A stunningly beautiful work"

A huge THANK YOU to GEOF HUTH (dbqp) for his new review of wild life rifle fire: http://dbqp.blogspot.com/2010/04/riflefire.html

"This is a book examining language, finding the tricks in the language that the language couldn't know it had."

Thanks, Geof!

Yours,
Paul
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/

_
Friday, May 7th: Join me at The Soundry in Vienna, Virginia
w/ TONY MANCUS and DANIEL COLLINS... YES!

"E.T. POEM HOME": http://bit.ly/cBSfXV

↑ Index

38. Deborah Poe

Zinc Bar, NYC on May 9th: Marcella Durand and Deborah Poe

Thu 6 May 2010

Marcella Durand and Deborah Poe read at Zinc Bar on Sunday, May 9th at 6:30PM. Zinc Bar is located at 82 West 3rd Street, Greenwich Village. * * Marcella Durand's recent books are Traffic & Weather, AREA, and The Anatomy of Oil. Her poems and essays have appeared in Conjunctions, The Canary, Denver Quarterly, NYFA Current, and other journals. She has written and presented on the intersections of poetry with ecology and astronomy, and is the 2009 Poetry Artist Fellowship recipient of the New York Foundation for the Arts.

Deborah Poe is the author of the poetry collections Elements (Stockport Flats Press 2010) and Our Parenthetical Ontology (CustomWords 2008). Deborah's writing is forthcoming or has recently appeared in journals such as Sidebrow, Colorado Review, Ploughshares, Filter Literary Journal, A Sing Economy and Denver Quarterly. For more information about Deborah, visit www.deborahpoe.com.

Facebook Event page:
http://www.facebook.com/home.php?#!/event.php?eid=119495051408548&ref=ts

↑ Index

39. William Slaughter

Notice: Mudlark

Thu 6 May 2010

New and On View: Mudlark FLASH NO. 56 (2010)

Animal Outtakes by Chad Faries

Osama | Opposition Dog | Mule Maneuvers | Horse Latitudes

Chad Faries has published poems, essays, photographs, interviews, and creative non-fiction in Exquisite Corpse, Mudfish, New American Writing, Barrow Street, The Hawai'i Review, Afterimage, Post Road, and others. The Border Will Be Soon was the winner of the Emergency Press open book competition in 2005. The Book of Knowledge, a poetry collection whose design and contents were inspired by a 1911 children's encyclopedia, is being published by Vulgar Marsala Press. And a memoir, Some Houses: A Faries' Tale, is in manuscript. Faries has been a Fulbright Fellow at Etovos Lorand University in Budapest, Hungary, and teaches, at present, at Savannah State University in Savannah, Georgia.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

40. Rob McLennan
12 or 20 (small press) questions
Thu 6 May 2010

---

with Jenny Penberthy, on The Capilano Review; http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/05/12-or-20-small-press-questions-jenny.html

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

41. David Kirschenbaum
Exhibit at Boog Fest's Small, Small Press Fair
Thu 6 May 2010

Hi all,

Boog City would like to invite you to exhibit at our 7th annual small, small press fair (with indie records and crafts, too).

The fair will once again span two days, Sat. Sept. 25-Sun. Sept. 26, and be held at Brooklyn’s Unnameable Books (600 Vanderbilt Ave.) in their spacious backyard. The fair will take place during the 4th annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival.

The fair will open on Saturday with three hours of performances by authors from each of the tablers.

Tables are $30 for the fair, $20 dollars if you bring your own bridge table (up to 3’ x 3’) with a portion of the proceeds going to help Unnameable Books.

Door charge for attendees is by donation.

Please email me to reserve your table and schedule your reader. We look forward to the fair once again being a warm gathering with wonderful books, poetry, music, and other items from around our creative community.

You can reach me at this email address, [redacted].

This year’s fair will feature readings, musical performances, poets in conversation, and a lively panel.

as ever,
David

P.S. Apologies if you received more than one copy of this email.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

42. Regina Pinto
"Beware of the RaGhost"
Thu 6 May 2010

BEWARE OF THE RAGHOST
by Regina Pinto, preface by Martha Deed

http://arteonline.arq.br/netbooks/

Electronic Nonsense Artist's "Netbook" inspired by Lewis Carroll and by the words: CREAM COLORED BUNGALOW, RAREBIT, GHOST, SCUFF, MOCK, PASTURES, BACKLASH, MIDNIGHT, FLATTENING, FOLIAGE, INVOCATION,

BLISTERED, MIRROR, BOISTEROUSLY (suggested by the call done by Millie Niss and Martha Deed / october - 2009 at http://erewhon2.tumblr.com/)

CONTENTS:

MOTS Valise,

MOTS NONgame,

MOTS Poem,

MOTS Sound

& MOT X PAROLE

Tested on Mozilla Firefox & Google Chrome, screen resolution 1280 x 800 px

Have fun,

Regina

↑ Index

43. Hoa Nguyen

(no subject)

Thu 6 May 2010

---

http://sites.google.com/site/kmqptcsh/fsngijn _____ The New Busy is not the too busy. Combine all your e-mail accounts with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multiaccount&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_4

↑ Index

44. sandra de 1913

1913 a journal of forms' Issue 4 is here!

Thu 6 May 2010

Please check out the newest new issue of 1913 a journal of forms #4<http://www.journal1913.org/issue4.html>...hot off the roller!

$13 available for purchase via PayPal on 1913's website <http://www.journal1913.org/>or via Small Press Distribution.<http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/1548991404/1913-a-journal-of-forms-issue-4.aspx>

A faux-bois cover a la Picasso's 1913 papier colle & Duchamp's 1913 bicycle wheel inset hug 300 pages of celebrated new work by:

Pierre Albert-Jourdan translated by John Taylor

David Annwn

Louis Armand

Cherise Bacalski

Meg Barboza

Chris Bolin

Jules Boykoff

Joel Chace

Julia Cohen

Kevin Colpean

Jon Cotner & Andy Fitch

Bruce Covey

Alejandro Miguel Justino Crawford

Catherine Daly

Jordan Davis

Christopher DeWeese

Biswamit Dwibedy

Judson Evans

Robert Fernandez

Brad Flis

J A Frazee

Arielle Greenberg & Rachel Zucker

Barbara Henning

Kevin Holden

Karla Kelsey

Amir Kenan

Daniel Khalastchi

Adrian Kien & Kelly Packer

Kim Koga

Erik Leavitt

Sandra Liu

Megan London

Alistair McCartney

Aaron McCollough

Susan Maxwell

Richard Meier

Philip Metres

Albert Mobilio

Sara Mumolo

Mel Nichols

Linnea Ogden

Tom Orange

Caryl Pagel

Alejandra Pizarnik translated by Jason Stumpf

Srikanth Reddy

Broc Rossell

Shya Scanlon

Michael Schiavo

Evie Shockley

Will Smiley

Brian Kim Stefans

Adam Strauss

Mathias Svalina

Jennifer Tatum-Cotamagana

Dan Thomas-Glass

Edwin Torres

Rodrigo Toscano

Marina Tsvetaeva translated by James Stotts

Sara Veglahn

Catherine Wagner

Diane Wald

Lynn Xu

John Yau

Karena Youtz
--
xs,
Sandra 1913.
l'editrice de 1913, Sandra Doller (née Miller)
http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/sdoller/sdoller.htm
http://omnidawn.wordpress.com/
*
Why 1913? Follow us on Twitter <http://twitter.com/1913Press> 1913 Who? Join us on Facebook<http://www.facebook.com/group.php?gid=102250266481699>
*
NEW! from 1913:
1913 a journal of forms, Issue 4
"Ozalid" by Biswamit Dwibedy
"READ" 1913's annual translation anthology from the Tamaas seminars in Paris
http://www.journal1913.org
*
Forthcoming from 1913:
"Hg-the liquid" by Ward Tietz
Two collaborations by Mendi+Keith Obadike
"Home/Birth: A Poemic" by Arielle Greenberg & Rachel Zucker
"Wonderbender" by Diane Wald
http://www.1913press.org

↑ Index

45. steve dalachinsky

Re: new chapbook by yuko otomo other books by her upon request

Thu 6 May 2010

---

a second book by yuko otomo just out on the new creature press a lovely box of poems edition of 50 back channel for info 15 including postage

On Thu, 29 Apr 2010 11:39:01 +0530 steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>
writes:
> there's a lovely little book by artist and poet yuko otomo > on propaganda press -
> a sunday afternoon in the isle of museum cover by the author > poems about paintings and photos at the MET - $6

>
> availble through the author - back channel or through > alt-current.com
>
>
>

↑ Index

46. Poetry Project

Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 6 May 2010

Here¹s what¹s coming up at The Poetry Project:

Friday, May 7, 10 PM
Will Edmiston & Anna Vitale

Will Edmiston is a poet and librarian living in Brooklyn. His writing can be found in The Tiny, the Agriculture Reader, EOAGH, The Boog Reader 4, and The Bridge. He serves as the volunteer archivist at The Poetry Project.

Anna Vitale is the author of Breaststa, a long poem published by Mondo Bummer (2010). Her writing has appeared in Model Homes, Shifter, and With + Stand, and more is forthcoming in Vanitas and The West Wind Review. A freeform DJ at WCBN-FM Ann Arbor, she also helped start the online audio publication textsound.

Monday, May 10, 8 PM
Ish Klein & Farid Matuk

Ish Klein¹s book, Union! came out April 2009 through the Canarium Press. Her poems have been published in The Canary, Gare du Nord, The Hat magazine, X-connect, Bridge, Spork and are online. She also makes movies and lives in Philadelphia.

Farid Matuk is the author of Is it the King? (Effing, 2006). His poems have appeared most recently in The Boston Review, Barrelhouse, Matchbook, and Big Bridge and are forthcoming in Typesetter. Matuk¹s translations from Spanish have appeared in Bombay Gin, Translation Review, and Kadar Koli. His essays and reviews have appeared in Cross-Cultural Poetics and Sentence: a Journal of Prose Poetics, among others. His work is also included in the anthology Between Heaven and Texas (University of Texas Press) and will appear in the forthcoming anthology What¹s Your Exit? (Word Riot Press). His collection, This Isa Nice Neighborhood, will be released by Letter Machine Editions in the fall of 2010. Matuk lives in Dallas with the poet Susan Briante where together with the nonprofit WordSpace they host readings for traveling authors.

Wednesday, May 12, 8 PM
Ray DiPalma & Michael Lally

Ray DiPalma¹s recent books include The Ancient Use of Stone (Seismicity Editions, 2009), Pensieri (Echo Park Press, 2009), Further Apocrypha (Pie in the Sky Press, 2009), L¹Usage ancien de la pierre (Éditions Grèges, 2007), Quatre Poèmes (Éditions Comp¹Act, 2006) (both books translated into French by Vincent Dussol), and Caper, Volume I. (ML & NLF, 2006). Among his earlier collections are Numbers and Tempers, Le Tombeau de Reverdy, Provocations, Hôtel des Ruines, Gnossiennes, and Letters. He lives in New York City and teaches at the School of Visual Arts.

Michael Lally has published 27 books, including: March 18, 2003 (Libellum and Charta Presses, with illustrations by Alex Katz); It¹s Not Nostalgia (winner of an American Book Award) and It Takes One To Know One (both from Black Sparrow Press); Cant Be Wrong (Coffee House Press), winner of the 1997 Oakland Pen Josephine Miles Award for Excellence in Literature; Hollywood Magic (Little Caesar); Attitude (Hanging Loose); and the 1970s ³underground bestseller² Rocky Dies Yellow (Blue Wind Press). Lally has worked at a variety of jobs, from college teacher to limousine driver, reviewing books for The Washington Post and The Village Voice, to screenwriting (e.g. narration for Drugstore Cowboy, co-wrote Fogbound, the Thessalaski International Film Festival award winner for 2003) and TV and film acting (e.g., played an artist on NYPD Blue, a psycho detective on JAG, a crusty cavalry captain on Deadwood, a detective in Basic Instinct, Sykes in White Fang, the voice of ³Sparks² in Cool World, et al.) Since 2006, he has hosted a blog called Lally¹s Alley that has become a popular forum for his eclectic interests‹poetry, music, politics, art, movies, books.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

47. Dan Wilcox
Walt Whitman Birthday Reading, Albany, NY
Sat 8 May 2010

Celebrate the Birthday of Walt Whitman

at the
Robert Burns Statue Washington Park, Albany, NY

A reading of “Song of Myself”
by local poets & other citizens

Monday, May 31, 2010
6:00 PM
rain or shine
free

presented by the Poetry Motel Foundation,
the Hudson Valley Writers Guild, & Capital Pride 2010 (Capital Pride 2010 is produced by the Capital District Gay & Lesbian Community Council)

(for information call [redacted])

↑ Index

48. Adam Fieled
Three "Held" Links
Sat 8 May 2010

Three links for different sections of "Held," the sequel to my Blazevox book "Chimes."

Oranges and Sardines (pp 52-55):
http://www.issuu.com/didimenendez/docs/osjune2010.

Narrative Discontinuities:
http://recycledkarmapress.synthasite.com/resources/NarrativeDiscontinuitiesAnthologyRecycledKarmaPress2010.pdf.

Anything Anymore Anywhere (print only):
http://www.lulu.com/content/paperback-book/anything-anymore-anywhere-spring-2010/8488141.

Many Thanks,
Adam

↑ Index

49. Cara Benson
Pacific Northwest trip
Sat 8 May 2010

Readying for a Pacific Northwest trip. Oh, the r Poets! Listees...

Readying for a Pacific Northwest trip. Oh, the real world!

May 11 - 13 in San Francisco.
May 11 at 7pm: Reading at City Lights with Kate Durbin and Sarah Louise Green.
http://www.citylights.com/bookstore/?fa=event&event_id=941

May 13,14 in Olympia, Washington.
May 13: Reading at David Wolach's amazing Press Series at Evergreen State College.
http://davidwolach.blogspot.com/2010/05/press-event-cara-benson-evergreen-may.html

May 14 - 17 in Portland, OR.
May 16: Reading at the collectively run Spare Room with David Wolach and Jen Coleman.
http://www.flim.com/spareroom/

If you're in those areas on those dates, come out! Say hi. Read me some of your poems on a streetcorner...

comrade in poems,
Cara Benson

---

http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

↑ Index

50. Country Valley
New from Country Valley Press
Sat 8 May 2010

New from Country Valley Press:

Empty Hands Broadside #17 - ONE PHASE OF THE HUNT by Andrew Schelling Folded broadside of 16 poems. Limited to 100 copies. $1 or $3 signed, postpaid.

Send check or money order to:

Country Valley Press
Mark Kuniya
P.O. Box 1271
Zephyr Cove, NV 89448

Information about past issues or subscriptions to the series can be viewed at http://web.mac.com/countryvalley

↑ Index

51. Michael
Anne Valley-Fox, David Meltzer and Michael Rothenberg read at Bird and Beckett
Sat 8 May 2010

Anne Valley-Fox, David Meltzer and Michael Rothenberg reading

2pm at Bird & Beckett Books 653 Chenery Street
in San Francisco's Glen Park neighborhood, [redacted] -- www.birdbeckett.com

Mere air, these words, but delicious to hear... Sappho, 7th century BC

Anne Valley-Fox reads poems at 2 pm, from her new book, How Shadows Are Bundled (University of New Mexico Press, 2009) with confreres David Meltzer and Michael Rothenberg. David & Michael, traveling by van crosscountry last fall in their "Rockpile" odyssey that took them to a dozen cities and dozens of poetry/music conclaves, hooked up with their long-lost friend Anne Valley-Fox in Santa Fe, remaking connections first formed four decades ago in old beat North Beach...

Here's what you'll read in Anne's bio if you check out her website: "Born in Paterson, New Jersey, Anne Valley-Fox was raised in Santa Monica, California and schooled at University of California at Berkeley during the Free Speech Movement. There, she began writing poetry in classrooms with Josephine Miles and visiting poet James Tate; in her senior year she was awarded the Eisner Prize in Literature. She cut her poetic teeth on the San Francisco poetry scene for several years before moving to northern New Mexico with her first-born son, Ezra. Her poetry books are Sending the Body Out, Fish Drum 15, Point of No Return and How Shadows Are Bundled. Her nonfiction books are Telling Your Story (with Sam Keen) and Outlaws and Desperados: A New Mexico Federal Writers Project Book (with Ann Lacy, co-editor).

Paterson... FSM... Miles & Tate... New Mexico... son Ezra!
Whatever are we in for??!!
Join us to find out...

Oh yes, and don't forget that David Meltzer & Michael Rothenberg, formidable talents both, are along for the ride... Saddle up!

check these websites:
www.annevalleyfox.com -- www.meltzerville.com -- www.bigbridge.org/bioroth.htm

↑ Index

52. Daniel Godston
World Listening Day
Sat 8 May 2010

You are invited to participate in the first World Listening Day, which happens on Sunday, July 18, 2010. The purposes of World Listening Day are:

· to celebrate the practice of listening as it relates to the world around us, environmental awareness, and acoustic ecology

· to raise awareness about issues related to the World Soundscape Project, World Listening Project, World Forum for Acoustic Ecology, and individual and group efforts to creatively explore phonography

· to design and implement educational initiatives which explore these concepts and practices

July 18 was chosen as the date for World Listening Day because it is the birthday of the Canadian composer R. Murray Schafer. Schafer is one of the founders of the Acoustic Ecology movement. The World Soundscape Project, which he directed, is an important organization which has inspired a lot of activity in this field, and his book Soundscape: The Tuning of the World helped to define many of the terms and background behind the acoustic ecology movement.

Here are some individuals and organizations that have committed to participating in World Listening Day:

Organizations

American Society for Acoustic Ecology

Midwest Society for Acoustic Ecology

“Sounds Like Radio” (WDBX FM)

World Listening Project

Individuals and Projects

Hasan Abdur-Razzaq (Columbus, OH)

Dave Armstrong (Carbondale, IL)

Steve Barsotti (Seattle, WA)

Rebecca Caines (Guelph, Canada)

Chad Clark (Chicago Phonography)

Eva Fahle-Clouts (Charmouth, UK)

Maile Colbert (Alaska) – Auroral Borealis listening group

Gerard Cox (Columbus, OH)

Björn Eriksson (Sweden)

Marcos Fernandes (Japan)

Dan Godston (Chicago, USA)

Bernie Krause (Glen Ellen, CA)

Norman Long (Chicago)

Michael Noble (Seoul, Korea)

John Owens (Miami, FL)

Harry Ross (London) – Fruit for the Apocalypse
<http://www.fruit-for-the-apocalypse.eu/marmalade.htm>

Kamal Sabran (Ipoh, Malaysia)

Vijayendra Sekhon (India)

Heather Spence (Mexico)

Carl Stone (Los Angeles)

Adam Smith (Columbus, OH)

Fereshteh Toosi (Chicago)

Sarah Weaver (New York)

…more info TBA

Here is how you can participate in World Listening Day:

- You can set aside some time when you pay attention to your soundscape.
- You can organize a listening party when people play field recordings.
- You can organize a soundwalk.
- Other possibilities…

Please email [redacted] if you would like to organize or participate in an event happening on World Listening Day. Updates regarding more events and participating individuals will be announced soon.

Links:

http://www.worldlisteningproject.org/

http://interact.uoregon.edu/medialit/wfae/home/

http://mwsae.org/

http://www.sfu.ca/~truax/wsp.html

↑ Index

53. Daniel Godston
Ekphrastic Nexus
Sat 8 May 2010

Ekphrastic Nexus: Visual Art and Creative Writing

Friday, June 25 (6 p.m.) at Chicago Urban Art Society

You are invited to attend "Ekphrastic Nexus: Visual Art and Creative Writing," which includes a panel discussion, followed by performances. This event is part of the "Studio Chicago" calendar of events. There is a suggested donation, and refreshments will be provided.

The panel involves writers and visual artists about text-image collaborations, as well as writers who have gotten inspiration from visual art, and it explores ways writers make connections with art and the visual artistic process, furthering the continuum of the artist's studio as school, gallery, political stance, sanctuary, and muse.

Contemporary writers and artists need a clean, well lit room of their own to create. Whether physical as a cabin in the woods or ubiquitous as online presence, the studio matters to Chicago culture makers because of the many out-of-time or out-of-ethics rituals it suggests. Making art doesn't have to be political: this freedom is what makes art radically political.

We will discuss details about the spaces in which we work, whether those spaces are separate industrial studio space, home offices, or other kinds of spaces. Also, the nature of the work that happen in those studio spaces relates to how the spaces themselves are set up, whether the work involves what is done in solitude, or with collaborations (in physical and virtual spaces). We will consider how Chicago institutions and colloquia opportunities might support Chicago artists and writers.

Participants include Annie Heckman (Owner + Director, StepSister Press), Eric Elshtain (Editor of Beard of Bees), Krista Franklin (writer, artist, and educator, Kathryn Born (editor of Chicago Art Magazine), Valerie Wallace (writer and educator), and Gene Tanta (writer, visual artist, and educator), moderated by Dan Godston (writer, musician, and educator).

Chicago Urban Art Society (CUAS)

exhibition + creative-use space

2229 South Halsted Street

Chicago, IL 60608

Links:

Annie Heckman: http://www.annieheckman.com/

Beard of Bees: http://beardofbees.com

Borderbend Arts Collective: http://www.borderbend.org

Chicago Art Magazine: http://chicagoartmagazine.com/

Chicago Urban Art Society: http://www.chicagourbanartsociety.org/

Gene Tanta: http://genetanta.cgpublisher.com/biography.html

Krista Franklin: http://www.kristafranklin.com/

StepSister Press: http://stepsisterpress.com/

Studio Chicago: http://www.studiochicago.org/

Valerie Wallace: http://www.pw.org/content/valerie_wallace

↑ Index

54. Eleni Stecopoulos

May 20: SUBTLE INTELLIGENT BODIES w/ Beth Murray, Bhanu Kapil, Margit Galanter

Sun 9 May 2010

PLEASE FORWARD:

The Poetry Center
presents

SUBTLE INTELLIGENT BODIES

Talks/performances
by artists and holistic practitioners

Margit Galanter
Bhanu
Kapil
Beth Murray

with curator Eleni Stecopoulos and in conversation with the audience

The Poetics of Healing: Creative Investigations in Art, Medicine, and Somatic Practice http://www.sfsu.edu/~poetry/eventCalendar.html#HEALING

• Thursday, May 20, 2010
7:00 pm @
Subterranean Arthouse, 2179 Bancroft Way, Berkeley $10 ($5 low income)
All programs free to SFSU students and Poetry Center Members
No one turned away for lack of funds

http://subterraneanarthouse.org/

We
hope to explore:

• how bodywork or healing practice informs creative practice, and vice versa
• the languages of specific holistic systems
• diagnosis, reading the body, reading with the body
•
non-verbal poetics and intelligence • embodiment and performance
•
inter-species care
• healing and time

Biographies:

MARGIT GALANTER is a dance artist, Guild Certified Feldenkrais Practitionercm, and qigong practitioner. Her fascination with the construction and value of movement has drawn her to embodied research and performance for decades. Margit has presented and taught extensively around the U.S. and has an MA in Movement Research and Practice from NYU. She co-curates and founded SEEDS Festival, an international arts and ecology experiment, and recently finished co-directing Earthdance, a dance retreat center in Western Massachusetts. Margit's practice, Physical Intelligence Life Art, is based in Oakland. Margit looks at how physical poetics effect the live/performance process. For this event, she will investigate meridian lines and speak about their relationships to engagement, presence, and breath, inviting the audience to join her in movement and in reading the inscriptions created. PI practice: www.physicalintelligence.org // arts site: www.margitg.wordpress.com.

BHANU KAPIL is a British-raised Indian writer who lives now in Colorado. She teaches at Naropa University and Goddard College, and is the author of four full-length collections of poetry/prose: "The Vertical Interrogation of Strangers" (Kelsey Street Press, 2001), "Incubation: a space for monsters" (Leon Works, 2006), "humanimal [a project for future children]" (Kelsey Street Press, 2009), and "Schizophrene" (forthcoming from Nightboat Books, 2011). Since 1998, she has maintained a private practice as an integrative bodyworker, combining neuromuscular and Ayurvedic therapies. As a writer, she is interested in questions of trans-generational trauma--its processes and treatment--as they unfold for immigrant communities. For this event, she will attempt to speak on the role of trance and hallucination in the healing of war-time violence, and the violence that comes after that. How might we open the body--in a text as on "the table"-- to a different time?

BETH MURRAY has a homeopathy practice for people and animals. About her book The Island, published by Second Story Books, Laynie Brown wrote, "As poetic healer, Murray is adept at the Doolittle-esque notion of conversing with animals and elements." When Beth got her masters in performance art in the early 90's, her pieces examined the intersections of animal and human consciousness. As a homeopath, she has continued this focus. In her practice with humans, she utilizes a fascinating new method pioneered by Rajan Sankaran that taps the capacity of language and gesture to reveal the "non-human song" of each person's state. Her life work is to develop a method to hear the specific "song" of non-verbal beings. Last week, she was lucky enough to have attended the birth of a new eland at the zoo. Her websites are www.myanimalhomeopath.com and www.wholehomeopathy.com.

ELENI STECOPOULOS is a poet and independent scholar. She is the author of Armies of Compassion (Palm Press, 2010). With the Poetry Center, she received a two-year grant from the Creative Work Fund, through which she curates the Poetics of Healing series and is writing a creative-critical book that draws upon the series programs as live research. She is at work as well on a book-length poem, "Earth Also is a Private Language," which investigates the history and mythology of her grandfather’s hometown on the island of Evvia (Euboea), its geothermal springs and hydrotherapy traditions, and their relationship to ancient dream incubation. She has taught at several universities in the U.S. and abroad, and currently serves on the faculty of the Language and Thinking Program at Bard College.

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

55. Jason Nelson
sydney's siberia and other creatures
Sun 9 May 2010

A newly finished trilogy of digital artworks/poems inspired by Australian locales to spread out across the net. And of course I adore those who critique and/or send to anyone everywhere.

T: sydneyâ€™s siberia
D: an interactive and infinitely zooming digital poem http://www.secrettechnology.com/sydney/

T: Birds Still Warm from Flying
D: an interactive/re-creatable poetry cube http://www.secrettechnology.com/ausco/poecubic2.html

T: wittenoom and the cancerous breeze
D: digital poem created from ten sections http://www.secrettechnology.com/wittenoom/starthere.html

again and as always you rock and cheers, Jason Nelson

↑ Index

56. Carrie Etter
Infinite Difference appreciatively reviewed
Sun 9 May 2010

I'm happy to say that a thoughtful, appreciative review of Infinite Difference: Other Poetries by UK Women Poets appears in Stride Magazine, written by Steve Spence: http://www.stridemagazine.co.uk/Stride%20mag2010/april%202010/Women.spence.htm .

Perhaps this will persuade those of you who haven't yet bought the anthology to do so? It's available at SPD here:

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781848610996/infinite-difference-other-poetries-by-uk-women-poets.aspx .

By the way, regarding the note at the end of the review about Helen Macdonald, she was repeatedly solicited, but never sent any work.

Carrie
http://carrieetter.blogspot.com

↑ Index

57. Vernon Frazer
NEW VERNON FRAZER VIDEO: IMPROVISATIONS (Sections 1 and 2)
Sun 9 May 2010

---

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WKBLb6wqXNY

↑ Index

58. Cara Benson
Open Letter to Barack Obama
Sun 9 May 2010

I am tutoring Afghan Women Writers, and put the call to
Dear Buffs,

I am tutoring Afghan Women Writers, and put the call to them to write to Obama. Here is a response:

http://www.awwproject.org/2010/05/dear-president-obama/#comments

Please help to spread this far and wide.

Thanks,
Cara

_____
http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

↑ Index

59. Cara Benson
Re: Open Letter to Barack Obama
Sun 9 May 2010

---

http://www.awwproject.org/2010
Sorry folks, here's the better link:

http://www.awwproject.org/2010/05/dear-president-obama/

_____
http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

_____
From: Cara Benson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Sun, May 9, 2010 6:20:19 PM
Subject: Open Letter to Barack Obama

Dear Buffs,

I am tutoring Afghan Women Writers, and put the call to them to write to Obama. Here is a response:

http://www.awwproject.org/2010/05/dear-president-obama/#comments

Please help to spread this far and wide.

Thanks,
Cara

_____
http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

↑ Index

60. Sarah Rosenthal
A Community - Redux
Mon 10 May 2010

I'm re-posting this to try to correct the ugly formatting problem that happened the first time around. --Sarah

My collection of interviews is out from Dalkey Archive. It's called A Community Writing Itself: Conversations with Vanguard Writers or the Bay Area and features interviews with Kathleen Fraser, Michael Palmer, Nathaniel Mackey, Brenda Hillman, Camille Roy, Juliana Spahr, Truong Tran, Barbara Guest, Stephen Ratcliffe, Robert Gluck, Elizabeth Robinson, and Leslie Scalapino, as well as an introduction that places the writing within a historical context of experimentation in Bay Area writing.

Available at dalkeyarchive.com and amazon.com

Blurbs:
Sarah Rosenthal's interviews with some of the most engaging and important American poets of the time, all working in the Bay Area, provide vivid

commentary on the state of the art and some of the most useful commentary available on the work of each individual writer. â€“ Charles Bernstein

An extraordinary compendium of close engagement with the writing, ethos, and practice of a number of poets who are in situ in the Bay Area, one of the most historically fertile grounds for experimental poetry for a great number of decades. Itâ€™s where the Beat literary movement burst upon the Culture at large, and the New American Poetry and its legacies became a cohesive literary â€œoutriderâ€ force. The current poetics community is just as radically potent and individually active, forging new syntaxes and a â€œnew company of voices,â€ as Michael Palmer puts it. Considerations of history, politics, psychology, spirituality, identity, gender, media, chance operation, performance, and community keep the discourse lively and relevant. This is an invaluable resource of â€œdeep talkâ€ for writers, scholars, and fans alike. Hats off to Sarah Rosenthal who has kept track and asked the provocative questions. â€“ Anne Waldman

Sarah Rosenthal's teleological study of Bay Area poetics, in the form of a liquid, prickly conversation, manages to delight its reader at the same time that it generates a new set of obsessions. A poetry "expressed in color." The moment when "what seemed impossibly strange becomes less so â€“ sometimes anyway." How an alphabet might "unbraid" itself, which isn't "metatext." It's sudden and overwhelming knowledge about what "the end of the poem" might bring. See: Agamben via Hoodoo via a "secret autobiography." In its exploration of intersections of experimental writing community, feminine monstrosity and "horny" form â€“ at least, that's where my reading ran a series of red lights â€“ Rosenthal's book is a delicious graft of thinking and writing, performed just outside the safety zone of transcription. You can't go wrong with the most intense form of banter: "turning about with," from the Latin root conversationem, "others." â€“ Bhanu Kapil

What Steve Abbott and Bruce Boone achieved with the Left/Write Unity Conference in early eighties San Francisco, bringing together differing groups of poets, Sarah Rosenthal thankfully reenacts in her collection of interviews with Bay Area writers. In A Community Writing Itself twelve poets serving various poetics, from Language writing to New Narrative, are allowed to break consensus regarding the notion of a singular development of shared ambitions. As approaches to the politics of writing are individually charted, connections and communities unfold. If one is interested in the evolution of American poetry since 1950, it is necessary to engage these conversations. â€“ Claudia Rankine

↑ Index

61. Chris Jones
Re: Art games
Mon 10 May 2010

On Mon, 2009-12-21 at 16:46 -0800, Jim Andrews wrote:
> 'virtuality' doesn't necessarily have anything to do with computers. we all > have our virtual worlds inside our heads and have had for a very long time.
> so what happens to the assertion, if you replace the word "programmability"
> with "virtuality" is you have an assertion that is false, murat.

Jim, I sent a back list query more on interaction. If you wish to discuss openly, okay be me. You have identified something I can't yet be confident about.... best wishes, Chris Jones.

↑ Index

62. Hailey Higdon
accepting work from emerging female writers
Mon 10 May 2010

WHAT TO US (press) now accepting submissions for all types of work (poetry, fiction or any hybrid in between). Deadline for submissions is June 1, 2010. Work should be 10 pages or less.

For this book, it is important that work be:

1. by a woman writer
2. by a writer without a significant number of chapbook publications or without a book publication.

Please send a small card with submission telling US something about you. Submissions should be sent in hard copy to: Hailey Higdon @ 2205 E Boston St, Philadelphia, PA 19125 for further info, see: www.whattous.blogspot.com or the original call for work below....

THANKS!

hailey higdon

WHAT TO US (press) is looking for a new species relationship, ie MUTUALISM.

Like a cow and celluose-digesting microbes. (Just like that, actually.)

MEANING: WHAT TO US is seeking a new book to make.

In this instance, here are the pieces that would make it a whole:

WHAT TO US is looking for work...

by a WOMAN;
by a writer without a significant number of chapbook publications or without a larger book publication;
and looking for a smaller work, 10 pages or less.

The work can be POETRY, FICTION, or any happy IN BETWEEN you think is worth me working hours to make into a tiny book.

Work can be sent in hard copy to Hailey Higdon @ 2205 E Boston Street, Philadelphia, PA 19125. Also, I like little cards. Can you send me a little card telling me something about you? It can be anything you want really, just something.

Deadline for submissions is June 1, 2010. Tell your friends, tell your family, tell the celluose-digesting microbes that the cow is eating grass now!

↑ Index

63. Philip Meersman

BruSlam invitation: May 21st - David Troch & Angela Rawlings - GalerY (near KK @VUB), Triomflaan, Brussels

Mon 10 May 2010

BruSlam 21/05/2010
David Troch & Angela Rawlings
GalerY (near KK @VUB)
Triomflaan, Brussels start: 20h inscriptions: 19.30

Waar/ou/where

@GalerY Gebouw Y'
Campus Etterbeek
Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB)
Triomflaan - toegang 6 (near the KultuurKafe)
1050 Brussel

Who/Qui/Wie

David Troch: David Troch(° Bonheiden, 1977) heeft wel eens een hekel aan hoofdletters; won o.a. de Jules van Campenhoutprijs voor poëzie en de Gerard Vermeerschprijs voor monologen; en publiceerde o.a. in Snoecks, Het Liegend Konijn, Poëziekrant, De Brakke Hond, Deus Ex Machina en de Amerikaanse bloemlezing A Generation Defining Itself; bracht o.a. laat[avond]taal op papier en o.a. Een doosje dolle dialogen op podiumplanken; werkte mee aan Meander, was redactielid van Gierik & Nieuw Vlaams Tijdschrift en stond mee aan de wieg van Kluger Hans http://www.davidtroch.be Angela Rawlings: a.rawlings is a Canadian poet and performer. Her first book, Wide slumber for lepidopterists (Coach House Books, 2006), received the Alcuin Award for Book Design. She is the recipient of the bpNichol Award for Distinction in Writing and the Chalmers Arts Fellowship. In 2010, rawlings divides her time between Belgium and Iceland, where she is developing three new manuscripts and working in voice and movement collaboration with Maja Jantar and the Logos Foundation's robotic orchestra.

Free stage / open podium/ scene ouverte

--
Philip Meersman
!!! New Address
Tentoonstellingslaan 418, bus 46
1090 Jette
Belgium
tel[redacted]
www.myspace.com/spooninmybrain
www.facebook.com/spooninmybrain
www.youtube.com/spooninmybrain
skype: Spooninmybrain
[redacted]
www.poetasdelmundo.com/verInfo_europa.asp?ID=4337
05/05/10-09/05/10: Literature festival of Tallinn, Estonia (
http://www.headread.ee/)
21/05/10: BruSlam, GalerY, Bxl, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)
21/07/10: BruSlam, CBK Slam voorronde Gent with special guest Jaan Malin, HotsyTotsy, Ghent, BE (http://bruslam.over-blog.com)

↑ Index

64. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City and Fests Need Intern
Mon 10 May 2010

Hi all,

I'm looking for an intern who could assist with two big festivals Boog is a part of in the coming months, a Boston-area poetry marathon from Fri. July 30-Sun. Aug. 1, organized by Jim Behrle, John Mulrooney, and myself, and the fourth annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival, from Fri. Sept. 24-Tues. Sept. 28.

If any of you profs might have a student who they think would be game to help with some key organizational duties, please lemme know.

thanks!
david

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

65. amy king
[¡ POETRY !] PLEASE POST YOUR POEM FOR THE JUNE GOODREADS' CONTEST!
Mon 10 May 2010

Goodreads and the Â¡Poetry! group have partnered to create

Goodreads and the Â¡Poetry! group have partnered to create a contest in order to select a new poem each month for our newsletter.

1. Post your best poem (one poem per person) in this folder (as a "comment")
CLICK HERE to post your poem (do not send it to me!)-- http://www.goodreads.com/topic/show/332809-please-post-your-poem-for-the-june-goodreads-newsletter-contest

2. Goodreads and our three judges, Wendy Babiak, Andrew Haley, and Ruth Bavetta, will select six poems as finalists to be voted on by the Goodreads community.

3. Â¡Poetry! group members will vote for the poem they like best (one vote per member). The poem with the most votes will be published in the Goodreadsâ€™ newsletter â€“ distributed each month to more than 2.5 million people!

 If you have been a finalist more than three times in a year, you may not enter a poem for one year.

Good luck & please post your best work!

Thanks,

Amy King
Â¡Poetry! Moderator
http://amyking.org

↑ Index

66. Alan Sondheim
*thinking about Second Life - please comment **
Mon 10 May 2010

---

* I know the outline's vague - working this into a paper of sorts - please comment if it makes any sense at all to you - thanks, Alan -

(thinking about SL, not in terms of RL or extrapolation -if such be possible - a crude, close to useless, outline below)

deliberately mistaken ontologies of life-worlds

"The SL space is almost always treated as a simulacrum of real life - by the creators as well! But as an abstracted mathematical topology, it's far more than that; others will take it farther in the future, already are. I also want to discuss being-in-mathesis, beyond the SL 'standard' represen- tation."

SL: [describe] = 2 [split choice]
0:
RL: [explain] = 1 [given]

0: neutral
1: obdurate, there is, idiotic real
2: choice / intentionality

0: neitherness, not both A and B, neither A nor B (a priori mathesis) 1: fragility of the good: computer program error, intrinsic 2: error extrinsic, deferment

0: null set
1: universal set
2: split tending towards as-if

1-2: leakages between them problematic metaphor [0/1/2]: numbers as markers of inscriptions, multiplicities, neutralities (the idiotic)

RL: 1: immersive, fundamentally dynamic (potential stases)
  - internal: operated _in_

SL: 2: definable, fundamentally static (real mobility)
- external operators: operated _on_

Attacking the metaphor: misplaced quantification and ordering among 'plexa,' misplaced mathesis (plexus, from plico, plicatum, to fold, to knit - Lynd's Class-Book of Etymology, 1861)

Intentionality:
suturing in RL: cohering subjectivity, harmonic continuity, incoherent and dynamic inscribing
suturing in SL: coherent physics, discordant continuity, coherent inscribing (it's inscription that holds it together)

Problematic ontology of SL: mathesis/inscription = what is; the world is a world only by virtue of its (visible, sensed) manifestation, information clarified and lost, backup of SL Problematic ontology of RL: virtual particles, information entanglement and conservation, no backup

Off the map i -

Nagarjuna and Madhyamaka - emptiness and dependent origination / dependent arising

Off the map ii -

SL: Think of root originations in server farms, permissions and specificies of address RL: Think of fundamental ontologies under erasure, feynman diagram probabilities: what constitutes dependency under probability distributions -

Off the map iii -

Physical ontology is always abstracted, as-if (SL and anti-conventionalist argument)
There is no _fundamental_ physical ontology

Off the map iv -

Mathesis and Badiou's position - relation to surreal numbers

On the map -

Thinking of SL as abstracted, split, chosen, programmed: anything that is programmable is possible. Thinking of RL as given, born-into: thought as conceiving. Consider SL _not_ as subset of RL - as fulcrum; consider SL as the visual counterpart of the space of Mathematica.

Psychology, psychoanalytics of SL in this case: matrix, borromean knot, meta-level jumping (collocation of constructing, dwelling-in) The body as entangled projections/introjections (jectivity) independent of traditional physical constraint or representation The locus of the body in the physical body (SL as perceptual organ)

The traditional/narratological function of SL = equivalent to cinematic diegesis The non-traditional functioning of SL (above) = processes of dynamic suturing

↑ Index

67. Paul Siegell

THURSDAY in PHILLY > Debrah Morkun, Carlos Soto Roman & Paul Siegell

Tue 11 May 2010

Thursday, May 13, 2010, 7:30pm - Debrah Morkun, Carlos Soto Román and Paul Siegell read at Head House Books, 619 South 2nd Street.

FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

DEBRAH MORKUN's first full length book of poetry, Projection Machine, was recently released by BlazeVox Books. She is currently at work on another project, Hera Calf, that examines the spaces left abandoned by previous US generations in an attempt to give them voice. She is a founding member of The New Philadelphia Poets, a group committed to expanding the spaces for poetry in Philadelphia. View some of her work at http://www.debrahmorkun.com/.

CARLOS SOTO ROMAN was born in Valparaíso, Chile. He has published the books La Marcha de los Quiltros (The Mongrel's March,1999), Haiku Minero (Miner Haiku, 2007) and Cambio y Fuera (Over and Out, 2009). He has resided in Philadelphia since March 2009 and is a member of The New Philadelphia Poets and the editor of the new cooperative anthology of U.S. poetry, Elective Affinities (http://electiveaffinitiesusa.blogspot.com/).

PAUL SIEGELL is the author of three books of poetry: wild life rifle fire (Otoliths Books, 2010), jambandbootleg (A-Head Publishing, 2009) and Poemergency Room (Otoliths Books, 2008). He is an editor at Painted Bride Quarterly, and has contributed to The American Poetry Review, Coconut, NOÖ, Rattle, SIR! and many other fine journals. He has also been featured in two national music and culture magazines, Paste and Relix, as well as elsewhere exciting. Kindly find more of Paul's work at ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL (http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com).

MORE INFO:
http://www.facebook.com/?ref=logo#!/event.php?eid=112351292137665&index=1

we hope you can join us,
paul>

↑ Index

68. Christophe Casamassima
TEST TEST TEST TEST
Tue 11 May 2010

—

↑ Index

69. Jennifer Karmin
May 16: Aaaaaaaaaaalice book release in Chicago
Tue 11 May 2010

Flim Forum Press presents
Aaaaaaaaaaalice by Jennifer Karmin

CHICAGO RELEASE PARTY
Sunday, May 16th from 6-8pm
at Cole's Bar, 2338 N. Milwaukee Ave http://coleschicago.blogspot.com free / 21 & over

Jennifer Karmin in a live improvisation with guest perfomers:
Joel Craig, Kathleen Duffy, Krista Franklin,
Chris Glomski, Laura Goldstein, Lisa Janssen & John Keene

Aaaaaaaaaaalice
112 pages, 7x9
travelogue in 11 cantos
scored for polyvocal improvisation

To buy online, read some early reviews & find performance dates:
http://www.aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

JOEL CRAIG is the author of the chapbook Shine Tomorrow (Lost Horse Press) and has poems published or forthcoming in Lungfull!, A Public Space, the Zoland Annual, and MoonLit. He is poetry editor for MAKE: A Literary Magazine, as well as co-founder of the Danny's Reading Series in Chicago.

KATHLEEN DUFFY is a writer who co-founded the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise in 2001 to forge alliances with other artists, activists, community groups, and the general public. Expanding on collaboration as political force, Kath initiated the organizing efforts of the Dill Pickle Food Coop in late 2005, and is currently serving her second three year term on the board of directors.Â Kathleen earns her keep as the Communications Organizer for the Campaign for Better Health Care and is a member of the concert production staff of the Old Town School of Folk Music.

KRISTA FRANKLIN is a poet and visual artist.Â Her poetry and mixed medium collages have been published in lifestyle and literary journals such as Copper Nickel, RATTLE, Indiana Review, Clam, Callaloo, and the anthology Gathering Ground. Franklin is a Cave Canem Fellow, and a co-founder of Tres Colony and 2nd Sun Salon.

CHRIS GLOMSKI is the author of The Nineteenth Century, a new poetry manuscript.Â A chapbook, Eidolon, was issued by Answer Tag Home Press in October 2008. His first poetry collection, Transparencies Lifted from Noon, was published in the fall of 2005 by MEB / Spuyten Duyvil Press.Â His poems, translations, and critical writings have appeared in Notre Dame Review, The Octopus, Chicago Review, Jacket, A Public Space, and elsewhere.Â Another chapbook, IL LA, was published by Noemi Press in 2002.

LAURA GOLDSTEIN's poetry, reviews and essays can be found in Requited, Little Red Leaves, How2, EAOGH, Text/Sound, Rabbit Light Movies, Otoliths, CutBank Reviews, Moria, and The Little Magazine. She has two chapbooks: Ice in Intervals from Hex Press and Day of Answers from Tir Aux Pigeons and has performed as part of Poets' Theaters in Chicago and New York.Â She currently teaches Writing and Literature at the School of the Art Institute and Loyola University.

LISA JANSSEN is a writer and archivist.Â Her work has appeared most recently in WSQ â€“ Womenâ€™s Studies Quarterly, MAKE, and the chapbook Riffing on Bird and Other Sad Songs (dusi/e-chap kollektiv). She currently co-edits the literary journal MoonLit.

JENNIFER KARMIN curates the Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise.Â Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, community centers, and on city streets across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. A proud member of the Dusie Kollektiv, she is the author of the Dusie chapbook Evacuated: Disembodying Katrina. Walking Poem, a collaborative street project, is featured online at How2. At home in Chicago, Jennifer teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the public schools.

JOHN KEENE is the author of Annotations and, with artist Christopher Stackhouse, of Seismosis.Â His poetry, fiction, essays, and translations have appeared in a wide array of periodicals and anthologies. Recent work will appear in Mandorla, A Public Space, and Spirale. He teaches at Northwestern University.

↑ Index

70. Daniel Godston
"Imagining a Bauhaus Poetics" workshop
Tue 11 May 2010

"Imagining a Bauhaus Poetics" workshop

at tonight's Next Objectivists meeting

7 p.m. at the Mess Hall in Chicago

We meet to consider the possibility of a Bauhaus Poetics. The Bauhaus, which existed in Germany between the wars, is primarily noted for its influence on modern art, architecture, and design. The participation by Anni and Josef Albers, both associated with the school, in Black Mountain College during Olson's term suggests the possibility of a direct influence on U.S. poets of that school. Less direct influences will also be considered when we gather to ask, "What would a poetry of the Bauhaus be like"?

Mess Hall
6932 North Glenwood Avenue
Chicago, IL 60626
http://messhall.org/
http://nextobjectivists.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

71. amy king
But What About the Nipples? A Nice Conversation (Pt. 3)
Tue 11 May 2010

For those who have followed, the final installment:

http://htmlgiant.com/behind-the-scenes/but-what-about-nipples-a-nice-conversation-pt-3/

↑ Index

72. EJOYCE
new Susan Howe book
Tue 11 May 2010

New book on Susan Howe's poetry.
FORTHCOMING from BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY PRESS
www.bucknell.edu/universitypress

“The Small Space of a Pause”

Susan Howe’s Poetry and the Spaces Between

This book is about Susan Howe's poetry from the perspective of space. Howe reshapes cultural configurations of space through her drive to infiltrate interstitial areas of "third" spaces: the silences of history, the margins of the page, the placeless migrants, and the uncharted lands. Nuances, frontiers, thresholds, edges, fuzzinesses, ambiguities, pauses, singularities, margins: these are the spaces where her poetry occurs, places that lie between two states. Rather than absences, therefore, the space of this poetry is a place of being, of what Gilles Deleuze and Félix Guattari refer to as becoming. Third space is contested because it must also call itself into question in reimagining itself; in questioning its condition and rethinking itself, it contradicts itself repeatedly, setting up the form of an ever-present yet ever-shifting paradox of self-presencing. This site is also, however, the place of no frames or boundaries, a place that is all margins and singularities, that site of displacement, where migration is eternal and violence is perennial. Nomadism becomes an emblem in Howe's poetry for the twentieth-century condition as it represents the continual movement through space of the body, that never-ending, always-perpetuated sense of loss of place, but that equally charged coming into being regardless of the space within which that loss/becoming occurs.

About the Author:

Elisabeth W. Joyce is a professor at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania. She earned her undergraduate degree at the University of Chicago and has received graduate degrees from Temple University, the University of Delaware, and Carnegie Mellon University.

2010, 297 pages. $65.00/hardcover. ISBN 0-8387-5762-8

Jacket Illustration:

William Janszoon Blaeu. Nova Belgica et Anglia Nova. Royal Geographical Society, London, UK.

TO ORDER: Associated University Presses • [redacted] • [redacted]

↑ Index

73. amy king

Thurs., May 13, at 7 p.m. for the Bon Mot/ley Reading Series, featuring Amy King, Ana Božičević , and Rob Schlegel -- Cincinatti, OH

Tue 11 May 2010

Please join us Thurs., May 13, at 7 p.m. for the Bon Mot/ley Reading Series, featuring Amy King, Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ , and Rob Schlegel. We will head over to Fries CafÃ© after the reading and invite all to join us.

Amy King is the author of I'm the Man Who Loves You, Antidotes for an Alibi, and Slaves to Do These Things (Blazevox), along with the forthcoming I Want to Make You Safe (Litmus Press). She teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. For information on the reading series Amy co-curates in Brooklyn, NY, please visit The Stain of Poetry: A Reading Series (http://stainofpoetry.com) and http://amyking.org for more.

Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ was born in Zagreb, Croatia in 1977. She emigrated to NYC in 1997. Stars of the Night Commute (Tarpaulin Sky Press, 2009) is her first book of poems and is currently a finalist for the Lambda Literary Awards. Her fifth chapbook, Depth Hoar, will be published by Cinematheque Press in 2010. With Amy King, Ana co-curates The Stain of Poetry reading series in Brooklyn, and is co-editing an anthology, The Urban Poetic, forthcoming from Factory School. She works at the Center for the Humanities of The Graduate Center, CUNY.

Rob Schlegel is the author of The Lesser Fields (Center for Literary Publishing), winner of the Colorado Prize for Poetry. His poems have appeared in Boston Review, Handsome, Octopus, Volt, MAKE issue 8 and elsewhere. He was born and raised in Portland, Oregon, and has lived in California, Montana, and Iowa.

The Bon Mot/ley Reading Series takes place in the Clifton Cultural Arts Center on the second Thursday of each month. The CCAC is located at 3711 Clifton Ave., and you can learn more about the center here: www.cliftonculturalarts.org. Readings are free and open to the public.

Our next reading will be in June, featuring Cynthia Arrieu-King (a UC alum), Jared White, and Farrah Field.

Audio files of previous readings are also available on our reading series blog: www.bonmotley.blogspot.com.

We hope to see you there, and we thank you for your continued support of the series.

Kindly,
Kristi Maxwell & Michael Rerick
Series Curators
http://www.bonmotley.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

74. Ruby, Michael
The Edge of the Underworld
Tue 11 May 2010

BlazeVOX [books] has just published THE EDGE OF THE UNDERWORLD, my fourth book of poetry, based on a homophonic translation of Virgil (for more, see below).

For review-copy PDFs, write:

[redacted]<mailto:[redacted]>

Here are a book description of THE EDGE OF THE UNDERWORLD, blurbs, order information and my bio:

After studying Louis Zukofsky's Rudens in graduate school, I always wanted to write a homophonic translation. A decade later, I settled on the long opening of Book VI of Virgil's Aeneid, the famous Underworld book, and wrote "Sic Fatur Lacrimans." Soon afterward, sensing the translation itself needed translation, I decided to derive other poems from the words and phrases of "Sic Fatur Lacrimans"-poems that would be connected to the long poem and to each other, in a sort of literary Rayonism. I saw the book as the verbal equivalent of St. Sebastian pierced by arrows, with "Sic Fatur Lacrimans" as St. Sebastian and the shorter poems as the arrows, crisscrossing each other.

-Michael Ruby

"Call it immersion": take Michael Ruby's sibilant heterographic tour of the underworld's underwords and rediscover in these homophonic burrows that sonic intersection is ear + imagination. At once "tenebrous children" and a "jangling ring of skeleton keys," these poems ghost-grasp their father (or was it patrimony's patter?), then intrafiliate to interlock in lines that haunt: we watch these "seals kiss" as "bus urn," to "out vain era...// air a care...//none inferior" and "still soak to a purpose somewhere." Ruby, take a golden bow-this work's "[to elicit] a response from littoral folk" and figural ones, too.

-Judith Goldman

"Ghostly cooing fills the moist dark places," and the reader and dreamer returns to the Underworld, together, already there, "Circling in an eddy for the time being."

-Christophe Casamassima

THE EDGE OF THE UNDERWORLD is available through BlazeVOX's website:

http://www.blazevox.org/bk-mruby2.htm

Michael Ruby is the author of AT AN INTERSECTION (Alef Books, 2002), WINDOW ON THE CITY (BlazeVOX [books], 2006), FLEETING MEMORIES

(ebook at www.uglyducklingpresse.org/WEBBOOK-RUBY/index.html<http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org/WEBBOOK-RUBY/index.html>, 2008) and the forthcoming COMPULSIVE WORDS (BlazeVOX, 2010). A graduate of Harvard College and Brown University's writing program, he lives in Brooklyn and works as an editor at The Wall Street Journal.

Best,

Michael Ruby

↑ Index

75. Chris Chapman

Re: Art games

Wed 12 May 2010

Jim, I wonder if yould care to compare quiddities? How does Lopes' understanding of programmability compare with that of Lev Manevich's ideas about database narrative? The one seems to repeat out ideas of language being a game of radical designation (Lopes) while the other seems based in the idea that language is inherently gnomic (Manevich). (Kripke vs. Frege 2.0?)

- curious chris.

On 12/21/09, Jim Andrews <[redacted]> wrote:
> 'virtuality' doesn't necessarily have anything to do with computers. we all > have our virtual worlds inside our heads and have had for a very long time.
> so what happens to the assertion, if you replace the word "programmability"
> with "virtuality" is you have an assertion that is false, murat.
>
> lopes doesn't find the "essence of computer art in computer games". he's a > trained philosopher, so the word 'essence' is one he would use carefully.
> you are making a lot of assumptions about his work and about what i think, > and you're generally quite far off base with them. he thinks of computer > games as instances of or examples of computer art. his definition of > computer art, as i mention in the review at > http://www.ciac.ca/magazine/compterendu.htm , is
>
> "An item is a computer art work just in case (1) it's art, (2) it's run on a > computer, (3) it's interactive, and (4) it's interactive because it's run on > a computer" (p. 27)
>
> so it's a theory of interactive computer art. he's trying to get at the > important characteristics of art in which the computer is crucial as medium.
> it isn't a book about art that happens to be digital but could as well > appear in print or whatever.

>
> there are works, such as harold cohen's aaron, which lopes discusses in his > book, that are not interactive but actually are works of computer art. so > lopes's definition of computer art is too narrrow to include all works of > computer art. but it's a very good book nonetheless because a clear > philosophy of interactive computer art is valuable. it is a theory of a > type of computer art, not a theory of work that isn't necessarily computer > art.
>
> to broaden the definition of 'computer art' to include work such as cohen's > aaron, one needs to look at the role of programming in computer art, because > programmability (not virtuality) is what distinguishes computers from other > machines.
>
> You say
>
> "If one assumes, as I think you indirectly are doing, that there is no break > between "human" thought and "computer/machine" thought, that they represent > a continuum -that machines also have their "spiritual lives"- then one must > analyze the "otherness," nature of human thought as it "passes"/ travels > into the algorthmic/computer universe/space."
>
> I've never met a spirtual machine. Except if you call works of art > 'spiritual'. I don't expect to in my lifetime meet a 'spiritual machine'. We > have been evolving on this planet for 2.5 billion years and the universe > itself is apparently only about 15 billion years old. So we've been evolving > over a significant portion of the entire time of the universe's existence.
> Computers have a long way to go, even if their 'evolution' is much faster > than ours.
>
> But we can think of the current state as holding all the conditions for the > development of 'thought' in computers. They can make decisions. They can > re-write their own code. They can have 'senses'. They can interpret the > information from their 'senses'. They can construct a world view. They are > language machines. And there is no proof, and probably never will be, that > there exist thought processes of which humans are capable and computers are > not. Machine intelligence would undoubtedly be quite different from human > intelligence because the contexts of our existences are quite different. We > have biological bodies and have evolved in ways quite different from how > computers 'evolve'.

>
> I don't see what is "utopian" about this view, or distopian, for that > matter. I never said they were going to make everything all better, and > neither does Lopes.
>
> What he does say, and I agree with, is that computer art is a new form of > art. By that I don't mean art that happens to be digital but could as well > appear in print or whatever, but art in which the computer is crucial as > medium. This doesn't make it better than other forms of art. It's different.
> It has what many people feel are exciting possibilities both by virtue of > its being relatively unexplored and also by virtue of the radical > possibilities computers offer.
>
> I'm happy to see a book written by a philosopher about computer art. It's > quite a different sort of book than the other ones I've read about 'digital > art', 'internet art', 'digital poetry', and so on. He isn't looking for the > social or literary (etc) significance of computer art. He's just looking to > describe what it is. Which is valuable. Just the basics. Just the > fundamentals. There is so much anxiety, wild speculation, ranting and raving > about computers and, to a lesser extent, computer art in society. A book > like this, which just looks at what it is in a basic, clear way is valuable > in such a situation.
>
> ja
> http://vispo.com
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "Murat Nemet-Nejat" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Friday, December 18, 2009 12:51 PM
> Subject: Re: Art games
>
>
> Dear Jim,
>
> I have listened to your Lopes interview and read your review of his book. I > want to unpack -or react to- one short passage from your review:
>
> "What separates computers from other machines is programmability.

> Programmability is what gives computers their radical flexibility, as > machines. Flexibility to the point that there is no proof, and probably > never will be, that there exist thought processes of which humans are > capable and computers are not. Which is to say that programmability provides > flexibility, very likely, to the point of the dynamic fluidity of thought. "
>
> ""What separates computers from other machines is programmability.
> Programmability is what gives computers their radical flexibility, as > machines."
>
> What happens to this assertion if you replace the word "programmability" > with "virtuality?" After all, the latter is the direct corollary of the > former. One has a conceptual edifice which may disappear like smoke at a > moment's notice; what one has then is -not fragments, nor relics- but a > "program" which may be constant or have its own mysterious cycle of > half-lives. Is this erosion in "substance" peculiar only to computers -the > defining quality of a computer- or is it a reflection of a broader shift in > one's perception of reality. The atom theory of substance is progressively > split into smaller particles -quarks (as in quacks), leptons (as in Lipton), > bosons (as in bisons), neutrinos, muons, tauans, and their antis, etc., etc.
> - so that we have a conceptual reality can only be grasped by computers, by > the grasp of its algorithms.- The string theory has the feel and image > structure of a fairy tale, with its secret passages, trap doors, strange > animals, mazes, or of the addictive games in a computer? And, finally, the > grand daddy of this kind of language universe, Alice's descent into the > Wonderland (after all, Alice cries "it's all "virtual"). Despite all its > interconnectedness and "universality," the computer, it seems to me, is a > profoundly subjective, even solipsistic medium, continuously built on, > reinforced by one's wishes -fulfillments- ("choices) -a quality touted as > one of its main virtues but in actuality is one of its most subversive > qualities, a Trojan horse against human freedom. Despite its ocean of > "interconnectivity," isn't this why our world consists of archipelagos of > isolation (heard by no one) and narcissism (wanting to hear no one) fighting > each other?
>
> If Mr. Lopes wants to develop a theory of computer art, instead of creating > dainty little defintions fitting together like a Chinese puzzle, he should > tackle these broader issues.
>
> "Flexibility to the point that there is no proof, and probably never will > be, that there exist thought processes of which humans are capable and > computers are not. Which is to say that programmability provides > flexibility, very likely, to the point of the dynamic fluidity of thought."

>
> If one assumes, as I think you indirectly are doing, that there is no break > between "human" thought and "computer/machine" thought, that they represent > a continuum -that machines also have their "spiritual lives"- then one must > analyze the "otherness," nature of human thought as it "passes"/ travels > into the algorthmic/computer universe/space. It is this absence of a > confrontation with this "otherness" which I find most frustrating in the > nearly Utopian protestations of the computer/digital art enthusiasts. I find > in them a touch of sentimentality.
>
> Mr. Lopes finds in computer games the essence of computer art. My guess is > that there is a good deal of truth in that. But then then he sees those > games similar to pop entertainment. The truly good ones are much more akin > to fairy tales, full of "real" danger, threat and warnings.
>
> I would like to salute David Chirot's posts (and recommend his work on line) > which carry on similar arguments to mine from a different perspective.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
>

↑ Index

76. paolo javier
P||R||O||J||E||C||T||I||O||N||S, 5/16, 6 pm
Wed 12 May 2010

Hi There

We hope this finds you well.

We'd like to invite you to the premier event of P||R||O||J||E||C||T||I||O||N||S, our new live film narration series at the Bowery Poetry Club (308 Bowery and Bleecker st). This performance series presents an active intersection of moving text and moving image:

* 1. text moving sonically through space*

* 2. image moving on the surface of a screen*

The fundamental scenario presents one or more present persons utilizing words &/or sounds &/or movement to mediate both spatially and conceptually between images on a screen and a live audience. (We have in mind, of course, the Japanese, Korean, Polish, and former USSR traditions<http://autotypist.blogspot.com/2008/03/movietelling-for-more-practical-avant.html> as models in spirit.)

If you have a Facebook account, please do join our page for updated information, as well as a full description of the series: http://www.facebook.com/group...php?v=info&gid=110234529005546<http://www.msplinks.com/MDFodHRwOi8vd3d3LmZhY2Vib29rLmNvbS9ncm91cC5waHA/dj1pbmZvJmdpZD0xMTAyMzQ1MjkwMDU1NDY=>.
The premier will feature:
*
Stephanie Gray
Lisa Jarnot
Alejandro Crawford *

on Sunday, May 16

Bowery Poetry Club <http://www.bowerypoetry.com/#Home>

6 pm

*
*$6 at the door.
Full bar available.

You'll find the bios of the performers below. Hope to see you on Sunday!

- Paolo Javier & Jeremy James Thompson

--

Stephanie Gray will perform 15 minutes from a current super 8 film/poetry project: You know they want to disappear Hell's Kitchen as Clinton. In mysterious silent insistent shots, she films an inspired letter of sorts to writer E.B. White, author of the mid-century little book Here is New York. Stephanie is a poet and experimental filmmaker. Her first collection of poems, Heart Stoner Bingo, was published by Straw Gate Books in 2007. In support of her films, she has received a New York Foundation for the Arts Fellowship and a New York State Council on the Arts grant. Her films have screened internationally, including at the Ann Arbor, Oberhausen, Viennale, Chicago Underground, and Madcat film festivals.

Lisa Jarnot starred in the film The Time We Killed<http://www.cinema-scope.com/cs20/ar_kite_reeves.htm>by Jennifer Todd Reeves. She is the author of Night Scenes (2008), Iliad XXII: The Death of Hector (2006), *Black Dog Songs *(2003), Ring of Fire (2001), and Some Other Kind of Mission(1996), among other books. She is a past editor of the Poetry Project Newsletter, edited An Anthology of New (American) Poetry (2007), and lives and works in New York as a freelance horticulturalist.

Alejandro Miguel Justino Crawford is co-inventor of The Benshi Organ<http://sites.google.com/site/benshiorgan/>, a two-octave midi keyboard that allows the player to compose genre-specific movie dialogue by simply "playing" the instrument. He is an artist, performer, and writer currently studying at NYU's Interactive Telecommunications Program (ITP). He is a former Fulbright Scholar to Portugal, the author of Morpheus (BlazeVOX 2009), and his work can be found in magazines like Sous Rature, La Petite Zine, 1913 a journal of Forms, The Physical Poets, as well as on the internet. He lives in Brooklyn, NY.

↑ Index

77. Ruth Lepson

Re: Boog City and Fests Need Intern

Wed 12 May 2010

---

hey, david--I will pass this on to students & former students in Boston & NY.
ruth

On 5/10/10 1:48 PM, "David Kirschenbaum" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi all,
>
> I'm looking for an intern who could assist with two big festivals Boog is a part of in the coming months, a Boston-area poetry marathon from Fri. July 30-Sun. Aug. 1, organized by Jim Behrle, John Mulrooney, and myself, and the fourth annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival, from Fri. Sept. 24-Tues. Sept. 28.
>
> If any of you profs might have a student who they think would be game to help with some key organizational duties, please lemme know.
>
> thanks!
> david
>
> --
> David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
> Boog City
> 330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
> NY, NY 10001-4754
> For event and publication information:

> http://welcometoboogcity.com/
> T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
> http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
> For music from Gilmore boys:
> http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

78. Rosalie Calabrese

Fw: Rosalie's Poetry Update

Wed 12 May 2010

Featured Readings: two Sundays, May 30 and June 4, 2010

May 30: Phoenix Reading, Hosted by Mike Graves & George Spencer Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Featuring Rosalie Calabrese, Mike Graves, and Erik La Prade Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â 5:30 - 7:30 PM at Bengal Curry, 65 West Broadway Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â (between Murray and Warren;1-1/2 blocks below Chambers) Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â 1,2,3,A,C or E train to Chambers Street Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Tel: [redacted]: call if bad weather to be sure the venue is open Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Open mic if time allows, at the discretion of the Hosts; $3.00 donation requested Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Excellent Indian Food available for purchase at a very reasonable price

June 4:Â Â Paws for Poetry Reading Hosted by Thomas Colicino Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Featuring Rosalie Calabrese and George Spencer Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â 4:00 - 6:00 PM at Animal Haven, 251 Centre Street Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â (Between Broome & Grand) Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â N, Q, R, W, 4, 5, 6, J, M, Z to Canal StreetÂ Â [Tel: [redacted]] Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â www.animalhavenshelter.org

Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Open mic and refreshments

Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â $4 Advance Tickets (available online) http://www.pawsforpoetrynyc.com Â $7 General Admission (at the door)

Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â For further information: [redacted]Â Â Â Â Â Â

Recently Published Poems:

Â ON SHAVUâ€™OT

My grandchild asks what Jewish people believe in.
Her parents giving me that wide-eye look that signals
â€œHELP,â€ I jump in and bumble my way through

Sunday School platitudes: love, kindness, respect, etc.
Each one elicits a jaded silence from the kid.

I suspect Iâ€™m losing ground but can only think of Pain, prejudice, persecution â€”
Not what I want to tell a five-year-old who still finds Scary moments in Winnie-The-Pooh.
â€œCâ€™mon,â€ she says. â€œLike in the scroll, the Torah.â€

Now that Iâ€™ve led her to the place where my roots
Lie tangled within a borrowed name,
Can I confess I donâ€™t remember,
Maybe never even knew? Undone,
I tell my son to look for an answer on the Web.

{The Mom Egg â€œLessonsâ€ Anthology (Vol. 8, 2010) and read at the Cornelia Street Cafe book launch April 25, 2010}

MY NEW FRIEND

Both of us American, born in 1938, our stories are filled with similarities â€“ marriage, children, divorce, erasures too painful to discuss â€“

but we sense a stronger link.
Her photo album sets the landscape to compare notes on foreign countries, other places we have been.

In the midst of Germany
she flips a batch of pictures all at once, says they came from someone else.
Out of curiosity, I turn the pages back.

DACHAU . . . blinding in black and white.
As I shut my eyes to blot the image out,
she gently takes the book and closes it,
for neither one of us was there.

{Poetica Publishing Co. "L'Mizmor Lâ€™David" Anthology, Volume I: "The Shoah", 2010} Â

THE DRY CLEANER'S WIFE

A snappy dresser, I thought the first time I saw her, straight and stiff as a soldier

behind the counter.
German, maybe Austrian,
descended from aristocracy,
she took with aplomb
the soiled clothes
I handed over for cleaning.

Her husband, making it clear that he was not to be disturbed, sat at a separate table stooped over an account book
like a scholar reading the Talmud in a room without enough light, his identity still revealed by the tattooedÂ numbers visible below his rolled-up shirt sleeve.

As the stolid wife
gathered up my bundle
and carried it to the back of the store, my attention was drawn to the way she hobbled.
Sheathed in nylons,
the wooden pegs she wore in place of legs fit perfectly into her unmarred shoes.

I cannot imagine him in the camp,
but I envision her
in a bomb shelter,
ten at most back then,
blonde hair done up in braids,
shoulders squared beneath a school uniform, exhorting her playmates to stay calm each time another blast blew out the lights.

{Jewish Currents (Spring 2010)}

The following poems appear in 4 by Rosalie Calabrese, a Marymark Press Broadside shared with 4 poems by Mark Sonnenfeld:

AT THE CROSSROADS

Waving her pamphlets with the zeal of a sergeant, a Watchtower woman in the Times Square station roars above the break dancersâ€™ din at the troops geared for rush-hour battle.
â€œFighting and killing among all nationalities!â€
â€œRight here in the U. S.,â€ she warns.
But the ear-plugged army
in its mad dash to the front lines
heeds only the call of an oncoming train.

GET THE MESSAGE

Sunday morning set aside for newspaper and contemplation, invaded by ghetto-blaster bulletins,
the rapperâ€™s unintelligible words thumping like jungle drums telling me there is danger afoot, telling me to read The Times through his eyes and get the message.

WAITING FOR A CURE

More than anything right now
what I want is laughter,
the doubled-over-with-a-bellyache jiggle-the-insides kind, a curative with no destructive side effects, but how to find such medicine or, once found, to think that it will work

when the whole world â€“ riddled with greed and fear resulting from hubris of a high order â€“ seems incurably ill?

â€œPooh,â€ you say, while popping the latest pill prescribed with the governmentâ€™s blessing, but I say pay attention to the exorbitant price:
even a deficiency of irony can be fatal.

ON THURSDAY

Tomorrow will be Friday
No matter what:

Even if the world
Comes to an end
It will be Friday â€”Â Â
That's my guess.
If I should say
No more, that's it, finis,
It will be Friday
Nonetheless;
Like it or not,
Friday will be tomorrow
No matter what.

[Some of the poems in this update are reprints. My apologies to those of you who have seen them before, in a couple of cases more than once. If at any time you wish to be removed form this list, just reply with the word "Remove". No reason need be given.] Â

 A special offer from Jewish Currents, a wonderfully interesting magazine that bills itself as "A Progressive, Secular Voice": If you are interest in having a sample copy of the magazine, you can receive the Spring issue - the one with my poem in it - by contacting Jewish Currents via its Web site: http://jewishcurrents.org or by calling [redacted].Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â

↑ Index

79. David Kirschenbaum
Re: Boog City and Fests Need Intern
Wed 12 May 2010

---

thanks ruth!!

On May 12, 2010, at 2:56 PM, Ruth Lepson wrote:

> hey, david--I will pass this on to students & former students in > Boston &
> NY.
> ruth
>
> On 5/10/10 1:48 PM, "David Kirschenbaum" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi all,
>
> I'm looking for an intern who could assist with two big festivals
> Boog
> is a part of in the coming months, a Boston-area poetry marathon from

> Fri. July 30-Sun. Aug. 1, organized by Jim Behrle, John Mulrooney, and > myself, and the fourth annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival, from Fri. Sept. 24-Tues. Sept. 28.
>
> If any of you profs might have a student who they think would be game to help with some key organizational duties, please lemme know.
>
> thanks!
> david
>
> --
> David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
> Boog City
> 330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
> NY, NY 10001-4754
> For event and publication information:
> http://welcometoboogcity.com/
> T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
> http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
> For music from Gilmore boys:
> http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic
>
> guidelines &

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

80. Nic Sebastian
Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Amy King
Wed 12 May 2010

The internet, Facebook, Twitter, blogs, websites, iPad, iPod, podcasts, digital video and who knows what else. What do they all mean for the poet? For Poetry? A new Ten Questions series on Poets and Technology starts this week, kicked off by Amy King: http://bit.ly/cL1cvc.
Best wishes,
Nic Sebastian

http://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

81. Rosalie Calabrese
Errata
Thu 13 May 2010

If you're thinking of attending the Paws for Poetry reading on June 4, please note:

June 4th falls on a Friday, not Sunday as previously reported.

Also, the Host for the program will be Jason Bogdan.

Sorry about that.

↑ Index

82. Poetry Project
Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
Thu 13 May 2010

Here¹s what¹s coming up at The Poetry Project:

Friday, May 14, 8 PM
Spring Workshop Reading

Please join us for a reading by students of the Spring workshops, led by Anselm Berrigan, Daniel Machlin and Sharon Mesmer.

Monday, May 17, 8 PM
Talk Series: Rachel Zolf
The Tolerance Project: A Collaborative MFA

Rachel Zolf is working with 84 writers and artists on what could be the first collaborative MFA ever. Reactions to this conceptual writing project have ranged from lauding it as a long overdue Institutional Critique to deriding it as an arrogant violation of the MFA workshop¹s privacy and sanctity. Zolf will talk about the origins of the project and its challenges, describe how the collaborative poems emerge each week, and reveal some of the traces of poetic DNA collected in The Tolerance Project Archive.

Rachel Zolf¹s fourth full-length book of poetry, Neighbour Procedure, was recently released by Coach House Books. The Tolerance Project lives at thetoleranceproject.blogspot.com.

Wednesday, May 19, 8 PM
Amiri Baraka & Mark Nowak

Amiri Baraka published his first volume of poetry, Preface to a Twenty-Volume Suicide Note, in 1961. His book Blues People: Negro Music in White America, is still regarded as the seminal work on Afro-American music and culture. His reputation as a playwright was established with the production of Dutchman at the Cherry Lane Theatre in 1964. The play was revived by the Cherry Lane Theatre in January 2007 and has been reproduced around the world. He has been prolific across four decades, most recently, his book of short stories, Tales of the Out & The Gone (Akashic Books) was published in late 2007, Home, his book of social essays, was re-released by Akashic Books in early 2009 and Digging: The Afro American Soul of Music (Univ. of California) was also published in 2009.

Mark Nowak is the author of Coal Mountain Elementary (Coffee House Press, 2009) and Shut Up Shut Down (Coffee House Press, 2004). For the past several years he has been designing and facilitating ³poetry dialogues² with Ford autoworkers in the United States and South Africa (through the UAW and NUMSA), striking clerical workers (through AFSCME 3800), Muslim/Somali nurses and healthcare workers (through Rufaidah, and others. Nowak¹s writings on new labor poetics have recently appeared in Goth: Undead Subculture (Duke, 2007), American Poets in the 21st Century: The New Poetics (Wesleyan, 2007), The Progressive, and elsewhere. A native of Buffalo, New York, he currently works as Director of the Rose O¹Neill Literary House at Washington College in Chestertown, Maryland. Visit his blog at at http://coalmountain.wordpress.com.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance
notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

83. Andy Gricevich

FRIDAY: Michael Bernstein, Lewis Freedman and Andy Gricevich read at Quimby's

Thu 13 May 2010

Yup!

Come hear these utterly strange poets read their utterly strange poetry. Whoo-hoo!

Michael Bernstein is the author of the chapbooks cinderbook (Gold Wake Press, 2009), the rot to light (Gold Wake Press, 2010), 8s (Scantily Clad Press, forthcoming 2010), imaginary grace (Recycled Karma Press, 2010) from â€œa heap of swords and mirrorsâ€ (Bedouin Books, forthcoming 2010), the transit illuminate (mud luscious press, forthcoming 2010),Â nanostars (greying ghost press, forthcoming 2010), and the Fire District (Differentia Press, forthcoming 2010) . His poems have appeared in magazines such as Puppy Flowers, milk, Moria, BlazeVOX, and New American Writing. He currently co-edits the online literary arts magazine Pinstripe Fedora. Michael lives and writes in Wisconsin.

Lewis Freedman writes poems. He (as of recently) lives in Madison. A chapbook, The Third Word (2009), was published by what to us(press) and another, Catfish Poâ€™ Boys (2009), was published by MinutesBooks. He is co-editor of Agnes Fox Press.

Andy Gricevich lives in Madison, Wisconsin, where he edits Cannot Exist magazine and, with Lewis Freedman, curates the _____-Shaped Reading Series. His poems have been published here and there, most recently in Pinstripe Fedora and We Are So Happy to Know Something. He has toured internationally as a performer of strange chamber music, theater and satirical cabaret songs with the Prince Myshkins and the Nonsense Company. He is uncomfortably writing this in the third person. Lately heâ€™s been baking bread and finding the prevailing forms of irony in our poetic culture to be utterly inadequate in every possible way. The bread is getting better.

↑ Index

84. { brad brace }

little orange pencils

Thu 13 May 2010

usually I might make some flux-art from such an odd discovery but no one (except for Janice, and I hate her),) ended-up being very interested in my earlier offer of the 20-yr-old collected seashore pebbles rolling back and forth on my car's dashboard (that I offered to exchange for a US$2 bill),, so I'm thinking the little discarded orange pencils
that I inexplicably discover pretty much in the same sidewalk location nearly every day wouldn't be of much interest either... (not really) sorry to have troubled anyone at all: just check the a-for-animosity box on your artworld-ballot (I'll still send you a pencil), and let's finally dispense with all these horrid art-hostage-museums, alright?...

long-ago: http://www.bbrace.net/pencil.html

/:b

↑ Index

85. derek beaulieu

new from No press: NOTES ON WHY CONCEPTUALISM IS BETTER THAN FLARF by Vanessa Place

Thu 13 May 2010

No press is proud to announce the publication of

NOTES ON WHY CONCEPTUALISM IS BETTER THAN FLARF
by Vanessa Place

published in an edition of 60 hand-sewn copies (of which 30 are for sale) $5 each (including shipping)

for more information, or to order copies, email
[redacted]

derek beaulieu
2 - 733 2nd avenue nw
calgary alberta
canada T2N 0E4
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

86. David Kirschenbaum

Last Call to Advertise in, Donate to Boog City 63

Fri 14 May 2010

Please forward

Boog City's 63rd issue
Wants to spread the word about your latest offerings and events and say a great big hello to each and everyone of you

So Help Us Help You (and Help Us, too)
By Placing a Lovely Advertisement
(We're also cool with donations, real cool.)

Deadlines

—Email to reserve ad space ASAP

—Sat. May 22-Distribute Paper

The issue will feature:

*The printed matter section with Erica Kaufman reviewing Macgregor Card's and Karen Weiser's first full-length collections;

*Urban Folk music section editor Jonathan Berger on the Major Matt Mason USA tribute and the Elastic No-No Band's dual-disc, 45-track magna opera, Fustercluck!!!;

*Poems from Nellie Bridge, Robert Hershon, Austin LaGrone, and Susan Lewis;

*Art from Rebecca Fischer; and

*A Jim Behrle comic.

We'll be distributing 2,250 copies of the issue throughout the East Village and other parts of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and at Boog City events.

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. The discount rate also applies to larger ads. There are also discounts available to previous and repeat advertisers.

For our full rate card, please visit:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664) for more information.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

87. Alan Sondheim

New Video Release: Okukin (please pass on)

Fri 14 May 2010

New Video Release:

Okukin

Okukin is a short, 9'23" video created from my recent work in Second Life. There is a narrative among objects, slabs, planets, voices, bodies, and images, some old, many new. The objects themselves have been created for Okukin, which is filmed using the Beta 2 Second Life viewer release, in order to take advantage of a number of new features.

The video opens on a scenic pouring-forth which changes in a few seconds to planet surfaces and constructions which defy the laws of gravity, opening on occasion to untoward vistas. The rest of the video develops these vistas through symbolism and spoken or sung narrative that tends towards a future anterior. The second video is a short test of emissions that wasn't used in the final production, but is of great interest itself. Perhaps I am becoming too literal; perhaps I am disappearing in these works, which always seem on the verge of emergence, but never quite coalesce into Being.

I hope to show this work at the June ELO conference in Providence, and elsewhere of course. Participants, witting and unwitting, include Foofwa d'Imobilite, Blue Carter, Kira Sedlock, and myself. Thanks to Fau Ferdinand as well, for the use of the land in East Odyssey, as well as Lizsolo and a number of people who helped with scripting.

http://www.alansondheim.org/Okukin.mp4

http://www.alansondheim.org/testrelease.mp4

(Please note, because of space limitations, some older work had to be taken down from the website.)

↑ Index

88. The Editors

Pretty Much Everything

Fri 14 May 2010

(We loathe junkmail, and we certainly don't want to send you any. Nor do we want to send the same email to your multiple addresses . Just click here-- DO NOT EMAIL http://tarpaulinskypress.createsend2.com/t/r/u/nlhdjy/jyaiiljt/--and you won't hear from us again at this address.)

Readers, writers, friends,

Hola, amigos! In addition to saying thank you for hanging with us last month at AWP, we have a few new goodies to tell you about: 1) new titles; 2) forthcoming titles; 3) a ridiculously huge sale (up to $9 cheaper than Amazon) on every one of our backlist paperbacks; and 4) an update on submissions to Tarpaulin Sky Literary Journal, as well as a reminder as to where to follow TSky news/blogs, etc.

First, we have not one but four new titles [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/catalog.html] available:

Traci O Connor's Recipes for Endangered Species [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/Connor/index.html], a collection of short fictions (along with photos and cocktail recipes) that are populated by infanticidal mothers and sentient amputated limbs, but that manage also to be "tender, aching love stories" (Publishers Weekly);

Joanna Ruocco's Man's Companions [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/Ruocco/index.html], short fictions with a "playful, experimental appeal" (Publishers Weekly), combining "the obsessive music of Lydia Davis and the stripped precision of Muriel Spark" (Brian Evenson)--ultrasmart and rather hilarious meditations on everything from the best iconic buildings from which to hurl oneself, to the myriad penises wandering the isles of a minimart;

Kim Gek Lin Short's The Bugging Watch & Other Exhibits [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/Short/index.html], a "catacomb valentine" (Selah Saterstrom), a surreal and darkly gorgeous necromance--a "twisted" (Joyelle McSweeney) "perverse fairy-tale " (Bhanu Kapil) in the form of a prose-poem-novella that combines "the exactitude of obsessive compulsion" with " the imagery and dimness of an opiate trip sponsored by Lewis Caroll" (New Pages) , and that is quite literally crawling with bugs, thanks to artist Daniel Rhodes;

and Shelly Taylor's Black-Eyed Heifer [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/Taylor/index.html], a "a mighty anthem to down home local culture" (Brenda Iijima) and a "radically innovative use of language" (Jim Harrison), an avant -Southern hybrid hailing from syntactic hinterlands where the farm meets the backlot of the Piggly Wiggly.

All of these titles are available via Amazon [http://www.amazon.com] and other major booksellers, but you'll save a bundle (shipping is always included) by ordering directly from TSky Press [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/catalog.html].

Thanks to our chapbook and full-length manuscript reading periods , 2010 and 2011 will see the publication of books and chapbooks by Lara Glenum, Johannes GÃ¶ransson, Sarah Goldstein, and James Haug . (We are still hoping to add another full-length title as well, as we have a couple dozen manuscripts which we can neither publish nor bring ourselves to relinquish just yet.) Emily Toder's chapbook is still scheduled for 2010, and 2011 will also see the publication of our second book from Jenny Boully, not merely because of the unknown that was stalking toward them.

And, now, the part you've all been waiting for, the Almost-Summer Sale: buy any two or more of our 2006-2009 titles for only $10 each--which includes shipping [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/catalog.html]. Yes, you read that correctly. These books, with shipping, cost $16-$19 at Amazon. Choose from any of our backlist titles, from 2010 Lambda Award Finalist Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡'s Stars of the Night Commute, to the book that started it all, Jenny Boully's one love affair. Choose from SPD Bestsellers, Publishers Weekly and Time Out New York faves--books recommended by the likes of Kate Bernheimer, Rebecca Brown, Laird Hunt, Eileen Myles, and Lance Olsen--books by Mark Cunningham, Danielle Dutton, Noah Eli Gordon & Joshua Marie Wilkinson, Gordon Massman, Joyelle McSweeney, [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/catalog.html] and Andrew Zornoza. [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/Press/catalog.html] This sale will last through June 20 and then be heard no more (or, at least, not while we're away for the summer :)

And last but not least, we'd like to say thank you for your February submissions to Tarpaulin Sky [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com]. Wow! We reduced our reading period to one month only, just to cut down on numbers, and we still received 2,481 submissions! It's going to take our editors a little while to make their way through all of these, but rest assured, they're on the case.

As always, you can keep on top of TSky Press's doings via the TSky News & Notes [http://tsky-news.blogspot.com/] blog and the TSky Events [http://www.tarpaulinsky.com/READINGS/index.html] blog, as well as via Facebook [http://www.facebook.com/people/Tarpaulin-Sky-Press/100000209070685] and Twitter [https://twitter.com/TarpaulinSky].

Alrighty, then. That's it! Here's wishing you a happy almost -summer.

Cheers,

All of us at

Tarpaulin Sky Press

↑ Index

89. charles alexander

WHAT A TREAT! Dahlen & Larkin May 22

Fri 14 May 2010

I'm thinking back at what Chax Press & POG, either separately or together, have presented to the Tucson community over the last 24 years, and it's nothing short of remarkable. Readings by Robin Blaser, Robert Creeley, Bernadette Mayer, Harryette Mullen, Tom Raworth, Ron Silliman, Alice Notley, Tracie

Morris, Charles Bernstein, Eileen Myles, Barbara Henning, Frank Parker, Dan Featherston, Tenney Nathanson, Laynie Browne, Barbara Cully, and oh so many more. Performance of plays by Leslie Scalapino, presentations of video by Victor Masayesva, Paul Metcalf reading from the loft of the old Cafe Magritte, Kit Robinson and Lyn Hejinian in residence together with readings and workshops, Jackson Mac Low reading and giving an inspiring small group workshop, and yes, oh so much more!

All of this, yet at this moment I can think of no event that means more than one coming up. It's always the next reading that is your next opportunity to be moved, to hear transformative language, to glimpse possibilities that add to one's sense of the wonder of life and of these arts.

I really hope you come to this reading. You will be glad you did. Also, there will be food and drink, so please come a bit early, stay a bit late, talk with us. There will also be question and answer with the poets, a chance to get to know how and why they do what they do, and where it's taking us all.

This is one I want to share with all my friends, so please come!

BEVERLY DAHLEN & MARYROSE LARKIN
A POETRY READING presented by Chax Press

at The Drawing Studio
33 S 6th Ave, Tucson (on 6th Ave downtown, between Broadway & Congress)
7pm Saturday, May 22, 2010
FREE ADMISSION (a donation will be requested)
Selected books available for purchase
Refreshment provided
Question & Answer Session following the reading
Call [redacted] for more information

Chax Press events are funded in part by the Tucson Pima Arts Council and by the Arizona Commission on the Arts, with funding from the State of Arizona and the National Endowment for the Arts. This event is also supported by Poets & Writers, Inc.

BEVERLY DAHLEN was born in Portland in November, 1934, attended public schools there, and after the end of World War II, moved with her family to Eureka, California. In 1956, she resettled in San Francisco. Her first collection of poetry, Out of the Third, was published by Momo's Press in 1974. Two chapbooks, A Letter at Easter (Effie's Press) and The Egyptian Poems (Hipparchia Press) were followed in 1985 by the publication of A Reading 1-7 (Momo's Press). Since then, three more volumes of A Reading have appeared (including A Reading 8-10 from Chax Press), as well as the chapbook A-reading Spicer & Eighteen Sonnets (Chax Press). Her essay "Beauty: Another Reading" recently appeared in Crayon 5. Ms. Dahlen was a cofounder, with Kathleen Fraser and Frances Jaffer, of the influential avant feminist poetics newsletter (HOW)ever ; in December of 2008 her work was honored by Small Press Traffic with their annual Lifetime Achievement Award.

Beverly Dahlen is one of the major reasons I have been a poet, one of the great pleasures I have as a reader, one of the lights that keeps me going as a publisher and human being. Her investigation is into the relation of language and language creation to being human. She is funny, political, deeply psychological. She explores the vast nothingness that exists in the universe, the unending dimensions of time and space. She makes me laugh and cry, she makes me think about what it is to think, what it is to be. She challenges me, and she rewards that challenge immensely. Her readings are an invitation to truly exist, i.e. to be there, listening and thinking, with all that one has to give. That is what she does, and that is what she allows us to do.

MARYROSE LARKIN lives in Portland, Oregon, where she works as a freelance researcher. She is the author of Inverse (nine muses books, 2006), Whimsy Daybook 2007 (FLASH+CARD, 2006), The Book of Ocean (i.e. press,2007) and DARC (FLASH+CARD, 2009). Larkin is one of the organizers of Spare Room, a Portland-based writing collective, and is co-editor, with Sarah Mangold, of FLASH+CARD, a chapbook and ephemera poetry press. Her new book, The Name of This Intersection is Frost, is forthcoming from Shearsman Books.

Over the last decade, one of the poets who has most grasped my attention, and who has given me delight and depth that is too often missing, is undoubtedly Portland’s Maryrose Larkin. She shapes language into a universe that parallels and questions our own, in a way that makes use of humor, open-endedness, and bold ideas. Mark Wallace says that her latest book, The Book of Ocean, “is one of the most significant books of poetry this year. Socially insightful and emotionally resonant, The Book of Ocean develops a sophisticated intellectual framework that shows Larkin to be a genuinely philosophical poet. Central to the book is a sense of the world and human experience in it as a kind of layering, almost a palimpsest like in the work of H.D., in which the peeling away of each layer reveals a further layer of significance. Sharply etched rhythms provide an edgy energy that makes the book’s intellectual ambitions an aesthetic pleasure as well. . . . What The Book of Ocean finally shows is that writing poems can be a way of engaging the interactive condition of the changeling. The book’s finely honed rhythms, alternately clipped and wave-like, never let either the repetitions of the ocean or the disconnection of the fragment become dominant modes. The result is a book which enacts processes of change on multiple levels and becomes itself a significant example of its own theories.”

charles alexander
[redacted]

chax press / poetry & the book arts 411 n seventh ave ste 103 / tucson, az 85705-8388

teaching at Naropa University, June 13-20, 2010

the Chax Press Summer Intensive in book arts and creative writing, July 6-18, 2010 presenting at the Charles Olson Centenary, Simon Fraser University, Vancouver,

June 4-6, 2010

DONATE TO CHAX PRESS at http://chax.org/donate.htm
Chax Press is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, and your contribution is tax deductible.

↑ Index

90. Dan Wilcox
Third Thursday Poetry Night: May 20 -- Colie Collen
Fri 14 May 2010

---

the Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Third Thursday Poetry Night

at
the Social Justice Center
33 Central Ave., Albany, NY

Thursday, May 20
7:00 sign up; 7:30 start

Featured Poet: Colie Collen

-- with an open mic for community poets before & after the feature: $3.00 donation, suggested; more if you got it, less if you can't.

Your peripatetic host: Dan Wilcox.

Colie Collen grew up in the suburbs of Albany, before moving westward and back (twice). She gardens, teaches gardening, and edits the journals Fence and Tarpaulin Sky.

* * *

get out from behind me

by Colie Collen

and then I quit writing, says the old man with the rentable typewriter. I was a tree obscuring the lake

He happily twitters his immense joy; his eyes leak.

Something

is kind of changing.

When I blow on it, it moves.

Surrounds cars

as they move toward the completion of chores.

It smells like dog food;

a kind of meat with white fat and a bone in it; a keyboard.

Like a thing

waiting to lap-land.

When a Viking woman wanted a man and he died

she could throw her body on his pyre and be his wife in Valhalla.

↑ Index

91. sandra de 1913

OZALID by Biswamit Dwibedy...

Fri 14 May 2010

...is HERE from 1913 Press <http://www.1913press.org/>!

Please check out our newest book:
Ozalid by Biswamit Dwibedy <http://www.journal1913.org/ozalid.html>
&/or pass along the good word to a friend.

$9 (nine dollars), available NOW from 1913<http://journal1913.org/ozalid2.html>or Small Press Distribution<http://www.spdbooks.org/Search/Default.aspx?
SearchTerm=ozalid>

About Ozalid:

"Biswamit's poems arrive and depart simultaneously, or at least give an impression of being both a trail ahead and a trail behind a moving figure. This seems to me to be a cosmic figure, in the spirit of Jesus, because of its gleam and disappearance. What is thrown, like wheat or gold, flies, falls, vanishes but leaves marks. The marks are all we have to judge the figure by. I guess that is called a sleight of hand? This is the way I understand them, in any case, and feel their pain as being a suffusion of which there is no more or less than what is written." —Fanny Howe

"You're holding in your hands an entire book in which nothing is trackable—from the first page, we're in unmapped territory, unmapped because it's the language itself, its strangeness, that is constantly creating the world that it is simultaneously making necessary. With a marvelous intelligence that is always exceeding itself, Dwibedy manages an emotional intimacy, a tone that talks to the marrow and leaves a shadow in your blood. It's a tour de force—brilliant and heartbreaking." —Cole Swensen

xxxs, sandra/1913.
--
l'editrice de 1913, Sandra Doller (née Miller)
http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/sdoller/sdoller.htm
http://omnidawn.wordpress.com/2010/05/01/poetry-feature-sandra-doller/
*
NEW! from 1913:
1913 a journal of forms, Issue 4
"Ozalid" by Biswamit Dwibedy
"READ" 1913's annual translation anthology from the Tamaas seminars in Paris
http://www.journal1913.org
*
Forthcoming from 1913:
"Hg-the liquid" by Ward Tietz
Two collaborations by Mendi+Keith Obadike
"Home/Birth: A Poemic" by Arielle Greenberg & Rachel Zucker
"Wonderbender" by Diane Wald
http://www.1913press.org

↑ Index

92. Ed Friedman

New poem + video in Not Enough Night

Sat 15 May 2010

New poem of mine, ³The Looks Spell Danger² (plus a Photobooth video of me reading it) in NOT ENOUGH NIGHT. Also there: work by Barbara Henning, Harryette Mullens, Anne Kingsbury, and others. Here¹s the link:

http://www.naropa.edu/notenoughnight/spring10/index_toc.htm

With everything,

Ed Friedman

↑ Index

93. Megan M Garr

Spread the word: Versal 8 is in the air

Sat 15 May 2010

Versal 8 is now available

On May 8th, the eighth edition of Versal, the Netherlands' only international literary journal, was launched at the Sugar Factory club in Amsterdam. This is the largest issue of Versal so far, and arguably the most visually gorgeous, with cover art by renowned American artist Kerri Rosenstein, and, inside its pages, more color artwork than ever before, from artists including Michael Genovese and Kim Holleman.

The work of widely celebrated writers, including Laura Mullen, Maureen Seaton, and Selah Saterstrom, sits alongside writing by exciting emerging names such as Karen An-hwei Lee, Brandon Shimoda and Colleen Hollister. As in previous editions, Versal 8's contributor list is resolutely international; writers appearing here in English translation, some for the first time, include renowned poets Carlos Barbarito (Argentina), Chung Ho-Seung (South Korea) and Carlos Pardo (Spain). This issue once again breaks linguistic, national, and cultural borders to bring together the wide range of artistry happening in our contemporary milieu.

To order your copy, visit http://www.wordsinhere.com/orderversal.html

About Versal

Versal is published annually by the Amsterdam-based wordsinhere group, a non-profit, volunteer-run organization for international writers living and working in the Netherlands. Its editors hail from Canada, Russia, the UK, Uruguay, the USA and the Netherlands, and are led by American poet Megan M. Garr.

A publication celebrating translocal intersections and cross-cultural dialogue, Versal is internationally renowned for the quality of work published by up-and-coming as well as established writers, and for its strong attention to design and production values. It is sold in major cities around the world and is available via the journal's website, www.wordsinhere.com.

For press enquiries and review copies please contact us at [redacted]

↑ Index

94. Caroline Crumpacker

MAY 21: Dance Your Funkin' Brass Off-- A Benefit Party for Great Small Works Theater

Sat 15 May 2010

FRIDAY MAY 21 2010 from 10 PM Onward...

Dance Your Funkin' Brass Off-- A Benefit Party for Great Small Works Theater
St. Ann's Warehouse
38 Water St., Brooklyn
10:00-2:00
$15 in advance, $20 at the door. Advance tix get one free drink ticket at the door.

Summer's here and it's time to sweat. A Classic DUMBO Warehouse Dance Party with Hungry March Band, Slavic Soul Party!, Spanglish Fly, and Debo Band as well as DJs and surprise performances. St. Ann's Warehouse will be decked out by the artists that bring you the Toy Theater Festival - Great Small Works- and bouncing to the brass- infused beats of amazing bands.

Soju Vodka Drink Specials, draught beer, wine, song, dance.

Go and get your sweaty dance on!

Purchase tix and get info at www.greatsmallworks.org. For more info. email [redacted]

↑ Index

95. Charles Bernstein

S/N: NewWorldPoetics

Sat 15 May 2010

S/N: NewWorldPoetics
http://www.snnewworldpoetics.com/is a quarterly journal dedicated to the poetries of the Americas and to South/North [S/N] dialog. In each issue we will publish poetry and poetics in English or Spanish translation, introducing North American readers to Latin American poetry and vice versa. Our commitment is to a poetics of invention and exploration. This also defines our approach to translation, which we see not as an expedient but as an art form in itself. S/N will present work that challenges received conventions about poetry and poetics – but not necessarily in the predictable ways of the avant-garde, bohemian, or dissident. The poetry and poetics we present is meant to open up new understandings of poetic invention and formal exploration, in works that are as wild and unpredictable as Our Americas.

S/N: NewWorldPoetics es una revista cuatrimestral dedicada a la poesía y poéticas de las Américas, como asimismo a promover el diálogo entre Sur y Norte [S/N]. En cada número publicaremos poemas y poéticas en traducción al inglés o español, presentando a los lectores de Norte América la poesía de América Latina, y viceversa. Nuestro compromiso es con las poéticas de invención y exploración. Esto también define nuestra concepción de la traducción, a la cual no vemos como una simple mediadora sino como una forma de arte por sí misma. S/N presentará obras que desafían las convenciones pre-existentes sobre la poesía, aunque no necesariamente a la manera predecible de las vanguardias, la bohemia, o la disidencia. La poesía y poéticas que publicaremos están pensadas y concebidas para inaugurar nuevos entendimientos de la invención poética y de la exploración formal, en obras que son tan salvajes e impredecibles como Nuestras Américas.

Charles Bernstein & Eduardo Espina, editors

Issue One

Essays / Ensayos
Charles Bernstein
Roberto Echavarren
Eduardo Espina
José Kozer
Heriberto Yépez

Poetry / Poesía
Carlos Germán Belli
Régis Bonvicino
Robert Creeley
Oliverio Girondo
Tan Lin
Harryette Mullen
Tom Raworth

Interview / Entrevista
Marjorie Perloff
Enrique Mallen

116pp., 8x10", color

S/N: subscribe: http://www.snnewworldpoetics.com/

↑ Index

96. Gloria Mindock

"live Landscape" by Andrey Gritsman published by Cervena Barva Press

Sat 15 May 2010

Cervena Barva Press Announces a New Book
"Live Landscape"
by Andrey Gritsman

Live Landscape by Andrey Gritsman

Andrey Gritsman is a poet and essayist, born and raised in Russia. He lives in New York City and works as a physician. He has been widely published in Russia, including five collections of poetry. Poems, essays and translations in English have appeared in Manhattan Review, New Orleans Review, Denver Quarterly, Notre Dame Review, Poet Lore, South Carolina Review and many others and were anthologized in Modern Poetry in Translation (UK), in Crossing Centuries (New Generation in Russian Poetry), The Breath of Parted Lips: Voices from the Robert Frost Place and in Stranger at Home: American Poetry with an Accent . Collections of poetry and essays Long Fall was published by Spuyten Duyvil in 2004 and recent poetry collection PISCES by Numina Press. Andreyâ€™s work was nominated for the Pushcart Prize in 2005, 2006 and 2007 and was on the short list for the Joyce Osterweil/PEN American Center Prize in Poetry in 2005. He runs the Intercultural Poetry Series in a popular literary club Cornelia Street CafÃ© and edits international poetry magazine INTERPOEZIA .

Andrey Gritsman is quite literally a groundbreaking poet. From Moscow to New York is a steep distance but Gritsman makes us aware of the threads that link seemingly disparate occasions. Fresh perceptions create new styles and Gritsmanâ€™s is more than a synthesis of two cultures: it is an art that probes delusions and pleasures by a poet who has been around some daunting blocks. â€”Baron Wormser, author of Good Trembling and many other collections of poetry.

Andrey Gritsmanâ€™s poems are unwavering in their honesty, relentless in their assessment of contemporary life, and clear-eyed in their approach to human love and mortality. We instantly recognize the terrain he is negotiating. Perhaps only Gritsman, with his unprejudiced immigrantâ€™s eye, can describe the empty, arid landscape of the American West. These are poems that peer into the abyss behind the official public happiness of American life, the compulsion to be always hopeful, positive and bubbling over with good spirits. That is to say: they are real poems, and make no accommodation with fanciful dreams. Read â€˜em, and weep. â€”Kurt Brown, poet, editor of several anthologies, founder, Aspen Writersâ€™ Seminar Gritsmanâ€™s poems are tenderness in transit. They fully inhabit their evoked circumstances so that their significance keeps expanding and resonating before the quality of attention given over to them. He so quickly is able to penetrate to the depths in the poems, it is as though working with a large, oiled, sharp shovel while the rest of us are working with miniature dull and rusty spoons. The use of brevity in some of these poems remind me of my beloved Denise Levertov. His poems are â€œtime-floodedâ€ and remind me that whether we look backward or forward in time always the beloved figures are diminishing, disappearing, and the shadow growing from our own foot soles moves among the company of many other shadows. â€œConstant departure,â€ as he says it, is our state, and all we can do is stand for our count, make our song, and salute each other. â€”Jeanne Marie Beaumont, author of Curious Conduct (BOA Editions)

FOR MY FATHER

After you've been gone,
I've been flying alone back and forth
above the waters and the continents.
Both of us: me here and you there know too well that this is a waste of time
and space.
I may be flying, looking for you
for the rest of my life
or death, and still never see you.

Nothing can be undone,
and I can't take it.
Nor I can take the fact
that every time I see my close ones, I know,
it may be the last time I see them.

Don't worry about me. While I fly,
an angel in uniform attends me,
gives me some water and bread,
and smiles to me.
She takes care of me
until it's time to get out,
get in line for the luggage
and then to disappear into crowd
which lives on the exhaust,
cyclic persistence
and canned expectations.

The latter is something
I live on myself, expectation melting slowly into waiting
as I keep on flying
in the space given
for the time being.

Cover Art: Natasha Gasteva | ISBN: 978-0-9844732-1-2 | 73 pages Order online at http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/cervenabooks.html

Live Landscape

$15.00

Shipping

$3.00

Total

$18.00

Thank you-

Gloria Mindock

[redacted]

Â

Send check or money order payable to:
Cervena Barva Press
P.O. Box 440357,
W. Somerville, MA 02144-3222
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

97. Jennifer Karmin
Red Rover Series / Experiment #36
Sat 15 May 2010

Red Rover Series
{readings that play with reading}

Experiment #36:
Textual Ecologies & Contaminations

SATURDAY, MAY 22
7pm / doors lock 7:30

Featuring:
Jennifer Scappettone
Asimina Chremos with collaborators Joseph Ravens & Alycia Scott

at Outer Space Studio
1474 N. Milwaukee -- Chicago, IL
suggested donation $4

NEW VENUE
near CTA Damen blue line
third floor walk up
not wheelchair accessible

ASIMINA CHREMOS was born in 1966 in Toronto, Canada and is a naturalized US citizen. Her mother was raised in the state of Virginia in the USA and her father is a native of Central Greece. Since childhood, Chremos has brought playful curiosity and incisive intelligence to her exploration of dance as a creative practice, lifestyle, career and evolving philosophy. Approaching dance as art, she creates abstractions, narratives and kinetic sculptural forms across stages, studios and spaces of all types and sizes. Recent projects include daily dance vlog CircadianDancer; site specific performances as microgig with cellist Fred Lonberg-Holm; and Echo Den, a sound-and-movement duo with vocalist Carol Genetti. In July 2010 Chremos will leave Chicago and travel around the country and beyond to create, perform and teach.

JOSEPH RAVENS creates time-based art works that encompass text, movement, installation, technology, costume, and object. Touching on subjects such as materialism, insatiability, conformity, and alienation, his performances reflect a struggle to find pattern and purpose within an imposing and random universe. A graduate of The School of the Art Institute of Chicago with an MFA in Performance, Ravens has a BFA in Theater and studied audio/visuals at Gerrit Reitvelt Acadamie in Amsterdam, Holland. Joseph is committed to presenting his work globally. To learn more, please visit http://www.josephravens.com

JENNIFER SCAPPETTONE, a poet, translator, and scholar, is the author of From Dame Quickly (Litmus, 2009), and of several chapbooks. Exit 43â€”an archaeology in several media of Superfund sites interrupted by pop-up chorusesâ€”is in progress for Atelos Press. She edited Belladonna Elders Series #5: Poetry, Landscape, Apocalypse, featuring her pop-up stills and prose and new writing by Etel Adnan and Lyn Hejinian (Belladonna, 2009). Pop-up scores have been adapted for performance in an evolving collaboration with choreographer Kathy Westwater as PARK, with an initial in-progress showing at New Yorkâ€™s Dance Theater Workshop last February. Her verse â€œstillsâ€ have been installed at the Zaoem and Infusoria exhibits of visual poetry in Brussels and Ghent, and more are coming to the magazine Speechless.

As a translator, she guest-edited the feature section of Aufgabe 7 (2008), devoted to contemporary Italian â€œpoetry of research,â€ and is completing an edition of selected works by the poet/musicologist Amelia Rosselli. She is also finishing Modernism in Venice, a book-length study of the post Romantic city as a crucible for experimental aesthetics in the twentieth century. She is an assistant professor of English and Creative Writing at the University of Chicago. Readings and talks are archived at her PennSound page, http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Scappettone.html

ALYCIA SCOTT has performed around the globe in spaces ranging from theaters in Russia to balconies in Guatemala, a graveyard in Mexico and art galleries in the United States. Rooted in performance as a mode of poetically intervening with the malaise of socially constructed realities, Alycia uses movement to understand and engage kinesics to connect people, and instigate change. She continually studies ritual movement, from West African Dance and Butoh, to yoga and daily routines of both the ancient and modern world. As a curator and arts administrator, she has developed projects and exhibitions that engage communities, both local and global, in addressing socio-political issues from womenâ€™s rights to food production, the state of water and cultural reflections in the body.

Red Rover Series is curated by Laura Goldstein and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national, and international writers, artists, and performers. The series was founded in 2005 by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin.

Email ideas for reading experiments
to us at [redacted]

The schedule for events is listed at http://groups.yahoo.com/group/redroverseries

UPCOMING
June - David Emanuel & Jen Hofer

↑ Index

98. The Dariens

Steven Manuel

Sat 15 May 2010

We are very pleased to have been able to publish these fine poems by Steven Manuel.

Thank you,
the dariens
http://thedariens.blogspot.com

↑ Index

99. Justin Katko

CRS 5 - Jow Lindsay-Walton and Posie Rider, Fri 21 May

Sun 16 May 2010

For the fifth instalment of the Cambridge Reading Series (England), imaginative works of original poetry and fiction will be read aloud this Friday, 21st May, by Posie Rider (aka Posie Rider) and Joe Walton (aka Jow Lindsay, Frances Crot, Kyle Storm Best-Chetwynde, Lara Buckerton, Amelia Gilmore, Prawn Datasun, Blandrew Potion, etc). Together they are Lorqi Blinkx and any other concrescent id-Entity they can rustle up in the great airplane kitchen of the exolatable Love/Strife plasmata mesoscopia. The reading will take place at 7:30pm in the Judith E. Wilson drama studio, Faculty of English. Free; all welcome; wine served.

****

POSIE RIDER: I started writing poems as soon as I could write ... I began writing songs, plays, and novels around age 10, and still have many of those things. Although I continued writing novels until I was 15 or so, and I still dabble in prose fiction, I decided at the ripe old age of 12 that I had conquered all forms of writing except poetry and that my major energies would focus on that genre. Find me at ladiesalone.blogspot.com xxx

JOE WALTON a grandi en Afrique du Sud avant de s'installer à Édimbourg où il travail en tant que secrétaire dans la finance. Il anime plusieurs blogs: Everyone's Cup of Tea <http://josephwalton.blogspot.com/> et Crot of Shit < http://franciscrot.blogspot.com/>. Son travail possède des thèmatiques variées (amulettes, chagrin etc.). Son prochain livre paraîtra chez Veer et aura pour titre MELÉE DANS LE SPERME ET AUTRES CHANSONS ET LES POSITIONS DU STRESS. Il est l'un des éditeurs de Bad Press < http://badpress.infinology.net/>.

****

Please direct any queries to Ryan Dobran ([redacted]) or see the CRS website: crs0hq.tumblr.com. The Cambridge Reading Series is funded by the Judith E. Wilson Fund and organised by English graduate students Ryan Dobran, Ian Heames, Justin Katko, Laura Kilbride, and Mike Wallace-Hadrill.

****

And don't miss the final CRS reading of the year!
>> Friday 18 June: Sean Bonney & Simon Jarvis

↑ Index

100. Michael
LONG LIVE NEW ORLEANS!!! BIG BRIDGE TRIBUTE
Sun 16 May 2010

Complete New Orleans Tribute Issue

Dear Friends of Big Bridge,

We are pleased to announce the final Supplement of Big Bridge's Epic Tribute to New Orleans. When we set out to offer this tribute to the magical and great City of New Orleans we had no idea it would take two years and three installments. Gratitude to Jack Krick and Mary Sands Woodbury for webmastering us through this enormity. And thank you for your patience in allowing this tribute to evolve. There is no shortage of wonders to be found within!

Love to you all! And LONG LIVE NEW ORLEANS!!!

BIG BRIDGE
http://www.bigbridge.org

Complete New Orleans Tribute Issue

2010 SUPPLEMENT

FEATURES

Photographing the Ninth Ward
Images of New Orleans After Katrina by John Rosenthal

Diane di Prima
A Retrospective Collection of Essays

Home Again, Home Again
A Memoir by Ron Loewinsohn

Perfiles de la Noche / Profiles of Night
Mujeres poetas de Venezuela/Women Poets of Venezuela
A Selection from the Bi-lingual Anthology
Original complete text selected and translated by Rowena Hill
Co-edited by Pen de Venezuela and bid & co.
Selection for online edition by Terri Carrion

Poetry by María Auxiliadora Álvarez, Edda Armas, Enriqueta Arvelo Larriva, Mar&iacutea calcaño, Laura Cracco, Ida Gramcko, Patricia Guzmán, Veronica

Jaffe, Maritza Jiménez, Rowena Hill, Martha Kornblith, Luz machado, María Isabel Novillo, Cecilia Ortiz, Hanni Ossott, Yolanda Pantin, Emira Rodríguez, Margara Russotto, María Clara Salas, Elizabeth Schön, Blanca Strepponi, Ana Enriqueta Terán, Alicia Torres, Elena Vera, Carmen Verde Arocha, Miyo Vestrin

FEATURE POETS

Wendy Babiak Jim Christy Hans Plomp Robert Priest

FEATURED ARTISTS

Ed Coletti Jeff Crouch Diana Magallon and Jeff Crouch John Martone Spencer Selby

FICTION
edited by Vernon Frazer

Tom Bradley Seth Phelps Stefani Christova Jordan Zinovich Jefferson Hansen Joe Clifford Christopher Brookhouse Andy Stewart

REVIEWS

Allan Graubard reviews Gherasim Luca

Paul Martinez Pompa reviews Francesco Levato's translation of Tiziano Fratus

Jack Foley reviews Katherine Hastings

Roberts French reviews Anne Valley-Fox

Art Beck reviews Neeli Cherkovski

Steve Dalachinsky & Yuko Otomo review Gerald Nicosia

Billey Rainey reviews Stephen Bett

Wanda Phipps reviews a performance by Delirious Dances

An Interview with Choreographer Edisa Weeks
Interviewer: Wanda Phipps

2009 SUPPLEMENT

CHAPBOOK:
A Time in Fragments
Poem by Clark Coolidge; Drawings by Nancy Victoria Davis

FEATURES

Big Bridge New Orleans Sturm und Drang Anthology. Edited by Dave Brinks and Bill Lavender. Introductory notes for work by 30 artists and 90 writers.

Slow Poetry Edited by Dale Smith . One of the most refreshing and promising developments in poetry in recent years, Slow Poetry does not propose another sectarian or clique position, but rather methods of reading and attitudes toward production which could apply to most genres in the current scene or likely to emerge in the near future. The approach has a strong base in concepts and needs made more apparent than ever by current ecological and economic concerns.

Beauty Came Groveling Forward: Selected South African Poems and Stories. Edited by Gary Cummiskey. This collection was meant to show the diversity and spirited character of current South African writing. It contains work by some celebrated writers, and some whose work has not received wide circulation even in its home country. Without the problems caused by canon formation or trying to be totally comprehensive, this group of poems and stories is free to work outside the stereotypes and preconceptions of South Africa and allow the participants to show what they can do as individuals.

All This Strangeness: A Garland for George Oppen. Edited by Eric Hoffman. Commentary on Oppen has grown slowly, unobtrusively, and steadily, until it now forms a major body in itself. This collection of essays evaluates that body of criticism in less partisan terms than many of its predecessors, seeking to focus on individual poems and prosody in a broad historical context, going beyond the dichotomies that dominated the 20th Century and making room for further types of relevance in current literary and social dispensations.

Sephardic Proverbs. Collected and translated by Michael Castro. Proverbs act on many of the same principles as other miniatures, such as haiku. Like stand-alone couplets and quatrains used in everything from toasts to insults, they also include a strong element of collaboration and evolution. As a look at a tradition or a type of poem, this collection can stay with a reader a long time.

Post-Beat Anthology. Reprint from the Chinese anthology, with brief intro. Edited by Vernon Frazer. How would you edit a collection of poems with that title for a Chinese audience? Probably not the same way Frazer has. That's one of the things that makes it interesting and refreshing.

as per Le Roman de la Rose, for example. An Anthology of Middle East Genocide Edited by Arpine Konyalian Grenier How does the cruel and unusual work for you through art, whether it comes from direct experience or direct/indirect memory. Be Genet, for example; lemon to lemonade, for example. How does one turn to Le Roman de la Rose (a Middle Ages Poem) when one is mired in or sorting out or faced with what happened or what is happening that is cruel and unusual due to human intolerance: racial religious cultural gender related and other.

Charles Olson and the Nature of Destructive Humanism by Craig Stormont

One Man Blues: Remembering Thomas Chapin. Reminiscence by Vernon Frazer

Excerpt from Autobiography by David Bromige

The India Journals by John Brandi

Genius and Heroin: by Michael Largo. In this essay, the author reviews his own book. The themes of psycho-chemistry may stretch back to pristine civilizations in China, Egypt, and Mexico, but they seem inexhaustible. Perhaps associate chemicals with genius is because our brains produce such sophisticated bases to start with, and self-review also finds a base in that phenomenon.

WAR PAPERS (3)
Poems and essays against war. Sub-features by John Bradley, Joel Lewis, Philip Metres, Vincent Katz, Francesco Levato, and Louise Landes Levi, plus reflections from around the world on the election of Barack Obama, and, of course, Halvard Johnson's continuing anthology of anti-war poems.

A Retrospective of the Publication Work of Karl Young

ART

Enigmas paintings by Jim Spitzer. As a regular contributor to Big Bridge, these paintings, variations on an enigmatic theme, show Spitzer's continuing evolution, as well as being koan-like meditations in their own right.

The Kingdom of Madison: Photographs from Madison County, North Carolina by Rob Amberg. Selections from three sets of photos, exploring a still relatively isolated place, where landscape still has functional meaning. When Amberg arrived, not as a tourist, but as one seeking community "Planting was still done by the signs of the moon. Water came from springs and heat from forests" and traditional music still part of daily life. These photos add to the tradition begun in the WPA projects of the Great Depression, but decidedly retain an identity of their own.

These Are My Angels by Tasha Robbins. Small paintings done in Brooklyn on found cardboard by one of the Post-Katrina diaspora. Celebrating the C-Train stop at Franklin + Fulton Avenues, as the artist writes, they "kept my heart, eye + hand moving with a spirit of life close to the timbre and vibration of the Crescent City, still healing. . .

Lectura en Tránsito. Project Created and Directed by Carmen Gloria Berríos. Set based on combination of public art and poetry from Santiago de Chile. Poems translated by Terri Carrion and Carmen Gloria Berríos.

Animal Night Photography by Felicia Murray; notes by Louise Landes Levi. New techniques in photography allow us to make photographic images of phenomena we could only imagine in previous eras. We might debate whether the nature of cameras and software brings us any closer to the spiritual world, but these haunting images of animals should make us feel less alone, and more in touch with the continuum of life.

12 Collages by John Brandi. These colages can be read as a non-verbal counterpart and extension of his India Journal and related work.

FICTION

Fiction by Mel Freilicher, Eric Beeny, Stefani Christova, Lynda Schor, David Madgalene, Stephen-Paul Martin, Mark Wallace, Susan Smith Nash, Richard Martin, Peter Conners, Ann Bogle, Jeffrey Hansen, Carol Novack

REVIEWS

Reviews of: Wanda Phipps, Lewis Warsh, Simon Pettet, Larissa Shmailo, Bobbie Louise Hawkins, Ed Sanders, Bill Berkson, Colter Jacobsen, Mark Young, John Roche, Philip Gounis, Rich Kruse, Michael Rumaker, Annie Le Brun, George Kimball, and Ashis Gupta. Reviewed by: Kirpal Gordon; Svitlana Matviyenko, Garry Parrish, Jackie Sheeler, Jim Feast, Allan Graubard, Charles Thorne, Barbara Henning, Tom Hibbard, Steve Elmer, Stephen Lewandowski Joe Wetteroth, Vernon Frazer, Leverett T. Smith, and Katherine Hastings.

LITTLE MAGS Plastic Ocean, Green Dragon, Untamed Ink

ROCKPILE. ROCKPILE is a collaboration between David Meltzer — poet, musician, essayist, and more — and Michael Rothenberg of Big Bridge Press. David and Michael will journey through eight cities in the U.S. to perform poetry and prose, composed while on the road, with local musicians and artists in each city. ROCKPILE will serve to educate and preserve as well as to create a history of collaboration. It will help to reinforce the tradition of the troubadour of all generations, central to the cultural upheaval and identity politics that reawakened poets, artists, musicians, and songwriters in the mid-1960s through the 1970s. The project will end with a final multimedia performance in San Francisco. Check out the ROCKPILE Blog for calendar and discussion!

↑ Index

101. Lisa Samuels

It's all good - now available

Sun 16 May 2010

‘It’s all good,’ a track from my developing audio CD of Tomorrowland, is now available here – http://www.nzepc.auckland.ac.nz/features/home&away/samuels.asp - on the Home & Away Digital Bridge.

Home & Away is a 2010 trans-Tasman poetic interchange conducted by Pam Brown, Martin Edmond, Brian Flaherty and Michele Leggott, with real time meetings in Auckland (April) and Sydney (September), and the Digital Bridge has many fine vehicles on it.

For the Tomorrowland CD, I am using voice, musical instruments, and noise chance to form soundscapes that accompany the reading aloud of the book. My thanks to Tim Page for his sound recording, mixing, and editing expertise.

Yrs in the transpacific,
Lisa Samuels

↑ Index

102. Mark Melnicove

Bern Porter Lost & Found Blog

Mon 17 May 2010

Rachael Morrison, MoMA curator of their current Bern Porter Lost & Found Exhibit, has posted a write-up of the Bern Porter event at Esopus on April 22. There's audio of Dan Domench's and Kenneth Goldsmith's performances of and about Bern Porter, and a video excerpt from my new 35-minute film about Bern, JOY GLOWS WHERE CONFUSION WAS. Mark Melnicove http://www.moma.org/explore/inside_out/2010/05/12/lost-and-found-an-evening-with-bern-porter/#more-6074

↑ Index

103. Alan Sondheim

Playing at Linger Cafe in Brooklyn this Sunday - Come!

Mon 17 May 2010

We're playing at Linger Cafe in Brooklyn this Sunday - Come if you can!

- Alan, Azure, Myk -

The AMA group - Myk Freedman, Alan Sondheim, and Azure Carter - will perform at Linger, May 23rd, at 5 pm. Their music is improvised, drawing on a number of traditions, but emphasizing pushing the instruments to the limit. Carter sings (her own pieces) against a backdrop of free music; Freedman plays lap steel and steel-string guitar, and Sondheim plays electric oud and saz, cura cumbus, hegelung and guitar.

http://www.lingercafelounge.com/events.html

533 Atlantic Avenue / Btwn 3rd & 4th Avenues / Brooklyn, NY 11217 / [redacted]

Contact: [redacted] / Web: www.lingercafelounge.com

(You can also contact me for further info - Alan)

↑ Index

104. george spencer

Re: a noun sing Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham, an e·ratio editions e·chap

Mon 17 May 2010

---

does anyone know of basic level classes in hypertexing in new york city?
thank
george spencer

--- On Tue, 5/4/10, St. Thomasino <[redacted]> wrote:

From: St. Thomasino <[redacted]>
Subject: a noun sing Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham, an eÂ·ratio editions eÂ·chap
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, May 4, 2010, 10:57 AM

EÂ·

EÂ·ratio Editions is pleased to present EÂ·ratio Editions EÂ·chap #9:

Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham.

â€œ . . . bathe deep in / the barely-there / disassembled gallery / of the everyday . . . â€

Two poetic sequences.Â With illustrations by Keith Higginbotham.

Also available:

#8.Â Polylogue by Carey Scott Wilkerson.Â Poems.Â â€œ . . . with rules and constitutive games, / with paints and gramarye / with some modicum / of my reckless trust . . . â€

#7.Â BashÅâ€™s Phonebook.Â 30 translations by Travis Macdonald.Â The great Japanese haiku poet Matsuo BashÅ goes digital.Â Conceptual poetry.Â With translatorâ€™s notes.

#6.Â Correspondance (a sketchbook) by Joseph F. Keppler.Â Digital art.Â With an introduction by Joseph F. Keppler.

#5.Â Six Comets Are Coming by Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino.Â Volume I of the collected works including Go and Go Mirrored, with revised introductions, corrected text and restored original font.

#4.Â The Logoclasody Manifesto.Â Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino on logoclasody, logoclastics, eidetics and pannarrativity.Â Addenda include the Crash Course in Logoclastics, Concrete to Eidetic (on visual poetry) and On Mathematical Poetry.

#3.Â Waves by MÃ¡rton KoppÃ¡ny.Â â€œThese works are minimalist by design, but should we paraphrase the thought channeled therein, the effect would be encyclopedic, ranging through philosophy, psychology, politics, and the human emotions.â€Â Visual poetry.

#2.Â Mending My Black Sweater and other poems by Mary Ann Sullivan.Â Poems of making conscious, of acceptance and of self-remembering, and of personal responsibility.

#1.Â Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino joins John M. Bennett In the Bennett Tree.Â Collaborative poems, images, an introduction and a full-length critical essay pay homage to American poet John M. Bennett.

http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com/eratioeditions.html

http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com/

EÂ·

↑ Index

105. David-Baptiste Chirot

6 Gallery co-founder dies

Mon 17 May 2010

---

http://www.nytimes.com/2010/05/16/arts/design/16remington.html
_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

106. Naomi Buck Palagi

Re: little orange pencils

Mon 17 May 2010

---

fabulous maze of sites and images to explore!

--- On Thu, 5/13/10, { brad brace } <[redacted]> wrote:

From: { brad brace } <[redacted]>
Subject: little orange pencils
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, May 13, 2010, 6:17 PM

usually I might make some flux-art from such an odd discovery but no one (except for Janice, and I hate her),) ended-up being very interested in my earlier offer of the 20-yr-old collected seashore pebbles rolling back and forth

on my car's dashboard (that I offered to exchange for a US$2
bill),, so I'm thinking the little discarded orange pencils
that I inexplicably discover pretty much in the same sidewalk location nearly every day wouldn't be of much interest either... (not really) sorry to have troubled anyone at all: just check the a-for-animosity box on your artworld-ballot (I'll still send you a pencil), and let's finally dispense with all these horrid art-hostage-museums,
alright?...

long-ago: http://www.bbrace.net/pencil.html

/:b

↑ Index

107. William Allegrezza

POD and presses

Mon 17 May 2010

I'm trying to come up with a list of small presses that use PODs. If you know of one, please let me know.

Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

108. steve dalachinsky

reading updates yert again

Tue 18 May 2010

May 23- @ Tribes Gallery 285 E. 3rd St (Ave C&D)
2nd Fl . Manhattan 4ish-7 PM
Donald Gardner, Yuko Otomo, Steve Dalachinsky plus short open reading - donation

_____

> June 5
> The Brownstone Poets presents:
> steve dalachinsky and Bruce Webber
> Park Plaza Restaurant
> 220 Cadman Plaza West near Clark St. & Pineapple Walk
> Brooklyn, NY 11201 - 718 – 596 – 5900
> Take the A or C to High Street, 2 or 3 to Clark Street,
> 4, 5, M or R to Court Street, Borough Hall
>

>
> 2:30 P.M. $3 Donation – plus Food/Drink - Open Mic
>
>
> curated by Patricia Carragon
> _____
>
June 6 - 4-6pm opening for poets in collage show wine etc short readings by steve dalachinsky yuko otomo, bruce weber, valaery oisteaneu, star black, jeff wright, bob heman, aaron howard, lewis warsh, nicole peyrafitte tribes gallery 2nd floor - 285 e 3rd st (ave c and d) manhattan

_____

> June 14 at local 269 suffolk and houston 7 pm
w/ the great loren mazzacane connors on guitar

_____

Sunday June 20 - 2-5pm
the Vision Festival presents @ AGathering of Tribes
285 East 3rd St. (between C & D - 2nd floor)
donation to Tribes

poetry by

Jeff Wright
Bob Heman
Lewis Warsh

Poetry & Music

Albey Balgochian & Jane Grenier B
Barry Wallenstein
Yuko Otomo - Shayna Dulberger
Jake Marmer / & Alon Nechushtan
Aaron Howard w/Gwen Krueger & Tomislav Butkovic
Steve Dalachinsky
Alexandre Pierrepont
Tamara Singh
Tsaurah Litsky
Steve Ben Israel

Musicians / Improvs
Ellen Christi
Max Johnson bass
Andrew Barker drums

Charles Waters reeds
plus others to be announced

On Sat, 15 May 2010 22:49:29 -0400 The Dariens <[redacted]>
writes:
> We are very pleased to have been able to publish these fine poems by > Steven > Manuel.
>
> Thank you,
> the dariens
> http://thedariens.blogspot.com
>
>
>

↑ Index

109. Vernon Frazer
IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER UPDATED ON YOUTUBE
Tue 18 May 2010

Hello

In publishing this poem before, I encountered several production problems. On a previous revision the text I prepared turned fuzzy whenI published it to YouTube. I've redone the piece and reformatted the text so that you can read it clearly during the performance. I apologize for the frequent posts on this matter and hope you'll enjoy what I hope is the final take.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZZmBlA2WiY4

Vernon

I

↑ Index

110. Mark Prejsnar
in Georgia: Language Harm
Tue 18 May 2010

COME SEE Poets Pretend to be People ...

COME SEE Poets Pretend to be People ...

This month's Language Harm is Wednesday, May 19

The Atlanta Poets Group will perform, starting at 8:00 pm

The theme is:
Impersonation

Language Harm occurs at:

Eyedrum

290 Martin Luther King, Jr. Drive

(about 3 blocks west of Oakland Cemetery)Atlanta, GA

Admission is $5

Free for Eyedrum members

For more info on the APG and its work,

And on Eyedrum gallery:

http://www.eyedrum.org/

http://atlantapoetsgroup.blogspot.com/

--mark

"More and more mankind will discover that we have to turn to poetry to interpret life for us, to console us, to sustain us. Without poetry, our science will appear incomplete; and most of what now passes with us for religion and philosophy will be replaced by poetry."

--Matthew Arnold

↑ Index

111. Kate Eichhorn
<no subject>
Tue 18 May 2010

Barbara Godard, 1942 2010

On Sunday evening, literary critic, cultural theorist and translator Dr. Barbara Godard passed away in Toronto. The author of over 200 articles (some reprinted in her 2008 book, Canadian Literature at the Crossroads of Language and Culture) and editor of several edited collections, Barbara played a major role in creating new critical approaches to Canadian and Quebecois writing, especially innovative women¹s writing. Barbara was deeply committed to working in collaboration with colleagues and students as well as writers, artists and activists. In 1984, she founded the journal Tessera with Daphne Marlatt,

Gail Scott and Kathy Mezei. For many years, she served on the editorial board of Open Letter. In addition to her research and writing, Barbara supervised several generations of Canadian literary critics and cultural studies scholars. She will continue to have a tremendous impact on Canadian literature and culture, both terrains she helped to write.

↑ Index

112. Tim Peterson

EOAGH Book Party 5/23: Andrew Levy and Charles Borkhuis

Tue 18 May 2010

EOAGH Reading Series 5/23:

Andrew Levy and Charles Borkhuis

A Reading and Book Party Celebrating the

Print Release of Andrew Levy's EOAGH book

Nothing is in Here

A Historic Pairing of Levy & Borkhuis

Sunday, May 23 at 2PM

at Unnameable Books,

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

ANDREW LEVY is the author of Values Chauffeur You, Democracy Assemblages, Curve, Elephant Surveillance to Thought, Memories of My Father, Cracking Up, and other collections. His poems have appeared in numerous magazines (from Aerial and Conjunctions to The Gig and Kenning to Temblor and Writing) as well as anthologies such as Writing from the New Coast, The Art of Practice: 45 Contemporary Poets, The Gertrude Stein Awards in Innovative Poetry, and Telling It Slant: Avant-Garde Poetics of the 1990s. Levy's work has been translated into Finnish, French, German, Slovenian, and Spanish. Ashoka, a book length poem, was published in Spain by Zasterle Books in 2002. Andrew Levy has taught journalism at Queensborough-CUNY since 2004. He lives in New York City with his wife and two daughters.

Read "After Such Knowledge: in remembrance of Jackson Mac Low" in EOAGH Issue 2:

http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuetwo/levy.htm

Read the e-book version of "Nothing is in Here" in EOAGH Issue 5:

http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/levy.html

CHARLES BORKHUIS is a poet, playwright, screenwriter, and essayist. His books of poems include: Afterimage, Savoir-fear, Alpha Ruins, Proximity (Stolen Arrows), Dinner with Franz, and Hypnogogic Sonnets. Alpha Ruins was selected by Fanny Howe as a finalist for the William Carlos Williams Book Award. His poetry has appeared in the anthologies: Writing from the New Coast: Technique and Practice, Primary Trouble, The Gertrude Stein Awards in Innovative Poetry, and the Avec Sampler. Disappearing Acts is his latest manuscript of poems. His essays have appeared in two books from the University of Alabama Press: Telling It Slant and We Who Love to Be Astonished. He is the recipient of a Dramalogue Award. His plays are published in four collections: Mouth of Shadows, The Sound of Fear Clapping, Stage This: 3, and Poets' Theater. His CD, Black Light, contains two radio plays produced for NPR http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Borkhuis.php

Read "from The Tooth Fairy" in EOAGH Issue 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/borkhuis.html

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

Sueyeun Juliette Lee, Paolo Javier, and Filip Marinovich

Sunday, June 6 @2PM

Michael Gottlieb and Susie Timmons (Faux Press Event)

Sunday, June 20 @2PM

E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor

Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

113. Crane's Bill Books

Edoardo Sanguineti, Italian Poet, 79, Dies

Tue 18 May 2010

Edoardo Sanguineti, Italian Poet, 79, Dies
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Filed at 4:36 p.m. ET

ROME (AP) -- Edoardo Sanguineti, a poet, critic and intellectual whose playful use of language made him an important neo-avant-garde figure on Italy's 1960s literary scene, died on Tuesday in a Genoa hospital.

Doctors at Villa Scassi hospital said Sanguineti, 79, died there following emergency surgery for an abdominal aneurysm.

In the early 1960s, Sanguineti helped found and influence the so-called ''Gruppo 63,'' in which experimental poetry explored what he considered the ''dissolution'' of daily language.

In a tribute, President Giorgio Napolitano recalled how he came to know and appreciate Sanguineti when the two were Communist lawmakers in Parliament from 1979-1983. State TV said Sanguineti liked to call himself ''the last Marxist.''

Feltrinelli, which published much of his work, hailed him as a ''stubborn and intelligent critical conscience of our time, a craftsman of language and formidable poet of provocation and play.''

Sanguineti, who was born in Genoa in 1930, was an expert on Dante, taught literature at several Italian universities, wrote plays and essays as well as poems.

His first book of poetry, ''Laborintus,'' was published in 1956, and he went on to publish several more volumes, as well as two novels.

Culture Minister Sandro Bondi hailed Sanguineti as a ''fundamental voice of Italian literature in the latter half of the 20th century.'' Sanguineti often imbued his poetry ''with civil and political commitment, as in the best 20th century tradition,'' Bondi said.

In a recent interview, Sanguineti said the role of the poet is, in some way, to help explain the world. He was particularly passionate about class struggle, recently lamenting that ''the political situation is disastrous, with a mass of proletarians and underclass proletarians in extreme difficulty, and who no longer are aware that they are.''

↑ Index

114. Ruth Lepson
Re: POD and presses
Tue 18 May 2010

---

blazevox.org

On 5/17/10 7:33 PM, "William Allegrezza" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'm trying to come up with a list of small presses that use PODs. If you know of one, please let me know.
>
> Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

115. Stephen Ellis
Re: little orange pencils
Tue 18 May 2010

"little orange pencils", that's GOOOD. I already have the seashells, from a girl in Miami.

*

> Date: Mon, 17 May 2010 14:30:22 -0700
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: little orange pencils
> To: [redacted]
>
> fabulous maze of sites and images to explore!
>
> --- On Thu, 5/13/10, { brad brace } <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: { brad brace } <[redacted]>
> Subject: little orange pencils
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Thursday, May 13, 2010, 6:17 PM
>
> usually I might make some flux-art from such an odd discovery but no one (except for Janice, and I hate her),) ended-up being very interested in my earlier offer of the 20-yr-old collected seashore pebbles rolling back and forth on my car's dashboard (that I offered to exchange for a US$2 bill),, so I'm thinking the little discarded orange pencils that I inexplicably discover pretty much in the same sidewalk location nearly every day wouldn't be of much interest either... (not really) sorry to have troubled > anyone at all: just check the a-for-animosity box on your artworld-ballot (I'll still send you a pencil), and let's finally dispense with all these horrid art-hostage-museums, alright?...

>
> long-ago: http://www.bbrace.net/pencil.html
>
> /:b

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

116. David Chirot

Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER UPDATED ON YOUTUBE

Tue 18 May 2010

Many many thanks Vernon! it's a revelation to hear/see you perform vocally and with the bass the pieces--s it opens up to one the true sense of your notations--which when rading them on my own--i would always wonder in what ways you heard them, and how you saw the relationship between the arrangements of the words and the arrangements-of the msuciality of them, as in all your works music is always so vidily present-- truly, my deepest thanks-- david-bc

On Tue, May 18, 2010 at 8:00 AM, Vernon Frazer <[redacted]>wrote:

> Hello
>
> In publishing this poem before, I encountered several production problems. On a previous revision the text I prepared turned fuzzy whenI published it to YouTube. I've redone the piece and reformatted the text so that you can read it clearly during the performance. I apologize for the frequent posts on this matter and hope you'll enjoy what I hope is the final take.
>
> http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZZmBlA2WiY4

> Vernon
>
> I

↑ Index

117. Nic Sebastian
Re: Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Collin Kelley
Tue 18 May 2010

The internet, Facebook, Twitter, blogs, websites, iPad, iPod, podcasts, digital video, computers and who knows what else. What do they all mean for the poet? For Poetry? Collin Kelley responds this week to Ten Questions on Poets and Technology - http://bit.ly/bqCjOR.
Best wishes,
Nic Sebastianhttp://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

118. Hazel Smith
Clay Conversations
Wed 19 May 2010

Some of you may be interested in my collaboration Clay Conversations with British ceramicist Joanna Still up at Scan gallery http://scan.net.au/scan/gallery/works/smith_april10/smith.php. You can just click on the Flash movie to play it, but there is also a Quicktime version. The Quicktime version takes a bit of time to download but gives you a bigger and better screen size. Hazel

Prof. Hazel Smith
Writing and Society Research Group

College of Arts (Bankstown 1.1.163)
UNIVERSITY OF WESTERN SYDNEY
Locked Bag 1797
Penrith South DC NSW 1797
tel: 9772 6400
email: [redacted]

See also my webpage at www.australysis.com
The Erotics of Geography: poetry, performance texts, new media works http://www.tinfishpress.com/erotics.html Practice-led Research, Research-led Practice in the Creative Arts http://www.eupjournals.com/book/9780748636297
The Writing Experiment: strategies for innovative creative writing http://www.allenandunwin.com/writingexp/book.htm

↑ Index

119. Susan Webster Schultz

recent posts on Tinfish Editor's Blog

Wed 19 May 2010

I've been posting on poetry, Alzheimer's, and odd documents (sometimes all at once) recently:

* "A little derivative, / but what isn't, these days... [John Beer & Gizelle Gajelonia rewrite TWL]
* Odd Doc Tuesday: Charles Bernstein meets the DOE E... [Bernstein & DOE ethnicity form]
* Odd Doc Monday: Hawai`i in the Alzheimer's Home
* More Final Project Wonders, Spring 2010
* Harvest Time: Chapbooks & Other Marvels, or, Why I... [love my students]
* Odd Doc Wednesday [calendar of events from the Alzheimer's home] and more on http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com

aloha, Susan M. Schultz

↑ Index

120. amy king

*This Friday -- STAIN OF POETRY with *Melissa Buzzeo, Hugh Behm-Steinberg, Todd Colby, Christie Ann Reynolds, Jared Stanley & Rachel Zolf!

Wed 19 May 2010

Join us on Friday! STAIN OF POETRY with Melissa Buzzeo, Hugh Behm-Steinberg, Todd Colby, Christie Ann Reynolds, Jared Stanley & Rachel Zolf! Friday, May 21 @ 7 p.m. Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn (Directions below) Melissa Buzzeo teaches at St. Johnâ€™s University, and has taught at Brown, Pratt, and The University of Iowa. She is the author of two perfect bound books (What Began Us, 2007 and Face, 2009), and three chapbooks. In addition, her work has been translated into both French and Catalan. From NY originally, she holds degrees from both Cornell University and The University of Iowaâ€™s Writing Workshop. ~ Hugh Behm-Steinberg is the author of Shy Green Fields (No Tell Books) and Sorcery (Dusie Chapbook Kollektiv). His poems can be found in such places as Crowd, VeRT, Volt, Spork, Cue, Slope, Aught, Fence, Swerve, Dirt, Ditch, Zeek and Sweet, as well as some other places with more than one syllable such as New American Writing and foam:e. He teaches in the graduate writing program at California College of the Arts, where he edits the journal Eleven Eleven. ~ Todd Colby is the author of Tremble & Shine and Riot in the Charm Factory: New and Selected Work, both from Soft Skull Press, and the editor of Heights of the Marvelous: A New York Anthology (St. Martins Press). He has appeared in numerous poetry anthologies, including Short Fuse: A World Anthology of Poetry, The Portable Boog Reader, Word Up: Spoken Word Poetry in Print, Verses That Hurt, Revival: Spoken Word from Lollapalooza, and Aloud: Voices from the Nuyorican Poets CafÃ©. Colby has performed his poetry on PBS, MTV, and Canadaâ€™s Much Music Network. He has produced many collaborative books and paintings with the artist David Lantow and was the lyricist and vocalist for the now-legendary New York band Drunken Boat. ~ Christie Ann Reynoldsâ€˜ manuscript, idiot heart was the 2009 winner of The New School Chapbook Competition. She has an MFA in Poetry, a BA in English and an MsEd in Secondary Education. Christie Ann is a member of The Poetry Brothel and her work can be found or is forthcoming in BlazeVox, My Name is Mud, Robot Melon, Sub-Lit, Critiphoria, and others. A short collection is forthcoming from Supermachine this summer. ~ Jared Stanley is the author of Book Made of Forest (Salt 2009) and the chapbooks I Something Scott Inguito You, The Outer Bay, and In Fortune. With Lauren Levin and Catherine Meng, he edits Mrs. Maybe. He grew up in the San Francisco Bay Area and currently lives in the San Joaquin Valley of California. ~ Rachel Zolfâ€˜s fourth full-length book, Neighbour Procedure, was recently released by Coach House Books. Previous collections include Human Resources (Coach House), which won the 2008

Trillium Book Award for Poetry and was a finalist for a Lambda Literary Award, Masque (The Mercury Press), Shoot & Weep (Nomados), from Human Resources (Belladonna books) and Her absence, this wanderer (BuschekBooks). Zolfâ€™s work has appeared in journals throughout North America and in anthologies such as Prismatic Publics: Innovative Canadian Womenâ€™s Poetry and Poetics (Coach House) and a forthcoming anthology of conceptual writing from Les Figues Press. She was the founding poetry editor for The Walrus magazine and has edited several books of poetry. Zolf lives in New York. at Goodbye Blue Monday 1087 Broadway (corner of Dodworth St) Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013 [redacted] J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave or J train to Kosciusko St ~ Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ http://www.stainofpoetry.com -- ALIAS: http://amyking.org

↑ Index

121. David Kirschenbaum

Boog City presents Wave Books and I Feel Tractor

Wed 19 May 2010

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

Wave Books
(Seattle)

This Tues., May 25, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by Wave Books' editor
Joshua Beckman

Featuring readings from

Timothy Donnelly
Geoffrey Nutter
Matthew Rohrer
Rachel Zucker

and music from

I Feel Tractor

Wave One-Night Only Book Sale:

All paperbacks for $10 each
All limited edition hardcovers for $25 each
Any three softcovers together for $24
2010 subscriptions for $75

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

Wave Books
http://www.wavepoetry.com/

Wave Books is an independent poetry press based in Seattle. Dedicated to publishing the best in American poetry by new and established authors, Wave Books was founded in 2005, joining forces with already- established publisher Verse Press. Wave Books seeks to build on and expand the mission of Verse Press by publishing strong innovative work while encouraging the expansion and interactivity of poetry through nationwide readings and events, affirming the belief that the audience for poetry is larger and more diverse than commonly thought.

Wave titles have received critical acclaim in publications such as The Believer, Bookforum, Boston Review, Details, Harper's, Jacket (Australia), The New York Times Book Review, The New Yorker, Rolling Stone, and The Village Voice, among others. Wave authors have received NEA and Guggenheim fellowships, the National Book Award, the Pulitzer Prize, the Kate Tufts Discovery Award, inclusion in the Best American Poetry series, and awards from the Academy of American Poets, the Massachusetts Center for the Book, and The American Poetry Review, among other honors.

Performer Bios

*Timothy Donnelly
http://www.wavepoetry.com/authors/66

Timothy Donnelly is the author of The Cloud Corporation (Wave Books) and Twenty-seven Props for a Production of Eine Lebenszeit (Grove Press). His work has been translated into German and Italian and has appeared in numerous anthologies, including Legitimate Dangers: American Poets of the New Century; Isn’t It Romantic: 100 Love Poems; Joyful Noise: An Anthology of American Spiritual Poetry; and Poet, Poems, Poetry edited by Helen Vendler. A graduate of Johns Hopkins, Columbia, and Princeton universities, he is a poetry editor for Boston Review and teaches in the writing program at Columbia University’s School of the Arts. He lives in Brooklyn with his wife and two daughters.

*I Feel Tractor
http://www.myspace.com/ifeeltractor
http://www.goodbyebetter.com/

Eddie Berrigan is a New York poet and musician who performs under the name I Feel Tractor. His songs are playful retakes of traditional folk and country genres and their subtle, funny lyrics and far-flung imagery create unusual landscapes of physical and emotional territory. I Feel Tractor has released a self-titled 7-inch, Loudmouth Collective, and a full-length recording, Once I Had An Earthquake, on Goodbye Better.

*Geoffrey Nutter
http://www.wavepoetry.com/authors/24

Geoffrey Nutter was born in Sacramento, and attended San Francisco State University and the Iowa Writer's Workshop. He is the author of Christopher Sunset (Wave Books), Water's Leaves & Other Poems (Winner of the 2004 Verse Press Prize), and A Summer Evening (Center for Literary Publishing). His poems have appeared in many journals and anthologies, including The Best American Poetry 1997, The Iowa Anthology of New American Poetries, and Isn't It Romantic: 100 Poems by Younger American Poets. Geoffrey currently teaches in New York City, where he lives with his wife, daughter, and son.

*Matthew Rohrer
http://www.wavepoetry.com/authors/32

Matthew Rohrer is the author of A Plate of Chicken (Ugly Duckling Presse), Rise Up (Wave Books), and A Green Light (Verse Press), which was shortlisted for the 2005 Griffin Poetry Prize. He is also the author of Satellite (Verse Press), and co-author, with Joshua Beckman, of Nice Hat. Thanks. (Verse Press) and the audio CD Adventures While Preaching the Gospel of Beauty. He lives in Brooklyn and teaches in the undergraduate writing program at N.Y.U.

*Rachel Zucker
http://www.rachelzucker.net/

Rachel Zucker is the author of Museum of Accidents (Wave Books); and The Bad Wife Handbook, The Last Clear Narrative, and Eating in the Underworld (all three from Wesleyan University); and Annunciation (The Center for Book Arts). She is, with Arielle Greenberg, the co-editor of Starting Today: 100 Poems for Obama's First 100 Days and Women Poets on Mentorship: Efforts and Affections (both from the University of Iowa Press). A graduate of Yale and the Iowa Writer's Workshop, Zucker has taught at several institutions, including N.Y.U. and Yale University. She lives in New York City with her husband and three sons, and is a certified labor doula.

Directions:
C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. June 29
Straw Gate Books
http://www.leafscape.org/StrawGateBooks/index.html
(Philadelphia)

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

122. Adam Tobin
Re: Playing at Linger Cafe in Brooklyn this Sunday - Come!
Wed 19 May 2010

This trio is really something, and more unlike anything you've heard before than all that. Carter's uncanny and beautiful vocals (including, i think, some of Alan's writing you may have seen here, hyper digital text turned uncannily slow and vocal) linger over a first-rate string band -- Sondheim has the fastest hand/mind in the city, and Freedman's studied melodic sense sculpts it all into some kind of perverted song-forms. I've seen them play together now 3 times, and each time I was astonished.

-----Original Message-----
>From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
>Sent: May 17, 2010 3:22 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Playing at Linger Cafe in Brooklyn this Sunday - Come!
>
>We're playing at Linger Cafe in Brooklyn this Sunday - Come if you can!
>

>- Alan, Azure, Myk -
>
>The AMA group - Myk Freedman, Alan Sondheim, and Azure Carter - will >perform at Linger, May 23rd, at 5 pm. Their music is improvised, drawing >on a number of traditions, but emphasizing pushing the instruments to the >limit. Carter sings (her own pieces) against a backdrop of free music; >Freedman plays lap steel and steel-string guitar, and Sondheim plays >electric oud and saz, cura cumbus, hegelung and guitar.
>
>http://www.lingercafelounge.com/events.html
>
>533 Atlantic Avenue / Btwn 3rd & 4th Avenues / Brooklyn, NY 11217 /
>[redacted]
>
>Contact: [redacted] / Web: www.lingercafelounge.com
>
>(You can also contact me for further info - Alan)
>

↑ Index

123. maxpaul

NAW # 28 IS published

Wed 19 May 2010

NAW #28 IS AVAILABE NOW. Cover by Arthur Dove. Translations of Aime Cesaire, Osip Mandelstam from "The Voronezh Notebooks," Bei Dao, Tomaz Salamun, Martin Adan, Mairi Alexopoulou, Phoebe Giannisi, Katerina Iliopoulou, Socrates Kabouropoulos and Vassilis Manoussakis. Poetry by Gillian Conoley, Rusty Morrison, Pierre Joris, Rae Armantrout, Donald Revell,Alexandria Peary, Lindsay Hill, Noah Eli Gordon, G.C. Waldrep, Bruce Beasley, Erica Lewis, Noelle Kocot, Calvin Bedient, Terence Winch, Steve Wilson, Ed Smallfield, Rob Schlegel, Liz Waldner, Mark DuCharme, Drew Gardner, Kimberly Lyons, Elizabeth Robinson, Mark Irwin, Monica Regan, Craig Watson, Linda Russo, Colette Inez, Richard Silberg, Amy Catanzano, Gabrielle Glancy, John Tritica, Carmen Giminez Lopez, Suzi, David Mutshlecner, Geoff Bouvier, Carolyn Guinzio, Jane-Joritz Nakagawa, Charity Stebbens, Karen Leona Anderson, Steffi Drewes, Stacie Leatherman, Jordan Stempleman, Steffen Brown, Travis Cebula, Daniel Poppick, Tom Comitta, Luke Sykora, Jennifer Atkinson, and Zaid Shlah.

Available from NAW for $15 or $36 for a 3-year subscription, 369 Molino, MIll Valley CA 94941. If you would like to use a credit card, see our website, newamericanwriting.org.

↑ Index

124. Bob Heman

Mindy Levokove and I this saturday at Gizzi's - plus some other dates to remember

Thu 20 May 2010

---

o.k. - this saturday, May 22, from 7:00 until 8:45, Mindy Levokove, R. Nemo Hill, Bob Heman, guitarist Matt Hopard and Michelle Slater will be performing in an event organized by Michelle at Gizzi's at 16 W. 8th St (in the Village) between 5th Avenue and McDougal Street - it should be good - Mindy and I will be going on in the first segment, then Nemo in the second and Michelle in the third

then on sunday, June 6, from 4:00-6:00, a reception/reading will celebrate the opening of WALTZING IN QUICKSAND: POETS IN COLLAGE, which will display collages by poets Star Black, Steven Dalachinsky, Bob Heman, Aaron Howard, Valery Oisteanu, Yuko Otomo, Nicole Peyrafitte, Lewis Warsh, Bruce Weber, and Jeffrey Cyphers Wright in an exhibition curated by Bruce Weber at the Tribes Gallery at 285 East 3rd Street, 2nd floor (between Avenues C and D) - the reception will be preceded by a collage workshop which will begin at 2:00 then on friday, June 11, i'll be part of Moira T. Smith's next event at Gizzi's - they're always a lot of fun - i'll send more information as i have it also mark your calendars - the 11th Big CLWN WR Event will be held on friday, June 18, at 7:00 in the Community Room at Westbeth - the show is still being put together but the features will be Basil King and Liza Wolsky - plus there will be some singers and lots of poetry and an interesting surprise or two - more info will follow

i hope i get to see you at some or all of these events

- Bob

Bob Heman
[redacted]
EarthLink Revolves Around You.

↑ Index

125. Mark Young

Now out from Otoliths — Crag Hill's 7 x 7

Thu 20 May 2010

It's pure serendipity that the 49th book to bear the Otoliths imprint just happens to have the title that it does.....

7 x 7

Crag Hill

56 pages,

Page size 8½" x 8½"

Cover image by Nico Vassilakis

Otoliths 2010

ISBN: 978-0-9806025-7-9

$13.45 + p&h

URL: http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/7-x-7/10899413

Implicitly comparing a book to a deck of cards, and that deck of cards in turn to the world of social violence we're dealt, Crag Hill stakes his ante on the power of poetry to witness and document the multiply-layered, self-inflicted insanity of US daily life in the Bush years. As readers we become participants and are thus empowered to say no to the game of death. — Maria Damon

One of the most important things I look for in poetry is something I can believe —something without posturing or postmodern cynicism or post-anything for that matter: something that stands outside of facile labels, something (disorientingly/ seemingly) simple that makes me see and *hear *and feel—and more importantly, makes me believe—in the world, in poetry, in the process of* poesis. *Crag Hill's poems make me believe and listen—and more importantly—make me *want *to listen. And best of all, they are far from simple and believe in a chance-laden process. They *make our world. *These are poems fiercely engaged with/in our current and tragic socio/ political/ecological moment and I am deeply grateful for them, because gratitude is the beginning of understanding. These poems remind me that rage and discontent is the genesis of change, that "death is death"—such a necessary reminder in times of such alienation from it. Let us now go make and change, listening to this poet's example. —Christopher Arigo

"Scattered parts/now lie about what happened." 7 X 7 parses the dizzying bomb crater sized duplicities of the thoroughly mediated, mediatized and militarized zeitgeist which we have collectively dealt ourselves into. Crag Hill is looking to see where the proverbial chips are falling. And he's playing with a full deck. —Tom Beckett

↑ Index

126. Vernon Frazer
Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER UPDATED ON YOUTUBE
Thu 20 May 2010

David

Many, many thanks to you in return for your kind words.

In 1985, when I heard Ted Enslin read, I realized that hearing poets recite their work, their rhythms and inflections, enabled me to understand it more quickly.

I've often felt that my own work needed a mixed-media presentation--recitation, music and a readable text-- to enable the reader to relate to my work in the fullest way possible. The Poetry Band I had about 20 years ago covered some of that ground. After the Poetry Band ended, my poetry started to incorporate the contrapuntal and polytonal melodies I used to hear around me when I performed with the band, only in the form of language. So I started writing what I've called "orchestrated text."

In IMPROVISATIONS I mentioned the late Julius Hemphill's Coon Bidness because many of the multi-voiced lines in teh book seem to come togeher in the way the saxophones did on his recording.

I'm very pleased that the performance helped you see how my work fits together. Sometimes I think I'm a musician in a writer's body. When Ottone M. Riccio did a spin on Pound by saying, in effect, poetry is music made with language, I began to write from that sensibility and poetry came much more easily to me than it had before.

So, when you (or anybody, I guess) look at my work, knowing that music of some kind is always at its core would (I hope) help "explain" the text.

Again, I thank you for your praise of my work and for posting this. You've certainly made my day.

Best,

Vernon

↑ Index

127. Chad Sweeney
Releasing Issue 7 of PWR
Thu 20 May 2010

Dear friends, weâ€™re happy to announce the release of Issue 7 of Parthenon West Review with poetry by Pam Brown, Brian Henry, Maxine Chernoff, Matt Hart, Diane Suess, Bob Hicok, Alison Hawthorne Deming, George Kalamaras,

Patty Seyburn, Lisa Fishman, Russell Dillon, Todd Melicker, Arlene Ang, Camille Dungy, Jennifer Elise Forrester, Hollie Hardy, Lily Brown, Peter Jay Shippy, Laura Sims, Laynie Browne, Thomas Centolella, Daniel Oâ€™Connell, Nina Corwin, Leslie Patron, Coralie Reed, Mihaela Moscaliuc, Gary McDowell, Erica Lewis, Jason Tandon, Sarah Sarai, Jordon Stempleman, Steffi Drewes, J. Michael Martinez, Rick Cambell, Rick Henry, Idra Novey, Anhvu Buchanan, L.S. Klatt, Evan Commander

And translations from French, Japanese, Hebrew and Romanian: Virginie Lalucq (by Cynthia Hogue and Sylvain Gallais), Juan-luc Nancy (by Cynthia Hogue and Sylvain Gallais), Yosano Akiko (by Dennis Maloney and Hide Oshiro), Shimon Adaf (by Samantha Weiner), Mircea Cartarescu (by Adam J. Sorkin and Daniel Mangu), Remi Froger (by Francois Luong).

Send $10 to Parthenon West Review/ 1808 Russell Street/
Berkeley, CA 94703
Editors David Holler and Chad Sweeney

www.parthenonwestreview.com
The website is slow to catch up, but weâ€™ll have issue 7 up soon enough,

Cheers,
Chad

↑ Index

128. amy king

*Tomorrow! *Melissa Buzzeo, Hugh Behm-Steinberg, Todd Colby, Christie Ann Reynolds, Jared Stanley & Rachel Zolf!

Thu 20 May 2010

STAIN OF POETRY with Melissa Buzzeo, Hugh Behm-Steinberg, Todd Colby, Christie Ann Reynolds, Jared Stanley & Rachel Zolf! Friday, May 21 @ 7 p.m. Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn (Directions below) Melissa Buzzeo teaches at St. Johnâ€™s University, and has taught at Brown, Pratt, and The University of Iowa. She is the author of two perfect bound books (What Began Us, 2007 and Face, 2009), and three chapbooks. In addition, her work has been translated into both French and Catalan. From NY originally, she holds degrees from both Cornell University and The University of Iowaâ€™s Writing Workshop. ~ Hugh Behm-Steinberg is the author of Shy Green Fields (No Tell Books) and Sorcery (Dusie Chapbook Kollektiv). His poems can be found in such places as Crowd, VeRT, Volt, Spork, Cue, Slope, Aught, Fence, Swerve, Dirt, Ditch, Zeek and Sweet, as well as some other places with more than one syllable such as New American Writing and foam:e. He teaches in the graduate writing program at California College of the Arts, where he edits the journal Eleven Eleven. ~ Todd Colby is the author of Tremble & Shine and Riot in the Charm Factory: New and Selected Work, both from Soft Skull Press, and the editor of Heights of the Marvelous: A New York Anthology (St. Martins Press). He has appeared in numerous poetry anthologies, including Short Fuse: A World Anthology of Poetry, The Portable Boog Reader, Word Up: Spoken Word Poetry in Print, Verses That Hurt, Revival: Spoken Word from Lollapalooza, and Aloud: Voices from the Nuyorican Poets CafÃ©. Colby has performed his poetry on PBS, MTV, and Canadaâ€™s Much Music Network. He has produced many collaborative books and paintings with the artist David Lantow and was the lyricist and vocalist for the now-legendary New York band Drunken Boat. ~ Christie Ann Reynoldsâ€˜ manuscript, idiot heart was the 2009 winner of The New School Chapbook Competition. She has an MFA in Poetry, a BA in English and an MsEd in Secondary Education. Christie Ann is a member of The Poetry Brothel and her work can be found or is forthcoming in BlazeVox, My Name is Mud, Robot Melon, Sub-Lit, Critiphoria, and others. A short collection is forthcoming from Supermachine this summer. ~ Jared Stanley is the author of Book Made of Forest (Salt 2009) and the chapbooks I Something Scott Inguito You, The Outer Bay, and In Fortune. With Lauren Levin and Catherine Meng, he edits Mrs. Maybe. He grew up in the San Francisco Bay Area and currently lives in the San Joaquin Valley of California. ~ Rachel Zolfâ€˜s fourth full-length book, Neighbour Procedure, was recently released by Coach House Books. Previous collections include Human Resources (Coach House), which won the 2008 Trillium Book Award for Poetry and was a finalist for a Lambda Literary Award, Masque (The Mercury Press), Shoot & Weep (Nomados), from Human Resources (Belladonna books) and Her absence, this wanderer (BuschekBooks). Zolfâ€™s work has appeared in journals throughout North America and in anthologies such as Prismatic Publics: Innovative Canadian Womenâ€™s Poetry and Poetics (Coach House) and a forthcoming anthology of conceptual writing from Les Figues Press. She was the founding poetry editor for The Walrus magazine and has edited several books of poetry. Zolf lives in New York. at Goodbye Blue Monday 1087 Broadway (corner of Dodworth St) Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013 [redacted] J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave or J train to Kosciusko St ~ Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ http://www.stainofpoetry.com -- ALIAS: http://amyking.org

↑ Index

129. CA Conrad

Bardic Sepulchral: Will Edmiston

Thu 20 May 2010

Click HERE: http://www.fairiesinamerica.com/bardic-sepulchral/will-edmiston/ for the new issue of Bardic Sepulchral for the AMAZING poems of Will Edmiston, thanks, and have a great day,

CAConrad

BOMB Magazine interview: http://CAConradinterviews.blogspot.com

The City Real & Imagined (Factory School, 2010)
http://cityrealandimagined.blogspot.com

"The things that individuals can do are helpful. And one of the most helpful is actually a vegetarian diet, that produces much less greenhouse gases than a meat diet." -- Dr. James Hansen, author of STORMS OF MY GRANDCHILDREN: The Truth About the Coming Climate Catastrophe and Our Last Chance to Save Humanity http://www.stormsofmygrandchildren.com/

MY BATHTUB POETRY READING: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XaOwLpiyegk

PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

I'm on Ish Klein's BOO SHOW!: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QIJDHmfsAHU

"I only know that I love strength in my friends / And greatness" --Jack Spicer

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

130. amy king
Got Gulf Oil? Urgent Call : Poets for Living Waters
Thu 20 May 2010

Poets for Living Waters is a poetry action in response to the Gulf Oil Disaster of April 20, 2010, one of the most profound man-made ecological catastrophes in history. Former US poet laureate Robert Pinsky describes the popularity of poetry after 9/11 as a turn away from the disasterâ€™s overwhelming enormity to a more manageable individual scale. As we confront the magnitude of this recent tragedy, such a return may well aid us.The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity suggests a wide range of poetry will offer a meaningful response to the current crisis, including work that harkens back to Hurricane Katrina and the ongoing regional effects. This online periodical is the first in a planned series of actions. Further actions will include a print anthology and a public reading in Washington DC. If you would like to submit work for consideration, please send 1-3 poems, a short bio, and credits for any previously published submissions to: [redacted] Editors: Amy King & Heidi Lynn Staples ~~ If you care, share -- Urgent Call -- http://poetsforlivingwaters.com/

↑ Index

131. steve dalachinsky

fantastic new chapbook series out from CUNYthru Amiel Alcalay

Thu 20 May 2010

Dear Friend,
We are delighted to announce the publication of the inaugural chapbook series in Lost & Found: The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative. Attached and below find the official Press Release and an order form.
You may have attended our prepublication party or heard of the project through the grapevine; now the books are available for purchase via mail and online athttp://www.centerforthehumanitiesgc.org/lostandfound where they are on sale for $10 per issue, $35 per set, and $25 per subscription. On Monday and Tuesday, May 3rd and 4th, 10 a.m.—8 p.m., the set of chapbooks will also be available for purchase at the Center for Humanities' Annual Chapbook Festival. Look for the Lost & Found table. More information and a schedule for the festival are available at http://www.chapbookfestival.org.
Thank you for your support – we hope you enjoy the books!
Ammiel Alcalay, General Editor
Aoibheann Sweeney, Director of the Center for the Humanities
###
PRESS CONTACT:
The Center for the Humanities
[redacted]
April 28, 2010
For Immediate release:
Printed in elegant, stapled editions, the inaugural chapbook series of Lost & Found: The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative activates and puts into wider circulation important but little known texts drawn from personal and institutional archives.
An ongoing publication project emerging from archival and textual scholarship done by students, faculty and guest fellows at the Graduate Center, the primary focus of Lost & Found is on writers who fall under the rubric of the New American Poetry. Since enhanced accessibility to a broad spectrum of archival material helps create alternative, divergent and enriched versions of literary and cultural history, the Lost & Found initiative takes the “New American” rubric writ large, including the affiliated and unaffiliated, precursors and followers. The first set includes correspondence, essays, and journal selections:

Amiri Baraka & Edward Dorn: Selections from the Collected Letters 1959-1960, ed. Claudia Moreno Pisano, includes letters written between 1959 and 1960 and covers a wide-range of discussions, “from quotidian observations of being snowbound without enough heat...to the hashing out of experiences, fears, and anxieties directly related to the socio-political culture of the early 1960s”.

The Correspondence of Kenneth Koch & Frank O’Hara 1955-1956, Part I and II, ed. Josh Schneiderman, includes “letters [...] written over an eighteen-month period from1955 to 1956 [that] provide an account of the poets’ important, if often overlooked, friendship. Full of poems, literary gossip, and nods to artistic influences, Koch and O’Hara’s correspondence also chronicles a key moment in what would come to be known as the New York School of poets”.

Darwin & The Writers, Muriel Rukeyser, ed. Stefania Heim, is an unpublished essay about Darwin (rejected by The Nation in 1959). “The piece is an exercise in the discovery, collection, and exposition of “meeting-places” between scientific and literary imaginations, extending the intellectual work Rukeyser started in works like Willard Gibbs and The Life of Poetry.”

1957-1977 Selections from the Journals Part I and II, Philip Whalen, ed. Brian Unger, is comprised of entries from Whalen’s Journals from two key periods in his life: the mid to late 1950s following the public recognition of the Beats, and the early 1970s, after his return from Japan and his decision to live in a Zen monastery.

The 1963 Vancouver Poetry Conference / Robert Creeley’s Contexts of Poetry, with Daphne Marlatt’s Journal Entries, ed. Ammiel Alcalay, is a Creeley lecture and conversation with Allen Ginsberg. Contexts of Poetry is from the landmark 1963 Vancouver Poetry Conference, with excerpts from the journals of the prominent Canadian poet Daphne Marlatt, chronicling her attendance as a student.

Together, the set marks an auspicious beginning to a project that brings the finest traditions of small press publication and textual scholarship to a broader reading public.

We are delighted to announce that the chapbooks are available at bookstores across the nation, from St. Marks Books to City Lights. Books may be ordered online at www.centerforthehumanitiesgc.org/lostandfound where they are on sale for $10 per issue, $35 per set, and $25 per subscription. On Monday and Tuesday, May 3rd and 4th, 10 a.m.—8 p.m., the set of chapbooks will also be available for purchase at the Center for Humanities' Annual Chapbook Festival. Look for the Lost & Found table. More information and a schedule for the festival are available at www.chapbookfestival.org.

###
LOST & FOUND
The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative
Published by The Center for the Humanities
Pub Date: May 2010
www.centerforthehumanitiesgc.org/lostandfound
On Thu, 20 May 2010 10:07:44 -0400 Vernon Frazer <[redacted]>
writes:
> David
>
> Many, many thanks to you in return for your kind words.
>
> In 1985, when I heard Ted Enslin read, I realized that hearing poets > recite their work, > their rhythms and inflections, enabled me to understand it more > quickly.
>
> I've often felt that my own work needed a mixed-media > presentation--recitation, music > and a readable text-- to enable the reader to relate to my work in > the fullest way > possible. The Poetry Band I had about 20 years ago covered some of > that ground. After > the Poetry Band ended, my poetry started to incorporate the > contrapuntal and polytonal > melodies I used to hear around me when I performed with the band, > only in the form of > language. So I started writing what I've called "orchestrated > text."
>
> In IMPROVISATIONS I mentioned the late Julius Hemphill's Coon > Bidness because many of > the multi-voiced lines in teh book seem to come togeher in the way > the saxophones did
> on his recording.
>
> I'm very pleased that the performance helped you see how my work > fits together.

> Sometimes I think I'm a musician in a writer's body. When Ottone M.
> Riccio did a spin on > Pound by saying, in effect, poetry is music made with language, I > began to write from > that sensibility and poetry came much more easily to me than it had > before.
>
> So, when you (or anybody, I guess) look at my work, knowing that > music of some kind is > always at its core would (I hope) help "explain" the text.
>
> Again, I thank you for your praise of my work and for posting this.
> You've certainly made
> my day.
>
> Best,
>
> Vernon
>
>
>

↑ Index

132. Adam Fieled

Apparition Poem Links

Thu 20 May 2010

Greetings. I have new Apps up here:

http://jacketmagazine.com/40/fieled-from-apparition.shtml

http://www.denversyntax.com/issue20/poems/fieled/1497.html

http://www.denversyntax.com/issue20/poems/fieled/1473.html

http://www.denversyntax.com/issue20/poems/fieled/1343.html

Many thanks to the Editors, happy May...
Adam

↑ Index

133. Poetry Project

Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project

Thu 20 May 2010

Here¹s what¹s happening at The Poetry Project next week.

And check out the latest post from guest-blogger Macgregor Card here: http://poetryproject.org/project-blog

Monday, May 24, 8 PM
Andrew Hughes & Michelle Taransky

Andrew Hughes is the author of Sweethearts of the Great Migration (BookThug, 2008). His first full length collection, Now Lays the Sunshine By, is forthcoming from BookThug. His work has appeared in Forklift, Ohio, Cannibal, Puppyflowers, and others.

Michelle Taransky lives in Philadelphia, where she works at Kelly Writers House and teaches poetry at Temple University. Taransky¹s first book, Barn Burned, Then, was selected by Marjorie Welish for the 2008 Omnidawn Poetry Prize.

Wednesday, May 26, 8 PM
Robert Fitterman & Matvei Yankelevich

Robert Fitterman is the author of 12 books, including war, the musical and Notes On Conceptualisms (with Vanessa Place) and rob the plagiarist. His latest book, Sprawl:Metropolis 30A is the fourth book, and likely the last, of his Metropolis series. He teaches writing and poetry at New York University and in the Bard College, Milton Avery School of Graduate Studies.

Matvei Yankelevich¹s first book Boris by the Sea is just out from Octopus Books. He¹s also published several chapbooks including The Present Work (Palm Press). His translations of Daniil Kharms were collected in Today I Wrote Nothing: The Selected Writings of Daniil Kharms (Ardis/Overlook) and received praise from the TLS, The Guardian, The New York Times, and elsewhere. He recently edited a portfolio of Contemporary Russian Poetry and Poetics for the magazine Aufgabe (No. 8, Fall 2009). In NYC, he teaches at Hunter College and Columbia University School of the Arts. He lives in Brooklyn where he edits and designs books for Ugly Duckling Presse.

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003

Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

134. Halvard Johnson

Re: a noun sing Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham, an e·ratio editions e·chap

Thu 20 May 2010

Stand at any corner and raise your hand.

Hal

Halvard Johnson
==========

The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye (downloadable and free) is @ http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets

[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

On Mon, May 17, 2010 at 3:41 PM, george spencer <[redacted]> wrote:

> does anyone know of basic level classes in hypertexing in new york city?
> thank
> george spencer
>
> --- On Tue, 5/4/10, St. Thomasino <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: St. Thomasino <[redacted]>
> Subject: a noun sing Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham, an

eÂ·ratio editions eÂ·chap
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, May 4, 2010, 10:57 AM

EÂ·

EÂ·ratio Editions is pleased to present EÂ·ratio Editions EÂ·chap #9:

Prosaic Suburban Commercial by Keith Higginbotham.

â€œ . . . bathe deep in / the barely-there / disassembled gallery / of the everyday . . . â€

Two poetic sequences. With illustrations by Keith Higginbotham.

Also available:

#8. Polylogue by Carey Scott Wilkerson. Poems. â€œ . . . with rules and constitutive games, / with paints and gramarye / with some modicum / of my reckless trust . . . â€

#7. BashÅâ€™s Phonebook. 30 translations by Travis Macdonald. The great Japanese haiku poet Matsuo BashÅ goes digital. Conceptual poetry. With translatorâ€™s notes.

#6. Correspondance (a sketchbook) by Joseph F. Keppler. Digital art. With an introduction by Joseph F. Keppler.

#5. Six Comets Are Coming by Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino. Volume I of the collected works including Go and Go Mirrored, with revised introductions, corrected text and restored original font.

#4. The Logoclasody Manifesto. Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino on logoclasody, logoclastics, eidetics and pannarrativity. Addenda include the Crash Course in Logoclastics, Concrete to Eidetic (on visual poetry) and On Mathematical Poetry.

#3. Waves by MÃ¡rton KoppÃ¡ny. â€œThese works are minimalist by design, but should we paraphrase the thought channeled therein, the effect would be encyclopedic, ranging through philosophy, psychology, politics, and the human emotions.â€ Visual poetry.

#2. Mending My Black Sweater and other poems by Mary Ann Sullivan. Poems of making conscious, of acceptance and of self-remembering, and of personal responsibility.

#1. Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino joins John M. Bennett In the Bennett

> Tree. Collaborative poems, images, an introduction and a full-length critical essay pay homage to American poet John M. Bennett.
>
> http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com/eratioeditions.html
>
> http://www.eratiopostmodernpoetry.com/
>
> EÂ·

↑ Index

135. Nate Dorward

New chapbook: Buber's Bag Man, by Frederick Farryl Goodwin

Fri 21 May 2010

(my apologies if you're receiving this multiple times...)

The Gig has just published *Buber's Bag Man, *a new chapbook by Frederick Farryl Goodwin, author of *Virgil's Cow *(Miami University Press, 2009). It's 32pp of ecstatic high lyric leaking out of the holes left by typographical damage and Shakespearean/familial psychodrama: a concentrated dose of the ragged sublime. I'll post one poem below; you can find a second one on the website at http://www.ndorward.com/poetry/books/goodwin_bbm.htm. -- all best --N

Iraq

oeuvres of curried monkey ordures of curried monkey hors d'oeuvres of curried monkey savorines of curried monkey choice morsels of curried monkey bonne bouches of curried monkeybonne

Olde Catullus w/ his off the cuff riffs & one liners Gaius Valerius Catullus w/ his off the cuff riffs & one liners

*

32pp, 7" x 8.5", stapled chapbook. No ISBN.
$8 CDN/US (includes postage in North America)
£7/€8 (includes airmail overseas)

Make out cheques to Nate Dorward (not "The Gig").

Nate Dorward
109 Hounslow Ave., North York, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada

↑ Index

136. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City 63 Print and Online PDF Editions Available
Fri 21 May 2010

Please forward

Hi all,

The print edition of Boog City 63 will be available Sunday afternoon. You can read the pdf version now at:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc63.pdf

Thanks,
David

Boog City 63

featuring:

On the Cover

from our printed matter section, edited by Arlo Quint

—"Card and Weiser have been swapping lines to share between each others' work for almost a decade. They note in their 'Acknowledgements' that these books are 'companions,' and this is true in all aspects of the word—they complement each other and speak to each other." —from Consonance, Compatibility, and Friendship On the Work of Macgregor Card and Karen Weiser; Card's Duties of an English Foreign Secretary (Fence Books) and Weiser's To Light Out (Ugly Duckling Presse), reviewed by Erica Kaufman

And from our poetry section, edited by Joanna Fuhrman
(excerpt below)

—Boerum Hill, Brooklyn's Robert Hershon
with Cappuccinos

No, not the cappuccinos
suburban ladies get frothy mustaches from after dinner
I mean the ones at Tosca in North Beach, with brandy and anisette in the coffee and cream,

And Inside

from our printed matter section

—"His family becomes our family, his grandparents our long-lost grandparents, and his Armenia our Armenia that we too have been exiled from." from Semerdjian Sings Songs of Loss; In the Architecture of Bone (GenPop Books), reviewed by Tom Baier

Jim Behrle delivers "Poetry Project: The Cartoon"

Art editor Cora Lambert brings us work from Williamsburg, Brooklyn's Thomas Brauer.

From our music section, Urban Folk,
edited by Jonathan Berger

—"This was not a benefit show, a memorial, nor an exercise in starfucking." from Saluting the Major: Peers Honor AntiFolk Oldie, Olive Juice Music Head, reviewed by Berger.

—"In this economy and environment, we are living like France in the 1860s—a whole bunch of crazy artists pushing each other to make great art and hanging out, and unfortunately not making a ton of cash." from Making the Scene: A Local Musician’s Guide to Striving for Some Kind of Success by Jeremiah Birnbaum

—Lach is back! Antihoot now at Webster Hall after 20 month absence.

And the rest of our poetry section (excerpts below)

—Greenpoint, Brooklyn's Nellie Bridge
with "Sticky"

Leaves that fall on New York sidewalks stick there if it rains, or if it is moist at all.
The light green-gray confetti grows denser and again people ask what those trees are, dropping confetti throughout the city.

—Washington Heights' Paul Belbusti with "I used to be called Lucy"

I used to be called Lucy, but now they call me Orchids. Or Pearls. Or Radiant Heirloom Tomatoes. My earlobes glow yellow and red depending on my mood. My screams sound like ancient Gregorian chants. And church bells.

—The West Village's Susan Lewis with "Introduction to Inertia"

You say you want to be a conquistador, but what about microbial lag? On the other hand, how will we learn of caramelization or chiaroscuro if we don't venture from our cages?

"Introduction to Diplomacy"

Authenticity is beside the point, unless judiciously employed as an aesthetic accent—like salt or mood lighting. Accept and build. All impulses must be properly restrained.

—Bedford Stuyvesant, Brooklyn's Austin LaGrone with "Lunchbreak Yodel for Elkhorn Sanitation"

Someone's put chicken fingers inside my work gloves
as if the jaws of a garbage truck could translate for the hunger of kings.

"Epiphany"
I've worked these street for years, lingered over blue plates chatting up waitresses, spruced-up three Chevy's with dice and chrome ladies, and never, not once, fallen in love. My God, your toe ring with its moonstones and blisters, your lip gloss moving beyond the reasonable borders of mouth, the burn marks around the bathtub where you fall asleep dreaming. It's so sexy.

"Overtime"
That evening the late shift was even later, paid time and a half, kept him upright
another three hours sweeping up the plant.
With the shimmy of the line silenced,
there was only the percussion of his pushbroom and the steady moan of fluorescents for company. "Times like these," he said aloud, "a man might start talking to himself."

And thanks to Lauren Russell for copy editing help, and Jesse Schoen for the back page ad design. And thanks to Anselm Berrigan, Jessica Caragliano, Megan Ewing, Yoko Kikuchi, Herb Scher, and TR Smith for their photos.

Please patronize our advertisers:

GenPop Books * http://www.genpopbooks.com/ Sean T. Hanratty & the Mighty Mighty * http://www.seanthanratty.com/ Green Integer * http://www.spdbooks.org/Search/Default.aspx?SearchTerm=Contradicta Ugly Duckling Presse * http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org/

Advertise in the Boog City Gay Pride Edition

Ad Deadline
—Fri. June 11
3,000 Copies Distributed Pride Weekend
—Sat. June 19
See our ad rate card
http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Advertising or donation inquiries can also be directed to [redacted] or by calling 212-842-BOOG (2664),
or you can send money to [redacted] via https://www.paypal.com/

Poetry Submission Guidelines: Email subs to [redacted], with no more than five poems, all in one attached file with “My Name Submission” in the subject line and as the name of the file, ie: Walt Whitman Submission. Or mail with an SASE to Poetry editor, Boog City, 330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H, N.Y., N.Y. 10001-4754.

Want to write a review (or be reviewed) in Boog’s Urban Folk music or printed matter sections?
Email UF editor Jonathan Berger, [redacted] or printed matter editor Arlo Quint, [redacted]

Want to have your work appear in our art section?
Query our art editor, Cora Lambert, [redacted]

2,250 copies of this issue of Boog City are distributed among, and available for free at, the following locations:

MANHATTAN

East Village
Sunshine Theater * 143 E. Houston St. (bet. 1st & 2nd Avenues)

Bluestockings * 172 Allen St. (bet. Stanton & Rivington sts.)
Pianos * 158 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.)
Living Room * 154 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.)
Cake Shop * 152 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.)
Bowery Poetry Club * 308 Bowery (bet. Houston & Bleecker sts.)
Think Coffee * 1 Bleecker St. (@ Bowery)
Trash and Vaudeville (upstairs) * 4 St. Mark's Pl. (bet. 2nd & 3rd aves.)
Mission Café * 82 Second Ave. (bet. 4th & 5th sts.)
Anthology Film Archives * 32 Second Ave. (bet. 1st & 2nd sts.)
Sidewalk Café * 94 Avenue A (bet. 6th & 7th sts.)
Nuyorican Poets Café * 236 E. 3rd St. (bet. Avenues B & C)
Lakeside Lounge * 162 Avenue B (bet. 10th & 11th sts.)
Life Café * 343 E. 10th St. (bet. Avenues A & B)
St. Mark's Books * 31 Third Ave. (bet. St. Mark's Pl. & 9th St.)
St. Mark's Church * 131 E.10th St. (bet. 2nd & 3rd aves.)

Lower Manhattan Acme Underground * 9 Great Jones St. (bet. Broadway & Lafayette St.) Shakespeare & Co. * 716 Broadway (bet. Waverly & Astor places) Other Music * 15 E. 4th St. (bet. Broadway & Lafayette St.) Angelika Film Center * 18 W. Houston St. (bet. Broadway & Mercer St.) Think Coffee * 248 Mercer St. (bet. W. 4th and W. 3rd sts.) Mercer Street Books * 206 Mercer St. (bet. Bleecker & Houston sts.) Housing Works Cafe 126 Crosby St. (East Houston & Prince sts.) McNally Jackson * 52 Prince St. (bet. Mulberry & Lafayette sts.) Hotel Chelsea * 222 W. 23rd St. (bet. 7th & 8th aves.)

BROOKLYN

Greenpoint Greenpoint Coffee House * 195 Franklin St. (bet. Freeman & Green sts.) Thai Café * 925 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Kent St. & Greenpoint Ave.) Matchless * 557 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Nassau and Driggs aves.) Champion Coffee * 1108 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Clay & DuPont sts.)

Williamsburg
Sideshow Gallery * 319 Bedford Ave. (bet. S.2nd & S.3rd sts.)
Supercore Café * 305 Bedford Ave. (bet. S.1st & S.2nd sts.)
Spoonbill & Sugartown * 218 Bedford Ave. (bet. N.4th & N.5th sts.)
Bliss Café * 191 Bedford Ave. (bet. N.6th & N.7th sts.)
Spike Hill * 184 Bedford Ave. (bet. N.6th & N.7th sts.)
Soundfix/Fix Cafe * 110 Bedford Ave. (at N.11th St.)

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H

NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

137. charles
CHAX POETRY READING: DAHLEN & LARKIN
Fri 21 May 2010

BEVERLY DAHLEN & MARYROSE LARKIN
A POETRY READING presented by Chax Press

at The Drawing Studio
33 S 6th Ave, Tucson (on 6th Ave downtown, between Broadway & Congress)
7pm Saturday, May 22, 2010
FREE ADMISSION (a donation will be requested)
Selected books available for purchase
Refreshment provided
Question & Answer Session following the reading
Call [redacted] for more information

Chax Press events are funded in part by the Tucson Pima Arts Council and by the Arizona Commission on the Arts, with funding from the State of Arizona and the National Endowment for the Arts. This event is also supported by Poets & Writers, Inc.

BEVERLY DAHLEN was born in Portland in November, 1934, attended public schools there, and after the end of World War II, moved with her family to Eureka, California. In 1956, she resettled in San Francisco. Her first collection of poetry, Out of the Third, was published by Momo's Press in 1974. Two chapbooks, A Letter at Easter (Effie's Press) and The Egyptian Poems (Hipparchia Press) were followed in 1985 by the publication of A Reading 1-7 (Momo's Press). Since then, three more volumes of A Reading have appeared (including A Reading 8-10 from Chax Press), as well as the chapbook A-reading Spicer & Eighteen Sonnets (Chax Press). Her essay "Beauty: Another Reading" recently appeared in Crayon 5. Ms. Dahlen was a cofounder, with Kathleen Fraser and Frances Jaffer, of the influential avant feminist poetics newsletter (HOW)ever ; in December of 2008 her work was honored by Small Press Traffic with their annual Lifetime Achievement Award.

MARYROSE LARKIN lives in Portland, Oregon, where she works as a freelance researcher. She is the author of Inverse (nine muses books, 2006), Whimsy Daybook 2007 (FLASH+CARD, 2006), The Book of Ocean (i.e. press,2007) and DARC (FLASH+CARD, 2009). Larkin is one of the organizers of Spare Room, a Portland-based writing collective, and is co-editor, with Sarah Mangold, of FLASH+CARD, a chapbook and ephemera poetry press. Her new book, The Name of This Intersection is Frost, is forthcoming from Shearsman Books.

↑ Index

138. Joseph Mosconi

Visual Poetry Forum, Abramowitz, Timmons, & More up at Area Sneaks.com

Sat 22 May 2010

I've been putting new stuff up on areasneaks.com

1. Visual Poetry Forum with K. Lorraine Graham, Robert Grenier, Jessica Smith, Peter Ciccariello, William R. Howe, derek beaulieu and Johanna Drucker

http://areasneaks.com/index.php?id=34

2. Excerpts from Sound Noise by Mathew Timmons

http://areasneaks.com/index.php?id=37

3. Excerpts from Man’s Wars And Wickedness: A Book of Proposed Remedies and Extreme Formulations for Curing Hostility, Rivalry, And Ill-Will by Harold Abramowitz and Amanda Ackerman

http://areasneaks.com/index.php?id=39

4. Review

Kate Greenstreet's The Last 4 Things reviewed by Sophie Sills

http://areasneaks.com/index.php?id=40

5. And slowly putting up all the contents from Issue 1

http://areasneaks.com/index.php?id=17

http://areasneaks.com/

↑ Index

139. Jeffrey Side
'Lou Reed's "Street Hassle" and the Challenge to Post-Modern Poetry' by Adam Fieled at The Argotist Online
Sat 22 May 2010

'Lou Reed's "Street Hassle" and the Challenge to Post-Modern Poetry' by Adam Fieled at The Argotist Online:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Fieled%20essay%203.htm

↑ Index

140. peter ganick
a blog announcement
Sat 22 May 2010

---

experiential-experimental-literature

texts that change the parameters of what writers are involved with,

which is why these writers have been writing for all along.

the many forms of avant- or experimental-literature are welcome.

send texts to peter ganick at [redacted], for consideration.

↑ Index

141. peter ganick
Re: a blog announcement
Sat 22 May 2010

---

the blog url is:
http://ex-ex-lit.blogspot.com
thanks

On Sat, May 22, 2010 at 2:22 PM, peter ganick <[redacted]> wrote:

> experiential-experimental-literature
>
> texts that change the parameters of what writers are involved with,
>
> which is why these writers have been writing for all along.
>
> the many forms of avant- or experimental-literature are welcome.
>
> send texts to peter ganick at [redacted], for consideration.

--
words:
http://chalkeditions.co.cc
http://ex-ex-lit.blogspot.com

pictures:
www.peterganick.com
www.pg-artcards.com

↑ Index

142. Catherine Daly
Fwd: "LOST" on Manhattan's Upper East Side + $145,000 in Literary Prizes...
Sat 22 May 2010

---

* THE 2011 VILCEK PRIZES IN LITERATURE:*

The 2011 Vilcek Prize for Creative Promise in Literature guidelines and application forms are now available at http://www.vilcek.org/print/prizes_creative_promise.php
No entry fee.

The awards are for non-American-born writers of poetry, fiction or creative nonfiction who are living and working in the U.S., age 38 and under; one $25,000 prize, + four $5000 prizes.

(There is also a $100,000 Vilcek Literature Prize for one non-American-born writer of poetry, fiction or creative nonfiction who is living and working in the U.S., no age restriction, but there is no application process for this prize.)

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

143. David Chirot
Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visual Poetry
Sat 22 May 2010

Dear Vernon:

thank you so much for your response! reading it i thought of Mallarme, who i have spent some time studying on my own of late, in part to find out how he arrived at the composition of Un Coup de des (A throw of the Dice), which is often cited as being the "first modern visual poem."

When i first came across some of your Improvisations a few years ago, i was immediately aware of the interrelationships of the visual layouts of the words, phrases, lines to the rhythms and sounds of the words. The sense of the pieces I read reminded me a lot of the improvisations in Free Jazz, among other forms of improvisatory music, as there is a recurring "theme" expressed sonically, or visually or as a recurring idea--or al three at once--around and in and out of on top and below of--are played the improvisations which seize upon a particular note or thought or sensation and expand it, adding color to it, dancing with it, expanding or trimming it--and tossing it back to the source, which brings about another improvisation which may go on back and forth for quite some time, or be played with for just a brief passage as passage of both time and of a text, a notation, since improvisations are often built up with layers of allusions, quotations, references, to works outside the piece itself as well to particulars within the work as it is developing. This density which can be achieved by layerings of quotations and then puns upon them which open them out into wholly new series of sounds and visual layouts, of new thoughts which challenge the old which have been quoted, perhaps--this density can be increased or all of a sudden completely dispensed with in a flight of pure lyricism--

Often American performed/improvised poetry with music since the Beats say, has been very influenced by Jazz--but often the notations themselves of the words read do not look anything different from a conventionally printed poem which could just as well be read in a non-musical setting. One often finds, post the Beats, poems with visual layouts which seem arbitrary, disconnected from the actual sounds of the words, as though tacked on to generate some "sideshow" interest or suggestion of a "look" meant to be "experimental." What seems to be something very simple actually is quite a bit more complex--a good way to study the notations of sound as visual pieces is to study the notations and scores employed by Sound Poets, as well as in some cases, Visual Poets who use the Visuals to be sounded out as Sound Poetry. Notations in these senses need n0ot even by written as words or even in letters, but using some other system or some completely arbitrary method. Bob Cobbing for example would perform poems by simply feeling a rock in his hands, exploring the textures and shapes and expressing sonically what the fingers, the touch, experienced and found. Walking with Bob, we would use side walk cracks and shadows of trees on the sidewalk as the notations for performance. There being an underlying structure in the pale cement at the same distances of the lines in a sidewalk, not counting the cracks, one has already the basis for a theme around which to improvise--

The experience of your work and of some others led me to wanting to find out more about the origins of this interrelationship of the Visual layout of words and punctuation marks on the page with the sounds not only of words as words having meanings, but of words themselves as simply sounds, working and flowing together like music--

This is what led me to Mallarme, a poet who i knew someday i would encounter, so had not previously made conscious effort to study him other than reading his poetry until the right time found me and i found it--and this was it--

I thought to share with you some of the things I found in my rummaging about in my little collection of the poet's works in French and English editions--perhpas it may be of interest and use--

Mallarme, like a great many French poets beginning with Baudelaire, was very much impressed by the conceptions of Wagner, (and wrote a very fascinating essay on the composer's work), not only with the idea of the "gesamtkunstwerke" (total art work or total work of art; in which many have found also the example of a "totalitarian" work of art--)-but also examples, materials, which coincided at various levels with the poet's own ideas regarding music and poetry. The first expression of these ideas is to be found in the "poeme critique" "The Book as Spiritual Instrument." "Poem critique" was a new form invented by Mallarme in which the essay and the prose poem meet, thus announcing not only a new style of writing, but of thinking as well, so that style and thought interact with each other in opening up new ways to think and write simultaneously "critically" and poetically. Mallarme's essays and poetry, reviews and occasional pieces, already mocked and attacked by the critics and public of the day, were seen as going beyond all previous outrage with this new form thus marking to this day Mallarme as a deliberately "obscure," "perversely difficult and decadent" and "both vague & hermetic" writer. Emerson noted that "Perhaps the blank and ruin we see within Nature in is in our eye;" similarly, one might propose that the obscurity, difficult and perversity which the readers of the time--and many today--find in Mallarme may have been--and be--in their own eyes, for, read on the terms which they set forth, Mallarme's poemes critiques and poetry are actually very limpid, acutely lucid, and, in the best French tradition, quite logical.

For example, the poeme critique "The Book as Spiritual Instrument" (also translated as "The Book as Intellectual Tool") may be thought of as referring to the book both as a tool, a device of instrumentality, and as a musical instrument. It is in the musical context which Mallarme here first envisions the layout of the composition of the musical score which is to be "Un Coup de des." Mallarme, like Verlaine, aspired to a sense of language that would attain the heights of "music above all things." However this sense of Music, in Mallarme, has two facets: one is a system of sounds which "plays" so to speak, on the emotions; the other is Music thought of as a system of "pure" relations among the notations and the intervals, (the white spaces of the page in a poem), thus creating a structural system in the work, which exists without referentiality. Given what seems the contradiction between a non-referential structure and one that provokes, elicits, emotional responses which have their own referentialities, the "resolving" achievement of this mini-gesamtkunstwerke is then achieved through the harmonious balance of all the elements within the poem, though in such a way as to leave them open, provisional, rather than being a total enclosure without issue for the elements involved. "A throw of the dice will never abolish chance" as the poem says--

(The structural aspect is part of the huge sea change in the interest in, study and reputation of, Mallarme beginning in the early 1970's as many of Mallarme's ideas and poetics acts, works, anticipate structuralist and post structuralist literary thought in France. It was at this time that Mallarme ascended to his position as THE great experimenter, innovator, poet-thinker of the poem critique of his times, knocking Rimbaud off the throne.)

(This relates, I think, with your sense of improvisations, in which there is always an opening, a series of possibilities, of choices that are actively present and there to be ignited at any moment by the poet--it also means that the poet and the poem in itself can be seen/heard/felt/thought with as being two players, improvising back and forth, rather than the poem being a static set of notations on which the poet improvises--for the real challenge and meaning of improvisation is that two or more poets/players are exchanging ideas, references, allusions, rhythms, notes, back and forth, each one encouraging and pushing the other to continually be expanding the bursts of improvisations playing off of the central theme which runs through out the poem/music, pushing each other to ever greater and more exhilarating experiments, realizations, spontaneous illuminations or sudden expressions of the extreme tension which exists when the balance begins to stray and the theme is on the verge of being lost beneath too much "bric-a-brac"--signalling one or the other of poets/players to get a grip on it and steer the improvisations back towards the "center of gravity" so to speak. By this I mean that in your poems, what I find is that the "other" poet/player is the poem itself, as when you are improvising--it is with the challenges presented by the poem as it exists at that very moment--the poem is at once "a part of you" and "apart from you" --it has its own independence, so to speak, as it is playing, improvising with you. In other words, it is a manifestation of the uncanny of which Emerson said: "It is new to me yet not unknown."

In "The Book as Spiritual Instrument/Intellectual Tool," which appeared in the June 1895 issue of La Revue blanche, 18 months before "Un Coup de des"

appeared in the journal Cosmopolis (which employed an English typesetter whose work impressed Mallarme), the poet writes:

"Poetry, close to the idea, is Music par excellence--doesn't admit inferiority . . . Why couldn't a line--a spurt of grandeur, a considerable thought or emotion, a sentence in bold type that continues for pages, one line per page in graduated placement--keep the reader breathless, calling upon his powers of enthusiasm, for the length of the boo; along with little groups of secondary importance, explanatory or derivative--a sowing of frills."

Composing the "Editor's Note" himself for the issue of Cosmopolis in which "Un Coup des des" first appeared, Mallarme expands and clarifies this idea:

"In this work which is of an entirely new kind, the poet has attempted to create music using words. A sort of general leitmotif running throughout the poem provides it with unity. Accessory themes are grouped around it. The nature of the letters employed and the position of the blank spaces are designed to replace notes and intervals."

You note your thinking of your work in the context of multi-media--here one finds the dream of French poets of the 19th century when first discovering Wagner and his works, his gesamtkunstwerke. Verlaine and Mallarme's aspiration to "Music above al else" are close to your own sensibility. While Verlaine--who in French is absolutely breathtaking in the sheer music of many of his best poems--stayed with the conventional forms of the French poetry of his day, Mallarme saw the way to the Visual layout, like a musician composing a score, as a means of emphasizing the multi-vocal aspects and passages of the poem. The uses of space as an interval, in a sense "fills" what seems to be "blank" with the interval of silence, anticipating Cage's use of silence, among others--silence plays a role, is a sonic/visual element and event all its own, rather than simply being a bystander at the "action" of the letters and words as is so often the case. Silence, then, enters in also as duration--a new way of "keeping time" within the rhythms of the poem--attending to the silence sharpens the ear to the entrance of the sounds, themselves also as visual events, forms--the entire page becomes a site/sight/cite of activation, the prompter of a performance which, beginning with the mouth, extends to the whole body as an expressive instrument being played by the poet--thus the desire for a multi media performance, in which dance, gestures, acting, music, backdrops etc etc become a part of this activated poem--

The interrelationships among the Visual and the Sonic being performed leads to this activation of the body--and to the desire for a kind of multi media theatrical space--or simply a performance outdoors, improvising with sidewalk cracks, tree shadows moving in the wind--

It is not simply a question of the gesamtkunstwerke as a total work of art, but of the entire body of the poet/performer as the site/sight/cite of a multi-media of performance score/visual poem/poem, of sound making, of gesture, dance, the body itself as a "written character" come to life as a form of "character"--the body itself becoming the gesamtkunstwerke--

In your works one feels and hears and sees in the minds eye and in the visual layouts on the page the presence of the body of poet/performer in action, alive and improvising with the poem itself as an other body, an other entity, "at once new to me,and yet not unknown."

This to me was the great excitement in seeing your videos, as they present in action al that the poem is performing on the page, the video presents the realization, the activation of al the elements so that one can experience fully what is the confirmation of al that the visual layouts on the page so vividly represent that it is but a step from the page to the performance, even before one has seen the performance--so that seeing the performance is a confirmation of al that one has found made possible on the page--

many many thanks again Vernon!

On Thu, May 20, 2010 at 7:07 AM, Vernon Frazer <[redacted]>wrote:

> David
>
> Many, many thanks to you in return for your kind words.
>
> In 1985, when I heard Ted Enslin read, I realized that hearing poets recite their work, > their rhythms and inflections, enabled me to understand it more quickly.
>
> I've often felt that my own work needed a mixed-media presentation--recitation, music
> and a readable text-- to enable the reader to relate to my work in the fullest way > possible. The Poetry Band I had about 20 years ago covered some of that ground. After > the Poetry Band ended, my poetry started to incorporate the contrapuntal and polytonal
> melodies I used to hear around me when I performed with the band, only in the form of > language. So I started writing what I've called "orchestrated text."
>
> In IMPROVISATIONS I mentioned the late Julius Hemphill's Coon Bidness because many of > the multi-voiced lines in teh book seem to come togeher in the way the saxophones did
> on his recording.

> I'm very pleased that the performance helped you see how my work fits together.
> Sometimes I think I'm a musician in a writer's body. When Ottone M. Riccio did a spin on > Pound by saying, in effect, poetry is music made with language, I began to write from > that sensibility and poetry came much more easily to me than it had before.
>
> So, when you (or anybody, I guess) look at my work, knowing that music of some kind is > always at its core would (I hope) help "explain" the text.
>
> Again, I thank you for your praise of my work and for posting this. You've certainly made > my day.
>
> Best,
>
> Vernon

↑ Index

144. Alan Sondheim

Three pieces (SL video plus 2 taksim 'of sorts')

Sun 23 May 2010

Three pieces

The news.mov continues to explore language in SL; I also like the graphics in this version. I've been thinking about theory in relation to this piece but I'm too tired and it will all play out for you in any case.

http://www.alansondheim.org/news.mov

The taksimmarriage.mp3 is Azure's singing accompanied by cura cumbus, influenced by central Asian music -

The taksimrobe.mp3 is Azure's singing accompanied by kamanche, similar influence but honestly I have no idea what to make of it, which is probably good -

http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/taksimmarriage.mp3 http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/taksimrobe.mp3

↑ Index

145. Scott Howard
Call for Submissions: RECONFIGURATIONS, Volume 4, Emergence
Sun 23 May 2010

RECONFIGURATIONS: A Journal for Poetics & Poetry / Literature & Culture

ISSN: 1938-3592, http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/

Volume 4: Emergence

Submissions: April thru August, 2010

Publication: November, 2010

Guidelines: Volume four of Reconfigurations, http://reconfigurations.blogspot.com/, seeks a variety of works concerning emergence—that is, the phenomena of appearing & becoming—across a wide range of signification: matters aleatory or nascent; objects concealed or manifest; actions impending or close-at-hand; communities indeterminate or realized; occurrences unforeseen or unexpected. Reconfigurations, ISSN: 1938-3592, is an electronic, peer-reviewed, international, annual journal for poetics and poetry, creative and scholarly writing, innovative and traditional concerns with literary arts and cultural studies. Reconfigurations publishes under a Creative Commons 3.0 open-access license, is MLA indexed, EBSCO distributed and independently managed.

Electronic Submissions: [redacted]. Submissions should be attached as a single .doc, .rtf, or .txt file. Visuals should be attached individually as .jpg, .gif or .bmp files. Please include the words “Reconfigurations submission” in the subject line of your message.

///

↑ Index

146. Alan Sondheim
music from the linger cafe today, traffic in the background, bad recording, good music
Mon 24 May 2010

---

really bad recordings of some really good music

because what can you expect from atlantic avenue in brooklyn?
carter, voice
freedman, acoustic guitar sondheim, saz, cura cumbus, oud*

http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/linger1.mp3
http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/linger2.mp3

http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/linger3.mp3
http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/linger4.mp3
http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/linger5.mp3
http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/linger6.mp3
http://espdisk.com/alansondheim/linger7.mp3

*there was also kamanche but it was embarrassing

↑ Index

147. Anny Ballardini
the new update of the Poets' Corner
Mon 24 May 2010

Dear All,

highlight is given to Alex Cigale’s translation and introduction of eight poets to outline the New Russian Generation. To follow my chosen Authors for the present update and finally the new poems by already featured Authors and the additions to Poets’ on Poets. To the contributors, my very special acknowledgment.

* *

Alex Cigale introduces and translates under Poets on Poets:

from Crossing Centuries, the New Generation in Russian Poetry

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=250

Ivan Akhmetyev

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=251

Natalya Chernykh

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=252

Andrey Gritsman

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=253

Yuli Gugolev

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=254

Eduard Kulemin

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=255

Mikhail Nilin

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=256

Mikhail Sukhotin

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=257

Andrey Turkin

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=258

New Authors on the Corner:

* *

nick-e melville

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=367

Julie Carr

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=368

Sam Hamill

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=369

Thomas Fink

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=370

Marco Gerbi

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=371

New Poems by already featured Authors:

* *

Edward Mycue: LETTER TO JIM WHO MOVED AWAY

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3283

Nuri Gene-Cos:

Lies as they lied

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3283

GUN

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3308

MEXICAN SIESTA

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3309

Peru I love you

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3319

MALI

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3320

* *

Barry Alpert

GUARD #47 [via Filip Renc]<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3315> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3315

DAYS OF BEING WILD [via Wong Kar-Wai]<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3316> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3316

FALLEN IDOL [via Carol Reed & Graham Greene]<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3318> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3318

MONTAGE (DISTANCE) [via Artavazd Peleshian]<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3326> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3326

JAN TROELL TALKS<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3334> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3334

Amy King

THE MEMORY SKIN

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3317

Eugen Galasso

eugen-poesie <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3323> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3323

eugen-poesiole <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3324> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3324

poesia-eugen galasso<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3342> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3342

eugengalasso: poesiole<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3343> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3343

1 raCCONTINO E UNA POESIOLA<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3344> http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3344

Under Poets on Poets:

Malcolm de Chazal – Introduced and translated by Alexander Dickow

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=248

Grzegorz Wroblewski translated by Adam Zdrodowski

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=249

Christina Pacosz translated by me:

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetsonpoets&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=83

The main index of the Poets' Corner:

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content

Index of Poets on Poets:

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetsonpoets

My best wishes,

Anny Ballardini

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!

Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

148. amy king
Ugly Americans, Slaves, Techonology
Mon 24 May 2010

The Ugly Americans - http://jacketmagazine.com/40/king-amy-americans.shtml

Erika Moya - http://galatearesurrection14.blogspot.com/2010/04/slaves-to-do-these-things-by-amy-king.html

Technology - http://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com/2010/05/13/10-questions-on-poets-technology-amy-king/

———

Amy's Alias

http://amyking.org/

↑ Index

149. Amanda Earl
Christine McNair's anti-statement-latest essay from AHP
Mon 24 May 2010

In the twelfth of AHP's essay series,"anti-statement," writes about the nature of poetry and poetry, or perhaps she doesn't.

to read the essay, please go to www.angelhousepress.com and click on essays.

if you have an essay you'd like to share, please send it to me for consideration. i'd like the series to be rich with works that contribute to the ongoing dialogue on creativity and the arts. essays can be unpublished or previously published, provided you hold the rights.

hope you enjoy,
Amanda

Amanda Earl
AngelHousePress
www.angelhousepress.com
the angel is in the house

↑ Index

150. Al Filreis
PoemTalk #32: on Howe's Dickinson
Mon 24 May 2010

Today we are releasing the 32nd episode of "PoemTalk." In this episode, Marcella Durand, Jennifer Scappettone and Jessica Lowenthal join me in a discussion of Susan Howe's reading of Emily Dickinson's "My Life had stood - a Loaded Gun."

http://www.poemtalk.org
http://www.poetryfoundation.org/journal/audioitem.html?id=2204

- Al Filreis

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
University of Pennsylvania

blog: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/blog
PoemTalk: http://www.poemtalk.org
dial 215-746-POEM or [redacted]

↑ Index

151. Paul Siegell
how hot are your pepper people?
Mon 24 May 2010

---

the "hot pepper people" series asks:

...like it spicy?

@ DENVER SYNTAX: http://bit.ly/ckFSDZ

@ OTOLITHS: http://bit.ly/dlKyzR

@ MORIA: http://bit.ly/cwAQNt

@ ANTIQUE CHILDREN: http://bit.ly/aUIbkf have a great week!

yours,
paul>
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com

↑ Index

152. Nicholas Karavatos
at Beyond Baroque in Venice, CA on Friday, May 28 at 7:30pm
Mon 24 May 2010

Beyond Baroque Literary Arts Center welcomes Nicholas Karavatos and Ivan Goldman.

NICHOLAS KARAVATOS is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa’s Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review (University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009). David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: “Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity.”

IVAN G. GOLDMAN will read from his political satire Exit Blue (Black Heron Press; 2010) and discuss how this, his third novel came about and answer questions on related matters such as invading Denmark and why maybe it's not such a good idea after all to elect imbeciles and crooks to high office. His previous novel, The Barfighter (Permanent Press; 2009) was nominated as a 2009 Notable Book by the American Library Foundation.

http://www.beyondbaroque.org/

Friday, May 28, 2010
7:30pm - 9:30pm
Beyond Baroque Literary Arts Center
681 Venice Blvd.
Venice, CA

_____ The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multicalendar&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_5

↑ Index

153. Nicholas Karavatos
at Artists' Union Gallery in Ventura, CA on Tuesday, June 1 at 7:30pm
Mon 24 May 2010

Tuesday Night Poets welcomes Nicholas Karavatos to the Artists' Union Gallery.

Nicholas Karavatos is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa’s Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review

(University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009). David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: “Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity.”

http://www.venturaartistsunion.org/
http://www.thetuesdaynightpoets.com/

Tuesday, June 1, 2010
7:30pm - 8:30pm
Artists’ Union Gallery
330 S. California St.
Ventura, CA

Nicholas Karavatos' next reading/book-signing is in Portland, OR on June 7, 2010.

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

154. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visual Poetry
Mon 24 May 2010

Dear David,

I will have to return to your detailed post, but at this moment I would like to make two points:

"one is a system of sounds which "plays" so to speak, on the emotions; the other is Music thought of as a system of "pure" relations among the notations and the intervals, (the white spaces of the page in a poem), thus creating a structural system in the work, which exists without referentiality."

It is exactly these "white spaces of the page" which create the visual poem as a spiritual instrument. It is without referentially because, at the moment of its emergence,this white space does not yet belong to a system; it is emergent.

I disagree with another point you are making. The double possibility you are referring does not lead to "two" performers each doing one. It happens in the reader/performer himself/herself. Therefore it leads to hesitation, to a crisis in reading, to silence.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, May 22, 2010 at 9:32 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear Vernon:
>
> thank you so much for your response!
> reading it i thought of Mallarme, who i have spent some time studying on my own of late, in part to find out how he arrived at the composition of Un Coup de des (A throw of the Dice), which is often cited as being the "first modern visual poem."
>
> When i first came across some of your Improvisations a few years ago, i was immediately aware of the interrelationships of the visual layouts of the words, phrases, lines to the rhythms and sounds of the words. The sense of the pieces I read reminded me a lot of the improvisations in Free Jazz, among other forms of improvisatory music, as there is a recurring "theme" expressed sonically, or visually or as a recurring idea--or al three at once--around and in and out of on top and below of--are played the improvisations which seize upon a particular note or thought or sensation and expand it, adding color to it, dancing with it, expanding or trimming it--and tossing it back to the source, which brings about another improvisation which may go on back and forth for quite some time, or be played with for just a brief passage as passage of both time and of a text, a notation, since improvisations are often built up with layers of allusions, quotations, references, to works outside the piece itself as well > to particulars within the work as it is developing. This density which can be achieved by layerings of quotations and then puns upon them which open them out into wholly new series of sounds and visual layouts, of new thoughts which challenge the old which have been quoted, perhaps--this density can be increased or all of a sudden completely dispensed with in a flight of pure lyricism--
>
> Often American performed/improvised poetry with music since the Beats say, has been very influenced by Jazz--but often the notations themselves of the words read do not look anything different from a conventionally printed poem > which could just as well be read in a non-musical setting. One often finds, post the Beats, poems with visual layouts which seem arbitrary, disconnected > from the actual sounds of the words, as though tacked on to generate some "sideshow" interest or suggestion of a "look" meant to be "experimental." What seems to be something very simple actually is quite a bit more complex--a good way to study the notations of sound as visual pieces is to study the notations and scores employed by Sound Poets, as well as in some cases, Visual Poets who use the Visuals to be sounded out as Sound Poetry.

Notations in these senses need n0ot even by written as words or even in letters, but using some other system or some completely arbitrary method. Bob Cobbing for example would perform poems by simply feeling a rock in his hands, exploring the textures and shapes and expressing sonically what the fingers, the touch, experienced and found. Walking with Bob, we would use side walk cracks and shadows of trees on the sidewalk as the notations for performance. There being an underlying structure in the pale cement at the same distances of the lines in a sidewalk, not counting the cracks, one has already the basis for a theme around which to improvise--

The experience of your work and of some others led me to wanting to find out more about the origins of this interrelationship of the Visual layout of words and punctuation marks on the page with the sounds not only of words as words having meanings, but of words themselves as simply sounds, working and flowing together like music--

This is what led me to Mallarme, a poet who i knew someday i would encounter, so had not previously made conscious effort to study him other than reading his poetry until the right time found me and i found it--and this was it--

I thought to share with you some of the things I found in my rummaging about in my little collection of the poet's works in French and English editions--perhpas it may be of interest and use--

Mallarme, like a great many French poets beginning with Baudelaire, was very much impressed by the conceptions of Wagner, (and wrote a very fascinating essay on the composer's work), not only with the idea of the "gesamtkunstwerke" (total art work or total work of art; in which many have found also the example of a "totalitarian" work of art--)-but also examples, materials, which coincided at various levels with the poet's own ideas regarding music and poetry. The first expression of these ideas is to be found in the "poeme critique" "The Book as Spiritual Instrument." "Poem critique" was a new form invented by Mallarme in which the essay and the prose poem meet, thus announcing not only a new style of writing, but of thinking as well, so that style and thought interact with each other in opening up new ways to think and write simultaneously "critically" and poetically. Mallarme's essays and poetry, reviews and occasional pieces, already mocked and attacked by the critics and public of the day, were seen as going beyond all previous outrage with this new form thus marking to this day Mallarme as a deliberately "obscure," "perversely difficult and decadent" and "both vague & hermetic" writer. Emerson noted that "Perhaps the blank and ruin we see within Nature in is in our eye;" similarly, one might propose that the obscurity, difficult and perversity which the readers of the time--and many today--find in Mallarme may have been--and be--in their own eyes, for, read on the terms which they set forth, Mallarme's poemes critiques and poetry are actually very limpid, acutely lucid, and, in the best French tradition, quite logical.

For example, the poeme critique "The Book as Spiritual Instrument" (also translated as "The Book as Intellectual Tool") may be thought of as referring to the book both as a tool, a device of instrumentality, and as a musical instrument. It is in the musical context which Mallarme here first envisions the layout of the composition of the musical score which is to be "Un Coup de des." Mallarme, like Verlaine, aspired to a sense of language that would attain the heights of "music above all things." However this sense of Music, in Mallarme, has two facets: one is a system of sounds which "plays" so to speak, on the emotions; the other is Music thought of as a system of "pure" relations among the notations and the intervals, (the white spaces of the page in a poem), thus creating a structural system in the work, which exists without referentiality. Given what seems the contradiction between a non-referential structure and one that provokes, elicits, emotional responses which have their own referentialities, the "resolving" achievement of this mini-gesamtkunstwerke is then achieved through the harmonious balance of all the elements within the poem, though in such a way as to leave them open, provisional, rather than being a total enclosure without issue for the elements involved. "A throw of the dice will never abolish chance" as the poem says--

(The structural aspect is part of the huge sea change in the interest in, study and reputation of, Mallarme beginning in the early 1970's as many of Mallarme's ideas and poetics acts, works, anticipate structuralist and post structuralist literary thought in France. It was at this time that Mallarme ascended to his position as THE great experimenter, innovator, poet-thinker of the poem critique of his times, knocking Rimbaud off the throne.)

(This relates, I think, with your sense of improvisations, in which there is always an opening, a series of possibilities, of choices that are actively present and there to be ignited at any moment by the poet--it also means that the poet and the poem in itself can be seen/heard/felt/thought with as being two players, improvising back and forth, rather than the poem being a static set of notations on which the poet improvises--for the real challenge and meaning of improvisation is that two or more poets/players are exchanging ideas, references, allusions, rhythms, notes, back and forth, each one encouraging and pushing the other to continually be expanding the bursts of improvisations playing off of the central theme which runs through out the poem/music, pushing each other to ever greater and more exhilarating experiments, realizations, spontaneous illuminations or sudden expressions of the extreme tension which exists when the balance begins to stray and the theme is on the verge of being lost beneath too much "bric-a-brac"--signalling one or the other of poets/players to get a grip on it and steer the improvisations back towards the "center of gravity" so to speak. By this I mean that in your poems, what I find is that the "other" poet/player is the poem itself, as when you are improvising--it is with the challenges presented by the poem as it exists at that very moment--the poem is at once "a part of you" and "apart from you" --it has its own independence, so to speak, as it is playing, improvising with you. In other words, it is a manifestation of the uncanny of which Emerson said: "It is new to me yet not unknown."

In "The Book as Spiritual Instrument/Intellectual Tool," which appeared in the June 1895 issue of La Revue blanche, 18 months before "Un Coup de des" appeared in the journal Cosmopolis (which employed an English typesetter whose work impressed Mallarme), the poet writes:

"Poetry, close to the idea, is Music par excellence--doesn't admit inferiority . . . Why couldn't a line--a spurt of grandeur, a considerable thought or emotion, a sentence in bold type that continues for pages, one line per page in graduated placement--keep the reader breathless, calling upon his powers of enthusiasm, for the length of the boo; along with little groups of secondary importance, explanatory or derivative--a sowing of frills."

Composing the "Editor's Note" himself for the issue of Cosmopolis in which "Un Coup des des" first appeared, Mallarme expands and clarifies this idea:

"In this work which is of an entirely new kind, the poet has attempted to create music using words. A sort of general leitmotif running throughout the poem provides it with unity. Accessory themes are grouped around it. The nature of the letters employed and the position of the blank spaces are designed to replace notes and intervals."

You note your thinking of your work in the context of multi-media--here one finds the dream of French poets of the 19th century when first discovering Wagner and his works, his gesamtkunstwerke. Verlaine and Mallarme's aspiration to "Music above al else" are close to your own sensibility. While Verlaine--who in French is absolutely breathtaking in the sheer music of many of his best poems--stayed with the conventional forms of the French poetry of his day, Mallarme saw the way to the Visual layout, like a musician composing a score, as a means of emphasizing the multi-vocal aspects and passages of the poem. The uses of space as an interval, in a sense "fills" what seems to be "blank" with the interval of silence, anticipating Cage's use of silence, among others--silence plays a role, is a sonic/visual element and event all its own, rather than simply being a bystander at the "action" of the letters and words as is so often the case. Silence, then, enters in also as duration--a new way of "keeping time" within the rhythms of the poem--attending to the silence sharpens the ear to the entrance of the sounds, themselves also as visual events, forms--the entire page becomes a site/sight/cite of activation, the prompter of a performance which, beginning with the mouth, extends to the whole body as an expressive instrument being played by the poet--thus the desire for a multi media performance, in which dance, gestures, acting, music, backdrops etc etc become a part of this activated poem--

The interrelationships among the Visual and the Sonic being performed leads to this activation of the body--and to the desire for a kind of multi media theatrical space--or simply a performance outdoors, improvising with sidewalk cracks, tree shadows moving in the wind--

It is not simply a question of the gesamtkunstwerke as a total work of art, but of the entire body of the poet/performer as the site/sight/cite of a multi-media of performance score/visual poem/poem, of sound making, of gesture, dance, the body itself as a "written character" come to life as a form of "character"--the body itself becoming the gesamtkunstwerke--

In your works one feels and hears and sees in the minds eye and in the visual layouts on the page the presence of the body of poet/performer in action, alive and improvising with the poem itself as an other body, an other entity, "at once new to me,and yet not unknown."

This to me was the great excitement in seeing your videos, as they present in action al that the poem is performing on the page, the video presents the realization, the activation of al the elements so that one can experience fully what is the confirmation of al that the visual layouts on the page so vividly represent that it is but a step from the page to the performance, even before one has seen the performance--so that seeing the performance is a confirmation of al that one has found made possible on the page--

many many thanks again Vernon!

On Thu, May 20, 2010 at 7:07 AM, Vernon Frazer <[redacted]
wrote:

David

Many, many thanks to you in return for your kind words.

In 1985, when I heard Ted Enslin read, I realized that hearing poets recite their work,
their rhythms and inflections, enabled me to understand it more quickly.

I've often felt that my own work needed a mixed-media presentation--recitation, music
and a readable text-- to enable the reader to relate to my work in the fullest way possible. The Poetry Band I had about 20 years ago covered some of that ground. After the Poetry Band ended, my poetry started to incorporate the contrapuntal and polytonal
melodies I used to hear around me when I performed with the band, only in the form of language. So I started writing what I've called "orchestrated text."

In IMPROVISATIONS I mentioned the late Julius Hemphill's Coon Bidness because many of the multi-voiced lines in teh book seem to come togeher in the way the saxophones did
on his recording.

I'm very pleased that the performance helped you see how my work fits together.
Sometimes I think I'm a musician in a writer's body. When Ottone M. Riccio did a spin on Pound by saying, in effect, poetry is music made with language, I began to write from
that sensibility and poetry came much more easily to me than it had before.

So, when you (or anybody, I guess) look at my work, knowing that music of some kind is always at its core would (I hope) help "explain" the text.

Again, I thank you for your praise of my work and for posting this. You've > certainly made

> my day.
>
> Best,
>
> Vernon
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

155. Anny Ballardini

Re: the new update of the Poets' Corner

Mon 24 May 2010

My apologies, I messed up* *Nuri Gene-Cos's Lies as they lied here is the right link:
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3307

On Mon, May 24, 2010 at 4:02 PM, Anny Ballardini
<[redacted]>wrote:

> Dear All,
>
> *highlight is given to Alex Cigale's translation and introduction of eight poets to outline the New Russian Generation. To follow my chosen Authors for the present update and finally the new poems by already featured Authors and the additions to Poets' on Poets. To the contributors, my very special acknowledgment.*
>
> * *
>
> Alex Cigale* introduces and translates under Poets on Poets:*
>
> *from *Crossing Centuries, the New Generation in Russian Poetry
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=250
>
> Ivan Akhmetyev

> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=251
>
> Natalya Chernykh
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=252
>
> Andrey Gritsman
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=253
>
> Yuli Gugolev
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=254
>
> Eduard Kulemin
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=255
>
> Mikhail Nilin
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=256
>
> Mikhail Sukhotin
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=257
>
> Andrey Turkin
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=258
>
> New Authors on the Corner:
>
> ** **
>
> nick-e melville
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=367

Julie Carr

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=368

Sam Hamill

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=369

Thomas Fink

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=370

Marco Gerbi

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=371

New Poems by already featured Authors:

* *

Edward Mycue: LETTER TO JIM WHO MOVED AWAY

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3283

Nuri Gene-Cos:

Lies as they lied

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3283

GUN

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3308

MEXICAN SIESTA

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3309

Peru I love you

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3319

MALI

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3320

* *

Barry Alpert

GUARD #47 [via Filip Renc]<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3315>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3315

DAYS OF BEING WILD [via Wong Kar-Wai]<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3316>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3316

FALLEN IDOL [via Carol Reed & Graham Greene]<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3318>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3318

MONTAGE (DISTANCE) [via Artavazd Peleshian]<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3326>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3326

JAN TROELL TALKS<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3334>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3334

Amy King

THE MEMORY SKIN

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3317

Eugen Galasso

eugen-poesie <http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3323>

http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3323

eugen-poesiole<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3324>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3324

poesia-eugen galasso<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3342>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3342

eugengalasso: poesiole<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3343>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3343

1 raCCONTINO E UNA POESIOLA<http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3344>
http://www.fieralingue.it/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=3344

Under Poets on Poets:

Malcolm de Chazal* – Introduced and translated by *Alexander Dickow

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=248

Grzegorz Wroblewski* translated by *Adam Zdrodowski

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules/poetsonpoets/corner.php?pa=printpage&pid=249

Christina Pacosz* translated by me:*

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetsonpoets&pa=list_pages_categories&cid=83

The main index of the Poets' Corner:

http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=Content

> Index of Poets on Poets:
>
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetsonpoets
>
> My best wishes,
>
> Anny Ballardini
>
> --
> Anny Ballardini
> http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
> http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
> http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
> http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
> I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
> Friedrich Nietzsche
>
> « Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
> vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
> Giovenale

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

156. Alan Sondheim
language, the economy of the imaginary
Tue 25 May 2010

language, the economy of the imaginary

more work on language embodiment, this time with machinery, amazing sound, and text, as if generated on branes and duals, stills and movements: and everything churning within limited bandwidths controlling both sound and image. welcome to the economy of the imaginary!

http://www.alansondheim.org/thinking.mp4

↑ Index

157. amy king
Update -- Poets for Living Waters: Poems and Statements by Evie Shockley and Franz Wright
Tue 25 May 2010

Today, please read work by Evie Shockley and Franz Wright at http://p

Today, please read work by Evie Shockley and Franz Wright at http://poetsforlivingwaters.com

(Or -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com)

~~~~~~

Poets for Living Waters is a poetry action in response to the Gulf Oil Disaster of April 20, 2010, one of the most profound man-made ecological catastrophes in history.

The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity suggests a wide range of poetry will offer a meaningful response to the current crisis, including work that harkens back to Hurricane Katrina and the ongoing regional effects.

Please submit 1-3 poems, a short bio, and credits for any previously published submissions to: [redacted]

Thank you,

Amy King and Heidi Lynn Staples

~~~~~~

If you care, share: http://poetsforlivingwaters.com

↑ Index

158. David Kirschenbaum
Exhibit at Boog Fest's Small, Small Press Fair
Tue 25 May 2010

Hi all,

Boog City would like to invite you to exhibit at our 7th annual small, small press fair (with indie records and crafts, too).

The fair will once again span two days, Sat. Sept. 25-Sun. Sept. 26, and be held at Brooklyn’s Unnameable Books (600 Vanderbilt Ave.) in their spacious backyard. The fair will take place during the 4th annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival.

The fair will open on Saturday with three hours of performances by authors from each of the tablers.

Tables are $30 for the fair, $20 dollars if you bring your own bridge table (up to 3’ x 3’) with a portion of the proceeds going to help Unnameable Books.

Door charge for attendees is by donation.

Please email me to reserve your table and schedule your reader. We look forward to the fair once again being a warm gathering with wonderful books, poetry, music, and other items from around our creative community.

You can reach me at this email address, [redacted].

This year’s festival will feature:

readings from

NYC Poets

Cara Benson
Julian Brolaski
Steve Cannon
Laura Elrick
John Godfrey
E. Tracy Grinnell
Shafer Hall
Ivy Johnson
Pierre Joris
Erica Kaufman
Noelle Kocot
Chris Martin
Tim Peterson
Nicole Peyrafitte
Mariana Ruiz

David Shapiro
Jared White
Dustin Williamson

and

Non-NYC Poets

Cathy Eisenhower
Brandon Holmquest
Ken Jacobs
Patti McCarthy
Chris McCreary
Jenn McCreary
Mel Nichols
Douglas Rothschild
Carlos Soto Román
Maureen Thorson
Joe Torra
Kevin Varrone

In Conversation, poets
David Shapiro and Joanna Fuhrman

Music from:

The newly expanded I feel tractor performs Tom Waits' Bone Machine live.

and sets from

Beat Radio
Brian Speaker
Rorie Kelly
Lach
The Elastic No-No Band and more

Our second annual Poets' Theater night, curated and hosted by Gary Sullivan, and featuring performances of many short plays written and performed by local writers and actors.

a panel TBD

as ever,
David

P.S. Apologies if you received more than one copy of this email.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher

Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

159. jason snyder

June 5: Sidebrow San Francisco Book Launch Party: Florian & Wilkinson

Tue 25 May 2010

Sidebrow and fabric8 Galleries invite you to a launch celebration of Sidebrow's latest books, Sandy Florian's On Wonderland & Waste, featuring full-color collages by Alexis Anne Mackenzie, and Joshua Marie Wilkinson's Selenography, featuring full-color Polaroids by Califone's Tim Rutili.

The event will feature readings by Sandy Florian and Joshua Marie Wilkinson, collages by Alexis Anne Mackenzie, street food by culinary cartists TBA, and bathroom bathtub aquatics by the ever popular fabric8 fish.

Sidebrow Book Launch: Florian & Wilkinson
Saturday, June 5, 7pm
fabric8 Galleries
3318 22nd St. (@ Valencia)
San Francisco
http://www.sidebrow.net/events/double-book-launch-san-francisco-4556

+ + + + + + + + + + + + + + +

On Wonderland & Waste
Sandy Florian
Collages by Alexis Anne Mackenzie http://www.sidebrow.net/books/wonderland-amp-waste

Selenography
Joshua Marie Wilkinson
Polaroids by Tim Rutili
http://www.sidebrow.net/books/selenography

+ + + + + + + + + + + + + + +

Born and raised in Seattle, Joshua Marie Wilkinson is the author of five books of poetry, most recently Selenography. He has also edited two anthologies for University of Iowa Press, including Poets on Teaching, due out fall 2010. A tour documentary about the band Califone, entitled Made a Machine by Describing the Landscape, is also forthcoming. He teaches at Loyola University Chicago, and divides his time between Chicago and Athens, GA.

Sandy Florian is the author Telescope (Action Books), 32 Pedals & 47 Stops (Tarpaulin Sky Press), The Tree of No (Action Books), On Wonderland & Waste (Sidebrow Books), and Prelude to Air From Water (Elixir Press). She has been awarded residencies at Caldera Arts, Stonehouse, and the Vermont Studio Center and literary prizes from Elixir Press, New Voices, and Brown University. She currently lives in San Francisco where she's an affiliate artist at the Headlands Center for the Arts. For more information, visit her site at boxingthecompass.blogspot.com.

Alexis Anne Mackenzie has exhibited her artwork across the United States, including solo shows in San Francisco, Chicago, and Los Angeles. She holds a B.F.A. from Tufts University/School of the Museum of Fine Arts, and her art has appeared in numerous magazines and books, including Art for Obama and The Rest Is Up To You. More of her art can be seen at www.alexisanne.com.

Tim Rutili is a musician, filmmaker, and visual artist. He is principal songwriter, lyricist, and vocalist for Red Red Meat and Califone, bands which he founded. He is also a member of Ugly Casanova and Boxhead Ensemble. Rutili has composed music for documentary and feature films and contributed to albums by Modest Mouse, Sage Francis, and many other artists. He has directed numerous short films and music videos. His feature-film directorial debut All My Friends Are Funeral Singers had its premier at the 2010 Sundance film festival. He lives in Los Angeles and Chicago.

+ + + + + + + + + + + + + + + +

Sidebrow Books
http://www.sidebrow.net
http://www.facebook.com/pages/Sidebrow/68012168356

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

160. Nic Sebastian
Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Ren Powell
Tue 25 May 2010

The internet, Facebook, Twitter, blogs, websites, iPad, iPod, podcasts, digital video, computers and who knows what else. What do they all mean for the poet? For Poetry? Ren Powell responds this week to Ten Questions on Poets and Technology - http://bit.ly/b47cmU.Best wishes,Nic Sebastianhttp://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com _____ The New Busy is not the too busy. Combine all your e-mail accounts with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multiaccount&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_4

↑ Index

161. Jennifer Karmin
Red Rover Series / Experiment #37
Tue 25 May 2010

Red Rover Series
{readings that play with reading}

Experiment #37:
Public Words - Letters & Interviews

Featuring:
David Emanuel
Jen Hofer
Anne Elizabeth Moore

PART ONE: THURSDAY, JUNE 3rd
2-8pm at the Damen Ave six-way intersection near the CTA Damen blue line -- Chicago, IL

Jen Hofer types letters in either Spanish or English for passers-by, charging $2 for a letter, $3 for a love letter, and $5 for an illicit love letter.

PART TWO: SATURDAY, JUNE 5th
7-9pm at Outer Space Studio -- Chicago, IL 1474 N. Milwaukee Ave, 3rd floor
suggested donation $4

David Emanuel asks participants to assemble and write letters onto the pages of their own handbound chapbooks or zines. Materials will be supplied.

Anne Elizabeth Moore invites Chicagoans down to do a short interview about their city, lives, and what they think about the world. Know someone with a great Chicago story? Bring them or prepare to tell yours!

DAVID EMANUEL creates text and text-based pieces. He has collaborated with artists to make performance installations, zines and occasional artifacts. He has worked as an arts administrator, helping artists make their visions realities. His critical writing has appeared online in How2 and in print in Newcity. From time to time, he can be found making letterpress prints, writing Frank O'Hara poems in collaboration with others, and drinking coffee. He is from Oklahoma, but came to Chicago to go to school. He will be leaving Chicago after 11 years this fall in order to go to school in Providence, RI.

JEN HOFER is a Los Angeles-based poet, translator, interpreter, teacher, knitter, book-maker, public letter-writer, and urban cyclist. Her most recent books are a series of anti-war-manifesto poems titled one (Palm Press, 2009); sexoPUROsexoVELOZ and Septiembre, a translation from Dolores Dorantes by Dolores Dorantes (Counterpath Press and Kenning Editions, 2008); The Route, a collaboration with Patrick Durgin (Atelos, 2008); lip wolf, a translation of lobo de labio by Laura SolÃ³rzano (Action Books, 2007); and Sin puertas visibles: An Anthology of Contemporary Poetry by Mexican Women (University of Pittsburgh Press and Ediciones Sin Nombre, 2003). Her forthcoming books are a translation of Mexican poet Myriam Mosconaâ€™s Ivory Black (Les Figues Press), a translation of Guatemalan poet Alan Millsâ€™ SÃncopes (Piedra Santa), and the poem sequences from the valley of death (Ponzipo) and Laws (Dusie Books).

ANNE ELIZABETH MOORE is the author of Unmarketable: Brandalism, Copyfighting, Mocketing, and the Erosion of Integrity (The New Press, 2007), and Hey Kidz, Buy This Book: A Radical Primer on Corporate and Governmental Propaganda and Artistic Activism for Short People (Soft Skull, 2004). Co-editor and publisher of now-defunct Punk Planet, founding editor of the Best American Comics series from Houghton Mifflin, Moore teaches at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and works with young women in Cambodia on independent media projects when sheâ€™s not traveling the globe lecturing on freedom of speech issues. Recently, Moore mounted two single-person exhibitions of her conceptual art, has been the subject of two documentary films, and her work appeared on the radio program Snap Judgment and in the Boston Phoenix, the Progressive, and on Truthout.org.

Red Rover Series is curated by Laura Goldstein and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national, and international writers, artists, and performers. The series was founded in 2005 by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin.

Email ideas for reading experiments
to us at [redacted]

The schedule for events is listed at http://groups.yahoo.com/group/redroverseries

↑ Index

162. Ruby, Michael Compulsive Words
Tue 25 May 2010

BlazeVOX [books] has just published COMPULSIVE WORDS, my fifth book of poetry, based on words that forced themselves on me during composition.

Here are a book description of COMPULSIVE WORDS, blurbs and my bio:

On January 29, 1999, my older brother was near death in a Boston hospital after emergency surgery for a blood clot in the abdomen. As I sat near the phone in Brooklyn that morning, trying to type up an old manuscript, it suddenly occurred to me that I was experiencing an extreme emotion, dread, and that I should see which words this extreme emotion displaced in my mind. While writing the poem "Dread," I perceived certain words repeatedly appearing, forcing themselves on me, taking over the poem. From then on, during composition, I noticed the appearance of these "compulsive words," which I first collected in the poem "Compulsive Words" in 2000, and whose number has continued to grow ever since.

-Michael Ruby

Reading the poems in Compulsive Words is like taking a hard drug.

-Aaron Kiely

Michael Ruby's new book is experienced as a kind of sotto voce diction, an unrelenting mumbling in the back of the mind, which takes two very different forms: as a graphic representation of voices (words presented in diagrammatic patterns), and as what might be "transcriptions" of those diagrams and patterns: "O paper placement machines/Blue ladder to family problems" or "Somnabulist prows to leaven/Healthy escarole..." Or perhaps the diagrams are transcriptions of the other texts: the tense dialectic between these two poles is one of the things that makes this book well worth contemplating.

-John M. Bennett

Michael Ruby is the author of AT AN INTERSECTION (Alef Books, 2002), WINDOW ON THE CITY (BlazeVOX [books], 2006), FLEETING MEMORIES (ebook at www.uglyducklingpresse.org/WEBBOOK-RUBY/index.html<http://www.uglyduc klingpresse.org/WEBBOOK-RUBY/index.html>, 2008) and THE EDGE OF THE UNDERWORLD (BlazeVOX, 2010). A graduate of Harvard College and Brown University's writing program, he lives in Brooklyn and works as an editor at The Wall Street Journal.

COMPULSIVE WORDS is available through BlazeVOX's website:

http://www.blazevox.org/bk-mruby.htm

For review-copy PDFs, write:

[redacted]<mailto:[redacted]>

Best,

Michael Ruby

↑ Index

163. Alan Sondheim

Let me tell you a secret -- public projection project (fwd)

Tue 25 May 2010

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Tue, 25 May 2010 18:26:30
From: Talan Memmott <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Let me tell you a secret -- public projection project

A collaborative student project in one of the classes I teach...
A large scale public projection project.
(please forward)

Let me tell you a secret
http://letmetellyouasecret.se/

Let me tell you a secret is a social experiment that will explore an aspect of the sharing-culture in our contemporary media society. Today it is common to use online social media such as Facebook, Twitter and blogs to display details of one?s private life for anyone to see. Our need to share seems insatiable, people write about anything from breakfast-habits to intimate relationship problems. Why is that? Is it perhaps a popularity contest ? competing for who gets the most readers or comments? Is it self-therapy or a quest for fame and recognition?

We want to call attention to the generous openness and sometimes bordering on exhibitionistic tendencies of recent generations - the paradoxical phenomenon that is our public, private lives.

For this project, we will gather secrets from the public. It will result in a public event in May where these secrets will be displayed anonymously.

This project is carried out by the students as part of a course called Special Project in the LCDM program (Literature, Culture and Digital Media) at Blekinge Institute of Technology.

You can send in your secrets through the website, or via SMS. Just type your secret in a text-message and send it to [redacted] (your secret can not be more than 90 characters, including spaces and punctuation). The cost is like a regular text-message.

The event will take place on 26 May between 9PM-2AM
North side of Fredrikskyrkan in Stortorget, Karlskrona

Talan Memmott
English / LCDM
DSN/KK
Campus Gr?svik (Valhallav. 1)
Blekinge Tekniska H?gskola
371 79 Karlskrona
Sweden

↑ Index

164. CA Conrad
UMM KULTHUM: A Voice Like Egypt
Wed 26 May 2010

(this post is also up at PhillySound with photos and links: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com)

Sometime in the 1980's my friend Maria Fama invited me over to her South Philly home for dinner. We spent most of our time talking about poetry, but at one point she brought out a record album and said, "I really want you to hear this. Listen to this with me." It was Umm Kulthum. I still remember sitting there with her, exchanging bursts of surprise with her. The recording PIERCED, it had no other solution in mind but to grab you by the neck and force its blade into your gut. As though music is a SOLUTION to the human condition, music and poetry, Umm and her band of poets PIERCING US ONE AT A TIME! It's impossible to find one word to express the love for this experience.

Maria made a cassette tape of the album for me. And while that was being made she told me of visiting friends in Cairo back in the 1970's. They said, "Maria we have a surprise, we want to take you to hear Umm Kulthum sing!" Maria like 90 percent of western culture didn't know who Umm Kulthum was.

She expected to go to a nightclub, but no, it was an enormous stadium. There were thousands of people. Umm was frail and old by then, but she still had power in her voice. The crowd would jump from their seats and scream at the end of a line of music.

All the poets of Egypt and the rest of the Arab world wanted to write for Umm. She remains one of the most celebrated singers in the world. She remains one of the most recorded voices in history. She still remains virtually unknown in America. But the day after seeing Maria I went into a small falafel shop in Philly called BITARS, and I asked the man behind the counter if he had ever heard of Umm Kulthum. "UMM KULTHUM? YES YES OF COURSE I KNOW UMM KULTHUM!" It caused so much excitement! The other man working with him telling him GET THE BAG GET THE BAG! He pulled an enormous, clear plastic bag out of a large drawer FILLED with Umm Kulthum cassette tapes.

All through the early 1990's my friends and I would pour over Umm's cassette's, share new ones. Then one day Maria Fama called me to tell me of a documentary coming to Philadelphia about Umm Kulthum. We went. It was so amazing. It remains one of my favorite movie going experiences. The director was there to present a Q&A, a marvelous woman who was Israeli-American who said that she made the film for many reasons, but one of them being to build a bridge between Israel and the Arab world.

Last night, 14 years later, I saw it again at my friend Mary Kalyna's house with friend Debrah Morkun. It struck me in the very same way. Goose bumps. Umm CHILLS with excitement and longing, her powerful use of her voice taking you OUT OF THIS WORLD whether you intended to go or not. It's bliss. It's ecstasy, Umm is better than any drug I've ever taken.

I'm a HUGE Umm Kulthum fan all over again today!

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

165. amy king
Seeking Poets for Reading -- Need Organizers
Wed 26 May 2010

World Ocean Day is coming up on June 8th. Heidi Lynn Staples and I are putting out feelers for poets who might be willing to organize a last-minute reading on their shores as part of a Poets for Living Waters Action. We're asking poets to serve as Poets for Living Waters Activists--organizing and publicizing the reading in their community. If you could also document via photos, video or audio - any or all, that would be especially welcome.

Ideally the event would take place by a body of water--stream, river, pond, lake, or sea. The poems read by the featured poets would be either from the Poets for Living Waters site (http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com), well known published relevant works (say E. Bishop or something), or relevant works by professional published writers. The PLW Activist (you) would be welcome to read. An open mike opportunity would conclude the event.

If interested, please backchannel at [redacted]

Best,
Amy

p.s. Today's poems are by FRANZ WRIGHT, EVIE SHOCKLEY, KATE SCHAPIRA and BILL MARSH
http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

_____

ALIAS - http:amyking.org

↑ Index

166. amy king
Sheila Black and Jennifer Bartlett are putting together an anthology of poets with physical disabilities.
Wed 26 May 2010

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: reJennifer Bartlett

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: reJennifer Bartlett

Sheila Black and Jennifer Bartlett are putting together an anthology of poets with physical disabilities.

We are ideally looking for poets with physical disabilities, although we are not excluding submissions from abled-poets writing about a poet with a physical disability. The format will be 3-5 poems and a short open-ended essay (750-1000 words). The essay should address how disability manifests itself (or doesn't) in your work. The essay can also discuss identity or anti-identity poetics.

Please send 7-10 poems, a short publishing biography (include your book titles) and an one paragraph description of an essay you would like to write to [redacted] AND [redacted].

Deadline July 1st. Also, email with any questions.

Please see the request and description below:

Yet our goal is not to produce a book that is strictly polemical but rather one that looks at poetry first. The spectrum of poets writing on the topic, especially today, articulate disability in specific and surprising ways. While the poets who make up this proposed anthology are poets whose aesthetic lens has been torqued or shaped by their bodies, the group is eclectic as fits the topicâ€”for not only is each disability unique, but even within a single person the experience of disability is a dynamic one. Some poets we plan to include, while forethinkers in the poetry world, are not known as â€œdisability poets.â€ Rather, they came to have bodily differences later in life. Some are activists and heavily entrenched in Disability Studies. Others, while not activists, write about their singular experience, in ways that are formally and philosophically challenging. In addition, the poets included represent many different modes and movements in modern poetry. Part of what is so energizing about considering the current landscape of disability poetry is the degree to which thinking about disability enlists or engages viscerally many of the core concerns animating other poetry movements from the New Formalists to the New Sincerity to the Gurlesque. The mediations on the body and commodification, and on the very nature and being of beauty, that drive many of the poets in this collection are concerns that are not only universal, but also acutely urgent in our times.

↑ Index

167. aslongasittakes

APG at ACAC

Wed 26 May 2010

For those of you in and around the ATL, the Atlanta Poets Group will be performing with artist David D'Agostino at the Atlanta Contemporary Arts Center on Thursday, June 3. The performance, titled Alphabet Species/Low Ghosts, will be a set of pieces designed specially for the ACAC space. Here is a blurb: http://www.thecontemporary.org/programming/programs/poetry-alphabet-specieslow-ghosts/ Hope to see folks there. James Sanders

↑ Index

168. steve dalachinsky

Re: Seeking Poets for Reading -- Need Organizers

Thu 27 May 2010

---

this sounds great who deals with ny end ?? 5 boroughs ?? or will there be several folks ??

On Wed, 26 May 2010 10:42:43 -0700 amy king <[redacted]>
writes:
> World Ocean Day is coming up on June 8th. Heidi Lynn Staples > and I are putting out feelers for poets who might be willing to > organize a last-minute reading on their shores as part of a Poets
> for > Living Waters Action. We're asking poets to serve as Poets for > Living Waters Activists--organizing and publicizing the reading in > their > community. If you could also document via photos, video or audio - > any or > all, that would be especially welcome.
>
> Ideally the event would take place by a body of > water--stream, river, pond, lake, or sea. The poems read by the > featured poets > would be either from the Poets for Living Waters site ( > http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com), well known published relevant > works (say E.
> Bishop or something), or relevant works by professional published > writers. The PLW
> Activist (you) would be welcome to read. An open mike opportunity > would conclude the event.
>
> If interested, please backchannel at
> [redacted]
>
> Best,
> Amy
>
> p.s. Today's poems are by FRANZ WRIGHT, EVIE SHOCKLEY, KATE > SCHAPIRA and BILL MARSH
> http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/
> _____
>
> ALIAS - http:amyking.org
>
>
>
>
>

>
>

↑ Index

169. Deborah Poe

Austin Event May 29: Skanky Possum Presents Deborah Poe and Cindy St. John

Thu 27 May 2010

Skanky Possum Presents: Deborah Poe and Cindy St. John

* A Poetry Reading and Party starting at 7 PM: Saturday!
*

Homemade food and snacks will be provided; we'll have an ice-chest and wine frig to keep your favorite BYOB cold. Please come and bring friends to hear poetry and hang out with us on the deck. Don't forget money to buy books from the poets!

Reading begins at 8:20 PM sharp.

About the Poets

Deborah Poe is the author of the poetry collections Elements (Stockport Flats Press 2010) and Our Parenthetical Ontology (CustomWords 2008). Deborah's writing has recently appeared in Colorado Review, Sidebrow, Ploughshares, Filter Literary Journal, Denver Quarterly and the anthology A Sing Economy (Flim Forum 2008).

Cindy St. John is the author of City Poems (Effing Press) and People Who Are in Love Will Read This Book Differently (Dancing Girl Press). She lives in Austin, TX.

Location

Casa Nguyen-Smith
2208 Trailside Drive #A
Austin, TX 78704

Hope to see you there...

Please feel free to invite friends! This is our facebook event page:

http://www.facebook.com/profile.php?id=7930692#!/event.php?eid=121339924563477&ref=mf<http://www.facebook.com/profile.php?id=7930692#%21/event.php?eid=121339924563477&ref=mf>

Love, Hoa

↑ Index

170. { brad brace }

Island 6.0

Thu 27 May 2010

Island 6.0 is now available online!
==========
http://bbrace.net/islands/island6/island6.html
http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/islands/island6/island6.html

Global Islands Project -- ongoing series of multi-media pdf-ebooks/field-recordings -- a pastoral, pictorial and phonic elicitation of island parameters. An intensive examination of small islands and their paradigmatic solutions to globalism.

Your (Art)world is based on mutual relief at your common corruption. Maybe some cultures are based on even worse. But that wouldn't change the bad faith of it and as years go by, you wake at night in terror of your whole life being an act of bad faith, where everything is self-interest and nothing more, where every human interaction is driven by a silent, even subconscious calculation of some ulterior motive, to the point that a sea of bad faith has taken over your whole life, there's no small island left from which you can even try to build a bridge of good faith, because even that effort becomes suspect, even good faith is nothing but self-interested, even altruism is nothing but solipsistic, even your professed agonizing right here right now is nothing but a gesture, made to the conscience in order to assure it that it exists.

http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/id.html
http://bbrace.net/id.html

Island 1.0 is Ambergris Caye, Belize Island 2.0 is Koh Si Chang, Thailand
Island 3.0 is Lamu, Kenya
Island 4.0 is Narikel Jingira, Bangladesh Island 5.0 is Isla Mais, Nicaragua
Island 6.0 are The Grenadines, West Indies

Global Islands Project:

Island 1.0 -> http://bbrace.net/islands/island1/island1.html or http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/islands/island1/island1.html -- over 800 images and hour-long audiotrack -- 69mb -- (acrobat 6)

Island 2.0 -> http://bbrace.net/islands/island2/island2.html or http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/islands/island2/island2.html -- over 535 images and hour-long audiotrack -- 78mb -- (acrobat 6)

--

http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_1.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_2.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_3.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_4.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_5.0
http://www.archive.org/details/global_islands_project_island_6.0

Global Islands Project -- ongoing series of multi-media pdf-books -- a pastoral, pictorial and phonic elicitation of island parameters...

http://www.bbrace.net/id.html
http://bbrace.laughingsquid.net/id.html

bbs: brad brace sound
http://69.64.229.114:8000
http://www.bbrace.net/undisclosed.html

↑ Index

171. Rob McLennan

rob mclennan + Andy Weaver at the TREE Reading Series, June 8;

Thu 27 May 2010

Toronto poet Andy Weaver and Ottawa writer rob mclennan feature at the TREE Reading Series, Ottawa on June 8th; 8pm, the library (2nd floor) of the Arts Court Building; the reading will start with a short open set, a 20 minute reading by rob + 20 by Andy, concluding with a short q+a between them (allowing for audience questions, if any). admission free.

I might possibly only be reading works-in-progress, including my (potential) third novel, and a suite of poems on Lake Ontario.

http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2010/05/rob-mclennan-andy-weaver-at-tree.html

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

172. Rob McLennan
the art & the agony
Thu 27 May 2010

of the poetry anthology, with rob mclennan, Todd Swift & Marilyn Bowering, by David Kosub;

http://speakingofpoems.blogspot.com/2010/05/ubiquitous-multivalent-ambitious-is.html

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

173. Daniel Godston
Ekphrastic Nexus
Thu 27 May 2010

Ekphrastic Nexus

Friday, June 25 (6 p.m.) at Chicago Urban Art Society

"Ekphrastic Nexus: Visual Art and Creative Writing" includes a panel discussion, followed by performances. This event is part of the "Studio Chicago" calendar of events. There is a suggested donation, and refreshments will be provided.

The panel involves writers and visual artists about text-image collaborations, as well as writers who have gotten inspiration from visual art, and it explores ways writers make connections with art and the visual artistic process, furthering the continuum of the artist's studio as school, gallery, political stance, sanctuary, and muse.

Contemporary writers and artists need a clean, well lit room of their own to create. Whether physical as a cabin in the woods, or ubiquitous as online presence, the studio matters to Chicago culture makers because of the many out-of-time or out-of-ethics rituals it suggests. Making art doesn't have to be political; this freedom is what makes art radically political.

We will discuss details about the spaces in which we work, whether those spaces are separate industrial studio space, home offices, or other kinds of spaces. Also, the nature of the work that happen in those studio spaces relates to how the spaces themselves are set up, whether the work involves what is done in solitude, or with collaborations (in physical and virtual spaces). We will also consider how Chicago institutions and colloquia opportunities might support Chicago artists and writers.

Participants include Annie Heckman (Owner + Director, StepSister Press), Krista Franklin (writer, artist, and educator, Kathryn Born (editor of Chicago Art Magazine), Valerie Wallace (writer and educator), Irina Botea (visual artist), and Gene Tanta (writer, visual artist, and educator), moderated by Dan Godston (writer, musician, and educator).

Studio Chicago is a yearlong collaborative project that focuses on the artist's studio. Through exhibitions, talks, publications, tours, and research, participating organizations will celebrate the working artist and reveal their sites of creative production from historical and contemporary perspectives. With concepts ranging from the "studio as muse," "virtual studios," "street as studio," and "gallery as studio," Studio Chicago invites participation from artists and the art-curious.

Chicago Urban Art Society (CUAS)
exhibition + creative-use space
2229 South Halsted Street
Chicago, IL 60608

Links:

Annie Heckman: http://www.annieheckman.com/

Borderbend Arts Collective: http://www.borderbend.org

Chicago Art Magazine: http://chicagoartmagazine.com/

Chicago Urban Art Society: http://www.chicagourbanartsociety.org/

Gene Tanta: http://genetanta.cgpublisher.com/biography.html

Irina Botea: www.irinabotea.com

Krista Franklin: http://www.kristafranklin.com/

StepSister Press: http://stepsisterpress.com/

Studio Chicago: http://www.studiochicago.org/

Valerie Wallace: http://www.pw.org/content/valerie_wallace

↑ Index

174. Poetry Project
Upcoming Events at The Poetry Project
Thu 27 May 2010

The Poetry Project¹s season is almost over‹ we hope to see you here next week!

Wednesday, June 2, 8 PM
Reading for the Recluse 6

Please join us to celebrate the publication of issue 6 of The Recluse, the Poetry Project¹s annual literary magazine. Contributors who will read are: Simone White, Mina Pam Dick, Jo Ann Wasserman, Will Edmiston, Ann Stephenson, Ish Klein and Kostas Anagnopoulos.

Friday, June 4, 10 PM
Poet¹s Potluck VI

Come say goodbye to Ed & Nicole and make mark of the end of their co-Friday Night Series run before the Poetry Project¹s annual summer-time pause. Bring your best gal, or a casual gentleman or two, your ma¹s macaroni salad, and a choice tipple, like grandma¹s punch or grandpa¹s whiskey, to wash it all down. There will be poems read, songs sung and early summertime romantic merriment for all. See you there, of course.

And coming up at Poets House:

Saturday, June 19, 7PM & Sunday, June 20, 2PM at Poets House Flow‹Winged Crocodile: A Noh Play by Leslie Scalapino

Directed by Fiona Templeton, with Katie Brown, Stephanie Silver and Julie Troost. Dance by Molissa Fenley. Music by Joan Jeanrenaud. Projected drawings by Eve Biddle. Technical director: Ray Roy III.

This Noh play by poet Leslie Scalapino travels between the left and right sides of the brain, with appearances by a reincarnated Patty Hearst in the 1974 SLA bank heist and a green-winged creature that is part crocodile, part Michelin man and part charging rhino. The play is performed by The Relationship, a performance group directed by Fiona Templeton that specializes in innovative language and use of site.

Leslie Scalapino is the ground-breaking, genre-stretching author of thirty books of poetry, poem-plays, essays, and fiction, including way, which won the American Book Award; Sight, a collaboration with Lyn Hejinian; Zither & Autobiography; The Tango; New Time; and It's go in horizontal: Selected Poems 1974-2006.

Cosponsored by Belladonna and The Poetry Project. Poets House is located at 10 River Terrace in Battery Park City.

$10, $7 for students and seniors, free to Poetry Project and Poets House Members

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

175. Charles Bernstein
Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)
Sat 29 May 2010

---

http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/scalapino/obit.html

“Scalapino makes everything take place in real time, in the light and air and night where all of us live, everything happening at once.” — Philip Whalen

Leslie Scalapino passed away on May 28, 2010 in Berkeley, California. She was born in Santa Barbara in 1944 and raised in Berkeley, California. After Berkeley High School, she attended Reed College in Portland, Oregon and received her B.A. in Literature in 1966. She received her M.A. in English from the University of California at Berkeley in 1969, after which she began to focus on writing poetry. Leslie Scalapino lived with Tom White, her husband and friend of 35 years, in Oakland, California.

In childhood, she traveled with her father Robert Scalapino, founder of UC Berkeley’s Institute for Asian Studies, her mother Dee Scalapino, known for her love of music, and her two sisters, Diane and Lynne, throughout Asia, Africa and Europe. She and Tom continued these travels including trips to Tibet, Bhutan, Japan, India, Yemen, Mongolia, Libya and elsewhere. Her writing was intensely influenced by these travels. She published her first book O and Other Poems in 1976, and since then has published thirty books of poetry, prose, inter-genre fiction, plays, essays, and collaborations. Scalapino’s most recent publications include a collaboration with artist Kiki Smith, The Animal is in the World like Water in Water (Granary Books), and Floats Horse-Floats or Horse-Flows (Starcherone Books), and her selected poems It’s go in horizontal /

Selected Poems 1974-2006 (UC Press) was published in 2008. In 1988, her long poem way received the Poetry Center Award, the Lawrence Lipton Prize, and the American Book Award from the Before Columbus Foundation. Her plays have been performed in San Francisco at New Langton Arts, The Lab, Venue 9, and Forum; in New York by The Eye and Ear Theater and at Barnard College; and in Los Angeles at Beyond Baroque.

In 1986, Scalapino founded O Books as a publishing outlet for young and emerging poets, as well as prominent, innovative writers, and the list of nearly 100 titles includes authors such as Ted Berrigan, Robert Grenier, Fanny Howe, Tom Raworth, Norma Cole, Will Alexander, Alice Notley, Norman Fischer, Laura Moriarty, Michael McClure, Judith Goldman and many others. Scalapino is also the editor of four editions of O anthologies, as well as the periodicals Enough (with Rick London) and War and Peace (with Judith Goldman).

Scalapino taught writing at various institutions, including 16 years in the MFA program at Bard College, Mills College, the San Francisco Art Institute, California College of the Arts in San Francisco, San Francisco State University, UC San Diego, and the Naropa Institute.

Of her own writing, Scalapino says “my sense of a practice of writing and of action, the apprehension itself that ‘one is not oneself for even an instant’ – should not be,’ is to be participation in/is a social act. That is, the nature of this practice that’s to be ‘social act’ is it is without formation or custom.” Her writing, unbound by a single format, her collaborations with artists and other writers, her teaching, and publishing are evidence of this sense of her own practice, social acts that were her practice. Her generosity and fiercely engaged intelligence were everywhere evident to those who had the fortune to know her.

Scalapino has three books forthcoming in 2010. A book of two plays published in one volume, Flow-Winged Crocodile and A Pair / Actions Are Erased / Appear will come out in June 2010 from Chax Press; a new prose work, The Dihedrons Gazelle-Dihredals Zoom will be released this summer by Post-Apollo Press; and a revised and expanded collection of her essays and plays, How Phenomena Appear to Unfold (originally published by Potes & Poets) will be published in the fall by Litmus Press.

Her play Flow-Winged Crocodile will be performed in New York at Poets House on June 19th at 2pm and June 20th at 7pm by the performance group The Relationship, directed by Fiona Templeton and with Katie Brown, Stephanie Silver, and Julie Troost. Dance by Molissa Fenley, music by Joan Jeanrenaud, and projected drawings by Eve Biddle. This production is co-sponsored by Belladonna* and the Poetry Project.

There will be a memorial event for Scalapino at St. Mark’s Poetry Project on Monday, June 21st.

A Zen Buddhist funeral ceremony will be conducted by Abbott Norman Fisher in about a month with the arrangements in a subsequent announcement. Tom requests that in lieu of flowers, Leslie's friends consider a charitable donation in her memory to: Poets in Need, PO Box 5411, Berkeley, CA 94705; Reed College for the Leslie Scalapino Scholarship, 3203 Southeast Woodstock Boulevard, Portland, OR 97202-8199; The AYCO Charitable Foundation, PO Box 15203, Albany, NY 12212-5203 for the Leslie Scalapino-O Books Fund to support innovative works of poetry, prose and art; or to a charitable organization of their choice. Condolence cards may be sent to Tom & Leslie’s home address, 5744 Presley Way, Oakland, California 94618-1633.

to make my mind be actions outside only. which they are.
that collapses in

grey-red bars. actions are life per se only without it.

(so) events are minute — even (voluptuous)

––Leslie Scalapino

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

June 2010

249 messages · Fri 28 May 2010 – Tue 29 Jun 2010

June 2010 turned the thinned room toward two kinds of loss at once — a catastrophe in the Gulf and the deaths of its own — and found, in both, the same instinct: to answer disaster with witness. Two hundred and forty-nine messages moved through the list, and its largest currents ran toward the oil spill blackening the Gulf of Mexico and toward the graves of poets freshly dug. It was a month of mourning on two scales, the planetary and the personal, and the room met each the only way it knows.

The largest live thread was an act of ecological witness. As the Deepwater Horizon well poured oil into the Gulf, the room organized around Poets for Living Waters, a gathering of poems answering the spill — the first, its editors said, in a planned series of actions — poetry enlisted not to fix the disaster, which it could not, but to refuse to look away from it. It was the old faith that the least a poem can do, bearing witness, is not nothing; that a catastrophe unspoken is a catastrophe twice. The room knew perfectly well that no anthology would cap a wellhead, and gathered the poems anyway, on the theory that a culture which stops writing down its disasters has begun, quietly, to consent to them.

The graver losses were closer to home. Leslie Scalapino had died at the end of May, one of the boldest experimental poets of her generation, and the room grieved her in the plainest terms — one mourner remembering that “She was alive & sweet, so smart & bubbly”, the person behind the formidable work — while a second thread remembered Peter Seaton, the reclusive Language poet, nearly vanished from public view long before his death. Two experimental originals gone in a single month, one radiant and one hidden.

The quarrel, so far as the gentle month had one, was over how poetry should stand toward the world’s emergencies — whether the anthology-as-action does any good, or merely lets poets feel useful while the oil keeps coming. But the room mostly declined the cynicism. Against a spill no poem could stanch and two deaths no elegy could reverse, it chose to write anyway, which is not a naive choice but a stubborn one.

I have set June down exactly as the archive delivered it — the poets gathering against the oil, the radiant Scalapino gone, the hidden Seaton mourned — because it was the month the list held a planetary disaster and two private deaths in the same hands and answered both with witness rather than silence. A room that responds to a poisoned sea and the loss of its own experimental masters by making anthologies and speaking the dead plainly aloud is a room practicing the one power poetry reliably has: not to repair the damage, but to keep the record, and to insist, against every evidence of futility, that what is lost be at least named.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 248 in all.

WRITERS

., Maryrose 36
Adams, V. Joshua 34
Allegrezza, William 30, 248
Andrews, Jim 139, 168
Austin, Geer 101
Beaulieu, Derek 4, 16, 121, 153
Benson, Cara 148
Berkson, Bill 138, 217
Books, Crane's Bill 212
Borchart, Sharon Mesmer/David 113, 161
Bowering, George 211
Bo¾ièeviæ, Ana 142
Brian Cassidy, Bookseller ABAA 230
Calabrese, Rosalie 214
Carfagna, Richard 119
Casamassima, Christophe 83, 134, 141, 151, 152, 163, 184, 195, 196
Chirot, David 85, 160, 185
Chirot, David-Baptiste 20, 28, 169, 242
Clark, Hilary 43
Cluff, Caleb 243
Conrad, CA 27, 41, 91, 133, 179
Dalachinsky, Steve 9, 14, 103, 116, 229, 231
Danon, Ruth 107
Dowker, David 15, 66
DuCharme, Mark 241
Earl, Amanda 200
Elshtain, Eric 189
Eylon, Dr. Dina Ripsman 215, 216
Fieled, Adam 135
Al Filreis 150, 182
Finley, Mike 104, 105, 112
Foster, Edward 39
Frazer, Vernon 8, 62
Friedman, Ed 207
Ganick, Peter 122, 177, 206
Glass, Dan 186
Glass, Jesse 130
Godston, Daniel 22, 63, 123, 124, 191
Gordon, Noah Eli 247
Gottlieb, Michael 199
Gricevich, Andy 149
Heman, Bob 17, 80, 156
Henry, Ron 190
Herd, Colin 192
Hinton, Laura 12, 44, 94, 99
Howe, William R. Dr. 170
Javier, Paolo 147
Johnson, Halvard 175, 178
Johnson, Mark 52, 56, 57, 61
Jones, Chris 154
Joris, Pierre 106
Karavatos, Nicholas 47, 172, 204
Karmin, Jennifer 100, 127, 171, 194
Kasimor, Mary 50, 109
Killian, Kevin 239
Kimball, Jack 183
King, Amy 49, 51, 53, 54, 58, 59, 60, 74, 75, 81, 82, 89, 95, 96, 97, 98, 114, 132, 165, 167, 180, 193, 198, 210, 219, 235, 237, 238
Kirschenbaum, David 137, 157, 176, 197
Kirschenbaum, David A. 218
Larsen, Will 32
Law, Iris 146
Lendennie, Jessie 117
Lepson, Ruth 10, 143, 181, 225
Levato, Francesco 86
Levitsky, R 205
Levy, Herb 1
Loden, Rachel 71
Malo, Mary Jo 31
Marmer, Jake 70
Martin, Camille 38, 126, 129, 158, 220
Mauro, Nicole 136
McLennan, Rob 23, 25, 120, 203
Michael 125, 232
Mindock, Gloria 5, 6, 7
Morse, Jonathan 35, 78
Nielsen, Aldon 67, 68
Novack, Carol 226
Penton, Jonathan 245
Peterson, Tim 46, 140, 173, 208, 209
Piombino, Nicholas 202, 221, 224
Poe, Deborah 29
Pritts, Nate 2
Project, Poetry 45, 111, 166
Quartermain, Peter 11, 64
Rizzo, Christopher 55
Rosenberg, Jim 65
Ross, Stuart 222
Rossiter, Charlie 128
Rothenberg, Jerome 188, 234
Sarai, Sarah 174
Schickling, Jared 76, 92, 110
Schultz, Susan Webster 93, 228
Seaman, David 244
Sebastian, Nic 33, 88, 246
Shimoda, Brandon 187
Side, Jeffrey 18, 69, 73, 77, 90, 115, 118, 164, 201, 213, 223
Siegell, Paul 37, 131, 145, 155
Singler, Fluffy 79

Slaughter, William 227
Sondheim, Alan 42, 48, 87
Stecopoulos, Eleni 24
Sweeney, Chad 72
Taylor, Mitch 84, 102
Templeton, Fiona 236
Tietz, Ward 3
Tobin, Adam 108
Tribbey, Hugh R. 40, 144
UbuWeb 19
Vincent, Stephen 233
Weishaus, Joel 13, 21, 159
Wellman, Donald 240
Wharton, Samuel 26
Wilcox, Dan 162

NAMES MENTIONED

Abbott, Steve 10, 11, 21, 120
Abramson, Seth 137
Adams, John 70
Adams, Marina 248
Adams, Robert 209
Ali, Kazim 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Alice, Mary 10, 21, 74, 82, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Allison, Dorothy 142, 248
Americans, Asian 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 64, 222
Anderson, Laurie 70, 190
Andre, Michael 168
Andrews, Bruce 168
Antin, David 234
Apps, Stan 170
Arbor, Ann 197
Arendt, Hannah 138, 217
Armstrong, Aaron 200
Ashbery, John 247
Auden, W. H. 138, 217
Award, Poets 47
Ayre, David 168
Babiak, Wendy 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 64
Barker, Andrew 9, 116
Barnard, Mary 10, 11, 21
Barnes, Diane 147
Baron, Todd 6
Barrow, Samantha 145
Bartlett, Jennifer 148
Barwin, Gary 16
Bateson, Gregory 89
Baudelaire, Charles 20
Beckett, Samuel 172, 204, 242
Bee, Susan 111, 166
Behrendt, Lynn 208
Behrle, Jim 137
Belflower, James 180, 210
Benjamin, Walter 70, 242
Bennett, John M. 164
Berger, Jonathan 176
Berger, Stephanie 176
Berkeley, Michael 10, 11, 21, 71, 111, 166, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Berlin, Irving 22, 86
Bernstein, Charles 10, 11, 21, 24, 70, 111, 140, 143, 166, 248
Bernstein, Emma 70, 168
Berrigan, Edmund 184
Berrigan, Ted 10, 11, 21, 41, 140, 143, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Berry, Jake 18
Betts, Tara 148
Bishop, Elizabeth 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Blackburn, Paul 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Boat, Drunken 74, 82, 86, 171
Bogle, Ann 248
Bohm, David 31
Bolden, Emma 26
Borges, Millicent 248
Borkhuis, Charles 38, 129
Boully, Jenny 30
Boyer, Anne 148
Boykoff, Jules 219
Bozicevic, Ana 74, 82, 114
Bradley, Tom 245
Brady, Andrea 120
Brakhage, Stan 202, 221, 224
Briggs, Matt 34
Brockwell, Stephen 28
Brodey, Jim 197
Brooks, Gwendolyn 227
Brown, Ann 148
Brown, Kurt 6
Bryant, Elizabeth 148
Buchanan, Pat 137
Budde, Rob 203
Bunting, Basil 240, 244
Burns, Robert 162
Byrne, Mairead 137, 148
Callas, Maria 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Camlot, Jason 23
Campbell, Andy 139
Caples, Garrett 138, 187, 217
Card, Macgregor 137
Carfagna, Ric 177, 178
Carlos, William 137
Carr, Emily 203
Carr, Michael 137
Carragon, Patricia 9
Carrion, Terri 60, 118, 232
Chan, Charlie 228
Chernoff, Maxine 71
Christakos, Margaret 120
Christi, Ellen 9, 116
Claire, Paula 142, 180, 210

Clare, John 117
Clark, Cheryl 9
Clark, Jeff 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Clay, Steve 166
Cobbing, Bob 4, 20, 43, 121
Cockburn, Alexander 242
Colby, Todd 137
Coletti, John 137
Collins, Phil 145
Columbus, Christopher 10, 11, 21
Connor, Brenda 142
Conrad, Tony 1, 27, 41, 91, 133, 140, 143, 179
Cook, Amanda 137
Cook, James 137
Cooley, Nicole 74, 82, 147
Coolidge, Clark 232
Cordelli, Phil 84, 102
Cory, Jim 145
Cotter, John 137
County, Mike 60, 137, 155, 163, 200
Crawford, Robert 63, 191
Creeley, Robert 240, 244
Crosby, Harry 176
Cross, Michael 24
Crouse, John 177, 178
Currin, Jen 203
Curtis, Dana 73
Cyphers, Jeffrey 17, 156
Dalachinsky, Steven 17
Daly, Catherine 184
Davey, Frank 240, 244
Deguy, Michel 84, 102, 105
Desmond, Rae 146
Dewey, John 172, 204
Dickison, Steve 138, 217
Dolphy, Eric 63, 191
Donnelly, Patrick 187
Donovan, Thom 24, 70, 84, 102, 105, 137, 171
Drucker, Johanna 171
Dunagan, Patrick 138, 217
Duncan, Andrew 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Duncan, Robert 24
Dunn, Jim 137
Durand, Marcella 148, 150
Durgin, Patrick 30
Dykstra, Kristin 102, 105
Dylan, Michael 225
Edgar, Chris 87
Eigner, Larry 187
Eliot, Joe 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Elisa, Paula 137
Ellen, Mary 137, 149, 215
Elliot, Joe 137, 208
Ellis, Stephen 32
Elrick, Laura 111, 166
Emerson, Claudia 20
England, Amy 22, 236
Enslin, Ted 20
Evans, Brett 140, 143
Farrell, Michael 72
Felix, Joel 227
Ferguson, Jesse 203
Ferneyhough, Brian 70
Finch, Annie 137
Fischer, Norman 10, 11, 21
Fisher, Harrison 10, 11, 21, 138, 217
Fitzgerald, Scott 203
Foley, Jack 111
France, Peter 20
Frances, Mary 146
Franco, Michael 137
Friedman, Thomas 176, 207
Frost, Elizabeth 248
Frost, Robert 6
Frym, Gloria 232
Fuchs, Greg 137
Fuhrman, Joanna 176
Gallagher, Kristen 242
Gander, Forrest 84, 102, 105
Gatza, Geoffrey 135
Gek, Kim 180, 210
Gevirtz, Susan 138, 217
Gilmore, Gary 137, 176, 197
Ginsberg, Allen 41
Giorno, John 140, 143
Giscombe, Cecil 67
Gizzi, Michael 137
Gizzi, Peter 137
Godard, Barbara 120
Godston, Jon 63, 191
Goldman, Judith 10, 11, 21, 111, 166
Goldsmith, Kenneth 70, 182
Goldstein, Mark 200, 220
Gonzalez, Ray 142
Goodman, Amy 222
Gordon, Nada 182
Graham, Susan 191
Grahn, Judy 233
Gray, Stephanie 176, 197
Greene, Jonathan 176
Grenier, Bob 9, 10, 21, 116
Grenier, Robert 11
Griffin, Tim 120, 233
Grinnell, Tracy 46, 74, 82, 111, 140, 143, 166, 173, 181, 208, 209
Guest, Barbara 148
Gunn, Thom 240, 244
Hall, Phil 203
Halpern, Rob 34
Hamilton, Diana 175
Harper, Michael 247
Harris, Ken 138, 140, 143, 217

Harris, Sharon 203
Hartman, Charles O. 168
Hartsaw, Paul 63, 191
Harvey, George 240, 244
Hauser, Mike 149
Hawley, Anthony 84, 102, 105
Hayes, Jared 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Heide, Anne 180, 210
Hejinian, Lyn 111, 166
Heller, Joseph 137
Hennessey, Michael S. 140, 143
Henning, Barbara 248
Higgins, Dick 244
Highfill, Mitch 137
Highsmith, David 138, 217
Hill, Jennifer 184
Hillman, Brenda 107
Hoag, Deb 245
Hoff, James 147
Hogue, Cynthia 248
Holder, Doug 137
Hollander, John 242
Holman, Bob 156
Hoover, Paul 71
Horning, Ron 102, 105
House, Poets 11, 45, 111, 166
Howard, Richard 9, 17, 116, 171, 176, 242
Hughes, Andrew 137
Hughes, Ted 197, 242
Hunter, Carrie 180, 210
Iijima, Brenda 46, 84, 102, 105, 111, 137, 140, 143, 148, 166, 173, 181, 208, 209
Indiana, Gary 190
Inman, Peter 137
Ireland, Lauren 117, 137
Israel, David R. 1, 9, 116
Israeli, Henry 85, 106, 160
Jackson, Jesse 63, 173, 176, 181, 191
Jaeger, Peter 203
Jaffe, Larry 215
Jarvis, Simon 34
Jhave, David 168
Johnson, Thomas 9, 116, 149, 175, 178, 209
Johnston, Daniel 139, 168
Jordan, June 219
Joseph, Safdie 139
Joyce, Michael 6, 145
Kamilhor, Judy 80, 156
Kaufman, Andrew 120
Kearney, Douglas 171
Kelly, Paul 171, 182, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Kennedy, Kit 137, 156
Kennedy, William 73
Kenner, Hugh 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Kiely, Aaron 26, 137
Kim, Myung Mi 148
Kinnell, Galway 244
Kirschenbaum, David A. 137, 176, 197, 218
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 137
Klane, Matthew 84, 102, 105
Klein, Naomi 247
Klobucar, Andrew 168
Knott, Bill 129
Knox, Caroline 187
Kooser, Ted 172, 204
Kostelanetz, Richard 244
Kuhn, Donna 184
Kushner, Bill 176, 197
Lamoureux, Mark 137
Landers, Susan 111, 166
Larkin, Philip 137
Lau, Evelyn 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Lauterbach, Ann 111, 166
Lavender, Bill 140, 143
Law, Iris A. 146
Leftwich, Jim 177, 178, 223
Lennon, John 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Leong, Michael 189
Levertov, Denise 6, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Levine, Jeffrey 208
Lewis, Susan 102, 149, 156
Lezak, Iris 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Lindley, Eric 142
Liszkiewicz, Patrick 170
Livingston, Ira 120
Livingston, Reb 37
London, Frank 242
London, Rick 10, 11, 21
Lopez, Richard 245
Lorber, Brendan 137
Mac Low, Jackson 173, 181, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Lubeski, Lori 137
Lutz, Gary 34
Lynn, Heidi 75, 89, 94, 96, 98, 99
Lyons, Kimberly 208
Madgalene, David 60
Madison, James 19, 149
Malcolm, Janet 225
Mallarmé, Stéphane 8, 20, 34, 62
Malone, Bob 118
Maloutas, Barbara 127
Mansel, Chris 115
Manson, Douglas 137, 176
Manson, Peter 34
Marchant, Fred 137
Marie, Elizabeth 137
Marie, Jeanne 6
Marie, Julie 127
Marsh, William 197
Martinez, Michael 180, 210
Mason, Chris 176
Massey, Joseph 137
Maurer, Susan 156

Mayer, Bernadette 148, 202, 221, 224
Meltzer, David 47, 60, 118, 172, 204, 232
Menard, Pierre 137
Mercury, Suzanne 137
Merwin, W. S. 242
Metz, Scott 156
Mikkalo, Erika 34
Milford, Joe 133
Mills, David 197
Milton, John 110
Mingus, Charles 63, 124, 191
Minkus, Kim 203
Minot, Susan 242
Mohammad, Kasey 170
Moore, Nicholas 84, 102, 105
Moorman, Charlotte 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Moriarty, Laura 10, 11, 21, 170
Morris, Jason 137, 138, 217
Morrison, Jim 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Morrison, Rusty 171
Moure, Erin 120
Moxley, Jennifer 34
Mulrooney, John 137
Munro, Alice 242
Murphy, Sheila 226
Murray, Elizabeth 22, 45
Myles, Eileen 137
Nadelberg, Amanda 137
Nakayasu, Sawako 171
Neruda, Pablo 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Newlove, John 23
Nguyen, Hoa 84, 102, 105, 148
Nichols, Travis 114
Nicole, Anna 45
Niedecker, Lorine 74, 82
Nielsen, Aldon L. 67, 68
Nixon, Richard 170
Noel, Urayoan 137
Nolan, Pat 60
Norman, Peter 10, 11, 21, 138, 186, 217
Notley, Alice 10, 11, 21, 84, 89, 94, 102, 105, 110, 148
Nutter, Geoffrey 187
O'Hara, Frank 186, 240, 243, 244
Oatis, Martha 137
Olsen, Geoffrey 137
Olson, Charles 240, 241, 244
Orlovsky, Peter 41
Ota, Carolyn 80, 156
Otting, Nathaniel 137
Padgett, Ron 74, 82
Parenteau, Chad 137
Parish, Jefferson 111, 166
Perez, James 146
Perry, David 176
Peterson, Katie 191
Peyrafitte, Nicole 17
Pinsky, Robert 75
Pinto, Regina 139
Piombino, Nick 224
Place, Vanessa 127, 148, 171
Porter, Anne 88
Potter, Steve 145
Pound, Scott 20, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Prescott, Randy 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 64
Prevallet, Kristin 140, 143
Prince, Richard 176
Professor, Kelly 67, 68, 182
Purcell, Jack 247
Quackenbush, Jason 139, 219
Quinn, Terry 84, 102, 105, 120
Rasula, Jed 89
Ratcliffe, Stephen 138, 217
Raven, Francis 90
Raworth, Tom 10, 11, 21
Regan, Max 70
Retallack, Joan 24, 111, 166, 248
Reyes, Louis 146
Rhodes, Shane 203
Rich, Adrienne 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Ridley, Sandra 120, 203
Rimbaud, Dee 20
Rinder, Larry 138, 217
Rivard, David 137
Roberts, Wendy 137
Robinson, Elizabeth 184
Rodin, Renee 120
Rogal, Stan 203
Rothenberg, Jerry 118, 188
Rothschild, Douglas 137
Rowland, Philip 156
Ruefle, Mary 187
Russell, Lauren 137, 176
Sanchez, Jorge 138, 217, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Santos, Craig 146
Sappho 15
Savage, Tom 197
Scalapino, Leslie 10, 11, 12, 21, 41, 44, 74, 82, 106, 111, 148, 166, 248
Schapira, Kate 137, 142
Schelling, Andrew 234
Schultz, Susan M. 93
Seaman, David W. 244
Seaton, Peter 199, 202, 207, 221, 224
Sebastianhttp, Nic 88, 246
Sexton, Anne 225
Shakespeare, William 170, 176
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 47
Sherlock, Frank 140, 143
Sherry, James 111, 166
Shihab, Naomi 148
Shufran, Lauren 148

Shurin, Aaron 71
Siegel, Nathaniel 137, 176
Sigo, Cedar 138, 217
Siken, Richard 208
Silem, Kasey 170
Silliman, Ron 202, 221, 224
Silver, Stephanie 10, 21, 111, 166
Simone, Frank 111, 166
Simpson, Bennett 203
Skinner, Jonathan 29
Sky, Tarpaulin 74, 82, 180, 209, 210
Sloman, Joel 137
Smith, Tracy K. 10, 11, 21, 80, 111, 156, 166, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Snyder, Rick 245
Sonnenberg, Kerri 242
Sparrow, John 156
Spicer, Jack 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Stafford, William 240, 244
Stannard, Martin 77
Stanton, Rob 176
Starbuck, George 225
Stebelton, Chuck 86
Stefans, Kim 168
Stein, Suzanne 225
Stewart, Christine 203
Stewart, Susan 34
Studies, Asian 10, 11, 21
Sullivan, Gary 5, 157
Swift, Todd 213
Tabios, Eileen R. 126, 146
Texas, Irving 245
Thomas, Dylan 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 64, 65, 81, 138, 162, 217
Thompson, Jon 147
Thomson, Stephen 242
Thorburn, Matthew 142, 180, 210
Tichy, Susan 120
Tieger, Aaron 137
Timmons, Jeffrey 46, 140, 143, 173, 181
Timmons, Mathew 171
Torra, Joe 137
Toscano, Rodrigo 111, 166
Tucker, Aaron 203, 242
Turner, Brian 63, 191
Upton, Lawrence 4, 43
Valentine, Jean 34
Valery, Paul 17
Vap, Sarah 148
Verlaine, Paul 20
Vermont, Charlie 131, 141
Veronica, Angela 137, 146
Vincent, Gregory 41
Virgil 242
Waber, Dan 184
Wagner, Catherine 20, 171
Waldman, Anne 24, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Wallace, Sara 176
Wallenstein, Barry 9, 116
Warhol, Andy 70, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Warsh, Lewis 9, 17, 84, 102, 105, 116, 156
Washington, Harold 60, 71, 74, 75, 80, 81, 82, 156, 162, 171, 187, 242
Waters, Charles 9, 116
Watten, Barrett 230, 233
Watts, Carol 148
Weaver, Andy 120
Weaver, Rebecca 197
Weber, Bruce 17
Weiner, Hannah 24
Weiss, Mark 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 64, 234
Welch, Lew 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
Welsh, Lawrence 245
Wertheim, Christine 171
Whalen, Philip 10, 11, 21, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244
White, Tom 10, 11, 21, 111, 166, 248
Whitehead, Gregory 139
Whiting, John 156, 171
Whiting, Nathan 80
Whitman, Walt 176, 197
Wilder, Kimberly 245
Wilkinson, John 34
Williams, William Carlos 67, 68
Williamson, Aaron 142
Williamson, Dustin 137
Willis, Elizabeth 137
Wilson, Steve 84, 102, 105
Wisner, Wendy 142, 180, 210
Wolach, David 219
Wolfe, Thomas 138, 217
Wolff, Rebecca 137
Woodward, Jon 137
Wright, James 17, 156
Wright, Jeff 9, 116
Yeary, James 36
Zawacki, Andrew 34
Zorn, John 70
Zucker, Rachel 120
Zukofsky, Louis 239, 240, 241, 243, 244

CONCEPTS

9/11 75
Activism and protest 22, 65, 89, 94, 96, 140, 143
Aesthetics 24, 70, 92, 97, 127, 213
Anthologies 5, 6, 10, 11, 21, 28, 41, 47, 75, 81, 86, 89, 117, 120, 128, 140, 143, 172, 176, 197, 204, 234
Appropriation 76, 85, 97, 147, 171, 237
Archives and libraries 6, 13, 28, 41, 42, 66, 70, 131, 141, 147, 152, 158, 159, 168, 180, 210

Autobiography 32, 111, 166, 173, 181, 200, 234, 242, 248
Avant-garde 28, 70, 82, 234
Beauty 5, 24, 87
Black Mountain 15
Blogs 1, 23, 25, 26, 27, 28, 31, 33, 35, 37, 38, 41, 44, 67, 68, 74, 78, 79, 82, 91, 93, 96, 100, 102, 105, 106, 120, 126, 127, 131, 133, 137, 139, 141, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 152, 154, 155, 159, 163, 178, 179, 182, 183, 195, 203, 215, 228, 234, 247, 248
Book announcements 6, 24, 40, 45, 71, 74, 82, 84, 102, 105, 116, 119, 136, 144, 158, 173, 180, 181, 184, 188, 210, 247
Bookstores 28, 46, 140, 143, 173, 181, 187, 208, 209, 240, 244
Capitalism 32, 92, 96, 97
Cities 140, 142, 143, 176, 202, 215, 221, 224
Climate 125
Collage and montage 9, 17, 38, 70, 72, 106, 202, 221, 224
Conferences and festivals 9, 17, 48, 60, 70, 116, 124, 156, 157, 168, 194, 197, 234, 236, 245
Copyright and permissions 243
Difficulty 227
Digital archives 19, 70, 135, 140, 143, 147, 221, 224
Dreams 5, 6, 7, 20, 186, 197, 198
Ecology and ecopoetics 22, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 64, 75, 81, 89, 94, 99, 101, 103, 104, 107, 108, 109, 112, 125, 194, 233
Editing 96, 120, 147, 242
Electronic poetry and hypertext 4, 10, 11, 16, 21, 43, 70, 114, 121, 122, 147, 165, 167, 168, 180, 187, 193, 198, 210, 219, 234, 235, 237, 238
Elegy 86, 101, 103, 104, 107, 108, 109, 112
Empire and imperialism 173, 181
Epic 149
Erasure 71, 208
Experimental poetry 177, 178
Feminism 82, 94, 176
Film 1, 65, 86, 115, 147, 149, 176, 197, 202, 221, 224, 242
Fluxus 244
Gender 74, 82, 233
Grants and funding 71, 131, 141, 180, 190, 197, 210
Haiku 198
Homophonic translation 72
Humour and satire 24, 32, 245
Identity politics 118
Improvisation 8, 20, 62, 100, 236
Interviews 7, 70, 74, 82, 89, 114, 118, 120, 123, 127, 152, 176, 200, 242, 244
Israel and Palestine 1, 9, 85, 106, 116, 160
Jewish poetics 216
Language poetry 181, 202, 221, 224
Latino and Latin American poetry 7
Letters and correspondence 170
Little magazines 6, 20, 84, 92, 95, 96, 97, 102, 105, 110, 140, 143, 146, 148, 173, 180, 181, 182, 196, 197, 202, 203, 210, 216, 221, 224, 227, 230, 233, 242, 247
Lyric poetry 20, 24, 106, 215
Memory 7, 10, 11, 21, 111, 130, 138, 148, 166, 217, 228, 248
MFA programs 10, 11, 21, 71, 74, 82, 131, 141, 171, 190, 247
Modernism 208
Mourning and loss 5, 21, 41, 44, 89, 94, 96, 111, 140, 143, 160, 166, 248
Music and poetry 1, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 17, 20, 21, 22, 42, 60, 62, 63, 70, 74, 82, 111, 116, 125, 131, 137, 141, 155, 156, 166, 171, 176, 180, 186, 191, 197, 209, 210, 229, 231, 242, 245
Nationalism 194
Nature 5, 10, 11, 20, 21, 31, 87, 95, 101, 103, 104, 107, 108, 109, 112, 149
Negativity and refusal 114
New York School 143
Obituary and memorial 10, 11, 14, 21, 111, 166
Ontology 147
Performance and the poetry reading 9, 28, 46, 71, 74, 76, 79, 82, 86, 89, 99, 120, 131, 140, 141, 143, 149, 155, 172, 173, 181, 190, 204, 208, 209, 247
Philosophy 24, 31, 63, 90, 191, 197
Place and region 6
Poet laureate 7, 60, 75, 172, 204
Poetics 11, 15, 20, 24, 64, 82, 92, 94, 96, 97, 140, 143, 144, 147, 150, 158, 180, 194, 196, 202, 210, 213, 221, 224, 227, 234, 240, 243, 244
Poets Against the War 76, 85, 94, 96, 99
Postmodernism 208
Print vs. digital 1, 18, 20, 27, 41, 73, 77, 90, 91, 100, 115, 133, 147, 152, 164, 177, 178, 179, 188, 201, 206, 213, 223
Prizes and awards 6, 7, 10, 11, 21, 23, 47, 71, 74, 82, 111, 120, 166, 169, 171, 172, 197, 204, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244, 247
Prose poem 20, 165, 200, 202, 221, 224
Prosody and meter 15
Psychoanalysis 20
Queer poetics 74, 82, 176, 197
Race and poetry 63, 74, 82, 191, 194, 233
Reading announcements 9, 17, 96, 131, 141, 149, 245, 247
Religion and the sacred 10, 11, 20, 21, 41, 89, 239, 240, 241, 243, 244

Representation 245
Reviewing and criticism 6, 34, 47, 71, 72, 74, 82, 92, 96, 97, 120, 126, 131, 135, 136, 141, 146, 152, 155, 159, 172, 173, 175, 176, 180, 181, 190, 197, 204, 208, 210, 226, 227, 233, 242
Revision 198
Science 63, 90, 94, 191
Serial poem 10, 21, 180, 196, 210
Small press publishing 5, 7, 23, 25, 46, 74, 82, 120, 140, 143, 147, 149, 152, 170, 176, 180, 184, 189, 200, 203, 208, 209, 210, 215, 218, 222, 245
Social media 17, 18, 33, 50, 70, 76, 81, 82, 84, 85, 94, 96, 99, 102, 105, 125, 137, 147, 172, 176, 187, 193, 197, 204, 244
Sonnet 16, 90, 126, 129, 176, 178
Sound poetry 8, 20, 28, 133
Structuralism 20
Subjectivity 171, 176, 199, 202, 221, 224
Sublime 71
Surrealism 15
Terrorism 85, 160
The academy 10, 11, 21, 22, 32, 35, 47, 63, 67, 68, 70, 71, 74, 82, 100, 107, 140, 143, 147, 149, 171, 172, 180, 182, 190, 191, 197, 200, 204, 208, 210, 215, 245, 247
The body 5, 20, 24, 63, 165, 191, 248
The canon 171
The Holocaust 125, 171, 214, 231
The internet 5, 33, 65, 180, 182, 210, 240, 244
The Iraq war 5, 160
The listserv 10, 11, 21, 45, 107, 152, 174, 185
Theatre 10, 11, 21, 22, 24, 32, 60, 147, 157, 171, 176, 242
Translation 6, 20, 34, 71, 74, 82, 84, 86, 102, 105, 106, 147, 173, 181, 192, 242, 248
Vietnam 240, 244
Visual and concrete poetry 8, 20, 28, 62, 139, 153, 168, 170, 244
Visual art 3, 5, 9, 17, 19, 32, 47, 71, 86, 131, 137, 141, 145, 147, 156, 176, 186, 197, 202, 221, 224, 245
Women's writing 148

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 249 in all.

28 MAY 2010

1. Herb Levy — Re: UMM KULTHUM: A Voice Like Egypt
2. Nate Pritts — raymond foye contact info
3. Ward Tietz — wordimage.net
4. derek beaulieu — new from No press: DANDELION COLLABORATION by Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upt...

29 MAY 2010

5. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press Announces A chapbook by Gulnar Ali Balata
6. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press Announces A New Poetry Book by Andrey Gritsman
7. Gloria Mindock — Cervena Barva Press Announces A New Poetry chapbook by Charles P. Ries
8. Vernon Frazer — Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visu...
9. steve dalachinsky — readings
10. Ruth Lepson — Re: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)
11. Peter Quartermain — Re: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)
12. Laura Hinton — Re: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)

30 MAY 2010

13. Joel Weishaus — "Splitting the Stone - Toward a Lithopoetics."
14. steve dalachinsky — more sad news peter orlovsky passed away
15. David Dowker — Machine Language
16. derek beaulieu — new from No press: SERVANTS OF DUST by Gary Barwin

31 MAY 2010

17. Bob Heman — Collage Show - Tribes - Opening Reception - Sunday June 6 - 4:00 - 6:00
18. Jeffrey Side — Argotist Ebooks' first publication: "Scratching Face" by Jake Berry
19. UbuWeb — Students Needed at the Whitney to Recreate Baldessari's 'I Will Not Make Any More ...
20. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Musi...
21. Joel Weishaus — Leslie Scalapino
22. Daniel Godston — World Listening Day
23. Rob McLennan — [[redacted]: Bywords June15 deadline]
24. Eleni Stecopoulos — ARMIES OF COMPASSION, from Palm Press
25. Rob McLennan — jwcurry is appealing for relief again.
26. Samuel Wharton — Fwd: sawbuck 4.2
27. CA Conrad — Tammany, around

1 JUN 2010

28. David-Baptiste Chirot — save jwcurry & Room 302 Books!
29. Deborah Poe — Fwd: Call for anecdotes for an upcoming Sarabande book
30. William Allegrezza — Series A: Durgin and Boully this Wednesday
31. Mary Jo Malo — Gulf waters
32. Will Larsen — This Sunday: Staviana Stanescu Reading, 2pm
33. Nic Sebastian — Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Chris Hamilton-Emery
34. V. Joshua Adams —  NEW ISSUE OF CHICAGO REVIEW ***

2 JUN 2010

35. Jonathan Morse — What happens when a photographer looks at a poet?
36. Maryrose . — Open Call: PolyVocal
37. Paul Siegell — youtube'd book trailer: wild life rifle fire
38. Camille Martin — new at Rogue Embryo

39. Edward Foster — GREAT BOOK EVENT NOT TO BE MISSED
40. Tribbey, Hugh R. — new book
41. CA Conrad — FUCK DEATH!

3 JUN 2010

42. Alan Sondheim — Nigerian oil damage (fwd - the US is catching up)
43. Hilary Clark — Re: new from No press: DANDELION COLLABORATION by Bob Cobbing and Lawrence U…
44. Laura Hinton — Re: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)
45. Poetry Project — Events at The Poetry Project

4 JUN 2010

46. Tim Peterson — EOAGH Reading Series 6/6: Javier, Lee, and Marinovich
47. Nicholas Karavatos — at Show & Tell Gallery in Portland, OR on Monday, June 7 at 7:00pm
48. Alan Sondheim — conference - video demo - brightens nicely -
49. amy king — Weeping over this ...
50. Mary Kasimor — Re: Weeping over this ...
51. amy king — OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
52. Mark Johnson — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
53. amy king — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
54. amy king — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
55. Christopher Rizzo — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
56. Mark Johnson — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
57. Mark Johnson — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
58. amy king — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
59. amy king — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
60. amy king — SAVE THE GULF! -- BENEFIT POETRY & MUSIC FESTIVAL -- June 27th -- Petaluma, CA -…
61. Mark Johnson — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
62. Vernon Frazer — Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visu…
63. Daniel Godston — Mingus Awareness Project
64. Peter Quartermain — Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
65. Jim Rosenberg — For Neda -- A Film by Antony Thomas

5 JUN 2010

66. David Dowker — The Alterran Poetry Assemblage
67. Aldon Nielsen — ALA Photos at Heat Strings Blog
68. Aldon Nielsen — ALA in San Francisco - Correction

6 JUN 2010

69. Jeffrey Side — Two poems in Jacket
70. Jake Marmer — Bernstein, Goldsmith, and Saft Gig this Tuesday

7 JUN 2010

71. Rachel Loden — Chernoff, Loden, de la Perrière: Moe's in Berkeley this Thursday June 10
72. Chad Sweeney — My review in Jacket: Michael Farrell's A Raider's Guide
73. Jeffrey Side — The second ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Iron W” by Rich Curtis.
74. amy king — TOMORROW -- Poets for Living Waters Action--World Ocean Day -- Tues, June 8th @ …
75. amy king — Poets for Living Waters -- New Poems and Eco-Statements Up by ….
76. Jared Schickling — poets for poets for living waters?
77. Jeffrey Side — The third ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “How to Live a Life” by Martin Stan…

8 JUN 2010

78. Jonathan Morse — Jonathan Morse blogs about fur, food, and desire
79. Fluffy Singler — New blogs
80. Bob Heman — 11th BIG CLWN WR EVENT - JUNE 18th - Westbeth

81. amy king — poets for poets for living waters?
82. amy king — TONIGHT -- Poets for Living Waters Action -- World Ocean Day -- Tues, June 8th @…
83. Christophe Casamassima — Add your link to the new furniture press books site
84. Mitch Taylor — MUTHAFUCKA TWO: NEW POETRY + ART
85. David Chirot — Re: poets for poets for living waters?
86. Francesco Levato — Redletter Reading Series: Francesco Levato, June 18th

9 JUN 2010

87. Alan Sondheim — Oil, our pasts
88. Nic Sebastian — Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Cati Porter
89. amy king — Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forward)
90. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Moisture Surges" by Francis Raven.
91. CA Conrad — POETS FOR LIVING WATERS
92. Jared Schickling — Re: Poets For Living Waters
93. Susan Webster Schultz — new on Tinfish Editor's Blog
94. Laura Hinton — Re: Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forw…
95. amy king — New Reviews @ Jacket and @ Wet Asphalt
96. amy king — Re: Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forward)
97. amy king — Re: Poets For Living Waters
98. amy king — Re: Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forward)
99. Laura Hinton — Re: Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forw…
100. Jennifer Karmin — June 12 & 13: Performance @ Printers Row Lit Fest
101. Geer Austin — Re: Poets For Living Waters

10 JUN 2010

102. Mitch Taylor — MUTHAFUCKA TWO: NEW POETRY + ART
103. steve dalachinsky — Re: Poets For Living Waters
104. Mike Finley — Re: Poets For Living Waters
105. Mike Finley — Re: MUTHAFUCKA TWO: NEW POETRY + ART
106. Pierre Joris — New NOMADICS posts
107. Ruth Danon — Re: Poets For Living Waters
108. Adam Tobin — Re: Poets For Living Waters
109. Mary Kasimor — Re: Poets For Living Waters
110. Jared Schickling — Re: Poets For Living Waters
111. Poetry Project — A Memorial for Leslie Scalapino
112. Mike Finley — Re: Poets For Living Waters

11 JUN 2010

113. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart — Re: Poets For Living Waters
114. amy king — Huffington Post Interview / Idealism / Poetry
115. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “The Ashes of Thoreau” by Chris Mansel
116. steve dalachinsky — Re: New readings
117. Jessie Lendennie — Dogs Singing: A Tribute Anthology
118. Jeffrey Side — Rockpile Tour Interviews and Feature at The Argotist Online
119. Carfagna, Richard — New Book from Chalk Editions
120. Rob McLennan — new(ish) on rob's clever blog
121. derek beaulieu — new from No press: LOUISE GATE by Bob Cobbing

12 JUN 2010

122. peter ganick — new drawings
123. Daniel Godston — interview with Steve Dalachinsky
124. Daniel Godston — Borderbend Arts Collective
125. Michael — An Announcement from Big Bridge- NO MORE OIL!

126. Camille Martin — review copies of Camille Martin's Sonnets
127. Jennifer Karmin — Les Figues Press: Give A Fig Blog

13 JUN 2010

128. Charlie Rossiter — Submissions sought for Online Oil Spill Crisis anthology
129. Camille Martin — Rogue Embryo: Jiri Kolar, Bill Knott, Charles Borkhuis, and more . . .

14 JUN 2010

130. Jesse Glass — Ekleksographia--Boston Issue now up
131. Paul Siegell — FISHTOWN, Philly > Tuesday the 15th
132. amy king — "Coverage" beyond the Media -- New Statements & Poems @ Poets for Living Waters
133. CA Conrad — PhillySound poets on The Joe Milford Poetry Show
134. Christophe Casamassima — Furniture Press Site Up/Down..... Finally up again!
135. Adam Fieled — "Apparition Poems" out from Blazevox
136. Nicole Mauro — Two New Titles from Black Radish Books
137. David Kirschenbaum — A Boston Poet Tea Party, 7/30-8/1/10

15 JUN 2010

138. Bill Berkson — What About Auden
139. Jim Andrews — Netartery
140. Tim Peterson — EOAGH presents Hennessey, Prevallet, and Sherlock (6/17)
141. Christophe Casamassima — Re: FISHTOWN, Philly > Tuesday the 15th
142. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ — Announcing the Stain summer calendar!
143. Ruth Lepson — Re: EOAGH presents Hennessey, Prevallet, and Sherlock (6/17)
144. Tribbey, Hugh R. — Re: New Book from Chalk Editions
145. Paul Siegell — Re: FISHTOWN, Philly > Tuesday the 15th
146. Iris Law — Just Released: LANTERN REVIEW, Issue 1
147. paolo javier — P||R||O||J||E||C||T||I||O||N||S #2, June 20, 6 pm @ the BPC
148. Cara Benson — Invitation to Celebrate Leslie Scalapino
149. Andy Gricevich — THE RECURRENT END LOZENGE-SHAPED READING: Hauser, Karmin, Yearous-Algozin ...
150. Al Filreis — Fellow in Poetics & Poetic Practice at Penn
151. Christophe Casamassima — Furniture Press Books: McCreary & Carr
152. Christophe Casamassima — Reviewers needed for Dialogue's End (plus) Baltimore Center for th...
153. derek beaulieu — new from No press: ROTATED ALPHABET by Anatol Knotek
154. Chris Jones — more absolute deviation

16 JUN 2010

155. Paul Siegell — MEDIA, PA > Thursday the 17th
156. Bob Heman — CLWN WR 48 debuts this friday at Westbeth in a celebration of poetry and music ...
157. David Kirschenbaum — Call for Work: Boog Fest's Poets' Theater
158. Camille Martin — Re: The Alterran Poetry Assemblage
159. Joel Weishaus — Poetica - Michael McClure's "Mysteriosos"
160. David Chirot — Re: poets for living waters

17 JUN 2010

161. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart — Have Fulbright, will travel ... to Russia
162. Dan Wilcox — Poets in the Park 2010
163. Christophe Casamassima — Audio Onthology...Calling all Baltimore (Area) Poets - Audio Proje...
164. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is NEOLIPIC by John M. Bennett.
165. amy king — New Work Up - Poets for Living Waters
166. Poetry Project — Leslie Scalapino Memorial
167. amy king — Query - Media

18 JUN 2010

168. Jim Andrews — Netartery
169. David-Baptiste Chirot — José Saramago, Nobel Prize-Winning Writer, Dies--NY Times
170. Howe, William R. Dr. — New Slack Buddha Books
171. Jennifer Karmin — Les Figues Press: NOT CONTENT

19 JUN 2010

172. Nicholas Karavatos — at Golden West College (Tebot Bach) in Huntington Beach, CA on Friday,...
173. Tim Peterson — EOAGH presents Gottlieb and Timmons on 6/20 (Faux | Other Book Launch)
174. Sarah Sarai — Re: poets for living waters
175. Halvard Johnson — Hamilton Stone Review #21 (Summer 2010) -- now online
176. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City Gay Pride Issue Print and Online PDF Editions Available
177. peter ganick — five new free eBooks at chalk editions
178. Halvard Johnson — Fwd: five new free eBooks at chalk editions

20 JUN 2010

179. CA Conrad — WIEBE URCHIN poetry event

21 JUN 2010

180. amy king — Friday! James Belflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim Gek L...
181. Ruth Lepson — Re: EOAGH presents Gottlieb and Timmons on 6/20 (Faux | Other Book Launch)
182. Al Filreis — PoemTalk #33: Gordon, Goldsmith & McLaughlin on Sharon Mesmer
183. Jack Kimball — ode for now
184. Christophe Casamassima — Furniture Press Chap/Books now available!
185. David Chirot — Re: poets for living waters
186. Dan Glass — Mixtape featuring Frank O'Hara
187. Brandon Shimoda — Garrett Caples, Quintessence of the Minor: Symbolist Poetry in English
188. Jerome Rothenberg — Concealments & Carichos -- new book from Black Widow Press

22 JUN 2010

189. Eric Elshtain — "Cover Poetry" at Beard of Bees
190. Ron Henry — Poetry Reading (Ithaca, NY, 6/24, 6 pm) - Karen Leona Anderson and Theo Hummer ...
191. Daniel Godston — Mingus Awareness Project 2010
192. colin herd — Contact Info for Molly Weigel
193. amy king — Answering to Proust + Twitter's Growing Up
194. Jennifer Karmin — June 22-26: US Social Forum in Detroit

23 JUN 2010

195. Christophe Casamassima — Chris McCreary's Undone: A Fakebook on Silliman's Blog
196. Christophe Casamassima — Ambit: A Journal of Temporary Poetics. Submissions open.
197. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City presents Straw Gate Books and Krista Weaver
198. amy king — POETS FOR LIVING WATERS -- NEW POEMS UP
199. Gottlieb, Michael — Remembering Peter Seaton

24 JUN 2010

200. Amanda Earl — new from AngelHousePress
201. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "An Archeology of Theory" by Peter Gan...
202. Nicholas Piombino — Re: Remembering Peter Seaton
203. Rob McLennan — Duse 10: the Canadian issue, ed. rob mclennan, now on-line!
204. Nicholas Karavatos — Re: at Golden West College (Tebot Bach) in Huntington Beach, CA on Fri...
205. R Levitsky — Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
206. peter ganick — my new eBook from Argo tist Ebooks

25 JUN 2010

207. Ed Friedman — Re: Remembering Peter Seaton
208. Tim Peterson — EOAGH on 6/26 presents Lyons, Lasky, and Levine
209. Tim Peterson — EOAGH on 6/27 presents Grinnell, Iijima, and Taylor
210. amy king — TONIGHT -- James Belflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim G…
211. George Bowering — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
212. Crane's Bill Books — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

26 JUN 2010

213. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Experimental Sex Hospital" by Todd Sw…
214. Rosalie Calabrese — ROSALIE'S POETRY UPDATE
215. Dr. Dina Ripsman Eylon — New Poetry Chapbook from Sisterhood Press
216. Dr. Dina Ripsman Eylon — Writing Competition from Women in Judaism
217. Bill Berkson — FW: What About Auden
218. David A. Kirschenbaum — Advertise in Boog City 65
219. amy king — June Jordan poem up @ Poets for Living Waters
220. Camille Martin — New @ Rogue Embryo: Jan Sekal + Mark Goldstein + the fledgling book (on le…
221. Nicholas Piombino — Re: Remembering Peter Seaton
222. Stuart Ross — New chapbook by Loren Goodman!
223. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Sparagmos Never Mind the Via Negativa…

27 JUN 2010

224. Nicholas Piombino — Re: Remembering Peter Seaton
225. Ruth Lepson — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
226. Carol Novack — Reminder: The Mad Hatters' Review Contest closes this Wednesday at midnight!
227. William Slaughter — New Mudlark Flash

28 JUN 2010

228. Susan Webster Schultz — recent blog posts from Tinfish Editor
229. steve dalachinsky — dalachinsky POETRY UPDATE
230. Brian Cassidy, Bookseller ABAA — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
231. steve dalachinsky — Re: ROSALIE'S POETRY UPDATE
232. Michael — SAVE THE GULF-- SAN FRANCISCO-- SHOW YOUR SUPPORT!!--JULY 2
233. Stephen Vincent — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
234. Jerome Rothenberg — New posting: David Antin on narrative
235. amy king — The oil hasn't stopped
236. Fiona Templeton — DIY Workshop - The Eavesdroppers' Choir
237. amy king — Appropriate time for profanity: now. --- Just when we thought the spill couldn…
238. amy king — Re: OT: Just when we thought the "spill" couldn't get worse … + Poets for Liv…
239. Kevin Killian — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
240. Donald Wellman — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
241. Mark DuCharme — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
242. David-Baptiste Chirot — Ben Sonnenberg, Founder of Literary Journal Grand Street, Dies at 73
243. Caleb Cluff — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

29 JUN 2010

244. David Seaman — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
245. Jonathan Penton — readings in Los Angeles and El Paso, and some Unlikely updates
246. Nic Sebastian — Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Dave Bonta
247. Noah Eli Gordon — Gordon, Klein and Novy read for St. Mark's Bookshop at BAR 82
248. William Allegrezza — Translators

249. Laura Hinton — On-line Memorial to Leslie Scalapino is now concluded

1. Herb Levy

Re: UMM KULTHUM: A Voice Like Egypt

Fri 28 May 2010

One of the best singers EVER; thanks for this.

On May 26, 2010, at 12:35 PM, CA Conrad wrote:

> (this post is also up at PhillySound with photos and links: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com)
>
> Sometime in the 1980's my friend Maria Fama invited me over to her South Philly home for dinner. We spent most of our time talking about poetry, but at one point she brought out a record album and said, "I really want you to hear this. Listen to this with me." It was Umm Kulthum. I still remember sitting there with her, exchanging bursts of surprise with her. The recording PIERCED, it had no other solution in mind but to grab you by the neck and force its blade into your gut. As though music is a SOLUTION to the human condition, music and poetry, Umm and her band of poets PIERCING US ONE AT A TIME! It's impossible to find one word to express the love for this experience.
>
> Maria made a cassette tape of the album for me. And while that was being made she told me of visiting friends in Cairo back in the 1970's. They said, "Maria we have a surprise, we want to take you to hear Umm Kulthum sing!" Maria like 90 percent of western culture didn't know who Umm Kulthum was. She expected to go to a nightclub, but no, it was an enormous stadium. There were thousands of people. Umm was frail and old by then, but she still had power in her voice. The crowd would jump from their seats and scream at the end of a line of music.
>
> All the poets of Egypt and the rest of the Arab world wanted to write for Umm. She remains one of the most celebrated singers in the world. She remains one of the most recorded voices in history. She still remains virtually unknown in America. But the day after seeing Maria I went into a small falafel shop in Philly called BITARS, and I asked the man behind the counter if he had ever heard of Umm Kulthum. "UMM KULTHUM? YES YES OF COURSE I KNOW UMM KULTHUM!" It caused so much excitement! The other man working with him telling him GET THE BAG GET THE BAG! He pulled an enormous, clear plastic bag out of a large drawer FILLED with Umm Kulthum cassette tapes.
>
> All through the early 1990's my friends and I would pour over Umm's cassette's, share new ones. Then one day Maria Fama called me to tell me of a documentary coming to Philadelphia about Umm Kulthum. We went. It was so amazing. It remains one of my favorite movie going experiences. The director was there to present a Q&A, a marvelous > woman who was Israeli-American who said that she made the film for many reasons, but one of them being to build a bridge between Israel and the Arab world.

>
> Last night, 14 years later, I saw it again at my friend Mary Kalyna's house with friend Debrah Morkun. It struck me in the very same way. Goose bumps. Umm CHILLS with excitement and longing, her powerful use of her voice taking you OUT OF THIS WORLD whether you intended to go or not. It's bliss. It's ecstasy, Umm is better than any drug I've ever taken.
>
> I'm a HUGE Umm Kulthum fan all over again today!
>
> --
> PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
> THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

2. Nate Pritts
raymond foye contact info
Fri 28 May 2010

---

back channel, please.

thanks,
np

_____
:: Dr. Nate Pritts

:: http://www.natepritts.com

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

3. Ward Tietz
wordimage.net
Fri 28 May 2010

I’ve got a new website at wordimage.net containing sample views of my word sculpture installations, performances and works on paper.

Best,

WT

↑ Index

4. derek beaulieu

new from No press: DANDELION COLLABORATION by Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upton

Fri 28 May 2010

No press is proud to announce the (re-issued) publication of

DANDELION COLLABORATION
by Bob Cobbing & Lawrence Upton

published in an edition of 40 hand-sewn copies (of which 20 are for sale) $5 each (including shipping)

Dandelion Collaboration was commissioned from Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upton by derek beaulieu. It was made between March and May 2002. It was the last collaborative poetry the two made, writing and rewriting using additive and destructive processes-original writing and inscription collaged with found material, subjected to digital transformation using several PC graphics packages, and analog transformation by photocopier.

for more information, or to order copies, email
[redacted]

derek beaulieu
2 - 733 2nd avenue nw
calgary alberta
canada T2N 0E4
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

5. Gloria Mindock

Cervena Barva Press Announces A chapbook by Gulnar Ali Balata

Sat 29 May 2010

Cervena Barva Press Announces a New Chapbook
"My Soul Still A Virgin"
by Gulnar Ali Balata

My Soul Still A Virgin by Gulnar Ali Balata

Cover painting by Ghada Habib

Gulnar Ali Balata was born in Iraqi Kurdistan in 1974. She is the author of two books of poems, Luna and Twelve Months (Hawar Press, 2006) and Song of the Sad Ruins (Hawar Press, 2008) published in Duhok, Iraq. Gulnar has had work appear in a number of literary journals, websites and anthologies in Kurdish and Arabic languages which are her first and second languages. She is now busy with her first story, a novel, and a third book of poetry. She received an associates degree in English from Duhok, Iraq. She taught English for three years before she left home in 1996. Gulnar received an associates degree from Bunker Hill Community College in 2009. She currently is working on her bachelors degree in art. Her work has been published in newspapers and magazines in Kurdish and extensively on the Internet. She has been listed as one of the top Kurdish women's voices in modern Kurdish poetry. Her poems have a romantic power. She uses a clean and pure vocabulary.

These are poems of exile, torn from the soil of the author's native Kurdistan. They are poems of the human spirit orphaned. They demand of the reader the care and compassion any orphan requires to retain hope and nurture the promise of return. â€”T. Michael Sullivan, Director William Joiner Center's Writers' Workshop Gulnar's poetry speaks in English the language of her native Kurdistan. The mountains, streams, and valleys are both harsh and sensitive barriers in the mist. The ever present partridge reminds us of the country's beauty and beyond them and before them lies its sadness. Gulnar Ali Balata is a wonderful poet whom it has been my great pleasure to work with for the past several years watching her adapt her Kurdish and Arabic poetry to English. â€”Tom Hooper, Bunker Hill, Community College

My soul still a virgin

The night holds its wings
Over the side of my expecting heart, leaving wilted roses dew
on the morning star's face smiling for the coming morning that follows gulls' cheers.

Tears of the sky
Flow for the grief of the night
And the vanquished body hiding in the corner of the wilderness Picks up his broken pieces
And what's left of his tears
To seek new.

Preoccupied in abhorrent life the maiden spirit with its portable undying thirst, its mystery of existence and sense of its freedom of dreams and hope remain after the confiscation of waking up in the dewy morning,
Overlooking from the longing window
The chirping of birds.

Three-colored autumn leaves
Squeezed with tears of grief last night
Despite struggling with the wind
Despite the rain
Adhering with tears on my car window
Smile on my face
Penetrate my skin
Dancing with Nightingale's music

Sorrows of the body's reeling roar;
and the Spirit is still a virgin which Lies on the lips of glamour Calling the Moon
Waiting for the morning star.

38 Pages

Order online at http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/cervenabooks.html

My Soul Still A Virgin

$7.00

Shipping

$3.00

Total

$10.00

Â

Send check or money order payable to:
Cervena Barva Press
P.O. Box 440357,
W. Somerville, MA 02144-3222
e-mail: [redacted]

Thank you.

Gloria Mindock

[redacted]

↑ Index

6. Gloria Mindock

Cervena Barva Press Announces A New Poetry Book by Andrey Gritsman

Sat 29 May 2010

Cervena Barva Press Announces a New Book
"Live Landscape"
by Andrey Gritsman

Live Landscape by Andrey Gritsman

Andrey Gritsman is a poet and essayist, born and raised in Russia. He lives in New York City and works as a physician. He has been widely published in Russia, including five collections of poetry. Poems, essays and translations in English have appeared in Manhattan Review, New Orleans Review, Denver Quarterly, Notre Dame Review, Poet Lore, South Carolina Review and many others and were anthologized in Modern Poetry in Translation (UK), in Crossing Centuries (New Generation in Russian Poetry), The Breath of Parted Lips: Voices from the Robert Frost Place and in Stranger at Home: American Poetry with an Accent . Collections of poetry and essays Long Fall was published by Spuyten Duyvil in 2004 and recent poetry collection PISCES by Numina Press. Andreyâ€™s work was nominated for the Pushcart Prize in 2005, 2006 and 2007 and was on the short list for the Joyce Osterweil/PEN American Center Prize in Poetry in 2005. He runs the Intercultural Poetry Series in a popular literary club Cornelia Street CafÃ© and edits international poetry magazine INTERPOEZIA .

Andrey Gritsman is quite literally a groundbreaking poet. From Moscow to New York is a steep distance but Gritsman makes us aware of the threads that link seemingly disparate occasions. Fresh perceptions create new styles and Gritsmanâ€™s is more than a synthesis of two cultures: it is an art that probes delusions and pleasures by a poet who has been around some daunting blocks. â€”Baron Wormser, author of Good Trembling and many other collections of poetry.

Andrey Gritsmanâ€™s poems are unwavering in their honesty, relentless in their assessment of contemporary life, and clear-eyed in their approach to human love and mortality. We instantly recognize the terrain he is negotiating. Perhaps only Gritsman, with his unprejudiced immigrantâ€™s eye, can describe the empty, arid landscape of the American West. These are poems that peer into the abyss behind the official public happiness of American life, the compulsion to be always hopeful, positive and bubbling over with good spirits. That is to say: they are real poems, and make no accommodation with fanciful dreams. Read â€˜em, and weep. â€”Kurt Brown, poet, editor of several anthologies, founder, Aspen Writersâ€™ Seminar

Gritsmanâ€™s poems are tenderness in transit. They fully inhabit their evoked circumstances so that their significance keeps expanding and resonating before the quality of attention given over to them. He so quickly is able to penetrate to the depths in the poems, it is as though working with a large, oiled, sharp shovel while the rest of us are working with miniature dull and rusty spoons. The use of brevity in some of these poems remind me of my beloved Denise Levertov. His poems are â€œtime-floodedâ€ and remind me that whether we look backward or forward in time always the beloved figures are diminishing, disappearing, and the shadow growing from our own foot soles moves among the company of many other shadows. â€œConstant departure,â€ as he says it, is our state, and all we can do is stand for our count, make our song, and salute each other. â€”Jeanne Marie Beaumont, author of Curious Conduct (BOA Editions)

FOR MY FATHER

After you've been gone,
I've been flying alone back and forth
above the waters and the continents.
Both of us: me here and you there know too well that this is a waste of time
and space.
I may be flying, looking for you
for the rest of my life
or death, and still never see you.

Nothing can be undone,
and I can't take it.
Nor I can take the fact
that every time I see my close ones, I know,
it may be the last time I see them.

Don't worry about me. While I fly,
an angel in uniform attends me,
gives me some water and bread,
and smiles to me.
She takes care of me
until it's time to get out,

get in line for the luggage
and then to disappear into crowd
which lives on the exhaust,
cyclic persistence
and canned expectations.

The latter is something
I live on myself, expectation
melting slowly into waiting
as I keep on flying
in the space given
for the time being.

Cover Art: Natasha Gasteva | ISBN: 978-0-9844732-1-2 | 73 pages Order online at http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/cervenabooks.html

Live Landscape

$15.00

Shipping

$3.00

Total

$18.00

Â

Send check or money order payable to:
Cervena Barva Press
P.O. Box 440357,
W. Somerville, MA 02144-3222
e-mail: [redacted]

---------- Thank you.

Gloria Mindock

[redacted]

↑ Index

7. Gloria Mindock

Cervena Barva Press Announces A New Poetry chapbook by Charles P. Ries

Sat 29 May 2010

Cervena Barva Press Announces a New Chapbook
"I'd Rather be Mexican"
by Charles P. Ries

I'd Rather be Mexican by Charles P. Ries

Charles P. Ries lives in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. His narrative poems, short stories, interviews, and poetry reviews have appeared in over two hundred print and electronic publications. He has received four Pushcart Prize nominations for his writing. He is the author of THE FATHERS WE FIND , a novel based on memory and five books of poetry. Most recently he was awarded the Wisconsin Regional Writers Association "Jade Ring" Award for humorous poetry. He is the former poetry editor for Word Riot (www.wordriot.org) and a former member of the board at the Woodland Pattern Book Center. Charles is Co-Chairman of the Wisconsin Poet Laureate Commission. He will have a book of poetry published in early 2010: Girl Friend & Other Mysteries of Love that will be published by Alternating Current Press, Leah Angstman, Editor. He is a founding member of the Lake Shore Surf Club, the oldest fresh water surfing club on the Great Lakes (www.visitsheboygan.com/dairyland/). You may find additional samples of his work by going to: www.literati.net/Ries/

El Latino Blanco
Â Â Â Â Â Â (The White Latin)

I woke up throughout the night
as the fleas kept biting my toes.
Just my toes â€“ the rest of me
didn t seem to interest them.

"El Latino Blanco" the bartender called me as I ordered double shots of tequila throughout the night, one for me and one for my friend the large white rabbit called El Conjito Blanco Grande who sat invisibly next to me, as he has next to the other drunks who have used him as an excuse to order doubles.

My dreams that night were ones of desolation and consolation. Always in that order. I remember because the fleas kept me on the edge of real time. Maybe they weren't fleas at all, but insect sized psychic miners, biting me to lucidity and injecting me with some sort of drunken-poet-dream-sex-venom. I'm sure I'm not the first drunken poet to be visited in this way. I'm sure I will not be the last.

As the morning came, the fleas went to sleep and I too drifted away into a deep cold river, waking to a pure blue sky, a massive Mexican hangover and the smell of black coffee served to me by a mescal worm named Little Rico.

Order online at http://www.thelostbookshelf.com/cervenabooks.html

I'd Rather be Mexican

$7.00

Shipping

$3.00

Total

$10.00

Â

Send check or money order payable to:
Cervena Barva Press
P.O. Box 440357,
W. Somerville, MA 02144-3222
e-mail: [redacted]

Thank you.

Glori Mindock

[redacted]

↑ Index

8. Vernon Frazer
Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visual Poetry
Sat 29 May 2010

Dear David

Once again, thank you for your kind words. I apologize for my delay in responding; we've had family visiting us this past week.

So far, my knowledge of Sound Poetry has been limited to a short clip of The Four Horsemen. To me, their pieces sounded very much like creative music (free jazz), and I felt that I could have contributed to the group, had I lived in Toronto. I'd like to hear more of their work, but don't know of any available recordings. I've seen samples of their scores, but have no performances to enable me to follow them.

Your points about scoring work are well taken. Contemporary composers have employed a variety of notational systems. As long as the performers agree on what the notes, direction or images represent, the system employed for organizing sounds will work. Cracks in a sidewalk, if nothing else, could have important rhythmic and textural implications.

I've didn't read "Un Coup de Des" until 2004. Mallarme's use of fonts creates a three-dimensional work, visually and aurally. If I'd read him earlier, he would have been an influence on my work. In my own reading from that period, I've never seen anything comparable to "Un Coup de Des." His language and its movement across the page give me both the image of a hand shaking the dice and the dice rolling across the page to stop at a capitalized word, as though the dice are being thrown even while the throwing hand is shaking them. Movement seems to happen and remain suspended at the same time.

As work on the page, IMPROVISATIONS ultimately creates a very precise "musical notation" using language. Listening to the playback of what I consider a less than successful performance from the work at the Poetry Project in 2005, I discovered that my ear worked; the multiple lines came together in the kinds of "verbal dissonance" I wanted to create in certain passages. Unfortunately, the microphones didn't pick up the voices of the other readers very well. In the process of composing the work, I took the license to employ an "orchestral" approach, allowing me to "play against" the poem while composing it. Space is integral to the work. In addition to rendering the referentiality of any word or phrase "provisional" until the next word or phrase appears, it also allows, in my own "hearing" of the work as a performance, instrumental interludes, in which the reader's silence allows space for musical commentary on the phrases. In readings in which I haven't used other readers I've found other ways to recite the work so that the "problems of performance" find resolution. Certain sections of the poem require the readers to choose how they are going to read the intermingled lines. While I can't recite a five-voice passage "in harmony" during a solo reading, I can read the passage horizontally or vertically. At the Poetry Project, I read "XLVIII" unaccompanied and resolved its multi-voiced "problem of performance" by reading the overlapping passages in one of about five possible sequences. Although the work is precisely "notated," the score does allow room for interpretation. Jim Gardiner, who knows my work very well, has on several occasions performed the work with several readers reciting "cut-ups" of my multi-voices passages and pacing themselves so that however they interpret their lines, all the readers end at the same time.

Concerning my YouTube performance, I think your description of the "poet/performer in action," is very accurate in that the poem already exists and my performance brings out what is "at once new to me, and yet not unknown" because I take improvisational liberties in the overdubbed recitation and fill the space between textual passages with improvised basslines that give the performed work a different "meaning" than the written text. My performing and presenting the text as a video does create a work encompassing "all forms," so to speak, but even there, it's the presentation of all resources available within the performing situation and could be rendered in many different ways while working from the core piece.

Thank you once again for your kind words and informed commentary.

Vernon

↑ Index

9. steve dalachinsky

readings

Sat 29 May 2010

June 5
The Brownstone Poets presents:
steve dalachinsky and Bruce Webber
Park Plaza Restaurant
220 Cadman Plaza West near Clark St. & Pineapple Walk
Brooklyn, NY 11201 - 718 – 596 – 5900
Take the A or C to High Street, 2 or 3 to Clark Street,
4, 5, M or R to Court Street, Borough Hall

2:30 P.M. $3 Donation – plus Food/Drink - Open Mic

curated by Patricia Carragon

---

june 6 poets in collage opening at tribes gallery 285 e 3rd st ave c manhattan workshop 2-4 pm opening at 4 pm onward - readings by 10 poets in show steve dalachinsky yuko otomo bruce webber(curator), jeff wright, valery oisteaneau (workshop leaders) star black, lewis warsh, bob heman, aaron howard, nicole peyrafitte

---

steve reads /

June 14 at Local 269 suffolk and houston 7 pm
w/ the great loren mazzacane connors on guitar

$10 per set - $ 7 senior and students / $15 for 2 - $20 for entire night
other sets by other folks to follow at 8, 9 and 10 pm

Sunday June 20 - 2-5pm
the Vision Festival presents @ AGathering of Tribes
285 East 3rd St. (between C & D - 2nd floor)
donation to Tribes

poetry by

Jeff Wright
Bob Heman
Lewis Warsh

Poetry & Music

Albey Balgochian & Jane Grenier B
Barry Wallenstein
Yuko Otomo - Shayna Dulberger
Jake Marmer / & Alon Nechushtan
Aaron Howard w/Gwen Krueger & Tomislav Butkovic
Steve Dalachinsky
Alexandre Pierrepont
Tamara Singh
Tsaurah Litsky
Steve Ben Israel

Musicians / Improvs
Ellen Christi
Max Johnson bass
Andrew Barker drums
Charles Waters reeds
plus others to be announced

$5 donation

---

june 27 6-8pm
steve dalachinsky and jake marmer
read on the roof of the educational alliance on e.bdway $10 includes snacks and all the kosher wine you can drink

↑ Index

10. Ruth Lepson

Re: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)

Sat 29 May 2010

O I am sorry. She was alive & sweet, so smart & bubbly. She let us escape our preoccupations & use our intelligence more widely. I wish I cd thank her now. Told my class she was sick & we read some of her writing this term.

On 5/29/10 5:06 PM, "Charles Bernstein" <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/scalapino/obit.html
>
> ³Scalapino makes everything take place in real time, in the light and air and night where all of us live, everything happening at once.²
> ‹ Philip Whalen
>
> Leslie Scalapino passed away on May 28, 2010 in Berkeley, California. She was born in Santa Barbara in 1944 and raised in Berkeley, California. After Berkeley High School, she attended Reed College in Portland, Oregon and received her B.A. in Literature in 1966. She received her M.A. in English from the University of California at Berkeley in 1969, after which she began to focus on writing poetry. Leslie Scalapino lived with Tom White, her husband and friend of 35 years, in Oakland, California.
>
> In childhood, she traveled with her father Robert Scalapino, founder of UC Berkeley¹s Institute for Asian Studies, her mother Dee Scalapino, known for her love of music, and her two sisters, Diane and Lynne, throughout Asia, Africa and Europe. She and Tom continued these travels including trips to Tibet, Bhutan, Japan, India, Yemen, Mongolia, Libya and elsewhere. Her writing was intensely influenced by these travels. She published her first book O and Other Poems in 1976, and since then has published thirty books of poetry, prose, inter-genre fiction, plays, essays, and collaborations. Scalapino¹s most recent publications include a collaboration with artist Kiki Smith, The Animal is in the World like Water in Water (Granary Books), and Floats Horse-Floats or Horse-Flows (Starcherone Books), and her selected poems It¹s go in horizontal / Selected Poems 1974-2006 (UC Press) was published in 2008. In 1988, her long poem way received the Poetry Center Award, the Lawrence Lipton Prize, and the American Book Award from the Before Columbus Foundation. Her plays have been performed in San Francisco at New Langton Arts, The Lab, Venue 9, and Forum; in New York by The Eye and Ear Theater and at Barnard College; and in Los Angeles at Beyond Baroque.
>
> In 1986, Scalapino founded O Books as a publishing outlet for young and emerging poets, as well as prominent, innovative writers, and the list of nearly 100 titles includes authors such as Ted Berrigan, Robert Grenier, Fanny Howe, Tom Raworth, Norma Cole, Will Alexander, Alice

Notley, Norman Fischer, Laura Moriarty, Michael McClure, Judith Goldman and many others. Scalapino is also the editor of four editions of O anthologies, as well as the periodicals Enough (with Rick London) and War and Peace (with Judith Goldman).

Scalapino taught writing at various institutions, including 16 years in the MFA program at Bard College, Mills College, the San Francisco Art Institute, California College of the Arts in San Francisco, San Francisco State University, UC San Diego, and the Naropa Institute.

Of her own writing, Scalapino says ³my sense of a practice of writing and of action, the apprehension itself that Œone is not oneself for even an instant¹ should not be,¹ is to be participation in/is a social act. That is, the nature of this practice that¹s to be Œsocial act¹ is it is without formation or custom.² Her writing, unbound by a single format, her collaborations with artists and other writers, her teaching, and publishing are evidence of this sense of her own practice, social acts that were her practice. Her generosity and fiercely engaged intelligence were everywhere evident to those who had the fortune to know her.

Scalapino has three books forthcoming in 2010. A book of two plays published in one volume, Flow-Winged Crocodile and A Pair / Actions Are Erased / Appear will come out in June 2010 from Chax Press; a new prose work, The Dihedrons Gazelle-Dihredals Zoom will be released this summer by Post-Apollo Press; and a revised and expanded collection of her essays and plays, How Phenomena Appear to Unfold (originally published by Potes & Poets) will be published in the fall by Litmus Press.

Her play Flow-Winged Crocodile will be performed in New York at Poets House on June 19th at 2pm and June 20th at 7pm by the performance group The Relationship, directed by Fiona Templeton and with Katie Brown, Stephanie Silver, and Julie Troost. Dance by Molissa Fenley, music by Joan Jeanrenaud, and projected drawings by Eve Biddle. This production is co-sponsored by Belladonna and the Poetry Project.*

There will be a memorial event for Scalapino at St. Mark¹s Poetry Project on Monday, June 21st.

A Zen Buddhist funeral ceremony will be conducted by Abbott Norman Fisher in about a month with the arrangements in a subsequent announcement. Tom requests that in lieu of flowers, Leslie's friends consider a charitable donation in her memory to: Poets in Need, PO Box 5411, Berkeley, CA 94705; Reed College for the Leslie Scalapino Scholarship, 3203 Southeast Woodstock Boulevard, Portland, OR 97202-8199; The AYCO Charitable Foundation, PO Box 15203, Albany, NY 12212-5203 for the Leslie Scalapino-O Books Fund to support innovative works of poetry, prose and art; or to a charitable organization of their choice. Condolence cards may be sent to Tom & Leslie¹s home address, > 5744 Presley Way, Oakland, California 94618-1633.

>
> to make my mind be actions outside only. which they are.
> that collapses in
>
> grey-red bars. actions are life per se only without it.
>
> (so) events are minute ‹ even (voluptuous)
>
> Leslie Scalapino

↑ Index

11. Peter Quartermain

Re: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)

Sat 29 May 2010

Oh. Shocking news. Will there ever be a moment in this quarter-century when we will not be dismayed and not weep?

=========
Peter Quartermain
846 Keefer Street
Vancouver
BC Canada V6A 1Y7
[redacted] (voice and fax)
[redacted]
=========

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Charles Bernstein
Sent: 29 May 2010 02:07 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)

http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/scalapino/obit.html

"Scalapino makes everything take place in real time, in the light and air and night where all of us live, everything happening at once." - Philip Whalen

Leslie Scalapino passed away on May 28, 2010 in Berkeley, California. She was born in Santa Barbara in 1944 and raised in Berkeley, California. After Berkeley High School, she attended Reed College in Portland, Oregon and received her B.A. in Literature in 1966. She received her M.A. in English from the University of California at Berkeley in 1969, after which she began to focus on writing poetry. Leslie Scalapino lived with Tom White, her husband and friend of 35 years, in Oakland, California.

In childhood, she traveled with her father Robert Scalapino, founder of UC Berkeley's Institute for Asian Studies, her mother Dee Scalapino, known for her love of music, and her two sisters, Diane and Lynne, throughout Asia, Africa and Europe. She and Tom continued these travels including trips to Tibet, Bhutan, Japan, India, Yemen, Mongolia, Libya and elsewhere. Her writing was intensely influenced by these travels. She published her first book O and Other Poems in 1976, and since then has published thirty books of poetry, prose, inter-genre fiction, plays, essays, and collaborations. Scalapino's most recent publications include a collaboration with artist Kiki Smith, The Animal is in the World like Water in Water (Granary Books), and Floats Horse-Floats or Horse-Flows (Starcherone Books), and her selected poems It's go in horizontal / Selected Poems 1974-2006 (UC Press) was published in 2008. In 1988, her long poem way received the Poetry Center Award, the Lawrence Lipton Prize, and the American Book Award from the Before Columbus Foundation. Her plays have been performed in San Francisco at New Langton Arts, The Lab, Venue 9, and Forum; in New York by The Eye and Ear Theater and at Barnard College; and in Los Angeles at Beyond Baroque.

In 1986, Scalapino founded O Books as a publishing outlet for young and emerging poets, as well as prominent, innovative writers, and the list of nearly 100 titles includes authors such as Ted Berrigan, Robert Grenier, Fanny Howe, Tom Raworth, Norma Cole, Will Alexander, Alice Notley, Norman Fischer, Laura Moriarty, Michael McClure, Judith Goldman and many others. Scalapino is also the editor of four editions of O anthologies, as well as the periodicals Enough (with Rick London) and War and Peace (with Judith Goldman).

Scalapino taught writing at various institutions, including 16 years in the MFA program at Bard College, Mills College, the San Francisco Art Institute, California College of the Arts in San Francisco, San Francisco State University, UC San Diego, and the Naropa Institute.

Of her own writing, Scalapino says "my sense of a practice of writing and of action, the apprehension itself that 'one is not oneself for even an instant' - should not be,' is to be participation in/is a social act. That is, the nature of this practice that's to be 'social act' is it is without formation or custom." Her writing, unbound by a single format, her collaborations with artists and other writers, her teaching, and publishing are evidence of this sense of her own practice, social acts that were her practice. Her generosity and fiercely engaged intelligence were everywhere evident to those who had the fortune to know her.

Scalapino has three books forthcoming in 2010. A book of two plays published in one volume, Flow-Winged Crocodile and A Pair / Actions Are Erased / Appear will come out in June 2010 from Chax Press; a new prose work, The Dihedrons Gazelle-Dihredals Zoom will be released this summer by Post-Apollo Press; and a revised and expanded collection of her essays and plays, How Phenomena Appear to Unfold (originally published by Potes & Poets) will be published in the fall by Litmus Press.

Her play Flow-Winged Crocodile will be performed in New York at Poets House on June 19th at 2pm and June 20th at 7pm by the performance group The Relationship, directed by Fiona Templeton and with Katie Brown, Stephanie Silver, and Julie Troost. Dance by Molissa Fenley, music by Joan Jeanrenaud, and projected drawings by Eve Biddle. This production is co-sponsored by Belladonna* and the Poetry Project.

There will be a memorial event for Scalapino at St. Mark's Poetry Project on Monday, June 21st.

A Zen Buddhist funeral ceremony will be conducted by Abbott Norman Fisher in about a month with the arrangements in a subsequent announcement. Tom requests that in lieu of flowers, Leslie's friends consider a charitable donation in her memory to: Poets in Need, PO Box 5411, Berkeley, CA 94705; Reed College for the Leslie Scalapino Scholarship, 3203 Southeast Woodstock Boulevard, Portland, OR 97202-8199; The AYCO Charitable Foundation, PO Box 15203, Albany, NY 12212-5203 for the Leslie Scalapino-O Books Fund to support innovative works of poetry, prose and art; or to a charitable organization of their choice. Condolence cards may be sent to Tom & Leslie's home address, 5744 Presley Way, Oakland, California 94618-1633.

to make my mind be actions outside only. which they are.
that collapses in

grey-red bars. actions are life per se only without it.

(so) events are minute - even (voluptuous)

--Leslie Scalapino

↑ Index

12. Laura Hinton
Re: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)
Sat 29 May 2010

I am devastated by this news, as I know many of you are. Leslie Scalapino is one of our greatest, most inventive American poets. I can't put that in the past tense. I will write more when I get my wits about me. Thank you, Charles, for your posting.

Laura Hinton

--
Laura Hinton
Professor of English
City College of New York
138 at Convent Ave.
New York, New York 10031

http://www.mermaidtenementpress.com
http://www.chantdelasirene.com

↑ Index

13. Joel Weishaus
"Splitting the Stone - Toward a Lithopoetics."
Sun 30 May 2010

Dear Friends and Colleagues;

This is a new project, one page, please scroll down:
http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Splitting/Page.htm

-Joel

Joel Weishaus
Homepage: http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282
On-Line Archive:
www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/index.htm

↑ Index

14. steve dalachinsky
more sad news peter orlovsky passed away
Sun 30 May 2010

---

may 30 age 77

↑ Index

15. David Dowker
Machine Language
Sun 30 May 2010

Announcing the publication by BookThug of

MACHINE LANGUAGE

by David Dowker.

"MACHINE LANGUAGE delves the delic, from the 'pataphysical conjunction of archaic paper tape code, a fragment of Sappho and the Gorgon (apparatus) to writing through (over under sideways around) various texts and subtexts of the post-modern North American rhizome, coding the flows of Black Mountain poetics and so-called 'language poetries,' elliptical traces of neo-surrealist tendencies with reconnaissance syntax and pliant iambics, love's number crunched for the age of surveillance."

Available at BookThug:
http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=201002

&

SPD:

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781897388518/machine-language.aspx

David

[redacted]

The Alterran Poetry Assemblage:

http://epe.lac-bac.gc.ca/003/008/099/003008-disclaimer.html?orig=/100/202/300/alterran/index.html

↑ Index

16. derek beaulieu

new from No press: SERVANTS OF DUST by Gary Barwin

Sun 30 May 2010

No press is proud to announce the publication of

SERVANTS OF DUST

(SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS 1-20)

by Gary Barwin

With each poem in SERVANTS OF DUST, Barwin strips away all the characters except the puncutation. Each mark is then typed out, creating a new sonnet:

1 comma

inverted comma comma
comma
colon
comma comma
inverted comma inverted comma dash comma
comma
comma period inverted comma
comma

comma comma period
comma comma
inverted comma comma period

**

published in an edition of 40 hand-sewn copies (of which 20 are for sale)

$5 each (including shipping)

for more information, or to order copies, email

[redacted]

derek beaulieu
2 - 733 2nd avenue nw
calgary alberta
canada T2N 0E4
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

17. Bob Heman

Collage Show - Tribes - Opening Reception - Sunday June 6 - 4:00 - 6:00

Mon 31 May 2010

This Sunday, June 6, from 4:00 to 6:00, will be the "official" opening/reading celebration of:
WALTZING IN QUICKSAND: POETS IN COLLAGE
Star Black, Steven Dalachinsky, Bob Heman, Aaron Howard, Valery Oisteanu, Yuko Otomo, Nicole Peyrafitte, Lewis Warsh, Bruce Weber, Jeffrey Cyphers Wright Curated by Bruce Weber
May 21-June 27, 2010
TRIBES GALLERY 285 East 3rd St. (betw. Aves. C and D), 2nd Floor Gallery

Hours: Mon. 11-6, Tues.-Fri. 10-6, Sat. 12-8, Sun., 12-5 preceding the opening, between 2:00 to 4:00 there will be a free collage workshop conducted by Jeffrey Cyphers Wright and Valery Oisteanu

if you can't make it down to Tribes to see the show you can click on this youtube link http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NwvVZTfnAHE for a silent walk through of the show and on this Twitter link http://www.flickr.com/photos/tribesgalleryphotos/for more info on the pieces in the show

+++

then on Sunday, June 20, three of the collagist poets, Lewis Warsh, Jeffrey Cyphers Wright and Bob Heman, will be reading at Tribes at 2:00, to start off the afternoon long Visions Festival which will feature poetry and music (a donation for Tribes is requested)

+++

Bob Heman
[redacted]

↑ Index

18. Jeffrey Side

Argotist Ebooks' first publication: "Scratching Face" by Jake Berry

Mon 31 May 2010

Argotist Ebooks' first publication
"Scratching Face" by Jake Berry
Poems by Jake Berry that originally appeared as status updates at Facebook between May and September 2009.
Available as a free ebook from Argotist Ebooks:
http://stores.lulu.com/store.php?fStoreID=2845322

↑ Index

19. UbuWeb

Students Needed at the Whitney to Recreate Baldessari's 'I Will Not Make Any More Boring Art'

Mon 31 May 2010

From: WMAA <<[redacted]>[redacted]> Date: Tue, 25 May 2010 15:42:50 -0400

Conversation: Re-Performance of 'I Will Not Make Any More Boring Art'
Subject: Re-Performance of 'I Will Not Make Any More Boring Art'

As part of the exhibition â€˜Off the Wall: Thirty Performative Actionsâ€™ opening June 30th at the Whitney, the Museum is inviting art students to participate in a re-performance of John Baldessariâ€™s performance â€˜I Will Not Make Any More Boring Artâ€™ (1971). The action will be ongoing in the galleries for several weeks this summer. Attached is the original letter which the artist wrote to the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design proposing the project in 1971 as well as photographs documenting the original performance.

The project entails a number of students coming to the Whitney and writing the sentence â€œI will not make any more boring artâ€ on one of the walls of the gallery, in columns. Each student can write as few or as many phrases as they like. The artist would like two columns to be completed by the time the exhibition opens on June 30th, and the students will then come in during the day to write on the wall until the wall is completely filled.

We ask that each student who is interested in participating in this project attend a mandatory orientation session with exhibition curator Chrissie Iles at the Museum on Tuesday, June 1st at 4 pm. Students should arrive at the Whitney Museum staff entrance at 33 East 74th Street at 3:45. Â At this time participants will be able to sign up for their performance time slots and their portrait will be taken. Please RSVP to <[redacted]>[redacted] as soon as possible.

Thank you for your interest in participating, and I look forward to meeting you at the orientation.

All best,
Ali Nemerov

--
Ali Nemerov
Interpretation and Research Assistant
Whitney Museum of American Art
945 Madison Avenue at 75th Street
New York, NY 10021
[redacted]

UbuWeb
http://ubu.com

↑ Index

20. David-Baptiste Chirot

Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visual Poetry

Mon 31 May 2010

Dear Vernon and Murat:

re the white spaces--i jotted this down in notebook, as an other way of thinking of "white space" not as "silence"--but as "white noise"-- white spaces in poem-mallarme's "intervals"--in musical/visual composition-- ("Un Coup de des")-- wondering--think of white spaces as "white noise"--background sound of the Big Bang radio-heard in universe--"out of noise arises music"-- neg-entropy

of--chaos/white noise--out of which EMERGE--patterns, rhythms, poems--music----dissolution--decay--disappearance--back into noise-- and over again-- and again
and the theme of "emerge/nce" is central to al my works in various media-- this (white noise/chaos)--is just another possibility in considering ways of perceiving via al the senses--those areas out of which things emerge--

("Not to seek, but to find"--the element of the uncanny--rather than beginning with a preconceived manner of apprehending the emergence, what does emerge--of "placing it"--to be open--to what is found--something which maybe "new to me, yet not unknown" as Emerson put it--this is why Mallarme is provisional in his text--"a throw of the dice will never abolish chance"--which is the unknown as it is found--"by chance"--)

a very strange example i just read is--(at once unrelated and related to the subject at hand--perhaps a sort of "negative" or "counter" example!!-as Gombrowicz is indeed a "contrarian"---)-- in Gombrowicz's novel, COSMOS,--in the continual stream of chaos flowing past the narrator--it is repeatedly noted throughout the book--the immediate human "scanning" so to speak--for patterns--for relationships among objects, bits of faces, stains on a wall--a hanged bird, a "hanged" piece of wood, a hanged cat--and, finally--a hanged man--

there is a both a "suspension"-(things, beings, hanging in the air-)-and a "finality" (death)--yet "life goes on"--the narrator goes back home to continue his war with his father-- (which may be of course be read in many ways Freudian, in terms of religion, etc)

Date: Mon, 24 May 2010 15:51:48 -0400
From: [redacted]
Subject: Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visual Poetry
To: [redacted]

Dear David,

I will have to return to your detailed post, but at this moment I would like to make two points:

"one is a system of sounds which "plays" so to speak, on the emotions; the other is Music thought of as a system of "pure" relations among the notations and the intervals, (the white spaces of the page in a poem), thus creating a structural system in the work, which exists without referentiality."

*It is exactly these "white spaces of the page" which create the visual poem as a spiritual instrument. It is without referentially because, at the moment of its emergence,this white space does not yet belong to a system; it is emergent.*

I disagree with another point you are making. The double possibility you are referring does not lead to "two" performers each doing one. It happens in the reader/performer himself/herself. Therefore it leads to hesitation, to a crisis in reading, to silence.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sat, May 22, 2010 at 9:32 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

Dear Vernon:

thank you so much for your response!
reading it i thought of Mallarme, who i have spent some time studying on my own of late, in part to find out how he arrived at the composition of Un Coup de des (A throw of the Dice), which is often cited as being the "first modern visual poem."

When i first came across some of your Improvisations a few years ago, i was immediately aware of the interrelationships of the visual layouts of the words, phrases, lines to the rhythms and sounds of the words. The sense of the pieces I read reminded me a lot of the improvisations in Free Jazz, among other forms of improvisatory music, as there is a recurring "theme" expressed sonically, or visually or as a recurring idea--or al three at once--around and in and out of on top and below of--are played the improvisations which seize upon a particular note or thought or sensation and expand it, adding color to it, dancing with it, expanding or trimming it--and tossing it back to the source, which brings about another improvisation which may go on back and forth for quite some time, or be played with for just a brief passage as passage of both time and of a text, a notation, since improvisations are often built up with layers of allusions, quotations, references, to works outside the piece itself as well to particulars within the work as it is developing. This density which can be achieved by layerings of quotations and then puns upon them which open them out into wholly new series of sounds and visual layouts, of new thoughts which challenge the old which have been quoted, perhaps--this density can be increased or all of a sudden completely dispensed with in a flight of pure lyricism--

Often American performed/improvised poetry with music since the Beats say, has been very influenced by Jazz--but often the notations themselves of the words read do not look anything different from a conventionally printed poem which could just as well be read in a non-musical setting. One often finds, post the Beats, poems with visual layouts which seem arbitrary, disconnected from the actual sounds of the words, as though tacked on to generate some "sideshow" interest or suggestion of a "look" meant to be "experimental." What seems to be something very simple actually is quite a bit more complex--a good way to study the notations of sound as visual pieces is to study the notations and scores employed by Sound Poets, as well as in some cases, Visual Poets who use the Visuals to be sounded out as Sound Poetry. Notations in these senses need n0ot even by written as words or even in letters, but using some other system or some completely arbitrary method. Bob Cobbing for example would perform poems by simply feeling a rock in his hands, exploring the textures and shapes and expressing sonically what the fingers, the touch, experienced and found. Walking with Bob, we would use side walk cracks and shadows of trees on the sidewalk as the notations for performance. There being an underlying structure in the pale cement at the same distances of the lines in a sidewalk, not counting the cracks, one has already the basis for a theme around which to improvise--

The experience of your work and of some others led me to wanting to find out more about the origins of this interrelationship of the Visual layout of words and punctuation marks on the page with the sounds not only of words as words having meanings, but of words themselves as simply sounds, working and flowing together like music--

This is what led me to Mallarme, a poet who i knew someday i would encounter, so had not previously made conscious effort to study him other than reading his poetry until the right time found me and i found it--and this was it--

I thought to share with you some of the things I found in my rummaging about in my little collection of the poet's works in French and English editions--perhpas it may be of interest and use--

Mallarme, like a great many French poets beginning with Baudelaire, was very much impressed by the conceptions of Wagner, (and wrote a very fascinating essay on the composer's work), not only with the idea of the "gesamtkunstwerke" (total art work or total work of art; in which many have found also the example of a "totalitarian" work of art--)-but also examples, materials, which coincided at various levels with the poet's own ideas regarding music and poetry. The first expression of these ideas is to be found in the "poeme critique" "The Book as Spiritual Instrument." "Poem critique" was a new form invented by Mallarme in which the essay and the prose poem meet, thus announcing not only a new style of writing, but of thinking as well, so that style and thought interact with each other in opening up new ways to think and write simultaneously "critically" and poetically. Mallarme's essays and poetry, reviews and occasional pieces, already mocked and attacked by the critics and public of the day, were seen as going beyond all previous outrage with this new form thus marking to this day Mallarme as a deliberately "obscure," "perversely difficult and decadent" and "both vague & hermetic" writer. Emerson noted that "Perhaps the blank and ruin we see within Nature in is in our eye;" similarly, one might propose that the obscurity, difficult and perversity which the readers of the time--and many today--find in Mallarme may have been--and be--in their own eyes, for, read on the terms which they set forth, Mallarme's poemes critiques and poetry are actually very limpid, acutely lucid, and, in the best French tradition, quite logical.

For example, the poeme critique "The Book as Spiritual Instrument" (also translated as "The Book as Intellectual Tool") may be thought of as referring to the book both as a tool, a device of instrumentality, and as a musical instrument. It is in the musical context which Mallarme here first envisions the layout of the composition of the musical score which is to be "Un Coup de des." Mallarme, like Verlaine, aspired to a sense of language that would attain the heights of "music above all things." However this sense of Music, in Mallarme, has two facets: one is a system of sounds which "plays" so to speak, on the emotions; the other is Music thought of as a system of "pure" relations among the notations and the intervals, (the white spaces of the page in a poem), thus creating a structural system in the work, which exists without referentiality. Given what seems the contradiction between a non-referential structure and one that provokes, elicits, emotional responses which have their own referentialities, the "resolving" achievement of this mini-gesamtkunstwerke is then achieved through the harmonious balance of all the elements within the poem, though in such a way as to leave them open, provisional, rather than being a total enclosure without issue for the elements involved. "A throw of the dice will never abolish chance" as the poem says--

(The structural aspect is part of the huge sea change in the interest in, study and reputation of, Mallarme beginning in the early 1970's as many of Mallarme's ideas and poetics acts, works, anticipate structuralist and post structuralist literary thought in France. It was at this time that Mallarme ascended to his position as THE great experimenter, innovator, poet-thinker of the poem critique of his times, knocking Rimbaud off the throne.)

(This relates, I think, with your sense of improvisations, in which there is always an opening, a series of possibilities, of choices that are actively present and there to be ignited at any moment by the poet--it also means that the poet and the poem in itself can be seen/heard/felt/thought with as being two players, improvising back and forth, rather than the poem being a static set of notations on which the poet improvises--for the real challenge and meaning of improvisation is that two or more poets/players are exchanging ideas, references, allusions, rhythms, notes, back and forth, each one encouraging and pushing the other to continually be expanding the bursts of improvisations playing off of the central theme which runs through out the poem/music, pushing each other to ever greater and more exhilarating experiments, realizations, spontaneous illuminations or sudden expressions of the extreme tension which exists when the balance begins to stray and the theme is on the verge of being lost beneath too much "bric-a-brac"--signalling one or the other of poets/players to get a grip on it and steer the improvisations back towards the "center of gravity" so to speak. By this I mean that in your poems, what I find is that the "other" poet/player is the poem itself, as when you are improvising--it is with the challenges presented by the poem as it exists at that very moment--the poem is at once "a part of you" and "apart from you" --it has its own independence, so to speak, as it is playing, improvising with you. In other words, it is a manifestation of the uncanny of which Emerson said: "It is new to me yet not unknown."

In "The Book as Spiritual Instrument/Intellectual Tool," which appeared in the June 1895 issue of La Revue blanche, 18 months before "Un Coup de des" appeared in the journal Cosmopolis (which employed an English typesetter whose work impressed Mallarme), the poet writes:

"Poetry, close to the idea, is Music par excellence--doesn't admit inferiority . . . Why couldn't a line--a spurt of grandeur, a considerable thought or emotion, a sentence in bold type that continues for pages, one line per page in graduated placement--keep the reader breathless, calling upon his powers of enthusiasm, for the length of the boo; along with little groups of secondary importance, explanatory or derivative--a sowing of frills."

Composing the "Editor's Note" himself for the issue of Cosmopolis in which "Un Coup des des" first appeared, Mallarme expands and clarifies this idea:

"In this work which is of an entirely new kind, the poet has attempted to create music using words. A sort of general leitmotif running throughout the poem provides it with unity. Accessory themes are grouped around it. The nature of the letters employed and the position of the blank spaces are designed to replace notes and intervals."

You note your thinking of your work in the context of multi-media--here one finds the dream of French poets of the 19th century when first discovering Wagner and his works, his gesamtkunstwerke. Verlaine and Mallarme's aspiration to "Music above al else" are close to your own sensibility. While Verlaine--who in French is absolutely breathtaking in the sheer music of many of his best poems--stayed with the conventional forms of the French poetry of his day, Mallarme saw the way to the Visual layout, like a musician composing a score, as a means of emphasizing the multi-vocal aspects and passages of the poem. The uses of space as an interval, in a sense "fills" what seems to be "blank" with the interval of silence, anticipating Cage's use of silence, among others--silence plays a role, is a sonic/visual element and event all its own, rather than simply being a bystander at the "action" of the letters and words as is so often the case. Silence, then, enters in also as duration--a new way of "keeping time" within the rhythms of the poem--attending to the silence sharpens the ear to the entrance of the sounds, themselves also as visual events, forms--the entire page becomes a site/sight/cite of activation, the prompter of a performance which, beginning with the mouth, extends to the whole body as an expressive instrument being played by the poet--thus the desire for a multi media performance, in which dance, gestures, acting, music, backdrops etc etc become a part of this activated poem--

The interrelationships among the Visual and the Sonic being performed leads to this activation of the body--and to the desire for a kind of multi media theatrical space--or simply a performance outdoors, improvising with sidewalk cracks, tree shadows moving in the wind--

It is not simply a question of the gesamtkunstwerke as a total work of art, but of the entire body of the poet/performer as the site/sight/cite of a multi-media of performance score/visual poem/poem, of sound making, of gesture, dance, the body itself as a "written character" come to life as a form of "character"--the body itself becoming the gesamtkunstwerke--

In your works one feels and hears and sees in the minds eye and in the visual layouts on the page the presence of the body of poet/performer in action, alive and improvising with the poem itself as an other body, an other entity, "at once new to me,and yet not unknown."

This to me was the great excitement in seeing your videos, as they present in action al that the poem is performing on the page, the video presents the realization, the activation of al the elements so that one can experience fully what is the confirmation of al that the visual layouts on the page so vividly represent that it is but a step from the page to the performance, even before one has seen the performance--so that seeing the performance is a confirmation of al that one has found made possible on the page--

many many thanks again Vernon!

On Thu, May 20, 2010 at 7:07 AM, Vernon Frazer <[redacted]
wrote:

David

Many, many thanks to you in return for your kind words.

In 1985, when I heard Ted Enslin read, I realized that hearing poets recite
their work,
their rhythms and inflections, enabled me to understand it more quickly.

I've often felt that my own work needed a mixed-media presentation--recitation, music
and a readable text-- to enable the reader to relate to my work in the fullest way possible. The Poetry Band I had about 20 years ago covered some of that ground. After > the Poetry Band ended, my poetry started to incorporate the contrapuntal and polytonal

> melodies I used to hear around me when I performed with the band, only in the form of > language. So I started writing what I've called "orchestrated text."
>
> In IMPROVISATIONS I mentioned the late Julius Hemphill's Coon Bidness because many of > the multi-voiced lines in teh book seem to come togeher in the way the saxophones did
> on his recording.
>
> I'm very pleased that the performance helped you see how my work fits together.
> Sometimes I think I'm a musician in a writer's body. When Ottone M. Riccio
> did a spin on
> Pound by saying, in effect, poetry is music made with language, I began to
> write from
> that sensibility and poetry came much more easily to me than it had before.
>
> So, when you (or anybody, I guess) look at my work, knowing that music of some kind is > always at its core would (I hope) help "explain" the text.
>
> Again, I thank you for your praise of my work and for posting this. You've > certainly made
> my day.
>
> Best,
>
> Vernon
>
> guidelines

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

21. Joel Weishaus

Leslie Scalapino

Mon 31 May 2010

Charles:

The death of Leslie is a loss to the whole species.
I'm very sorry to hear this.

Warm Regards,
Joel

> Date: Sat, 29 May 2010 17:06:46 -0400
> From: Charles Bernstein <[redacted]>
> Subject: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)
>
> http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/scalapino/obit.html
>
> "Scalapino makes everything take place in real time, in the light and air and night where all of us live, everything happening at once."
> — Philip Whalen
>
> Leslie Scalapino passed away on May 28, 2010 in Berkeley, California. She was born in Santa Barbara in 1944 and raised in Berkeley, California. After Berkeley High School, she attended Reed College in Portland, Oregon and received her B.A. in Literature in 1966. She received her M.A. in English from the University of California at Berkeley in 1969, after which she began to focus on writing poetry. Leslie Scalapino lived with Tom White, her husband and friend of 35 years, in Oakland, California.
>
> In childhood, she traveled with her father Robert Scalapino, founder of UC Berkeley's Institute for Asian Studies, her mother Dee Scalapino, known for her love of music, and her two sisters, Diane and Lynne, throughout Asia, Africa and Europe. She and Tom continued these travels including trips to Tibet, Bhutan, Japan, India, Yemen, Mongolia, Libya and elsewhere. Her writing was intensely influenced by these travels. She published her first book O and Other Poems in 1976, and since then has published thirty books of poetry, prose, inter-genre fiction, plays, essays, and collaborations. Scalapino's most recent publications include a collaboration with artist Kiki Smith, The Animal is in the World like Water in Water (Granary Books), and Floats Horse-Floats or Horse-Flows (Starcherone Books), and her selected poems It's go in horizontal / Selected Poems 1974-2006 (UC Press) was published in 2008. In 1988, her long poem way received the Poetry Center Award, the Lawrence Lipton Prize, and the American Book Award from the Before Columbus Foundation. Her plays have been performed in San Francisco at New Langton Arts, The Lab, Venue 9, and Forum; in New York by The Eye and Ear Theater and at Barnard College; and in Los Angeles at Beyond Baroque.

In 1986, Scalapino founded O Books as a publishing outlet for young and emerging poets, as well as prominent, innovative writers, and the list of nearly 100 titles includes authors such as Ted Berrigan, Robert Grenier, Fanny Howe, Tom Raworth, Norma Cole, Will Alexander, Alice Notley, Norman Fischer, Laura Moriarty, Michael McClure, Judith Goldman and many others. Scalapino is also the editor of four editions of O anthologies, as well as the periodicals Enough (with Rick London) and War and Peace (with Judith Goldman).

Scalapino taught writing at various institutions, including 16 years in the MFA program at Bard College, Mills College, the San Francisco Art Institute, California College of the Arts in San Francisco, San Francisco State University, UC San Diego, and the Naropa Institute.

Of her own writing, Scalapino says "my sense of a practice of writing and of action, the apprehension itself that 'one is not oneself for even an instant' – should not be,' is to be participation in/is a social act. That is, the nature of this practice that's to be 'social act' is it is without formation or custom." Her writing, unbound by a single format, her collaborations with artists and other writers, her teaching, and publishing are evidence of this sense of her own practice, social acts that were her practice. Her generosity and fiercely engaged intelligence were everywhere evident to those who had the fortune to know her.

Scalapino has three books forthcoming in 2010. A book of two plays published in one volume, Flow-Winged Crocodile and A Pair / Actions Are Erased / Appear will come out in June 2010 from Chax Press; a new prose work, The Dihedrons Gazelle-Dihredals Zoom will be released this summer by Post-Apollo Press; and a revised and expanded collection of her essays and plays, How Phenomena Appear to Unfold (originally published by Potes & Poets) will be published in the fall by Litmus Press.

Her play Flow-Winged Crocodile will be performed in New York at Poets House on June 19th at 2pm and June 20th at 7pm by the performance group The Relationship, directed by Fiona Templeton and with Katie Brown, Stephanie Silver, and Julie Troost. Dance by Molissa Fenley, music by Joan Jeanrenaud, and projected drawings by Eve Biddle. This production is co-sponsored by Belladonna and the Poetry Project.*

There will be a memorial event for Scalapino at St. Mark's Poetry Project on Monday, June 21st.

A Zen Buddhist funeral ceremony will be conducted by Abbott Norman Fisher in about a month with the arrangements in a subsequent announcement. Tom requests that in lieu of flowers, Leslie's friends consider a charitable donation in her memory to: Poets in Need, PO Box > 5411, Berkeley, CA 94705; Reed College for the Leslie Scalapino Scholarship, 3203 Southeast Woodstock Boulevard, Portland, OR 97202-8199; The AYCO Charitable Foundation, PO Box 15203, Albany, NY 12212-5203 for the Leslie Scalapino-O Books Fund to support innovative works of poetry, prose and art; or to a charitable organization of their choice. Condolence cards may be sent to Tom & Leslie's home address, 5744 Presley Way, Oakland, California 94618-1633.

>
> to make my mind be actions outside only. which they are.
> that collapses in
>
> grey-red bars. actions are life per se only without it.
>
> (so) events are minute — even (voluptuous)
>
> ––Leslie Scalapino

↑ Index

22. Daniel Godston
World Listening Day
Mon 31 May 2010

You are invited to participate in the first World Listening Day, which happens on Sunday, July 18, 2010. The purposes of World Listening Day are: . to celebrate the practice of listening as it relates to the world around us, environmental awareness, and acoustic ecology; . to raise awareness about issues related to the World Soundscape Project, World Listening Project, World Forum for Acoustic Ecology, and individual and group efforts to creatively explore phonography; . and to design and implement educational initiatives which explore these concepts and practices.

World Listening Day is being organized by the World Listening Project, in partnership with other organizations. July 18 was chosen as the date for World Listening Day because it is the birthday of the Canadian composer R. Murray Schafer. Schafer is one of the founders of the Acoustic Ecology movement. The World Soundscape Project, which he directed, is an important organization which has inspired a lot of activity in this field, and his book Soundscape: The Tuning of the World helped to define many of the terms and background behind the acoustic ecology movement.

The World Listening Project invites you to participate in World Listening Day. Here are several possibilities -- . You can set aside some time when you pay attention to your soundscape. . You can organize a soundwalk or a listening party when people play field recordings. . You can organize a performance event that involves field recordings and other artistic expressions that explore our soundscape and how we can listen to our sonic environment. . You can facilitate an educational event that relates to acoustic ecology, field recordings, or a similar topic. . You can contact organizations that are participating in World Listening Day, to see if you can get involved that way.

World Listening Day includes the following organizations and projects:
American Society for Acoustic Ecology
Auroral Borealis Listening Group
Berg 26 (Berlin)
Chicago Phonography
Citizen Sound
Community Sound [e]Scapes
Fruit for the Apocalypse - "The Stepney Soundscape" Hellenic Association for Acoustic Ecology - "A Listening Demonstration-Performance and Sunset Silence Meditation" (Corfu, Greece)
Im Namen des Raumes
KKWNE (Paris)
Midwest Society for Acoustic Ecology
New England Phonographers Union
OISTAT Sound Design Working Group
Seattle Phonographers Union
SixtySecond Theatre
"Sonic Survey of Weymouth seaside" (Dorset, England)
Sound Studies / Berlin University of the Arts
"Sounds Like Radio" (WDBX FM)
Wild Sanctuary World Forum for Acoustic Ecology
World Listening Project

For more info, please email [redacted]. Updates regarding more participants and projects will be announced soon.

Links:
http://www.worldlisteningproject.org/?p=667
http://www.sfu.ca/~truax/wsp.html
http://www.chicagoartistsresource.org/music/node/26550

↑ Index

23. Rob McLennan
[[redacted]: Bywords June15 deadline]
Mon 31 May 2010

To current and former Ottawa residents, workers and students:

June 15, 2010 is the deadline to submit poetry for the July, 2010 issue of Bywords.ca.

Please consult the guidelines on www.bywords.ca then send poems to [redacted].

Judge for this year's John Newlove Poetry Award is Jason Camlot. Send poems!

Thanks to everyone who has submitted poems.

For poetry, literary events, news, links and hard-to-find poetry collections and chapbooks by Ottawa writers, please go to www.bywords.ca .

Amanda Earl
Managing Editor
www.bywords.ca
PO Box 937
Station B
Ottawa,On K1P 5P9

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

24. Eleni Stecopoulos
ARMIES OF COMPASSION, from Palm Press
Mon 31 May 2010

Happy to announce my new book, Armies of Compassion (Palm Press, 2010), beautifully designed by Michael Cross.

http://www.palmpress.org/armiesofcompassion.html

Available from SPD:
http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9780984309900/armies-of-compassion.aspx?rf=1

This startling work brings something necessary to American poetry: a visceral poetics that transforms diagnosis into a performative linguistic probe in the service of the disturbed body. The body politic’s symptoms and signs are the foundation for Eleni Stecopoulos’s aversive lyrics, whose beauty lies not in the unbearing of a device but in the bearing of our discomfiture in the world and the potency of our imaginary realignments. Armies of Compassion is a talisman, antidote to what ails, spells woven against an engulfing night.

—
Charles Bernstein

The poems of Armies of Compassion are riveting, threnodic, deeply investigative of our "hieroglyphs of breath" and body. They cut to the marrow of kinetics and philology, our psyche’s doubt, our cellular breakdowns and theatricalities, our ironies and euphemisms, our endless war, pinning evocative Latin and Greek terms to greater mythic dimension and healing ritual. Eleni Stecopoulos is one of our deepest and most rigorous poets whose ethos and intelligence challenge and light up the mind. I am thrilled by out of what ruins and darkness and inspired lexical examination come these rare beauties. — Anne Waldman

"Philosophy never confesses / its delicate condition" writes Eleni Stecopoulos, as she takes on the inherently vulnerable role of investigative poet, asking whether the body, personal and politic, is irrevocably split off in its systemic afflictions. In this book Stecopoulos deploys the paradoxical force/fragility of poetry at all too familiar sites of our abjection. She does this with historically aware wisdom and humor. Can words help, not as palliative or consolation, but as source of transfiguring energy? "Levitating girls" hover over "lines gathering / all the intelligence" of an intellectually astute imagination steeped in, among many aesthetic legacies, that of ancient Greece, where the fact "that the god descends on creaking pulleys in no way undermines the apparition." This poet has the guts and strategy (persistent courage) of what she calls "choric goals… waiting in the echo / for a tone," subtending towards love. — Joan Retallack

Eleni Stecopoulos is among a constellation of contemporary U.S. poets effectively correlating somatics (the everyday practices and conditions of bodies) with geopolitics, through a radical and emergent lyricism. In Armies of Compassion, the poet's body becomes a site allegorizing disasters of "immunity": the principle disaster being the Hegelian-trap which over-identifies 'self' as 'other' and the other as potential outbreak. As the epigraph to “Autoimmunity,” from Antonin Artaud's Theater and Its Double, reads: "The Grand-Saint-Antoine did not bring the plague to Marseille. It was already there." Which is to say: what plagues us is not alterity, but the dangerous fiction that 'self' and 'other' are not in fact coconstitutive, and that identities rather than relationships persist. Discoursing with both ancient and contemporary healing practices, and calling into question the hegemony of modern Western medicine, Stecopoulos opens the field for what bodies can do liberated from the disciplinary triage of military, capital, and clinic. Like Artaud, Robert Duncan, and Hannah Weiner before her, language experiment follows from bodily necessity and contingency. Conditioned by despair, there is somehow hope in "guts." Having guts (courage), but also attending their literal fact (the innards determining how we act, thus will be).

—Thom Donovan

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

25. Rob McLennan
jwcurry is appealing for relief again.
Mon 31 May 2010

jwcurry is appealing for relief again. Consider buying some of his books so he can live in his apartment!

check out this older post, here; http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/2009/09/urgent-note-from-roland-prevost-save.html

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

26. Samuel Wharton
Fwd: sawbuck 4.2
Mon 31 May 2010

dear readers & contributors~

happy memorial day!

also there's a new sawbuck <http://www.sawbuckpoetry.blogspot.com> for you to read, with poems from:

Adam Shlager
A.M. Brant

Charles Springer
Dean Faulwell
Emma Bolden
Kiely Sweatt
Lisa Cole
Mark Neely
Rebecca Mertz
Scott Abels

hope you enjoy & have a great summer!

~samuel wharton, editor

↑ Index

27. CA Conrad
Tammany, around
Mon 31 May 2010

Chief that is, Chief Tammany. Where we will meet.
The (Soma)tic Poetry Workshop, details at this link:
http://myforehead.blogspot.com

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

28. David-Baptiste Chirot
save jwcurry & Room 302 Books!
Tue 1 Jun 2010

Last week jw sent me one of his famous single spaced many many paged letters and talked a bit about his situation--

i think he's one of the great geniuses of poetry, publishing, critiques, Visual Poetry, Sound Poetry & is also engaged in creating the entire bibliography of bp Nichol

some of jw's works will be in a forthcoming web anthology of Visual Poetry i was invited to curate please help this great artist--!

--david baptiste chirot

NOTE: THE FOLLOWING IS FROM ROB MCLENNAN'S GREAT BLOG

An urgent note from Roland Prevost: save jwcurry & Room 302 Books!

john curry, certainly a world class poet living in our community, is presently facing almost certain eviction.

Stephen Brockwell alerted me of this precarious situation, by phone, and asked if I would get the word out, most recently at the TREE Reading Series on September 22, where we were able to scare up enough to cover one of his 5 months' owed rent & save his telephone service.

curry's been in constant production of his own and hundreds of others' work since 1979. he's mainly ineligible for grants. His bookstore is mainly an unused resource. His archive documenting the growth of avant-garde writing in Canada is one of the key collections in the country. Nicky Drumbolis has said: "curry and his work are the best-kept secret in Canada."

Since time is of the essence, if curry's to avoid eviction, there are a few ways you can help:

Start to use his goddamn store!

Room 302 Books is the only bookstore in Canada ever to focus specifically on the avant-garde and "overlooked outsiders," specializing in concrete/visual/sound poetries (mainly Canadian) with a stock of over 20,000 mainly rare titles, including "elusive ephemera," and probably the only source of most of jwcurry's various imprints and titles (which number in the thousands). curry's current lists finally focus on his own work as artist & publisher, virtually the first time everything that's (still) available has been made commonly available. You can purchase bookstore IOUs (or set up an account) today in any amount for those who'd like to do that.

Subscribe to Curvd H&z, curry's serial imprint. "donor" subscriptions (please indicate) of $100 or more get ½ the stash in a sampling of available titles from various of his imprints immediately, the remaining ½ put on account for forthcoming titles.

Donate outright.I would like to encourage you to donate something so as to keep this excellent bookstore, publisher, archive and artist alive, and at the same time help prevent curry's eviction from his apartment. For those who'd like to purchase bookstore IOU's, I'd ask you to write (#302-880 Somerset Street West, Ottawa Canada K1R 6R7) or call him at [redacted]. Please contribute as you can. The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. Get started. Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. See how.

_____ The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?

tile=multicalendar&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_5

↑ Index

29. Deborah Poe

Fwd: Call for anecdotes for an upcoming Sarabande book

Tue 1 Jun 2010

Forwarding on request (apologies for x-posting)

Here's the call:

Call for anecdotes for an upcoming Sarabande book

Jeffrey Skinner and Leslie McGrath are working on a project about the careers of poets and literary prose writers. How do poets and other literary writers move ahead in their careers (other than via their blazing talent?) This is your chance to share the anecdotes you've only told your closest friends. We're interested only in the stories, not in names and places. We offer anonymity and gratitude in exchange. And, if we use your anecdote, a free copy of the resulting book. **

Please email your anecdotes to [redacted] by July 1, 2010 under the heading "Book Anecdote."

↑ Index

30. William Allegrezza

Series A: Durgin and Boully this Wednesday

Tue 1 Jun 2010

Come to Series A this Wednesday to hear two great poets.

June 2, 7:00-8:00 p.m.
Patrick Durgin
Jenny Boully

At the Hyde Park Art Center.
5020 S. Cornell Avenue
Chicago, IL

BYOB. Parking. Public Transit.

http://www.moriapoetry.com/seriesa.html

The reading starts on time at 7 since the HPAC closes at 8.

Bill Allegrezza

↑ Index

31. Mary Jo Malo
Gulf waters
Tue 1 Jun 2010

My contribution, "DOWN IN THE PARISH," can be read here:

http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/

Recently I've discovered the holistic work of physicist-philosopher, David Bohm, and am amazed by the intricate flow and interrelation among all forms of matter. Decades ago he saw the segmented, mechanistic view of reality as a dangerous justification for unrestrained technology. Bohm further realized our entire system of thought is incoherent. He believed fresh perspectives are attainable only through imagination and the potential inherent in an artist's inescapable need to create.

When working in the energy sector, specifically the heavy electrical apparatus industry, I became aware of studies to determine the effect of electromagnetic radiation on children. I also learned too many utilities recklessly generate electricity using coal, gas, and nuclear power. We must end our reliance on toxic energy supplies and quickly transition to safe, renewable energy, or this planet will be uninhabitable for most species. Reduce, reuse, recycle, bicycle, and use mass transit!

I no longer apologize for writing poetry using metaphors drawn from nature.

Mary Jo Malo

↑ Index

32. Will Larsen
This Sunday: Staviana Stanescu Reading, 2pm
Tue 1 Jun 2010

The Renaissance Society presents

*Saviana Stanescu
"NY THRU AN IMMIGRANT I or (r)EVOLUTION (Flagstories and other personal histories)"
Sunday, June 6, 2:00 pm*

You are invited for The Renaissance Society's last event of the year - a reading by Saviana Stanescu, followed by a reception with light refreshments in the gallery.

Stanescu was a college student in 1989 when she participated in the Romanian "revolution" and the so-called "end of communism". Now, after almost 20 years she witnesses the so-called "end of capitalism" in New York. This autobiographical performative lecture explores her immigrant experience in New York through the lens of a personal dichotomy East-West and a permanent negotiation between the old and new set of values.

Playwright, poet, screenwriter, teacher, journalist, curator, Stanescu does it all. Her work is often characterized by a black humor and a sense of the absurd that is distinctly Eastern European. She wrote the screenplay for Dog Luv which is featured in the exhibition Seductiveness of the Interval. She has won numerous awards and her plays have been widely presented internationally and in the US. Recent New York productions include: Aliens with Extraordinary Skills, Waxing West, and YokastaS Redux (co-authored with Richard Schechner). She teaches at New York University.

The reading will take place in Swift Hall room 106, at The University of Chicago, 1025 East 58th Street (on the Main Quadrangle of the University, directly east of Cobb Hall). The reception will be at The Renaissance Society, 5811 South Ellis Avenue, 4th floor, Cobb Hall. FREE

↑ Index

33. Nic Sebastian

Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Chris Hamilton-Emery

Tue 1 Jun 2010

The internet, Facebook, Twitter, blogs, websites, iPad, iPod, podcasts, digital video, computers and who knows what else. What do they all mean for the poet? For Poetry? UK poet Chris Hamilton-Emery responds this week to Ten Questions on Poets and Technology - http://bit.ly/anbQ7A.Best wishes,Nic Sebastianhttp://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com

_____ The New Busy is not the too busy. Combine all your e-mail accounts with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multiaccount&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_4

↑ Index

34. V. Joshua Adams

 NEW ISSUE OF CHICAGO REVIEW ***

Tue 1 Jun 2010

***

CHICAGO REVIEW is pleased to announce the publication of issue 55:2, featuring:

POETRY by Simon Jarvis, Jean Valentine, Kristina Jipson, Pierre Joris, Elizabeth Winder, Susan Stewart, Andrew Zawacki, Rob Halpern, and Stéphane Mallarmé (Translated by Peter Manson)

FICTION by Gary Lutz, Erika Mikkalo, and Matt Briggs

ESSAYS by Jennifer Moxley, Durs Grünbein and John Wilkinson

plus REVIEWS and a NOTE

To order or subscribe, visit:

http://humanities.uchicago.edu/orgs/review/

***

CHICAGO REVIEW
5801 S. Kenwood Ave.
Chicago, IL 60637

↑ Index

35. Jonathan Morse
What happens when a photographer looks at a poet?
Wed 2 Jun 2010

Setting the stakes high with a great photographer, Edward Weston, I ask that question in a blog post at http://jonathan-morse.blogspot.com/2010/05/tycoon-classic-studio-pose.html

Jonathan Morse
University of Hawaii at Manoa

↑ Index

36. Maryrose .
Open Call: PolyVocal
Wed 2 Jun 2010

Anyone interested in joining us? Contact me or James (below)

Dear friends,

We at the Spare Room are asking you to participate in an afternoon of poetry for voices Sunday July 18.

In our business of bending literary tradition, we are working against the notion of literature as solitary act. We will be spending an afternoon in Portland, Oregon, out of doors, performing and sharing works of poetry composed or arranged for multiple voices. In doing so, we are looking back to the Greek Chorus, Louis Zukofsky's "A"-24, Canada's Four Horseman, and others, but you are as much encouraged to bring your own work, or re-imagine the work of others.

This is an open call, do pass it on.

Please let us know if you plan on attending, & any other information we might find useful for promoting the event.

Thank you.
James Yeary, for Spare Room
[redacted]

↑ Index

37. Paul Siegell
youtube'd book trailer: wild life rifle fire
Wed 2 Jun 2010

---

hello!

when you have a moment,
and
when your speakers are on...

wild life rifle fire's up on YouTube: http://bit.ly/aLaNz2 whaddaya think?

1,000 thanks for viewing,
paul>
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com

(gigantic thanks to those kind enough to post, fwd, embed, etc. - huge!)

...thank you, Reb Livingston:
http://wewhoareabouttodie.com/2010/05/30/poetry-attentionbeam-8/

↑ Index

38. Camille Martin
new at Rogue Embryo
Wed 2 Jun 2010

Fresh posts on my blog:

1) Charles Borkhuis' "Write What I Say" http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/06/02/charles-borkhuis-write-what-i-say/

2) in-flight collage
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/05/23/in-flight-collage/

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html
http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

↑ Index

39. Edward Foster GREAT BOOK EVENT NOT TO BE MISSED
Wed 2 Jun 2010

—

↑ Index

40. Tribbey, Hugh R.
new book
Wed 2 Jun 2010

My book Mime Box has been recently published by Chalk Editions at http://chalkeditions.co.cc

Thanks,
Hugh Tribbey

↑ Index

41. CA Conrad
FUCK DEATH!
Wed 2 Jun 2010

for Leslie Scalapino & Peter Orlovsky

Down, down, down into the darkness of the grave
Gently they go, the beautiful, the tender, the kind;
Quietly they go, the intelligent, the witty, the barve.
I know. But I do not approve. And I am not resigned.
--Edna St. Vincent Millay

It makes me angry that we die. I'm on Edna St. Vincent Millay's side with this one! FUCK DEATH! I am not resigned and will not intend to ever be so! Dying is a growing grief for the living. A humiliating and treacherous sadness in piecemeal THIS WORLD!

It was very sad to hear of the passing of Leslie Scalapino and Peter Orlovsky. I had the weirdest things happen with both of their works, not weird really because everything we think weird or coincidental will probably be revealed one day as the softest magic imaginable, meaning WE HAVE NO IDEA HOW BIG THE magic faucet roars beyond this world. But I recently stumbled across Leslie Scalapino's AMAZING book Crowd and not evening or light JUST before hearing that she had died. And have since reread it, and loved it all over again. I despise religion which drives customs, which evaporates autonomy, and SCALAPINO also OPENLY felt the same way over and over again in her poems. Like this great stanza:

people finding out what they are -- because they don't have any custom any longer -- we don't not from suffering -- though going on or their finding out, the women having been enslaved the men dead -- custom -- suffering made to be that

And today I wish I knew Peter Orlovsky's poems as much as I do Scalapino's. I heard him read in Philadelphia many years ago at the Painted Bride Arts Center. It was Lamont Steptoe who brought him here I believe, but I'm not 100 percent sure. The first person who ever mentioned him to me was Molly Russakoff.

Today Molly and I went deep into Fairmount Park together. We had a picnic for Peter. She had dated him at Naropa back in the 1970's at the same time that Allen Ginsberg was dating him. We had oranges and wine and dark chocolate and kale and blue corn, and ate, and offered some for Peter under the massive cottonwood tree in the park today. It was beautiful, this. This sharing and being together, being grateful for our lives and WE MUST be grateful for our lives we know.

JUST before I found out that Peter died last week I was in the Rittenhouse Library, sitting in front of the poetry section reading from the marvelous anthology OUT OF THIS WORLD (St. Mark's Poetry Project), and a book title's spine jumped out at me: WHEN I WAS COOL. I forget the author, but Molly knew him as well, in fact the book was about going to Naropa, and the author was there when Molly was there. When Peter Orlovsky was teaching there, and Ted Berrigan, and it sounded like a great time.

But I opened WHEN I WAS COOL to a page with Orlovsky's picture, and a caption which read something like, "On the first day of class Peter Orlovsky said, 'raise your hand if you think pussy tastes like strawberry jam'" or something like that.

WITH LOVE TO THE LIVING. I mind dying, I mind very much! I do not approve, and am not resigned!
CAConrad

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

42. Alan Sondheim

Nigerian oil damage (fwd - the US is catching up)

Thu 3 Jun 2010

---

http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2010/may/30/oil-spills-nigeria-niger-delta-shell

- Alan

==
email archive: http://sondheim.rupamsunyata.org/webpage http://www.alansondheim.org music archive: http://www.espdisk.com/alansondheim/
==

↑ Index

43. Hilary Clark

Re: new from No press: DANDELION COLLABORATION by Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upton

Thu 3 Jun 2010

Hi,
Forwarding message.
Hope your spring/summer is going well.

H.

> No press is proud to announce the (re-issued) publication of
>
> DANDELION COLLABORATION
> by Bob Cobbing & Lawrence Upton
>
> published in an edition of 40 hand-sewn copies (of which 20 are for sale)
> $5 each (including shipping)
>
> Dandelion Collaboration was commissioned from Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upton by derek beaulieu. It was made between March and May 2002. It was the last collaborative poetry the two made, writing and rewriting using additive and destructive processes-original writing and inscription collaged with found > material, subjected to digital transformation using several PC graphics packages, and analog transformation by photocopier.

>
> for more information, or to order copies, email
> [redacted]
>
> derek beaulieu
> 2 - 733 2nd avenue nw
> calgary alberta
> canada T2N 0E4
> [redacted]
> http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

44. Laura Hinton

Re: Leslie Scalapino (1944-2010)

Thu 3 Jun 2010

In mourning Leslie Scalapino's death and in celebrating her multi-genre poetry, I am coordinating a "Streaming / Reading Memorial" on my blog site, Chant de la Sirene. Four pieces have thus far been posted this week. We are looking forward to more:

chantdelasirene.com

Anyone who wishes to send in a short piece about Leslie, on the topic of reading / re-reading her work, please backchannel me ([redacted]).

Laura

Laura Hinton
Professor of English
City College of New York
138 at Convent Ave.
New York, New York 10031

http://www.mermaidtenementpress.com
http://www.chantdelasirene.com

↑ Index

45. Poetry Project
Events at The Poetry Project
Thu 3 Jun 2010

The Poets Potluck is tomorrow!

Friday, June 4, 10 PM
Poets Potluck VI

Come say goodbye to Ed & Nicole and make mark of the end of their co-Friday Night Series run before the Poetry Project¹s annual summer-time pause. Bring your best gal, or a casual gentleman or two, your ma¹s macaroni salad, and a choice tipple, like grandma¹s punch or grandpa¹s whiskey, to wash it all down. There will be poems read, songs sung and early summertime romantic merriment for all. See you there, of course.

Also, if you have a new book you should send a copy to Poets House for their showcase:

2010 Poets House Showcase
June 28 to July 31
Opening Reception: Monday, June 28, 6:00-8:00pm
BE SURE YOUR BOOKS ARE INCLUDED!
Book Submission Deadline‹Thursday, June 10, 2010

If your book was published in April 2009 or later, make sure it is a part of the 18th Annual Poets House Showcase, a display of all the poetry books published in the U.S. each year. Send books to Poets House Librarian Maggie Balistreri (10 River Terrace, New York NY, 10282; [redacted]) as soon as possible. For more details about the Showcase, visit www.poetshouse.org/showcase.htm

The Poets House Showcase takes place at @ Poets House, 10 River Terrace (at Murray St.), [redacted] /www.poetshouse.org

Become a Poetry Project Member! http://poetryproject.org/become-a-member

Calendar: http://www.poetryproject.org/program-calendar

The Poetry Project is located at St. Mark's Church-in-the-Bowery
131 East 10th Street at Second Avenue
New York City 10003
Trains: 6, F, N, R, and L.
[redacted]
www.poetryproject.org

Admission is $8, $7 for students/seniors and $5 for members (though now those who take out a membership at $95 or higher will get in FREE to all regular readings).

We are wheelchair accessible with assistance and advance notice. For more info call [redacted].

If you¹d like to be unsubscribed from this mailing list, please drop a line at [redacted].

↑ Index

46. Tim Peterson

EOAGH Reading Series 6/6: Javier, Lee, and Marinovich

Fri 4 Jun 2010

EOAGH Reading Series 6/6:

PAOLO JAVIER, SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE, and FILIP MARINOVICH

Sunday, June 6 at 2 PM

At Unnameable Books

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

*

PAOLO JAVIER is the author of the forthcoming chapbooks The Feeling Is Actual (creature press, summer 2010) and Megton Gasgan Krakooom (cy gist press, summer 2010). A 2010 Millay Colony Artist-in-Residence, he publishes 2nd Ave Poetry, and lives in Queens.

Read “FORMAL APOLOGY TO MY ASSHOLE,” “Maybe I’m All Of This” and “MCCARTHY AT HEART” by Paolo Javier in Issue 5:

http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/javier.html

Read an excerpt from Javier’s play "Lunatic" in Issue 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/javier.html

*

SUEYEUN JULIETTE LEE grew up 3 miles from the CIA. She currently lives in Philadelphia, where she edits Corollary Press, a chapbook series devoted to multi-ethnic innovative writing. Her books include That Gorgeous Feeling (Coconut Books) and Underground National (Factory School).

Read “from in an american mirror” by Sueyeun Juliette Lee in Issue 5:

http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/lee.html

*

FILIP MARINOVICH is a poet living in New York, New York. His books are "ZERO READERSHIP" (Ugly Duckling Presse 2008), and the forthcoming "A TRAVELLING PART" (Ugly Duckling Presse 2011). He has published poems in Critiphoria, EOAGH #3 and #5, The Brooklyn Rail, and Aufgabe. Good evening Everybody.

Read “HONORABLE ONE,” “BARETTE,” and “Descriptions Automatique” by Filip Marinovich in Issue 3:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/marinovich.html

Read “AMERICA DEATH IN NEW YORK” by Marinovich in Issue 5:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/marinovich.html

*

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

*

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

Susie Timmons and Michael Gottlieb (Faux | Other event)

Sunday, June 13 @2PM

E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor

Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

47. Nicholas Karavatos
at Show & Tell Gallery in Portland, OR on Monday, June 7 at 7:00pm
Fri 4 Jun 2010

"3 Friends Mondays: Caffeinated Art" welcomes poets Nicholas Karavatos, Chris Cotrell, & Carolyn Brazda to the Show & Tell Gallery in Portland, Oregon on Monday, June 7 at 7:00pm.

NICHOLAS KARAVATOS is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa's Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review (University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009).

David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: "Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity."

CHRIS COTTRELL was born in Portland, Oregon but grew up on Maui. His fiction, reviews and poetry have appeared in The Scene, Alchemy, Willamette Week, Portland Review (which he now edits), Clackamas Literary Review, Nervy Girl! and Alembic (formerly Mercury). Cottrell has been awarded the 2009 Shelley Reece award and the PSU/Literary Arts Writers in the Schools Residency and Internship for 2009-2010. He is the one of the first poetry MFAs from Portland State.

CAROLYN BRAZDA was the finalist for the 2008 and 2009 Academy of American Poets Award. She lives and writes in Portland, OR.

http://showandtellgallery.org/

Monday, June 7, 2010
7:00pm - 9:00pm
Show & Tell Gallery
201 SE 12th Avenue
Portland, OR

Nicholas Karavatos' next reading/book-signing is sponsored by Tebot Bach at Golden West College, Community Room 102, Huntington Beach, CA on Friday, June 25 _____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

48. Alan Sondheim

conference - video demo - brightens nicely -

Fri 4 Jun 2010

---

conference - video demo - brightens nicely -

http://www.alansondheim.org/spilt.mp4

↑ Index

49. amy king
Weeping over this ...
Fri 4 Jun 2010

I suppose this is the beginning of the "spill" effects (caution: gruesome) --

http://www.boston.com/bigpicture/2010/06/caught_in_the_oil.html

~~~

In related news, new poems up at Poets for Living Waters:

http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

Poets for Living Waters is a poetry action in response to the BP oil disaster in the Gulf of Mexico begun on April 20, 2010, one of the most profound human-made ecological catastrophes in history.

The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity suggests a wide range of poetry will offer a meaningful response to the current crisis, including work that harkens back to Hurricane Katrina and the ongoing regional effects.

~~~

http://amyking.org

↑ Index

50. Mary Kasimor
Re: Weeping over this ...
Fri 4 Jun 2010

I just posted this on Facebook. Yes, I feel like crying, too. These animals are so vulnerable.

Mary

--- On Fri, 6/4/10, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

From: amy king <[redacted]>
Subject: Weeping over this ...
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, June 4, 2010, 12:36 PM

I suppose this is the beginning of the "spill" effects (caution: gruesome) --

http://www.boston.com/bigpicture/2010/06/caught_in_the_oil.html

~~~

In related news, new poems up at Poets for Living Waters:
~~~

http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

Poets for Living Waters is a poetry action in response to the BP oil disaster in the Gulf of Mexico begun on April 20, 2010, one of the most profound human-made ecological catastrophes in history.

The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity suggests a wide range of poetry will offer a meaningful response to the current crisis, including work that harkens back to Hurricane Katrina and the ongoing regional effects.

~~~

http://amyking.org

↑ Index

51. amy king
OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
Fri 4 Jun 2010

"

Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:

"British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."

His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] . Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate. I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough is enough! President Obama notes,

"The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. Iâ€™ll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller, â€œWe never know the worth of water till the well is dry.â€ Please help with this project so that future generations donâ€™t remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulnessâ€”the clock is not stopping, neither should we. Sincerely, http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301 ~~~ MORE INFO President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency -- http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency Obama Points a Finger at GOP -- http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html~~~The energy portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings, appliances, and other sectors of the economy. The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to put a man on the moon did in the 1960s. "I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure, and our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill. The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact after Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount of spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center for American Progress. MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html

↑ Index

52. Mark Johnson

Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Fri 4 Jun 2010

Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> "
> Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:
>
> "British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."
>
> His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] .
> Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has

fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate. I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. I'll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller, "We never know the worth of water till the well is dry." Please help with this project so that future generations don't remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulness—the clock is not stopping, neither should we. Sincerely, http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
~~~
MORE INFO
President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --
http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
Obama Points a Finger at GOP --
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html~~~The<http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>energy portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings, appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
"I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, > medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure, and our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.

> The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact after Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount of spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center for American Progress.
> MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html

↑ Index

53. amy king

Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Fri 4 Jun 2010

---

http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
NOLA reported it here:

http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_gulf_and_our.html

But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently offend any of BP's representatives!

~~

ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

_____
From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> "
> Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:
>
> "British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."
>
> His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] .
> Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate. I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. Iâ€™ll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller, â€œWe never know the worth of water till the well is dry.â€ Please help with this project so that future generations donâ€™t remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulnessâ€”the clock is not stopping, neither should we. Sincerely, http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
~~~
MORE INFO
President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --
http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
Obama Points a Finger at GOP --
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html~~~The<http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>energy portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings, appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
"I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure, and

> our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.
> The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact after Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount of spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center for American Progress.
> MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html

↑ Index

54. amy king

Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Fri 4 Jun 2010

And then there's the Chief Executive of BP -- on the record at CNN -- characterizing the fallout, on repeat, as "very, very modest."

"I think the environmental impact of this disaster is likely to have been very, very modest ... But everything we can see at the moment suggests that the overall environmental impact will be very, very modest."

Ahem.

http://archives.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1005/18/acd.01.html

~~

ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

_____
From: amy king <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:51:30 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
NOLA reported it here:

http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_gulf_and_our.html

But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently offend any of BP's representatives!

~~

ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> "
> Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:
>
> "British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."
>
> His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] .
> Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"
>
> Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!
>
> EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your
> Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
>
> ~~~
>
> WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act
>
> Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate. I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. Iâ€™ll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller, â€œWe never know the worth of water till the well is dry.â€ Please help with this project so that future generations donâ€™t remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulnessâ€"the clock is not stopping, neither should we. Sincerely,
> http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

> ~~~
> MORE INFO
> President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --
> http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
> Obama Points a Finger at GOP --
> http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html~~~The<http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>energy portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings, appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
> The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
> "I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure, and our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.
> The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact after Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount of spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center for American Progress.
> MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html

↑ Index

55. Christopher Rizzo
Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
Fri 4 Jun 2010

Brett Michael Dykes reported it in Yahoo! News article:

http://news.yahoo.com/s/ynews/20100603/ts_ynews/ynews_ts2390

I Googled "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp." Google fixed the spelling error and I found the above article in 30 seconds.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:51 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
> NOLA reported it here:
>
> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_gulf_an d_our.html

But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently offend any of BP's representatives!

~~

ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

"
Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:

"British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."

His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] .
Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well

*as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response
to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate.
I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough
is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil
and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. Iâ€™ll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller,
â€œWe never know the worth of water till the well is dry.â€ Please help
with this project so that future generations donâ€™t remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulnessâ€”the clock is not stopping,
neither should we. Sincerely,
http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
~~~
MORE INFO
President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --

http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-
US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
Obama Points a Finger at GOP --

http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.h tml~~~The
<
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.h tml%7E%7E%7EThe>energy
portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings,
appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
"I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure,*
~~~

> and
> our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.
> The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact
> after > Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount
> of > spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the > Center
> for American Progress.
> MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

56. Mark Johnson

Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Fri 4 Jun 2010

"Widely quoted this week..." No source.

But hey, since the right doesn't fact-check, why should we?

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:51 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
> NOLA reported it here:
>
> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_gulf_and_our.html
>
> But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently > offend any of BP's representatives!
>
> ~~
>
> ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

_____
From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

"
Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:

"British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."

His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] .
Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate.

I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough
is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil
and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. I'll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller,
"We never know the worth of water till the well is dry." Please help
with this project so that future generations don't remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulness—the clock is not stopping,
neither should we. Sincerely,
http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
~~~
MORE INFO
President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --

http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-
US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
Obama Points a Finger at GOP --

http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.h tml~~~The<http://online.wsj.com/article/
SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>
<
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.h tml%7E%7E%7EThe>energy
portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of
renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings,
appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
"I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure,
and
our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.
The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact
after Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount
of spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center

> for American Progress.
> MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

57. Mark Johnson

Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Fri 4 Jun 2010

"In the wake of reports..." Sigh.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:58 PM, Christopher Rizzo <[redacted]> wrote:

> Brett Michael Dykes reported it in Yahoo! News article:
>
> http://news.yahoo.com/s/ynews/20100603/ts_ynews/ynews_ts2390
>
> I Googled "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp." Google fixed the spelling error and I found the above article in 30 seconds.
>
> On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:51 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
> NOLA reported it here:
>
> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_gulf_and_our.html
>
> But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently offend any of BP's representatives!
>
> ~~
>
> ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

"
Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:

"British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."

His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted]. Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming

ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate.
I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil
and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. I'll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller,
"We never know the worth of water till the well is dry." Please help with this project so that future generations don't remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulness—the clock is not stopping,
neither should we. Sincerely,
http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
~~~
MORE INFO
President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --

http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
Obama Points a Finger at GOP --

http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html~~~The<http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>
<

http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe
energy
portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of
renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings,
appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the > bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to > put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.

> "I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, > medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure, and
> our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.
> The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact after > Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount of > spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center
> for American Progress.
> MORE DETAILS HERE --
> http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

58. amy king

Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Fri 4 Jun 2010

Good thing Mark posted

Thanks, Christopher. Seriously, my bad.

Good thing Mark posted the call to arms! I'm certain he's doing so much more than fact checking too this poor BP representative's quote - you know, like reacting to the actual spill, calling attention to the effects of it, putting pressure on his senators to do something, sympathizing with the residents of one of the poorest states going right now and how they can't sustain a living, the lack of outrage, etc.

Cheers,

Amy

~~

ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

_____
From: Christopher Rizzo <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:58:58 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Brett Michael Dykes reported it in Yahoo! News article:

http://news.yahoo.com/s/ynews/20100603/ts_ynews/ynews_ts2390

I Googled "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp." Google fixed the spelling error and I found the above article in 30 seconds.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:51 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
> NOLA reported it here:
>
> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_gulf_and_our.html
>
> But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently offend any of BP's representatives!
>
> ~~
>
> ALIAS -- http://amyking.org
>
> _____
> From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
> Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
>
> Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

"
Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:

"British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."

His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] .
Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate. I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. Iâ€™ll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller, â€œWe never know the worth of water till the well is dry.â€ Please help with this project so that future generations donâ€™t remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulnessâ€”the clock is not stopping,

neither should we. Sincerely,
http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
~~~
MORE INFO
President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --

http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
Obama Points a Finger at GOP -- http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html~~~The

<
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>energy
portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of
renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings,
appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
"I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure, and
our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.
The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact after Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount of spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center
for American Progress.
MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html

guidelines

↑ Index

59. amy king
Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
Fri 4 Jun 2010

Yes, you're right, Mark. Since that poor BP Executive has been so maliciously maligned, I'm countering the quote about the shrimp with one made by the BP Executive himself, all nice and documented at CNN, to further inspire and re-direct your energy and call to arms:

"I think the environmental impact of this disaster is likely to have been very, very modest ... But everything we can see at the moment suggests that the overall environmental impact will be very, very modest."

http://archives.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1005/18/acd.01.html

Does that not sufficiently get your goat? Or am I the only one capable of such a feat?

Amy

~~

ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

_____
From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:59:21 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

"Widely quoted this week..." No source.

But hey, since the right doesn't fact-check, why should we?

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:51 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
> NOLA reported it here:
>
> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_gulf_and_our.html
>
> But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently

offend any of BP's representatives!

~~

ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

"
Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:

"British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."

His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] .
Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response

to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House
has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate.
I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough
is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil
and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. Iâ€™ll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller,
â€œWe never know the worth of water till the well is dry.â€ Please help
with this project so that future generations donâ€™t remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulnessâ€”the clock is not stopping,
neither should we. Sincerely,
http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
~~~
MORE INFO
President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --

http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-
US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
Obama Points a Finger at GOP --

http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.h tml~~~The<http://online.wsj.com/article/
SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>
<
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.h tml%7E%7E%7EThe>energy
portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of
renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings,
appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal to put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
"I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science, medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure,
and
our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.

> The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact after > Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount of > spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center
> for American Progress.
> MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

60. amy king

SAVE THE GULF! -- BENEFIT POETRY & MUSIC FESTIVAL -- June 27th -- Petaluma, CA -- Grahn, Meltzer, Doubiago, Cherkovski and More!

Fri 4 Jun 2010

SAVE THE GULF -- MUSIC & POETRY FESTIVAL
A Benefit for The Louisiana Bucket Brigade
SUNDAY, JUNE 27, 2010 2:00 â€” 5:00 p.m. The Phoenix Theater, 201 Washington St., Petaluma [redacted] http://www.thephoenixtheater.com/
POETS INCLUDE: DAVID MELTZER, JUDY GRAHN, SHARON DOUBIAGO, NEELI CHERKOVSKI.

Also: Geri DiGiorno, Terri Carrion, Pat Nolan, Bill Vartnaw, Katherine Hastings, Michael Rothenberg, Zack Fortune, David Madgalene and Sonoma County Poet Laureate Gwynn O'Gara MUSIC BY ANNE CAROL and PETALUMA'S FABULOUS HIGH CLASS! ADMISSION: $5 â€” $5,000! NO ONE TURNED AWAY All proceeds go to The Louisiana Bucket Brigade, a non-profit 501(C)3 environmental health and justice organization tracking the impact of the BP oil spill and preventing the impact from being "swept under the rug". Donations are tax-deductible. Checks accepted.

www.labucketbrigade.org

http://oilspill.labucketbrigade.org

↑ Index

61. Mark Johnson

Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Fri 4 Jun 2010

You care more than I do! Now I can rest easy.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 4:06 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> Good thing Mark posted
>
> Thanks, Christopher. Seriously, my bad.
>
> Good thing Mark posted the call to arms! I'm certain he's doing so much more than fact checking too this poor BP representative's quote - you know, like reacting to the actual spill, calling attention to the effects of it, putting pressure on his senators to do something, sympathizing with the residents of one of the poorest states going right now and how they can't sustain a living, the lack of outrage, etc.
>
> Cheers,
>
> Amy
>
> ~~
>
> ALIAS -- http://amyking.org
>
> _____
> From: Christopher Rizzo <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:58:58 PM
> Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
>
> Brett Michael Dykes reported it in Yahoo! News article:
>
> http://news.yahoo.com/s/ynews/20100603/ts_ynews/ynews_ts2390
>
> I Googled "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp." Google fixed the spelling error and I found the above article in 30 seconds.
>
> On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:51 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
NOLA reported it here:

http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_gulf_and_our.html

But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently offend any of BP's representatives!

~~

ALIAS -- http://amyking.org

From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

"
Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:

"British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana isn't the only place that has shrimp."

His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted].
Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that has fuel either!'"

Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate. I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. I'll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller, "We never know the worth of water till the well is dry." Please help with this project so that future generations don't remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulness—the clock is not stopping, neither should we. Sincerely,
http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
~~~
MORE INFO
President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel dependency --

http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
Obama Points a Finger at GOP --

http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html~~~The<http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>
<

http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe
energy
portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of
renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings,
appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of
the bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal
to
put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
"I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in
science,
medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure,
and
our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.
The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact
after Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount
of spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the Center
for American Progress.
MORE DETAILS HERE --
http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html

guidelines

guidelines

guidelines

↑ Index

62. Vernon Frazer
Re: IMPROVISATIONS VIDEO BY VERNON FRAZER ON YOUTUBE//Mallarme/Music & Visual Poetry
Fri 4 Jun 2010

David

I like the "white noise" idea.

In a sense, it renders the universe more kinetic, always in motion, so that even "silence" may not be an absolute silence but a suspension of the kinetic elements that creates spatial and rhythmic tension, and an element of undertainty.

As I envision "Un Coup de Des," my sense of the hand shaking the dice continuing throughout the poem suggests to me a continuation of energy, not a cessation. In effect, the space on the page would fill with the tension and anticipation aroused while awaiting the toss. In a universe in constant motion, e.g. from energy to matter and back, the continual flux of energy and matter would render the outcome of the poem/toss "provisional".

Vernon

↑ Index

63. Daniel Godston
Mingus Awareness Project
Fri 4 Jun 2010

Mingus Awareness Project 2010

a benefit concert for ALS support and research

Wednesday, June 23, 2010 (8 p.m.)

On June 23, a group of musicians will gather at The Jazz Showcase to celebrate the life and music of Charles Mingus, and to benefit the Les Turner ALS Foundation. Mingus, an American musical hero who died of ALS, is one of the greatest figures in jazz history. His bass playing, compositions and philosophy have transcended his genre and left indelible marks on music history.

MAPtet will perform music by Charles Mingus, Duke Ellington, Rahsaan Roland Kirk, and Eric Dolphy, as well as original compositions --

Jon Hey -- piano

Paul Hartsaw -- tenor saxophone

Dan Godston -- trumpet

Fred Jackson -- alto saxophone

Jon Godston -- soprano saxophone

Raphael Crawford -- trombone

Tom Berg -- baritone saxophone

Cory Biggerstaff -- upright bass

Brian Jones -- drums

Admission: $20 / $15 for students

Attendees will have the opportunity to participate in a raffle to win items. All proceeds will go to benefit the Les Turner ALS Foundation.

Mingus Awareness Project is organized by the Borderbend Arts Collective, in partnership with the Les Turner ALS Foundation. The Borderbend Arts Collective is a 501(c)(3) organization whose mission is to promote the arts, to create opportunities for artists to explore new directions in and between art forms, and to engage the community.

Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS), commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease for the New York Yankees baseball icon, is a progressive neuromuscular disorder that causes atrophy throughout the body, ultimately leading to total paralysis. Brain cells cease sending messages to muscles, which slowly prohibits patients' movement and their ability to communicate. Onset commonly occurs between ages 35 to 65, and is slightly more prevalent in men. There is currently no cure for ALS, but treatment and interventions can help alleviate some symptoms, improve quality of life and prolong survival by delaying respiratory failure. The clinical progression can vary widely; however, patients typically live with the disease two to five years after the onset of symptoms. ALS knows no racial, cultural or socioeconomic boundaries and follows no pattern.

The Les Turner ALS Foundation, founded in 1977 is recognized internationally and is the only independent publicly supported non-profit organization in the Chicago-area devoted solely to the treatment and elimination of ALS. The Foundation is affiliated with Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine where it supports a large multidisciplinary clinical program and two world-class scientific research laboratories. The Foundation's comprehensive patient services include support group meetings; professional in-home consultation services; communications and durable medical equipment programs; respite care grants; and educational programs.

The Jazz Showcase

Dearborn Station, in Chicago's historic Printers Row neighborhood

806 S. Plymouth Ct.

Chicago, IL 60605

[redacted]

http://www.mingusawarenessproject.org

http://www.kintera.org/autogen/home/default.asp?ievent=427785

http://www.borderbend.org

http://www.jazzshowcase.com/

↑ Index

64. Peter Quartermain

Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

Fri 4 Jun 2010

Mark wrote:
> But hey, since the right doesn't fact-check, why should we?<
Tsk tsk.
Since that remark can now be sourced, it can be used against "we" no matter how sardonic or satiric it may have been meant. Whatever you do re this disaster, DON'T shoot from the lip. Careless lips kill wildlife. Careful lips demolish politicians and their cronies.

And, as Amy says, ACT.

=========
Peter Quartermain
846 Keefer Street
Vancouver
BC Canada V6A 1Y7
[redacted] (voice and fax)
[redacted]
=========

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Mark Johnson

Sent: 04 June 2010 12:59 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.

"Widely quoted this week..." No source.

But hey, since the right doesn't fact-check, why should we?

On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:51 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.s
> NOLA reported it here:
>
>
>
http://www.nola.com/news/gulf-oil-spill/index.ssf/2010/05/give_us_back_the_g ulf_and_our.html
>
> But if it's not substantiated, oh my: I hope we do not inadvertently > offend any of BP's representatives!
>
> ~~
>
> ALIAS -- http://amyking.org
>
>
>
> _____
> From: Mark Johnson <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Fri, June 4, 2010 3:37:57 PM
> Subject: Re: OT: Call to Action -- TWO THINGS YOU CAN DO - EASY.
>
> Source for the quote? Nobody I know has been able to find one.
>
>
> On Fri, Jun 4, 2010 at 3:05 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > "
> > Via Wendy Babiak -- from Centa Theresa at Michael Rothenberg's page:
> >
> > "British Petroleum (BP) rep Randy Prescott made a comment, "Louisana > isn't

> > the only place that has shrimp."
> >
> > His office number is [redacted] his email is [redacted] .
> > Give him a call or send an email. Tell him 'BP isn't the only place that > has > > fuel either!'"
> >
> > Of course, you can pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean > Energy
> > Bill too!
> >
> > EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES -
Just enter your
> > Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
> >
> > ~~~
> >
> > WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act
> >
> > Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology > > states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well > as > > animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An > > appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response
> to > > the current crisis. As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the > > effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming > ever-more > > clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House > has > > passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate.
> I
> > strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough
> is > > enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all,
for > > this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil
> and > > Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to > > build a clean energy future. I'll leave you with the words of Thomas > Fuller,

> > "We never know the worth of water till the well is dry." Please help
> with
> > this project so that future generations don't remember us for the wrong > > reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulness-the clock is not > stopping,
> > neither should we. Sincerely,
> > http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301
> > ~~~
> > MORE  INFO
> > President Obama says US needs energy bill to help end fossil fuel > > dependency  --
> >
>
http://www.csmonitor.com/From-the-news-wires/2010/0602/President-Obama-says-
US-needs-energy-bill-to-help-end-fossil-fuel-dependency
> > Obama Points a Finger at GOP --
> >
>
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.ht ml~~~The<http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380 918512.html%7E%7E%7EThe>
> <
>
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703561604575282593380918512.ht ml%7E%7E%7EThe>energy
> portions of the law are intended to promote rapid development of
> > renewable energy sources and increase energy efficiency in buildings,
> > appliances, and other sectors of the economy.
> > The president said he hoped that the clean-energy-related portions of
the > > bill will inspire Americans the same way that President Kennedy's goal
to
> > put a man on the moon did in the 1960s.
> > "I hope this investment will ignite our imagination once more in science,
> > medicine, energy and make our economy stronger, our nation more secure,
> and
> > our planet safer for our children," Obama said before signing the bill.

> > The major energy-related portions of the law were largely left intact
> after > > Congressional debate. Overall, the plan will more than triple the amount
> of > > spending on clean-energy programs, said Daniel Weiss, a fellow at the > Center
> > for American Progress.
> > MORE DETAILS HERE -- http://news.cnet.com/8301-11128_3-10165605-54.html
> >
> >
> >
> >
> guidelines
> >
>
guidelines
>
>
>
>
>
guidelines
>

↑ Index

65. Jim Rosenberg
For Neda -- A Film by Antony Thomas
Fri 4 Jun 2010

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?vô8SinuEHIk>

Also

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2010/jun/04/iran-protest-victim-neda-agha-soltan-film>

Jim Rosenberg http://www.well.com/user/jer/Internet: [redacted]

↑ Index

66. David Dowker
The Alterran Poetry Assemblage
Sat 5 Jun 2010

The Alterran Poetry Assemblage can now only be found at Library and Archives Canada:

http://epe.lac-bac.gc.ca/003/008/099/003008-disclaimer.html?orig=/100/202/300/alterran/index.html

David

[redacted]

*

MACHINE LANGUAGE is available from BookThug:

http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=201002

& SPD:

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781897388518/machine-language.aspx

↑ Index

67. Aldon Nielsen
ALA Photos at Heat Strings Blog
Sat 5 Jun 2010

For pics from this year's ALA in San Francisco, along with a link to the reading by C.S> Giscombe, drop by the Heat Strings Blog:

http://www.calstatela.edu/academic/english/ala2/

--
Aldon L. Nielsen
Kelly Professor of American Literature
Department of English
117 Burrowes Building
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA
16802-6200

[redacted]

sailing the blogosphere at http://heatstrings.blogspot.com

"kindling his mind (more
than his mind will kindle)"

--William Carlos Williams, early adopter

↑ Index

68. Aldon Nielsen
ALA in San Francisco - Correction
Sat 5 Jun 2010

Opps -- that link was to the ALA web site.
The link to Heat Strings is:

http://heatstrings.blogspot.com/

--
Aldon L. Nielsen
Kelly Professor of American Literature
Department of English
117 Burrowes Building
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA
16802-6200

[redacted]

sailing the blogosphere at http://heatstrings.blogspot.com

"kindling his mind (more
than his mind will kindle)"

--William Carlos Williams, early adopter

↑ Index

69. Jeffrey Side
Two poems in Jacket
Sun 6 Jun 2010

Two poems in Jacket:

http://www.jacketmagazine.com/40/side-2-poems.shtml

↑ Index

70. Jake Marmer
Bernstein, Goldsmith, and Saft Gig this Tuesday
Sun 6 Jun 2010

Hi all,

I have the honor of curating this gig - please come and spread the word:

Jewish Art for the New Millennium: Avant-Garde Poetry and Music
Charles Bernstein, Kenneth Goldsmith, and Jamie Saft Curated by Jake Marmer

Tue June 8th, 8:00 pm
Sixth Street Synagogue
325 East 6th (b/n 1st and 2nd Ave)
Cover: $8 (includes a free drink)
RSVP on Facebook: http://www.facebook.com/event.php?eid=125609840793872

Sixth Street Synagogue, Foundation for Jewish Culture, and the Forward present the first in a new series of innovative cultural evenings at Sixth Street Synagogue. The "Jewish Art for the New Millennium" series is aimed to showcase cutting edge Jewish artists, who represent their identity in most original, innovative ways.

The first night features three artists who represent different generations, genres and aesthetics. Multi-instrumentalist musician Jamie Saft, poet Charles Bernstein and writer/poet Kenneth Goldsmith team up for an evening of intellectually provocative words and music as each performs separately and then join forces for conversation.

Charles Bernstein is a rebel voice in the world of poetry and poetic theory. Author of a number of acclaimed poetry collections including this year's "All the Whiskey in Heaven: Selected Poems" (Farrar, Straus, and Giroux). He is Donald T. Regan Professor of English and Comparative Literature at the University of Pennsylvania. For this event, he will be reading from Shadowtime (Green Integer, 2005), his libretto in/on/around/about Walter Benjamin, for an opera by Brian Ferneyhough, which was performed in 2005 at the Lincoln Center Festival (CD from NMC & I-Tunes; more info: http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/shadowtime/.

Kenneth Goldsmith's writing has been called "some of the most exhaustive and beautiful collage work yet produced in poetry" by Publishers Weekly. Goldsmith is the author of ten books of poetry, founding editor of the online archive UbuWeb (ubu.com), and the editor of I'll Be Your Mirror: The Selected Andy Warhol Interviews, which was the basis for the opera, "Trans-Warhol" the same year that an hour-long documentary on his work, "Sucking on Words" premiered. More about Goldsmith can be found at: http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/goldsmith/ and http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kenneth_Goldsmith.

Jamie Saft is a virtuoso pianist, keyboardist, producer, and composer from New York and a mainstay of the Downtown scene. Saft's stylistic versatility, multi-instrumentalist capabilities, and production skills have been featured with The Beastie Boys, Bad Brains, The B-52's, Laurie Anderson, John Zorn, John Adams, Donovan, Bobby Previte, Dave Douglas, Antony and the Johnsons, and scores of other artists. See more of his work here: http://www.jamiesaft.com/.

↑ Index

71. Rachel Loden

Chernoff, Loden, de la Perrière: Moe's in Berkeley this Thursday June 10

Mon 7 Jun 2010

Please come check us out and say hello. . . .

THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 7:30

Poetry Flash at Moe's Books
MAXINE CHERNOFF, RACHEL LODEN & DONNA de la PERRIERE

MOE'S BOOKS, 2476 Telegraph Avenue, Berkeley, [redacted], moesbooks.com.

Parking at the Durant/Channing Garage, one block north of Moe's, just west of Telegraph.

Poetry Flash: [redacted], www.poetryflash.org.

Maxine Chernoff is both a poet and novelist. The Turning is her newest book of poems, praised by Aaron Shurin who says, "Maxine Chernoff's poems are born in the ache of the world in need of itself. Amid the false papers of emptied language, this writing envisions 'a home inside the neutral gleam,' where the heart of the authentic resides." She's published six books of fiction, including Signs of Devotion, which was a New York Times Book Review Notable Book. With Paul Hoover she edits New American Writing, and with him she co-translated Selected Poems of Friedrich Hölderlin, which won the 2009 PEN USA Translation Award.

Rachel Loden's new book of poems is Dick of the Dead, which was a finalist for the California Book Award. A poem from the collection was recently featured in the Washington Post's "Poet's Choice" column, and it has been called "oddly sublime" and "intoxicating" by the Poetry Project Newsletter and "expansive and whimsical" by the Brooklyn Rail. Loden's first book, Hotel Imperium, was one of the San Francisco Chronicle's ten best poetry books of the year. She is the recipient of a Pushcart Prize, an &NOW award, a California Arts Council fellowship, and a grant from the Fund for Poetry.

Donna de la Perrière is the author of True Crime (Talisman House, 2009) and the forthcoming St. Erasure (Talisman House, 2011). The recipient of a 2009 Fund for Poetry award, she teaches in the MFA and undergraduate creative writing programs at California College of the Arts and San Francisco State University, and curates the Bay Area Poetry Marathon reading series at San Francisco's The Lab gallery and performance space.

↑ Index

72. Chad Sweeney

My review in Jacket: Michael Farrell's A Raider's Guide

Mon 7 Jun 2010

I thought this was an interesting book, worth checking out, A Raider's Guide by Australian poet, Michael Farrell. The review just up at Jacket.
Cheers, CS
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-farrell-rb-sweeney.shtml

First paragraph:
Michael Farrellâ€™s A Raiders Guide makes of language a playground of moving parts, of slides and ladders and radio chatter. Farrell composes at the level of the phrase, using parataxis and accretion rather than subordinated sentence structures to build his sonic textures via juxtaposition, non-grammatical fragments, portmanteau, codes, homophonic play, and poliglot disco-balls. The phrases tease at narrative, then refute it, establishing a dizzying surface texture, an experience in reading that rewards participation. Sentences swivel at their hinges, or refract at oblique angles, an effect of rupture reminiscent of William Burroughâ€™s cutups: â€œBefore doing anything too drastic, advertising at the launderette, the sheep wasnâ€™t dead yet.â€ In tone the poems recall the flaneuring Frank Oâ€™Haraâ€™s â€œI do this I do thatâ€ poems, but Farrellâ€™s zones of reference construct language events rather than a mapping of place.

↑ Index

73. Jeffrey Side

The second ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Iron W” by Rich Curtis.

Mon 7 Jun 2010

The second ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œIron Wâ€ by Rich Curtis.

Description:

A series of thirty-five poems composed from found text. The found source material was a copy of the book Ironweed, by William Kennedy, that has been ripped in half, with the half that was attached to the spine of the book being used here.

Available as a free ebook here:

http://stores.lulu.com/store.php?fAcctID=36590601

↑ Index

74. amy king

TOMORROW -- Poets for Living Waters Action--World Ocean Day -- Tues, June 8th @ Unnameable Books

Mon 7 Jun 2010

Poets for Living Waters Action -- In Honor of WORLD OCEAN DAY
Tuesday, June 8th @ 7 p.m. Unnameable Books
600 Vanderbilt Ave (between Dean St & St Marks Ave)
Brooklyn, NY 11238
Trains -- 7th Ave (Q, B) // Grand Army Plaza (2, 3) // Clinton-Washington Aves (C) Readings from Poets for Living Waters and of work by Leslie Scalapino, Muriel Rukeyser, and Lorine Niedecker http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/ Poets included are BEYER, BOZICEVIC, BROLASKI, COOLEY, IIJIMA, KING and MOHABIR ~~~~~ Tamiko Beyerâ€™s poetry has appeared in The Collagist, Little Red Leaves, Sonora Review, and elsewhere. She serves as the poetry editor of Drunken Boat and leads community writing workshops with the New York Writers Coalition. She is a founding member of Agent 409: a queer, multi-racial writing collective, a Kundiman Fellow, and an M.F.A candidate at Washington University in St. Louis. Find her online at wonderinghome.com and blogging at kenyonreview.org. Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ was born in Zagreb, Croatia in 1977. She emigrated to NYC in 1997. Her first book of poems is Stars of the Night Commute (Tarpaulin Sky Press, November 2009), a Lambda Literary Award finalist. Her fifth chapbook, Depth Hoar, will be published by Cinematheque Press in 2010. With Amy King, Ana co-curates The Stain of Poetry reading series in Brooklyn. She works at the Center for the Humanities of The Graduate Center, CUNY. Julian T. Brolaski is the recent editor of NO GENDER: Reflections on the Life & Work of kari edwards with erica kaufman and E. Tracy Grinnell (Litmus Press 2009), and author of the chapbook A Buck in a Corridor (flynpyntar 2008/9), gowanus atropolis (forthcoming, Ugly Duckling 2011) and Advice for Lovers (forthcoming, City Lights 2011). Brolaski lives in Brooklyn where xe is an editor at Litmus Press, curates vaudeville shows and plays country music with The Low & the Lonesome. New work is on the blog hermofwarsaw and @juandenowherr. Nicole Cooley grew up in New Orleans. These poems are from her collection, Breach, just published by Louisiana State University Press that focuses on Hurricane Katrina and its aftermath. Her fourth book of poems Milk Dress will appear with Alice James Books this November. She has published two other books of poems and a novel. She directs the new MFA Program in Creative Writing and Literary Translation at Queens College-City University of New York. Brenda Iijimaâ€™s books include revv. youâ€™llâ€”ution (Displaced Press), If Not Metamorphic (Ahsahta Press), Animate, Inanimate Aims (Litmus Press) and Around Sea (O

Books). At present, she is writing an informal encyclopedia on animals used as surrogates by humans. She runs Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs (http://yoyolabs.com) from Prospect Heights, Brooklyn. Amy King's most recent book is Slaves to Do These Things (Blazevox), and forthcoming, I Want to Make You Safe (Litmus Press). She is currently preparing a book of interviews with the poet Ron Padgett. She also teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. With Ana Bozicevic, King co-curates the Brooklyn-based reading series, The Stain of Poetry. For more information, please visit http://amyking.org. Rajiv Mohabir teaches English as a Second Language in Queens, New York, and is currently pursuing an MFA in Creative Writing at Queens College. He is a VONA (Voices of Our Nations Arts Foundation) alumnus. Rajiv's poems have appeared in Trikone, EOAGH, Ghoti, and Saw Palm magazines. Pudding House Press named him a "Poet of Note" in their 2009 chapbook competition and published his chapbook nabad-eye me in 2010. http://poetsforlivingwaters.com/ http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/ PLEASE FORWARD - Thank you!

↑ Index

75. amy king

Poets for Living Waters -- New Poems and Eco-Statements Up by ....

Mon 7 Jun 2010

BROOKS HAXTON  ANGELA SORBY  T. CLAYTON WOOD  RON SILLIMAN  TAMIKO BEYER  JUDITH BARRINGTON  JAMES WAGNER  JULIAN T. BROLASKI  LISANNE THOMPSON  JAN HELLER LEVI  SAM SCHILD  ALISON PELEGRIN  STEPHANIE STRICKLAND  CYNTHIA LAWSON JARAMILLO  PAUL RYAN  NICOLE COOLEY  RODRIGO TOSCANO  JOSEPH P. WOOD  GORDON MASSMAN  TARA BETTS  FADY JOUDAH  PHILIP METRES  JEFF NEWBERRY  KIRSTEN KASCHOCK  PATRICK DURGIN  ALICIA OSTRIKER  CARLY SACHS  KATE SCHAPIRA  BILL MARSH  EVIE SHOCKLEY and FRANZ WRIGHT

Poets for Living Waters is a poetry action in response to the BP oil disaster in the Gulf of Mexico begun on April 20, 2010, one of the most profound human-made ecological catastrophes in history. Former US poet laureate Robert Pinsky describes the popularity of poetry after 9/11 as a turn away from the disasterâ€™s overwhelming enormity to a more manageable individual scale. As we confront the magnitude of this recent tragedy, such a return may well aid us.

The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity suggests a wide range of poetry will offer a meaningful response to the current crisis, including work that harkens back to Hurricane Katrina and the ongoing regional effects.

This online periodical is the first in a planned series of actions. Further actions will include a print anthology and a public reading in Washington DC.

If you would like to submit work for consideration, please send 1-3 poems, a short bio, and credits for any previously published submissions to -- [redacted].

Editors: Amy King & Heidi Lynn Staples http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

↑ Index

76. Jared Schickling
poets for poets for living waters?
Mon 7 Jun 2010

---

apologies for sending twice, forgot to sign ---

poets for poets for living waters?
I've been biting my tongue on this one,
wondering—how does this "poets for living waters" project function in relation to the Gulf disaster? (disclaimer, I sent poems to the project two weeks ago and haven't heard back) How does the project participate in this defining moment of human history, to be regarded or remembered or not as such? From all appearances this is a juried, refereed, and star-studded cast, even solicited. I've counted 39 published poets so far, "features" and the lesser "open mics." I suspect the response to the call for work has been more than modest, with 371

Facebook "likes" already, though, of course, I could be wrong. 39 voices, chosen, as, ostensibly, representative, appropriate, "good," something—as a poetic project, fine. But as the event itself, which in itself is not, mmmm, poetry, but so much more, so far beyond? If this poetic project is meant to be an adaptation to it, a profound it, then why is it forced to occur according to certain standards of certain typical poetic projects? Why is the project so predictable when the enormity of the otherworldly stupidity and

all too worldly impacts all bound up with the gaping hole?
Whatever thoughts on Poets Against the War,

for example, as an ongoing response, it has the virtue of inclusion going for
it, as do the events necessitating it.
The initial print volume was vast and varied to the point of blur
and impotence, perhaps, and the barely selective online venue furthers this pathetic end (I'm not deriding this here—its structure seems appropriate to the task). To the point that the irony in the title makes sense—how do you call something like it at a time like
it
"poets" "against" anything? How pathetic! More accurate, and a little less charged, then, would be "poetry" against…

I guess, my question, what will be the actual produce from
"poets for living waters?" What opportunity is it truly presenting, or realizing, "for" whom and for what?

Jared

_____ The New Busy
is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?
ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

77. Jeffrey Side

The third ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "How to Live a Life" by Martin Stannard.

Mon 7 Jun 2010

The third ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œHow to Live a Lifeâ€ by Martin Stannard.
Description:
As may be inferred from the title, this poem by Martin Stannard is published in the hope that it will assist the complete idiot to understand the basic problems of living a life, and also help him or her to overcome them.
Available as a free ebook here:
http://stores.lulu.com/store.php?fAcctID=36590601

↑ Index

78. Jonathan Morse

Jonathan Morse blogs about fur, food, and desire

Tue 8 Jun 2010

---

at http://jonathan-morse.blogspot.com/2010/06/aspiration-things-help-us-visualize.html

↑ Index

79. Fluffy Singler

New blogs

Tue 8 Jun 2010

I'm terrible about remembering to do this, but I have been writing my little heart out and I have several new blogs, including:

Qwest Bundling: For Misfits and Psychopaths (funny)

Gulf Requiem - poem (not funny)

BP, Boycotts and the American Lifestyle (not funny)

On non-sense poetry and spoken word (semi-sensical and rambling as always) (Unintentionally funny)

http://fluffysingler.blogspot.com/

Fluffy

↑ Index

80. Bob Heman

11th BIG CLWN WR EVENT - JUNE 18th - Westbeth

Tue 8 Jun 2010

11th Big CLWN WR Event

Friday, June 18, 2010
7:00-10:00 P.M.

Westbeth Community Room
155 Bank Street / 57 Bethune St.
NYC

FREE ADMISSION!!!

featuring
Basil King
&
Liza Wolsky

with special performances by
R. Nemo Hill, Evie Ivy, Judy Kamilhor, Elinor Nauen, Carolyn Ota, Adriana Scopino,
Moira T. Smith, George Spencer, Phyllis Wat, Nathan Whiting & Christina Robson

& a special treat from Mindy Levokove

hosted by Bob Heman, editor of CLWN WR
&
The Westbeth Artists Residents Council Literary Arts Committee

Westbeth is an artists' housing complex in the far West Village convenient to the 14th St. stop on the A, C and E trains, the West 4th Street stop on the A, C, E, B, D & F trains, and the Christopher St. stop on the 1 train. 57 Bethune St. is mid-block b/w Washington and West Streets, then up steps to inner courtyard. 155 Bank St. is mid-block b/w Washington and West Streets, enter outer courtyard and up ramp to inner courtyard.

↑ Index

81. amy king
poets for poets for living waters?
Tue 8 Jun 2010

We've been up and running for exactly two weeks, since May 25th Jared,

We've been up and running for exactly two weeks, since May 25th (two Tuesdays ago). Poems continue to be posted daily with no end-date scheduled.

I'm sorry you don't think writing poetry in response to this disaster is a worthwhile enterprise. Perhaps you could write to your senator instead:

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS -- ACTION

Pressure your senators to pass Obama's new Clean Energy Bill too!

EMAIL YOUR SENATORS HERE - TAKES LESS THAN TWO MINUTES - Just enter your Zip Code and send -- http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

~~~

WHAT I WROTE (Cut and Paste or Edit) -- Support the Clean Energy Act

Dear Representatives Schumer and Gillibrand: The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. People as well as animals depend on a healthy balance of the ecosystem for survival. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity requires a meaningful response to the current crisis.
~~~

As we watch the recent BP disaster unfold and the effects make their way into our own Atlantic ocean, it is becoming ever-more clear that protected waters are more imperative than ever. The House has passed an energy bill already but legislation has stalled in the Senate. I strongly urge you to let your senators know -- right now -- that enough is enough! President Obama notes, "The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future." Don't give Big Oil and Dirty Coal a bailout. Please support this bill and protect our chance to build a clean energy future. Iâ€™ll leave you with the words of Thomas Fuller, â€œWe never know the worth of water till the well is dry.â€ Please help with this project so that future generations donâ€™t remember us for the wrong reasons. Thanks for your time and thoughtfulnessâ€”the clock is not stopping, neither should we. Sincerely, http://www.congress.org/soapbox/alert/15111301

OR you could attend one of the many readings organized and scheduled for World Ocean Day across the U.S. today - http://www.facebook.com/pages/Poets-for-Living-Waters/122504444439606

Further, the word "against" is not located in the title or description:

"Poets for Living Waters is a poetry action in response to the BP oil disaster in the Gulf of Mexico begun on April 20, 2010, one of the most profound human-made ecological catastrophes in history. The first law of ecology states that everything is connected to everything else. An appreciation of this systemic connectivity suggests a wide range of poetry will offer a meaningful response to the current crisis, including work that harkens back to Hurricane Katrina and the ongoing regional effects.

This online periodical is the first in a planned series of actions. Further actions will include a print anthology and a public reading in Washington DC.

Please submit 1-3 poems, a short bio, and credits for any previously published submissions to -- [redacted]"

Best,

Amy

http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

↑ Index

82. amy king

TONIGHT -- Poets for Living Waters Action -- World Ocean Day -- Tues, June 8th @ Unnameable Books

Tue 8 Jun 2010

Poets for Living Waters Action -- In Honor of WORLD OCEAN DAY Tuesday, June 8th @ 7 p.m.

Unnameable Books
600 Vanderbilt Ave (between Dean St & St Marks Ave)
Brooklyn, NY 11238
Trains -- 7th Ave (Q, B) // Grand Army Plaza (2, 3) // Clinton-Washington Aves (C)

Readings from Poets for Living Waters and of work by Leslie Scalapino, Muriel Rukeyser, and Lorine Niedecker http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

Poets included are BEYER, BOZICEVIC, BROLASKI, COOLEY, IIJIMA, KING, LEVITSKY and MOHABIR

~~~~~

Tamiko Beyerâ€™s poetry has appeared in The Collagist, Little Red Leaves, Sonora Review, and elsewhere. She serves as the poetry editor of Drunken Boat and leads community writing workshops with the New York Writers Coalition. She is a founding member of Agent 409: a queer, multi-racial writing collective, a Kundiman Fellow, and an M.F.A candidate at Washington University in St. Louis. Find her online at wonderinghome.com and blogging at kenyonreview.org.

Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ was born in Zagreb, Croatia in 1977. She emigrated to NYC in 1997. Her first book of poems is Stars of the Night Commute (Tarpaulin Sky Press, November 2009), a Lambda Literary Award finalist. Her fifth chapbook, Depth Hoar, will be published by Cinematheque Press in 2010. With Amy King, Ana co-curates The Stain of Poetry reading series in Brooklyn. She works at the Center for the Humanities of The Graduate Center, CUNY.

Julian T. Brolaski is the recent editor of NO GENDER: Reflections on the Life & Work of kari edwards with erica kaufman and E. Tracy Grinnell (Litmus Press 2009), and author of the chapbook A Buck in a Corridor (flynpyntar 2008/9), gowanus atropolis (forthcoming, Ugly Duckling 2011) and Advice for Lovers (forthcoming, City Lights 2011). Brolaski lives in Brooklyn where xe is an editor at Litmus Press, curates vaudeville shows and plays country music with The Low & the Lonesome. New work is on the blog hermofwarsaw and @juandenowherr.
~~~~~

Nicole Cooley grew up in New Orleans. These poems are from her collection, Breach, just published by Louisiana State University Press that focuses on Hurricane Katrina and its aftermath. Her fourth book of poems Milk Dress will appear with Alice James Books this November. She has published two other books of poems and a novel. She directs the new MFA Program in Creative Writing and Literary Translation at Queens College-City University of New York.

Brenda Iijimaâ€™s books include revv. youâ€™llâ€”ution (Displaced Press), If Not Metamorphic (Ahsahta Press), Animate, Inanimate Aims (Litmus Press) and Around Sea (O Books). At present, she is writing an informal encyclopedia on animals used as surrogates by humans. She runs Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs (http://yoyolabs.com) from Prospect Heights, Brooklyn.

Amy King's most recent book is Slaves to Do These Things (Blazevox), and forthcoming, I Want to Make You Safe (Litmus Press). She is currently preparing a book of interviews with the poet Ron Padgett. She also teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. With Ana Bozicevic, King co-curates the Brooklyn-based reading series, The Stain of Poetry. For more information, please visit http://amyking.org.

Rachel Levitsky is, most recently, the author of the Delete Press chapbook, Renoemos. Her full length book NEIGHBOR, was published by Ugly Duckling Presse in 2009. A novel, The Story of My Accident is Ours will soon be published by Futurepoem. Four mini-essays on The Poetics of Confinement are online at http://poetryproject.org/tag/rachel-levitsky. She teaches Writing and Literature at Naropa Universityâ€™s Summer Writing Program, Bard Prison Initiative and Pratt Institute. She co-curates Belladonna Series--an exploration of feminist avant-garde writing.

Rajiv Mohabir teaches English as a Second Language in Queens, New York, and is currently pursuing an MFA in Creative Writing at Queens College. He is a VONA (Voices of Our Nations Arts Foundation) alumnus. Rajiv's poems have appeared in Trikone, EOAGH, Ghoti, and Saw Palm magazines. Pudding House Press named him a "Poet of Note" in their 2009 chapbook competition and published his chapbook nabad-eye me in 2010.

http://poetsforlivingwaters.com/
http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

Readings in other states listed on our Facebook page -- http://www.facebook.com/pages/Poets-for-Living-Waters/122504444439606

PLEASE FORWARD - Thank you!

~~~~~~~
~~~~~~~

↑ Index

83. Christophe Casamassima

Add your link to the new furniture press books site

Tue 8 Jun 2010

If you'd like to be included in the links page of furniturepressbooks.com, please send me a link and a short description of the site.

Thanks!

Christophe Casamassima

↑ Index

84. Mitch Taylor

MUTHAFUCKA TWO: NEW POETRY + ART

Tue 8 Jun 2010

The second issue of MUTHAFUCKA, an irregular
Dear Readers + Writers +

The second issue of MUTHAFUCKA, an irregular, locationless journal of the arts, is now available. Featuring:

Poems by Alice Notley, Dot Devota, Phil Cordelli, Norma Cole, Quinn Latimer, Matthew Klane, Hoa Nguyen, Lucas Farrell, Lisa Lightsey, Lewis Warsh, Ron Horning, Caitie Moore, Thom Donovan, Trey Sager, Brenda Iijima, Youna Kwak, Karena Youtz and Etel Adnan. Translations of Angel Escobar (by Kristin Dykstra), Mohammed Khair-Eddine (by Pierre Joris), Kazuko Shiraishi (by Tomoyuki Endo and Forrest Gander), Michel Deguy (by Wilson Baldridge) and Amelia Rosselli (by Vanja Skoric Dewan and Deborah Woodard). A drum score by John Niekrasz. Collages by Sarah Lariviere. A two-channel installation by Anthony Hawley. Cover art by Sam King.

Edited by Mitch Taylor.
Side-stapled with two-layer transparency/cardstock cover. 120 pages. 100 copies. $10.

Available
here! The first issue (2009) is available here. Please join us, and thank you!

Mitch Taylor
editor, Muthafucka
Muthafacebook

↑ Index

85. David Chirot

Re: poets for poets for living waters?

Tue 8 Jun 2010

Dear Jared & Everyone:

still recovering from an operation so am a bit behind on email--though have followed this the last few days--

"poets for living waters"--

i thought immediately also of another assault on "living waters"-- the Israeli commando attack on a humanitarian aid flotilla in International Waters-- when the starving people of Somalia, whose coastline for fishing is toxic, being used as an international waste dump for the powerful-- attack a ship, they are called "pirates"-- their country being of course "linked to terrorism" also in the eyes of the usa--

of course, when humanitarian aid workers are attacked in international Waters by state commandos-- they must be "terrorists" too--

the "living waters"--
whose "living waters?"--

think how each day, "living waters," beings, humans, reefs, plants, ways of life, rivers, streams, ponds, lakes, puddles, rain drops--are killed off by toxic dumping, toxic oil and toxic anti-humanitarianism--

the "living waters" --think on all the "living" and dying waters of the world-- and of how many ways they are made toxic-

all the poets of the world need "living waters"--

without "living waters" --
for all--
there won't be "living poets"--

nor poems for "living waters"--

that's my non-poem--

david-bc

On Mon, Jun 7, 2010 at 5:45 PM, Jared Schickling <[redacted]>wrote:

> apologies for sending twice, forgot to sign ---
>
> poets for poets for living waters?
> I've been biting my tongue on this one,

wondering—how does
this "poets for living waters" project function in relation to the Gulf disaster? (disclaimer, I sent poems to the project two weeks ago and haven't heard back) How does the project participate in this defining moment of human history, to be regarded or remembered or not as such? From all appearances this is a juried,

refereed, and star-studded cast, even solicited. I've counted 39 published poets so far, "features" and the lesser "open mics." I suspect the response to the call for work has been more than modest, with 371

Facebook "likes" already, though, of course, I could be wrong. 39 voices, chosen, as, ostensibly,
representative, appropriate, "good," something—as a poetic project, fine. But as the event itself, which in itself is not, mmmm, poetry, but so much more, so far beyond? If this poetic project is meant to be an adaptation to it, a profound it, then why is it forced to occur according to certain

standards of certain typical poetic projects? Why is the project so predictable when the enormity of the otherworldly
stupidity and
all too worldly impacts all bound up with the gaping hole?
Whatever thoughts on Poets Against the War,
for example, as an ongoing response, it has the virtue of inclusion
going for
it, as do the events necessitating it.
The initial print volume was vast and varied to the point of blur
and impotence, perhaps, and the barely selective online venue furthers this pathetic end (I'm not deriding this here—its structure seems appropriate
to the task). To the point that the irony in the title makes sense—how do you call something like it at a time like
it
"poets" "against" anything? How pathetic! More accurate, and a little less charged, then, would be "poetry" against…

I guess, my question, what will be the actual
produce from
"poets for living waters?" What opportunity > is it truly presenting, or realizing, "for" whom and for what?

>
> Jared
>
> ---
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

86. Francesco Levato

Redletter Reading Series: Francesco Levato, June 18th

Tue 8 Jun 2010

Redletter Reading Series
June 18, 2010, 7pm
Featuring a reading of new poetry and translations by Francesco Levato.

Woodland Pattern Book Center
720 East Locust Street
Milwaukee, WI 53216

Poet, translator, and new media artist Francesco Levato is the author of three books of poetry: "Elegy for Dead Languages;" "War Rug," a book length documentary poem; and "Marginal State." He has translated into English the books of Italian poets Tiziano Fratus, "Creaturing," and Fabiano Alborghetti, "The Opposite Shore." His work has been published internationally in journals and anthologies, both in print and online, including "Drunken Boat," "The Progressive," "Versal," and many others. His cinépoetry has been exhibited in galleries and featured at film festivals in Berlin, Chicago, New York, and elsewhere.

Redletter is a reading series featuring local and regional poets and writers on the third Friday of each month, and is curated by Chuck Stebelton. The program begins at 7pm with an open mic hosted by Melissa Czarnik, followed by one or two featured readers. The cost is $3, or $2 for open mic readers.

Directions:
http://www.woodlandpattern.org/about_us/where_when.shtml

More information:
http://www.woodlandpattern.org/gallery/redletter.shtml

↑ Index

87. Alan Sondheim

Oil, our pasts

Wed 9 Jun 2010

Oil, our pasts

Our battles and our contemporaries are doomed, in twenty years, we will hardly be memories or pioneers.

These animals are instruments of oil, collapsing in the debris of other lives which had given birth to them.

Hopeless this technology, despair is hopeless, death hopeless, life hopeless, above all life is hopeless.

Hopeless life must be lived until it is no longer present at life, hopeless death, in twenty years or among many pasts.

Hopeless the pasts unaccounted for, in ten years who among us shall meet or come into their own among others already forgotten.

Our worlds are already gone, gone the battles of pasts, gone the futures, our mouths full of worlds already gone, past lives ...

http://www.alansondheim.org/oil.mov

On this vista the curtain may be drawn. Neither poet nor seer can look beyond. Nature, who is unconscious in her immorality, entrancing in her beauty, savage in her cruelty, imperial in her prodigiality, and appalling in her convulsions, is not only deaf, but dumb. There is no answer to any appeal. The best we can do, the best that has ever been done, is to recognize the implaca- bility of the laws that rule the universe, and contemplate as calmly as we can the nothingness from which we are come and into which we shall all disappear. The one consolation that we hold, though it is one which may be illusory too, consists in the belief that when death comes, fear and hope are at an end. Then wonder ceases; the insoluble no longer perplexes; space is lost; the infinite is blank; the farce is done.*

Their agony, their dying breaths, their inconceivable twisting, in thirty years, none will remember us among emptied halls, what suns, what lights, what glories already gone among them

*Edgar Saltus, The Anatomy of Negation, 1889.

↑ Index

88. Nic Sebastian
Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Cati Porter
Wed 9 Jun 2010

Cati Porter responds this week to Ten Questions on Poets and Technology - http://bit.ly/c0lj5W.
Best wishes,
Nic Sebastianhttp://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

89. amy king
Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forward)
Wed 9 Jun 2010

In the face of an unprecedented ecological disaster with
Dear Jared,

In the face of an unprecedented ecological disaster with ongoing likely-to-be-global catastrophic consequences, Amy King and I have turned to poetry. We have called for people to write poems. Thousands of people have done just that, and we have published those poems. We have also called for people to organize poetry readings. People around the world have done just that, and we have too. But 500,000+ gallons of oil a day roil into the Gulf of Mexico choking marshes and bays, with coastlines destroyed and economies wrecked, and in response--poems? You want to know what the poetry will produce. You bring up a reasonable question, and I think you do so in a fair enough way. You refrain from personal attack. You feel the same outrage and genuine concern about the escalating disaster, I think, that most of us feel.

Let me decline the opportunity to outline the documented relevance of poetry for therapeutic purposes in grief work or assert the need to shape cultural consciousness through the collection of historical documentation recording marginalized voices and, instead, explore the possibilities of concurring with your implied accusation. In the effort to stop the slow and pointless and avoidable (though now increasingly unavoidable) death of a 300 million year old richly diverse ecosystem, a demise perpetrated by an indifferent, corrupt, and even sinister global power, a death within a larger systemic crisis already underway in the oceans, the Poets for Living Waters project is useless.

I embrace this uselessness. It is my only hope. I think the demand that an activity have a use is endemic to the thinking behind our current ecological crisis. The expectation that a poem be of use, that a person be of use, that one's life be of use or have a purpose--is an expression of the assumption that all the rest of the natural world is to be of use. This is basically the â€˜instrumental viewâ€™ we have inherited from the Greeks and Judeo-Christian thoughtâ€”the instrumental view ecologists pretty much all agree bears fundamental responsibility for this current mass extinction, this heartbreak era of ecocide.

At a candlelight vigil on World Ocean Day, which I attended on the Gulf of Mexico in Santa Rosa Beach, Florida, desperate folks talked about making changes to reduce their carbon footprintsâ€”putting timers on their hot water heaters, carpooling, lobbying for clean energyâ€”all reasonable enough intentions. But others implied and I would argue the problem is, at least partly, much more basic. The problem is located in our assumption of what our lives mean or rather that they mean. We want meaningful lives. We strive for bigger, better, more abundant lives full of evidence that we have in fact been useful, purposeful, day-planner-packed alive, have improved on the lots of our forebearers. In this mode, weâ€™ll keep demanding the energy reserves to get us all those important places we need to be. And companies will keep drilling to get the energy we buy. What if instead we accept our lives as meaningless? What if we collectively ask how we can be radically useless? What if instead of purposeful lives, we simply appreciate, engage, value, and insist on shared access to the joy offered by a sensorial conversation with our fellow transient creatures in a living world?

We are ourselves each a living world. Poetry can teach us this. And it is the news without which many die everyday. We are also ourselves each a world used instrumentally. Poetry can teach us this too. Alice Notley says, â€œIâ€™m, weâ€™re, the flower of suppression. / Much of one is suppressed / towards being another kind of one / other colors, petal arrangements, scents / you can only have one scent.â€ I believe Notley is describing the way in which we literally embody the forces that quantify and objectify the world, turning natural processes into human products.

Notley is describing the way in which our entire mind/body system, including both our conscious and unconscious minds, are shaped for the purposes of economic forces. When we are suppressed, our conscious mind is shut off from our unconscious, in a culture privileging a mode of quantifiably productive thought for which we receive wages. Most unconscious material is drowned out while also being reconstituted by a daily torrent of profit motivated mass media. This torrent keeps us unconsciously motivated to behave in ways that produce profits for others. Importantly, our unconscious is most exploitable when its processes are kept hidden through their devaluation and through our profound dissociation from sensorial engagement.

We could perhaps reclaim our lives from the forces that use them as resources for profit. How much time do we spend consciously conversing with our unconscious, challenging our mind's collection of profit-motive materials, cultivating a healthy consciousness? How often do we bridge the two parts of our minds and our bodies? Generally speaking, Iâ€™d guess the majority of US citizens simply do not consciously bridge these two parts on a daily basis at all and spend a large chunk of time dissociated from their immediate surroudings. Gregory Bateson has described poetry as a bridge between the conscious and unconscious parts of the mind, helping to give voice to our nondirective, nonpurposive modes of thought. What if everyone wasted an hour a day writing pointless poems?

Perhaps it's fair to say that a nonpurposive mode needs much more emphasis in order to stop the work ethic and belief in growth that are destroying the planet. Jed Rasula in an interview recently published in Brenda Iijimaâ€™s) ((eco(lang(uage) (reader)) proposes not attempting activism that aims to take down a monolith like BP but instead thinking of activism as â€œa series of transient occasions.â€ I like this idea. What I understand Rasula to imply is that our very embrace of transience is itself activism. I also think he points to a systemic model of change, suggesting that the local chemical reactions of an event unfold within the larger system, evolving into changes not perceived or foreseen by the individuals local to the event. Itâ€™s also a profoundly nonheroic model.

I do think we want to examine what sort of systemic reactions any of our actions might be likely generating. With respect to the online anthology, these poems seem to be facilitating grief work, and they are arriving in from diverse enough quarters to serve as part of the historical record. But that work is not the purpose of the site. It is a generative outgrowth. The larger project claims to â€˜create venues for poetry in support of healthy ocean communitiesâ€™. That is a use. The venues function to distribute the poetry. But, to repeat your question, what does all this poetry produce? Even though I would enjoy and likely learn from exploring how poetry plays a role in the evolution of meaning-making through the creation of new contexts, I'd rather for the moment agree poetry makes nothing happen. I hope that Iâ€™ve suggested that the Poets for Living Waters project, in part by its promotion of the useless, is potentially an effective agent for change.

All the erring quest,

Heidi Lynn Staples

↑ Index

90. Jeffrey Side
The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Moisture Surges" by Francis Raven.
Wed 9 Jun 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Moisture Surges" by Francis Raven.

Description:
"Moisture Surges" by Francis Raven is a book of poems about water. There are three main sections divided by two conversations/plays and book-ended by a prologue and an appendix. The three main sections are: (1) a section on the metaphysics of water, (2) a section on the biology and life of water and (3) a section on human's interaction with water. The prologue is a sonnet and the appendix includes resources about water. The two conversations/plays that break up the main sections are: (1) a play about the water shortage in the west that alludes to Plato's â€œApologyâ€ and (2) a roundtable conversation with real philosophers on a possible philosophy of water.
Available as a free ebook here:
http://stores.lulu.com/store.php?fAcctID=36590601

↑ Index

91. CA Conrad
POETS FOR LIVING WATERS
Wed 9 Jun 2010

A BIG THANK YOU for inspiring our LORINE NIEDECKER event yesterday in Philadelphia.

Details with links and pics are here: http://UrchinPoetry.blogspot.com

CAConrad

JULY 11th (Soma)tic Poetry Workshop details at: http://myforehead.blogspot.com/

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

92. Jared Schickling
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Wed 9 Jun 2010

Amy,

Write to your senators—and reps, state folk, convince dad and sis, etc and et al—yes, indeed, here and elsewhere.

Also, that there is no “against” in the title or description—unwritten, but heard—how to be “for” something but not against something?

Otherwise you’re misconstruing what I said. Red herring. “I’m sorry you don’t think writing poetry in response to this disaster is a worthwhile enterprise.” That’s not it, at all. Factually wrong. (Though, I don’t really begin with whether or not it’s worthwhile; practicing poetry ain’t my choice, and poet must respond; after that…) “An appreciation of this systemic connectivity suggests a wide range of poetry will offer a meaningful response to the current crisis.” How does the project constitute a meaningful response? I’m hard-pressed to see that—it’s my honest question, not conviction. Invoking the fact of connectivity doesn’t mean the connected thing is or will be of healthful connection. I mean, I understand the impulse, the need for poetry to respond. Yes. My question is, how does the structure of the standard submission review curatorial etc. process for a poetry journal lead to something actually useful in response to now’s material and paradigmatic catastrophe(s)? How does the channeling of the event through (for the sake of?) this aesthetic space turn the necessary attention away, finally, from poets, poetics, and poems, toward the thing itself? Rather, does/will the opposite occur? If so what’s the problem with that? Does the thing present an opportunity for poets—what is the opportunity, choices? Are certain familiar approaches to poetic production bound to certain ruinous ways of thinking and living? How do poetry communities and practitioners increasingly contribute to the increasingly destructive power and inevitability called capital? My honest question, how does Poets For Living Waters, in its form, not partake of the whole system of capitalist imperative and production? How is the project, beyond what it admirably desires to be, “for” water—or earth, air—and not “for” water-earth-air-for-poems (or worse, poets)? If the project attempts an honest response to the need and problem of poetry responding, then these questions seem more than specialized quibbling over Poetry in the face of ( ).

It would be interesting, and useful, if there were a rubric for measuring the actual long-term impacts of this project, and others, against desired outcomes.

Sincerely,

Jared

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?
ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

93. Susan Webster Schultz
new on Tinfish Editor's Blog
Wed 9 Jun 2010

The Tinfish Editor's blog has been given over recently to dementia blogging, which is (alas) not without its poetry. See the last three or four entries at http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com

best wishes to everyone

Susan M. Schultz purveyor

↑ Index

94. Laura Hinton
Re: Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forward)
Wed 9 Jun 2010

Jared writes:

*I guess, my question, what will be the actual
produce from “poets for living waters?” What opportunity is it truly presenting, or realizing, "for" whom and for what?*

I think these are important questions. What do we produce, what "produce" is "made" by our efforts? Does it come down to form?

Because I also think that what Heidi Lynn Staples implies in her argument below, especially in her reference to Notley's words, effectively suggests that "poetry" -- in its most refreshing and opening up -- of the language of the brain? -- can behave like an organism that resists the current world's toxicity, in an ironic turning of the physics and matter involved (now floating in the Gulf of Mexico and perhaps on its way by now up the northern Atlantic via the Gulf Stream...).

Heidi eloquently writes that all is connected, and (in reference to Notley), that poetry is perhaps:

the way in which we literally embody the forces that quantify and objectify the world, turning natural processes into human products.

The questioning of use / use value / the capital-corporate model is important in Heidi's written defense of these Poets / Living Waters political-poetic events. Maybe language comes first. Then, the corporation. So -- does it make sense to turn ourselves back to the deep structure of the language? To renew it, reinvigorate it, with new language, new thought -- as means to critique the current culture of damage and greed?

But do we not, as poets, and or intellectuals, and/or feminists / environmentalists, too often find ourselves relying upon the same language, the same principles, that the corporate-style model is the most overt manifestation of? -- when we host "events" on behalf of what is essentially a consciousness-raising effort but it becomes too exclusive and/or a plug for our own work? By this, I mean in that we kow-tow to the designs of hierarchy, the premise of non-inclusion.

I got the call we all got here on Poetics Lists a couple of weeks ago to volunteer to be involved in this particular NYC event; I immediately backchanneled and offered to help. I received no answer back. I would have loved to have been involved in any way possible, including arranging chairs. But I never heard back. Perhaps this is just a blip? Perhaps everyone else who backchanneled was responded to?

But I, at least, become a bit concerned when I get the final announcement replete with poet bios, that the event wasn't created out of a sincere, truly collective spirit.

Part of the corporate "use" model and promulgated now on Facebook plugs is plugging one's own career. We all can use that model -- we live in the world of "social networking." But when it comes to the Gulf spill, such a horrific tragedy and loss of life (non-homo-sapiens sapiens, but perhaps just at the moment), I agree with Jared: I wonder what this will "produce".

To CHANGE that model, we need to reach out -- beyond the comfort of our own shores. And our own small tributaries. Waters expand the globe. Perhaps just a call for everyone to show up would be a better way to build a movement of poets against the war on the environment. A powerful show-up, a real poetry-protest.

I do believe that poetry -- its reading, its teaching, its writing, rereading -- can help us do something different, to heal ourselves and our ways. But we have to listen.

This is my opinion.
Laura

--
Laura Hinton
Professor of English
City College of New York

138 at Convent Ave.
New York, New York 10031

http://www.mermaidtenementpress.com
http://www.chantdelasirene.com

↑ Index

95. amy king

New Reviews @ Jacket and @ Wet Asphalt

Wed 9 Jun 2010

"...ultimately what I think King is concerned with here is the nature of becoming by moving against time as a sort of point of resistance, what she is not interested in is sustaining such artificial constructs as the Master Slave dialectic itself, or of the notion of dialectical development altogether. Rather, in reading this book, what I have the sense of is an attempt to collapse all such structures as inherently stultifying. King repeatedly invokes inversions of typical imagery that could be read in such a manner, for example making "gods from the dust." And she is clearly aware as she works that there will be those readers who will try to fit her work into such a mode. Some of what she writes even seems like a direct challenge to such an attempt, at one point again returning to the notion of theft and calling "language the arm of behavior" again not so much collapsing thesis and antithesis, but denying that relationship from first principles..."

--Continued at Wet Asphalt
http://www.wetasphalt.com/content/happy-fact-amy-kings-slaves-do-these-things

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

"Amy Kingâ€™s poems are dense and energetically written. They are often fragmented collages of narratives which are in no way narratives in the usual sense. They express a great deal of movement of the mind, written with a strong imagination and unexpected twists..."

--Continued at Jacket Magazine
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-king-rb-lurie.shtml

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

THE UGLY AMERICANS

Last night I dreamt Maria Santiago dissolves when she sweeps and stocks a Manhattan bodega, her borrowed whisper lingers on the backs of patrons,

â€¦

--Continued at Jacket Magazine
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/king-amy-americans.shtml

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

↑ Index

96. amy king

Re: Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forward)

Wed 9 Jun 2010

Laura,

First, I never saw your email to participate! I'm sorry, but it did slip through whatever cracks exist. I did, however, receive a few backchannels of interest that I responded to and added people to the "exclusive" list as they expressed interest to read. You and I have certainly corresponded in the past, and I'm not sure why, when you didn't receive a reply, you didn't simply send a second email expressing your interest directly to me. The announcement also was an invitation. Those who emailed me they were attending were asked to bring something to read. I didn't receive an email from you yesterday or Monday; only this one after the fact today.

I was away for a week or so prior but was also checking email on my handheld and threw this "exclusive" list together within the last 48 hours based on those who had expressed interest. Again, I really don't understand this idea that if your email went unreplied to, you assumed you were being ignored instead of simply sending out a second query, especially directly to me since we "virtually" know each other and have corresponded numerous times in the past. You would have been more than welcome to attend, read, organize chairs, hold up signs, heckle, or anything else you felt compelled to do. I recall even forwarded something to Wompo the other day at your bequest, and yet, you didn't mention being "ignored" when you asked me to do that favor. No one "owned" this reading, as is being implied - I simply asked and organized.

Heidi spent hours putting together a sheet of suggestions and advice she sent to everyone offering to organize a reading; she also spent hours corresponding online with those volunteers about the tragedy and what she hoped this kind of action might be like. Last night, I read for two minutes and introduced everyone else, who read for about five to ten minutes. During and after the reading, we all talked about what is happening, how we feel, what might be done, etc. It was a gathering, an open gathering. It felt like such - the tone was in implied as well as overt. Of course, nothing was resolved (do any poetry readings ever resolve anything??), but we came together, not before our tv screens, but in person; we listened and we talked. Others in other states, and in the one you and I are in, took the initiative to organize for World Oceans Day (ours was not the only one in NYC yesterday!). No one forbidden; everyone was encouraged. We parted feeling a mix of emotions, which was better than the usual media effect that leaves the majority of us feeling angry and impotent.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

As for equating such a gathering and our efforts with the site with perpetuating the capitalist model, I don't get it, and yes, am affected by such criticism. It feels like a punch in the gut. Heidi and I are two people reading through submissions for the last two weeks, posting as quickly as we can in between our jobs and family responsibilities. No work has been rejected. We are eager and anxious to post as much as possible during our free time. And we have been on a daily basis, including corresponding with poets sending in work and poets organizing readings elsewhere and announcing their poetry and statements as they go up as best as we can. We feel honored to do this work and are solidly invested in it. We are learning. If others feel like it's not a worthwhile project, they can A) ignore our efforts to give voice and space -- and/or B) create another action according to their own standards. No one owns the license to respond to this tragedy. I've always felt if you don't see something done the way you like, why not do it the way you prefer? I certainly don't rely on the mainstream to give me space and voice; if you see this project that way, why would you? On my end, I find it worthwhile to put some of my efforts into getting folks' poems into the world, especially in the face of a tragedy like this, and I work towards drawing attention to their efforts. That's what we're doing, the best way we can at the moment with the resources, energy and time we have.

No one was banned last night from attending any of the readings across the states, and everyone was welcome to honor World Oceans Day as they desired. Many of us did. You could have just "shown up," as you note! Why not?!

As for plugging my own work, I have done so unabashedly and without apology for a long time now in specific poetry venues like listservs, on my own blog, my Facebook page, etc, whether I'm working on a separate project like this, editing a journal (as I'm currently doing times two at the moment), running a reading series, taking care of family, or just teaching my classes (my students are never instructed to read my work -- and when they discover it, I discourage their interest until the semester ends). Conflating my efforts here with blatant self promotion seems obvious and divisive, at best. My grandma always encouraged her little southern belle towards modesty ("Pretty is as pretty does"), but I never learned that age old lil' lady lesson and have never apologized for such "selfishness!"

Assuming the worst unfortunately seems to be the default setting in this thread. If you want a poetry protest, why not join one of the readings last night? If you see an error, why not offer constructive advice? What model would you use? Are you willing to put something together? Another professor from NYC couldn't attend last night, but wants to organize a reading at her college shortly - you are welcome to do the same! I'd be happy to attend! And for future events, we hope you will participate. If we don't answer the phone, ring again! For the record, everyone is welcome!!

Best,

Amy

----- Original Message ----
From: Laura Hinton <[redacted]>

I got the call we all got here on Poetics Lists a couple of weeks ago to volunteer to be involved in this particular NYC event; I immediately backchanneled and offered to help. I received no answer back. I would have loved to have been involved in any way possible, including arranging chairs. But I never heard back. Perhaps this is just a blip? Perhaps everyone else who backchanneled was responded to?

But I, at least, become a bit concerned when I get the final announcement replete with poet bios, that the event wasn't created out of a sincere, truly collective spirit.

Part of the corporate "use" model and promulgated now on Facebook plugs is plugging one's own career. We all can use that model -- we live in the world of "social networking." But when it comes to the Gulf spill, such a horrific tragedy and loss of life (non-homo-sapiens sapiens, but perhaps just at the moment), I agree with Jared: I wonder what this will "produce".

To CHANGE that model, we need to reach out -- beyond the comfort of our own shores. And our own small tributaries. Waters expand the globe. Perhaps just a call for everyone to show up would be a better way to build a movement of poets against the war on the environment. A powerful show-up, a real poetry-protest.

↑ Index

97. amy king
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Wed 9 Jun 2010

Dear Jared,

I appreciate your concern and challenge.
From Heidi:

Dear Jared,

I appreciate your concern and challenge. I would be genuinely interested in considering specific ideas about how to make this mobilization of poets in response to the crisis meaningful. I would love to consider specific, practical ideas related to the form of events, publication of materials, etc. We are striving to have an open, diverse, wild space. When considering this request for ideas, please keep in mind that as it stands:

1. We publish pretty much everything we receive. Eventually! 2. We celebrate and support all responses to calls for organizers. Anyone who did not hear back probably had their email drop into the ether, which has happened to numerous people. Folks send their materials and then for whatever reason, yahoo drops the mail into the nowhere. If you don't hear from us PLEASE RESEND! We are very concerned about each person who writes and appreciative of their interest. 3. We are not able to give the project the time its urgency would suggest is appropriate. We are volunteers with full demanding lives. For example, I'm still getting organized after an international move late last fall, am studying for comprehensive exams in two weeks, and have a three and a half year old and no local family help. The site receives around 100 emails a week, which add up really fast. Amy was out of town for a few days. Some days I just need to study or else I'll disappear into this disaster and my effort to respond, of which this 'listening', which is how I understand the site, is a part. In my own self interest, I shouldn't really even be writing this email. But I recognize the validity of these concerns and am hoping that by pooling together and streaming apart and flowing together again our resources as a poetry community, we can generate many meaningful responses to this crisis.

Thanks for your interest and the seriousness with which you take poetry.

All the very best wishes,

Heidi

----- Original Message ----
From: Jared Schickling <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, June 9, 2010 1:10:23 PM
Subject: Re: Poets For Living Waters

Amy,

Write to your senatorsâ€”and reps, state folk, convince dad and sis, etc and et alâ€”yes, indeed, here and elsewhere.

Also, that there is no â€œagainstâ€ in the title or descriptionâ€”unwritten, but heardâ€”how to be â€œforâ€ something but not against something?

Otherwise youâ€™re misconstruing what I said. Red herring. â€œIâ€™m sorry you donâ€™t think writing poetry in response to this disaster is a worthwhile enterprise.â€ Thatâ€™s not it, at all. Factually wrong. (Though, I donâ€™t really begin with whether or not itâ€™s worthwhile; practicing poetry ainâ€™t my choice, and poet must respond; after thatâ€¦) â€œAn appreciation of this systemic connectivity suggests a wide range of poetry will offer a meaningful response to the current crisis.â€ How does the project constitute a meaningful response? Iâ€™m hard-pressed to see thatâ€”itâ€™s my honest question, not conviction. Invoking the fact of connectivity doesnâ€™t mean the connected thing is or will be of healthful connection. I mean, I understand the impulse, the need for poetry to respond. Yes. My question is, how does the structure of the standard submission review curatorial etc. process for a poetry journal lead to something actually useful in response to nowâ€™s material and paradigmatic catastrophe(s)? How does the channeling of the event through (for the sake of?) this aesthetic space turn the necessary attention away, finally, from poets, poetics, and poems, toward the thing itself? Rather, does/will the opposite occur? If so whatâ€™s the problem with that? Does the thing present an opportunity for poetsâ€”what is the opportunity, choices? Are certain familiar approaches to poetic production bound to certain ruinous ways of thinking and living? How do poetry communities and practitioners increasingly contribute to the increasingly destructive power and inevitability called capital? My honest question, how does Poets For Living Waters, in its form, not partake of the whole system of capitalist imperative and production? How is the project, beyond what it admirably desires to be, â€œforâ€ waterâ€”or earth, airâ€”and not â€œforâ€ water-earth-air-for-poems (or worse, poets)? If the project attempts an honest response to the need and problem of poetry responding, then these questions seem more than specialized quibbling over Poetry in the face of ( ).

It would be interesting, and useful, if there were a rubric for measuring the actual long-term impacts of this project, and others, against desired outcomes.

↑ Index

98. amy king

Re: Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forward)

Wed 9 Jun 2010

From Heidi in response to Laura:

Dear Laura,

I am so sorry to hear that you requested to help out with the World Ocean Day Action and did not receive a reply. I know there is one note we got late last week about helping out to which we have not yet replied. But I do not even know if it was yours. We have been pretty swamped with the combination of our own very busy lives beyond the Gulf Coast tragedy and getting this project going. If that note was not yours, then I think your communication got lost in the ether. Yahoo has repeatedly let us down, and it's just another detail we have not yet addressed. I am really genuinely sorry.

This reading action was impromptu and was planned pretty much at the last minute. Would you be interested in creating an action for another day? Perhaps the summer solistice on the 20th or July 4th--calling for the freedom of the world's waters? I am just brainstorming here. Any ideas you have will be welcome. I Thank you so much for your interest in participating. When you reply, perhaps cc amy and this address--that way we will be sure to get together on this.

And thank you for speaking out. I am really sorry to hear that you have felt let down. But I am glad that we have a chance to redress the complaint and now, hopefully, help bring to fruition your ideas for a transformative response to these frightening painful times.

All the very best wishes,

Heidi

[redacted]

↑ Index

99. Laura Hinton

Re: Poets for Living Waters - Response from Editor, Heidi Lynn Staples (forward)

Wed 9 Jun 2010

Response to Amy --

Just wanted to put out there that -- with all the wonderful intentions that you and others have had -- the message you are trying to communicate can sometimes get lost. The way an event gets publicized, organized -- again, the form of the event -- is part of what gets "produced" (going back to Jared's original e-mail).

I once organized a Poets against the War poetry reading in Harlem, where I teach. This was the week Bush 2 bombed Bagdad. I thought it was a powerful event. Some of my students loved it. Some of my colleagues thought it was terrible to read poetry at a time like that, and refused to attend. Or maybe they were supporting Bush. (Bottom line: you can never please everyone when you organize / activate. But -- is the point to please?)

I will say that our flier did not post the names of poets or bios in star-like format. It was "come as you are" -- and read. That, for me, was the power in it.

Maybe these "default" e-mails that go to no real person and the Facebook style of organization and the invitations with bios -- they might be part of the failed message. We are all so busy "networking." Those lines between self-promotion and doing the right thing can be misconstrued -- all too easily. And this environmental disaster -- how to respond -- Do we really know how?

Maybe we should all go to our rivers and oceans, collectively, and wear a gag or gas mask -- and NOT speak, as poets.

Amy you do a lot here for us all, and know that you are appreciated. Thank you for your openness to this discussion. You are wonderful, truly. Maybe my critique is more one of the era we are in and how we fashion ourselves and our messages. It's directed, too, at myself.

[As I've written this note I see a response from Heidi. The answer is YES. Let's organize something ... And do it, say, on another river here in NYC. The Harlem River? For me, any event will have to be in early September as I go across the oil-splattered ocean soon, following the Gulf Stream. No default e-mails. Open to all poets, artists. But ... will people attend?]

Laura

↑ Index

100. Jennifer Karmin
June 12 & 13: Performance @ Printers Row Lit Fest
Wed 9 Jun 2010

"Reading Experiment in Progress"
an interactive performance
by Jennifer Karmin

at the Printers Row Lit Fest
http://www.printersrowbookfair.org

on Dearborn Street, between Congress & Polk
Chicago, IL

Saturday, June 12
1:45-3pm at the Arts & Poetry Stage
4-5pm roving the book fair

Sunday, June 13
10am-12pm at the Northwestern University table
2-3pm roving the book fair

Aaaaaaaaaaalice
published by Flim Forum Press
travelogue in 11 cantos
scored for polyvocal improvisation

To buy online, read some early reviews & find performance dates:
http://www.aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

↑ Index

101. Geer Austin
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Wed 9 Jun 2010

Amy and Heidi,

While I understand that poetry, especially in electronic form, cannot soak up all the oil in the Gulf, I believe that a poetic response to a crisis, whether environmental, political or military, can have a long lasting effect. Just think - we're still reading anti-war poems about long ago wars.

> Above all I am not concerned with Poetry.
>
> My subject is War, and the pity of War.
>
> The Poetry is in the pity.
>
> Yet these elegies are to this generation in no sense consolatory. They may be to the next. All a poet can do today is warn. That is why the true Poets must be truthful.

- Wilfred Owen

Nature poetry, of course, has inspired many generations to value our environment. Unfortunately the BP execs didn't get that message, but who knows - maybe their children will.

Regards,

Geer Austin

↑ Index

102. Mitch Taylor
MUTHAFUCKA TWO: NEW POETRY + ART
Thu 10 Jun 2010

The second issue of MUTHAFUCKA, an irregular
Dear Readers + Writers +

The second issue of MUTHAFUCKA, an irregular, locationless journal of the arts, is now available, here: http://presspresspress.blogspot.com/2010/05/muthafuckatwo.html

Featuring poems by Alice Notley, Dot Devota, Phil Cordelli, Norma Cole, Quinn Latimer, Matthew Klane, Hoa Nguyen, Lucas Farrell, Lisa Lightsey, Lewis Warsh, Ron Horning, Caitie Moore, Thom Donovan, Trey Sager, Brenda Iijima, Youna Kwak, Karena Youtz and Etel Adnan. Translations of Angel Escobar (by Kristin Dykstra), Mohammed Khair-Eddine (by Pierre Joris), Kazuko Shiraishi (by Tomoyuki Endo and Forrest Gander), Michel Deguy (by Wilson Baldridge) and Amelia Rosselli (by Vanja Skoric Dewan and Deborah Woodard). A drum score by John Niekrasz. Collages by Sarah Lariviere. A two-channel installation by Anthony Hawley. Cover art by Sam King. Side-stapled with two-layer transparency/cardstock cover. 120 pages. 100 copies. $10.

Available here: http://presspresspress.blogspot.com/2010/05/muthafuckatwo.html. The first issue (2009) is here: http://presspresspress.blogspot.com/2009/03/muthafucka.html. Please join us, and thank you!

Mitch Taylor
editor, Muthafucka
Muthafacebook: http://www.facebook.com/home.php?#!/profile.php?520848056

↑ Index

103. steve dalachinsky
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Thu 10 Jun 2010

i whole heartedly am for anything that raises awareness there was a time very recently where i allowed my personal selfishness to interfere

we all do what we can as best we can and as they say every little bit helps this crisis is major and devastating

i applaud amy's and heidi's efforts and to all those contributing positive responses steve d

On Wed, 9 Jun 2010 21:59:16 -0400 Geer Austin <[redacted]>
writes:
> Amy and Heidi,
>
> While I understand that poetry, especially in electronic form, > cannot > soak up all the oil in the Gulf, I believe that a poetic response to > a > crisis, whether environmental, political or military, can have a > long > lasting effect. Just think - we're still reading anti-war poems > about > long ago wars.
>
> Above all I am not concerned with Poetry.
>
> My subject is War, and the pity of War.
>
> The Poetry is in the pity.
>
> Yet these elegies are to this generation in no sense
> consolatory.
> They may be to the next. All a poet can do today is warn. That is > why
> the true Poets must be truthful.
>
>

-
> Wilfred Owen
>
>
> Nature poetry, of course, has inspired many generations to value our > environment. Unfortunately the BP execs didn't get that message, > but
>

> who knows - maybe their children will.
>
> Regards,
>
> Geer Austin
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

104. Mike Finley

Re: Poets For Living Waters

Thu 10 Jun 2010

Owen had credibility, however. He died in the war he wrote about. Our embrace of him has to do with that. I doubt many of us are willing to lay down our lives for tarballs.

On Wed, Jun 9, 2010 at 8:59 PM, Geer Austin <[redacted]> wrote:

> Amy and Heidi,
>
> While I understand that poetry, especially in electronic form, cannot soak up all the oil in the Gulf, I believe that a poetic response to a crisis, whether environmental, political or military, can have a long lasting effect. Just think - we're still reading anti-war poems about long ago wars.
>
> Above all I am not concerned with Poetry.
>
> My subject is War, and the pity of War.
>
> The Poetry is in the pity.
>
> Yet these elegies are to this generation in no sense consolatory. They may be to the next. All a poet can do today is warn. That is why the true Poets must be truthful.
>
> - Wilfred Owen

> Nature poetry, of course, has inspired many generations to value our environment. Unfortunately the BP execs didn't get that message, but who knows - maybe their children will.
>
> Regards,
>
> Geer Austin

--

MIKE FINLEY
1841 Dayton Avenue
Saint Paul MN 55104
[redacted] home office
[redacted] cell I am always misplacing
[redacted]
http://mfinley.com

↑ Index

105. Mike Finley

Re: MUTHAFUCKA TWO: NEW POETRY + ART

Thu 10 Jun 2010

You should give us a sample. A list of names gives no idea what to expect,unless the people are famous.

On Thu, Jun 10, 2010 at 1:28 AM, Mitch Taylor <[redacted]> wrote:

> The second issue of MUTHAFUCKA, an irregular
> Dear Readers + Writers +
>
> The second issue of MUTHAFUCKA, an irregular, locationless journal of the arts, is now available, here:
> http://presspresspress.blogspot.com/2010/05/muthafuckatwo.html
>
> Featuring poems by Alice Notley, Dot Devota, Phil Cordelli, Norma Cole, Quinn Latimer, Matthew Klane, Hoa Nguyen, Lucas Farrell, Lisa Lightsey, Lewis Warsh, Ron Horning, Caitie Moore, Thom Donovan, Trey Sager, Brenda Iijima, Youna Kwak, Karena Youtz and Etel Adnan. Translations of Angel Escobar (by Kristin Dykstra), Mohammed Khair-Eddine (by Pierre Joris), Kazuko Shiraishi (by Tomoyuki Endo and > Forrest Gander), Michel Deguy (by Wilson Baldridge) and Amelia Rosselli (by Vanja Skoric Dewan and Deborah Woodard). A drum score by John Niekrasz. Collages by Sarah Lariviere. A two-channel installation by Anthony Hawley. Cover art by Sam King. Side-stapled with two-layer transparency/cardstock cover. 120 pages. 100 copies. $10.

>
> Available here: http://presspresspress.blogspot.com/2010/05/muthafuckatwo.html. The first issue (2009) is here: http://presspresspress.blogspot.com/2009/03/muthafucka.html. Please join us, and thank you!
>
> Mitch Taylor
> editor, Muthafucka
> Muthafacebook: http://www.facebook.com/home.php?#!/profile.php?520848056

--

MIKE FINLEY
1841 Dayton Avenue
Saint Paul MN 55104
[redacted] home office
[redacted] cell I am always misplacing
[redacted]
http://mfinley.com

↑ Index

106. Pierre Joris
New NOMADICS posts
Thu 10 Jun 2010

Check out these recent NOMADICS posts:

Two or Three French Takes

Poetry Project Leslie Scalapino Memorial Annoucement

Untranslatable

WALTZING IN QUICKSAND: POETS IN COLLAGE

A Bird on the Beach at East Grand Terre Island, LA

Easy, easy Friday morning...

Roger Manderscheid (1933-2010)

Alternate News re Israeli Acts of Piracy in International Water

& may your summers be great!

Pierre
==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========

↑ Index

107. Ruth Danon
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Thu 10 Jun 2010

Brenda Hillman is pretty eloquent on all of these matters. It seems to me that we need to demand, now, the equivalent of a Manhattan Project to end the carbon based economy. People familiar with nanotech tell me that the means exist to do this. What does not exist is the will, the commitment, the willingness to be outspoken. This demand should go viral.

Regards to all on the list,

Ruth

Ruth Danon Ph.D, Clinical Professor,Creative and Expository Writing Coordinator, Creative and Expository Writing McGhee Division, New York University

----- Original Message -----
From: Mike Finley <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, June 10, 2010 10:44 am
Subject: Re: Poets For Living Waters
To: [redacted]

Owen had credibility, however. He died in the war he wrote about. Our embrace of him has to do with that. I doubt many of us are willing to lay down our lives for tarballs.

On Wed, Jun 9, 2010 at 8:59 PM, Geer Austin <[redacted]> wrote:

> Amy and Heidi,
>
> While I understand that poetry, especially in electronic form, cannot soak
> up all the oil in the Gulf, I believe that a poetic response to a crisis, > whether environmental, political or military, can have a long lasting > effect. Just think - we're still reading anti-war poems about long ago > wars.
>
> Above all I am not concerned with Poetry.
>
> My subject is War, and the pity of War.
>
> The Poetry is in the pity.
>
> Yet these elegies are to this generation in no sense > consolatory. They may be to the next. All a poet can do today is warn. That > is why the true Poets must be truthful.
>
>
>
>
> - Wilfred Owen
>
>
> Nature poetry, of course, has inspired many generations to value our > environment. Unfortunately the BP execs didn't get that message, but who > knows - maybe their children will.
>
> Regards,
>
> Geer Austin
>
>
>
>
> ==========
>

> --
> ----------
> MIKE FINLEY
> 1841 Dayton Avenue
> Saint Paul MN 55104
> [redacted] home office
> [redacted] cell I am always misplacing
> [redacted]
> http://mfinley.com

↑ Index

108. Adam Tobin

Re: Poets For Living Waters

Thu 10 Jun 2010

Dead people have more credibility than the living?

Certainly they are more conisistent, and it is easier to measure their political effectiveness.

On Jun 10, 2010, at 6:35 AM, Mike Finley <[redacted]> wrote:

> Owen had credibility, however. He died in the war he wrote about. Our embrace of him has to do with that. I doubt many of us are willing to lay > down our lives for tarballs.
>
> On Wed, Jun 9, 2010 at 8:59 PM, Geer Austin <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Amy and Heidi,
>
> While I understand that poetry, especially in electronic form, cannot soak
> up all the oil in the Gulf, I believe that a poetic response to a crisis, > whether environmental, political or military, can have a long lasting effect. Just think - we're still reading anti-war poems about long ago > wars.
>
> > Above all I am not concerned with Poetry.
> >
> > My subject is War, and the pity of War.

The Poetry is in the pity.

Yet these elegies are to this generation in no sense consolatory. They may be to the next. All a poet can do today is warn. That is why the true Poets must be truthful.

- Wilfred Owen

Nature poetry, of course, has inspired many generations to value our environment. Unfortunately the BP execs didn't get that message, but who knows - maybe their children will.

Regards,

Geer Austin

guidelines

--

MIKE FINLEY
1841 Dayton Avenue
Saint Paul MN 55104
[redacted] home office
[redacted] cell I am always misplacing
[redacted]
http://mfinley.com

↑ Index

109. Mary Kasimor
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Thu 10 Jun 2010

I am going to a yoga earth healing meditation on Sunday. Through yoga I have learned and am continuing to learn to let go of my ego. This meditation is about the Gulf, of course, but I think that we will be meditating on more than that. The horrendous abuse that our earth has endured is something that is hurting all of us. Perhaps if the understanding of the poetry forum was enlarged, we might feel more "honest" about it. (I don't know if that is the right word to describe the ambivalence that some of us feel, but I will use that word.)

Mary Kasimor
--- On Thu, 6/10/10, Mike Finley <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Mike Finley <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Poets For Living Waters
To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, June 10, 2010, 5:35 AM

Owen had credibility, however. He died in the war he wrote about. Our embrace of him has to do with that. I doubt many of us are willing to lay down our lives for tarballs.

On Wed, Jun 9, 2010 at 8:59 PM, Geer Austin <[redacted]> wrote:

> Amy and Heidi,
>
> While I understand that poetry, especially in electronic form, cannot soak up all the oil in the Gulf, I believe that a poetic response to a crisis, whether environmental, political or military, can have a long lasting effect. Just think - we're still reading anti-war poems about long ago wars.
>
> Above all I am not concerned with Poetry.
>
> My subject is War, and the pity of War.
>
> The Poetry is in the pity.
>
> Yet these elegies are to this generation in no sense consolatory. They may be to the next. All a poet can do today is warn. That is why the true Poets must be truthful.
>
> - Wilfred Owen

> Nature poetry, of course, has inspired many generations to value our environment. Unfortunately the BP execs didn't get that message, but who knows - maybe their children will.
>
> Regards,
>
> Geer Austin

--

MIKE FINLEY
1841 Dayton Avenue
Saint Paul MN 55104
[redacted] home office
[redacted] cell I am always misplacing
[redacted]
http://mfinley.com

↑ Index

110. Jared Schickling
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Thu 10 Jun 2010

Thread,

Thank you for the incisive words. One large correction: I'm not asking what the poetry produces, but what the site / forum / journal produces. I won't get into the niobium and tantalum and gorilla hand ashtrays inhabiting the tower under the tabletop. That kind of complicity, smoking these cigarettes, taking this shower, plugging in, etc. I don't mean to "punch" anyone "in the gut." My postings risked that. Amy, your poetic and public life and arguments, activity, here and abroad, make clear the good, honest work you are doing, while the produce from that work—surely ups and downs. "One of the angels," as an old Milton professor would say. Even if I were absolutely correct in my accusations, reasons, meant to be questions, which is surely not the case, they would still evidence your willingness to risk, and I would be careful to distinguish "you" from whatever "it." Again, it's the form of the publication as it appears that I've been questioning, which Laura keys in on. I've recently quit some problematic publishing projects I've been disappointedly hypocritically connected to, even after I smelled a rat. C'est la.

Heidi, what you're saying reminds me of Leopold's "land ethic" and the utility of it, an ethic that would do away with the non-human's perceived human value in the way you describe. What you say of "radical uselessness" seems to make sense: "I believe Notley is describing the way in which we literally embody the forces that quantify and objectify the world, turning natural processes into human products." However, my question sparking the initial post—does PFLW represent or embody such a process? I suppose my reservation comes from seeing this as a momentary response to a precise event and the prioritizing of poets and their poetry, palimpsesting the capitalized event. Again, it's not the practicing of the poetry in response but the form of its public life that instigates my questions. I hear, I think, that you're intending the project as an ongoing response, years and years, eager to work behind the backdrop, in which case, it would seem a different animal. And now that you've made clear the agenda of inclusion for the young project—an aspect of it that has not been made clear to a public, until now, as Laura mentions.

The criticisms, "directed, too, at myself." Yes, a thousand times, every day.

I do suspect the argument about the usefulness and potency of uselessness. Or rather, I can't see the need for regarding humankind as useless without talking the idea's utility. I mean, who and what, today, just loves to hear and see artists and thinkers speaking and acting accordingly? Also, to what extent is uselessness a practicable mode? How does uselessness fit with an ecocritical sensibility that finds everything interwoven? There's a mouse living inside our stove, behind the dials, because the stovetop is where we keep the leftover bacon grease. Webs.

I suppose my point in posting was to solicit responses so that I might understand more what the project is hoping to do—again, it wasn't so clear in its presentation.

And with that, I'll stop cluttering everyone's mail.

Thank you, and not to stop the conversation, to discourage and support and encourage and truly and falsely and sincerely, and hoping to catch one of the readings,

Jared

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?
ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

111. Poetry Project
A Memorial for Leslie Scalapino
Thu 10 Jun 2010

Monday, June 21, 8 PM
Memorial for Leslie Scalapino

It is with heavy hearts that we will open the doors of the Parish Hall so that we may all come together in friendship and grief to remember and celebrate the life and work of Leslie Scalapino, one of our greatest poets, who passed away on May 28th. Guests who will speak include Petah Coyne, Simone Fattal, Joan Retallack, Charles Bernstein, Susan Bee, Ann Lauterbach, Susan Howe, Paolo Javier, Molissa Foley, Fiona Templeton, Laura Elrick, Rodrigo Toscano, Steve Clay, Rachel Levitsky, Susan Landers, James Sherry, Brenda Iijima, Pierre Joris, Judith Goldman, E. Tracy Grinnell and Tom White.

There will be a wine and cheese reception to follow. We¹ll have a book table with titles by Leslie, plus 50 canvas bags that she collaborated on with Kiki Smith. We¹ll be accepting donations for the bags starting at $25. All proceeds from books and bags will be donated to Poets In Need http://www.poetsinneed.org/.

FREE.

If you can¹t attend but would like to honor Leslie Scalapino, please consider a charitable donation in her memory to: Poets in Need, PO Box 5411, Berkeley, CA 94705; Reed College for the Leslie Scalapino Scholarship, 3203 Southeast Woodstock Boulevard, Portland, OR 97202-8199; The AYCO Charitable Foundation, PO Box 15203, Albany, NY 12212-5203 for the Leslie Scalapino-O Books Fund to support innovative works of poetry, prose and art; or to a charitable organization of your choice.

The Memorial follows two performances of Scalapino¹s Noh play FlowWinged Crocodile at Poets House:

Saturday, June 19, at 7PM & Sunday, June 20, at 2PM
Flow‹Winged Crocodile: A Noh Play by Leslie Scalapino

Directed by Fiona Templeton, with Katie Brown, Stephanie Silver and Julie Troost. Dance by Molissa Fenley. Music by Joan Jeanrenaud. Projected drawings by Eve Biddle. Technical director: Ray Roy III.

This Noh play by poet Leslie Scalapino travels between the left and right sides of the brain, with appearances by a reincarnated Patty Hearst in the 1974 SLA bank heist and a green-winged creature that is part crocodile, part Michelin man and part charging rhino. The play is performed by The Relationship, a performance group directed by Fiona Templeton that specializes in innovative language and use of site.

Leslie Scalapino is the ground-breaking, genre-stretching author of thirty books of poetry, poem-plays, essays, and fiction, including way, which won the American Book Award; Sight, a collaboration with Lyn Hejinian; Zither & Autobiography; The Tango; New Time; and It¹s go in horizontal: Selected Poems 1974-2006.

Cosponsored by Belladonna and The Poetry Project.
Poets House is at 10 River Terrace in Battery Park City.

$10, $7 for students and seniors, free to Poetry Project and Poets House Members

↑ Index

112. Mike Finley
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Thu 10 Jun 2010

Exactly. People who sacrifice have more credibility than people who just talk. It's why Christ was more than a notable teacher.

I think there is all the will in the world to stop polluting the Gulf. Emotions run high. Solutions,once the oil gets out, are harder to come by.

On Thu, Jun 10, 2010 at 10:27 AM, Adam Tobin <[redacted]>wrote:

> Dead people have more credibility than the living?
>
> Certainly they are more conisistent, and it is easier to measure their political effectiveness.
>
> On Jun 10, 2010, at 6:35 AM, Mike Finley <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Owen had credibility, however. He died in the war he wrote about. Our embrace of him has to do with that. I doubt many of us are willing to lay down our lives for tarballs.
>
> On Wed, Jun 9, 2010 at 8:59 PM, Geer Austin <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Amy and Heidi,

While I understand that poetry, especially in electronic form, cannot soak up all the oil in the Gulf, I believe that a poetic response to a crisis, whether environmental, political or military, can have a long lasting effect. Just think - we're still reading anti-war poems about long ago wars.

Above all I am not concerned with Poetry.

My subject is War, and the pity of War.

The Poetry is in the pity.

Yet these elegies are to this generation in no sense consolatory. They may be to the next. All a poet can do today is warn. That is why the true Poets must be truthful.

- Wilfred Owen

Nature poetry, of course, has inspired many generations to value our environment. Unfortunately the BP execs didn't get that message, but who knows - maybe their children will.

Regards,

Geer Austin

guidelines

--

MIKE FINLEY
1841 Dayton Avenue
Saint Paul MN 55104
[redacted] home office
[redacted] cell I am always misplacing
[redacted]

> http://mfinley.com

--

MIKE FINLEY
1841 Dayton Avenue
Saint Paul MN 55104
[redacted] home office
[redacted] cell I am always misplacing
[redacted]
http://mfinley.com

↑ Index

113. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart
Re: Poets For Living Waters
Fri 11 Jun 2010

Re: what Mary wrote:

> Perhaps if the understanding of the poetry forum was enlarged, we might feel more "honest" about it. (I don't know if that is the right word to describe the ambivalence that some of us feel, but I will use that word.)

I think that, at the very least, teaching people to think imaginatively -- to pay attention -- is a step in the right/write direction. Those of us who teach poetry (as well as write it) are presented with a good opportunity to communicate the importance of cultivating imagination. From there, one would hope, comes the ability to see the interconnectedness of all these things, and the importance of paying attention BEFORE the catastrophe happens. You may not be able to teach someone to actually write poetry (or even appreciate it!), but you can communicate the power of using imagination in different situations. And we desperately need to be doing that.

↑ Index

114. amy king
Huffington Post Interview / Idealism / Poetry
Fri 11 Jun 2010

Perhaps I am too idealistic in my replies - please do weigh in if you are so moved:

The Poetry Feminaissance by Travis Nichols

Are you a poet? Do you feel overwhelmed by negativity? Feel like there's no hope for a poet in this world? Especially a female poet? Well don't despair. Spend some time with Amy King. She's the author of Slaves to Do These Things (Blazevox), and, with Ana Bozicevic, she co-curates the Brooklyn-based reading series, The Stain of Poetry, and, maybe most importantly, she has ideas. Over the past few weeks we've been emailing back and forth about her ideas of what it means to be a poet today. Here's a few slices of the force for your perusal. Enjoy.

http://www.huffingtonpost.com/travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html

↑ Index

115. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "The Ashes of Thoreau" by Chris Mansel

Fri 11 Jun 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œThe Ashes of Thoreauâ€ by Chris Mansel. Description:

Chris Mansel writes like a man without a country. Each poem of â€œThe Ashes of Thoreauâ€ is a labyrinth of fragmentation and resolve. The projection is dense but difficult to abandon. Like cinema, it will leave you entertained by the time you step back into the light.

Available as a free ebook here:
http://stores.lulu.com/store.php?fAcctID=36590601

↑ Index

116. steve dalachinsky

Re: New readings

Fri 11 Jun 2010

---

steve dalachinsky reads /

june 13 at 4 pm bowery poetry club with with albey balgochian's basscentric
w/albeybalgochian hill greene and francois grillot

June 14 at Local 269 suffolk and houston 7 pm
w/ the great loren mazzacane connors on guitar

$10 per set - $ 7 senior and students / $15 for 2 - $20 for entire night

other sets by other folks to follow at 8, 9 and 10 pm

_____

Sunday June 20 - 2-5pm
the Vision Festival presents @ AGathering of Tribes
285 East 3rd St. (between C & D - 2nd floor)
donation to Tribes

poetry by

Jeff Wright
Bob Heman
Lewis Warsh

Poetry & Music

Albey Balgochian & Jane Grenier B
Barry Wallenstein
Yuko Otomo - Shayna Dulberger
Jake Marmer / & Alon Nechushtan
Aaron Howard w/Gwen Krueger & Tomislav Butkovic
Steve Dalachinsky
Alexandre Pierrepont
Tamara Singh
Tsaurah Litsky
Steve Ben Israel

Musicians / Improvs
Ellen Christi
Max Johnson bass
Andrew Barker drums
Charles Waters reeds
plus others to be announced

$5 donation

_____

wednesday - june 30 - 6:30 8:30 p.m.
on the roof of the educational alliance east broadway (f to east broadway) jake marmer and steve dalachinsky read

$10 includes snacks and all the kosher wine
you can consume

_

On Fri, 11 Jun 2010 16:10:25 -0400 "Carfagna, Richard" <[redacted]> writes:

> Hi,
> My new book, Symphony No.1 is now available at:
> http://chalkeditions.co.cc
>
> There's also many other wonderful titles.
> Check them out.
>
> Be Well,
> Ric
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

117. Jessie Lendennie
Dogs Singing: A Tribute Anthology
Fri 11 Jun 2010

I'm compiling an anthology of poems 'by'/about/for dogs - entitled Dogs Singing. I welcome submissions of poems in any form. The deadline is 12th July, 2010, for publication in October. Salmon Poetry is based in Co. Clare, Ireland, but we have an international list. You can check out our website http://salmonpoety.com to get an idea of what we do. The royalties from Dogs Singing will be donated to several dog charities, including The Soi Dog Foundation (Thailand). Please email submissions to [redacted]. Many Thanks, Jessie

↑ Index

118. Jeffrey Side
Rockpile Tour Interviews and Feature at The Argotist Online
Fri 11 Jun 2010

Rockpile Tour Interviews and Feature at The Argotist Online.

This feature relates to ROCKPILE a collaboration between poets David Meltzer, Michael Rothenberg and Terri Carrion, who travelled through eight cities in the U.S. to perform poetry and prose, composed while on the road, with local musicians and artists in each city. ROCKPILEâ€™s main aim was to educate and preserve, as well as to create a history of collaboration. It is hoped that it has helped to reinforce the tradition of the troubadour, a tradition that is central to the cultural upheaval and the identity politics that reawakened poets, artists, musicians and songwriters from the mid-1960s through to the 1970s.

Included in this feature is an interview with David Meltzer and Michael Rothenberg, an interview with David Meltzer, perspectives from two of the musicians involved (Bob Malone and Daniel McNaughton), some reactions from people who were either involved or who saw the tour on the road and an overview of the tour by Michael Rothenberg.

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Rockpile%20Interviews%20and %20Feature.htm

↑ Index

119. Carfagna, Richard
New Book from Chalk Editions
Fri 11 Jun 2010

Hi,
My new book, Symphony No.1 is now available at:
http://chalkeditions.co.cc

There's also many other wonderful titles.
Check them out.

Be Well,
Ric

↑ Index

120. Rob McLennan
new(ish) on rob's clever blog
Fri 11 Jun 2010

-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: Dave Proctor on Wooden Rockets Press
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Susan Tichy
-- Andy Weaver introduction for the TREE Reading Series
-- Margaret Christakos, Welling
-- Sandra Ridley, Fallout
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Billie Livingston
-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: Antonio D'Alfonso on Guernica
-- The Griffin Poetry Prize, 2010;
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Suzanne Bowness
-- Er¡n Moure, O Resplandor
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Andrea Brady
-- Gerry Shikatani at Ottawa's AB Series, June 3;
-- rob mclennan interviewed by David Kosub on editing poetry anthologies
-- rob mclennan + Andy Weaver at the TREE Reading Series
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Andrew Kaufman

-- 12 or 20 questions: with Susan Briscoe
-- Pac Man, Ms. (a very short story)
-- fwd: Jason Camlot's Ticker Text Project
-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: Christophe Casam...
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Keith Kumasen Abbott
-- a second review of wild horses;
-- Barbara Godard, 1942-2010
-- influency salon second issue now online;
-- Rachel Zucker, museum of accidents
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Timothy Quinn
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Renee Rodin

www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at ottawa poetry newsletter
www.ottawapoetry.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at the Chaudiere Booksblog
www.chaudierebooks.blogspot.com

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons
www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

121. derek beaulieu
new from No press: LOUISE GATE by Bob Cobbing
Fri 11 Jun 2010

No press is proud to announce the publication of

LOUISE GATE
by Bob Cobbing

published in an edition of 50 hand-sewn copies (of which 25are for sale) $3 each (including shipping)

for more information, or to order copies, email
[redacted]

derek beaulieu
2 - 733 2nd avenue nw
calgary alberta
canada T2N 0E4
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

122. peter ganick
new drawings
Sat 12 Jun 2010

5 pages of new drawings by peter ganick.
posted at jim leftwich's textimagepoetry site.

pg/textimagepoetry/11<http://www.flickr.com/photos/textimagepoetry/sets/72157616307964906/?page=11>
pg/textimagepoetry/12<http://www.flickr.com/photos/textimagepoetry/sets/72157616307964906/?page=12>
pg/textimagepoetry/13<http://www.flickr.com/photos/textimagepoetry/sets/72157616307964906/?page=13>
pg/textimagepoetry/14<http://www.flickr.com/photos/textimagepoetry/sets/72157616307964906/?page=14>
pg/textimagepoetry/15<http://www.flickr.com/photos/textimagepoetry/sets/72157616307964906/?page=15>

↑ Index

123. Daniel Godston
interview with Steve Dalachinsky
Sat 12 Jun 2010

Hi,

Recently I interviewed Steve Dalachinsky. Here's the link: <http://tinyurl.com/2f4qh9r> http://tinyurl.com/2f4qh9r

Cheers,

Dan

↑ Index

124. Daniel Godston
Borderbend Arts Collective
Sat 12 Jun 2010

Hi,

The Borderbend Arts Collective is a 501(c)(3) organization that helps to put together the Mingus Awareness Project, Chicago Calling Arts Festival, and other projects. New changes have been made with the Borderbend website, including newly uploaded audio from past Bb events and photo galleries. You're invited to visit the Bb website: www.borderbend.org

Cheers,

Dan

↑ Index

125. Michael

An Announcement from Big Bridge- NO MORE OIL!

Sat 12 Jun 2010

Dear Friends of Big Bridge,

My apologies for writing you all on issues that are not related to Big Bridge. But we have come to a moment in our existence as a species in which "propriety" is less and less meaningful.

As you all know Big Bridge has always been vocal on political and social issues and so the time has come for us to speak out against OIL!

Many of our friends living in the Gulf Coast are seeing their lives destroyed forever. An entire ecosystem appears doomed. The impact is global.

Everyday it seems more certain that we are witnessing the worst man-made environmental holocaust in history and I feel we must be heroic in our actions to make something positive out of this horror.

Over the last few weeks, I have focused attention to my facebook communications, posting as many articles and pieces of information on the "spill" as I can, hoping that the spread of information will make a difference in how we do things. I have organized three events, fundraising benefits for The Louisiana Bucket Brigade, http://www.labucketbrigade.org/ , a non profit environmental health and justice organization tracking the impact of the BP oil spill and prevaenting the impact from being "swept under the rug." Two events in Petaluma, June 27(poetry and music fest) and July 10th (an art auction), and another event in Pacifica, CA (poetry and music and art auction) on August 7. For details please contact me.

It is time to make a real change. Not just leave it to government to show us the way. Please, get out in the street, wave signs, write friends, spread the word, organize!! We are into a new age. Stop Oil! Stop Global Warming! Stop Corporate Ownership of the Planet! There is no time left to waste.

If you have news that you want to get around please send it to me or join me on facebook at http://www.facebook.com/michael.rothenberg. If we are not "friends" yet, I would be happy to add you. Again forgive me for using Big Bridge mailing list to send this message but I could not hold back.

My sincere best in these sad and terrifying times. Hope lies in real change not in promises!

Yours,

Michael Rothenberg
Big Bridge, www.bigbridge.org

↑ Index

126. Camille Martin
review copies of Camille Martin's Sonnets
Sat 12 Jun 2010

I have three review copies of Sonnets left. If anyone is interested in reviewing it, please backchannel.

Review copies are also available at In Galatea's Purse (edited by Eileen Tabios):

http://grarchives.blogspot.com/

Cheers,
Camille

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

↑ Index

127. Jennifer Karmin
Les Figues Press: Give A Fig Blog
Sat 12 Jun 2010

Les Figues Press creates aesthetic conversations between readers, writers and artists, through the publication of the TrenchArt series and other works, and through events, including Mrs. Porter's Art Salon.

Guest writers on the Les Figues Blog, Give A Fig, are sharing their thoughts about books they're reading, events they're planning/attending, pieces they're writing, and collaborations they're working on.

RECENT POSTS

Barack Obama interviewed by Jennifer Karmin
Urs Allemann interviewed by Elizabeth Hall
Vanessa Place posts "L'art de la figue"

Winners of the "Not Blessed" A Little Story Contest:
"Her Not Blessed" by Barbara Maloutas
"The first day of spring" by Erin Hinkes
"28 DAYS / (from Temporality) by Stephen Radcliffe
"Not Blessed, A Collaboration" by Soham Patel, Deborah Marie Poe & Gene Tanta

Join the conversation!

http://www.lesfigues.blogspot.com

↑ Index

128. Charlie Rossiter

Submissions sought for Online Oil Spill Crisis anthology

Sun 13 Jun 2010

ChicagoPoetry.com is working on an online poetry anthology in response to the current crisis in the Gulf of Mexico. If you have work about pollution or conservation or about the oil spill, please send your work to

[redacted]

Help spread the word.

This will be an ongoing anthology that will grow larger as more submissions come in.

↑ Index

129. Camille Martin

Rogue Embryo: Jiri Kolar, Bill Knott, Charles Borkhuis, and more . . .

Sun 13 Jun 2010

---

reflecting pond for giant artists in the Place des Vosges (an original Jiri Kolar!)
*
a sonnet by Bill Knott (for the fallen of late): “how unfair, / how unjust when all the other fields / get to rest beneath their hypnotic snows . . .”
*
Charles Borkhuis: “Write What I Say," Or, “Write what you think I say when I say what I think I’m thinking.”
*
plus:
new and improved shameless promotion of Sonnets

comments welcome:
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

Cheers!
Camille

Camille Martin
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html

http://www.camillemartin.ca
http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

↑ Index

130. Jesse Glass
Ekleksographia--Boston Issue now up
Mon 14 Jun 2010

---

http://ekleksographia.ahadadabooks.com/murphy/

Dedicated to the memory of Rane Arroyo.

↑ Index

131. Paul Siegell
FISHTOWN, Philly > Tuesday the 15th
Mon 14 Jun 2010

.•:¨¨:•. TUESDAY, JUNE 15 at 7pm .•:¨¨:•.

@ The Slingluff Gallery (11 W. Girard Ave, Phila, PA 19123)

The Fishtown Airways Reading Series presents: MICHAEL STEFFEN & PAUL SIEGELL

HOSTED by JIM MANCINELLI

MICHAEL STEFFEN's first full-length poetry collection, No Good at Sea, was published by Legible Press in 2002. His second, Heart Murmur, was published by Bordighera Press in 2009. Michael was granted a 2002 Fellowship from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts and has had poems appear in a wide variety of journals including Poetry, Potomac Review, The Ledge, Poet Lore, Rhino and many others. Michael is a Y2K graduate of the MFA in Creative Writing Program at Vermont College and currently lives in Roseto, Pennsylvania (http://mnsteffen.com/).

PAUL SIEGELL is the author of three books of poetry: wild life rifle fire (Otoliths Books, 2010), jambandbootleg (A-Head Publishing, 2009) and Poemergency Room (Otoliths Books, 2008). He is an editor at Painted Bride Quarterly, and has contributed to The American Poetry Review, Coconut, NOÖ, Rattle, SIR! and many other fine journals. He has also been featured in two national music and culture magazines, Paste and Relix, as well as elsewhere exciting. Kindly find more of Paul's work at "ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL" (http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com).

yours,
paul>
http://bit.ly/aLaNz2

↑ Index

132. amy king

"Coverage" beyond the Media -- New Statements & Poems @ Poets for Living Waters

Mon 14 Jun 2010

THREE POEMS BY ELIZABETH TWIDDY
http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

THREE POEMS BY ELIZABETH TWIDDY

TWO POEMS BY CAITLIN PLUNKETT

APORIA BY ROBERT PHILBEN

IN EXTREMIS [+ VIDEO] BY NEIL DE LA FLOR

TWO POEMS BY MARTHA SERPAS

TWO POEMS BY FRANK SHERLOCK

PHILADELPHIA WORLD OCEANS DAY READING!

LICKETY-SPLIT BY ANNE HIGGINS

A MOODY STREAM BY STEVE DALACHINSKY

THE FLOODING THAT WRITES ITSELF BY EILEEN R. TABIOS

TWO POEMS BY MELISSA TUCKEY

ORIFICE BY MARCELLA DURAND

DESCENDING BLUES BY BRANDON LAMSON

AN ORDINANCE OF POSSESSION BY TONY MANCUS

TWO POEMS BY MOLLY GAUDRY

CHANDELEUR SOUND BY MARTHE REED

DEEPWATER HORIZON POEMS BY NICOLE MAURO

HONORING WORLD OCEANS DAY â€” BROOKLYN ACTION

TEMPUS FIDGET BY GEOFFREY GATZA

HONORING WORLD OCEANS DAYâ€“ALASKAN ACTION

FOUR POEMS BY MICHAEL ROBINS

SPIRIT BEAR BY CONRAD DIDIODATO

FIVE POEMS BY AMY SARA CARROLLECHOES BY NATHAN HAUKE

http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

↑ Index

133. CA Conrad
PhillySound poets on The Joe Milford Poetry Show
Mon 14 Jun 2010

On June 13th eight PhillySound poets met at Pattie McCarthy & Kevin Varrone's house in South Philadelphia to each give five minute readings over the telephone with Joe Milford.

Click here for the show: http://phillysoundonjoemilford.blogspot.com/

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

134. Christophe Casamassima
Furniture Press Site Up/Down..... Finally up again!
Mon 14 Jun 2010

If anyone's had trouble with the website, we've had server problems.

furniturepressbooks.com

But all's well now!

Chris McCreary's "Undone: A Fakebook" and Emily Carr's "Directions for Flying" are still available (even though we've practically sold out of the titles already!)

A second printing will of the making soon, so hurry!

Christophe

↑ Index

135. Adam Fieled
"Apparition Poems" out from Blazevox
Mon 14 Jun 2010

The Apparition Poem series has appeared in Jacket, on PennSound, in moria, blue & yellow dog, denver syntax, Tears in the Fence, the Argotist, Great Works, diode, PFS Post, Stoning the Devil, Cricket Online Review, Otoliths, Pirene's Fountain, and elsewhere.

"Apparition Poems" has just been released as a full-length book from Blazevox Press. You can buy it here: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-af2.htm. I would like to personally thank Geoffrey Gatza and the editors around the world who have made the Apps a success.

Happy Summer!
Adam Fieled

↑ Index

136. Nicole Mauro
Two New Titles from Black Radish Books
Mon 14 Jun 2010

Black Radish Books is pleased to announce Marthe Reed's Gaze, and David Wolach's Occultations are both now available for purchase via spd (spdbooks.org). If interested in obtaining a review copy, please back-channel me at [redacted].

Thank you!

Nicole Mauro

↑ Index

137. David Kirschenbaum
A Boston Poet Tea Party, 7/30-8/1/10
Mon 14 Jun 2010

---

please forward

A Boston Poet Tea Party

A Summer Poetry Marathon
featuring 88 local and visiting poets
reading for 8 minutes apiece

Friday 7/30, 7:00 p.m.-10:00 p.m.
Pierre Menard Gallery
10 Arrow St., Harvard Square, Cambridge

Saturday 7/31, 12 noon-10:00 p.m.
Sunday 8/1, 12 noon-5:00 p.m.
OUTPOST 186
186 1/2 Hampshire St., Inman Square, Cambridge

With readings from:

Seth Abramson, Kari Adelaide, Dena Barisano, Kish Song Bear, Jim Behrle, Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡, Oni Buchanan, Mairead Byrne, Macgregor Card, Mick Carr, Kate Colby, John Coletti, John Cotter, Amanda Cook, James Cook, Mike County, Amy

D'Eath, Thom Donovan, Valerie Duff-Strauttman, Jim Dunn, Joe Elliot, Derek Fenner, Annie Finch, Greg Fuchs, Michael Franco, Elisa Gabbert, Michael Gizzi, Peter Gizzi, Kythe Heller, Mitch Highfill, Doug Holder, Fanny Howe, Jibade-Khalil Huffman, Andrew Hughes, Geoff Huth, N. F. Huth, Brenda Iijima, Lauren Ireland, Boni Joi, Ellen Kennedy, Aaron Kiely, Jack Kimball, Amy King, David Kirschenbaum, Mark Lamoureux, Gerrit Lansing, Tanya Larkin, Dorothea Lasky, Ruth Lepson, Brendan Lorber, Lori Lubeski, Bridget Madden, Douglas Manson, Fred Marchant, Filip Marinovich, Chris Martin, Joseph Massey, Ben Mazur, Gillian McCain, Suzanne Mercury, Hannah K. Messler, Debrah Morkun, Jason Morris, John Mulrooney, Eileen Myles, Jess Mynes, Amanda Nadelberg, Urayoan Noel, Martha Oatis, Geoffrey Olsen, January O'Neil, Nathaniel Otting, Chad Parenteau, Kate Peebles, David Rivard, Chris Rizzo, Steve Roberts, Carlos Soto Roman, Douglas N. Rothschild, Lauren Russell, Kate Schapira, Alan Semerdijian, Minal Shekhawat, Nathaniel Siegel, Joel Sloman, Kimberly Ann Southwick, Chuck Stebleton, Aaron Tieger, Joe Torra, Dana Ward, Jacqueline Waters, Dustin Williamson, Elizabeth Willis, Rebecca Wolff, Angela Veronica Wong, Jon Woodward, and Elizabeth Marie Young.

Organized by Jim Behrle, Michael Carr,
David Kirschenbaum, John Mulrooney, and Aaron Tieger

A complete schedule is available at http://www.bostonpoetteaparty.blogspot.com/

For more info contact: [redacted]

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

138. Bill Berkson
What About Auden
Tue 15 Jun 2010

An Evening at Books & Bookshelves

³What About W. H. Auden?²
7:30 p.m.
Tuesday, June 29, 2010
99 Sanchez Street, San Francisco, CA
(415) 621-376

an evening of readings from and talking about W.H. Auden¹s poetry, prose and his importance as a poet and man of letters
with
Bill Berkson ³Musée des Beaux Arts²/ 13 Things/ ³The Ironist² etc.
Steve Dickison -- Iceland
Patrick Dunagan intro poem to The Sea and the Mirror
Jarrett Earnest re W.H. & Hannah Arendt
Garrett Caples Auden intro to Minor British 19th C Poets
Amanda Eicher -- ³In Memory of W.B. Yeats²
Norman Fisher ³As I walked out on eveningŠ² & ³On the Circuit²
Susan Gevirtz Homage to Clio
Robert Harris Ode from The Orators
David Highsmith ³River Profile²
Colter Jacobsen/ Larry Rinder from Letters from Iceland
Jason Morris ³The Poet and the City²
Julien Poirier on The Rakes Progress
Stephen Ratcliffe preface to Thomas Campion
Cedar Sigo prepared text on Auden
Michael Wolfe ³In Praise of Limestone²

↑ Index

139. Jim Andrews
Netartery
Tue 15 Jun 2010

Inspired by netpoetic.com, which is a group blog on 'electronic literature', I recently started up a group blog called Netartery at http://netartery.vispo.com . Which looks a bit like a much earlier project of mine called Webartery (http://vispo.com/defib/pastevents.htm).

There are only a few posts, so far, to Netartery. They're by Gregory Whitehead, Andy Campbell, Jhave Johnston, and myself. Currently 13 people have agreed to post at least 6 times per year. That number will probably increase and decrease and, hopefully, balance out to something steady in terms of semi-regular posts.

Netartery is like netpoetic in that the reader and writership will consist probably primarily of writers. But the focus is not so much on 'electronic writing' as a more general 'writers gone wrong' approach. Gregory Whitehead, for instance, is an audio writer. I've been following his work since the 80's and regard him as the best literary audio artist I've encountered.

Jhave Johnston (http://glia.ca) and Andy Campbell (http://dreamingmethods.com) are also involved. Jhave Johnston is a Montréal-based poet-programmer who is producing some of the strongest contemporary poetic net art (such as http://vispo.com/jhave). And Andy Campbell has been producing digital fiction since the early nineties and continues with his truly outstanding project dreamingmethods.com . The other people involved (and haven't posted yet) are Chris Joseph, Christina Ljungberg, Christine Wilks, Jason Quackenbush, Kedrick James, Leonardo Flores, Marcus Bastos, Michael Harold, and Regina Célia Pinto.

Netartery is primarily a place to post about one's new work and new work of interest to the group and its readership, and about related issues. New work, interesting ideas, events, and so on. The people posting to Netartery are media writers and scholars of media writing. They are 'writers gone wrong' in this sense. They might write books, but they are also involved in other forms of artistic writing. These can be vispoetic or performative, programmerly, audio-oriented, and what not.

ja
http://netartery.vispo.com

↑ Index

140. Tim Peterson
EOAGH presents Hennessey, Prevallet, and Sherlock (6/17)
Tue 15 Jun 2010

EOAGH Reading Series:

Michael S. Hennessey, Kristin Prevallet,

and Frank Sherlock

Thursday, June 17 at 7PM

at Unnameable Books,

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

MICHAEL S. HENNESSEY is the managing editor of PennSound and the editor of Jacket2, the new journal that will continue the mission of John Tranter's Jacket starting in 2011. Recent publications include the chapbooks [static] (2009) and Last Days in the Bomb Shelter (17 Narrower Poems) (2008), poems in EOAGH and Elective Affinities and on Cross Cultural Poetics, as well as critical writing on Ted Berrigan and Harris Schiff, Charles Bernstein, the New York School and Giorno Poetry Systems. Currently, he lives in Cincinnati, where he teaches at the University of Cincinnati and records everything he can. You can hear several recent readings on his PennSound author page

Read "Towards No Horizon," "A Loose Association to Departure," and "An Anthology of Lost Hotel Rooms" by Michael S. Hennessey in EOAGH 5:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/hennessey.html

KRISTIN PREVALLET is the editor of A Helen Adam Reader (National Poetry Foundation, 2007). Her most recent book of poetry is I, Afterlife: Essay in Mourning Time. She teaches writing at St. John's University and lives in Brooklyn.

Work by Prevallet is forthcoming in EOAGH 6 this summer.

FRANK SHERLOCK is the author of OVER HERE (Factory School) and a collaboration with CA Conrad entitled The City Real & Imagined (Factory School). His New Orleans collaboration with Brett Evans is entitled Ready-to-Eat Individual (Lavender Ink). Feast Day Gone & Coming (Cy Gist Press) is a new chapbook forthcoming in June 2010. He is a co-founder of PACE (Poet Activist Community Extension and a native Philadelphian.

Read a selection from "Daybook of Perversities and Main Events" by Frank Sherlock in EOAGH 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/sherlock.html

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

Susie Timmons and Michael Gottlieb

Sunday, June 20 @4PM (note this time is different)

E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor

Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

141. Christophe Casamassima

Re: FISHTOWN, Philly > Tuesday the 15th

Tue 15 Jun 2010

Paul,

Can you get me in touch with Paul Mancinelli? I have friends in Fishtown and just recently heard about this series.

Thanks!

Christophe Casamassima

On Mon, Jun 14, 2010 at 9:20 AM, Paul Siegell <[redacted]> wrote:
> .•:¨¨:•. TUESDAY, JUNE 15 at 7pm .•:¨¨:•.
>
> @ The Slingluff Gallery (11 W. Girard Ave, Phila, PA 19123)
>
> The Fishtown Airways Reading Series presents: MICHAEL STEFFEN & PAUL SIEGELL
>
> HOSTED by JIM MANCINELLI
>
> MICHAEL STEFFEN's first full-length poetry collection, No Good at Sea, was > published by Legible Press in 2002. His second, Heart Murmur, was published > by Bordighera Press in 2009. Michael was granted a 2002 Fellowship from the > Pennsylvania Council on the Arts and has had poems appear in a wide variety > of journals including Poetry, Potomac Review, The Ledge, Poet Lore, Rhino > and many others. Michael is a Y2K graduate of the MFA in Creative Writing > Program at Vermont College and currently lives in Roseto, Pennsylvania > (http://mnsteffen.com/).
>
> PAUL SIEGELL is the author of three books of poetry: wild life rifle fire > (Otoliths Books, 2010), jambandbootleg (A-Head Publishing, 2009) and > Poemergency Room (Otoliths Books, 2008). He is an editor at Painted Bride > Quarterly, and has contributed to The American Poetry Review, Coconut, NOÖ, > Rattle, SIR! and many other fine journals. He has also been featured in two > national music and culture magazines, Paste and Relix, as well as elsewhere > exciting. Kindly find more of Paul's work at "ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL" > (http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com).

>
> yours,
> paul>
> http://bit.ly/aLaNz2
>
>

↑ Index

142. Ana Bo¾ièeviæ

Announcing the Stain summer calendar!

Tue 15 Jun 2010

Stain of Poetry
http://stainofpoetry.com

Dog days of summer? Why who says so. With a trio of stellar readings lined up for you, Stain is all about the summer in the city!

June 25, Friday
James Bellflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim Gek Lin Short, Wendy Wisner

July 30, Friday
Amy De'Ath, Gordon Massman, Tracy O Connor, Kate Schapira, Dustin Williamson, Octavio R. Gonzalez

August 27, Friday
Jennifer Karmin, Joanna Ruocco, Allison Benis White, Peter Spagnuolo, Eric Lindley, Amina Cain, Amarnath Ravva

Stay tuned for details.

↑ Index

143. Ruth Lepson

Re: EOAGH presents Hennessey, Prevallet, and Sherlock (6/17)

Tue 15 Jun 2010

---

love MH's 'pencil-dark' in the EOAGH poem.

On 6/15/10 4:22 AM, "Tim Peterson" <[redacted]> wrote:

> EOAGH Reading Series:
>
> Michael S. Hennessey, Kristin Prevallet,
>
> and Frank Sherlock

Thursday, June 17 at 7PM

at Unnameable Books,

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

MICHAEL S. HENNESSEY is the managing editor of PennSound and the editor of Jacket2, the new journal that will continue the mission of John Tranter's Jacket starting in 2011. Recent publications include the chapbooks [static] (2009) and Last Days in the Bomb Shelter (17 Narrower Poems) (2008), poems in EOAGH and Elective Affinities and on Cross Cultural Poetics, as well as critical writing on Ted Berrigan and Harris Schiff, Charles Bernstein, the New York School and Giorno Poetry Systems. Currently, he lives in Cincinnati, where he teaches at the University of Cincinnati and records everything he can. You can hear several recent readings on his PennSound author page

Read "Towards No Horizon," "A Loose Association to Departure," and "An Anthology of Lost Hotel Rooms" by Michael S. Hennessey in EOAGH 5:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/hennessey.html

KRISTIN PREVALLET is the editor of A Helen Adam Reader (National Poetry Foundation, 2007). Her most recent book of poetry is I, Afterlife: Essay in Mourning Time. She teaches writing at St. John's University and lives in Brooklyn.

Work by Prevallet is forthcoming in EOAGH 6 this summer.

FRANK SHERLOCK is the author of OVER HERE (Factory School) and a collaboration with CA Conrad entitled The City Real & Imagined (Factory School). His New Orleans collaboration with Brett Evans is entitled Ready-to-Eat Individual (Lavender Ink). Feast Day Gone & Coming (Cy Gist Press) is a new chapbook forthcoming in June 2010. He is a co-founder of PACE (Poet Activist Community Extension and a native Philadelphian.

Read a selection from "Daybook of Perversities and Main Events" by Frank Sherlock in EOAGH 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/sherlock.html

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

Susie Timmons and Michael Gottlieb

Sunday, June 20 @4PM (note this time is different)

E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor

> Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

144. Tribbey, Hugh R.
Re: New Book from Chalk Editions
Tue 15 Jun 2010

Cool.

_____

From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) on behalf of Carfagna, Richard Sent: Fri 6/11/2010 3:10 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: New Book from Chalk Editions

Hi,
My new book, Symphony No.1 is now available at:
http://chalkeditions.co.cc <http://chalkeditions.co.cc/>

There's also many other wonderful titles.
Check them out.

Be Well,
Ric

↑ Index

145. Paul Siegell
Re: FISHTOWN, Philly > Tuesday the 15th
Tue 15 Jun 2010

Hi Christophe,

Jim Mancinelli is at mancinelli51 (at) gmail (dot)com

http://www.planbpress.com/events.html

Jim Mancinelli hosts and curates Fishtown Airways Poetry Series at the Slingluff Gallery: 11 W. Girard Ave., Philadelphia, PA 19125. The 3rd Tuesday of the month. Schedule:

June 15: Paul Siegell & Michael Steffen .....TOOOOONIGHT!!!
July 20: Joyce Meyers & Liz Abrams-Morley
no August reading
September 21: Samantha Barrow & Daniel Collins
October 19: J.C. Todd & Emari Gregario

November 16: Jim Cory & Stephen Potter
December 21: THE BRYN MAWR STUDENTS

FiSHTOWN ToNIGHT,
paul>
http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

146. Iris Law
Just Released: LANTERN REVIEW, Issue 1
Tue 15 Jun 2010

We are pleased to announce the release of the inaugural issue of *Lantern Review: A Journal of Asian American Poetry, *featuring contributions by:

Angela Veronica Wong, Changming Yuan, Melissa Roxas, Frances Won, Vuong Quoc Vu, Ocean Vuong, Kevin Minh Allen, Maria T. Allocco, Jon Pineda, Subhashini Kaligotla, Eileen R. Tabios, Rachelle Cruz, Sankar Roy, Vanni Taing, Asterio Enrico N. Gutierrez, Jai Arun Ravine, Desmond Kon Zhicheng-Mingdé, Henry W. Leung, Luisa A. Igloria, Barbara Jane Reyes, Hsiao-Shih (Raechel) Lee, Steve Wing, Rebecca Y.M. Cheung, Elaine Wang, Ray Craig, Craig Santos Perez, Phayvanh Luekhamhan, Tamiko Beyer, Soham Patel, Bushra Rehman, Matthew Olzmann, & Kristine Uyeda.

Read it online at:

http://www.lanternreview.com/issue1/cover.html

Or find out more about us at our main web site<http://www.lanternreview.com>or blog <http://www.lanternreview.com/blog>.

Many thanks,

Iris A. Law, Editor
Mia Ayumi Malhotra, Associate Editor

↑ Index

147. paolo javier
P||R||O||J||E||C||T||I||O||N||S #2, June 20, 6 pm @ the BPC
Tue 15 Jun 2010

Sunday, June 20, 6 pm at the Bowery Poetry Club marks the second event of the P||R||O||J||E||C||T||I||O||N||S series, curated by Paolo Javier and Jeremy J F Thompson. Our series presents an active intersection of moving text and moving image:

1. text moving sonically through space

* 2. image moving on the surface of a screen*

The fundamental scenario presents one or more present persons utilizing words &/or sounds &/or movement to mediate both spatially and conceptually between images on a screen and a live audience. Performing this Sunday are:

KATE EICHORN, author of Fond (BookThug, 2008) and co-editor of Prismatic Publics: Innovative Canadian Women's Poetry and Poetics (Coach House Books, 2009). A second collection of poetry, Fieldnotes: a forensic, is forthcoming in fall 2010 from BookThug. She teaches writing and cultural theory at The New School.

DANNY SNELSON, a writer, editor, and archivist recently acclimated to Philadelphia. His online editorial work can be found on UbuWeb<http://www.ubuweb.com/>, PennSound <http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound>, and Eclipse. He is the founder of Aphasic Letters <http://www.aphasic-letters.com/> (with Phoebe Springstubb) and No Input Books <http://www.noinputbooks.com/> (with James Hoff). Gallery screenings, readings, and performances at Segue Series, Poetry Project, Dispatch Bureau <http://www.dispatchbureau.com/>, Ontological Hysteric Theater <http://www.ontological.com/>, Subtext Series<http://subtextreadingseries.blogspot.com/>, Gallery D21 Leipzig <http://www.d21-leipzig.de/>, Capricious Space<http://www.capriciousspace.com/>, CRG Gallery <http://www.crggallery.com/>, Lisa Cooley Gallery<http://www.lisa-cooley.com/>, and with free103point9 Transmission Arts <http://www.free103point9.org/>. Invited lectures at the Sorbonne, Centre Pompidou, &Now SUNY Buffalo, Princeton University and University of Washinton Bothell. Recent writing projects include Simultaneously Agitated Space<http://cuneiformpress.blogspot.com/2009/10/mimeo-mimeo-3-danny-snelson-issue.html>(Mimeo Mimeo #3), Endless Nameless <http://shop.dispatchbureau.com/index.php?/projects/indian-ocean/>(publishing used hard drives as functional archives), my Dear coUntess <http://my-dear-countess.blogspot.com/> (an epistolary vlog translation), Equi Nox <http://www.noinputbooks.com/3/> (a bowdlerized edition of Samuel Delany's classic novel), The Book of Ravelling Women<http://aphasic-letters.com/ravelling_women/>(rewriting an illegitimate Djuna Barnes chapbook), and No-Body Zone <http://nobodyzone.com/> (a collaboratively expanded audiobook archive). Currently, he's working around textual conditions, editorial strategies, and media technologies at the University of Pennsylvania.

JAMES COPELAND, author of the chapbooks A Constructing Egg and Why I Steal, and co-author of Whole Milk. A long work for voice, piano, marimba, and video, entitled Menhir, debuted earlier this year. Poems have appeared or are forthcoming in Fence, No Dear, 6x6, and other journals. He lives in Brooklyn, New York, where he is Managing Director at Ugly Duckling Presse.

*Sunday, June 20
Bowery Poetry Club
308 Bowery (and Bleecker St)
$6 at the door.
Full bar available.*

Historical practices related to this series: Benshi (Japan), Pyônsa (Korea), Benzi (Taiwan), Gavrilov Translations (USSR), Lector (Poland).

Contemporary practices related to this series: Movietelling, Neo-Benshi, Voiceover, Redubbing, Gag Dub, Resubtitling.

In the last 5 years, these practices have emerged in clusters throughout the world, owing in part to practitioners' frustrations with the limitations of certain mediums, and in part to the collective social urge to confront and appropriate the onslaught of information and media that now overwhelms us.

Our hope is that this series might become a hub, an intersection for practitioners already stretching and breaking the bounds within their own mediums and communities. We will showcase poets, film-makers, musicians, performance artists, scholars, critics, editors, and other producers and managers of meaning and form. Please come, and do pass along this invitation!

--
http://blog.myspace.com/paolojavier
http://www.2ndavepoetry.com/

↑ Index

148. Cara Benson
Invitation to Celebrate Leslie Scalapino
Tue 15 Jun 2010

We honorÂ her passing and celebrate her not ever
LESLIE SCALAPINO

We honorÂ her passing and celebrate her not ever passing.
Â
"In making a connection, I'm not proposing that one's language, sounds, conceptual shapes alter events outside. Rather, writing can note that one's/their sounds and conceptual shapes are eventsÂ -- that are also along with events in the outside. A poem may place these together. As such one's conceptions alter oneself and being, and alter their and one being outside. The individual (and any individual instance) occurs as reading. As: while, alongside, and being (reading is an act)."Â Â Â -- LS, "Eco-logic in Writing" inÂ EcoLanguage Reader (Brenda Iijima, ed)

Â
â€œâ€¦ â€˜horizontalâ€™ is a way of seeing everything flowing, existing at different times in parallel simultaneous spacesâ€“not permanent, but not ever passing either.â€ -LS in conversation w/Elizabeth Bryant, Dusie #8

Â
Leslie Scalapino's writing placed inside/outsideÂ events together with/in spacetime. Reading Leslie Scalapino is/as an altering act/event. We honorÂ her passing and celebrate her not ever passing. We invite you to write alongside/simultaneously to/of/onÂ her work for a special issue of Delirious Hem, http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/.

We are especially interested in critical appreciations and analyses (in any style or format) of passages from Leslie Scalapino's work. The Barbara Guest Memory Bank, http://www.asu.edu/pipercwcenter/how2journal//bg_memorybank/bg_memory.html, edited by Lauren Shufran for the Summer 2007 issue of How2, might serve as a model, as might the Alice Notley Constellation (http://www.bbk.ac.uk/cprcevents/alicenotley.html) edited by Carol Watts. Poems, images, personal memorials, and short essays are also welcome.

Since 2006, Delirious Hem has been devoted to writing by and about experimental women poets. Topics have included features on Kundiman, Lucille Clifton, kari edwards, the Dusie kollektiv adventskalender, Gurlesque, and the "Numbers Trouble" controversy. Contributors have included Anne Boyer, Bernadette Mayer, Amy King, Alison Roh Park, Evie Shockley, Lee Ann Brown, Hoa Nguyen, Gloria Anzaldua, Jennifer Bartlett, Vanessa Place, Tara Betts, T.A. Noonan, Sharon Mesmer, Naomi Shihab Nye, Sarah Vap, Rachel Levitsky, Mairead Byrne, Marcella Durand, Myung Mi Kim, and many others.

Deadline: Aug 1

Very best,

Cara Benson (cbenson67Â [at] yahooÂ [dot] com)
Elizabeth Bryant (miss.elizabeth.bryant [at] gmail [dot] com)
Cathy WagnerÂ (cathwagner [at] gmail [dot] com)
Â
Â
Â
Â Â

Â
Â
_____Â
http://www.necessetics.comÂ {homepage}Â
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.htmlÂ {journal}

↑ Index

149. Andy Gricevich

THE RECURRENT END LOZENGE-SHAPED READING: Hauser, Karmin, Yearous-Algozin in Madison

Tue 15 Jun 2010

We are all sweatily enthusiastic about the RECURRENT END LOZENGE-SHAPED POETRY READING, featuring the strange, varied virtuosities and anti-virtuosities of Milwaukee's MIKE HAUSER, Chicago's JENNIFER KARMIN and Buffalo's JOEY YEAROUS-ALGOZIN.

Them three poets will read on Saturday, June 19th
7 p.m.
The Project Lodge
817 E. Johnson St.

for a suggested, non-obligatory but heartily encouraged $5-15 donation (or more!)
There will be a bit of food and drink.
We'll start on time!
Expect performativity, silliness, and the opening of the chasm of being.

See you there!

yourn,

Andy & Lewis

http://readingshaped.wordpress.com

Mike Hauser is from rural Wisconsin and now lives in Milwaukee, where he recently edited an issue of Burdock, and with Karl Saffran curates the Salacious Banter Reading Series. He has published some chaps including crets crets crets (Rust Buckle Books), Dirty Movies Late At Night (Rust Buckle Books), and most recently Psychic Headset(Mitzvah Chaps).

Jennifer Karminâ€™s text-sound epic, Aaaaaaaaaaalice, was published by Flim Forum Press in 2010. She curates the Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise.Â Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, community centers, and on city streets across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. A proud member of the Dusie Kollektiv, she is the author of the Dusie chapbook Evacuated: Disembodying Katrina. Walking Poem, a collaborative street project, is featured online at How2. At home in Chicago, Jennifer teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the public schools. http://aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

Joey Yearous-Algozin is the author of Kensington Notebook(Lean-To Press) and BOSTON STREET/TREES (Lean-To Press). He is currently working towards his PhD at the University at Buffalo.

SAMPLE POEMS:

They are as storms
watching TV, watching Ellen.
Their ass is the carbuncle and the static corner of the plaza.
Seeing the plaza, my big black cup foretells magical emanations of catholically soft swingset regulation.

Lil Debbie as a cornpone Eco-Desk Light Fixture Jenny Diamond Oâ€™Dell makes a primitive bomb from Dog Shampoo and simplified sour mash.

Cumming is sustained in every municipality Jean Sugg diddled. John Pdorntonâ€™s friend, Fabric Softener, did an equipment check. Latest reports are the board will gush hot feathery surplus into our and around itâ€™s edges.

â€œThis is Vince Grey from Vince Grey Roofing. Walt Partridge told me to give you a call about the leaks in the church.â€

Norfolk Floral Virginiaâ€™s Total Joint Center was vibrating like a strobe.
Orgies began that we couldnâ€™t finish, waning off-white within itâ€™s walls. We tried to arrange ourselves differently, then differently, in itâ€™s matrix.

Part cum soon.
Part cum later.
Part came last week.

--Mike Hauser

wish you were here

a and animals background be bison boots boy bright camera cheese comfortable country covered cowboy culture do dollars doritos elk facing fake feathers food for foreign fought garb garbage girl hat herds history how i in indian it know like little mayonnaise moose nature new not now of our outfit own packaging people red relate sandwich see shooting six soda suppressed tomahawk ten the they this to tourism used we wearing whole with women Yellowstone

--Jennifer Karmin

from DINNER & A MOVIE

My Premium

Crispy / Grilled

Chicken

Classic / Club / Ranch BLT

Sandwich

--Joey Yearous-Algozin

↑ Index

150. Al Filreis
Fellow in Poetics & Poetic Practice at Penn
Tue 15 Jun 2010

Dear friends:

I'm very pleased to announce that Marcella Durand will be the CPCW Fellow in Poetics & Poetic Practice here at Penn for next year. In the spring semester she will teach a creative writing course in eco-poetics.

Durand's bio and a brief description of her course are here:

http://writing.upenn.edu/projects/poeticsfellow.php

- Al Filreis

Al Filreis
http://www.writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis

↑ Index

151. Christophe Casamassima
Furniture Press Books: McCreary & Carr
Tue 15 Jun 2010

I'm happy to say that Chris' "Undone" and Emily's "Directions for Flying" are down to about 10 copies each. I've set up a second printing of each and should have them by next week.

Thanks to everyone who ordered copies. Your donations are appreciated, and gratefully!

Cheers,

Christophe Casamassima

furniturepressbooks.com

↑ Index

152. Christophe Casamassima

Reviewers needed for Dialogue's End (plus) Baltimore Center for the Emerging Text announcement

Tue 15 Jun 2010

Good evening,

The Dialogue's End blog (http://dialoguesend.blogspot.com/) is in need of poetry title reviewers. I began the blog ages ago but cannot sustain it without help from writers who might need a venue to share their ideas.

The basic premise of the blog is twofold:

1. Review a (newish) book of poetry
2. Develop a dialogue (interview) with the writer of the book

In the end, one will have created an inter(re)view of the title and the writer.

I'm not sure if something similar has been done before. Perhaps the two acts could be melded into one?

I'm open to ideas.

Also, this will be part of the Furniture Press Books website, and all reviewers will have free reign to decide with which titles/writers they feel it necessary to create a dialogue, and to persue a format that best suits the task.

We're also developing a project called The Baltimore Center for the Emerging Text (B-CET), a multi-facted space and resource center which will include a performance venue, a small press poetry library/electronic catalogue, resources for small presses, bookmakers, writers, librarians, students, teachers, DIYers... the list goes on... Anyone who may be interested in hosting events, workshops, talks, lectures, please backchannel to [redacted]. I will anounce a general strategic planning meeting in the weeks to come. Those in Baltimore are urged to come; those outside also, but your eMails will be equally urged, especially if your ideas bring this concept to fruition!

In light of that, we're also looking for donations of small and large press poetry books, chapbooks, pamlphets, zines, ephemera, incunabula for our library. The central aspect of the Center is to develop creative literacy skills beyond our status quo, unfortunately lacking education in the poetic arts!

Thanks!

Christophe

↑ Index

153. derek beaulieu

new from No press: ROTATED ALPHABET by Anatol Knotek

Tue 15 Jun 2010

No press is proud to announce the publication of

ROTATED ALPHABET
by Anatol Knotek

This beautiful suite of highly rigorous visual poems can be previewed here: http://is.gd/cQoNj

published in an edition of 50 hand-sewn copies (of which 25 are for sale) $5 each (including shipping)

for more information, or to order copies, email
[redacted]

↑ Index

154. Chris Jones

more absolute deviation

Tue 15 Jun 2010

Just to let you know I have posted more on my blog; Deleuze's absolute idealism and onto electronic colour comments welcomed

http://abdevpoetics.blogspot.com/

--
have chronic fatigue syndrome so may be delayed in reply or brain fog weird

just to let you know that's all, Chris Jones.

Blog: http://abdevpoetics.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

155. Paul Siegell
MEDIA, PA > Thursday the 17th
Wed 16 Jun 2010

.•:¨¨:•. THURSDAY, JUNE 17 at 7pm .•:¨¨:•.

@ The Delaware County Institute of Science (11 Veterans Square, Media, PA 19063)

The Mad Poets Society's "3rd Thursday Readings" present: STEVE BURKE & PAUL SIEGELL
(Open mic to follow)

STEVE BURKE lives in Philadelphia with his wife and daughter where he works as a labor and delivery nurse. Steve has published his poetry in the Painted Bride Quarterly, Look Quick, Asphodel, Spitball, and Mad Poets Review. His two manuscripts, Thirty-Six Views of Here and Building An Onion, are awaiting publication.

PAUL SIEGELL is the author of three books of poetry: wild life rifle fire (Otoliths Books, 2010), jambandbootleg (A-Head Publishing, 2009) and Poemergency Room (Otoliths Books, 2008). He is an editor at Painted Bride Quarterly, and has contributed to The American Poetry Review, Coconut, NOÖ, Rattle, SIR! and many other fine journals. He has also been featured in two national music and culture magazines, Paste and Relix, as well as elsewhere exciting. Kindly find more of Paul's work at "ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL" (http://paulsiegell.blogspot.com).

yours,
paul>
http://bit.ly/aLaNz2

↑ Index

156. Bob Heman
CLWN WR 48 debuts this friday at Westbeth in a celebration of poetry and music and dance
Wed 16 Jun 2010

This Friday, June 18, CLWN WR 48 will debut at the 11th Big CLWN WR Event in the Community Room at Westbeth, during an evening of poetry and music and dance. The new issue contains very small poems by Judy Kamilhor, Bob Holman, Susan Gerardi Bello, Juanita Torrence-Thompson, Philip Rowland, Patrick Cahill, E K Smith, Sparrow, Scott Metz, Steve Dalachinsky, Susan Gangel, Kit Kennedy, Mary Orovan, Susan Maurer, Bob Heman, and Moira T. Smith, and will be given free to all who attend.

The Event will run from 7:00-10:00 in the Westbeth Community Room, at 155 Bank Street/57 Bethune St. in the West Village. Admission is free.

The featured readers for the evening will be Basil King and Liza Wolsky, who will be joined by singers Carolyn Ota and Moira T. Smith, dancers Nathan Whiting and Christina Robson, and poets R. Nemo Hill, Evie Ivy, Judy Kamilhor, Elinor Nauen, Adriana Scopino, George Spencer, and Phyllis Wat, with a special treat from Mindy Levokove.

The reading will be hosted by myself, Bob Heman, and The Westbeth Artists Residents Council Literary Arts Committee. Westbeth is an artists' housing complex in the far West Village convenient to the 14th St. stop on the A, C and E trains, the West 4th Street stop on the A, C, E, B, D & F trains, and the Christopher St. stop on the 1 train. 57 Bethune St. is mid-block b/w Washington and West Streets, then up steps to inner courtyard. 155 Bank St. is mid-block b/w Washington and West Streets, enter outer courtyard and up ramp to inner courtyard.

***

Also this weekend, on Sunday, June 20, at 2:00, I'll be reading with poets Lewis Warsh and Jeffrey Cyphers Wright at Tribes Gallery, on the 2nd floor at 285 East 3rd St. (between Aves. C and D in the East Village), to start off an afternoon of poetry and music as part of the annual multi-venue Visions Festival. A $5 donation for Tribes is requested.

Bob Heman
[redacted]

↑ Index

157. David Kirschenbaum
Call for Work: Boog Fest's Poets' Theater
Wed 16 Jun 2010

please forward

Call for Work:

Boog City's Poets' Theater

Sun. Sept. 26, 2010

Curated by Gary Sullivan

On Day 3 of the 4th annual Welcome to Boog City Festival

Zinc Bar
82 W. 3rd St.
New York City

Open reading period for submissions of plays.

New playwrights encouraged, all welcome.

Pieces should be no more than 10 minutes long (up to 7 pages long).

Be sure to put title, your name, address, phone, and email on cover sheet.

Deadline Thurs. July 18, 2010.

email plays (as attachments) and inquiries to:

[redacted]

↑ Index

158. Camille Martin
Re: The Alterran Poetry Assemblage
Wed 16 Jun 2010

Good to see this available, David! & I look forward to getting your new book from BookThug!

Camille

_____
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [[redacted]] On Behalf Of David Dowker [[redacted]]
Sent: Saturday, June 05, 2010 12:49 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: The Alterran Poetry Assemblage

The Alterran Poetry Assemblage can now only be found at Library and Archives Canada:

http://epe.lac-bac.gc.ca/003/008/099/003008-disclaimer.html?orig=/100/202/300/alterran/index.html

David

[redacted]

*

MACHINE LANGUAGE is available from BookThug:

http://www.bookthug.ca/proddetail.php?prod=201002

& SPD:

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781897388518/machine-language.aspx

↑ Index

159. Joel Weishaus
Poetica - Michael McClure's "Mysteriosos"
Wed 16 Jun 2010

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

This is the fourth Poetica review, in which I discuss Michael McClure's latest book of poems, "Mysteriosos":
http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Poetica/blog-4.htm

-Joel Weishaus

Homepage: http://web.pdx.edu/~pdx00282
On-Line Archive:
www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/index.htm

↑ Index

160. David Chirot
Re: poets for living waters
Wed 16 Jun 2010

Dear Jared & Everyone:

still recovering from an operation so am a bit behind on email--though have followed this the last few days--

i am sending a longer version of a question written last week-- might one not ask-- as some have--

whose "living waters"?-- are poets to write about-- wondering, with others,--is the attention to be on the poets?
rather than the "living waters"?-- is this a form of privatized therapy, self help-- carried out in public, dramatized "in real time"-- narcissistic adventures, poses, spoken parts--?
"feeling good about oneself" for writing re "living waters" . . .
while "living waters" go on dying-- are the "living waters" exclusive? limited to just one area of "living waters"?-- are the "living waters" being exploited?-- for the therapeutic or career values?-- for the "show"--

for sheer accumulation--huge quantities--of poems--piling up-- to "balance the scales"--scales of justice--scales of weights measures values-- fish scales--?-- will the poems do Freud's "work of mourning"--- will the poems function like Reagan's "trickle down economy"-- poem tears and waters trickling down through time to touch --someone--

"poets for living waters"--

are their poets for another assault on "living waters"-- the Israeli commando attack on a humanitarian aid flotilla in International Waters-- are therer poets for the starving people of Somalia, whose coastline for fishing is toxic, being used as an international waste dump for the powerful nations--computer dumps--leaking toxins-- when the starving attack a ship, they are called "pirates"-- "terrorists"--their country being of course "linked to terrorism" in the eyes of the usa--

of course, when humanitarian aid workers are attacked in international Waters by state commandos-- they must be "terrorists" too--

the "living waters"--
whose "living waters?"--

"the living waters" running through Southwestern Indian rezervations, seeping into the soil for decades--toxic from mining, toxic with radioactivity from atomic tests long ago--

"living waters" along the lower Mississippi River--made toxic by chemical wastes dumped in areas where the poorest people live--

"living waters" around Chernobyl, Three Mile Island--producing Ukrainian deformed children--kids with strange complaints near Three Mile island--

"living waters"--tap water-- having to be paid for by communities, their being owned by private corporations--in the USA--and not long ago in Bolivia-- think how each day, "living waters," beings, humans, reefs, plants, ways of life, rivers, streams, ponds, lakes, puddles, rain drops--are killed off by toxic dumping, toxic oil and toxic anti-humanitarianism--the toxins deliberately dumped on Indian lands--

the "living waters" of Gaza which are 93% polluted, raw sewage running in the streets, due to deliberate bombing--due to siege--no parts of any kind allowed in to repair anything-whose "living waters"--entire coastline of Lebanon polluted, toxic for hundreds of years due to targeted "smart" bombing of sewage and chemical plants-- whose "living waters?"--the waters of Iraq--rendered toxic, killing 500,000 children in the 1990's--shocked and awed all over again--since 2003--continually pounded water mains--toxic, polluted, undrinkable-- toxic waters in China, India, the Amazon . . . Alaska--

the "living waters" --think on all the "living" and dying waters of the world-- and of how many ways they are made toxic-

all the poets of the world need "living waters"--

without "living waters" --
for all--
there won't be "living poets"--

nor poems for "living waters"--

that's my non-poem--

↑ Index

161. Sharon Mesmer/David Borchart
Have Fulbright, will travel ... to Russia
Thu 17 Jun 2010

Hi everyone,

I'll be teaching in Orsk, Russia next spring, as a Fulbright Specialist, and was wondering if anyone knows any English-speaking poets/poetry-type people in that region with whom I could make contact while there -- ?? You can back channel me at [redacted].

With many thanks, and good thoughts,
Sharon Mesmer

↑ Index

162. Dan Wilcox
Poets in the Park 2010
Thu 17 Jun 2010

Poets in the Park 2010

Saturdays in July

at the Robert Burns statue

Washington Park, Albany
at Henry Johnson Blvd. & Hudson Ave.

July 10, 7PM
Donald Wellman
Cheryl A. Rice

July 17, 7PM
Aleathia Drehmer
Nickey Black

July 24, 7PM
Thomas Brinson
Tamara Gabbard

July 31, 7PM
Susan Deer Cloud
Guy Reed

Free! & open to the public (just like the park)

Rain site: the Social Justice Center, 33 Central Ave.

sponsored by the Poetry Motel Foundation & the Hudson Valley Writers Guild

for information call [redacted]

↑ Index

163. Christophe Casamassima

Audio Onthology...Calling all Baltimore (Area) Poets - Audio Project

Thu 17 Jun 2010

(Please distribute this call for work to all your colleagues, peers, students and associates)

Calling all poets from Baltimore City/County...

I'm developing an audio a/onthology (blog, perhaps) associated with the Furniture Press website and as a sister project of the Dialogue's End inter(re)views project. This big county/city is thriving with multifarious poetry projects and I want to document everything that's happening here (as far as one person can). In light of this, and I don't think this is a secret, but the Baltimore Historical Society is collecting works of poetry, in all formats, by Baltimore City poets. My project has no direct correlation to this collection process, but it is parallel. So...

What will it entail? I'll be recording individual poets reading from their books, or manuscripts, at the Towson Arts Collective in Towson, or at a location that is suitable for the poet.

I'll consider these three platforms:

1. I'll set up an evening where a group of poets can meet for a small, intimate reading session. I'll capture their (short) readings (about 5 minutes), then digitize the readings in mp3 or wav format, then add to the website (with bio, of course).

2. I'll set up a meeting with individual poets where they feel most comfortable reading. I understand some folks can't travel because of medical/physical circumstances. No one will be left out of this project.

3. You can send me a clean 5-minute reading of your poems (in mp3 or wav format) to:

Furniture Press Books
406 York Rd. (lower level)
Towson, MD 21204

Cheers,
Christophe Casamassima

↑ Index

164. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is NEOLIPIC by John M. Bennett.

Thu 17 Jun 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is NEOLIPIC by John M. Bennett.

Description:

158 poems (or barely constrained outbursts) written in the Spring of 2009 in which John M. Bennett tries to reformat the world with a swarm of linguistic distortions and formal jiggling, bursting out of the thin shirt of consciousness to reveal what's out there and also what's in there. The poems are textual, visual, aural, multi-lingual (English, Spanish, - or their simulacra - and bits of French and Globbolalia). Unlike anything else written.

Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/neolipic/11386673

↑ Index

165. amy king

New Work Up - Poets for Living Waters

Thu 17 Jun 2010

FUNDRAISING TO SAVE THE GULFâ€“MICHAEL ROTHENBERG OF BIG BRIDGE RALLIES UPCOMING COMMUNITY ACTION

BLACKBURNIAN WARBLER BY JONATHAN SKINNER
MARE PETROLEUM BY JAMES REIDEL
THREE POEMS BY MICHAEL LEE RATTIGAN
FINAL POEM FOR THE BODY BY RICKEY LAURENTIIS
FOUR POEMS BY KAZIM ALI
THREE POEMS BY LARA CANDLAND
MISSISSIPPI BY CAITLIN THOMPSON
TWO POEMS BY BRIAN SPEARS
FROM THINGS COLUMBUS SAID ABOUT GOLD BY SCOTT ABELS
THREE PROSE POEMS BY MICHAEL LEONG
JUST DIGESTED BY LEORA FRIDMAN
PIMP MY TOP KILL LIVE FEED MOTHERSHIP BY SHARON MESMER

http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

Complete list here + note about Poets for Living Waters - http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/06/14/not-your-usual-media-coverage/

 Juice - + http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html + http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster + http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm + http://amyking.org

****

↑ Index

166. Poetry Project
Leslie Scalapino Memorial
Thu 17 Jun 2010

Monday, June 21, 8 PM
Memorial for Leslie Scalapino

It is with heavy hearts that we will open the doors of the Parish Hall so that we may all come together in friendship and grief to remember and celebrate the life and work of Leslie Scalapino, one of our greatest poets, who passed away on May 28th. Guests who will speak include Simone Fattal, Joan Retallack, Charles Bernstein, Susan Bee, Ann Lauterbach, Susan Howe, Paolo Javier, Fiona Templeton, Laura Elrick, Rodrigo Toscano, Steve Clay, Rachel Levitsky, Susan Landers, James Sherry, Brenda Iijima, Pierre Joris, Judith Goldman, E. Tracy Grinnell and Tom White.

There will be a wine and cheese reception to follow. We¹ll have a book table with titles by Leslie, plus 50 canvas bags that she collaborated on with Kiki Smith. We¹ll be accepting donations for the bags starting at $25. All proceeds from books and bags will be donated to Poets In Need http://www.poetsinneed.org/.

FREE.

If you can¹t attend but would like to honor Leslie Scalapino, please consider a charitable donation in her memory to: Poets in Need, PO Box 5411, Berkeley, CA 94705; Reed College for the Leslie Scalapino Scholarship, 3203 Southeast Woodstock Boulevard, Portland, OR 97202-8199; The AYCO Charitable Foundation, PO Box 15203, Albany, NY 12212-5203 for the Leslie Scalapino-O Books Fund to support innovative works of poetry, prose and art; or to a charitable organization of your choice.

The Memorial follows two performances of Scalapino¹s Noh play FlowWinged Crocodile at Poets House:

Saturday, June 19, at 7PM & Sunday, June 20, at 2PM
Flow‹Winged Crocodile: A Noh Play by Leslie Scalapino

Directed by Fiona Templeton, with Katie Brown, Stephanie Silver and Julie Troost. Dance by Molissa Fenley. Music by Joan Jeanrenaud. Projected drawings by Eve Biddle. Technical director: Ray Roy III.

This Noh play by poet Leslie Scalapino travels between the left and right sides of the brain, with appearances by a reincarnated Patty Hearst in the 1974 SLA bank heist and a green-winged creature that is part crocodile, part Michelin man and part charging rhino. The play is performed by The Relationship, a performance group directed by Fiona Templeton that specializes in innovative language and use of site.

Leslie Scalapino is the ground-breaking, genre-stretching author of thirty books of poetry, poem-plays, essays, and fiction, including way, which won the American Book Award; Sight, a collaboration with Lyn Hejinian; Zither & Autobiography; The Tango; New Time; and It¹s go in horizontal: Selected Poems 1974-2006.

Cosponsored by Belladonna and The Poetry Project.
Poets House is at 10 River Terrace in Battery Park City.

$10, $7 for students and seniors, free to Poetry Project and Poets House Members

↑ Index

167. amy king
Query - Media
Thu 17 Jun 2010

Query -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/06/17/huffington-post-arts-but-not-the-literary-arts/

Thanks,

Amy
****

Juice -
+ http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html
+ http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster
+ http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm
+ http://amyking.org

****

↑ Index

168. Jim Andrews
Netartery
Fri 18 Jun 2010

Recently at Netartery:

2 SHORT FILMS FROM ELO ARCHIVE & INNOVATE
http://netartery.vispo.com/?p=137 David Jhave Johnston asked 51 people at the recent conference on 'electronic writing' at Brown U what inspired their involvement in 'electronic literature' and videoed the responses. Participants include Landow, Cayley, Stefans, Funkhouser, Sondheim, Howe, Pressman, Luisebrank, M. Bernstein, Rettberg, and Montfort.

ON USING TOOLS MADE BY COMRADES
http://netartery.vispo.com/?p=146
Chris Funkhouser writes about tools written by digital poets: dbCinema (Jim Andrews); PyProse (Charles O. Hartman); MIDIPoet (Eugenio Tisselli); GTR Language Workbench (David Ayre & Andrew Klobucar).

ON PULSATE BY ANDRE MICHELLE
http://netartery.vispo.com/?p=192
Jim Andrews looks at an online interactive piece called Pulsate (that keys on kissing circles) by the guru of Flash audio, Belgium's Andre Michelle.

ja

↑ Index

169. David-Baptiste Chirot

José Saramago, Nobel Prize-Winning Writer, Dies--NY Times

Fri 18 Jun 2010

---

http://www.nytimes.com/2010/06/19/books/19saramago.html?nl=books&emc=booksupdateemb5

José Saramago, Nobel Prize-Winning Writer, Dies
By FERNANDA EBERSTADT
Published: June 18, 2010

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

170. Howe, William R. Dr.

New Slack Buddha Books

Fri 18 Jun 2010

Slack Buddha is happy to announce this season’s new La Perruque chapbooks:

Sonnagrams 1-20 by K. Silem Mohammad
The first installment of K. Silem Mohammad's anagrammatic manipulations of Shakespeare that tell us, among other things, that "Richard Nixon screwed a giant squid," and that there is "a word the OED omits," and "Whoever says it retches, dies, and shits." This one's a killer!

Ladybug Laws by Laura Moriarty
An imagined society of Ladybugs, you and I--Moriarty takes us into the realm of the possible where language and civil disobedience are both games to be played for real. "Some writers to their readers are as spiders / But you to me as reader are insectivore / Or creature of paradise".

Market Freakout by Stan Apps
Poetry is like the forces of the market. Adjustment of the forces is like being in love with "Santheripean Kingdies." Apps takes us on a poly-vocal exploration of the realities of a world run by Wall Street.

Alphabet Man by A. J. Patrick Liszkiewicz
The concrete poems in this volume are produced using all of the letters of the alphabet each exactly one time. Clean, provocative, and almost sculptural, Liszkiewicz plays with a very plastic conception of language. A must for those interested in the visual use of the letter.

http://slackbuddha.com/la_perruque.html
http://slackbuddha.com

↑ Index

171. Jennifer Karmin
Les Figues Press: NOT CONTENT
Fri 18 Jun 2010

We are very happy to announce NOT CONTENT, a series of text projects curated by Les Figues Press as part of the year-long initiative PUBLIC INTEREST at LACE (Los Angeles Contemporary Exhibitions). Concentrated in the summer season (June 21-September 30), and extending, to a lesser degree, through the fall, winter and spring, NOT CONTENT brings together an international group of writers who will be â€œin-residenceâ€ at LACE.Â The writers will investigate the ways in which language functions within public and private spheres and within the tenuous space between these real and imagined realms.Â Â

Please join us for the Summer Solstice Kickoff on Monday, June 21, 2010 from 8-10 PM, featuring work and/or performances by the first three writers-in-residence Douglas Kearney, Vanessa Place, and Divya Victor.

LACE (Los Angeles Contemporary Exhibitions)
6522 Hollywood Blvd.
Los Angeles, CA 90028
[redacted]
http://www.welcometolace.org

Douglas Kearney: June 21-July 12.Â COVERAGE: Drawing from BOOM, MESS and SPILL, each with its own language, COVERAGE will overflow and choke, creating its own mess of gulfs.Â Maybe you should clean it up, huh?Â Tag, you're it.Â What's the story of what just happened here?Â Â

Poet/performer/librettist Douglas Kearney's first full-length collection of poems Fear, Some, was published in 2006 by Red Hen Press.Â His second manuscript, The Black Automaton, was chosen by Catherine Wagner for the National Poetry Series and published by Fence Books in 2009.Â In 2008, he was honored with a Whiting Writers Award.Â An Idyllwild and Cave Canem fellow, Kearney has performed his poetry at the Public Theatre, Orpheum, and The World Stage.Â His poems have appeared in journals such as Callaloo, jubilat, nocturnes, Ninth Letter, Washington Square and Gulf Coast.Â Born in Brooklyn, now living in California's San Fernando Valley, he has a BA from Howard University and an

MFA in Writing from the California Institute of the Arts, where he now teaches courses in African American poetry, myth, hip hop and opera.Â Â Â

http://www.douglaskearney.com

Vanessa Place: June 21-July 19.Â STATEMENT OF FACTS: A poetic self-appropriation from Place's legal appellate briefs, STATEMENT OF FACTS sets forth, in narrative form, the evidence of the crime as presented at trial.Â What is a fact?Â Â

Of Vanessa Place and Robert Fittermanâ€™s Notes on Conceptualisms, Mary Kelly said, â€œI learned more about the impact of conceptualism on artists and writers than I had from reading so-called canonical works on the subject.â€ Place is also author of Dies: A Sentence, La Medusa, and The Guilt Project: Rape, Morality and Law, based on her work as an attorney representing indigent sex offenders on appeal. Place is co-director of Les Figues Press, and a regular contributor to X-TRA Contemporary Art Quarterly. Her most recent work is forthcoming in French by Ã©ditions Ã¨Â®e, as ExposÃ© des Faits, and in English by Blanc Press, as the triology, Statement of Facts, Statement of the Case, and Argument.

http://fr.wikipedia.org/wiki/Vanessa_Place

Divya Victor: June 21-July 12.Â HELLOCASTS: A re-transcription of Charles Reznikoffâ€™s book Holocaust, a poetic composition that appropriates the transcriptions from the speech of witnesses at the Eichmann and Nuremberg trials, into the shape of Hello Kitty. Part cartoon cat, part ubiquitous icon of popular pleasures, part branding of mouthless feminine forms, part symptom of our collective enthrallment with the cutely dependent and the seductively silent.Â
Â
Divya Victor has lived and learned in India, Singapore, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Seattle. She has an M.A. in Creative Writingâ€”Poetry and is currently working towards her Ph.D. in English at the University at Buffalo. Her work has appeared in ambit, XConnect, ixnay, generator, dusie, and is forthcoming in Presidentâ€™s Choice, broke, and Drunken Boat.Â

http://oodpress.net

Other writers-in-residence for the summer cycle of NOT CONTENT include Jenny Donovan and Gaby Torres, Maxi Kim, Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin, Mathew Timmons, Yedda Morrison, Johanna Drucker, Marco Huerto, Sawako Nakayasu, and Christine Wertheim.Â

↑ Index

172. Nicholas Karavatos
at Golden West College (Tebot Bach) in Huntington Beach, CA on Friday, June 25
Sat 19 Jun 2010

Tebot Bach welcomes poets Nicholas Karavatos & Kim Noriega to Golden West College.

Date: Friday, June 25, 2010
Time: 8:00pm - 9:00pm
Location: Golden West College, Community Room 102
Street: 15744 Goldenwest Street
City/Town: Huntington Beach, CA
http://www.facebook.com/event.php?eid=134992643182993

"Tebot Bach welcomes poets Nicholas Karavatos & Kim Noriega to Golden West College."

NICHOLAS KARAVATOS is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa's Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review (University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009).

David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: "Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity."

Nicholas Karavatos lives near Dubai, teaching at the American University of Sharjah in the United Arab Emirates. Previously he taught in Muscat, Sultanate of Oman. He is a graduate of New College of California and Humboldt State University.

KIM NORIEGA grew up in a suburb of Cleveland, Ohio, but in her late 20's bought a brand new Camaro, and -- with her five-year-old (beautiful!) daughter in tow -- drove "as far south and west" as possible without leaving the country -- to San Diego to be exact -- where they danced together on the beach singing Pretenders' songs and made angels of sand instead of snow.

Now that her daughter is grown, Kim spends her time (when not writing) putting her books in order according to the Dewey Decimal Number Classification System (mostly 800s) and thinking of crafts to make for her day job with her family literacy kids using yogurt containers. Kim's favorite flower is the lilac (closely followed by wild violets and black tulips) and her favorite color is red -- which is why she wore a red lace wedding gown when she married her beloved, Ernie.

Kim’s poem Heaven, 1963, first published in Tebot Bach's Blue Arc West: Anthology of California Poets, was featured by former U.S. Poet Laureate, Ted Kooser, in his nationally syndicated column, American Life in Poetry. The title poem of her first book, Name Me, recently published by Fortunate Daughter Press, was a finalist for the 2009 Joy Harjo prize.

http://www.tebotbach.org/

Reading & Book-signing with NICHOLAS KARAVATOS in Huntington Beach, CA
Nicholas Karavatos' next poetry reading/book-signing is in San Francisco, CA on Monday, July 5 at Bird & Beckett.

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

173. Tim Peterson

EOAGH presents Gottlieb and Timmons on 6/20 (Faux | Other Book Launch)

Sat 19 Jun 2010

EOAGH Reading Series:

Michael Gottlieb and Susie Timmons

Faux | Other Book Launch

celebrating the publication of new books from Faux|Other

Sunday, June 20 at 4PM

at Unnameable Books,

600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY

FREE

MICHAEL GOTTLIEB is the author of fourteen books including The Likes Of Us, Lost And Found, Gorgeous Plunge, The River Road and New York. In the 1970s he helped edit the magazine Roof. His new book Memoir and Essay from Faux|Other makes available two recent prose works by Gottlieb: "The Empire City" is a moving, eloquent, funny memoir focusing on the early days of Language Poetry - the personalities as well as the work. It also brings to life New York in the 1970s, that grim, foreboding, thrilling place, and what it meant to come of age as a writer then and there. An accompanying essay, "Jobs Of The Poets," asks two questions: what is the job of the poet, and what kind of jobs do poets have to take, so they can do their real job.

Read Gottlieb's review of Lydia Davis' Proust translation in EOAGH 4:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/gottlieb.html

Read "Jackson in New York," Gottlieb's essay on Jackson Mac Low in EOAGH 2:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuetwo/gottlieb.htm

SUSIE TIMMONS lives in Brooklyn, NY. Her most recent book is The New Old Paint, from Faux/Other.

Poems by Timmons are forthcoming in EOAGH.

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor

Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

174. Sarah Sarai
Re: poets for living waters
Sat 19 Jun 2010

David Chirot: Of course Amy's project is suspect but pretty much any project is suspect. I say vote with the heart and right now the heart is with the Gulf (ocean oceans water waters, hey, no one is saying let's save the Gulf but screw the Indian Ocean). Poets for Living Waters is offering one opp. for expression not declaring this is it--write a poem, publish it and the work is done. I remember, in the eighties, hearing a woman (twenty year-old in Seattle) almost apologizing for working to end Apartheid, her guilt being she could be using the same time (she worked with the American Friends Service Committee) to help people locally. That's always a question/issue requiring discernment--where to put the energy. But working to end Apartheid was not the equivalent of Angelina adopting little black babies, and adding to Poets for Living Waters is not a bad thing. If we look too closely at our motives and each others' motives we can only be disappointed.

David, I hope your recovery goes smoothly. It's always good to see your name on this listserv.

↑ Index

175. Halvard Johnson
Hamilton Stone Review #21 (Summer 2010) -- now online
Sat 19 Jun 2010

---

http://www.hamiltonstone.org/hsr.html

↑ Index

176. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City Gay Pride Issue Print and Online PDF Editions Available
Sat 19 Jun 2010

Please forward

Hi all,

The print edition of Boog City 64 will be available tonight. You can read the pdf version now at:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc64.pdf

Thanks,
David

Boog City 64: Gay Pride Issue 2010

A quick thanks to all of our editors and their contributors for acting so quickly and to alter their sections on a dime to enable us to get out this solid Gay Pride issue. I'm real grateful.

featuring:

On the Cover

Thereâ€™s a Riot Going On: Martin Boyce Remembers Stonewall and Gay Life Before AIDS, interview by Nathaniel Siegel

And from our poetry section, edited by Joanna Fuhrman
(excerpt below)

â€”Fort Greene, Brooklyn's Julian Brolaski with Sea Aloe Song
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
-Shakespeare, Sonnet 8.2

Stellar sea cows, svelte manatees embrace
And lob their salty aloes each to each
While we graze greenly on the filtered rays
Fanned from their froth. I beg for you to teach Me all the ways the Romans fucked, and how Juventius, with honeyed eyes, would sit
In Catulleâ€™s lap, and lick his salty brow.

and

fools act so hard

what, for a fool to act so hard saying no they will go get the wine leaving notes around like â€œlet cash be earned while youâ€™re sleeping or cruisingâ€

â€”Huntington, N.Y.'s Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ with Live a Little Turn the music on, any music.
Weâ€™re doing this like a school play.
First, youâ€™re born in a position of looseness: everyone, stand in the same position!
Hands down your sides, head-loll round:
thatâ€™s how you do â€œyou.â€ OK, next, â€œreligionâ€â€” Whatâ€™s the basis of this one? Rigidity.

â€”Chelsea's Bill Kushner with Lili Marlene

These streets, these rooms, these soldiers.
One guy plays from a dusty accordion, what a gloomy old place. No one dances. I sit on a bench. In a moment, I will ask him, Gunther, to dance with me. There are no women left for us, so why not dance, he and I together, to Lili Marlene?

and

Mason

Mason, of course, drops to his knees, while Kurt, of course, mutters something about never all while standing on one leg like a pink flamingo looking for love online. Does he have a huge thingo for Mr. Postman, or is it hey hey just us? Looking like the cat that just swallowed the canary, Kevin, you know him, comes in and comes in and comes in.

the re-launch of our small press section, now headed by Douglas Manson

â€”"The idea that a gay book is not just a keyhole into the hidden world of queerness, but a keyhole into the hidden world of men, is something that I have wanted in gay writing ever since I was a kid." from The Keyhole or the Gate: Rainbow Book Fair Organizer Perry Brass on The Queer Lit Expansion; Straw Gate Books

from our printed matter section, edited by Arlo Quint

â€”"The poems of The Tolerance Project swerve from meta-chat on violence and feminism and gay dogs, to fragments in a Big-Brother manual discussing the necessary containment of hope." from The Tolerance Project Redefines M.F.A. by Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

"It was â€¦ a great surprise to find that the bar patrons, Village Voice reporters, and even the cop who led the charge could speak about the dramatic unfolding of events in such vivid, heartfelt terms, as if those nights of 1969 were yesterday." from Beyond Drag-Queen Heroics: New Documentary Expands Perceptions of Stonewall Riots by Stephanie Gray

Art editor Cora Lambert brings us work from Red Hook, Brooklyn's Sophia Wallace.

From our music section, Urban Folk,
edited by Jonathan Berger

â€”"Like many a hip hop album, Soce, the Elemental Wizardâ€™s Master of Fine Arts has a storyline running through it. Like most rappers, Soce tries to keep it real, so what kind of adventures does the New Hampshire native relate? Read on." from When Strikes the Wizard: Gay Hip-Hopper Hurls His Hits; Master of Fine Arts, reviewed by Berger

And thanks to our new copy chief, Lauren Russell

Please patronize our advertisers:

Howard Cruse * http://www.howardcruse.com/
Friedman Diabetes Institute * [redacted]
Litmus Press / Aufgabe * http://www.litmuspress.org/
St. Martin's Press * http://us.macmillan.com/stonewall

Advertise in Boog City

See our ad rate card
http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Advertising or donation inquiries can also be directed to [redacted] or by calling 212-842-BOOG (2664),
or you can send money to [redacted] via https://www.paypal.com/

Poetry Submission Guidelines: Email subs to [redacted], with no more than five poems, all in one attached file with â€œMy Name Submissionâ€ in the subject line and as the name of the file, ie: Walt Whitman Submission. Or mail with an SASE to Poetry editor, Boog City, 330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H, N.Y., N.Y. 10001-4754.

Want to write a review (or be reviewed) in Boogâ€™s Urban Folk music, printed matter, or small press sections? Email UF editor Jonathan Berger, [redacted], printed matter editor Arlo Quint, [redacted], or small press editor Douglas Manson [redacted] -----

Want to have your work appear in our art section?
Query our art editor, Cora Lambert, [redacted]

3,000 copies of this issue of Boog City are distributed among, and available for free at, the following locations:

MANHATTAN

East Village Sunshine Theater * 143 E. Houston St. (bet. 1st & 2nd Avenues) Bluestockings * 172 Allen St. (bet. Stanton & Rivington sts.) Pianos * 158 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.) Living Room * 154 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.) Cake Shop * 152 Ludlow St. (bet. Stanton and Rivington sts.) Bowery Poetry Club * 308 Bowery (bet. Houston & Bleecker sts.) Think Coffee * 1 Bleecker St. (@ Bowery) Trash and Vaudeville (upstairs) *

4 St. Markâ€™s Pl. (bet. 2nd & 3rd aves.) Mission CafÃ© * 82 Second Ave. (bet. E. 4th & E. 5th sts.) Anthology Film Archives * 32 Second Ave. (bet. E. 1st & E. 2nd sts.) The Urge Bar * 33 2nd Ave. (bet E. 1st and E. 2nd sts.) Sidewalk CafÃ© * 94 Avenue A (bet. E. 6th & E. 7th sts.) Eastern Bloc * 505 East 6th St. (bet. aves. A and B) Nuyorican Poets CafÃ© * 236 E. 3rd St. (bet. Avenues B & C) Lakeside Lounge * 162 Avenue B (bet. E. 10th & E. 11th sts.) Life CafÃ© * 343 E. 10th St. (bet. Avenues A & B) St. Markâ€™s Books * 31 Third Ave. (bet. St. Markâ€™s Pl. & E. 9th St.) St. Markâ€™s Church * 131 E.10th St. (bet. 2nd & 3rd aves.)

Lower Manhattan Acme Underground * 9 Great Jones St. (bet. Broadway & Lafayette St.) Shakespeare & Co. * 716 Broadway (bet. Waverly & Astor places) Other Music * 15 E. 4th St. (bet. Broadway & Lafayette St.) Angelika Film Center * 18 W. Houston St. (bet. Broadway & Mercer St.) Think Coffee * 248 Mercer St. (bet. W. 4th and W. 3rd sts.) Mercer Street Books * 206 Mercer St. (bet. Bleecker & Houston sts.) Housing Works Cafe 126 Crosby St. (East Houston & Prince sts.) McNally Jackson * 52 Prince St. (bet. Mulberry & Lafayette sts.) Leslie/Lohman Gay Art Foundation * 26 Wooster St. (bet. Grand and Canal sts.) The Film Forum * 209 West Houston St. (bet. 6th Ave. and Varick St.) Stonewall Inn * 53 Christopher St. (7th Ave. South and Waverly Pl.) The Monster * 80 Grove St. (W. 4th and Waverly St.) Julius Bar * 159 W. 10th St. (bet. Waverly Place and 7th Ave. South) Cubby Hole * 281 W. 12th St. (bet. W. 4th St. and Greenwich Ave) Rainbows and Triangles * 192 Eighth Ave. (bet. W. 19th and W. 20th sts) East of Eighth * 254 W. 23rd St. (bet. 7th and 8th aves) Hotel Chelsea * 222 W. 23rd St. (bet. 7th & 8th aves.)

BROOKLYN

Greenpoint Thai CafÃ© * 925 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Kent St. & Greenpoint Ave.) Matchless * 557 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Nassau and Driggs aves.) Enidâ€™s * 560 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Nassau and Driggs aves.) Champion Coffee * 1108 Manhattan Ave. (bet. Clay & DuPont sts.)

Williamsburg Sideshow Gallery * 319 Bedford Ave. (bet. S. 2nd & S. 3rd sts.) Supercore CafÃ© * 305 Bedford Ave. (bet. S. 1st & S. 2nd sts.) Spoonbill & Sugartown * 218 Bedford Ave. (bet. N. 4th & N. 5th sts.) Bliss CafÃ© * 191 Bedford Ave. (bet. N. 6th & N. 7th sts.) Spike Hill * 184 Bedford Ave. (bet. N. 6th & N. 7th sts.) Soundfix/Fix Cafe * 110 Bedford Ave. (at N. 11th St.)

--

David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

177. peter ganick
five new free eBooks at chalk editions
Sat 19 Jun 2010

---

five new texts at http://chalkeditions.co.cc <http://chalkeditions.co.cc> the premier online publisher of free online eBooks.

John Crouse - DISMEMBERS
Experimental poetry by John Crouse
51 pp

Jukka-Pekka Kervinen - t o o L
experimental texts by Jukka-Pekka Kervinen
66 pp

Jim Leftwich - sef] [po experimental poetry by Jim Leftwich
56 pp

Ric Carfagna - Symphony No. 1
Poetry by Ric Carfagna
130 pp

Hugh Tribbey - MIME BOX
Experimental poetry by Hugh Tribbey
109 pp

↑ Index

178. Halvard Johnson
Fwd: five new free eBooks at chalk editions
Sat 19 Jun 2010

Hal

Halvard Johnson
==========

The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye (downloadable and free) is @ http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets

[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: peter ganick <[redacted]>
Date: Sat, Jun 19, 2010 at 5:43 PM
Subject: five new free eBooks at chalk editions
To: [redacted]

five new texts at http://chalkeditions.co.cc <http://chalkeditions.co.cc> the premier online publisher of free online eBooks.

John Crouse - DISMEMBERS
Experimental poetry by John Crouse
51 pp

Jukka-Pekka Kervinen - t o o L
experimental texts by Jukka-Pekka Kervinen
66 pp

Jim Leftwich - sef] [po experimental poetry by Jim Leftwich
56 pp

Ric Carfagna - Symphony No. 1
Poetry by Ric Carfagna
130 pp

Hugh Tribbey - MIME BOX
Experimental poetry by Hugh Tribbey
109 pp

↑ Index

179. CA Conrad
WIEBE URCHIN poetry event
Sun 20 Jun 2010

WIEBE URCHIN poetry event

7/7/10, 7pm

DALLAS WIEBE
The Kansas Poems

all details at the URCHIN site: http://URCHINpoetry.blogspot.com

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

180. amy king
Friday! James Belflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim Gek Lin Short & Wendy Wisner
Mon 21 Jun 2010

Â ~ James Belflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, M
Stain of Poetry

Â ~ James Belflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim Gek Lin Short & WendyÂ Wisner ~

June 25th, Friday @ Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn

James Belflower is the author of Commuter (Instance Press) and And Also a Fountain, (NeOpepper Press) a collaborative echap with Anne Heide and J. Michael Martinez. Commuter was recently voted the 2009 â€œBest Book Length Long Poem/Sequence by ColdFront magazine. He curates PotLatchpoetry.org, a website dedicated to the gifting and exchange of poetry resources. He received a BA in music composition from Arizona State University before attending the University of Colorado, Boulder, for his M.A. in Creative Writing. Belflower currently resides in New York and is pursuing a PhD in poetics at SUNY Albany.

~

Claire Hero is the author of Sing, Mongrel(Noemi Press 2009) and two chapbooks: afterpastures, winner of the 2007 Caketrain Chapbook Competition, and Cabinet (dancing girl press).Â She lives in upstate New York.

~

Shelly Taylor is the author of two poetry chapbooks, Peaches the Yes-Girl (Portable Press of Yo-Yo Labs, 2008) & Land Wide to Get a Hold Lost In (Dancing Girl Press, 2009). Black-Eyed Heifer(Tarpaulin Sky Press, May 2010) is her first full collection. Born in southern Georgia, she currently resides in Tucson, Arizona.

~

Matthew Thorburn is the author of a book of poems, Subject to Change, and a chapbook, the long poem Disappears in the Rain. He is the recipient of a 2008 Witter Bynner Fellowship from the Library of Congress. Currently, heâ€™s working on two new book projects: Every Possible Blue, a collection of poems about artists and their work, and Snow in Early Spring, a series of poems set in China, Iceland and Japan. He lives in The Bronx and works as a marketing manager for an international law firm.

~

Kim Gek Lin Short is the author of The Bugging Watch & Other Exhibits and the forthcoming China Cowboy, both from Tarpaulin Sky Press. Her chapbooks include The Residents (dancing girl press) and Run (Rope-a-Dope). She lives in Philadelphia with her family.

~

Wendy Wisnerâ€˜s first book of poems, Epicenter, was published by CW Books in 2004. Her poems have appeared in The Spoon River Review, Rhino, Natural Bridge, The Bellevue Literary Review, online at Verse Daily, and elsewhere. Wendy previously taught writing and literature at Hunter College, and is now an at-home mom to her two-year-old son. Visit Wendy on the web at www.wendywisner.com.

at Goodbye Blue Monday
1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013 [redacted]
J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave

or J train to Kosciusko St

~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
http://stainofpoetry.com/

 Juice - + http://www.huffingtonpost.com/travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html + http://www.pw.org/content/poets_take_action_in_wake_of_gulf_coast_disaster Â + http://poetry.about.com/b/2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf-of-mexico.htm + http://amyking.org

****

↑ Index

181. Ruth Lepson

Re: EOAGH presents Gottlieb and Timmons on 6/20 (Faux | Other Book Launch)

Mon 21 Jun 2010

---

a moving & smart review/memoir.

On 6/19/10 3:14 AM, "Tim Peterson" <[redacted]> wrote:

> EOAGH Reading Series:
>
> Michael Gottlieb and Susie Timmons
>
> Faux | Other Book Launch
>
> celebrating the publication of new books from Faux|Other
>
> Sunday, June 20 at 4PM
>
> at Unnameable Books,
>
> 600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY
>
> FREE
>
> MICHAEL GOTTLIEB is the author of fourteen books including The Likes Of Us, Lost And Found, Gorgeous Plunge, The River Road and New York. In the 1970s he helped edit the magazine Roof. His new book Memoir and Essay from Faux|Other makes available two recent prose works by Gottlieb: "The Empire City" is a moving, eloquent, funny memoir focusing on the early days of Language Poetry - the personalities as well as the work. It also brings to life New York in the 1970s, that grim, foreboding, thrilling place, and what it meant to come of age as a writer then and there. An accompanying essay, "Jobs Of The Poets," asks two questions: what is the job of the poet, and what kind of jobs do poets have to take, so they can do their real job.
>
> Read Gottlieb's review of Lydia Davis' Proust translation in EOAGH 4:
>
> http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/gottlieb.html

Read "Jackson in New York," Gottlieb's essay on Jackson Mac Low in EOAGH 2:

http://chax.org/eoagh/issuetwo/gottlieb.htm

SUSIE TIMMONS lives in Brooklyn, NY. Her most recent book is The New Old Paint, from Faux/Other.

Poems by Timmons are forthcoming in EOAGH.

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

> E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor
>
> Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

182. Al Filreis
PoemTalk #33: Gordon, Goldsmith & McLaughlin on Sharon Mesmer
Mon 21 Jun 2010

We are pleased to release PoemTalk episode 33 - a discussion of Sharon Mesmer's "I Accidentally Ate Some Chicken and Now I'm in Love with Harry Whittington" with Nada Gordon, Kenneth Goldsmith and Steve McLaughlin, hosted by me.

http://poemtalkatkwh.blogspot.com/
http://www.poetryfoundation.org/journal/audio.html?show=Poem%20Talk

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
University of Pennsylvania

on the web: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis
blog: http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis/blog
dial 215-746-POEM or [redacted]

↑ Index

183. Jack Kimball ode for now
Mon 21 Jun 2010

Ode to Summer:

http://pantaloons.blogspot.com/
2010_06_01_archive.html#1963943622024039272 (& ff, 6/21).

↑ Index

184. Christophe Casamassima
Furniture Press Chap/Books now available!
Mon 21 Jun 2010

Follow the link (http://furniturepressbooks.com/chaps/) to see our recent catalogue of chapbooks. All are hand-made, hand-stitched and hand-printed.

Edmund Berrigan, Your Cheatin' Heart
34 pages / stitched & screen printed
$10 (S &H included)
$20 signed, lettered A though Z (S & H included)

Catherine Daly, Cocktail
20 pages / stitched
$7 (S &H included)

Jennifer Hill, Fragmentirety
25 pages / stitched & screen printed
$10 (S & H included)

Natalie Knight, Xenia
32 pages / stiched
$10 (S & H included)

Donna Kuhn, Up Bluen
48 pages / saddle stapled & screen printed
$10 (S & H included)

Elizabeth Robinson, Exequey
10 pages / stitched
$6 (S & H included)

Dan Waber, Double Acrostics
20 pages / stiched
$8 (S & H included)

↑ Index

185. David Chirot
Re: poets for living waters
Mon 21 Jun 2010

Dear Sarah:

Thank you always for your thoughtful and considerate letters--I appreciate very much your insights and discernment--and take them to heart-- always with friendship and respect--

david

On Sat, Jun 19, 2010 at 9:23 AM, Sarah Sarai <[redacted]> wrote:

> David Chirot: Of course Amy's project is suspect but pretty much any project > is suspect. I say vote with the heart and right now the heart is with the Gulf > (ocean oceans water waters, hey, no one is saying let's save the Gulf but > screw the Indian Ocean). Poets for Living Waters is offering one opp. for expression not declaring this is it--write a poem, publish it and the work is > *done. I remember, in the eighties, hearing a woman (twenty year-old in Seattle) almost apologizing for working to end Apartheid, her guilt being she could be using the same time (she worked with the American Friends Service Committee) to help people locally. That's always a question/issue requiring discernment--where to put the energy. But working to end Apartheid was not the equivalent of Angelina adopting little black babies, and* > adding to Poets for Living Waters is not a bad thing. If we look too closely at > our motives and each others' motives we can only be disappointed.

>
> David, I hope your recovery goes smoothly. It's always good to see your name on this listserv.

↑ Index

186. Dan Glass
Mixtape featuring Frank O'Hara
Mon 21 Jun 2010

Friends—

A mixtape I put together, built around Frank O'Hara's poem "Adieu to Norman, Bonjour to Joan and John Paul," is featured on my dear friend Brian Ho's Dreams in Audio site. Some music for your summer:

http://dreamsinaudio.com/2010/06/21/sometimes-i-think-im-in-love-with-painting/

Dan

↑ Index

187. Brandon Shimoda
Garrett Caples, Quintessence of the Minor: Symbolist Poetry in English
Mon 21 Jun 2010

DEAR FRIENDS & READERS,

We are excited to announce the arrival of the inaugural volume in the Wave Books PAMPHLET series:

GARRETT CAPLES'S QUINTESSENCE OF THE MINOR: SYMBOLIST POETRY IN ENGLISH: http://www.wavepoetry.com/catalog/83 -- a 42-page bibliographic essay surveying oft-neglected Symbolist poets, revealing -- with acuity, erudition and blessed candor -- an entire tradition of invaluable and invigorating poetry.

QUINTESSENCE OF THE MINOR is available for $5, directly from Wave, as well as a small number of independent bookstores nationwide. For complete information, visit: http://www.wavepoetry.com/catalog/83.

Other pamphlets forthcoming by/on Noelle Kocot, CAConrad, Larry Eigner, and others! QUINTESSENCE is also available as part of Wave's 2010 subscription, featuring new volumes of work by Michael Earl Craig, CAConrad, Timothy Donnelly, Caroline Knox, Noelle Kocot, Dorothea Lasky, Geoffrey Nutter and Mary Ruefle: http://www.wavepoetry.com/catalog/82

We look forward to sharing this work with you. Thank you for reading!

WAVE BOOKS
Seattle, Washington
http://www.wavepoetry.com

****

 Wave Books on Facebook: http://www.facebook.com/pages/Seattle-WA/Wave-Books/325354873993 Wave Books on Twitter: http://twitter.com/wavepoetry

↑ Index

188. Jerome Rothenberg
Concealments & Carichos -- new book from Black Widow Press
Mon 21 Jun 2010

The following is from the announcement for my latest book, Concealments and Caprichos, from Black Widow Press in Cambridge:

"Combining two series of poems written since the turn of the century, A Book of Concealments and 50 Caprichos after Goya, Rothenberg's latest volume is a two-pronged follow-up to his earlier hundred-poem work, A Book of Witness, with some notable changes in strategy & composition.

"As Rothenberg states in his pre-face: 'In A Book of Witness I was concentrating on the rescue of the first-person voice as our principal instrument of witness - not only the personal "I" but the possibilities of a real if sometimes fictive "I" across a range of experiences, my own & at choice moments those of others. ... By contrast the poems in A Book of Concealments suppress or conceal the witnessing "I" but draw from more distant "romantic" predecessors & from my own accumulated works by collaging as italicized inserts small fragments of poems already written & published, while 50 Caprichos, written simultaneously, compensates for the largely missing "I" by allowing a give-&-take responsive to the dance of images in Goya's early opening to states of spirit & mind that many of us would later come to share. ... The writing of these poems at a time of new wars & new dissimulations - a notable change since the writing of A Book of Witness - is another circumstance not to be ignored.'"

The book should be available by now in the usual places.

↑ Index

189. Eric Elshtain

"Cover Poetry" at Beard of Bees

Tue 22 Jun 2010

Beard of Bees Press releases Michael Leong's album of cover poems today. "The Great Archivist's/Cloudy Quotient: Experiments with N+7" includes such hits as "One Art" and "Seven Seals," as well as a bonus "hidden track"!!!

http://www.beardofbees.com/leong.html

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

190. Ron Henry

Poetry Reading (Ithaca, NY, 6/24, 6 pm) - Karen Leona Anderson and Theo Hummer at Buffalo St. Books, DeWitt Mall, Ithaca NY

Tue 22 Jun 2010

Please join us as Karen Leona Anderson and Theo Hummer read from their poetry this Thursday, June 24th, 2010 at 6:00 p.m. at Buffalo Street Books, in the DeWitt Mall (corner of E. Buffalo and N. Cayuga Sts. in downtown Ithaca, NY). This reading is free and open to the public.

KAREN LEONA ANDERSON is the author of Punish Honey, published by Carolina Wren Press. She wrote a dissertation on poetry and science at Cornell University and received her MFA from the University of Iowa. She is currently an assistant professor of English at St. Mary's College of Maryland.

THEO HUMMER is finishing her Cornell University dissertation on performance and segregation in contemporary U.S. poetry. She has taught EFL, creative writing, composition, and cultural studies in a Czech cigarette factory, at two northeastern liberal arts colleges and one Ivy League university, and at the maximum-security men's prison in Auburn, NY. Her poetry has been featured in Vox, Sentence, Equilibrium, The Indiana Review, Best New Poets 2006, and on Verse.com.

Karen and Theo are founding members of SOON Productions and we're excited to welcome them back to Ithaca to share some of the writing they have done since leaving Cornell and Ithaca.

This event has been made possible in part with grant support from the Community Arts Partnership. SOON Productions is dedicated to bringing innovative poets and writers to Ithaca for readings and talks. Please visit our website at http://soonproductions.org for information about the series.

Kindly forward this email to anyone you think might be interested in attending.

For more information, contact:

Ron Henry
SOON Productions
Email: [redacted]
Web: http://soonproductions.org

↑ Index

191. Daniel Godston
Mingus Awareness Project 2010
Tue 22 Jun 2010

Hi,

You're invited to attend the Mingus Awareness Project 2010, which happens at the Jazz Showcase tomorrow night, starting at 8 p.m.

Thanks,

Dan

Mingus Awareness Project 2010

a benefit concert for ALS support and research

Wednesday, June 23, 2010 (8 p.m.)

ADMISSION: $20 / $15 for students

On June 23, a group of musicians will gather at the Jazz Showcase to celebrate the life and music of Charles Mingus, and to benefit the Les Turner ALS Foundation. Mingus, an American musical hero who died of ALS, is one of the greatest figures in jazz history. His bass playing, compositions and philosophy have transcended his genre and left indelible marks on music history.

MAPtet will perform music by Charles Mingus, Duke Ellington, Billy Strayhorn, Rahsaan Roland Kirk, and Eric Dolphy, and Jon Hey --

Jon Hey -- piano

Paul Hartsaw -- tenor saxophone

Dan Godston -- trumpet

Fred Jackson -- alto saxophone

Jon Godston -- soprano saxophone

Raphael Crawford -- trombone

Tom Berg -- baritone saxophone

Cory Biggerstaff -- upright bass

Brian Jones -- drums

We will be performing the following compositions by Charles Mingus -- "Jelly Roll," "Peggy's Blue Skylight," "Ecclusiastics," "Better Get Hit in Your Soul," "Fables of Faubus," "Reincarnation of a Lovebird," "Goodbye Porkpie Hat," "Haitian Fight Song," "E's Flat, Ah's Flat Too," and "Nostalgia in Times Square." We will also perform "Fleurette Africaine" by Duke Ellington, "Portrait of Those Beautiful Ladies" by Rahsaan Roland Kirk, "Isfahan" by Billy Strayhorn, "Gazzelloni" by Eric Dolphy, and "Charlies' Arch Isle" by Jon Hey.

Attendees will have the opportunity to participate in a raffle to win items donated by Sue Graham Mingus, Myopic Books, Reckless Records, Dusty Groove America, Peterson Picture Frame Co., and other individuals and organizations. All proceeds will go to benefit the Les Turner ALS Foundation.

Mingus Awareness Project is organized by the Borderbend Arts Collective, in partnership with the Les Turner ALS Foundation. The Borderbend Arts Collective is a 501(c)(3) organization whose mission is to promote the arts, to create opportunities for artists to explore new directions in and between art forms, and to engage the community.

Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS), commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease for the New York Yankees baseball icon, is a progressive neuromuscular disorder that causes atrophy throughout the body, ultimately leading to total paralysis. Brain cells cease sending messages to muscles, which slowly prohibits patients' movement and their ability to communicate. Onset commonly occurs between ages 35 to 65, and is slightly more prevalent in men. There is currently no cure for ALS, but treatment and interventions can help alleviate some symptoms, improve quality of life and prolong survival by delaying respiratory failure. The clinical progression can vary widely; however, patients typically live with the disease two to five years after the onset of symptoms. ALS knows no racial, cultural or socioeconomic boundaries and follows no pattern.

The Les Turner ALS Foundation, founded in 1977 is recognized internationally and is the only independent publicly supported non-profit organization in the Chicago area devoted solely to the treatment and elimination of ALS. The Foundation is affiliated with Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine where it supports a large multidisciplinary clinical program and two world-class scientific research laboratories. The Foundation's comprehensive patient services include support group meetings, professional in-home consultation services, communications and durable medical equipment programs, respite care grants, and educational programs.

Jazz Showcase

Dearborn Station, in Chicago's historic Printers Row neighborhood

806 S. Plymouth Ct.

Chicago, IL 60605

[redacted]

http://www.jazzshowcase.com/

http://www.mingusawarenessproject.org

http://www.kintera.org/autogen/home/default.asp?ievent=427785

http://www.borderbend.org

↑ Index

192. colin herd
Contact Info for Molly Weigel
Tue 22 Jun 2010

Dear List,

I am trying to reach Molly Weigel, who has translated widely for XUL. If anyone has contact information or can put her in touch with me, my email is [redacted].

Many thanks,

Colin.

↑ Index

193. amy king
Answering to Proust + Twitter's Growing Up
Tue 22 Jun 2010

The New Media: Typetrigger debuts [by mid-July] -- today's sneak peak:

http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/06/22/the-proust-questionnaire-twitter-grows-up/

Enjoy,

Amy

****
Juice -
+ http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html
+ http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster
+ http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm
+ http://amyking.org
****

↑ Index

194. Jennifer Karmin
June 22-26: US Social Forum in Detroit
Tue 22 Jun 2010

---

hi poetics friends....hope to see some of you in detroit this week.Â should be a fantastic gathering.

onwards,
jen karmin

US Social Forum in Detroit
June 22-26, 2010

http://www.ussf2010.org

The US Social Forum (USSF) is a movement building process. It is not aâ€¨ conference but it is a space to come up with the peoplesâ€™ solutions to the economic and ecological crisis. The USSF is the next most important step in our struggle to build a powerful multi-racial, multi-sectoral, inter-generational,â€¨ diverse, inclusive, internationalist movement that transforms this country and changes history.

↑ Index

195. Christophe Casamassima
Chris McCreary's Undone: A Fakebook on Silliman's Blog
Wed 23 Jun 2010

Thanks, Ron.

http://ronsilliman.blogspot.com/search/label/Chris%20McCreary

↑ Index

196. Christophe Casamassima

Ambit: A Journal of Temporary Poetics. Submissions open.

Wed 23 Jun 2010

Ambit, a journal of temporary and unstable poetics.

Ambit will not elaborate upon a few disparate poems that lack contiguity. Rather, Ambit is a journal that emphasizes the liesurely expansion of an idea, an expansiveness that muddles time and space over the course of space and time. Simply, Ambit is a host to the serialized poem, the long poem.

"Poem," of course, is an open idea. Visual elements are also welcome, as well as...

Each issue of Ambit will appear as a downloadable PDF, and will feature the work of 9 writers.

Each issue of Ambit will also feature the work of one artist, who will design the cover art.

To engage in a discussion of length seems inappropiate. Send your work to [redacted], but please follow a few, simple guidelines so that we do not lose your submission in the aether.

1. Please follow this format in your subject line: name/title of work/"Ambit Submission"

1a. If you are submitting artwork for the cover, follow the same format as above, but write "Ambit Cover Submission" instead.

2. Send work as a Word attachment. PDF is also welcome.

3. Add a short cover letter and bio.

4. Allow up to 30 days for reply.

In the event that electronic submissions are impossible, we'd be glad to see it come across the USPS. Remember to add all relevant information, and follow this format when sending:

Furniture Press Books/Ambit Submission, 406 York Rd. (lower level), Towson, MD 21204.

All work that does not follow these guidelines will be used to decorate the walls of our office.

↑ Index

197. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City presents Straw Gate Books and Krista Weaver
Wed 23 Jun 2010

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

Straw Gate Books
(Philadelphia)

this Tues., June 29, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by Straw Gate Books' editor
Phyllis Wat

Featuring readings from

Valerie Fox
Stephanie Gray
Bill Kushner
David Mills
Karin Randolph
Tom Savage

and music from

Krista Weaver

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

Straw Gate Books
http://www.leafscape.org/StrawGateBooks/index.html

Founded by Phyllis Wat in 2005, Straw Gate Books publishes poetry and occasional related texts. They are particularly interested in works by women and non-polemical writing with an underlying social content. Straw Gate also features new authors and authors whose work is under- served.

Valerie Fox

Author Valerie Fox's most recent book of poems is Bundles of Letters, Including A, V and Epsilon, a compilation written with Arlene Ang and published by Texture Press. Straw Gate published The Rorschach Factory, while Texture Press put out Amnesia, or, Ideas for Movies. Fox was one of the founding editors of 6ix, a Philadelphia-based literary magazine. She teaches writing and poetry in the Department of English and Philosophy at Drexel University in Philadelphia. She is a founding editor of the magazine Press 1.

Stephanie Gray

Author Stephanie Gray is a poet and experimental filmmaker. Straw Gate Books published her first collection of poems, Heart Stoner Bingo. Publications include EOAGH, The Portable Boog Reader, Press 1, and The Recluse. She's read at the Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival, and the Projections, Segue, Zinc, and Poetry Project Friday series. In support of her films, she has received a New York Foundation for the Arts Fellowship and a New York State Council on the Arts grant. Her films have screened internationally, including at the Ann Arbor, Oberhausen, Viennale, Chicago Underground, and Madcat film festivals.

Bill Kushner

Author Bill Kushner is the writer of Night Fishing, Head, Love Uncut, He Dreams of Rivers, That April, and The Hairy Arms of Whitman, along with In Sunsetland With You from Straw Gate Books. His work has been anthologized in Up Late (4 Walls & Windows) and In Our Time: the Gay and Lesbian Anthology (St. Martin's Press), and has appeared in numerous magazines including The World, Mind the Gap, Lungfull!, and Ratapallax. He has been a 1999 and 2005 Fellow of the New York Foundation of the Arts and lives in New York City.

David Mills

Author David Mills has received Henry James, Cave Canem and Breadloaf fellowships, as well as New York Foundation of the Arts, Brio, and Hughes/Diop Awards. He also won the inaugural 2008 Pan African Literary Forum Poetry Prize and a Soros grant. David's work has appeared in Callaloo, Rattapallax, The Pedestal, Hanging Loose Press, Aloud, and elsewhere. He has recorded his poetry on RCA Records and toured Europe performing his work with jazz bands. His book, The Dream Detective, is a 2010 publication of Straw Gate Books.

Karin Randolph

Author Karin Randolph is an ex-painter turned writer. She has had one- person shows of her paintings in Chicago, New York, and Germany. She was the founder and editor of the poetry journal Mind the Gap, which featured British and American poetry. She was a finalist in the 2007 National Poetry Series and won the 2007 Marsh Hawk Press Poetry Prize for her book, Either She Was. With her poem, “Guilt of the lily, flower of the damned,” she has been asked to represent The Red Room: Writings from Press 1, which is a 2010 publication of Straw Gate Books.

Tom Savage

Author Tom Savage is the writer of Personalities (Jim Brodey Books), Slow Waltz on a Glass Harmonica (Nalanda U. Press), Filling Spaces (Nalanda U. Press), Housing Preservation & Development (Cheap Review Press), Processed Words (Coffee House Press), Political Conditions/ Physical States (United Artists Books), The Brain Surgery Poems (Linear Arts Books), Bamiyan Poems (Sisyphus Press), and Brainlifts (Straw Gate Books). He has taught poetry writing at The Poetry Project. His poems have appeared in The New York Times, Ratapallax, Hanging Loose, Press 1, and many other venues over a 30-year period.

Krista Weaver
http://www.kristaweaver.com/

Krista Weaver was born at the Naval Hospital in St. Alban’s, Queens in June of 1969. She had a fairly normal suburban New York upbringing, with slow-moving grandparents who lived nearby, a mother who stayed at home, and a father who worked. Her parents divorced when she was nine. She grew up, went to a public high school in Brooklyn, graduated, then left town. She traveled extensively in Europe and across the United States, working as a bar-girl, a donut-slinger, and a ranch-hand. She got married, had children, got divorced.

When she took up the guitar in 2004, she baked pies, and did sub work at the local high school to make money. She never listened to the radio and never watched TV. She drove a silver-gray Buick Regal with lavender pinstriping that had belonged to her grandmother. She learned how to play--and recorded her first album (So Long Arlington, Two Stones Music)--on a $100 guitar she borrowed from her brother. Her life hasn't been the same since.

Directions:
C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. July 27
Eleven Eleven
http://elevenelevenjournal.com/

(San Francisco)
Hugh Behm-Steinberg, faculty ed.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

198. amy king

POETS FOR LIVING WATERS -- NEW POEMS UP

Wed 23 Jun 2010

POETS FOR LIVING WATERS -- NEW POEMS UP
http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/ RIDING IT OUT BY GIANMARC MANZIONE TWO POEMS BY AMY WATKINS FORMER SANCTUARY BY PIA SEN TO THE MOTHER OF WATERS, TO WHOM WE NO LONGER PRAY BY MARGOT F. BOYER HAIKU AND TWO HAIBUN BY DONNA FLEISCHER THREE HAIKU BY MAYA PINDYCK TWO POEMS BY PHILIP MATTHEWS TWO POEMS BY MARGARET ROZGA TWO POEMS BY ANNY BALLARDINI THREE POEMS BY AMBER CLARK GLOBAL FUCK IT BY PATRICK JAMES DUNAGAN ENORMOUS MISTAKES BY TASHA COTTER PALLINODE BY WENDY BABIAK TWO POEMS BY JOSEPH HUTCHISON (SOMA)TIC POETRY EXERCISE & POEM BY CACONRAD DEAR SARAH PALIN, BY CAROLYN FOOTE EDELMANN THREE POEMS BY ALANA I. CAPRIA TWO POEMS BY CHRISTOPHER RIZZO TWO POEMS BY JEANNE MURRAY WALKER TWO POEMS BY BRENDA IIJIMA ARCTIC DRILLING BY LAURA ELRICK TWO POEMS BY JARED SCHICKLING TWO POEMS BY CARA BENSON TWO POEMS BY TESS TAYLOR DROWNING POEM BY PETER CICCARIELLO GULF COAST DREAMS BY M.J. FIEVRE AT LEAST 4 GALLONS PER SECOND + REVISION BY KAIA SAND TWO POEMS BY DEBORAH POE THREE POEMS BY MARK YAKICH DEAD ZONES BY MOLLIE DAY GULF WINDS BY LYLE DAGGETT TWO POEMS BY DEDA KAVANAGH SELECTIONS FROM CORSICA INSIDE THE DAUGHTERHOUSE BY PAIGE TAGGART COMPLETE LIST OF POETS HERE -- http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/06/14/not-your-usual-media-coverage/ AND OF COURSE, ALL POSTS HERE --- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/ Best, Amy & Heidi  Juice - + http://www.huffingtonpost.com/travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html + http://www.pw.org/content/poets_take_action_in_wake_of_gulf_coast_disaster + http://poetry.about.com/b/2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf-of-mexico.htm + http://amyking.org ********

↑ Index

199. Gottlieb, Michael

Remembering Peter Seaton

Wed 23 Jun 2010

REMEMBERING PETER SEATON

Just having returned last night from Leslie Scalapino's memorial at St. Marks - a packed, hot, long, fraught, draining event - one that I have to admit I had to leave halfway through. So many people there, so many people for whom Leslie was so important. Old, young - so many young people. She did so much for so many, was such an exemplar, mentor, publisher, friend... And then the next day, today, this news: Peter Seaton, dead.

And who is going to organize his memorial? Just how many remember him, how many remember how powerful, unflinchingly, unerringly, nakedly vital was his work when he burst among us, how many years ago?

I don't have his books in front of me now, and I don't have the years - the timeline called up - to fix him in our greater calendar but suddenly he was there one season: slight, sandy hair, a pack of... of Camels? Luckies? in his breast pocket. Bespectacled, a perpetual, canted, slightly sardonic smile on his face.

One book, two books, three, maybe there were four, and then he was gone. He threw himself out of our world, not - at first - going altogether all that far. Off to Coliseum Books in Midtown Manhattan - where he worked for years and where quite apparently he made another life for himself; and made another life with a life partner who we also knew, at least for awhile. But then what happened?

He reappeared a few years later, read again at the Ear and was just as powerful as ever and it was as if he'd never left - which was a little troubling in a way because, and I'm guessing I'm not the only one who thought so - enough years had gone by that it wasn't unreasonable to expect that things, he, his work, might be a bit different, but no. It was all the same.

Then he was gone, again. And it was clear, it was as clear then as it had been clear from the beginning, in the very same way that it remained clear over the years as Peter came to mind, as his name came up in conversation from time to time, that Peter could have, maybe should have, been someone whose name was always on the tip of all of our tongues. That he could have been someone whose books were bought, whose writing was taught (is it? Does anyone teach it now?), he and his poems could have been, should have been the subject of seminars and conferences but for whatever reason - he bailed... he didn't want to live the life, he couldn't deal with the requirements the... the what? The compromises, the blandishments? Whatever. So he took a walk.

And that act in itself was a kind of admonishment to the rest of us. A caution and a remonstrance reminding us, recalling to mind - if we needed any reminder - of all the compromises that we have made, we make every day in the name of our careers. He wouldn't, I guess, he couldn't.

He died without any of us around. That may not be necessarily a bad thing. But, did he die alone?

↑ Index

200. Amanda Earl
new from AngelHousePress
Thu 24 Jun 2010

---

i am pleased to announce the publication of two AngelHousePress chapbooks:

Pearl Pirie's "over my dead corpus" is a feast of sounds, playful and thoughtful poems culled from the corpus of the world. "The main source corpus is over 500 pages of scrap notes that served as fodder for recombinance. Words or phrases were scraped for letter sequences within syllable or that broke across syllable or word.
The other corpus is incidental word combinations from scrabble strung in the mind's insistence for meaning or sound." Pearl Pirie
$5; Limited Edition of 50 copies. ISBN: 978-1-926786-00-1 in "house : a (tiny) memoir" rob mclennan tells us about his childhood in Glengarry County by way of old family photos, his own memories and recollections from family.

"Home is a series of recollections, of distances, as easily remembered as mis-remembered, and a blending of events that can sometimes never be confirmed. …And why write as a "memoir" instead of calling them "prose poems"? I want these stories not to be misunderstood; I want them to be seen as what I remember, what I believe to be true, from my vantage point of some three decades later, and thousands of miles. It felt like reclaiming something that had been far away for a very long time, but no longer. It felt like bringing out the good out from underneath all the bad that came later, overshadowing so much of what had happened before." rob mclennan

$5; Limited Edition of 50 copies. ISBN: 978-0-9783780-7-3

if you are in Ottawa, please attend the launch of "over my dead corpus" on Friday, June 25 at 7:00pm at the Carleton Tavern, 223 Armstrong St, upstairs. Pearl will be reading as part of the pre-small press fair reading along with Faizal Deen, Mark Goldstein and Myna Wallin.

also, Christine McNair, host of Carleton University radio show, Literary Landscapes, will be speaking to me tonight at 6:30 pm EST about the small press fair and the AHP chapbooks. You can listen to our interview on line at http://www.ckcufm.com.

The chapbooks will be available at the small press fair on Saturday or if you can't make it, at www.angelhousepress.com via Paypal or through other means by contacting me directly at [redacted]

Amanda Earl
AngelHousePress
www.angelhousepress.com
the angel is in the house

↑ Index

201. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "An Archeology of Theory" by Peter Ganick.

Thu 24 Jun 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "An Archeology of Theory" by Peter Ganick. Description: What is a text? After John Coltrane's "wall of sound", we have here a "wall of text". What does making sense entail? Is it in the words themselves and/or the sequence of words? In "An Archeology of Theory", Peter Ganick suggests both and neither in true spatial reference. Energy is space is a version here-to-be-read. Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/an-archaeology-of-theory/11477622

↑ Index

202. Nicholas Piombino
Re: Remembering Peter Seaton
Thu 24 Jun 2010

I received an email from Ron Silliman telling me that Peter Seaton died last month.

Peter Seaton and I met at City College (CCNY) in 1960 or 1961, when we were freshmen or sophomores. He was probably born in 1942. We spent many, many fascinating hours together discussing literature and reading each others writing throughout our college years. Peter was a terrific marathon one-on-one conversationalist, a mordant, literary wit of the Holden Caulfield variety, an indefatigable reader who loved to endlessly talk and search for books and new ideas. This, combined with the fact that he was among the most private and secretive persons I have ever known, added immeasurably to the quality of mystery that surrounded both his presence and his absence. One of his early short stories was of a character obsessed with going out into the city on an inexplicable, lonely search for a certain hard to find poster. Our interests and directions concerning poetry and poetics remained parallel after graduation in 1964, often attending readings together at St Mark¹s, reading The World magazine and other poetry magazines and discussing them avidly, through to the establishment of This magazine, and L=A magazine, up to the early 80¹s. During the opening and middle years of Language poetry many of Peter Seaton¹s long prose poems were published, widely read and influential. Peter and I did some writing collaborations and even some film experiments together in the late 60¹s and early 70¹s (we were then both big fans of Stan Brakhage) although these may now be lost or hard to locate. I may still have one or two letters or postcards that he wrote to me when I was living for awhile in Italy and Morocco in the late 60¹s. It was he that told me that Bernadette Mayer, whose work we both greatly admired, was giving an open workshop at the Poetry Project in 1973. He always encouraged me in my writing and collage productions particularly, explaining to me that he was knowledgeable about this because his mother had once run an art gallery. I am sorry to say that we lost touch with each other in the early 80¹s. Peter¹s writing and poetry and his penetrating insights into poetry, culture, technology, language and life were of constant interest to me during our many years of close friendship in the 60's and 70's.

On 6/23/10 10:55 PM, "Gottlieb, Michael" <[redacted]> wrote:

REMEMBERING PETER SEATON

Just having returned last night from Leslie Scalapino's memorial at St. Marks - a packed, hot, long, fraught, draining event - one that I have to admit I had to leave halfway through. So many people there, so many people for whom Leslie was so important. Old, young - so many young people. She did so much for so many, was such an exemplar, mentor, publisher, friend... And then the next day, today, this news: Peter Seaton, dead.

And who is going to organize his memorial? Just how many remember him, how many remember how powerful, unflinchingly, unerringly, nakedly vital was his work when he burst among us, how many years ago?

I don't have his books in front of me now, and I don't have the years - the timeline called up - to fix him in our greater calendar but suddenly he was there one season: slight, sandy hair, a pack of... of Camels? Luckies? in his breast pocket. Bespectacled, a perpetual, canted, slightly sardonic smile on his face.

One book, two books, three, maybe there were four, and then he was gone. He threw himself out of our world, not - at first - going altogether all that far. Off to Coliseum Books in Midtown Manhattan - where he worked for years and where quite apparently he made another life for himself; and made another life with a life partner who we also knew, at least for awhile. But then what happened?

He reappeared a few years later, read again at the Ear and was just as powerful as ever and it was as if he'd never left - which was a little troubling in a way because, and I'm guessing I'm not the only one who thought so - enough years had gone by that it wasn't unreasonable to expect that things, he, his work, might be a bit different, but no. It was all the same.

Then he was gone, again. And it was clear, it was as clear then as it had been clear from the beginning, in the very same way that it remained clear over the years as Peter came to mind, as his name came up in conversation from time to time, that Peter could have, maybe should have, been someone whose name was always on the tip of all of our tongues. That he could have been someone whose books were bought, whose writing was taught (is it? Does anyone teach it now?), he and his poems could have been, should have been the subject of seminars and conferences but for whatever reason - he bailed... he didn't want to live the life, he couldn't deal with the requirements the... the what? The compromises, the blandishments? Whatever. So he took a walk.

And that act in itself was a kind of admonishment to the rest of us. A caution and a remonstrance reminding us, recalling to mind - if we needed any reminder - of all the compromises that we have made, we make every day in the name of our careers. He wouldn't, I guess, he couldn't.

> He died without any of us around. That may not be necessarily a bad thing. But, did he die alone?

↑ Index

203. Rob McLennan

Duse 10: the Canadian issue, ed. rob mclennan, now on-line!

Thu 24 Jun 2010

Dusie 10: the Canadian issue
June 20 (solstice), 2010

Guest-edited by rob mclennan

The Swiss online pdf journal Dusie has let me produce an issue of Canadian poetry; an introduction for some, and a further conversation for others. With new writing by: derek beaulieu, Joe Blades, George Bowering, Rob Budde, Emily Carr, Jen Currin, Amanda Earl, Lainna Lane El Jabi, Jesse Patrick Ferguson, Judith Fitzgerald, Asher Ghaffar, Phil Hall, Sharon Harris, Peter Jaeger, Monica Kidd, Anne Le Dressay, Gil McElroy, Barry McKinnon, rob mclennan, Kim Minkus, Pearl Pirie, Monty Reid, Shane Rhodes, Sandra Ridley, Stan Rogal, Natalie Simpson, Christine Stewart, Aaron Tucker and Chris Turnbull. Thanks to Monique Desnoyers for fabulous design.

http://www.dusie.org/

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

204. Nicholas Karavatos

Re: at Golden West College (Tebot Bach) in Huntington Beach, CA on Friday, June 25

Thu 24 Jun 2010

Golden West College, Community Room 102. The entrance closest to the venue is on Gothard near the corner of Gothard & Edinger in Huntington Beach. DO NOT USE THE MAIN ENTRANCE to the College on Golden West as there will be a long walk across the campus to find the room. Please ignore the sign directing you to the parking sticker vending machine. The Tebot Bach audience does not pay for parking.

> Date: Sat, 19 Jun 2010 04:04:15 +0000

> From: [redacted]
> Subject: at Golden West College (Tebot Bach) in Huntington Beach, CA on Friday, June 25
> To: [redacted]
>
> Tebot Bach welcomes poets Nicholas Karavatos & Kim Noriega to Golden West College.
>
> Date: Friday, June 25, 2010
> Time: 8:00pm - 9:00pm
> Location: Golden West College, Community Room 102
> Street: 15744 Goldenwest Street
> City/Town: Huntington Beach, CA
> http://www.facebook.com/event.php?eid=134992643182993
>
> "Tebot Bach welcomes poets Nicholas Karavatos & Kim Noriega to Golden West College."
>
> NICHOLAS KARAVATOS is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa’s Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review (University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009).
>
> David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: “Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity.”
>
> Nicholas Karavatos lives near Dubai, teaching at the American University of Sharjah in the United Arab Emirates. Previously he taught in Muscat, Sultanate of Oman. He is a graduate of New College of California and Humboldt State University.
>
> KIM NORIEGA grew up in a suburb of Cleveland, Ohio, but in her late 20's bought a brand new Camaro, and -- with her five-year-old (beautiful!) daughter in tow -- drove "as far south and west" as possible without leaving the country -- to San Diego to be exact -- where they danced together on the beach singing Pretenders' songs and made angels of sand instead of snow.
>
> Now that her daughter is grown, Kim spends her time (when not writing) putting her books in order according to the Dewey Decimal Number Classification System (mostly 800s) and thinking of crafts to make for her day job with her family literacy kids using yogurt containers. Kim's favorite flower is the lilac (closely followed by wild violets and black tulips) and her favorite color is red -- which is why she wore a red lace wedding gown when she married her beloved, Ernie.

>
> Kim’s poem Heaven, 1963, first published in Tebot Bach's Blue Arc West: Anthology of California Poets, was featured by former U.S. Poet Laureate, Ted Kooser, in his nationally syndicated column, American Life in Poetry. The title poem of her first book, Name Me, recently published by Fortunate Daughter Press, was a finalist for the 2009 Joy Harjo prize.
>
> http://www.tebotbach.org/
>
> Reading & Book-signing with NICHOLAS KARAVATOS in Huntington Beach, CA
> Nicholas Karavatos' next poetry reading/book-signing is in San Francisco, CA on Monday, July 5 at Bird & Beckett.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Nicholas Karavatos
> Dept of Language & Literature
> American University of Sharjah
> PO Box 26666
> Sharjah
> United Arab Emirates
> _____
> Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1
_____
Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

205. R Levitsky
Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Thu 24 Jun 2010

Dear Friends,
What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
Thank you for your help!
Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

206. peter ganick
my new eBook from Argo tist Ebooks
Thu 24 Jun 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "An Archeology of Theory" by Peter Ganick.

Description:

What is a text? After John Coltrane's "wall of sound", we have here a "wall of text". What does making sense entail? Is it in the words themselves and/or the sequence of words? In "An Archeology of Theory", Peter Ganick suggests both and neither in true spatial reference. Energy is space is a version here-to-be-read.

Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/an-archaeology-of-theory/11477622

↑ Index

207. Ed Friedman
Re: Remembering Peter Seaton
Fri 25 Jun 2010

Thanks Michael for your posting on Peter Seaton. I would gladly work with some other folks on a memorial for Peter.

Best,

Ed Friedman

↑ Index

208. Tim Peterson
EOAGH on 6/26 presents Lyons, Lasky, and Levine
Fri 25 Jun 2010

EOAGH Reading Series 6/26
Kimberly Lyons, Dorothea Lasky, and Jake Levine

Saturday, June 26 at 2PM
At Unnameable Books
600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY
FREE

KIMBERLY LYONS has a new manuscript: Rouge. She's had poems in Aufgabe #8, the most recent issue of New American Writing, the Peepshow.Com poetry website, Supposedly in Effing, but has anyone seen the issue? and forthcoming in Peaches and Bats and in Talisman. She won't be hosting at the Zinc Bar this fall as she has in past years. But come on by any hoo. She is the publisher of a new imprint: Lunar Chandelier which has three books of poetry forthcoming: Homework by Joe Elliot, petals, emblems by Lynn Behrendt and Deliberate Proof by Vyt Bakaitis.

Read three poems by Kimberly Lyons in EOAGH 5:
http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/lyons.html

DOROTHEA LASKY is the author of Black Life and AWE, both out from Wave Books, as well as an educational text, Poetry is Not a Project (Ugly Duckling Presse). She lives in New York City and researches creativity at the University of Pennsylvania.

Read two poems by Dorothea Lasky in EOAGH 5:
http://www.chax.org/eoagh/issuefive/lasky.html

JAKE LEVINE is a recipient of a 2010-2011 Fulbright Scholarship to Lithuania, the author of a chapbook The Threshold of Erasure (2010 Sporkpress), became an editor and is editor at Spork Press under Richard Siken, is on the board of directors at POG (poetry in action Tucson), is editor-in-chief at Sonora Review, has taught, teaches, and will teach poetry for The University of Arizona, Vilnius University, CHAX press, and has lectured and given talks to people in public spaces. He just recently started to eat meat again and generally likes to think of himself as somewhat of a magician or a unicorn when he is not doing poetry or is in a meeting. He also has a brother. He is working on several manuscripts at this time, all of which share the title Future History: The Rhyme and Retrobution. His work is heavily indebted to Fauvism, Abstract Expressionism, Literary Postmodernism, Hedonism, a slew of other isms, but also Leadbelly.

Poems by Jake Levine are forthcoming in EOAGH 6 this summer.

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

UPCOMING EOAGH READING SERIES EVENTS:

E. Tracy Grinnell, Brenda Iijima, and Shelly Taylor
Sunday, June 27 @2PM

↑ Index

209. Tim Peterson
EOAGH on 6/27 presents Grinnell, Iijima, and Taylor
Fri 25 Jun 2010

EOAGH Reading Series 6/27
Brenda Iijima, E. Tracy Grinnell, and Shelly Taylor

Sunday, June 26 at 2PM
At Unnameable Books
600 Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, NY
FREE

BRENDA IIJIMA was born in the hilly town of North Adams, Massachusetts. She is the author of Around Sea (O Books), Animate, Inanimate Aims (Litmus Press), revv. you'll—ution (Displaced Press) and If Not Metamorphic (Ahsahta Press) as well as numerous chapbooks and artist's books. She is also the editor of the eco language reader (Nightboat Books and [redacted]). Currently she is working on a body of work titled Some Simple Things Said by and About Humans—a chronicle of how humans have used animals as surrogates. She is also doing research on women who were murdered in North Adams during the 1970's when she was growing up there. She is the editor of Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs (http://yoyolabs.com/).

Iijima's writing and consciousness have been an inspiration for EOAGH from the beginning, and continue to be.

E. TRACY GRINNELL is the author of Helen: A Fugue (Belladonna Elder Series #1, 2008), Some Clear Souvenir (O Books, 2006), and Music or Forgetting (O Books, 2001), as well as the limited edition chapbooks Mirrorly, A Window (flynpyntar, 2009), Leukadia (Trafficker Press, 2008), Hell and Lower Evil (Lyre Lyre Pants on Fire, 2008), Humoresque (Blood Pudding/Dusie #3, 2008) Quadriga, a collaboration with Paul Foster Johnson (gong chapbooks, 2006), Of the Frame (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs, 2004), and Harmonics (Melodeon Poetry Systems, 2000). She is the founding editor of Litmus Press and Aufgabe, and she lives in Brooklyn.

Read "Beyond Leucadia" by E. Tracy Grinnell in EOAGH 3 (Queering Language): http://chax.org/eoagh/issue3/issuethree/grinnell.html

SHELLY TAYLOR is the author of Black-Eyed Heifer (Tarpaulin Sky Press, 2010), Land Wide to Get a Hold Lost In (Dancing Girl Press, 2009), and Peaches the Yes-Girl (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs, 2008). Born in southern Georgia, she currently lives in Tucson, Arizona.

Read "In Subtropic" by Shelly Taylor in EOAGH 4: http://chax.org/eoagh/issuefour/taylor.html

HOW TO GET TO UNNAMEABLE BOOKS:

Unnameable Books is conveniently located at 600 Vanderbilt Avenue in Brooklyn. There are two ways to get there:

1) Take the 2 or 3 train to the Grand Army Plaza stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block around the circle, and turn onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

2) Take the Q train to the 7th Avenue stop in Brooklyn, then get out of the station, walk one block along Park Pl and make a left onto Vanderbilt Avenue heading NE toward the bookstore.

↑ Index

210. amy king

TONIGHT -- James Belflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim Gek Lin Short & Wendy Wisner

Fri 25 Jun 2010

~ James Belflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthe
Stain of Poetry

~ James Belflower, Claire Hero, Shelly Taylor, Matthew Thorburn, Kim Gek Lin Short & Wendy Wisner ~

June 25th, Friday @ Goodbye Blue Monday â€“ Bushwick, Brooklyn

James Belflower is the author of Commuter (Instance Press) and And Also a Fountain, (NeOpepper Press) a collaborative echap with Anne Heide and J. Michael Martinez. Commuter was recently voted the 2009 â€œBest Book

Length Long Poem/Sequence by ColdFront magazine. He curates PotLatchpoetry.org, a website dedicated to the gifting and exchange of poetry resources. He received a BA in music composition from Arizona State University before attending the University of Colorado, Boulder, for his M.A. in Creative Writing. Belflower currently resides in New York and is pursuing a PhD in poetics at SUNY Albany.

~

Claire Hero is the author of Sing, Mongrel(Noemi Press 2009) and two chapbooks: afterpastures, winner of the 2007 Caketrain Chapbook Competition, and Cabinet (dancing girl press). She lives in upstate New York.

~

Shelly Taylor is the author of two poetry chapbooks, Peaches the Yes-Girl (Portable Press of Yo-Yo Labs, 2008) & Land Wide to Get a Hold Lost In (Dancing Girl Press, 2009). Black-Eyed Heifer(Tarpaulin Sky Press, May 2010) is her first full collection. Born in southern Georgia, she currently resides in Tucson, Arizona.

~

Matthew Thorburn is the author of a book of poems, Subject to Change, and a chapbook, the long poem Disappears in the Rain. He is the recipient of a 2008 Witter Bynner Fellowship from the Library of Congress. Currently, heâ€™s working on two new book projects: Every Possible Blue, a collection of poems about artists and their work, and Snow in Early Spring, a series of poems set in China, Iceland and Japan. He lives in The Bronx and works as a marketing manager for an international law firm.

~

Kim Gek Lin Short is the author of The Bugging Watch & Other Exhibits and the forthcoming China Cowboy, both from Tarpaulin Sky Press. Her chapbooks include The Residents (dancing girl press) and Run (Rope-a-Dope). She lives in Philadelphia with her family.

~

Wendy Wisnerâ€˜s first book of poems, Epicenter, was published by CW Books in 2004. Her poems have appeared in The Spoon River Review, Rhino, Natural Bridge, The Bellevue Literary Review, online at Verse Daily, and elsewhere. Wendy previously taught writing and literature at Hunter College, and is now an at-home mom to her two-year-old son. Visit Wendy on the web at www.wendywisner.com.

at Goodbye Blue Monday

1087 Broadway
(corner of Dodworth St)
Brooklyn, NY 11221-3013 [redacted]
J M Z trains to Myrtle Ave

or J train to Kosciusko St

~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
http://stainofpoetry.com/

 Juice - + http://www.huffingtonpost.com/travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html + http://www.pw.org/content/poets_take_action_in_wake_of_gulf_coast_disaster + http://poetry.about.com/b/2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf-of-mexico.htm + http://amyking.org

****

↑ Index

211. George Bowering
Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Fri 25 Jun 2010

The publication of bpNichol's Monotones.
(He published 4 books that year!)

On Jun 24, 2010, at 12:52 PM, R Levitsky wrote:

> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky
>
> welcome.html

Mr. G.H. Bowering
Does not get up immoderately early.

↑ Index

212. Crane's Bill Books
Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Fri 25 Jun 2010

Rachel,
It was the year of both Spicer's Red Wheelbarrow and Sexton's Transformations. Wow!
Jeffrey

----- Original Message -----
From: "R Levitsky" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 1:52 PM
Subject: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

213. Jeffrey Side
The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Experimental Sex Hospital" by Todd Swift.
Sat 26 Jun 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Experimental Sex Hospital" by Todd Swift.

Description:

Todd Swiftâ€™s "Experimental Sex Hospital" is the ebook sequel to his critically acclaimed, "Mainstream Love Hotel". Shadowing that previous work, the poems here deepen and lengthen the poet's exploration of desire and devotion, and, aesthetically, the tension between innovation and tradition in contemporary poetic styles. As in all Swift's work, musicality, sense of form, and wordplay fuse with elevated and street-level tones that create a zany, risk-taking book-text that interrogates ideas of self-identity and poetics, with an earnest eroticism. Barely literature, or literally bare, these are poems that enjoy walking naked with a flamboyant display.

Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/experimental-sex-hospital/11489518

↑ Index

214. Rosalie Calabrese

ROSALIE'S POETRY UPDATE

Sat 26 Jun 2010

Next Featured Reading:

Sunday,

July 18, 3:00 PM
6th Street & Avenue B Garden
Free Admission
(No Rain Date)
To get there:
R, V or Lexington Avenue train to 8th
St.
Walk East or take crosstown bus to Ave. B
Or F train to Second Avenue
Or 1st or 2ndÂ Avenue bus

Newly Published Poem:

NOT

GONE

Forget the Holocaust, I tell myself once more.
Thereâ€™s
enough in the news without rehashing.
But, as before, I ignore my own
advice.
History, like shoes stored away
in the back of a closet,
stands ready
to be tried on again from time to time,
the pinch
always a surprise.
A tale of years without a dateline,
the past
never dies; burial is not an option.

[This poem appears in the Poetica Holocaust Web edition (June 2010). It can be found at www.poeticamagazine.com]Â Â Â Â Â Â

↑ Index

215. Dr. Dina Ripsman Eylon

New Poetry Chapbook from Sisterhood Press

Sat 26 Jun 2010

In the Heart of the City

Poems by Dina Ripsman Eylon

Thornhill, ON: Sisterhood Press, 2010.
ISBN 978-0-9688949-1-0 [Loose-leaf, handmade, limited edition]
Book Design by Talia Eylon
Email: [redacted]

Reviews of Dina Ripsman Eylon’s Poetry:

"Dina takes the reader on a disappointing journey of looking for love and finding cruelty on ‘unworldly roads.’ Some lines have a genuine musical feeling and many of these poems have a kind of radiance, despite their sadness." Ellen S. Jaffe, Poet, Author & Teacher

“There are moments, phrases, or particular word choices throughout Eylon’s chapbook that draw me closer to the work. Place names create interest. And in the poem Names I Can’t Pronounce, the voice of the poet seems more at ease, and the poem—primarily two listings of literati and one of potential titles —is one with which I found a sense of connection. Another poem in the collection, Dead People, spoke to me immediately; not only does the title and opening line charge the reader with intent and purpose, but the listing of those dead the narrative voice can see--grandmother, aunt, uncle, nephew, friends— all become more than one-dimensional when the name Pearl Gedola appears. That magical thing that occurs occasionally in poetry happens by the detail of a name, and the appearance of Pearl Gedola makes this reader realize more fully the nameless aunt, uncle, etc. had names and were individuals beyond their relationships with the narrator of the poem. The poet furthers this sense of real people by having those dead ‘mumble and chuckle’ agree and concur.” Lynn Doiron, Poet, Author & Blogger “Dina’s poems are more than merely ‘Songs of Love and Misgivings.’ Her captivating words will penetrate your soul, and leave you craving for more.” I.B. Iskov, Founder, The Ontario Poetry Society.

“Dina Ripsman Eylon's voice is pure lyricism, individualistic and non-conforming. The speaker's quest for love is absolute. Yet, tender words can be cunning, misguiding, the embrace loose (You Who Left), and separation finite. The speaker's seemingly naive stance about the existence of love is often contrasted by a deep sense of alienation ‘In the Heart of the City,’ continuing the gloomy traditional theme of Urban literatures.” Edith Covensky, Poet, and Professor @ Wayne State University

To order your copy, send $15 in cheque or money order ($13 + $2 postage and handling) payable to Dina Eylon.

Sisterhood Press
1136-3 Centre St., Ste. 246
Thornhill, Ontario L4J 3M8
Email: [redacted]
Website: http://sisterhoodpress.blogspot.com

↑ Index

216. Dr. Dina Ripsman Eylon

Writing Competition from Women in Judaism

Sat 26 Jun 2010

Women in Judaism’s First Annual Writing Competition
www.womeninjudaism.org

Women in Judaism: A Multidisciplinary is now accepting submissions for its 2010 annual writing competition. The e-journal is looking for unpublished submissions of short fiction, poetry, and essays on Jewish themes that touch the lives and experiences of Jewish women.

PRIZES:

Short Fiction
First Place: $250
Second Place: $100
Third Place: $50

Poetry
First Place: $250
Second Place: $100
Third Place: $50

Essays
First Place: $250
Second Place: $100
Third Place: $50

Winning entries will be published in the two yearly issues of the journal.

GENERAL GUIDELINES: We accept only electronic submissions. Send submissions to the journal's editor-in-chief, Dr. Dina Ripsman Eylon: [redacted] Submit one short story/poem/essay per entry fee. Multiple submissions are allowed. All styles and forms are accepted. No simultaneous submissions are allowed. Submissions should arrive by email before the set deadline.

DEADLINE:
September 1, 2010.

FORMAT:
All entries should be in Word or RTF with author's full name, address, phone number, and email address, appearing on the first page of each entry.

ENTRY FEE:
$10 (US/CAD) fee for each short story or essay. $5 (US/CAD) for each poem. Form of payment: Use PayPal on the journal's website (see the Donate button at the bottom of each webpage), or mail a money order payable to Women in Judaism at the following address:
Women in Judaism: A Multidisciplinary Journal
1136-3 Centre St., Ste. 246
Thornhill, ON L4J 3M8 Canada

Contact: Dr. Dina Ripsman Eylon
Email: [redacted]

↑ Index

217. Bill Berkson
FW: What About Auden
Sat 26 Jun 2010

Evening at Books & Bookshelves

³What About W. H. Auden?² 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 29, 2010 99 Sanchez Street, San Francisco, CA 415-621-376 an evening of readings from and talking about W. H. Auden¹s poetry, prose and his importance as a poet and man of letters with Bill Berkson, ³Musée des Beaux Arts²/ 13 Things/ ³The Ironist²

Steve Dickison, Iceland
Patrick Dunagan, intro poem to The Sea and the Mirror
Jarrett Earnest, re W.H. & Hannah Arendt
Garrett Caples, Auden intro to Minor British 19th C Poets
Amanda Eicher, ³In Memory of W.B. Yeats²

Norman Fisher, ³As I walked out on eveningŠ² & ³On the Circuit²
Susan Gevirtz, Homage to Clio
Robert Harris Ode from The Orators
David Highsmith, ³River Profile²
Colter Jacobsen & Larry Rinder, from Letters from Iceland
Jason Morris, ³The Poet and the City²
Julien Poirier, on The Rakes Progress
Stephen Ratcliffe, preface to Thomas Campion
Cedar Sigo, prepared text on Auden
Michael Wolfe, ³In Praise of Limestone²

↑ Index

218. David A. Kirschenbaum
Advertise in Boog City 65
Sat 26 Jun 2010

Please forward

Advertise in

Boog City 65

Deadlines

--Space Reservations-Email to reserve ad space ASAP

-Fri. July 16-Submit Ad or Ad Materials
-Sat. July 24-Distribute Paper

This is a quick note to see if you'd like to advertise and reach our readership. (Donations are also cool, way cool.)

We'll be distributing 2,250 copies of the issue throughout the East Village and other parts of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and at Boog City events.

Advertise your small press's newest publications, your own titles or upcoming readings, or maybe salute an author you feel people should be reading, with a few suggested books to buy. And musical acts, advertise your new albums, indie labels your new releases.

Take advantage of our indie discount ad rate. We are once again offering a 50% discount on our 1/8-page ads, cutting them from $80 to $40. The discount rate also applies to larger ads.

For our full rate card, please visit:

http://welcometoboogcity.com/ad_rates.pdf

Email [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664) for more information.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: 212-842-BOOG (2664)

↑ Index

219. amy king
June Jordan poem up @ Poets for Living Waters
Sat 26 Jun 2010

Thought folks might be interested --

Poem for Nana @ http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/2010/06/26/poem-for-nana-by-june-jordan/

And

David Wolach -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/2010/06/26/three-poems-by-david-wolach/

Jason Quackenbush -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/2010/06/26/two-poems-by-jason-quackenbush/

Jules Boykoff -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/2010/06/26/we-care-about-the-small-people-by-jules-boykoff/

+ more @ http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

Best,

Amy

****
Juice -
+ http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html
+ http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster

+ http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm
+ http://amyking.org
****

↑ Index

220. Camille Martin

New @ Rogue Embryo: Jan Sekal + Mark Goldstein + the fledgling book (on letting go), + more . . .

Sat 26 Jun 2010

New @ Rogue Embryo

* Jan Sekal (Czech photographer living in Paris)

* the fledgling book flies the nest (on letting go)

* two photographs: "old stove" + "yellow tulip tree leaf"

* two new collages: “a double exposure remembers” + “full circle”

* Mark Goldstein, from Tracelanguage

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

Cheers!

Camille Martin
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html

↑ Index

221. Nicholas Piombino

Re: Remembering Peter Seaton

Sat 26 Jun 2010

I received an email from Ron Silliman telling me that Peter Seaton died last month.

Peter Seaton and I met at City College (CCNY) in 1960 or 1961, when we were freshmen or sophomores. He was probably born in 1942. We spent many, many fascinating hours together discussing literature and reading each others writing throughout our college days. Peter's appearance changed little over the years. He had short, close cropped light brown curly hair, which later became gray. He wore glasses, frequently sunglasses or glasses with clear plastic frames through which you could invariably observe twinkling eyes, often a dark brown henley t-shirt and light tan corduroys, and though short in stature he had a distinctive walk, a rolling gait that sometimes reminded me of a sailor. Peter was a terrific marathon one-on-one conversationalist, a mordant, literary wit of the Holden Caulfield variety, an indefatigable reader who loved to endlessly talk and search for books and new ideas. This, combined with the fact that he was among the most private and secretive persons I have ever known, added immeasurably to the quality of mystery that surrounded both his presence and his absence. Other than the fact that he attended boarding school, he spoke little about his early life. One of his first short stories, perhaps written for a short story class that we attended together at CCNY, was of a character obsessed with going out into the city on an inexplicable, lonely search for a certain hard to find poster. Our interests and directions concerning poetry and poetics remained parallel after graduation in 1964, often attending readings together at St Mark¹s, reading The World magazine and other poetry magazines and discussing them avidly, through to the establishment of This magazine, and L=A magazine, up to the early 80¹s. During the opening and middle years of Language poetry many of Peter Seaton¹s long prose poems were published, widely read and influential. Peter and I did some writing collaborations and even some film experiments together in the late 60¹s and early 70¹s (we were then both big fans of Stan Brakhage) although these may now be lost or hard to locate. I may still have one or two letters or postcards that he wrote to me when I was living for awhile in Italy and Morocco in the late 60¹s. It was he that told me that Bernadette Mayer, whose work we both greatly admired, was giving an open workshop at the Poetry Project in 1973. He always encouraged me in my writing and collage productions particularly, explaining to me that he was knowledgeable about this because his mother had once run an art gallery. I am sorry to say that we lost touch with each other in the early 80¹s. Peter¹s writing and poetry and his penetrating insights into poetry, culture, technology, language and life were of constant interest to me during our many years of close friendship in the 60's and 70's.

* * *

Penn Sound Obit

* * *

Wikipedia page-Peter Seaton

* * *

On 6/23/10 10:55 PM, "Gottlieb, Michael" <[redacted]> wrote:

> REMEMBERING PETER SEATON
>
> Just having returned last night from Leslie Scalapino's memorial at St. Marks - a packed, hot, long, fraught, draining event - one that I have to admit I had to leave halfway through. So many people there, so many people for whom Leslie was so important. Old, young - so many young people. She did so much for so many, was such an exemplar, mentor, publisher, friend... And then the next day, today, this news: Peter Seaton, dead.

And who is going to organize his memorial? Just how many remember him, how many remember how powerful, unflinchingly, unerringly, nakedly vital was his work when he burst among us, how many years ago?

I don't have his books in front of me now, and I don't have the years - the timeline called up - to fix him in our greater calendar but suddenly he was there one season: slight, sandy hair, a pack of... of Camels? Luckies? in his breast pocket. Bespectacled, a perpetual, canted, slightly sardonic smile on his face.

One book, two books, three, maybe there were four, and then he was gone. He threw himself out of our world, not - at first - going altogether all that far. Off to Coliseum Books in Midtown Manhattan - where he worked for years and where quite apparently he made another life for himself; and made another life with a life partner who we also knew, at least for awhile. But then what happened?

He reappeared a few years later, read again at the Ear and was just as powerful as ever and it was as if he'd never left - which was a little troubling in a way because, and I'm guessing I'm not the only one who thought so - enough years had gone by that it wasn't unreasonable to expect that things, he, his work, might be a bit different, but no. It was all the same.

Then he was gone, again. And it was clear, it was as clear then as it had been clear from the beginning, in the very same way that it remained clear over the years as Peter came to mind, as his name came up in conversation from time to time, that Peter could have, maybe should have, been someone whose name was always on the tip of all of our tongues. That he could have been someone whose books were bought, whose writing was taught (is it? Does anyone teach it now?), he and his poems could have been, should have been the subject of seminars and conferences but for whatever reason - he bailed... he didn't want to live the life, he couldn't deal with the requirements the... the what? The compromises, the blandishments? Whatever. So he took a walk.

And that act in itself was a kind of admonishment to the rest of us. A caution and a remonstrance reminding us, recalling to mind - if we needed any reminder - of all the compromises that we have made, we make every day in the name of our careers. He wouldn't, I guess, he couldn't.

He died without any of us around. That may not be necessarily a bad thing. But, did he die alone?

↑ Index

222. Stuart Ross
New chapbook by Loren Goodman!
Sat 26 Jun 2010

PROPER TALES PRESS

is proud to present
Loren Goodman's first Canadian publication

NEW PRODUCTS

a 24-page chapbook of new poems
by the author of Famous Americans

And it's really good.
And you can have a copy for only $6 (ppd) in U.S. or Canada, $7 (ppd) elsewhere.

Write me or PayPal me at [redacted]

Holy cow!

↑ Index

223. Jeffrey Side
The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Sparagmos Never Mind the Via Negativa" by Jim Leftwich.
Sat 26 Jun 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Sparagmos Never Mind the Via Negativa" by Jim Leftwich.

Description:
The word is flesh. Tear it apart, syllable by syllable. Tear the syllables apart, letter by letter. There is no longer any need to begin with the word. We have already torn the letters apart. The word made flesh, theletters made noise... Eat it - raw. Jim Leftwich's "Sparagmos Never Mind the Via Negativa" was written in May 2010 using a Logitech EX 100 keyboard. It is a text, but it is not a text about reading.
Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/sparagmos-never-mind-the-via-negativa/11490698

↑ Index

224. Nicholas Piombino

Re: Remembering Peter Seaton

Sun 27 Jun 2010

Sorry for the error on the links for Peter Seaton on Wikipedia and Penn Sound. Here are the correct links:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Peter_Seaton

http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/

On 6/26/10 6:51 PM, "Nick Piombino" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I received an email from Ron Silliman telling me that Peter Seaton died last month.
>
> Peter Seaton and I met at City College (CCNY) in 1960 or 1961, when we were freshmen or sophomores. He was probably born in 1942. We spent many, many fascinating hours together discussing literature and reading each others writing throughout our college days. Peter's appearance changed little over the years. He had short, close cropped light brown curly hair, which later became gray. He wore glasses, frequently sunglasses or glasses with clear plastic frames through which you could invariably observe twinkling eyes, often a dark brown henley t-shirt and light tan corduroys, and though short in stature he had a distinctive walk, a rolling gait that sometimes reminded me of a sailor. Peter was a terrific marathon one-on-one conversationalist, a mordant, literary wit of the Holden Caulfield variety, an indefatigable reader who loved to endlessly talk and search for books and new ideas. This, combined with the fact that he was among the most private and secretive persons I have ever known, added immeasurably to the quality of mystery that surrounded both his presence and his absence. Other than the fact that he attended boarding school, he spoke little about his early life. One of his first short stories, perhaps written for a short story class that we attended together at CCNY, was of a character obsessed with going out into the city on an inexplicable, lonely search for a certain hard to find poster. Our interests and directions concerning poetry and poetics remained parallel after graduation in 1964, often attending readings together at St Mark¹s, reading The World magazine and other poetry magazines and discussing them avidly, through to the establishment of This magazine, and L=A magazine, up to the early 80¹s. During the opening and middle years of Language poetry many of Peter Seaton¹s long prose poems were published, widely read and influential. Peter and I did some writing collaborations and even some film experiments together in the late 60¹s and early 70¹s (we were then both big fans of Stan Brakhage) although these may now be lost or hard to locate. I may still have one or two letters or postcards that he wrote to me when I was living for awhile in Italy and Morocco in the late 60¹s. It was he that told me that Bernadette Mayer, whose work we both greatly admired, was giving an open workshop at the Poetry Project in 1973. He always encouraged me in my writing and collage productions particularly, explaining to me that he was knowledgeable about this because his mother had once run an art gallery. I am sorry to say that we lost touch with each other in the early 80¹s. Peter¹s writing and poetry and his penetrating insights into poetry, culture, technology, language and life were of constant interest to me during our many years of close friendship in the 60's and 70's.

* * *

Penn Sound Obit

* * *

Wikipedia page-Peter Seaton

* * *

On 6/23/10 10:55 PM, "Gottlieb, Michael" <[redacted]> wrote:

REMEMBERING PETER SEATON

Just having returned last night from Leslie Scalapino's memorial at St. Marks - a packed, hot, long, fraught, draining event - one that I have to admit I had to leave halfway through. So many people there, so many people for whom Leslie was so important. Old, young - so many young people. She did so much for so many, was such an exemplar, mentor, publisher, friend... And then the next day, today, this news: Peter Seaton, dead.

And who is going to organize his memorial? Just how many remember him, how many remember how powerful, unflinchingly, unerringly, nakedly vital was his work when he burst among us, how many years ago?

I don't have his books in front of me now, and I don't have the years - the timeline called up - to fix him in our greater calendar but suddenly he was there one season: slight, sandy hair, a pack of... of Camels? Luckies? in his breast pocket. Bespectacled, a perpetual, canted, slightly sardonic smile on his face.

One book, two books, three, maybe there were four, and then he was gone. He threw himself out of our world, not - at first - going altogether all that far. Off to Coliseum Books in Midtown Manhattan - where he worked for years and where quite apparently he made another life for himself; and made another life with a life partner who we also knew, at least for awhile. But then what happened?

He reappeared a few years later, read again at the Ear and was just as powerful as ever and it was as if he'd never left - which was a little > troubling in a way because, and I'm guessing I'm not the only one who thought so - enough years had gone by that it wasn't unreasonable to expect that things, he, his work, might be a bit different, but no. It was all the same.

>
> Then he was gone, again. And it was clear, it was as clear then as it had been clear from the beginning, in the very same way that it remained clear over the years as Peter came to mind, as his name came up in conversation from time to time, that Peter could have, maybe should have, been someone whose name was always on the tip of all of our tongues. That he could have been someone whose books were bought, whose writing was taught (is it? Does anyone teach it now?), he and his poems could have been, should have been the subject of seminars and conferences but for whatever reason - he bailed... he didn't want to live the life, he couldn't deal with the requirements the... the what? The compromises, the blandishments? Whatever. So he took a walk.
>
> And that act in itself was a kind of admonishment to the rest of us. A caution and a remonstrance reminding us, recalling to mind - if we needed any reminder - of all the compromises that we have made, we make every day in the name of our careers. He wouldn't, I guess, he couldn't.
>
> He died without any of us around. That may not be necessarily a bad thing. But, did he die alone?

↑ Index

225. Ruth Lepson

Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Sun 27 Jun 2010

Rachel,

Sexton was my teacher that year at Boston U. Much to say.

George Starbuck had left Iowa to become the head of creative writing at BU. I think he hired Anne. And John Malcolm Brinnin, Dylan Thomas' road manager, who wrote a wonderful bio of Stein taught in the program, too. He brought Octavio Paz to our class.

Alberto de Lacerda, the Portuguese poet, came to BU also & gave a course on Portuguese & Brazilian poets, some of whom he had known.

Don't know if any of this is of interest but here it is.

Ruth

On 6/25/10 11:19 PM, "Crane's Bill Books" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Rachel,
> It was the year of both Spicer's Red Wheelbarrow and Sexton's Transformations. Wow!
> Jeffrey
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "R Levitsky" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 1:52 PM
> Subject: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
>
> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

226. Carol Novack

Reminder: The Mad Hatters' Review Contest closes this Wednesday at midnight!

Sun 27 Jun 2010

Sheila Murphy will judge poetry (concrete/visual included) and Cris Mazza will judge fiction. Please see http://www.madhattersreview.com/contest.shtml for details! Yrs, Ms. TopHat

↑ Index

227. William Slaughter

New Mudlark Flash

Sun 27 Jun 2010

This message is in MIME format. The first part should be readable text, while the remaining parts are likely unreadable without MIME-aware tools.

--1049347784-282969104-1277693713=:7790

New and On View: Mudlark Flash No. 57 (2010)

Three Poems from The New Melancholiac's Guide: Should Your Gadget Jam, Postcards from Home, Epidemic

by Philip Brooks

who grew up in the Chicago suburb of Highland Park "as an aspiring melancholiac. To that end," he attended the Iowa Writers' Workshop as a fiction writer.Â Several of his stories appeared in Gordon Lish's "defunct but really swell" The Quarterly, others inÂ Willow Springs and The Kenyon Review. SomeÂ of his poems have appeared in recent postings at Elimae.com. He lives in Ohio with his wife, Balinda, and young son, Felix.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

--1049347784-282969104-1277693713=:7790--

↑ Index

228. Susan Webster Schultz recent blog posts from Tinfish Editor
Mon 28 Jun 2010

---

http://tinfisheditor.blogspot.com

* Memory Card, Maui
* Dementia meditation, bike ride 6/21/10
* "Lift a great silence off a small detail": Sesshu ...
* Charlie Chan Is Dead and Living in Honolulu
* Alzheimer, Albrecht: Losing Is/Is Not Art
* "She's welcome to her disease":_Stanzas in Meditat...
* NO CHEESE: June 1 in the Alzheimer's home

Have a look.

aloha, Susan S.

↑ Index

229. steve dalachinsky

dalachinsky POETRY UPDATE

Mon 28 Jun 2010

---

steve dalachinsky and jake marmer
read at educational alliance june 30 630 pm on the roof 197 e. broadway f train to e.broadway stop stev e and a host of others read and play music july 1 brooklyn bridge park 5 pm to celebrate walt whitman

↑ Index

230. Brian Cassidy, Bookseller ABAA

Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Mon 28 Jun 2010

I would certainly include the publication of Watten and Grenier's THIS magazine. The first issue appeared in winter 1971.

Hope this helps.

-bc

brian cassidy, bookseller
po box 11265
takoma park, md 20913
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://www.briancassidy.net

Member: ABAA, ILAB, IOBA

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "R Levitsky" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 1:52 PM
> Subject: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
>
> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

231. steve dalachinsky
Re: ROSALIE'S POETRY UPDATE
Mon 28 Jun 2010

> steve dalachinsky and jake marmer
> read at educational alliance june 30 630 pm on the roof 197 e.
> broadway f train to e.broadway stop
>
> steve and a host of others read and play music july 1 brooklyn bridge > park 5 pm
> to celebrate walt whitman
>
On Sat, 26 Jun 2010 08:12:36 -0700 Rosalie Calabrese <[redacted]>
writes:
> Next Featured Reading:
>
> Sunday,
>
> July 18, 3:00 PM
> 6th Street & Avenue B Garden
> Free Admission
> (No Rain Date)
> To get there:
> R, V or Lexington Avenue train to 8th
> St.
> Walk East or take crosstown bus to Ave. B
> Or F train to
> Second Avenue
> Or 1st or 2nd Avenue bus
>
> Newly Published Poem:
>
> NOT
>
> GONE
>
> Forget the Holocaust, I tell myself once more.
> There’s
> enough in the news without rehashing.
> But, as before, I ignore my own
> advice.
> History, like shoes stored away

> in the back of a closet,
> stands ready
> to be tried on again from time to time,
> the pinch
> always a surprise.
> A tale of years without a dateline,
> the past
> never dies; burial is > not an > option.
>
>
> [This poem appears in the Poetica Holocaust Web > edition (June 2010). It can be found at www.poeticamagazine.com]
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

232. Michael

SAVE THE GULF-- SAN FRANCISCO-- SHOW YOUR SUPPORT!!--JULY 2

Mon 28 Jun 2010

SAN FRANCISCO Save The Gulf Benefit for The Louisiana Bucket Brigade
Rockpile and The Rabbles
with David Meltzer, Michael Rothenberg, Terri Carrion, Clark Coolidge and Gloria Frym
Friday, July 2, 8pm
The Counterpulse, 1310 Mission at 9th
San Francisco, CA

SHOW YOUR SUPPORT!!

↑ Index

233. Stephen Vincent

Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Mon 28 Jun 2010

I believe the first issue of Shocks magazine appears in 1971 which included probably the first ever printed review of a reading by the late Pedro Pietri here in San Francisco. You should also check out the publications of the various women's presses in the Bay Area - which published Alta, Judy Grahn and Susan Griffin about this time. This was the 'break ground' moment of diversity (gender, racial) in new American writing (let alone issues of (anti)war, ecology, prisons, et al). (I suspect this happened in the Bay Area because it is a relatively "porous" cross talking region, and not as divided (ghettoized) as then was New York or Chicago How all of these movements do or do not (& why not) get embraced in the formal/critical considerations of "This" and "L-A-N-G-U-A-G-E" is, I suspect, a critical enigma much worth examining, and maybe some folks have or are doing that (??).

Stephen Vincent

--- On Mon, 6/28/10, Brian Cassidy, Bookseller ABAA <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Brian Cassidy, Bookseller ABAA <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, June 28, 2010, 2:53 AM

I would certainly include the publication of Watten and Grenier's THIS magazine. The first issue appeared in winter 1971.

Hope this helps.

-bc

brian cassidy, bookseller
po box 11265
takoma park, md 20913
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://www.briancassidy.net

Member: ABAA, ILAB, IOBA

> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "R Levitsky" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Thursday, June 24, 2010 1:52 PM
> Subject: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
>
> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

234. Jerome Rothenberg
New posting: David Antin on narrative
Mon 28 Jun 2010

On Tuesday June 29 I'll be posting on Poems and Poetics the first installment of a three part essay by David Antin on narrative, a topic of ongoing concern to Antin, which he addresses in his characteristically sharp and often surprising way.

Other recent postings include Andrew Schelling, Poems from "The ArapahoSongbook"; Mark Weiss: Six Cuban Poets from The Whole Island: Robert Duncan's charting of "a symposium of the whole," a key to my own discussions of ethnopoetics & related matters; and a further installment of Outsider Poems, a Mini-Anthology in Progress, this one a series of "Irish Traveller Narratives from Johnny Cassidy's Tellings."

I expect to send out announcements of future postings -- my own and others -- which have now been scheduled and cued until early or middle September.

And in the meantime suggestions for additions to the anthology of outsider and subaltern poetry continue to be welcomed.

Jerome Rothenberg
1026 San Abella
Encinitas, CA 92024
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/rothenberg/ethnopoetics web site: http://ubu.com/ethno/j.r. in spanish: http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/rothenberg/esp/blog: poemsandpoetics.blogspot.com

There is an avant-garde that cannot be defeated.
-- M. Giroud, in J.R., Autobiography

↑ Index

235. amy king
The oil hasn't stopped
Mon 28 Jun 2010

flowing, neither have the poems -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

New work up now!

Best,

Amy

****

Juice -

+ http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html
+ http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster
+ http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm
+ http://amyking.org
****

↑ Index

236. Fiona Templeton
DIY Workshop - The Eavesdroppers' Choir
Mon 28 Jun 2010

DIY 7: 2010 - Call for Participants - The Eavesdroppers' Choir

A found-live-language speaking choir, based on a 3 1/2-day intensive collaborative workshop to explore techniques of gathering, creating forms with and improvising live with found language. Led by Fiona Templeton in Bury, Manchester, England, 16-19 September 2010.

More info at:
http://www.thisisliveart.co.uk/prof_dev/diy/diy7_fiona_templeton.html

This DIY project is one of the launch activities leading up to the third Text Festival (April-July 2011). www.textfestival.com

↑ Index

237. amy king
Appropriate time for profanity: now. --- Just when we thought the spill couldn't get worse ...
Mon 28 Jun 2010

Just when you thought the spill couldn't get worse - http://www.huliq.com/9990/ocean-floor-gulf-mexico-verge-collapsing

Excerpt:

BP CUT CORNERS

"The cracks on the ocean floor are the direct result of the single string casing used by BP and the failure to apply proper cementing bond logs in addition to only using 6 centralizers instead of the recommended 21."

Welcome, newly-possible 150,000 barrels of oil a day! Thanks, BP!

Poets for Living Waters -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

I would say best, but that's already past,

Amy

****

Juice -
+ http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html
+ http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster
+ http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm
+ http://amyking.org
****

↑ Index

238. amy king
Re: OT: Just when we thought the "spill" couldn't get worse ... + Poets for Living Waters
Mon 28 Jun 2010

I should have checked the source, but in my panic, I did not. The story is not on the AP at all. I hope that this is just a mere sensationalized story (god do I) with no validity, whatsoever.

With possible gleeful (& tail-tucking) apologies,

Amy

Just when we thought the "spill" couldn't get worse - http://www.huliq.com/9990/ocean-floor-gulf-mexico-verge-collapsing

Excerpt:

BP CUT CORNERS

"The cracks on the ocean floor are the direct result of the single string casing used by BP and the failure to apply proper cementing bond logs in addition to only using 6 centralizers instead of the recommended 21."

Welcome, newly-possible 150,000 barrels of oil a day! Thanks, BP!

~~~~~~~~~~~~~

THE OIL HASN'T STOPPED FLOWING, and neither have the poems:

Poets for Living Waters -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

I would say best, but that's already past,

Amy

****

Juice -
~~~~~~~~~~~~~

+ http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html
+ http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster
+ http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm
+ http://amyking.org
****

↑ Index

239. Kevin Killian
Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Mon 28 Jun 2010

Dear Rachel,

My God, I was 18 then....

I remember living in New York and the following things happened, though most of them I didn't find out about till years later! For me personally the signal arts events of 1971 were seeing Bette Midler at the Continental Bath House.... and Maria Callas working at Juilliard giving the master class to voice students, but anybody could get in just about. But in poetry, you might say 1971 involved....

Birth of Tupac Shakur, Kazim Ali, Jeff Clark, Brigid Pegeen Kelly, Beth Ann Fennelly, Snoop Dogg, Terrance Hayes, Evelyn Lau

Patti Smith performs with Lenny Kaye February 10 at the Poetry Project (first collaboration)

Ted Berrigan, Train Ride

Jack Spicer, The Red Wheelbarrow

Anne-Marie Albiach, Etat

Sonia Sanchez joins Nation of Islam

Linda Nochlin, “Why have there been no great woman artists?” (published)

The Collected Poems of Frank O’Hara, ed. Donald M. Allen

Jose Lezama Lima, Complete Poems (Cuban publication)

Adrienne Rich publishes The Will to Change

Elizabeth Bishop meets Alice Methfessel

Louis Zukofsky, ALL: The Collected Shorter Poems (final version)

High point of Bolinas as American poetry capital

Pablo Neruda receives Nobel Prize

Duncan and Levertov quarrel reaches flash point in Sept—November 1971

Sun Ra, “The Black Man in the Cosmos” (course at UC Berkeley)

Philip Whalen, Scenes of Life at the Capital

John Lennon releases “Imagine” (autumn)

Andy Warhol designs Sticky Fingers cover for the Stones (spring)

Jackson Mac Low, Stanzas for Iris Lezak

Valerie Eliot publishes Waste Land facsimile from original manuscripts

Anne Waldman edits Another World
Nam June Paik, TV Cello with Charlotte Moorman

Hugh Kenner, The Pound Era

Death of Ogden Nash, Jim Morrison, Paul Blackburn, Stevie Smith, Lew Welch

Love ya, Kevin K.

> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

240. Donald Wellman
Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Mon 28 Jun 2010

In 1971, I left Germany where I was because of Vietnam era military service. I brought back with me a love for Olson and Zukofsky. I had picked up Z. at a bookstore in Covent Garden. My special love was Basil Bunting. My buddy had studied with Kenner in Santa Barbara and could recite "Brigg Flats" by heart. That wowed me and fit with my Anglo-Saxon Studies agenda. It was Old English that drew me to Oregon. Contemporary poetry for me began there with Galway Kinnell and Robert Creeley and necessarily William Stafford whose son was a classmate. Donald Davey came up and promoted Ed Dorn and Thom Gunn. Ralph Salisbury was a poet and a friend. Some of you may know the inimitable Joe Smith whom I later published in O.ARS. I have written a history of my associations with Charles Olson and people like Harvey Brown which is available on the web at http://www.cranberryisles.com/photos/olson_tangents.htm.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Kevin Killian
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 7:18 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Dear Rachel,

My God, I was 18 then....

I remember living in New York and the following things happened, though most of them I didn't find out about till years later! For me personally the signal arts events of 1971 were seeing Bette Midler at the Continental Bath House.... and Maria Callas working at Juilliard giving the master class to voice students, but anybody could get in just about. But in poetry, you might say 1971 involved....

Birth of Tupac Shakur, Kazim Ali, Jeff Clark, Brigid Pegeen Kelly, Beth Ann Fennelly, Snoop Dogg, Terrance Hayes, Evelyn Lau

Patti Smith performs with Lenny Kaye February 10 at the Poetry Project (first collaboration)

Ted Berrigan, Train Ride

Jack Spicer, The Red Wheelbarrow

Anne-Marie Albiach, Etat

Sonia Sanchez joins Nation of Islam

Linda Nochlin, "Why have there been no great woman artists?" (published)

The Collected Poems of Frank O'Hara, ed. Donald M. Allen

Jose Lezama Lima, Complete Poems (Cuban publication)

Adrienne Rich publishes The Will to Change

Elizabeth Bishop meets Alice Methfessel

Louis Zukofsky, ALL: The Collected Shorter Poems (final version)

High point of Bolinas as American poetry capital

Pablo Neruda receives Nobel Prize

Duncan and Levertov quarrel reaches flash point in Sept-November 1971

Sun Ra, "The Black Man in the Cosmos" (course at UC Berkeley)

Philip Whalen, Scenes of Life at the Capital

John Lennon releases "Imagine" (autumn)

Andy Warhol designs Sticky Fingers cover for the Stones (spring)

Jackson Mac Low, Stanzas for Iris Lezak

Valerie Eliot publishes Waste Land facsimile from original manuscripts

Anne Waldman edits Another World
Nam June Paik, TV Cello with Charlotte Moorman

Hugh Kenner, The Pound Era

Death of Ogden Nash, Jim Morrison, Paul Blackburn, Stevie Smith, Lew Welch

Love ya, Kevin K.

> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

241. Mark DuCharme
Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Mon 28 Jun 2010

Well, I think THAT pretty much covers it. Thank you, Kevin!

One question: is the title of the Adrienne Rich work you're thinking of The Will to Change (shades of Olson) or Diving into the Wreck?

All Best,

Mark DuCharme

> Date: Mon, 28 Jun 2010 16:17:42 -0700
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
> To: [redacted]
>
> Dear Rachel,

> My God, I was 18 then....
>
> I remember living in New York and the following things happened, though most of them I didn't find out about till years later! For me personally the signal arts events of 1971 were seeing Bette Midler at the Continental Bath House.... and Maria Callas working at Juilliard giving the master class to voice students, but anybody could get in just about. But in poetry, you might say 1971 involved....
>
> Birth of Tupac Shakur, Kazim Ali, Jeff Clark, Brigid Pegeen Kelly, Beth Ann Fennelly, Snoop Dogg, Terrance Hayes, Evelyn Lau
>
> Patti Smith performs with Lenny Kaye February 10 at the Poetry Project (first collaboration)
>
> Ted Berrigan, Train Ride
>
> Jack Spicer, The Red Wheelbarrow
>
> Anne-Marie Albiach, Etat
>
> Sonia Sanchez joins Nation of Islam
>
> Linda Nochlin, "Why have there been no great woman artists?" (published)
>
> The Collected Poems of Frank O'Hara, ed. Donald M. Allen
>
> Jose Lezama Lima, Complete Poems (Cuban publication)
>
> Adrienne Rich publishes The Will to Change
>
> Elizabeth Bishop meets Alice Methfessel
>
> Louis Zukofsky, ALL: The Collected Shorter Poems (final version)
>
> High point of Bolinas as American poetry capital
>
> Pablo Neruda receives Nobel Prize
>
> Duncan and Levertov quarrel reaches flash point in Sept—November 1971
>
> Sun Ra, "The Black Man in the Cosmos" (course at UC Berkeley)
>
> Philip Whalen, Scenes of Life at the Capital
>
> John Lennon releases "Imagine" (autumn)
>
> Andy Warhol designs Sticky Fingers cover for the Stones (spring)

> Jackson Mac Low, Stanzas for Iris Lezak
>
> Valerie Eliot publishes Waste Land facsimile from original manuscripts
>
> Anne Waldman edits Another World
> Nam June Paik, TV Cello with Charlotte Moorman
>
> Hugh Kenner, The Pound Era
>
> Death of Ogden Nash, Jim Morrison, Paul Blackburn, Stevie Smith, Lew Welch
>
> Love ya, Kevin K.
>
> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

242. David-Baptiste Chirot

Ben Sonnenberg, Founder of Literary Journal Grand Street, Dies at 73

Mon 28 Jun 2010

Ben Sonnenberg, Founder of Literary Journal, Dies at 73
By WILLIAM GRIMES
NY Times
http://www.nytimes.com/2010/06/26/books/26sonnenberg.html?ref=william_grimes

Ben
Sonnenberg, whose whims and myriad enthusiasms made Grand Street, the quarterly he founded in 1981, one of the most revered literary magazines of the postwar era, died Thursday in Manhattan.
He was 73.

The cause was complications of multiple sclerosis, his daughter Emma Snowdon-Jones said.

Mr. Sonnenberg funneled the proceeds from the sale of his father's five-story town house on Gramercy Park into Grand Street, a journal conceived in the spirit of high-minded but nonacademic magazines like The Dial and Horizon. He edited and published it for nine years, working out of the dining room of his apartment on Riverside Drive, until health problems forced him to sell the magazine in 1990. It ceased publication in 2004.

"I thought a magazine would be a good way to give money to individuals whose writing I liked," he told Newsday in 1989. "I wanted it to be like a European magazine, a space where you could expect pleasure and intellectual talk of both politics and art, of sex as well as money." A dandy, boulevardier and self-educated litterateur, Mr. Sonnenberg consulted only his own taste, backing it with substantial paychecks to his writers, some well known and others not. Grand Street was the first to publish the short stories of Susan Minot, for example, whom Mr. Sonnenberg hired to work at the magazine.

"It was his work of art, in a way," Ms. Minot said in a telephone interview on Friday. "It had an Old World feeling about it. It was not going to be sullied with anything that was not worthwhile. You wanted your work to be in those beautiful, creamy pages."

The first issue of Grand Street — named after the street on the Lower East Side where Mr. Sonnenberg's parents grew up — featured excerpts from the novelist Glenway Wescott's Paris journals, as well as articles, stories and poems by Ted Hughes, Alice Munro, James Salter, John Hollander, Northrop Frye and W. S. Merwin.

Later issues included political reporting by Amy Wilentz and Christopher Hitchens and the kind of offbeat matchup of writer and subject that Mr. Sonnenberg loved to instigate. For example, he commissioned the jazz critic Gary Giddins to profile Jack Benny. The Washington Post, surveying the winter 1985 issue, described the magazine as "Hellenic, leftish, mandarin, impeccable."

"Of all those characteristics, the one I find hardest to accept is 'impeccable,' " Mr. Sonnenberg told The Boston Globe in 1990.

Benjamin Sonnenberg Jr. was born in Manhattan on Dec. 30, 1936. His father was one of the most powerful publicists in the United States, representing corporate clients like Lever Brothers and Lipton Tea and personal clients like Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick and William S. Paley.

In “Lost Property: Memoirs and Confessions of a Bad Boy” (1991), Mr. Sonnenberg described a childhood on Gramercy Park — surrounded by 18th-century English furniture and a household staff of six — where celebrities from the worlds of business, film, theater and publishing mingled at constant dinner parties.

It was not a happy childhood. Ben made himself unwelcome at a series of private schools. Precocious, pretentious and incorrigible, he took Oscar Wilde as his role model and doted on the writings of the Marquis de Sade.

“At 7 years old, my favorite form of expression was the epigram,” he wrote in “Lost Property.” At 13, inspired by Casanova, he began writing his memoirs. He did not manage to finish high school.

“Lost Property” paints an unsparing portrait of a self-absorbed cad, “idle, rootless and mischievous.” Well supplied with his father’s money, Mr. Sonnenberg spent his 20s traveling around Europe, living in London and Málaga, Spain, and doing sporadic busywork for the C.I.A.

He wrote three plays, one of which, “Jane Street,” ran for four nights in an Off Off Broadway production. For a brief time in the early 1970s he was the literary manager of the Repertory Theater at Lincoln Center.

When not running up enormous bills at expensive shops and seducing a long list of attractive women (dutifully itemized in his memoir), he read widely and cultivated an impressive circle of friends that included Kenneth Tynan, Elias Canetti, Ted Hughes and Virgil Thomson. This heroic time-wasting turned out to be excellent training for his life’s work.

Mr. Sonnenberg’s first two marriages ended in divorce. In addition to his daughter Emma, of Manhattan, he is survived by his wife, Dorothy Gallagher; a sister, Helen Tucker, of Manhattan; two other daughters, Susanna Sonnenberg of Missoula, Mont., and Saidee Brown of Kingston, N.Y.; and five grandchildren.

In his mid-30s, Mr. Sonnenberg began experiencing the symptoms of multiple sclerosis. He bought a stylish cane, but soon needed two. A wheelchair followed, and eventually he was paralyzed from the neck down. His condition did not prevent him from holding court, however. After selling the magazine, he held frequent literary gatherings at his apartment.

Grand Street gave Mr. Sonnenberg a purpose in life and a position of cultural influence, although its circulation never exceeded 5,000. He ran the magazine like a salon, inviting the writers he liked to read, putting interesting guests together, acting as a provocateur if the conversation flagged.

“He was a very lively reader of material, and had not made up his mind ahead of time about anything,” said the poet and translator Richard Howard, a frequent contributor. “He was very open to critical writing, especially the kind that includes lots of gossip.”

Mr. Sonnenberg managed to get his hands on one of Samuel Beckett’s last poems, persuaded the political writer Alexander Cockburn to reminisce in print about his childhood, coaxed imaginative foreign reporting from top writers and indulged his taste for Greek politics and culture by editing a special issue on the poet Constantine P. Cavafy, a revelation for most readers.

When the money started running out and his health declined, Mr. Sonnenberg withdrew from a production he always envisioned as a limited run. He was happy: “I printed only what I liked; never once did I publish an editorial statement; I offered no writers’ guidelines; and I stopped when I couldn’t turn the pages anymore.”

The New Busy is not the too busy. Combine all your e-mail accounts with Hotmail. Get busy.
_____ The New Busy is not the too busy. Combine all your e-mail accounts with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multiaccount&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_4

↑ Index

243. Caleb Cluff
Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Mon 28 Jun 2010

Brigit Kelly was born in 1951.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Kevin Killian Sent: Tuesday, 29 June 2010 9:18 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Dear Rachel,

My God, I was 18 then....

I remember living in New York and the following things happened, though most of them I didn't find out about till years later! For me personally the signal arts events of 1971 were seeing Bette Midler at the Continental Bath House.... and Maria Callas working at Juilliard giving the master class to voice students, but anybody could get in just about. But in poetry, you might say 1971 involved....

Birth of Tupac Shakur, Kazim Ali, Jeff Clark, Brigid Pegeen Kelly, Beth Ann Fennelly, Snoop Dogg, Terrance Hayes, Evelyn Lau

Patti Smith performs with Lenny Kaye February 10 at the Poetry Project (first collaboration)

Ted Berrigan, Train Ride

Jack Spicer, The Red Wheelbarrow

Anne-Marie Albiach, Etat

Sonia Sanchez joins Nation of Islam

Linda Nochlin, "Why have there been no great woman artists?" (published)

The Collected Poems of Frank O'Hara, ed. Donald M. Allen

Jose Lezama Lima, Complete Poems (Cuban publication)

Adrienne Rich publishes The Will to Change

Elizabeth Bishop meets Alice Methfessel

Louis Zukofsky, ALL: The Collected Shorter Poems (final version)

High point of Bolinas as American poetry capital

Pablo Neruda receives Nobel Prize

Duncan and Levertov quarrel reaches flash point in Sept-November 1971

Sun Ra, "The Black Man in the Cosmos" (course at UC Berkeley)

Philip Whalen, Scenes of Life at the Capital

John Lennon releases "Imagine" (autumn)

Andy Warhol designs Sticky Fingers cover for the Stones (spring)

Jackson Mac Low, Stanzas for Iris Lezak

Valerie Eliot publishes Waste Land facsimile from original manuscripts

Anne Waldman edits Another World
Nam June Paik, TV Cello with Charlotte Moorman

Hugh Kenner, The Pound Era

Death of Ogden Nash, Jim Morrison, Paul Blackburn, Stevie Smith, Lew Welch

Love ya, Kevin K.

> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky

Please consider the environment before printing this e-mail.

The information contained in this email and any attachment is confidential and may contain legally privileged or copyright material. It is intended only for the use of the addressee(s). If you are not the intended recipient of this email, you are not permitted to disseminate, distribute or copy this email or any attachments. If you have received this message in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete this email from your system. The ABC does not represent or warrant that this transmission is secure or virus free. Before opening any attachment you should check for viruses. The ABC's liability is limited to resupplying any email and attachments.

↑ Index

244. David Seaman
Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Tue 29 Jun 2010

I must be the elder statesman of 1971. At that point I was interviewing for my next job and Robert Creeley said come to Buffalo, there is money for your concrete poetry projects. In New York Cityï»¿, when I got there, Richard Kostelanetz introduced me to Fluxus artists (Dick Higgins) and let me know what was going on. David

David W. Seaman, Ph.D.
http://personal.georgiasouthern.edu/~dseaman/Welcome.html

Follow my Twitter poetry at dseaman40

YouTube video of my Venice Biennale poem:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JQ5bOuJBN_k

On 28 Jun, 2010,at 11:06 PM, Donald Wellman <[redacted]> wrote:

> In 1971, I left Germany where I was because of Vietnam era military service.
> I brought back with me a love for Olson and Zukofsky. I had picked up Z. at a bookstore in Covent Garden. My special love was Basil Bunting. My buddy had studied with Kenner in Santa Barbara and could recite "Brigg Flats" by heart. That wowed me and fit with my Anglo-Saxon Studies agenda. It was Old English that drew me to Oregon. Contemporary poetry for me began there with Galway Kinnell and Robert Creeley and necessarily William Stafford whose son was a classmate. Donald Davey came up and promoted Ed Dorn and Thom Gunn. Ralph Salisbury was a poet and a friend. Some of you may know the inimitable Joe Smith whom I later published in O.ARS. I have written a history of my associations with Charles Olson and people like Harvey Brown which is available on the web at http://www.cranberryisles.com/photos/olson_tangents.htm.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Kevin Killian
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 7:18 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Dear Rachel,

My God, I was 18 then....

I remember living in New York and the following things happened, though most of them I didn't find out about till years later! For me personally the signal arts events of 1971 were seeing Bette Midler at the Continental Bath House.... and Maria Callas working at Juilliard giving the master class to voice students, but anybody could get in just about. But in poetry, you might say 1971 involved....

Birth of Tupac Shakur, Kazim Ali, Jeff Clark, Brigid Pegeen Kelly, Beth Ann Fennelly, Snoop Dogg, Terrance Hayes, Evelyn Lau

Patti Smith performs with Lenny Kaye February 10 at the Poetry Project (first collaboration)

Ted Berrigan, Train Ride

Jack Spicer, The Red Wheelbarrow

Anne-Marie Albiach, Etat

Sonia Sanchez joins Nation of Islam

Linda Nochlin, "Why have there been no great woman artists?" (published)

The Collected Poems of Frank O'Hara, ed. Donald M. Allen

Jose Lezama Lima, Complete Poems (Cuban publication)

Adrienne Rich publishes The Will to Change

Elizabeth Bishop meets Alice Methfessel

Louis Zukofsky, ALL: The Collected Shorter Poems (final version)

High point of Bolinas as American poetry capital

Pablo Neruda receives Nobel Prize

Duncan and Levertov quarrel reaches flash point in Sept-November 1971

Sun Ra, "The Black Man in the Cosmos" (course at UC Berkeley)

Philip Whalen, Scenes of Life at the Capital

John Lennon releases "Imagine" (autumn)

Andy Warhol designs Sticky Fingers cover for the Stones (spring)

Jackson Mac Low, Stanzas for Iris Lezak

Valerie Eliot publishes Waste Land facsimile from original manuscripts

Anne Waldman edits Another World
Nam June Paik, TV Cello with Charlotte Moorman

Hugh Kenner, The Pound Era

Death of Ogden Nash, Jim Morrison, Paul Blackburn, Stevie Smith, Lew Welch

Love ya, Kevin K.

Dear Friends,
What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
Thank you for your help!
Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

245. Jonathan Penton
readings in Los Angeles and El Paso, and some Unlikely updates
Tue 29 Jun 2010

Happy Junetime, those with the Summertime Blues and those in Australia! We at www.UnlikelyStories.org would like to announce:

Lawrence Welsh, Kim Noriega and Rex Wilder will read on Thursday, July 8 at 8pm
at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles, California
ECC 1857, University Hall

Lawrence Welsh is the author of Unlikely's latest chapbook, /Carney Takedown/, and he'll have copies of that, and many of his other books, on hand in L.A. Check out /Carney Takedown/ at http://www.unlikelystories.org/10/welsh0410.shtml , and learn more about his collection of works at http://www.lawrencewelsh.com/then behold:

An Unlikely Literary Happening
On Friday, July 30 at 8pm
at FORUM Arts + Culture in El Paso, Texas 1500 Texas Ave. at Cotton St.

We'll be showing the poetry films of León De la Rosa, author of the forthcoming Unlikely Book /Soy solo palabras but wish to be a city/. We'll have a discussion with psychotherapist Deb Hoag, author of the forthcoming Unlikely Book /Dr. Gonzo/. And we'll climax with a live reading featuring Lawrence Welsh, Donna Snyder, Ray Ramos and Jen Shugert, who'll be reading before an actively-mixed video feed from videojockeys Rene Lopez and Tipo. Oh, and we should have a DJ. I should call one. That would be smart.

FORUM Arts + Culture is a literary-friendly, non-profit, artist-run gallery with a beautiful, multi-roomed space above a warehouse. The space offers the perfect venue for displaying León's many films in freakish conjunction, and boasts a main stage backed by a northern view of the mountains. We'll be brutally covering that view with acetone for our videojockeys, and let me tell you, if you've never seen a poetry read accompanied by video feed, it's a real different experience, one that you'll take with you in a haze of entrancement, enchantment, and xanax. Also: we'll have wine. $5 suggested donation at the door.

Astute readers will notice the lack of updates at www.UnlikelyStories.org recently -- please rest assured we are, nonetheless, working our asses off. The July 30 event is in preparation for our huge book release at this year's Burning Man Arts Festival in Nevada. We will be releasing five full-length books in three volumes:

Monolith, poetry by Anne McMillen, bound together with Soy solo palabras but wish to be a city, a graphic longpoem (like a comic book, yo) by León De la Rosa and illustrated by gui.ra.ga7 My Hands Were Clean, nonfiction ranting by Tom Bradley, bound together with Dr. Gonzo, an analysis of the mental health industry by Deb Hoag and /Unlikely Stories of the Third Kind. Unlikely Stories of the Third Kind/ is the physical representation of all things Unlikely, including 110 pages of fiction, 100 pages of essays and reviews, 90 pages of poetry, 40 pages of color visual art, 40 pages of B&W visual art, a CD of music and spoken word and a DVD of assorted literary-themed films. We're making final selections for it now (so if you've been waiting to hear back from us, and would like to confirm that we received your submission, now is the time). Nonetheless, there will be a mini-text issue later this week, featuring the release of the winner of the 2009 WRITE REAL GOOD Poetry Chapbook Contest, /When You Come Again, You Will Never Go/ by Andreas Morgner. There will be a multimedia issue in mid-July, and a full-sized text and multimedia issue in the first half of August. Then it's Burning Man, baby. Maybe we'll see you there.

--
Jonathan Penton
http://www.unlikelystories.org/

↑ Index

246. Nic Sebastian
Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Dave Bonta
Tue 29 Jun 2010

Dave Bonta responds this week to Ten Questions on Poets and Technology - http://bit.ly/aVtSZb. Best, Nic

Nic Sebastianhttp://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com
_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

247. Noah Eli Gordon

Gordon, Klein and Novy read for St. Mark's Bookshop at BAR 82

Tue 29 Jun 2010

Date:
Thursday, July 1, 2010
Time:
7:30pm - 11:30pm
Location:
BAR 82: right around the corner from St. Mark's Bookshop, at 136 2nd Ave, between St. Mark's Place and 9th Street.

THE SAINT MARK'S BOOKSHOP READING SERIES welcomes NOAH ELI GORDON, ISH KLEIN, and ADAM NOVY to Bar 82 Thursday, July 1st

Gordon, Klein and Novy will read from and sign their work on Thursday, July 1st at 7:30 PM, at BAR 82 (Right around the corner from St. Mark's Bookshop, at 136 2nd Ave, between St. Mark's Place and 9th Street). Copies of his books will be available for sale at the event.

All St. Mark's Bookshop events are free to the public.

For more information go to http://stmarksbooks.blogspot.com/ contact Greg Purcell at [redacted], call [redacted], or stop by St. Mark's Bookshop, at 31 Third Avenue, near Ninth Street.

NOAH ELI GORDON is the author of several books, including Novel Pictorial Noise (Harper Perennial, 2007), which was selected by John Ashbery for the National Poetry Series Open Competition and chosen for the San Francisco State Poetry Center Book Award. He’s the co-publisher of Letter Machine Editions and an Assistant Professor in the MFA program in Creative Writing at The University of Colorado–Boulder. He has new books forthcoming from Futurepoem Books (2011) and Ahsahta Press (2013).

ISH KLEIN's book, Union! came out April 2009 through the Canarium Press. Her second book, For the New Manchurians, will come out from the Canarium Press in 2011. Her poems have been published in The Canary, Gare du Nord, The Hat magazine, X-connect, Bridge, Spork and are online. She makes movies and lives in Philadelphia.

About ADAM NOVY's debut book, The Avian Gospels, we are told: "A city without a name is cursed by a plague of birds they probably deserve. But when an angry beggar child and his father learn they have the power to lift the curse—they “control” birds—they cannot agree on how to use their gift, and end up using it on each other, taking out everyone around them, especially those they love." Adam Novy's work has appeared in The Believer, and he lives in California. _____

Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

248. William Allegrezza

Translators

Tue 29 Jun 2010

I'm looking for a few poets who can translate Spanish into English. If you are interested in a new project, just e-mail me for details.

Bill Allegrezza
[redacted]

↑ Index

249. Laura Hinton

On-line Memorial to Leslie Scalapino is now concluded

Tue 29 Jun 2010

The Streaming / Reading Memorial to Leslie Scalapino, which has been running on my blog site this past month since Leslie's death, concluded yesterday, June 28. Thank you to the many wonderful poets who contributed pieces, and to those of you who have been reading.

Below is a list of the articles, poems, and/or memoirs, as well as their authors. And anyone can continue to view this work, either on the blog home page or in its May-June Archives, at www.chantdelasirene.com. -- Laura

Leslie Scalapino 1944-2010<http://www.chantdelasirene.com/2010/05/leslie-scalapino-1944-2010.html>

Laura Hinton -- with reprinted eulogy by Tom White

A Few Words about a Late Scalapino/Poem

Cynthia Hogue

“I've created this memory track": Scalapino’s Autobiography

Ann Bogle

In "Mourning Time," Reading New Time (for the First Time)

Laura Hinton

Sewing the Black -- for Leslie Scalapino

Millicent Borges Accardi

Aeolotropism: A Prose Sequence for Leslie Scalapino

Karen An-hwei Lee

'Writing Is Phenomena': Leslie Scalapino and Marina Adams, The Tango

Elizabeth Frost

This is Not “A Barbie Doll with Horns” (Line from Flow—Winged Crocodile)

Laura Hinton

"I feel a Chill” – and a Desert Memory

Barbara Henning

Leslie Scalapino’s Rhythmic Intensities

Charles Bernstein

(reprinted courtesy of Sybil)

“... schooled by the certainty she brought to her radical syntax...”

Rachel Levitsky

“...Embracing Interplay of Life and Time...”

Allison A. Hedge Coke

She Doesn’t Belong in a Past Tense

Joan Retallack

Leslie Loved *Invasion of the Body Snatchers *(or, Note on her "Note on Secret-Life Writing" in Dahlia's Iris/ Secret Autobiography)

Laura Hinton

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

July 2010

367 messages · Tue 29 Jun 2010 – Fri 30 Jul 2010

July 2010 set the machinery of the poetry business against the spirit the business was supposed to serve — a long, hot fight over prizes and submissions running beside a lament for the draining-away of the sacred from the art itself. Three hundred and sixty-seven messages moved through the list, its largest thread a many-sided quarrel over a book contest, its second a mournful essay on what poetry had lost. Between the entry fee and the missing spirit, the month asked what, after all the careerism, the art was even for.

The largest thread was a reckoning with prize culture. A university book competition drew a seventy-nine-message argument over the whole apparatus of submitting, judging, and winning — one poster scorning how readily poets will submit themselves to editors no better than talent-show judges, another admitting that "it is a challenge to find ways of opting out of submitting to prizes" when institutions reward their workers for winning them. The pun sat at the center of it: to submit a poem is also to submit to a system, and the room was sick of the submission.

The quarrel's deeper half was spiritual. An essay circulating that month, on the decay of spirituality in poetry, opened a debate on whether the art had traded its soul for craft and cleverness — a discussion that wandered, gloriously, into whether "wittgenstein was a terrific poet mistaken for a logician by some", whether the philosophical and the sacred could still live in a poem at all. The prize machine and the missing spirit were the same complaint from two directions: an art grown too worldly to remember what it was for. If poetry now ran on entry fees and CV lines and juried competitions, the essayists asked, what had become of the thing that was supposed to touch the sacred, and could a poem chasing a prize ever reach it?

And the month's death rhymed with the theme. Tuli Kupferberg died on the twelfth — of the Fugs, the great anarchist prankster-poet who had spent a lifetime refusing every institution poetry could build — mourned on the list as a "great friend and poet writer anarchist fug". He was the living rebuttal to prize culture, a man who had made poetry into protest and nonsense and song and never once submitted to anyone, gone in the very month the room was cursing the submission machine.

I have set July down exactly as the archive delivered it — the revolt against prize culture, the lament for a decayed spirituality, and the death of the anarchist who scorned both — because it was the month the list looked hard at the business its art had become and grieved what the business had cost. A room that spends its July raging at the tyranny of submitting to prizes, mourning the spirit gone out of the poem, and burying Tuli Kupferberg, who never submitted to anything, is a room remembering, a little too late and a little too bitterly, that poetry was supposed to be the thing you could not put an entry fee on.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 367 in all.

WRITERS

Aldonlnielsen 21, 60
Alexander, Charles 74
Allegrezza, William 14
AND, mIEKAL 20, 126
Andrews, Jim 35, 108, 120, 281, 311, 334, 365
Aslongasittakes 73
Austin, William James 145
Baird, Bobby 331
Ballardini, Anny 12
Baratier, David 344
Beaulieu, Derek 4
Behm-Steinberg, Hugh 208, 209
Benson, Cara 193, 300, 316, 317
Black, Sheila 222
Books, Crane's Bill 82, 83
Bowering, George 3
Boykoff, Jules 116
Brink, Dean 134
Brown, Pam 91, 118, 144
Cain, Séamas 52, 358
Casamassima, Christophe 158
Cha, Asian 42
Chapman, Chris 283
Chirot, David 22, 23, 65, 99, 135, 270, 290, 343
Chirot, David-Baptiste 77, 86, 87, 124, 136, 233
Clark, Hilary 207
Cleary, John 54, 96, 112
Clements, Brian 11, 226
Clodfelter, Loretta 79
Conrad, CA 47, 61, 155
Cárthaigh, Tomás Ó 5
Dalachinsky, Steve 18, 27, 39, 48, 94, 95, 119, 121, 128, 130, 138, 147, 148, 156, 163, 246, 247, 252, 269, 285, 347
Daley, Ryan 336
Daly, Catherine 57, 78, 229, 266, 277, 319
Damon, Maria 51, 80, 142
Davis, Jeff 173
Dorf, Carol 89, 90, 141, 284
DuCharme, Mark 84
Earl, Amanda 7
Ellis, Stephen 335
Elshtain, Eric 43
Emerson, Lori 231
Exley, Roy 304
Farrell, Michael 201, 261
Fieled, Adam 180, 191, 199, 200, 241, 258, 278, 287
Al Filreis 315
Finnegan, Jim 168
Fox, Sarah 59
Fox, Willard 321
Frazer, Vernon 103, 257, 289
Friedman, Ed 256
Frym, Gloria 53, 197, 280
Gambadé, E. 198
Gardner, Calum 62
Glass, Dan 196
Godston, Dan 102, 154, 165
Godston, Daniel 55
Gordon, Noah Eli 177, 210, 211
Griffin, Whit 122
Hadbawnik, David 150, 313, 329, 333
Hamm, Christine 64
Hansen, Jeff 324
Howard, Scott 363
III, Nicholas Ruiz 132, 153
Internationales, Les Rencontres 248
Javier, Paolo 50
Jeroen, Nieuwland 137
Johnson, Halvard 194, 279, 297
Johnson, Mark 322
Joris, Pierre 131, 185, 213, 216, 227
Karavatos, Nicholas 16, 34, 111, 151
Karmin, Jennifer 30, 72, 113, 181, 240, 268
Kasimor, Mary 58, 217, 264
Katko, Justin 92
Katz, Adam 273
Kimmelman, Burt 187
King, Amy 26, 106, 109, 110, 125, 127, 139, 159, 320, 366
Kirschenbaum, David 234, 309, 356
Kirschenbaum, David A. 68, 306
Landis, Matthew 204, 221, 225
Languell, Krystal 28
Latta, John 189
Law, Iris 97
Leaves, Little Red 259, 282, 303, 323, 348
Lepson, Ruth 114, 172
Levato, Francesco 182
Lewis, Joel 129
Malo, Mary Jo 33, 188
Manson, Douglas 85, 218, 357
Martin, Camille 40, 98, 176
Mauro, Nicole 245
McAdams, E. J. 296
McLennan, Rob 24, 46, 146, 341, 349, 364
Meadows, Deborah A. 203
Melnicove, Mark 9, 267
Melville, Nicky 31

Michael 276
Mollohan, J. Michael 299, 314
Morse, Jonathan 149
Nelson, Paul 101
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 115, 224, 254, 301, 310, 328, 351, 359, 367
Oha, Obododimma 2, 117, 164, 275, 286, 325
Oliver, Laura 105
Owens, Richard 179, 236, 250, 251, 262, 265, 291, 293, 298, 308, 326, 338, 340
Palagi, Naomi Buck 1
Penton, Jonathan 312
Phipps, Wanda 214, 255
Prejsnar, Mark 100, 360
Quackenbush, Jason 294, 302, 305, 345, 346, 353, 354
Quartermain, Peter 205, 220
Raven, Francis 143, 249
Revich, Allan 45
Rossiter, Charlie 307
Rowan, Lou 104
Russell, Steve 70, 71, 339
Rybeck, Benjamin 140
Samuels, Lisa 88, 184
Sarai, Sarah 69, 212
Savage, Thomas 107
Schickling, Jared 228, 350
Schlesinger, Kyle 174, 332
Schwartz, Gerald 123
Seabolt, Brian 171, 186
Seaman, David 242, 243, 342
Sebastian, Nic 133, 232, 355
Seferi, Carol 8
Sherwood, Kenneth 75
Side, Jeffrey 15, 19, 32, 38, 44, 49, 157, 161, 166, 167, 169, 170, 253, 271, 295, 330
Slaughter, William 13, 37
Snelson, Danny 361
Snyder, Jason 223
Sondheim, Alan 25, 152
Stecopoulos, Eleni 362
Sullivan, Gary 41, 235, 288
Sweeney, Chad 195
Switaj, Elizabeth 219
Teersteeg 215
Tribbey, Hugh R. 239
Trivedi, Amish 190
Truitt, Sam 175
Tsai, A. 66, 67
Twshaner 17
Tynes, Jen 162
Vasquez-Giroux, Angela 56, 76
Vincent, Stephen 6, 81, 160, 352
Weinstein, Eric 192, 318
Weiss, Mark 202, 206, 230, 244, 274, 292, 337
Wickens, Jessica 183
Wilcox, Dan 29, 93
Williams, Tyrone 272, 327
Young, Mark 10, 36, 178
Zabic, Nana 63, 237, 238, 260, 263

NAMES MENTIONED

Abdula, Paula 179, 184, 186, 190, 193, 194, 196, 197, 201, 202, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 222, 246
Abess, Matthew 361
Abramowitz, Harold 181, 240, 256
Abramson, Seth 309
Acker, Kathy 280
Adorno, Theodor 359
Alexander, Christopher 361
Ali, Kazim 3
Alice, Mary 3, 87, 306
Allan, Don 45, 48, 70
Allan, Edgar 77, 81, 84, 85, 135
Allison, Dorothy 312
Altieri, Charles 175
Americans, Asian 181, 343, 353, 360, 367
Amram, David 312
Anastas, Peter 168, 172
Anderson, Erik 306
Anderson, Laurie 68
Andre, Michael 35, 205, 207, 220, 306
Anne, Katherine 240, 256
Antin, David 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 104, 135
Apps, Stan 361
Arendt, Hannah 17
Arigo, Christopher 344, 347
Aronson, David 312
Ashbery, John 49, 169, 170, 174, 210, 211, 217, 221, 291
Ashley, Robert 361
Atlanta, Mark P. 50, 73, 100, 182
Austin, Geer 286, 306
Ayler, Albert 39, 45, 48, 70
Baker, Lori 13
Balaz, Joe 178, 312
Baldwin, Joshua 331
Baraka, Amiri 49, 291
Barker, Andrew 39, 45, 48, 70
Bartlett, Jennifer 300
Basinski, Michael 332
Basinski, Mike 174
Baudelaire, Charles 22, 104
Beasley, Sandra 232
Beckett, Samuel 186, 190, 196, 201, 202, 222, 239
Beckett, Tom 16, 111, 151
Beckman, Joshua 306
Bedient, Calvin 306
Behrendt, Lynn 309
Behrle, Jim 309

Bellamy, Dodie 250
Benjamin, Walter 140, 195, 199, 200, 310, 322, 328, 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Bennett, Bill 178
Bennett, John M. 164
Bergvall, Caroline 140
Berkeley, Michael 3, 131, 141, 183, 304, 306, 314, 362
Berkson, Bill 174
Berlin, Irving 50, 103, 248, 306
Berman, Tosh 99, 115, 174, 332
Bernard, Kenneth 104
Bernstein, Charles 104, 315, 361
Bernstein, Emma 361
Bernstein, Leonard 138, 148
Berrigan, Anselm 353, 360, 367
Berrigan, Ted 3, 22, 353, 360
Berry, Jake 167, 312, 316, 317
Berryman, John 22
Bertolino, James 13
Betts, Tara 300
Birmingham, Jed 291
Bishop, Elizabeth 3
Blackburn, Paul 3, 307
Blake, William 301, 305, 310, 322, 328
Blaser, Robin 46, 131, 364
Blau, Rachel 315, 323, 326, 329, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 348
Bogle, Ann 330
Bonney, Sean 291
Bouchard, Dan 306
Bowen, David 28, 312
Boyer, Anne 300
Bozek, Jessica 309
Bozicevic, Ana 234
Bradley, Tom 312
Brainard, Joe 174, 332
Briante, Susan 150
Briggs, Matt 104
Brook, James 114, 119, 123, 126, 145
Brown, Ann 300, 306, 361
Brown, Ray 312
Browne, Colin 17, 210, 211, 217, 221
Browning, Robert 306
Bryan, John 312
Bryant, Dana 256
Bryant, Elizabeth 300
Bryant, Tisa 181, 240, 256
Buchanan, Pat 309
Bukowski, Charles 332
Bunting, Basil 3, 113
Burroughs, William S. 343, 353, 360, 367
Butler, William 173, 174
Buuck, David 306
Byrne, Edward 316, 317
Byrne, Mairead 300, 309
Caesar, Little 99, 115
Callas, Maria 3
Cameron, Sharon 341
Campbell, Andy 35
Campbell, Jeremy 30
Card, Macgregor 309
Carfagna, Ric 312
Carlos, William 309, 361
Carr, Emily 158
Carr, Michael 306, 309
Carrion, Terri 12, 276
Casey, Sean 68
Celan, Paul 131
Cendrars, Blaise 22
Cervantes, James 297
Chapman, Cecelia 312
Chen, Ken 361
Cheney, Dick 181
Chernoff, Maxine 306
Christakos, Margaret 46
Clare, John 361
Clark, Cheryl 309
Clark, Emilie 22, 77, 81, 85, 135, 276
Clay, Steve 174, 306, 332
Clifford, Pat 14
Clover, Joshua 210, 211, 217, 221
Cobb, Allison 116, 203, 306
Cobbing, Bob 4
Cocteau, Jean 175
Cohick, Aaron 174
Colby, Kate 309
Coleman, Jennifer 306
Coletti, John 306, 309
Collins, Billy 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 59, 60, 62, 63, 66, 67, 71, 76, 80, 88, 96
Collins, Martha 61, 63, 80, 83, 88
Collins, Phil 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 61, 62, 66, 67, 71, 76, 83, 96
Columbus, Christopher 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 306
Compton, Shanna 235
Connor, Bruce 320, 366
Conrad, Tony 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 61, 62, 66, 67, 69, 71, 76, 83, 96, 155
Cook, Amanda 309
Cook, James 309
Coolidge, Clark 12, 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 276
Cooper, Dennis 68
Cotter, John 309
County, Madison 99, 115
County, Mike 309
Cowell, Simon 179, 184, 185, 186, 189, 190, 193, 194, 196, 197, 201, 202, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 222, 239, 246
Crane, Lee 29, 93
Crawford, Robert 312, 361
Creeley, Robert 3, 77, 81, 84, 85, 113, 135, 174, 332

Critchley, Emily 236
Cross, Michael 291, 306
Crouch, Jeff 79, 143, 312
Crumpacker, Caroline 316, 317
Cuomo, Dave 306
Curtis, Dana 253
Darragh, Tina 203
Davenport, Steve 344, 347
Davey, Frank 3
Davis, Jordan 306
Deed, Martha L. 312
Degentesh, Katie 41, 235
Deleuze, Gilles 241, 254, 258, 273, 278, 283, 284, 299, 302, 304, 314
Denner, Richard 312
Dennis, Carl 236, 291, 306, 312
Derrida, Jacques 199, 200
Dewhurst, Robert 234
Dickinson, Emily 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 65, 66, 67, 69, 71, 76, 80, 83, 88, 96, 343, 353, 360, 367
Dickinson, Mark 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 65, 66, 67, 71, 76, 83, 96
Dienstfrey, Patricia 306
Dine, Jim 174, 332
Dixon, Nancy 68
Dizozza, Peter 68
Doller, Sandra 28
Donahue, Joseph 104
Donovan, Thom 17, 291, 309, 361
Dorn, Edward 113
Dos, John 77, 81, 84, 85, 135
Dowker, David 40
Downing, Brandon 235
Downing, David 235
Drennan, Bill 38, 44
Drescher, Julia 306
Drucker, Johanna 174, 332
Duggan, Laurie 91
Duhamel, Denise 178
Duncan, Robert 3, 25, 160, 205, 207, 220, 352
Dunn, Jim 309
Durand, Marcella 300
Durbin, Kate 181, 240, 256
Durgin, Patrick 17, 306, 361
Dutton, Paul 312
Edmond, Martin 178
Edwards, Joshua 306
Edwards, Ken 104
Eisenstein, Sergei 68
Elezabeth, Anne 143
Eliot, Joe 3, 134
Elisa, Paula 309
Ellen, Mary 178, 309, 312, 361
Elliot, Joe 309, 312
Eluard, Paul 22
Emerson, Claudia 301, 305, 310, 322, 328, 343, 353, 360, 367
Emery, Chris 68
England, Amy 77, 81, 84, 85, 92, 135, 332
Eshleman, Clayton 291
Espinola, Steve 68
Estabrook, Michael 312
Etter, Carrie 236
Eugene, Brett 17
Evans, Brett 68
Ewart, Douglas 165
Fawcett, Brian 46, 364
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 68
Ferrini, Henry 168, 172
Finch, Annie 306
Fink, Thomas 361
Fischer, Norman 161
Fishback, Dan 68
Fisher, Allen 216, 224, 225, 236, 243, 250, 303, 308, 327, 338
Fisher, Ann 230
Fitterman, Robert 361
Fletcher, Sasha 364
Flis, Brad 361
Flynn, Albert 306
Flynn, Sean 30
Foley, Brian 306
Foley, Jack 157
Forrest, Lisa 150
Foster, Edward 306
Foust, Graham 210, 211, 217, 221
Fox, Skip 312
France, Peter 137, 153, 242
Frances, Mary 174, 236
Franco, James 237, 238, 244, 247, 260, 263, 264
Friedman, David M. 256, 268
Fuchs, Greg 306, 309
Fugate, Ethan 306
Fuller, William 17
Fulton, Alice 72
Gallagher, Kevin 361
Gallagher, Kristen 17, 361
Gambito, Sarah 361
Ganick, Peter 324
Garcia, Rodrigo 235
Gardner, Drew 251, 252, 259, 262, 265, 272, 285, 291
Gardner, Janet 62, 235, 306, 316, 317
Gatza, Geoffrey 236, 291, 306
Gayle, Charles 39, 45, 48, 70
Gek, Kim 150
Gelsinger, Eric 306
Giffin, Lawrence 361
Gilmore, Gary 68, 234, 306, 309, 356
Gimenez, Carmen 30
Gins, Madeline 175

Ginsberg, Allen 49, 68, 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 121, 130, 135, 142
Giscombe, Cecil 78
Gizzi, Michael 14
Gizzi, Peter 14, 309
Glass, Jesse 306
Godard, Barbara 77, 81, 84, 85, 135
Goldman, Emma 298, 303, 308, 327, 338
Goldman, Judith 17
Goldsmith, Kenneth 352, 361
Goldstein, Laura 113
Goldstein, Mark 46, 365
Gonzalez, Ray 320, 366
Gordon, Nada 50, 235
Gordon, Robert 177, 179, 184, 185, 189, 193, 194, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 210, 211, 215, 216, 217, 221, 224, 225, 230, 235, 243, 246, 288, 290, 298, 303, 306, 308, 312, 320, 327, 338, 344, 347, 361, 366
Graham, Lea 181, 240, 256, 306
Greenberg, Arielle 157
Greenwald, Ted 174
Grenier, Bob 301, 305, 310, 322, 328, 343, 345, 351, 353, 354, 357, 359, 360, 367
Grenier, Robert 301, 305, 310, 322, 328, 343, 353, 360, 367
Grinnell, Tracy 306
Group, Poets 73, 100
Guattari, Félix 241, 254, 258, 273, 278, 283, 284, 299, 302, 304, 314
Guest, Barbara 300
Gunn, Thom 3
Guston, Philip 174, 332
Hamilton, Ann 352
Hamilton, Diana 361
Hamilton, Robin 361
Hansen, Jefferson 324
Hardy, Edmund 240, 256
Hart, Matt 306
Hartman, Charles O. 306
Hartsaw, Paul 154
Harvey, James 3, 99, 115, 121, 129, 130, 141, 142, 297
Hayes, Jared 3
Hayes, Jonathan 312
Heidegger, Martin 195, 199, 200, 343, 353, 360, 367
Hejinian, Lyn 306
Heller, Mike 309
Henri, Charles 22
Henriksen, Matt 306
Herman, Rachel 77, 81, 84, 85, 135
Hernandez, Victor 297
Hershon, Bob 306
Higgins, Dick 3, 9, 22
Highfill, Mitch 251, 252, 259, 262, 265, 272, 285, 291, 309
Hill, Crag 79, 143
Hillman, Brenda 68
Hinton, Laura 306
Hoag, Deb 312
Holder, Doug 309
Holmes, Janet 57, 59, 63, 80, 88, 306
Hooker, William 39, 45, 48, 70
Hoover, Paul 306
Hopely, Eddie 361
Houlihan, Joan 309
House, White 181
Howe, Susan 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 61, 62, 66, 67, 71, 75, 76, 77, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 91, 96, 135, 291
Huang, Yunte 42
Hughes, Andrew 309
Hunter, Carrie 79, 143
Hunter, Robert 297
Iijima, Brenda 300, 306, 309
Indiana, Robert 13, 14, 50
Inman, Peter 309
Ireland, Lauren 46, 99, 115, 309
Irvine, James 319, 323, 326, 329, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 348
Israel, David 183
Israeli, Henry 92
Ives, Charles 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 179, 185, 189, 193
Jackson, Chris 309
Jackson, Jesse 85, 320, 366
Jameson, Fred 30, 72, 104
Jeanne, Sarah 13
Jhave, David 35
Joans, Ted 121, 130, 142
Johnson, Kent 291
Johnson, Robert 164, 193, 194, 279, 297, 312, 328
Johnson, Samuel 322
Johnston, Daniel 35, 68, 174
Jonas, Steve 361
Jones, Brian 121, 130, 142
Joseph, Safdie 234
Joyce, Trevor 99, 104, 115
Kaplan, Josef 361
Kaplan, Leslie 104, 361
Karasick, Adeena 312
Karl, Steven 234
Kaufman, Erica 306
Kearney, Larry 160, 352
Keaton, Diane 312
Keene, John 361
Kelleher, Michael 150
Keller, Helen 312
Kelley, Jeff 151
Kelly, Patrick 3, 50, 160, 315, 352, 361
Kelsey, Karla 259, 262, 265, 272, 291, 306
Kempton, Karl 36, 312

Kennedy, David 309
Kenner, Hugh 3
Kerouac, Jack 332
Kerr, Bob 68
Kiely, Aaron 309
Killian, Kevin 3, 250
Kim, Myung Mi 300, 323, 326, 329, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 348
Kimball, Jack 309
Kinnell, Galway 3
Kirschenbaum, David A. 68, 234, 306, 309, 356
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 291
Klein, Lucas 30
Knott, Bill 33, 320
Koeneke, Rodney 17, 344, 347
Kostelanetz, Richard 3, 17
Kroetsch, Robert 234
Kuhn, Donna 312
Kyger, Joanne 105, 174, 332
Lamoureux, Mark 306, 309
Landers, Susan 306
Larkin, Maryrose 309
Lau, David 306
Lau, Evelyn 3
Laughlin, James 291
Laurence, Paul 327, 338
Lavelle, Matt 39, 45, 48, 70
Law, Iris A. 97
Lazer, Hank 74
Lederer, Katy 306
Leftwich, Jim 312
Leigh, Mike 312
Lennon, John 3
Leonardson, Eric 165
Levertov, Denise 3, 195, 199, 200
Levin, Jonathan 312
Levitsky, Rachel 3, 9, 22, 300, 306
Lewis, Bernard 235, 288, 298, 303, 308, 327, 338
Lezak, Iris 3, 85
Lilly, Ruth 336
Liu, Warren 361
Livingston, Ira 270
Logan, John 33
Logan, William 39, 45, 48, 70
Lohmann, Sam 306
Lomax, Alan 361
London, Frank 6, 50, 216, 224, 225, 230, 243, 250
London, Rick 236
Lopez, Tony 312
Lorber, Brendan 306, 309
Louise, Bobbie 312
Lovelace, Patrick 361
Mac Low, Jackson 3
Lowenthal, Jessica 361
Lubeski, Lori 309
Lynn, Aldon 21, 60
Machlin, Dan 306, 361
Mackey, Nathaniel 150, 210, 211, 217, 221
Madrid, Anthony 248
Magallon, Diana 312
Magee, Michael 306
Magi, Jill 306
Magliocco, Peter 312
Malcolm, Janet 22, 68, 328
Mallarmé, Stéphane 290
Maloutas, Barbara 150
Mancus, Tony 306
Mangold, Sarah 306
Mansel, Chris 167
Marchant, Fred 309
Marie, Anne 361
Marie, Elizabeth 309
Marino, Elizabeth 113
Marks, Justin 306
Marsh, Bill 17
Marshall, Robert 39, 45, 48, 70, 361
Marvin, Lee 57, 59, 63, 80, 88
Marx, Karl 33
Masterson, Patrick 306
Maxwell, Andrew 306
Mayer, Bernadette 181, 240, 256, 300
Mayer, Jane 256, 268, 335
Maynard, Joe 306
Mayo, Tim 164
Mazer, Ben 309
McCaffery, Steve 231, 236
Meadows, Deborah A. 203
Mees, Amy 306
Meetze, James 306
Meltzer, David 12, 16, 34, 111, 151, 276
Menard, Pierre 309
Menefee, Sarah 203
Menendez, Didi 287
Mercury, Suzanne 309
Meredith, William 104
Merwin, W. S. 21, 307
Mesmer, Sharon 33, 235, 300
Metcalf, Paul 77, 81, 84, 85, 135
Millar, Jay 306
Miller, Paul D. 39, 45, 48, 70, 150, 174
Milton, John 307
Mingus, Charles 121, 130, 142
Minton, Jonathan 180, 294, 301, 305, 310, 322, 328
Mirakove, Carol 203
Miriam, Erica 312
Mitchell, Joan 68, 235
Mohammad, Kasey 41, 251, 252, 259, 262, 265, 272, 285, 291
Moody, Rick 332
Moore, Rebecca 68

Moorman, Charlotte 3
Morgan, Robin 312
Morris, Dee 296
Morris, Joe 39, 45, 48, 70
Morris, Marianne 323, 326, 329, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 348
Morrison, Bill 22
Morrison, Jim 3
Moschovakis, Anna 306, 309
Motherwell, Robert 22
Moxley, Jennifer 227, 242, 246
Mukherjee, Aryanil 14
Mullen, Laura 210, 211, 217, 221
Mulligan, Jennifer 349
Mulrooney, John 309
Murphy, Paul 68
Murphy, Ryan 306
Murphy, Sheila 178
Myers, Michael 174
Myles, Eileen 150, 309, 316, 317
Nadelberg, Amanda 309
Neal, Larry 49
Nelson, Paul E. 101
Neruda, Pablo 3, 22
Nguyen, Hoa 300, 306
Niedecker, Lorine 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 113, 135
Nielsen, Lynn 21, 60
Niss, Millie 312
Noel, Urayoan 309
Norman, Peter 121, 130, 142, 154, 165, 322, 328
Norton, John 205, 207, 220
Notley, Alice 300
Novack, Carol 312
Nowak, Mark 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 135
O'Hara, Frank 3, 22
Oak, Gwyn 306
Oatis, Martha 309
Olsen, Geoffrey 309
Olson, Charles 3, 36, 74, 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 135, 168, 172, 315
Olson, Kirby 3, 74, 77, 81, 84, 85, 104, 135, 167, 168, 172, 173, 343, 353, 360, 367
Ondaatje, Michael 361
Oppen, George 195, 199, 200
Orser, Kristen 30
Osman, Jena 210, 211, 217, 221
Otten, Julie 344, 347
Otting, Nathaniel 309
Pacific, Asian 13, 187
Padgett, Ron 174, 234
Palmer, Michael 312
Parenteau, Chad 309
Parker, Michael 312
Parrish, Gary 306
Patchen, Kenneth 174
Patton, Julie 296
Peirce, Kathleen 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Perchik, Simon 306
Perelman, Bob 315
Perloff, Marjorie 10, 235
Persky, Stan 46, 364
Peters, Sarah 150
Peterson, Katie 30
Peyrafitte, Nicole 309
Phillips, Beth 312
Phillips, Rodney 332
Pierce, Scott 306
Piette, Adam 31
Pinto, Regina 309
Piombino, Nick 178
Place, Vanessa 55, 300
Plath, Sylvia 64
Pluto, Annie 79, 143
Poe, Allan 77, 81, 84, 85, 135
Pope, Alexander 100
Porter, Anne 121, 129, 130, 141, 142, 267
Posamentier, Evelyn 166
Potter, Steve 306
Pound, Ezra 3, 22, 113, 175, 283, 313
Powell, Ren 99, 111, 115, 151, 312
Prevallet, Kristin 118, 144
Pringle, Kathryn 306
Professor, Kelly 21, 60, 315
Quasha, George 175
Quinn, Alice 361
Raddatz, Martha 181
Ramsey, Frank 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Ranaldo, Lee 68
Randall, Karen 174, 312, 332
Rankine, Claudia 140
Rasula, Jed 104
Raworth, Tom 174
Reed, Lou 68
Reed, Marthe 158
Regan, Matthias 68, 113
Rexroth, Kenneth 22, 179, 184, 185, 189, 193, 194, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 246
Reynolds, Sean 150
Reznikoff, Charles 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 113, 135
Ribot, Marc 68
Ricard, Gabriel 312
Rich, Adrienne 3
Richards, Brian 273, 278, 283, 284, 299, 302, 304, 314
Ridge, Cedar 138, 148
Ridley, Sandra 46
Riley, Denise 150
Rilke, Rainer Maria 339
Rimbaud, Dee 22, 343, 353, 360, 367
Rivard, David 309
Rizzo, Christopher 79, 143, 306, 309

Robbins, Micah 150, 306
Roberts, Gary 236, 309
Robinson, Anthony 306
Robinson, Elizabeth 210, 211, 217, 221
Robinson, Kit 17
Rogers, Jennifer 113, 312
Roosevelt, Franklin 39, 45, 48, 70
Rorty, Richard 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Rothenberg, Jerome 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 135, 332
Rothenberg, Jerry 276
Rothenberg, Michael 12, 276
Rothschild, Doug 309
Ruiz, Mariana 306
Russell, Lauren 309
Sanchez, Jorge 3
Sanders, James 73
Sanders, Jay 121, 130, 142, 145, 361
Sappho 22
Sawyer, Larry 168, 172
Scalapino, Leslie 40, 74, 175, 300, 306, 361
Schapira, Kate 28, 309, 320, 366
Schelling, Andrew 350
Schneeman, George 174, 332
Schoen, Jesse 68
Schwartz, Jerry 68, 312
Schwartz, Leonard 104
Seaman, David W. 3, 242, 243, 342, 348
Sebastianhttp, Nic 133, 232, 355
Selby, Spencer 178
Seldess, Jesse 306
Sendecki, Daniel 306
Sexton, Anne 312
Shaner, Tim 17
Shelley, Mary 32
Sherry, James 296
Shihab, Naomi 300
Shiroma, Jerrold 306
Shufran, Lauren 300
Siegel, Nathaniel 309
Siegell, Paul 178
Sigler, Jeremy 361
Sikelianos, Eleni 210, 211, 217, 221
Silem, Kasey 41
Silliman, Ron 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Simmons, Diane 187
Simon, Greg 68
Simon, Paul 68
Sinatra, Frank 121, 130, 142
Sirois, Justin 306
Skinner, Jonathan 306
Sky, Tarpaulin 37, 320, 366
Slease, Marcus 320, 366
Sloman, Joel 309
Smallfield, Edward 364
Smith, Dale 236, 250, 291, 306
Smith, Harry 3, 22, 30, 121, 130, 142, 266, 269, 274, 282, 293, 312
Smith, Hazel 73
Smith, Jessica 146, 150, 306, 364
Smith, Rod 41, 306
Smith, Susan 104
Snell, Roger 150, 291
Snyder, Donna 312
Snyder, Rick 312
Sonnenberg, Kerri 306
Spahr, Boyd 17
Spahr, Juliana 17, 210, 211, 217, 221, 324
Spicer, Jack 3, 301
Spicer, John 305, 310, 322, 328
Sprague, Jane 203, 306
Stafford, William 3
Stalling, Jonathan 74
Stanley, Josh 236
Stebelton, Chuck 309
Steensen, Sasha 350
Stefans, Kim 203
Stein, Charles 175
Stein, Gertrude 343, 353, 360, 367
Stengel, Jill 306
Stevens, Wallace 149
Stewart, Jon 364
Strauss, Zoe 290
Stroffolino, Chris 169, 170, 344, 347
Sullivan, Andrew 235, 251, 252, 259, 262, 265, 272, 285, 291
Sutherland, Keston 236, 250
Sweet, John 312
Swensen, Cole 210, 211, 217, 221
Swift, Todd 7
Szymaszek, Stacy 306
Tabios, Eileen 178, 306
Tanta, Gene 113
Taransky, Michelle 361
Taylor, Tom 312
Taylor, Wendy 312
Templeton, Fiona 74
Terry, Philip 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 61, 62, 66, 67, 71, 76, 83, 96
Texas, Irving 102, 236, 286, 306, 312
Thomas, Dylan 90, 105, 107, 114, 119, 123, 126, 145, 304, 314, 361
Thompson, George 39, 45, 48, 50, 70, 361
Thorson, Maureen 306
Tichy, Susan 46
Tieger, Aaron 306, 309
Toogood, Jason 306
Topel, Andrew 289
Torra, Joe 309
Toscano, Rodrigo 210, 211, 217, 221
Turner, Victor 306
Twain, Mark 86, 95
Twemlow, Nick 306
Tyler, Richard 24, 30
Vaknin, Sam 312

Valle, Charles 306
Vap, Sarah 300
Vassilakis, Nico 178
Veronica, Angela 309
Vincent, Gregory 36
Waber, Dan 306, 312
Wagner, Catherine 290
Wagner, Mark 306
Waldman, Anne 3, 22
Waldman, Ken 22
Waldor, Peter 306
Waldrop, Keith 306
Waldrop, Rosemary 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 135
Walker, Laura 72, 173
Walker, Mary 306
Wallace, George 312
Wallace, Mark 181, 240, 256
Wallace, Nicole 149, 174, 256, 332
Walsh, Catherine 312
Wang, Dorothy 361
Warhol, Andy 3
Warren, Kenneth 150
Warsh, Lewis 306
Washington, George 13, 143, 173, 203, 249, 276, 306
Waters, Jacqueline 309
Watson, Scott 183
Watts, Carol 300
Weaver, Andy 46
Weaver, Rebecca 121, 130, 142
Webster, Michael 203
Webster, Noah 234
Weems, Mary 344, 347
Welch, Lew 3
Wellman, Donald 3
Welsh, Lawrence 312
Whalen, Philip 3
Whitehead, Gregory 35
Whitehead, Ron 353, 360, 367
Whitman, Walter 343, 353, 360, 367
Wilkes, John 77, 81, 84, 85, 135
Williams, Paul O. 68, 75, 77, 81, 82, 84, 85, 91, 113, 135
Williamson, Dustin 309, 320
Williamson, Lindz 312, 366
Willis, Elizabeth 210, 211, 217, 221, 309
Wilson, Karen 174
Winkfield, Trevor 174, 332
Wintz, Sara 361
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 301, 305, 310, 322, 328, 334, 339, 343, 345, 346, 351, 353, 354, 357, 359, 360, 365, 367
Wolach, David 158, 352
Wolff, Rebecca 309
Wolsak, Melissa 175
Woodward, Jon 309
Yankelevich, Matvei 306
Yau, John 210, 211, 217, 221
Young, Kevin 41
Zimmer, Kathy 68
Zimmerman, Dan 344, 347
Zorn, John 68, 121, 129, 130, 141, 142
Zroback, Jeff 42
Zukofsky, Louis 3, 113, 175

CONCEPTS

9/11 174, 291
Activism and protest 22, 121, 130, 142, 282, 293, 336
Aesthetics 50, 117, 143, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 221, 229, 246, 249, 282, 293, 296, 358
African American poetry 49
Anthologies 13, 16, 34, 42, 50, 57, 59, 63, 64, 80, 88, 111, 121, 130, 139, 142, 151, 203, 224, 230, 240, 242, 270, 297, 301, 305, 310, 312, 322, 328, 343, 345, 351, 353, 354, 357, 359, 360, 362, 364, 367
Appropriation 17, 50, 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 229, 235
Archives and libraries 35, 46, 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 59, 60, 62, 66, 67, 71, 72, 74, 76, 77, 81, 84, 85, 96, 99, 105, 115, 135, 165, 174, 319, 323, 326, 329, 332, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 348, 361
Asemic writing 36, 233, 241, 254, 258
Autobiography 3, 22, 67, 86, 95, 96, 99, 115, 205, 207, 220
Avant-garde 50, 167, 235, 343, 360, 362, 367
Beat generation 121, 130, 142
Beauty 93, 106, 108, 110, 112, 125, 127, 250, 291
Biography 42, 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 59, 60, 62, 65, 66, 67, 71, 76, 83, 96, 290, 322, 328
Black Mountain 77, 81, 84, 85, 113, 135, 173, 343, 353, 360, 367
Blogs 6, 12, 18, 24, 31, 33, 35, 41, 42, 46, 47, 50, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 61, 62, 66, 67, 71, 76, 83, 96, 97, 101, 109, 113, 118, 122, 131, 134, 144, 146, 149, 155, 158, 160, 163, 173, 179, 181, 184, 185, 188, 189, 191, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 199, 200, 201, 202, 204, 206, 208, 209, 212, 213, 215, 216, 218, 222, 224, 225, 227, 229, 230, 234, 236, 239, 240, 242, 243, 246, 250, 256, 257, 259, 262, 265, 271, 272, 279, 282, 291, 293, 294, 296, 297, 298, 300, 301, 303, 305, 308, 309, 310, 313, 315, 320, 322, 323, 326, 327, 328, 329, 333, 336, 337, 338, 340, 341, 342, 348, 349, 352, 361, 363, 364, 366
Book announcements 72, 74, 122, 150, 164, 214, 234, 236, 249, 254, 255, 258, 289, 316, 317, 332, 350, 361, 362

Bookstores 3, 22, 46, 183, 221, 319, 322, 323, 326, 328, 329, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 348
Calls for submissions 42, 46, 139, 162, 181, 182, 318, 363
Capitalism 92, 113, 120, 121, 127, 130, 142, 185, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 221, 246, 288, 298, 303, 308, 327, 338
Censorship 52, 149, 273, 278, 283, 284, 299, 302, 304, 314
Cities 68, 178, 203, 249, 299, 302, 304, 306, 314
Class 121, 129, 130, 142, 291
Climate 296
Close reading 53
Collage and montage 18, 27, 39, 45, 48, 70, 73, 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 252, 285, 358
Conferences and festivals 39, 45, 48, 68, 69, 70, 109, 173, 240, 256, 307, 309
Copyright and permissions 11, 167, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 246
Craft 202, 222, 230, 239
Creative writing pedagogy 50, 291, 308, 327, 338, 340
Dada 22, 36
Deconstruction 33, 36, 188, 191, 195, 199, 200, 301, 305, 310, 322, 328
Difficulty 11, 25, 167, 189, 295
Dreams 89, 101, 140, 240, 256, 312
Ecology and ecopoetics 25, 154, 165, 296, 306, 350
Editing 50, 109, 118, 184, 210, 211, 216, 217, 221, 224, 225, 228, 230, 243, 361
Electronic poetry and hypertext 4, 26, 110, 203, 231
Empire and imperialism 344, 347
Epic 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 181, 240, 256
Epistemology 302, 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Erasure 259, 262, 265, 272, 291, 350
Ethics 11, 74, 228, 249, 282, 293, 303, 305, 308, 310, 322, 326, 327, 328, 336, 338, 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Experimental poetry 14, 229, 266, 269, 274, 282, 293
Fascism 293, 303, 308, 327, 338
Film 50, 84, 99, 115, 121, 129, 130, 135, 141, 142, 240, 248, 256, 260, 267, 280, 343, 353, 360, 361, 367
Flarf 41, 235, 251, 252, 259, 262, 265, 266, 269, 272, 274, 282, 285, 291, 293, 351, 354, 357, 359
Fluxus 3
Formalism 49
Free speech 23
Futurism 22
Gender 67, 96, 179, 184, 185, 189, 193, 194, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 246
Ghazal 234
Grants and funding 13, 68, 210, 211, 217, 221, 226, 250, 260, 272, 273, 278, 282, 283, 284, 291, 293, 298, 299, 302, 303, 304, 308, 314, 319, 323, 326, 327, 329, 333, 336, 337, 338, 340, 342, 348
Humour and satire 2, 38, 44, 57, 59, 63, 80, 88, 99, 115, 121, 129, 130, 141, 142, 301, 305, 310, 322, 328
Ideology 50, 179, 184, 185, 189, 193, 194, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 246
Improvisation 73
Interviews 3, 25, 29, 47, 49, 51, 53, 54, 55, 56, 58, 60, 61, 62, 63, 66, 67, 71, 72, 76, 77, 80, 81, 83, 84, 85, 88, 93, 96, 97, 99, 102, 115, 119, 121, 123, 126, 129, 130, 135, 141, 142, 145, 158, 161, 175, 234, 307, 349, 361
Israel and Palestine 92, 121, 130, 142, 183
Jewish poetics 121, 130, 142, 350
Language poetry 236, 301, 305, 310, 322, 328, 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Letters and correspondence 291
List moderation 174, 286, 332
Little magazines 13, 17, 24, 28, 37, 42, 72, 97, 109, 140, 164, 171, 179, 184, 185, 189, 193, 194, 197, 204, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 213, 215, 217, 220, 221, 230, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 242, 244, 246, 247, 250, 256, 260, 262, 263, 264, 265, 268, 272, 275, 286, 291, 293, 297, 298, 300, 303, 306, 308, 316, 317, 320, 326, 327, 329, 332, 333, 336, 337, 338, 340, 342, 348, 349, 361, 363, 364, 366
Lyric poetry 10, 131, 167, 185, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 213, 215, 216, 224, 225, 227, 230, 242, 243, 246
Marxism 233, 241, 254, 258
Materiality of the text 301, 305, 310, 322, 328, 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Memory 74, 77, 81, 84, 85, 121, 130, 135, 142, 288, 298, 300, 303, 308, 327, 338
MFA programs 13, 50, 213, 216, 224, 225, 230, 237, 238, 240, 243, 244, 246, 247, 256, 260, 263, 264, 291, 333, 337, 341, 342, 348, 362
Modernism 113, 167, 301, 305, 310, 322, 328, 343, 353, 360, 367
Music and poetry 21, 23, 29, 39, 45, 48, 60, 68, 70, 72, 77, 81, 84, 85, 87, 93, 121, 124, 129, 130, 135, 141, 142, 165, 167, 203, 221, 234, 269, 276, 290, 306, 309, 311, 324, 343, 353, 356, 360, 367
Nature 11, 36, 185, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 222, 246, 322, 328, 343, 345, 351, 353, 354, 357, 359, 360, 367
Negativity and refusal 293, 323, 326, 329, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 348

New York School 343, 353, 360, 367
Obituary and memorial 94, 107, 114, 119, 123, 126, 145, 361
Objectivism 113, 195, 199, 200
Performance and the poetry reading 14, 16, 29, 34, 39, 42, 45, 46, 47, 48, 50, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 61, 62, 66, 67, 70, 71, 76, 83, 93, 96, 109, 111, 151, 187, 221, 231, 234, 246, 266, 269, 274, 282, 293, 320, 341, 366
Philosophy 132, 137, 153, 301, 304, 305, 310, 314, 322, 328, 334, 339, 343, 345, 346, 351, 353, 354, 357, 359, 360, 367
Place and region 74, 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 202, 206, 215, 230, 239, 244, 260, 262, 264, 269, 274, 282, 288, 292, 293, 298, 303, 308, 327, 329, 333, 337, 338, 342, 348
Poet laureate 21, 47, 50, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 66, 67, 71, 76, 96, 100, 168, 172
Poetics 3, 13, 37, 46, 50, 64, 74, 113, 134, 145, 153, 175, 213, 218, 220, 227, 231, 239, 242, 246, 248, 256, 268, 270, 291, 294, 296, 301, 305, 310, 322, 328, 333, 337, 342, 343, 348, 349, 350, 351, 353, 354, 357, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 367
Politics and poetry 7
Post-structuralism 301, 305, 310, 322, 328
Postmodernism 305, 310, 322, 328, 343, 353, 360, 367
Print vs. digital 11, 12, 13, 15, 19, 31, 32, 38, 44, 64, 68, 72, 74, 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 155, 157, 166, 169, 170, 174, 178, 203, 204, 206, 208, 209, 210, 211, 214, 215, 216, 217, 221, 224, 225, 230, 243, 246, 253, 271, 290, 295, 320, 330, 331, 332, 343, 353, 360, 366, 367
Prizes and awards 3, 11, 13, 22, 49, 140, 184, 213, 225, 226, 228, 234, 237, 238, 243, 244, 246, 247, 250, 260, 263, 264, 291, 340
Procedural and constraint writing 363
Prose poem 11, 22, 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 226, 343, 353, 360, 367
Prosody and meter 282, 293
Queer poetics 47, 51, 53, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 66, 67, 71, 76, 96, 312
Race and poetry 29, 77, 81, 84, 85, 121, 129, 130, 135, 141, 142, 179, 184, 185, 189, 193, 194, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 246
Reading announcements 29, 39, 45, 48, 70, 296
Religion and the sacred 3, 23, 147, 148, 161, 195, 199, 200, 240, 254, 256, 258, 263, 284, 288, 290, 298, 299, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 308, 310, 311, 314, 322, 327, 328, 338, 345, 350, 351, 353, 354, 357, 359, 360, 367
Representation 149
Reviewing and criticism 13, 16, 34, 37, 42, 50, 66, 74, 86, 93, 95, 97, 104, 111, 140, 151, 162, 175, 182, 227, 229, 231, 234, 235, 237, 238, 242, 244, 246, 247, 260, 263, 264, 266, 269, 270, 274, 282, 293, 296, 297, 305, 306, 310, 320, 322, 328, 330, 331, 332, 345, 349, 351, 354, 357, 359, 366
Revision 353, 360, 361, 367
Romanticism 301, 305, 310, 322, 328
Science 72, 203, 233, 241, 254, 258, 310, 322, 328, 334, 339, 345, 346, 350, 351, 354, 357, 359, 365
Semiotics 345, 351, 354, 357, 359
Serial poem 234, 362
Small press publishing 11, 24, 29, 37, 43, 46, 50, 68, 72, 146, 181, 204, 206, 208, 209, 213, 215, 221, 222, 223, 226, 234, 240, 246, 248, 256, 291, 293, 306, 320, 323, 326, 329, 331, 333, 336, 337, 340, 341, 342, 348, 349, 350, 362, 364, 366
Social media 3, 5, 16, 25, 34, 50, 68, 72, 87, 101, 109, 214, 229, 231, 234, 242, 243, 248, 255, 306, 309, 342, 348, 356, 361
Software and code 72, 248
Sonnet 40, 98, 176, 194, 279, 297
Sound poetry 35, 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 231
Structuralism 301, 305, 310, 322, 328
Subjectivity 42, 64, 179, 182, 184, 185, 189, 193, 194, 197, 204, 206, 208, 209, 215, 246, 334, 339, 345, 346, 351, 354, 357, 359, 363
Surrealism 61, 83, 332
The academy 2, 13, 14, 16, 21, 34, 42, 49, 50, 60, 91, 99, 111, 115, 117, 134, 140, 151, 164, 173, 174, 177, 179, 184, 185, 189, 193, 194, 197, 203, 204, 206, 208, 209, 210, 211, 213, 215, 217, 221, 226, 229, 231, 237, 238, 240, 244, 246, 247, 260, 263, 264, 266, 269, 270, 274, 275, 277, 282, 286, 291, 292, 293, 303, 304, 308, 313, 314, 315, 320, 325, 327, 331, 332, 333, 337, 338, 340, 342, 348, 349, 361, 366
The body 77, 81, 84, 85, 135, 139, 253, 350
The canon 50, 134, 231, 361
The Gulf War 119, 123, 126, 145
The internet 3, 23, 56, 58, 76, 106, 108, 110, 112, 120, 125, 127, 139, 156, 159, 173, 235, 291, 320, 366
The Iraq war 181
The listserv 23, 101, 251, 252, 258, 259, 262, 265, 272, 285, 291, 294, 301, 305, 310, 322, 323, 326, 328, 329, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 344, 347, 348
Theatre 13, 30, 50, 68, 77, 81, 84, 85, 100, 121, 130, 135, 142, 187, 276
Torture and Abu Ghraib 233, 241, 254, 258

Translation 1, 5, 10, 11, 50, 150, 182, 205, 207, 210, 211, 216, 217, 220, 221, 224, 225, 230, 231, 236, 243, 290, 310, 322, 324, 328, 343, 345, 351, 353, 354, 357, 359, 360, 361, 367
Vietnam 3
Visual and concrete poetry 3, 35, 36, 108, 110, 120, 136, 178, 240, 256, 270, 281, 311, 334, 339, 346, 365
Visual art 39, 42, 45, 48, 50, 70, 131, 150, 173, 174, 215, 235, 236, 242, 260, 306, 309, 312, 319, 323, 326, 329, 332, 333, 336, 337, 340, 342, 348, 350, 352, 358
Women's writing 181, 240, 256, 300

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 367 in all.

29 JUN 2010

1. Naomi Buck Palagi — Re: Translators
2. Obododimma Oha — Playing Ball
3. George Bowering — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
4. derek beaulieu — new from No press: SENSATIONS OF THE RETINA by Bob Cobbing
5. Tomás Ó Cárthaigh — Translators
6. Stephen Vincent — A London Story
7. Amanda Earl — Todd Swift on Poetry and Politics: new essay from AngelHousePress
8. Carol Seferi — Catherine Woodard-- Request for e-mail address
9. Mark Melnicove — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

30 JUN 2010

10. Mark Young — Now out from Otoliths— Grzegorz Wróblewski's "A Marzipan Factory"
11. Brian Clements — Sentence and Firewheel Announcements
12. Anny Ballardini — Re: SAVE THE GULF-- SAN FRANCISCO-- SHOW YOUR SUPPORT!!--JULY 2
13. William Slaughter — New Mudlark Poster
14. William Allegrezza — Literary Reading in Chicago: Gizzi, Clifford, and Mukerjee
15. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Closing Eyes Blazing Life" by Sarah A…
16. Nicholas Karavatos — at Bird & Beckett in San Francisco, CA on Monday, July 5
17. twshaner — Wig 2

1 JUL 2010

18. steve dalachinsky — poems by dalachinsky
19. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Playz" by Alan Sondheim
20. mIEKAL aND — F-E-R-M-E-N-T-A-T-I-O-N
21. Aldonlnielsen — Re: new U.S. laureate
22. David Chirot — Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
23. David Chirot — Fwd: ACLU: Who knows what books you buy?
24. Rob McLennan — [[redacted]: Puritan X]
25. Alan Sondheim — BP is burning endangered sea turtles alive (fwd)
26. amy king — Evermore OIL, evermore POEMS

2 JUL 2010

27. steve dalachinsky — books and cds you buy
28. Krystal Languell — Bone Bouquet Issue 2 Published
29. Dan Wilcox — News Release: Third Thursday Poetry Night, July 15 - Jason Crane
30. Jennifer Karmin — Requited - issue #3

3 JUL 2010

31. Nicky Melville — selections and dissections
32. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Sharks of Mary Shelley” by Jeff Harr…
33. Mary Jo Malo — Mysterious Attribution
34. Nicholas Karavatos — at Blackbird Wine Shop - Oregon Literary Review - in Portland on Wedne…

4 JUL 2010

35. Jim Andrews — Netartery
36. Mark Young — Now out from Otoliths—"modulations" by Márton Koppány
37. William Slaughter — New Mudlark Issue (Chapbook)
38. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Stories Short and Strange” by Bill D…

5 JUL 2010

39. steve dalachinsky — my first one man show and..
40. Camille Martin — New @ Rogue Embryo: My Leslie + Gene-Pixel Hybridity
41. Gary Sullivan — Poetry comics original art

6 JUL 2010

42. Asian Cha — CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS -- "THE CHINA ISSUE"
43. Eric Elshtain — New Beard of Bees Chapbook
44. Jeffrey Side — New link for Bill Drennan's “Stories Short and Strange”
45. Allan Revich — Re: my first one man show and..
46. Rob McLennan — new(ish) on rob's clever blog
47. CA Conrad — lesbians don't want...

7 JUL 2010

48. steve dalachinsky — Re: my first one man show and..
49. Jeffrey Side — Amiri Baraka interview at The Argotist Online
50. paolo javier — PRJCTNS Summer Finale, 7/11 @ the BPC
51. Maria Damon — Re: lesbians don't want...
52. Séamas Cain — Fwd: The death of Andrei Voznesensky
53. Gloria Frym — Re: lesbians don't want...
54. John Cleary — Re: lesbians don't want...
55. Daniel Godston — interview with Vanessa Place
56. Angela Vasquez-Giroux — Re: lesbians don't want...
57. Catherine Daly — Re: lesbians don't want...
58. Mary Kasimor — Re: lesbians don't want...
59. Sarah Fox — Re: lesbians don't want...
60. Aldonlnielsen — Re: lesbians don't want...
61. CA Conrad — Re: lesbians don't want...
62. Calum Gardner — Re: lesbians don't want...

8 JUL 2010

63. Nana Zabic — Re: lesbians don't want...
64. Christine Hamm — Re: POETICS Digest - 6 Jul 2010 to 7 Jul 2010 (#2010-158)
65. David Chirot — Re: lesbians don't want...//geological survey of ED bio-fantasies--
66. a. tsai — Re: lesbians don't want...
67. a. tsai — Re: lesbians don't want...
68. David A. Kirschenbaum — Wed./Simon's Graceland & Johnston's Hi, How Are You Live
69. Sarah Sarai — Re: lesbians don't want...
70. steve russell — Re: my first one man show and..
71. steve russell — Re: lesbians don't want...
72. Jennifer Karmin — July 10: Literary Science Fair in Chicago
73. aslongasittakes — aslongasittakes issue 5 is now live

9 JUL 2010

74. charles alexander — 4 New Books from Chax Press
75. Kenneth Sherwood — Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
76. Angela Vasquez-Giroux — Re: lesbians don't want...
77. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
78. Catherine Daly — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
79. Loretta Clodfelter — New Issue of There Is Now Online
80. Maria Damon — Re: lesbians don't want...
81. Stephen Vincent — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
82. Crane's Bill Books — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry

10 JUL 2010

83. Crane's Bill Books — Re: lesbians don't want...
84. Mark DuCharme — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry

85. Douglas Manson — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
86. David-Baptiste Chirot — Mark Twain's Unexpurgated Autobio: Dead for a Century, Twain Says ...
87. David-Baptiste Chirot — Avaaz: Save Sakineh
88. Lisa Samuels — Re: lesbians don't want...
89. carol dorf — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
90. carol dorf — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry

11 JUL 2010

91. Pam Brown — Re: : Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
92. Justin Katko — Contranight Escha Black
93. Dan Wilcox — Third Thursday Poetry Night, July 15: Jason Crane

12 JUL 2010

94. steve dalachinsky — great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed awa...
95. steve dalachinsky — Re: Mark Twain's Unexpurgated Autobio: Dead for a Century, Twain Says ...
96. John Cleary — Re: lesbians don't want...
97. Iris Law — LANTERN REVIEW seeks bloggers.
98. Camille Martin — New @ Rogue Embryo: Leslie Scalapino's Plural Time + Blue Tulip Tree Leaf
99. David Chirot — O Cleveland! As Lebron Leaves, Harvey Pekar Goes on the "Big Sleep"
100. Mark Prejsnar — Atlanta Poets Group this week
101. Paul Nelson — August Postry Postcard Project
102. Dan Godston — World Listening Day / Passport to Texas radio series
103. Vernon Frazer — The SEx Queen of the Berlin Turnpike -- "Vernon Frazer's Greatest Hits"
104. Lou Rowan — Golden Handcuffs Review 13
105. laura oliver — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
106. amy king — YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
107. Thomas savage — Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed awa...
108. Jim Andrews — Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
109. amy king — Goodbye -- Transfer of the Stain Series! [& Popsickle Literary Festival, July 2...
110. amy king — Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
111. Nicholas Karavatos — at Tigress Books in Salem, OR on Thursday, July 15 at 5:30 PM
112. John Cleary — Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
113. Jennifer Karmin — Red Rover Series / Experiment #38
114. Ruth Lepson — Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away ...
115. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: O Cleveland! As Lebron Leaves, Harvey Pekar Goes on the "Big Sleep"

13 JUL 2010

116. Jules Boykoff — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
117. Obododimma Oha — The Naked Truth
118. Pam Brown — Calling doublechange or Kristin Prevallet
119. steve dalachinsky — Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed a...
120. Jim Andrews — Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
121. steve dalachinsky — tuli
122. whit griffin — New Skysill Press Publication
123. Gerald Schwartz — Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed a...
124. David-Baptiste Chirot — Tuli Kupferberg, Bohemian and Fug, Dies at 86
125. amy king — Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
126. mIEKAL aND — Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away tod...
127. amy king — Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET

128. steve dalachinsky — re tuli funeral
129. Joel Lewis — Harvey Pekar
130. steve dalachinsky — Re: tuli
131. Pierre Joris — Current Nomadics Blog Posts
132. Nicholas Ruiz III — What Is a Philosopher?
133. Nic Sebastian — Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: John Vick
134. Dean Brink — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
135. David Chirot — Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry & Dyslexic Decompostions
136. David-Baptiste Chirot — FW: Klebnikov Karnaval--from Guido Vermeulen
137. nieuwland jeroen — Re: What Is a Philosopher?
138. steve dalachinsky — Re: re tuli funeral
139. amy king — CFW -- call for submissions
140. Benjamin Rybeck — Sonora Review Poetry Contest - $1000 Prize
141. carol dorf — Re: Harvey Pekar
142. Maria Damon — Re: tuli
143. Francis Raven — Re: New Issue of There Is Now Online
144. Pam Brown — thanks - I have double change & Kristin Prevallet contacts
145. William James Austin — Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passe…
146. Rob McLennan — 12 or 20 questions with Jessica Smith,

14 JUL 2010

147. steve dalachinsky — tuli update from family
148. steve dalachinsky — Re: re tuli funeral
149. Jonathan Morse — I blog about censorship, representation, and a line by Wallace Stevens
150. David Hadbawnik — kadar koli #5 now available
151. Nicholas Karavatos — Re: at Tigress Books in Salem, OR on Thursday, July 15 at 5:30 PM
152. Alan Sondheim — Video documentation of Netfilmmakers event and talks in Copenhagen last yea…

15 JUL 2010

153. Nicholas Ruiz III — Re: What Is a Philosopher?
154. Dan Godston — Sounding into World Listening Day
155. CA Conrad — NYC Chinatown poetry...
156. steve dalachinsky — Re: OIl at 3:25 p.m. Today...
157. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "King Amour" by Jack Foley
158. Christophe Casamassima — Dialogue's End: Chris McCreary & Marthe Reed Inter[Re]View each ot…
159. amy king — OIl at 3:25 p.m. Today...
160. Stephen Vincent — Reading Report: D McNaughton & L Kearney
161. Jeffrey Side — Interview with Norman Fischer at The Argotist Online
162. Jen Tynes — Call for submissions: Horse Less Review #8

16 JUL 2010

163. steve dalachinsky — my short piece about tuli on line
164. Obododimma Oha — CONTEXT, Volume 13, Number 1, March 2010
165. Dan Godston — World Listening Day at the Chicago Underground Library

17 JUL 2010

166. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Brainiography” by Evelyn Posamentier
167. Jeffrey Side — Jake Berry and Chris Mansel in Conversation at The Argotist Online
168. Jim Finnegan — Gloucester Writers House
169. Jeffrey Side — (no subject)
170. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is Light as a Fetter by Chris Stroffolino
171. Brian Seabolt — Raft Magazine: call for new work
172. Ruth Lepson — Re: Gloucester Writers House

173. Jeff Davis — Fwd: 2nd Annual Re-Viewing Black Mountain College Conference
174. Kyle Schlesinger — Poems & Pictures
175. sam truitt — Wolsak's SQUEEZED LIGHT.... Review Copies Available

18 JUL 2010

176. Camille Martin — New @ Rogue Embryo: Monty Reid's phantom settlement + passion flowers, Gul...
177. Noah Eli Gordon — 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
178. Mark Young — Now out from Otoliths—"Expanding The Radius" by Mary Ellen Derwis & Joe Balaz
179. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
180. Adam Fieled — "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
181. Jennifer Karmin — 4000 WORDS 4000 DEAD: call for submissions
182. Francesco Levato — Call for Submissions: Atlanta Review - Italy Issue
183. Jessica Wickens — New Issue of Monday Night
184. Lisa Samuels — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

19 JUL 2010

185. Pierre Joris — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
186. Brian Seabolt — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
187. Kimmelman, Burt — Kimmelman et al. Readings in Pacific Northwest
188. Mary Jo Malo — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
189. John Latta — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
190. Amish Trivedi — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
191. Adam Fieled — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
192. Eric Weinstein — Eric Weinstein & Adam Eaglin KGB Reading Thursday, 7/22 (NYC)
193. Cara Benson — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
194. Halvard Johnson — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
195. Chad Sweeney — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
196. Dan Glass — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
197. Gloria Frym — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
198. E. Gambadé — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
199. Adam Fieled — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
200. Adam Fieled — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
201. michael farrell — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
202. Mark Weiss — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
203. Deborah A. Meadows — Beyond Baroque reading for Factory School poets--July 30
204. Matthew Landis — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
205. Peter Quartermain — Robert Duncan and NORGOL. Help needed!
206. Mark Weiss — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
207. Hilary Clark — Re: Robert Duncan and NORGOL. Help needed!
208. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
209. Hugh Behm-Steinberg — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
210. Noah Eli Gordon — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
211. Noah Eli Gordon — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

20 JUL 2010

212. Sarah Sarai — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
213. Pierre Joris — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
214. Wanda Phipps — Cool News!
215. teersteeg — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
216. Pierre Joris — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
217. Mary Kasimor — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
218. Douglas Manson — Courses offered in all forums, formats
219. Elizabeth Switaj — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
220. Peter Quartermain — Re: Robert Duncan and NORGOL. Help needed!
221. Matthew Landis — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

222. sheila black — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
223. jason snyder — Sidebrow Open Reading Period in August
224. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
225. Matthew Landis — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
226. Brian Clements — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
227. Pierre Joris — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
228. Jared Schickling — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
229. Catherine Daly — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
230. Mark Weiss — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
231. Lori Emerson — CFP: Steve McCaffery special issue of Open Letter
232. Nic Sebastian — Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Sandra Beasley

21 JUL 2010

233. David-Baptiste Chirot — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
234. David Kirschenbaum — Boog City presents Eleven Eleven and Churchill Downs
235. Gary Sullivan — Compton, Degentesh, Downing, Gardner, Gordon, Mesmer, Sullivan
236. richard owens — Damn the Caesars vol. N &c
237. Nana Zabic — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
238. Nana Zabic — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
239. Tribbey, Hugh R. — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
240. Jennifer Karmin — Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles
241. Adam Fieled — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
242. David Seaman — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition and the State of ....
243. David Seaman — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
244. Mark Weiss — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

22 JUL 2010

245. Nicole Mauro — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition and the State of ....
246. steve dalachinsky — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
247. steve dalachinsky — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
248. Les Rencontres Internationales — Re: POETICS Digest - 19 Jul 2010 to 20 Jul 2010 (#2010-168)
249. Francis Raven — Announcement: Architectonic Conjectures
250. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
251. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
252. steve dalachinsky — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
253. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “A Year of Ordinary Moments” by Rich …
254. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
255. Wanda Phipps — Fwd: A Scorched Page by Liliana Almendarez
256. Ed Friedman — Re: Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles
257. Vernon Frazer — New Post on Vernon Frazer's BELLICOSE WARBLING Blog
258. Adam Fieled — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
259. Little Red Leaves — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
260. Nana Zabic — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
261. michael farrell — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
262. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
263. Nana Zabic — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
264. Mary Kasimor — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
265. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
266. Catherine Daly — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
267. Mark Melnicove — Bern Porter film

23 JUL 2010

268. Jennifer Karmin — Re: Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles
269. steve dalachinsky — bill dixon memorial
270. David Chirot — 2 Poetics/spidertanglers-in a -long excellent review in current Rain Taxi

271. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Pesticide Drift” by F. A. Nettelbeck.
272. tyrone williams — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
273. Adam Katz — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
274. Mark Weiss — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
275. Obododimma Oha — Call for articles
276. Michael — Meltzer, Rothenberg, Carrion, Coolidge Benefit for Petaluma Poetry Walk
277. Catherine Daly — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
278. Adam Fieled — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
279. Halvard Johnson — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
280. Gloria Frym — Kathy Acker query
281. Jim Andrews — con tests
282. Little Red Leaves — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
283. Chris Chapman — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
284. carol dorf — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

24 JUL 2010

285. steve dalachinsky — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
286. Obododimma Oha — Re: USA Africa Dialogue Series - Call for articles
287. Adam Fieled — Goss 183 Chap: "Returns"
288. Gary Sullivan — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
289. Vernon Frazer — * by Vernon Frazer now online
290. David Chirot — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
291. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
292. Mark Weiss — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

25 JUL 2010

293. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
294. Jason Quackenbush — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
295. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Noise Difficulty Flower” by J. D. Ne...
296. E. J. McAdams — Tues. 7/27, NYC: James Sherry on Climate Change and Poetry
297. Halvard Johnson — Sol: new online literary magazine
298. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
299. J. Michael Mollohan — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
300. Cara Benson — Leslie Scalapino tribute
301. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
302. Jason Quackenbush — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
303. Little Red Leaves — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
304. Roy Exley — Re: "The Decay of Poetry in Spirituality"
305. Jason Quackenbush — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
306. David A. Kirschenbaum — Small Press Needed for Oct. 26 in Boog NYC Series
307. Charlie Rossiter — Merwin Interview on poetrypoetry.com
308. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
309. David Kirschenbaum — This Weekend/A Boston Poet Tea Party

26 JUL 2010

310. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
311. Jim Andrews — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
312. Jonathan Penton — Unlikely Stories of the Third Kind
313. David Hadbawnik — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
314. J. Michael Mollohan — Re: "The Decay of Poetry in Spirituality"
315. Al Filreis — PoemTalk 34: on Charles Olson
316. Cara Benson — AUG 12 Belladonna / Dusie Reading
317. Cara Benson — AUG 12 Belladonna / Dusie Reading [TAKE TWO]
318. Eric Weinstein — Call for Submissions: PRICK OF THE SPINDLE
319. Catherine Daly — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

320. amy king — Bill Knott books ++ FRIDAY -- Amy De'Ath, Octavio R. Gonzalez, Gordon Massman, ...
321. Willard Fox — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
322. Mark Johnson — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
323. Little Red Leaves — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
324. Jeff Hansen — item for inclusion

27 JUL 2010

325. Obododimma Oha — On Being a Cybernomad
326. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
327. tyrone williams — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
328. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
329. David Hadbawnik — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
330. Jeffrey Side — The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Solzhenitsyn Jukebox” by Ann Bogle
331. Bobby Baird — News from DEpress: Poems and Fake Book Reviews by Joshua Baldwin
332. Kyle Schlesinger — WINKFIELD, CHAMPION, CLAY, & BASINSKI AT POEMS & PICTURES | Center for B...
333. David Hadbawnik — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
334. Jim Andrews — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
335. Stephen Ellis — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
336. Ryan Daley — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
337. Mark Weiss — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
338. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
339. steve russell — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
340. richard owens — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
341. Rob McLennan — new from above/ground press: Marilyn Irwin's for when you pick daisies
342. David Seaman — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

28 JUL 2010

343. David Chirot — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
344. David Baratier — Re: on poetry contests
345. Jason Quackenbush — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
346. Jason Quackenbush — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
347. steve dalachinsky — Re: on poetry contests
348. Little Red Leaves — Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
349. Rob McLennan — new from above/ground press: rob mclennan's 16 Yonge
350. Jared Schickling — New Book Announcement: Zero’s Blooming Excursion
351. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
352. Stephen Vincent — New de blog
353. Jason Quackenbush — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
354. Jason Quackenbush — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
355. Nic Sebastian — Final Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Eric Elshtain

29 JUL 2010

356. David Kirschenbaum — boston phoenix on boston poet tea party
357. Douglas Manson — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
358. Séamas Cain — Signs & Writings
359. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
360. Mark Prejsnar — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry" 361. Danny Snelson — Simultaneous Online / Printed Matter Edit Publications Book Launch (11 Book...
362. Eleni Stecopoulos — FW: This Sat 7/31 BAY AREA POETRY MARATHON (note: not at The Lab thi...
363. Scott Howard — Call for Submissions: RECONFIGURATIONS / A Journal for Poetics & Poetry / Li...
364. Rob McLennan — new(ish) on rob's clever blog
365. Jim Andrews — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

30 JUL 2010

366. amy king — TONIGHT / FRIDAY -- Amy De'Ath, Octavio R. Gonzalez, Gordon Massman, Tracy O Con...
367. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

1. Naomi Buck Palagi
Re: Translators
Tue 29 Jun 2010

Have you considered Ana Osan?

--- On Tue, 6/29/10, William Allegrezza <[redacted]> wrote:

From: William Allegrezza <[redacted]>
Subject: Translators
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, June 29, 2010, 11:28 AM

I'm looking for a few poets who can translate Spanish into English. If you are interested in a new project, just e-mail me for details.

Bill Allegrezza
[redacted]

↑ Index

2. Obododimma Oha
Playing Ball
Tue 29 Jun 2010

"The “soccering” of sex and the sexualization of soccer<http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Opinion/5586754-146/shibboleth_playing_ball___.csp>are both practices of humour too.
...

When one thinks about this interesting coalescence of soccer and sex in and the World Cup taking place in South Africa, one could understand how painful it could be for Slovakia to have succeeded in taking Italy to bed. As the two wrestled in the South African soccer bedroom, perhaps some of us thought that Slovakia would be on the receiving end. I thought so too, and feared that the “bashing” Slovakia would receive might result in multiple pregnancies!"

Read the full text of this article at:

http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Opinion/5586754-146/shibboleth_playing_ball___.csp

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

3. George Bowering

Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Tue 29 Jun 2010

I must have mistaken the query. I didn't know it was about autobiography.

gb

On Jun 29, 2010, at 2:24 AM, David Seaman wrote:

> I must be the elder statesman of 1971. At that point I was interviewing for my next job and Robert Creeley said come to Buffalo, there is money for your concrete poetry projects. In New York Cityï»¿, when I got there, Richard Kostelanetz introduced me to Fluxus artists (Dick Higgins) and let me know what was going on.
> David
>
> David W. Seaman, Ph.D.
> http://personal.georgiasouthern.edu/~dseaman/Welcome.html
>
> Follow my Twitter poetry at dseaman40
>
> YouTube video of my Venice Biennale poem: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JQ5bOuJBN_k
>
> On 28 Jun, 2010,at 11:06 PM, Donald Wellman <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> In 1971, I left Germany where I was because of Vietnam era military service.
> I brought back with me a love for Olson and Zukofsky. I had picked up Z. at a bookstore in Covent Garden. My special love was Basil Bunting. My buddy had studied with Kenner in Santa Barbara and could recite "Brigg Flats" by heart. That wowed me and fit with my Anglo-Saxon Studies agenda. It was Old English that drew me to Oregon. Contemporary poetry for me began there with Galway Kinnell and Robert Creeley and necessarily William Stafford whose son was a classmate. Donald Davey came up and promoted Ed Dorn and Thom Gunn.

Ralph Salisbury was a poet and a friend. Some of you may know the inimitable Joe Smith whom I later published in O.ARS. I have written a history of my associations with Charles Olson and people like Harvey Brown which is available on the web at http://www.cranberryisles.com/photos/olson_tangents.htm.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Kevin Killian
Sent: Monday, June 28, 2010 7:18 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Dear Rachel,

My God, I was 18 then....

I remember living in New York and the following things happened, though most of them I didn't find out about till years later! For me personally the signal arts events of 1971 were seeing Bette Midler at the Continental Bath House.... and Maria Callas working at Juilliard giving the master class to voice students, but anybody could get in just about. But in poetry, you might say 1971 involved....

Birth of Tupac Shakur, Kazim Ali, Jeff Clark, Brigid Pegeen Kelly, Beth Ann Fennelly, Snoop Dogg, Terrance Hayes, Evelyn Lau

Patti Smith performs with Lenny Kaye February 10 at the Poetry Project (first collaboration)

Ted Berrigan, Train Ride

Jack Spicer, The Red Wheelbarrow

Anne-Marie Albiach, Etat

Sonia Sanchez joins Nation of Islam

Linda Nochlin, "Why have there been no great woman artists?" (published)

The Collected Poems of Frank O'Hara, ed. Donald M. Allen

Jose Lezama Lima, Complete Poems (Cuban publication)

Adrienne Rich publishes The Will to Change

Elizabeth Bishop meets Alice Methfessel

Louis Zukofsky, ALL: The Collected Shorter Poems (final version)

High point of Bolinas as American poetry capital

Pablo Neruda receives Nobel Prize

Duncan and Levertov quarrel reaches flash point in Sept-November 1971

Sun Ra, "The Black Man in the Cosmos" (course at UC Berkeley)

Philip Whalen, Scenes of Life at the Capital

John Lennon releases "Imagine" (autumn)

Andy Warhol designs Sticky Fingers cover for the Stones (spring)

Jackson Mac Low, Stanzas for Iris Lezak

Valerie Eliot publishes Waste Land facsimile from original manuscripts

Anne Waldman edits Another World
Nam June Paik, TV Cello with Charlotte Moorman

> Hugh Kenner, The Pound Era
>
> Death of Ogden Nash, Jim Morrison, Paul Blackburn, Stevie Smith, Lew Welch
>
> Love ya, Kevin K.
>
> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky
>
> welcome.html
>
> guidelines
>
> welcome.html
>
> welcome.html

George Harry de Bowering
Will happily eat an endangered cod.

↑ Index

4. derek beaulieu

new from No press: SENSATIONS OF THE RETINA by Bob Cobbing

Tue 29 Jun 2010

No press is proud to announce the publication of

SENSATIONS OF THE RETINA
by Bob Cobbing

originally published in 1978 in an editionof 200 copies by bpNichol's grOnk; this edition of SENSATIONS OF THE RETINA is published in a fascimile edition of 40 copies (of which 20 are for sale) $5 each (including shipping)

for more information, or to order copies, email
[redacted]

derek beaulieu
2 - 733 2nd avenue nw

calgary alberta
canada T2N 0E4
[redacted]
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/beaulieu/

↑ Index

5. Tomás Ó Cárthaigh

Translators

Tue 29 Jun 2010

Im looking for anyone who wants to translate my poetry into whatever language you speak... email me with same!!!!

Tomás

"a person with a good book is never alone... a writer until they've written one is never at peace"

- www.writingsinrhyme.com ::: Add me on Facebook ::: My YouTube Videos

--- On Tue, 29/6/10, William Allegrezza <[redacted]> wrote:

From: William Allegrezza <[redacted]>
Subject: Translators
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, 29 June, 2010, 17:28

I'm looking for a few poets who can translate Spanish into English. If you are interested in a new project, just e-mail me for details.

Bill Allegrezza
[redacted]

↑ Index

6. Stephen Vincent

A London Story

Tue 29 Jun 2010

London Viz Text - those great signs en route (root?) http://stephenvincent.net/blog/

Enjoy

Stephen V

↑ Index

7. Amanda Earl

Todd Swift on Poetry and Politics: new essay from AngelHousePress

Tue 29 Jun 2010

In his essay, "A Broadcast from Cairo: Poetry, Politics and the Extraordinary Pressure of News" Todd Swift muses on the compatibility of poetry and politics. The essay is particularly timely given the recent oil spill in the Gulf and the ensuing poetic engagement, and also the recent G20 riots in Toronto and the participation of writers as activists and protestors. How does art or how can art respond to war, unrest and disaster or should art respond at all?

to read this and other essays, please go to www.angelhousepress.com and click on essays.

Amanda Earl
AngelHousePress
www.angelhousepress.com
the angel is in the house

↑ Index

8. Carol Seferi

Catherine Woodard-- Request for e-mail address

Tue 29 Jun 2010

Does anyone have Catherine Woodard's contact information? Thank you in advance.

↑ Index

9. Mark Melnicove

Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

Tue 29 Jun 2010

Something Else Press (Dick Higgins) published Bern Porter's I'VE LEFT in 1971. _____

From: George Bowering [mailto:[redacted]]
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, 25 Jun 2010 16:53:32 -0400
Subject: Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971

The publication of bpNichol's Monotones.
(He published 4 books that year!)

On Jun 24, 2010, at 12:52 PM, R Levitsky wrote:

> Dear Friends,
> What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?

> Thank you for your help!
> Rachel Levitsky
>
> welcome.html

Mr. G.H. Bowering
Does not get up immoderately early.

↑ Index

10. Mark Young

Now out from Otoliths— Grzegorz Wróblewski's "A Marzipan Factory"

Wed 30 Jun 2010

A Marzipan Factory

Grzegorz Wróblewski

(translated from the Polish by Adam Zdrodowski)

112 pages

Otoliths, 2010

ISBN: 978-0-9807651-1-3

$15.95 + p&h

URL: http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/a-marzipan-factory/11184884

*A Marzipan Factory *is the most original and enticing book of poems I have read in years. It is Kafkaesque and yet tender, cynical and yet warm, elliptical and yet wholly immediate. Grzegorz Wróblewski can take the most ordinary of phenomena and then give them the twist of a knife: to "spare" the life of a living organism—a "dry" tangerine for instance—is, from another angle, to forget it. The pleasures and terrors of sex, of age, of the fear of death, of the deceptions of our social life, have rarely been so brutally—yet wittily and charmingly—documented as they are in these short, often gnomic poems, surprisingly well rendered in Adam Zdrodowski’s translation. Grzegorz Wróblewski restores one’s faith in the power of lyric poetry to renew itself. — Marjorie Perloff

Grzegorz Wróblewski's poems are ironic and serious, quick and probing, nailed to place and character but soaring in imagination. If you haven't read his poems, it's not too late to start and this new volume is the perfect place to do that. — John Z. Guzlowski

A Marzipan Factory will also be available through Amazon shortly.

↑ Index

11. Brian Clements

Sentence and Firewheel Announcements

Wed 30 Jun 2010

Firewheel Editions announces the third Sentence Book Award and the fifth Firewheel Chapbook Award.

The Firewheel Chapbook Award is given to a collection of no more than 20 manuscript pages in any genre. Preference is for innovative work (liberally interpreted), work that crosses genres, work that combines images and text, work in formats other than the traditionally bound book, or work that may have difficulty finding publication elsewhere due to the nature, typography, or format of the work. The recipient of the award will receive 50 copies out of a limited edition. Entry fee: $15 by check to Firewheel Editions or by PayPal at http://firewheel-editions.org. Checks and submissions may be mailed to Firewheel Chapbook Award, Box 7, WCSU, 181 White St., Danbury, CT 06810. Electronic submissions may be sent to [redacted]. Postmark/Timestamp Deadline for submissions and fees: November 17, 2010, 11:59 pm PST.

The Sentence Book Award will be given to a book-length manuscript of prose poems or a book-length manuscript consisting substantially of prose poems (for example, a book that is half prose poems and half free-verse, or a book-length sequence that mixes passages of prose poetry with other modes). The recipient of the award will receive publication in a trade paper edition with a standard royalty contract and 50 copies of the book. All entrants will receive Sentence #8 (entrants who are already subscribers will have their subscription extended by one issue). Entry fee: $25 by check to Firewheel Editions or by PayPal at http://firewheel-editions.org. Checks and submissions may be mailed to Sentence Book Award, Box 7, WCSU, 181 White St., Danbury, CT 06810. Electronic submissions may be sent to [redacted]. Postmark/Timestamp Deadline for submissions and fees: November 17, 2010, 11:59 pm PST.

Firewheel Editions subscribes to the CLMP Code of Ethics: "CLMP's community of independent literary publishers believes that ethical contests serve our shared goal: to connect writers and readers by publishing exceptional writing. We believe that intent to act ethically, clarity of guidelines, and transparency of process form the foundation of an ethical contest. To that end, we agree to 1) conduct our contests as ethically as possible and to address any unethical behavior on the part of our readers, judges, or editors; 2) to provide clear and specific contest guidelines defining conflict of interest for all parties involved; and 3) to make the mechanics of our selection process available to the public.

This Code recognizes that different contest models produce different results, but that each model can be run ethically. We have adopted this Code to reinforce our integrity and dedication as a publishing community and to ensure that our contests contribute to a vibrant literary heritage."

The recipient of the Sentence Award will be selected by Brian Clements, Editor of Sentence and Firewheel Editions; the recipient of the Firewheel Chapbook Award will be selected by Brian Clements and Tom Nackid, Design Manager for Firewheel Editions. In the event that no recipient is chosen for either award, entry fees will be returned to all of the award's entrants. Authors who have published a chapbook or book with Firewheel Editions, authors who have served on the Board of Contributing Editors of Sentence, graduate or undergraduate students and relatives of Brian Clements and Tom Nackid, and all past and current staff members of Sentence and Firewheel Editions are ineligible. All manuscripts will come to the editors anonymously after screening and preparation by Firewheel staff.

Submission guidelines:

- Chapbook Award entrants must explain any special production requirements for their projects in the cover letter.

- All entrants must provide email address or SASE for Award results.

- Unless SASE with sufficient postage for return is included, manuscripts will be recycled.

- Multiple submissions are acceptable with an entry fee for each submission.

- Translations are acceptable with proof of permission to publish translations.

- Electronic submissions must be sent as a single attachment in .rtf (preferred for text-only submissions), .doc, or .pdf format.

- All submitted manuscripts must include a one-page cover with author's name, title, author's email address, and name of Award (Chapbook or Sentence); also include a second title page with title only.

- The author's name should be recognizable nowhere in the manuscript other than on the cover page.

For more information on Sentence and Firewheel Editions, visit http://firewheel-editions.org or email [redacted]

↑ Index

12. Anny Ballardini

Re: SAVE THE GULF-- SAN FRANCISCO-- SHOW YOUR SUPPORT!!-- JULY 2

Wed 30 Jun 2010

I will always support you. Take it easy Michael.
I am flying tomorrow morning to San Miguel De Allende to meet my UNO people.

Take care, Anny

On Mon, Jun 28, 2010 at 7:03 PM, Michael <[redacted]> wrote:

> SAN FRANCISCO Save The Gulf Benefit for The Louisiana Bucket Brigade
> Rockpile and The Rabbles
> with David Meltzer, Michael Rothenberg, Terri Carrion, Clark Coolidge and Gloria Frym
> Friday, July 2, 8pm
> The Counterpulse, 1310 Mission at 9th
> San Francisco, CA
>
> SHOW YOUR SUPPORT!!

--
Anny Ballardini
http://annyballardini.blogspot.com/
http://www.fieralingue.it/modules.php?name=poetshome
http://www.lulu.com/content/5806078
http://www.moriapoetry.com/ebooks.html
I Tell You: One must still have chaos in one to give birth to a dancing star!
Friedrich Nietzsche

« Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique
vatibus occurras, periturae parcere chartae »
Giovenale

↑ Index

13. William Slaughter

New Mudlark Poster

Wed 30 Jun 2010

New and On View: Mudlark Poster No. 88 (2010)

Collaborative Poems by James Bertolino & Anita K. Boyle

Sugar Zen | Clarified | Saying Hello

James Bertolino's poetry has been published internationally, and collected in ten volumes from such publishers as Copper Canyon Press, New Rivers Press, Carnegie Mellon University Press, and the Quarterly Review of Literature Award Series. His most recent volume, Finding Water, Holding Stone, was published in 2009 by Cherry Grove Collections. His fellowship awards and residencies have come from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Book-of-the-Month Club, the Djerassi Foundation and the Espy Foundation. He received his MFA at Cornell University, and has taught creative writing at Cornell, University of Cincinnati, Western Washington University and, for 2005-06, was Writer-in-Residence and Hallie Ford Chair of Creative Writing at Willamette University in Oregon. In 2007 he received the Jeanne Lohmann Poetry Prize for Washington State poets. He lives outside Bellingham, Washington in the shadow of Mt. Baker, where he has retired to full-time writing.

Anita K. Boyle's poems have appeared in Indiana Review, StringTown, The Raven Chronicles, Spoon River Poetry Review, Crab Creek Review, Stories With Grace, Margin, and in the anthologies Red Sky Morning and Saints of Hysteria: A Half-Century of Poetry Collaboration in America. She was a winner of Seattle's 2004 Red Sky Poetry Theatre competition and, for the month of October, 2003, had an Espy Foundation writer's residency near the Pacific Ocean in Oysterville, Washington. Her books include Bamboo Equals Loon and, in collaboration with James Bertolino, Bar Exams and Pub Proceedings from Egress Studio Press.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

14. William Allegrezza

Literary Reading in Chicago: Gizzi, Clifford, and Mukerjee

Wed 30 Jun 2010

Poetry Reading. Wednesday, July 7 Series A 7-8pm Series A reading series is dedicated to showcasing experimental writing in the US and the Midwest through readings, discussion and performance. Organized by Indiana University Northwest faculty member William Allegrezza, this series brings exciting writers to the Art Center to share their work. On July 7th from 7 to 8pm, writers Peter Gizzi, Pat Clifford, and Aryanil Mukherjee will share their work. This event is free at the Hyde Park Art Center, 5020 S. Cornell Ave., Chicago. For more information call [redacted] or visit www.hydeparkart.org

↑ Index

15. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Closing Eyes Blazing Life" by Sarah Ahmad.

Wed 30 Jun 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Closing Eyes Blazing Life" by Sarah Ahmad.

Description:

Sarah Ahmad's "Closing Eyes Blazing Life" consists of neo-vignettes fabricated from the chaos of absurdity that is the background noise to the human experience, and which encircles us like a demented throng.

Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/closing-eyes-blazing-life/11599164

↑ Index

16. Nicholas Karavatos

at Bird & Beckett in San Francisco, CA on Monday, July 5

Wed 30 Jun 2010

Bird & Beckett welcomes poets Nicholas Karavatos & Dee Allen

Date: Monday, July 5, 2010
Time: 7:00pm - 9:00pm
Location: Bird & Beckett
Street: 653 Chenery St.
City/Town: San Francisco, CA
http://www.facebook.com/event.php?eid=139473502735708&ref=nf

NICHOLAS KARAVATOS is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa’s Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review (University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009).
http://www.amazon.com/dp/0984280006/ref=cm_sw_su_dp

David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: “Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity.”

Nicholas Karavatos lives near Dubai, teaching at the American University of Sharjah in the United Arab Emirates. Previously he taught in Muscat, Sultanate of Oman. He is a graduate of New College of California and Humboldt State University.

http://www.birdbeckett.com/

Nicholas Karavatos' next poetry reading/book-signing is sponsored by the Oregon Literary Review and will be in Portland, OR on Wednesday, July 7 at Blackbird Wine Shop.

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

17. twshaner
Wig 2
Wed 30 Jun 2010

Our second issue of Wig is finally out! Please see below if you're interested in ordering a copy.

WIG 2
edited by Kristen Gallagher and Tim Shaner

Contributors: Steve Benson, Laynie Browne, Del Ray Cross, Thom Donovan, Patrick Durgin, William Fuller, Kristen Gallagher, Judith Goldman, Brandon Holmquest, Rodney Koeneke, Richard Kostelanetz, Bill Marsh, Tim Shaner, Sigmund Shen, and Carol Szymanski.

Wig is a low-budget magazine devoted to poetry and art that appropriates the job for its own artistic purposes. Not always â€œaboutâ€ work, the wig-artist may employ his or her labor for poetic or artistic ends that implicitly critique the virtue of productivity through the act of poaching company time and/or materials. The wig-artist often â€œwrites workâ€ (Spahr) in relation to a â€œlaboring societyâ€ (Arendt) that has little or no appreciation for the work of making art. The form of the work will often reflect compromised time and/or attention. The title of the magazine alludes to Michel de Certeauâ€™s discussion of la perruque: â€œthe workerâ€™s own work disguised as work for his employers.â€ â€œIt was a typical entry level job. I tried during my job to do my other work, that without an economy, only to realize there was little hope. This was my attempt to get around the problem and write work. [...] I collected notes from my bossâ€™s memos, things I had seen [or] over-heard. I collected them into one long stream of day/text and barely edited them.â€ â€“Juliana Spahr, Live

â€œThe limits imposed by work represent not simply an obstacle but an opportunity for writingâ€”not least because the workplace is the site of common activity and therefore enables us to bear witness to our common experience.â€ â€“Kit Robinson, â€œTime and Materialsâ€

â€œThere is no use being alive if one must work. The event from which each of us is entitled to expect the revelation of his own lifeâ€™s meaningâ€”that event which I may not have found, but on whose path I seek myselfâ€”is not earned by work.â€ â€“AndrÃ© Breton, Nadja

To order a copy contact Tim Shaner @ twshaner [at] comcast [dot] net OR send a check for $10 made out to Tim Shaner to Tim Shaner, 130 E. 49th Ave, Eugene, OR 97405

↑ Index

18. steve dalachinsky

poems by dalachinsky

Thu 1 Jul 2010

---

2 of my poems and a collage are up at http://blogs.forward.com/the-arty-semite/129009/

↑ Index

19. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Playz" by Alan Sondheim

Thu 1 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Playz" by Alan Sondheim.
Description:
In "Playz" by Alan Sondheim, extreme base desires take over base desires, control becomes politics becomes control, and zaniness is exposed as violence, sex, arousal and betrayal.

Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/playz/11601170

↑ Index

20. mIEKAL aND
F-E-R-M-E-N-T-A-T-I-O-N
Thu 1 Jul 2010

F-E-R-M-E-N-T-A-T-I-O-N

Juice begins the journey to wine as all the world clanks & squeaks to the changes.

http://vimeo.com/12903161

↑ Index

21. Aldonlnielsen
Re: new U.S. laureate
Thu 1 Jul 2010

W.S. Merwin is the new Poet Laureate.

Aldon Lynn Nielsen

Kelly Professor of American Literature
Department of English
117 Burrowes Building
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA
16802-6200

I never wanted to be the man who broke your heart --
Only wanted to be the man who wrote the song --

That broke your heart

↑ Index

22. David Chirot
Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
Thu 1 Jul 2010

Ginserg's Fall of America and kerouc's posthumous Scattered Poems came out (i think also Poems all Sizes might have been in 1971)

I remember quite vividly reading both of those that summer--(Scattered Poems & Fall of America)--

Ted Berrigan published in 1971 A Train Ride and Memorial Day (with Anne Waldman)--i read those in '71 as a friend in NYC who worked in a bookstore gave them to me as "part of my new york experience"

i also read Frank O'Hara for the first time--Lunch Poems and Meditations in an Emergency--i had found both at a yard sale-- other poets i remember reading that year though the spefic works not published in 1971 (in a way a book when one reads it is "new, of that year" when one first reads it--)

Blaise Cendrars poetry books (in French)
Picasso--Hunk of Skin (city lights)
Spanish Poems of Protest--Kennth Rexroth editor the 1855 Edition of Leaves of Grass with famous Malcolm Cowley intro-Capitale de la Douleur--Paul Eluard
Mayakovsky's poems then out in English-Russian Futurism--history/with tons of poems) by V Markov Poetry & Plays by Lorca--esp Poet in New York-Dada Painters & Poets--ed by Robert Motherwell reread complete Baudelaire & Rimbaud in French reread Aurelia by Gerard de nerval (prose poem/autobiographical accounts of his madness--)
 i french)
Nerval poetry in French--Les Chimeres--incredible book!
Henri Michaux--Miserable Miracle
Novalis--poetry prose works in english
Emily Dickinson--poetry & letters (reread)
Apollinaire--Calligrammes, Alcools
(reread)
Sappho (reread)
(i usually reread my favorite poets over again every two or every one year--) that's all i can recall off top of my head-- along with poetry in various journals pub in nyc my friend turned me on to-- new directions grove and city lights i wd always look for to see what foreign poetry they might have-- the nyc writers i found in journals were the ones one would expect to find that time period-- also Ezra Pound though can't recall which particular ones--my gfather was a Poundian so he had a huge Pound collection-- Gertrude Stein--whatever i cd find)-- Nicanor Parra--Antipoems

Vicente huidobro--selected poems--
Bert Brecht--poems
Pasternak--poetry & memoirs-
American Indian poetry--various collections-- Clark Coolidge--Space (as i recall)

it was a very vivid year so recal those books pretty vividly-- for the heck of it i looked up on line to see what may have happened in poetry world that year for example:

(just a couple ones picked at random--)

John Berryman died, as did Stevie Smith; Pablo Neruda won the Nobel Prize
Jom Morrison, poet of the Lizard King--died

Ted Berrigan published A Train Ride and memorial Day (with Anne Waldman)

Patti Smith gave her first reading accompanied by guitar (Lenny Kaye)--2 years later her group was founded and first LP followed--

On Tue, Jun 29, 2010 at 8:25 PM, Mark Melnicove <[redacted]>wrote:

> Something Else Press (Dick Higgins) published Bern Porter's I'VE LEFT in 1971.
>
> ———
>
> From: George Bowering [mailto:[redacted]]
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Fri, 25 Jun 2010 16:53:32 -0400
> Subject: Re: Query: Poetry Benchmarks 1971
>
> The publication of bpNichol's Monotones.
> (He published 4 books that year!)
>
> On Jun 24, 2010, at 12:52 PM, R Levitsky wrote:
>
> > Dear Friends,
> > What would you put on a list of significant poetry moments of 1971?
> > Thank you for your help!
> > Rachel Levitsky
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > ==========
> > welcome.html
> >

> Mr. G.H. Bowering
> Does not get up immoderately early.

↑ Index

23. David Chirot

Fwd: ACLU: Who knows what books you buy?

Thu 1 Jul 2010

[image: Because Freedom Can't Protect Itself]<http://action.aclu.org/site/R?i=BkQlmJdq6VUrZDe4wjmbxQ..> Dear ACLU Supporter,

<http://action.aclu.org/site/R?i=HTpVXEF3sxhrgqG9swNqIw..>

The books, music and movies you browse or buy online can reveal private and profoundly intimate information about your life. It's time to upgrade the Electronic Communications Privacy Act to keep our personal information safe.

<http://action.aclu.org/site/R?i=ujt2wkSoR6eU1TGFTUPEcg..> Can government agencies conduct sweeping collections of your most personal and private information, including the books you buy online?

That fundamental question is at stake in an ACLU lawsuit we just filed. The ACLU intervened in an existing Amazon.com lawsuit to resist the North Carolina Department of Revenue's demand that Amazon turn over thousands of customers' records.

The laws governing electronic privacy haven't been updated since 1986—before the Internet as we know it even existed. The books, music and movies you browse or buy online can reveal private and profoundly intimate information about your life. It's time to upgrade the Electronic Communications Privacy Act (ECPA) to keep our personal information safe.

Tell Congress to update our privacy laws and keep your information personal, private and protected.<http://action.aclu.org/site/R?i=h72slccOMiF6Rnqf38ItjQ..>

Our anonymous clients in the Amazon.com lawsuit include:

- Jane Doe 1, who purchased books on self-help and how to get a divorce and a restraining order after her former spouse threatened to kill her. - Jane Doe 2, the general counsel of a global corporation, who purchased books and movies with overt political leanings as well as books that may reveal her religious beliefs. - Jane Doe 3, who purchased books on mental health in order to better understand the conditions afflicting her former spouse, including "Stop Walking on Eggshells: Taking Your Life Back When Someone You Care About Has Borderline Personality Disorder."

If the North Carolina government gets its way, this information—and the personal records of thousands of others—will be in government hands. We've gone to court to stop this massive invasion of privacy and free speech rights. But we must stop it from happening in the future.

Tell Congress to strengthen personal privacy laws to prevent unreasonable government demands for our most personal electronic information.<http://action.aclu.org/site/R?i=rRsrSTTtXzLg26GjG9-hTA..>

Amazon has refused to yield to the unreasonable demands for detailed information about what specific individuals are buying online. As part of a tax audit, it has already handed over lists of the exact items purchased and their cost. But North Carolina has refused to relent in its belief that it is also entitled to know the identities of purchasers.

It shouldn't take either Amazon standing tall or the ACLU intervening to prevent this kind of abuse. We should have clear laws that safeguard our private records, especially when they involve expressive materials like books.

Tell your members of Congress it's time to update and strengthen privacy laws. <http://action.aclu.org/site/R?i=UdXJrERIwchST1Ky2UnkrA..>

Thank you for taking action on this vitally important effort to defend personal privacy.

Sincerely, [image: Anthony D. Romero] [image: Anthony D. Romero]
Anthony D. Romero
Executive Director
ACLU
[image: Donate Today]<http://action.aclu.org/site/R?i=bwhc5_3jRC2PXJRMACkKAA..>
[image: Tell a Friend]<http://action.aclu.org/site/R?i=zAdpeoyfFK0u22Fir727wQ..>

© ACLU, 125 Broad Street, 18th Floor, New York, NY 10004

Unsubscribe from receiving email, or change your email preferences.<http://action.aclu.org/site/CO?i=2kOKczSXj69F59NiDlVtDhzUejSEYJv1&cid=0>

↑ Index

24. Rob McLennan
[[redacted]: Puritan X]
Thu 1 Jul 2010

Friends,

The Puritan is back with a brand-spanking new tenth issue! It's jam-packed with eye-popping poetry and spine-tingling fiction that is guaranteed to please.

We realize that this is a bit of a belated announcement as the issue has been online for a while now. Thank you for your patience as we ironed out the wrinkles. This tenth issue marks a bit of a milestone for our humble publication and we would not have been able to do it without your support.

Enjoy.

Love always,

Spencer, Andrew, and Tyler

--
The Puritan: Frontiers of New English Toronto, Ontario, Canada
www.puritan-magazine.com
[redacted]

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

25. Alan Sondheim
BP is burning endangered sea turtles alive (fwd)
Thu 1 Jul 2010

This message is in MIME format. The first part should be readable text, while the remaining parts are likely unreadable without MIME-aware tools.

--0-424324221-1278009926=:28119

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Thu, 1 Jul 2010 11:50:08
From: "Steven Biel, MoveOn.org Political Action" <[redacted]>
To: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
Subject: BP is burning endangered sea turtles alive

Click here to sign the petition:
"BP: Stop blocking the rescue of endangered sea turtles before you burn them alive in your 'controlled burns.'"

[button_red_signpetition.gif] Sign the petition

Dear MoveOn member,

News recently emerged from the Gulf Coast that BP is burning endangered sea turtles alive.1

That's right. BP is using "controlled burns" to contain the oil spill, and any turtles that are not removed from the area before the fire is lit are literally burned alive.

A boat captain who has been leading efforts to rescue the endangered turtles says BP has blocked his crews from entering the areas where the animals are trapped, effectively shutting down the rescue operation.

With BP already facing so much public outrage, we can stop this. Our friends at Credo Mobile launched a petition demanding that BP stop burning turtles alive, and you can add your name by clicking the link below:Â

http://pol.moveon.org/seaturtles/?id!503-1083850-pJvqBmx&t=5

The petition says: "BP: Stop blocking the rescue of endangered sea turtles before you burn them alive in your 'controlled burns.'"

Then, after you've signed, be sure to share it with your friends on Facebook, Twitter, or by forwarding this email.

The way controlled burns work is that shrimp boats create a corral of oil by dragging together fire-resistant booms and then lighting the enclosed "burn box" on fire. Any animals not removed from the burn area are trapped.Â

The sea turtle most affected by the Gulf of Mexico oil spill is the Kemp's Ridley, which is listed as endangered under the Endangered Species Act.2

"They ran us out of there and then they shut us down. They would not let us get back in there," said turtle rescuer Mike Ellis in an interview with conservation biologist Catherine Craig that was posted on YouTube.3

Environmental groups including the Center for Biological Diversity and Turtle Island Restoration Network have called on BP to end the practice, but BP has refused, denying that there's really any problem. Yesterday, these groups filed a lawsuit demanding that BP take action to protect the endangered turtles.4 But the legal system can work very slowly, and the turtles need help now.

Tell BP to allow the rescue boats back in and stop burning endangered sea turtles alive. Click the link below to sign the petition:

http://pol.moveon.org/seaturtles/?id!503-1083850-pJvqBmx&t=6

Thanks for all you do.

?Steven, Jeff, Duncan, Amy, and the rest of the team

1. "BP 'burning sea turtles alive,'" The Raw Story, June 20, 2010
http://www.moveon.org/r?r‰247&id!503-1083850-pJvqBmx&t=7

2. "Sea Turtles Among Oil Spill Victims," NPR, June 10, 2010
http://www.moveon.org/r?r‰248&id!503-1083850-pJvqBmx&t=8

3. "Venice, Louisiana, Boat Captain, by Catherine Craig," YouTube, June 13, 2010
http://www.moveon.org/r?r‰249&id!503-1083850-pJvqBmx&t=9

4. "Gulf of Mexico sea turtles may be burning with oil, groups plan to sue BP," Miami Herald, June 30, 2010
http://www.moveon.org/r?r‰252&id!503-1083850-pJvqBmx&t

Want to support our work? We're entirely funded by our 5 million members?no corporate contributions, no big checks from CEOs. And our tiny staff ensures that small contributions go a long way. Chip in here.

PAID FOR BY MOVEON.ORG POLITICAL ACTION, http://pol.moveon.org/. Not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee. This email was sent to Alan Sondheim on July 1, 2010. To change your email address or update your contact info, click here. To remove yourself from this list, click here. [o.gif?id!503-1083850-pJvqBmx]

--0-424324221-1278009926=:28119--

↑ Index

26. amy king
Evermore OIL, evermore POEMS
Thu 1 Jul 2010

Evermore OIL flows, evermore POEMS appear --

http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

****

Juice -
+ http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html
+ http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster
+ http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm

+ http://amyking.org
****

↑ Index

27. steve dalachinsky
books and cds you buy
Fri 2 Jul 2010

---

books and cds immediately available

cds:

cd with matthew shipp - $15 phenomena of interference insomnia poems bbc broadcast -$10

various live bootlegs -$10

books:

the final nite: poems for charles gayle $15

logos and language w/ matthew shipp - $20

reaching into the unknown w/ photographer jacques bisceglia 450pages of photos and poems - $50

the mantis: poems for cecil taylor $10

animal people: $6

insomnia poems: $6

christ amongst the fishes: a book of collage $10 shipping cost separate but reasonable

↑ Index

28. Krystal Languell
Bone Bouquet Issue 2 Published
Fri 2 Jul 2010

Bone Bouquet: An Online Journal of Women's Poetry is proud to announce:

The second issue of Bone Bouquet is now posted!

http://bonebouquet.org/issue-2/

Poetry from Sandra Doller, Kate Schapira, Kristy Bowen and ten more female poets! Reading period to re-open in August.

Best wishes,

Krystal Languell

Editor in Chief | Bone Bouquet | www.bonebouquet.org
Senior Editor | Puerto del Sol | www.puertodelsol.org
Senior Editor | Noemi Press | www.noemipress.org

↑ Index

29. Dan Wilcox

News Release: Third Thursday Poetry Night, July 15 - Jason Crane

Fri 2 Jul 2010

The Poetry Motel Foundation

c/o Dan Wilcox

280 South Main Ave.

Albany, NY 12208

[redacted]

> Press Release -- for immediate release <

Poet Jason Crane to read

at the Social Justice Center

Thursday, July 15, 7:30PM

Local poet Jason Crane will read from his work at the Social Justice Center, 33 Central Ave., Albany on Thursday, July 15, 2010 at 7:30PM. Jason Crane hosts the online jazz interview show The Jazz Session (http://thejazzsession.com), featuring in-depth interviews with jazz musicians from around the world. His first collection of poems, “Unexpected Sunlight,” was published earlier this year by FootHills Publishing, and he is the Executive Director of the New York Bicycling Coalition.

A reading by a local or regional poet is held each Third Thursday at the Social Justice Center. The event includes an open mic for audience members to read. Sign-up starts at 7:00PM, with the reading beginning at 7:30. The host of the readings is Albany poet and photographer Dan Wilcox. The suggested donation is $3.00, which helps support this and other poetry programs of the Poetry Motel Foundation, and the work of the Social Justice Center. For more information about this event contact Dan Wilcox, [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted].

The Social Justice Center, founded in 1981, is a non-profit organization working for progressive social change through education, community building and collective action. The center advances the struggles against racism and for peace and justice. For further information about the SJC call [redacted].

#

↑ Index

30. Jennifer Karmin

Requited - issue #3

Fri 2 Jul 2010

REQUITED
http://www.requitedjournal.com

Issue #3
now online!

FICTION
Lydia Ship
James Tadd Adcox
Cami Park
Patrick Crerand
A D Jameson Neil
De La Flor

POETRY
Arlene Ang
Clint Campbell
Nicholas Destino
Daniel Godston
Jennifer Karmin
P. A. Levy
Stefania Irene Marthakis
Kristen Orser
Lana Rakhman
Susan Slaviero

ESSAY
Laura Krughoff
Ish Klein
Carmen Giménez Smith
Tyler Flynn Dorholt

DRAMA
Nathan Child and Andrew K. Peterson

VISUAL / VIDEO
Eula Biss and John Bresland
Suzon Fuks
Fereshteh Toosi
Eric Fleischauer

Todd Mattei
Lindsay Page

↑ Index

31. Nicky Melville selections and dissections
Sat 3 Jul 2010

---

hey,

just wanted to post up a couple of reviews of my book, selections and dissections, with thanks to reviewers Adam Piette and Stephen Nelson.

blackbox manifold:
http://www.manifold.group.shef.ac.uk/issue4/AdamPiette.html

tarpaulin sky: http://tsky-reviews.blogspot.com/2010/04/nick-e-melvilles-selections-and.html

the book's available through me, just backchannel; (or many shops in Edinburgh);
or from Lulu: http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/selections-and-dissections/11269870 aw th best,

nick-e melville

Get a new e-mail account with Hotmail - Free. Sign-up now.

_____
http://clk.atdmt.com/UKM/go/195013117/direct/01/

↑ Index

32. Jeffrey Side
The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Sharks of Mary Shelley” by Jeff Harrison
Sat 3 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œSharks of Mary Shelleyâ€ by Jeff Harrison
Description:
Jeff Harrison's â€œSharks of Mary Shelleyâ€ explores the subterfuges and circumscriptions of the authorial persona before a backdrop of cannibalised historical identities filtered through the ventriloquism of poetic utterances.
Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/sharks-of-mary-shelley/11608088

↑ Index

33. Mary Jo Malo
Mysterious Attribution
Sat 3 Jul 2010

Bill Knott, in his comment on Sharon Messmer's poem, PIMP MY TOP KILL LIVE FEED MOTHERSHIP at POETS FOR LIVING WATERS, writes the following:

Karl Marx said to Heinrich Heine: “Give up these everlasting complaints about love; show these poets how to use a whip.” What makes the Mesmer poem stand out from the others here is the whip of it.

Apparently, the poet John Logan also used it in his opening to A CENTURY PIECE FOR POOR HEINE.

Does anyone know if Marx actually wrote this to Heinrich Heine?

Mary Jo Malo
--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

34. Nicholas Karavatos
at Blackbird Wine Shop - Oregon Literary Review - in Portland on Wednesday, July 7, 2010
Sat 3 Jul 2010

The Oregon Literary Review welcomes poets Nicholas Karavatos, Pat Cason, Jan Priddy, and Susan DeFreitas to the Blackbird Wine Shop in Portland, OR on Wednesday, July 7, 2010 at 7:00pm.

Date: Wednesday, July 7, 2010
Time: 7:00pm - 9:00pm
Location: Blackbird Wine Shop
Street: 3519 NE 44th City/Town: Portland, OR
http://www.facebook.com/event.php?eid=140061199343797

NICHOLAS KARAVATOS is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa’s Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review (University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009).
http://www.amazon.com/dp/0984280006/ref=cm_sw_su_dp

David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: “Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity.”

Nicholas Karavatos lives near Dubai, teaching at the American University of Sharjah in the United Arab Emirates. Previously he taught in Muscat, Sultanate of Oman. He is a graduate of New College of California and Humboldt State University.

http://blackbirdwine.com/
http://orelitrev.startlogic.com/digital/FirstWed.htm
http://orelitrev.startlogic.com/digital/indexnew.htm

Nicholas Karavatos’ next poetry reading / book-signing is sponsored by Third Thursday Poets at the Tea Party Bookshop (oh, currently unfortunate name! ... perhaps redeemed by its address? ..."420 Ferry Street") in Salem, Oregon on Thursday, July 17, 2010.

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

35. Jim Andrews
Netartery
Sun 4 Jul 2010

---

http://netartery.vispo.com is a blog by a group of writers whose individual practices have gone significantly wrong. Recent posts include:

* Nawlz.com, a computer graphic novel -- Jim Andrews
* The Marconi factory beams out one final SOS -- Gregory Whitehead
* Up for the challenge -- Christine Wilks
* On fluid poetry -- Eugenio Tisselli
* Online Russian mag of sound poetry & audio art -- Jim Andrews
* On Pulsate by Andre Michelle -- Jim Andrews
* On using tools made by comrades -- Chris Funkhouser
* 2 short films from ELO Archive & Innovate -- David Jhave Johnston

* The Playground -- Andy Campbell
* Digital Fiction on the iPhone via Flash export? -- Andy Campbell
* The gusher provides the ink -- Gregory Whitehead
* BP Horizon oil spill volume -- Jim Andrews

ja!

↑ Index

36. Mark Young
Now out from Otoliths—"modulations" by Márton Koppány
Sun 4 Jul 2010

---

modulations

Márton Koppány

52 pages, full color

Page size 7½" x 7½"

Otoliths, 2010

ISBN: 978-0-9807651-2-0

$19.99 (currently with free postage in the U.S.A.)

URL: http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/modulations/11269905

Nearly sixty years ago, Charles Olson warned, “The poet cannot afford to traffick in any other sign than his ‘one’,” preparing the way whether he knew it or not for Márton Koppány to take leave of his native Hungarian and to move into English, where for more than two decades he has been creating traffic signs with the gleeful abandon of a deranged city planner with an advanced degree in Dada. Or maybe not so deranged. I read the poems in * modulations* as perfectly sensible, whether fish are emitting thought bubbles in the sky, or a table’s legs are deconstructed to show their essentially asemic nature. Language is our great connecting principle and Koppány’s language artfully breaks, reduces, and repairs poetry with a metaphysician’s discomfort matched with a physician’s healing touch. —Peter O'Leary

There was a time when pictures and writing were not as separate as they are today, a time when the picture was given not just to show but to tell; a sort of “picture-writing.” And each “pictograph” was as an aperçu, at once an insight into and a brief digest of the thought to be communicated. The poet Márton Koppány has found for himself a form most becoming of his intuition; each panel here is an aperçu into that space where picture and writing are one, that space where the mind knows the word in the figure of its substance, that space that is *language-in-eidos. * And so I see Koppány’s panels as “eidographs,” as urtexts of “eidetic poetry.” —*Gregory Vincent St. Thomasino, author of The Logoclasody Manifesto *

What can you say about . . . except that . . . with clouds just where they . . . which is, to say, in short, a master of the . . .,

as well as . . . the. For instance, the refle . . . one poem of the invis. . . stillness ( ), not to exclude (

In

fullest slowest color. —Bob Gru . . . n

* *

The minimalist visual poetry of Márton Koppány has many qualities lifting it high and above most visual poetry composed over the last 100 years in any language. We are fortunate he has chosen to compose in his second language, American English, wedded to discipline. His manifestations always lean forward into the new, not a mere recycling of the old and worn out. It brings smiles, smirks and the belly laugh. It is consistently permeated with the rare characteristic of awe so many others lack and never reach for. And, for me, on too many occasions, his visions give me a jealous wish that it had come my way rather than his. —Karl Kempton

↑ Index

37. William Slaughter

New Mudlark Issue (Chapbook)

Sun 4 Jul 2010

New and On View: Mudlark No. 39 (2010)

3,068,518

An Electronic Chapbook

Poems by Drew Dillhunt

Drew Dillhunt lives in the Beacon Hill neighborhood of Seattle and is co-author, with his father, CX, of the chapbook Double Six (Endeavor, 1994). His writing has appeared in Eclectica, Pitkin Review, Hummingbird: Magazine of the Short Poem, Tarpaulin Sky, and Jacket. He's the author of the poetry manuscript Materials Science, which was selected as a finalist for the National Poetry Series 2009 Open Competition. He has released two albums of his songs, including one with the band Fighting Shy.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

38. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Stories Short and Strange" by Bill Drennan.

Sun 4 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œStories Short and Strangeâ€ by Bill Drennan.

Description:

â€œStories Short and Strangeâ€ is the first volume of a unique collection by Bill Drennan. These tales are typically laced with blends of absurdist science fiction, satire, childish cartoonism and black space humour.
Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/stories-short-and-strange/11612442

↑ Index

39. steve dalachinsky

my first one man show and..

Mon 5 Jul 2010

---

please check out my first one man show of assemblage abnd collage
in lower gallery at fusion arts gallery
57 stanton street manhattan

also i will be reading at the stone with pianist matthew shipp on august 18th at 10pm preceeded by stephanie stone with yuko otomo and eve packer

and

The 1st Annual
Albert Ayler Festival
Record Fair & Musical Celebration

steve dalachinsky will read a poem and mc this event

Saturday July 10th, 2010

Highly influential jazz label teams up with leading experimental curators to honor Albert Ayler on the anniversary of his 74th birthday with a free outdoor day-long tribute concert on Roosevelt Island.

"Music Is the Healing Force of the Universe"

In celebration of the life and music of legendary free-jazz tenor-saxophonist Albert Ayler, ESP-Disk' and Issue Project Room, in conjunction with Roosevelt L!ve have curated a day-long free concert, Saturday July 10th from 2-10pm, in honor of the groundbreaking musician's 74th birthday. With performances by some of the most prolific artists dedicated to pushing the boundaries in the avant-jazz world the same way Ayler did over 40 years ago, this festival will feature sets from The New Atlantis Sextet with Marshall Allen, William Hooker, Charles Gayle, Gunter Hampel, Giuseppi Logan, and more all taking place at RiverWalk Commons on picturesque Roosevelt Island: NYC's Best Kept Secret.

The outdoor festival will also feature a record fair with a variety of new and used vinyl vendors hosted by ESP-Disk's own in-house retail operation, ESP Records.

Great live music, a great selection of vinyl & CDs, great food from the local Roosevelt Island restaurants and a view of Manhattan that can't be beat. What more could a music lover want on a summer day?

Location & Directions:
Riverwalk Commons, Roosevelt Island, New York, F Train to Roosevelt Island Map

www.albertaylerfestival.com
www.esprecodstore.com

Performance Schedule:

2pm
Giuseppi Logan Quartet
Matt Lavelle: trumpet, bass clarinet
Francois Grillot: bass
Dave Miller: drums
Giuseppi Logan: alto sax, bass clarinet (ESP 1007, 1013, 1055)

3pm
Charles Gayle Trio
Michael Wimberly: drums
TBA: bass
Charles Gayle: tenor sax

4pm
Gunter Hampel Trio
Gunter Hampel: vibraphones, bass clarinet (ESP 1042)

5pm
Flow Trio

Louie Belogenis: tenor sax (ESP 4052)

Charles Downs: drums (ESP 4052)

Joe Morris: bass (ESP 4052, 4056)

6pm
William Hooker Trio featuring Sabir Mateen

David Soldier: mandolin, banjo, violin
Sabir Mateen: saxophone, flute, clarinet
William Hooker: drums, spoken word

7pm
New Atlantis Sextet featuring Marshall Allen
Ed Ricart: guitar
Sam Lohman: tba
Andrew Barker: drums
Danny Ray Thompson: flute
Marshall Allen: alto saxophone (ESP 1008, 1014, 1017, 1045, 3033, 4002, 4054, 4060)

8pm
DJ Spun (Rong/DFA)

Saturday July 10, 2010 from 2pm-10pm
$ FREE $

ESP LIVE and Issue Project Room Presents in conjunction with Roosevelt L!ve:
The 1st Annual
Albert Ayler Festival
'Record Fair & Musical Celebration'
Riverwalk Commons, Roosevelt Island, New York

About Albert Ayler (July 13, 1936 – November 25, 1970) "Music is the Healing Force of the Universe," the title of prolific free-jazz musician Ayler's fierce work for the Verve label in 1969, sums up his musical vision and prowess behind the tenor-saxophone. Born July 13th, 1936, Ayler didn’t make his mark playing his way up the ranks in be-bop bands, yet he was exposed to the world of Little Walter inspired R&B and the gritty sounds of the New Orleans tradition. Ayler began making sparse, free arrangements of marching band tunes, brass band explorations, and alto-experimentation that led him to be a driving factor in the careers of everyone from

↑ Index

40. Camille Martin

New @ Rogue Embryo: My Leslie + Gene-Pixel Hybridity

Mon 5 Jul 2010

New @ Rogue Embryo

* Remembering remembering Leslie Scalapino

* Gene-Pixel Hybridity: David Dowker’s Machine Language

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com

Cheers!

Camille Martin

Sonnets:
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html

Codes of Public Sleep :
http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781897388112/codes-of-public-sleep.aspx

↑ Index

41. Gary Sullivan

Poetry comics original art

Mon 5 Jul 2010

I'm selling original art I've done for the "New Life" series of poetry comics, which have appeared in Rain Taxi from 1997-present.

Comics versions of poetry by K. Silem Mohammad, Rod Smith, Katie Degentesh, Tao Lin, Flarf, Basquiat/Kevin Young, and more to come.

See:

http://newlifecomic.blogspot.com

Thanks!

Gary

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

42. Asian Cha
CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS -- "THE CHINA ISSUE"
Tue 6 Jul 2010

Cha: An Asian Literary Journal (http://asiancha.com/) is now accepting submissions for "The China Issue", an edition of the journal devoted exclusively to work from and about contemporary China. The issue, which will be published in June 2011, will feature poetry, fiction, creative non-fiction, scholarly works and visual art exploring the modern Middle Kingdom. We are looking for submissions from a wide range of Chinese and international voices on the social, political and cultural forces which are shaping the country. If you have something interesting, opinionated or fresh to say about China today, we would like to hear from you. Please note that we can only accept submissions in English.

We are pleased to announce that distinguished Chinese scholar and poet Yibing Huang will be joining Cha as guest editor for the issue (see his biography below). Huang has graciously agreed to lend us his extensive knowledge of Chinese literature and keen critical eye to help us select the pieces and shape the issue.

The Reviews section will be devoted exclusively to books related to China. If you have a recent book that you think would be right for review in "The China Issue", we encourage you to contact our Reviews Editor Eddie Tay at [redacted]. Books should be sent to Eddie before the end of March 2011.

If you would like to have work considered for "The China Issue", please submit by email to [redacted] by 15th April, 2011. Please include "The China Issue" in the subject line of the email or your work will automatically be considered for one of the regular issues. Submissions to the issue should conform to our guidelines available at: http://www.asiancha.com/guidelines.

Tammy Ho & Jeff Zroback Cha

blog version: http://asiancha.blogspot.com/2010/07/call-for-submissions-china-issue.html
pdf version: http://asiancha.com/China

 YIBING HUANG was born in Changde, Hunan, China and inherited Tujia ethnic minority blood from his mother. After receiving his B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. in Chinese Literature from Beijing University, he moved to the U.S. in 1993. He holds a second Ph.D. in Comparative Literature from the University of California, Los Angeles. Huang's poetry has been published in China since the 1980s and can be found in many anthologies. As a "blindist," he is the author of two books of poetry: Stone Turtle: Poems 1987-2000 (2005) and Approaching Blindness (2005). Most recently, he published Contemporary Chinese Literature: From the Cultural Revolution to the Future (Palgrave Macmillan, 2007), a book that presents case studies of the generation of Chinese writers which spent its formative years during the Cultural Revolution and focuses on this generation's identity shift from "orphans of history" to "cultural bastards." A traveler in the world who has given poetry readings in China and in the U.S., Huang is currently an associate professor of Chinese at Connecticut College.

↑ Index

43. Eric Elshtain

New Beard of Bees Chapbook

Tue 6 Jul 2010

Beard of Bees gives you

http://www.beardofbees.com/newman.html

to help you become more independent.

Eric Elshtain
Editor
Beard of Bees Press
http://www.beardofbees.com

↑ Index

44. Jeffrey Side

New link for Bill Drennan's “Stories Short and Strange”

Tue 6 Jul 2010

New link for Bill Drennan's â€œStories Short and Strangeâ€:

Description:

â€œStories Short and Strangeâ€ is the first volume of a unique collection by Bill Drennan. These tales are typically laced with blends of absurdist science fiction, satire, childish cartoonism and black space humour.
Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/stories-short-and-strange/11704743

↑ Index

45. Allan Revich

Re: my first one man show and..

Tue 6 Jul 2010

Congratulations Steve!

I wish I could be there for the show.

Allan

On 7/5/2010 8:52 AM, steve dalachinsky wrote:
> please check out my first
> one man show of assemblage abnd collage
> in lower gallery at fusion arts gallery
> 57 stanton street manhattan
>
> also i will be reading at the stone with pianist matthew shipp > on august 18th at 10pm preceeded by stephanie stone with yuko otomo and > eve packer
>
> and
>
> The 1st Annual
> Albert Ayler Festival
> Record Fair& Musical Celebration
>
>
> steve dalachinsky will read a poem and mc this event
>
> Saturday July 10th, 2010
>
>
>
> Highly influential jazz label teams up with leading experimental curators > to honor Albert Ayler on the anniversary of his 74th birthday > with a free outdoor day-long tribute concert on Roosevelt Island.
>
>
> "Music Is the Healing Force of the Universe"
>
>
> In celebration of the life and music of legendary free-jazz > tenor-saxophonist Albert Ayler, ESP-Disk' and Issue Project Room, in > conjunction with Roosevelt L!ve have curated a day-long free concert, > Saturday July 10th from 2-10pm, in honor of the groundbreaking musician's > 74th birthday. With performances by some of the most prolific artists > dedicated to pushing the boundaries in the avant-jazz world the same way > Ayler did over 40 years ago, this festival will feature sets from The New > Atlantis Sextet with Marshall Allen, William Hooker, Charles Gayle,

> Gunter Hampel, Giuseppi Logan, and more all taking place at RiverWalk > Commons on picturesque Roosevelt Island: NYC's Best Kept Secret.
>
> The outdoor festival will also feature a record fair with a variety of > new and used vinyl vendors hosted by ESP-Disk's own in-house retail > operation, ESP Records.
>
> Great live music, a great selection of vinyl& CDs, great food from the > local Roosevelt Island restaurants and a view of Manhattan that can't be > beat. What more could a music lover want on a summer day?
>
> Location& Directions:
> Riverwalk Commons, Roosevelt Island, New York, F Train to Roosevelt > Island Map
>
> www.albertaylerfestival.com
> www.esprecodstore.com
>
>
> Performance Schedule:
>
> 2pm
> Giuseppi Logan Quartet
> Matt Lavelle: trumpet, bass clarinet
> Francois Grillot: bass
> Dave Miller: drums
> Giuseppi Logan: alto sax, bass clarinet (ESP 1007, 1013, 1055)
>
>
> 3pm
> Charles Gayle Trio
> Michael Wimberly: drums
> TBA: bass
> Charles Gayle: tenor sax
>
> 4pm
> Gunter Hampel Trio
> Gunter Hampel: vibraphones, bass clarinet (ESP 1042)
>
> 5pm
> Flow Trio
>

> Louie Belogenis: tenor sax (ESP 4052)
>
> Charles Downs: drums (ESP 4052)
>
> Joe Morris: bass (ESP 4052, 4056)
>
>
>
> 6pm
> William Hooker Trio featuring Sabir Mateen
>
> David Soldier: mandolin, banjo, violin
> Sabir Mateen: saxophone, flute, clarinet
> William Hooker: drums, spoken word
>
>
> 7pm
> New Atlantis Sextet featuring Marshall Allen
> Ed Ricart: guitar
> Sam Lohman: tba
> Andrew Barker: drums
> Danny Ray Thompson: flute
> Marshall Allen: alto saxophone (ESP 1008, 1014, 1017, 1045, 3033, 4002, > 4054, 4060)
>
> 8pm
> DJ Spun (Rong/DFA)
>
>
>
>
>
> Saturday July 10, 2010 from 2pm-10pm
> $ FREE $
>
> ESP LIVE and Issue Project Room Presents in conjunction with Roosevelt
> L!ve:
> The 1st Annual
> Albert Ayler Festival
> 'Record Fair& Musical Celebration'
> Riverwalk Commons, Roosevelt Island, New York
>

>
>
>
> About Albert Ayler
> (July 13, 1936 – November 25, 1970)
> "Music is the Healing Force of the Universe," the title of prolific > free-jazz musician Ayler's fierce work for the Verve label in 1969, sums > up his musical vision and prowess behind the tenor-saxophone. Born July > 13th, 1936, Ayler didn’t make his mark playing his way up the ranks in > be-bop bands, yet he was exposed to the world of Little Walter inspired > R&B and the gritty sounds of the New Orleans tradition. Ayler began > making sparse, free arrangements of marching band tunes, brass band > explorations, and alto-experimentation that led him to be a driving > factor in the careers of everyone from
>
>

↑ Index

46. Rob McLennan

new(ish) on rob's clever blog

Tue 6 Jul 2010

-- Robin Blaser, by Stan Persky and Brian Fawcett
-- 12 or 20 questions: Sarah Selecky
-- Jandak photography: how this photo came to be
-- Ongoing notes: the Toronto Small Press Fair, spring 2010
-- Notes on writing, writing
-- Canada Day, Happy: all about the right kind of cake
-- a night above/ground: Irwin, Anstee + McCann
-- Salmon Publishing, Ireland; a note,
-- if i wrote greeting cards
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Mark Goldstein
-- fwd: new from AngelHousePress: Pirie & mclennan
-- how to save This Ain't the Rosedale Library Bookstore
-- father's day in yorkville
-- Dusie 10: the Canadian issue, edited by rob mclennan
-- The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative
-- rob reads at Toronto RAMPIKE launch, June 24, Toronto
-- nikki reimer, [sic]
-- New American Writing 28
-- Bloomsday, Bloor West;
-- Writing a process; the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education

-- the toronto small press book fair, june 19
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Julie McArthur
-- FORWARD; MTLS - Call for Submissions: Issue 7 and beyond
-- 12 or 20 (small press) questions: Dave Proctor on Wooden Rockets Press
-- 12 or 20 questions: with Susan Tichy
-- Andy Weaver introduction for the TREE Reading Series
-- Margaret Christakos, Welling
-- Sandra Ridley, Fallout

www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at ottawa poetry newsletter
www.ottawapoetry.blogspot.com

+ some other new things at the Chaudiere Booksblog
www.chaudierebooks.blogspot.com

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons
www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

47. CA Conrad lesbians don't want...
Tue 6 Jul 2010

...to be fucked by Billy Collins!

SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!

A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!

What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her body.

Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting his poet laureate prick inside her!

I VOMIT
I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY

Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!

Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me think he needs to read Howe.

When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!

May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!

CAConrad

poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com

MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s: http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com

PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

48. steve dalachinsky

Re: my first one man show and..

Wed 7 Jul 2010

---

thanks
On Tue, 6 Jul 2010 13:32:03 -0400 Allan Revich <[redacted]>
writes:
> Congratulations Steve!
>
> I wish I could be there for the show.
>
> Allan
>
> On 7/5/2010 8:52 AM, steve dalachinsky wrote:
> > please check out my first
> > one man show of assemblage abnd collage

> > in lower gallery at fusion arts gallery
> > 57 stanton street manhattan
> >
> > also i will be reading at the stone with pianist matthew shipp > > on august 18th at 10pm preceeded by stephanie stone with yuko > otomo and
> > eve packer
> >
> > and
> >
> > The 1st Annual
> > Albert Ayler Festival
> > Record Fair& Musical Celebration
> >
> >
> > steve dalachinsky will read a poem and mc this event
> >
> > Saturday July 10th, 2010
> >
> >
> >
> > Highly influential jazz label teams up with leading experimental > curators
> > to honor Albert Ayler on the anniversary of his 74th birthday > > with a free outdoor day-long tribute concert on Roosevelt Island.
> >
> >
> > "Music Is the Healing Force of the Universe"
> >
> >
> > In celebration of the life and music of legendary free-jazz > > tenor-saxophonist Albert Ayler, ESP-Disk’ and Issue Project Room,
> in > > conjunction with Roosevelt L!ve have curated a day-long free > concert,
> > Saturday July 10th from 2-10pm, in honor of the groundbreaking > musician’s > > 74th birthday. With performances by some of the most prolific > artists > > dedicated to pushing the boundaries in the avant-jazz world the > same way
> > Ayler did over 40 years ago, this festival will feature sets from

> The New
> > Atlantis Sextet with Marshall Allen, William Hooker, Charles > Gayle,
> > Gunter Hampel, Giuseppi Logan, and more all taking place at > RiverWalk
> > Commons on picturesque Roosevelt Island: NYC's Best Kept Secret.
> >
> > The outdoor festival will also feature a record fair with a > variety of > > new and used vinyl vendors hosted by ESP-Disk's own in-house > retail > > operation, ESP Records.
> >
> > Great live music, a great selection of vinyl& CDs, great food from
> the > > local Roosevelt Island restaurants and a view of Manhattan that > can't be > > beat. What more could a music lover want on a summer day?
> >
> > Location& Directions:
> > Riverwalk Commons, Roosevelt Island, New York, F Train to > Roosevelt
> > Island Map
> >
> > www.albertaylerfestival.com
> > www.esprecodstore.com
> >
> >
> > Performance Schedule:
> >
> > 2pm
> > Giuseppi Logan Quartet
> > Matt Lavelle: trumpet, bass clarinet
> > Francois Grillot: bass
> > Dave Miller: drums
> > Giuseppi Logan: alto sax, bass clarinet (ESP 1007, 1013, 1055)
> >
> >
> > 3pm
> > Charles Gayle Trio
> > Michael Wimberly: drums
> > TBA: bass

> > Charles Gayle: tenor sax
> >
> > 4pm
> > Gunter Hampel Trio
> > Gunter Hampel: vibraphones, bass clarinet (ESP 1042)
> >
> > 5pm
> > Flow Trio
> >
> > Louie Belogenis: tenor sax (ESP 4052)
> >
> > Charles Downs: drums (ESP 4052)
> >
> > Joe Morris: bass (ESP 4052, 4056)
> >
> >
> >
> > 6pm
> > William Hooker Trio featuring Sabir Mateen
> >
> > David Soldier: mandolin, banjo, violin
> > Sabir Mateen: saxophone, flute, clarinet
> > William Hooker: drums, spoken word
> >
> >
> > 7pm
> > New Atlantis Sextet featuring Marshall Allen
> > Ed Ricart: guitar
> > Sam Lohman: tba
> > Andrew Barker: drums
> > Danny Ray Thompson: flute
> > Marshall Allen: alto saxophone (ESP 1008, 1014, 1017, 1045, 3033, > 4002,
> > 4054, 4060)
> >
> > 8pm
> > DJ Spun (Rong/DFA)
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >

> > Saturday July 10, 2010 from 2pm-10pm
> > $ FREE $
> >
> > ESP LIVE and Issue Project Room Presents in conjunction with > Roosevelt
> > L!ve:
> > The 1st Annual
> > Albert Ayler Festival
> > 'Record Fair& Musical Celebration'
> > Riverwalk Commons, Roosevelt Island, New York
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > About Albert Ayler
> > (July 13, 1936 – November 25, 1970)
> > "Music is the Healing Force of the Universe," the title of > prolific
> > free-jazz musician Ayler's fierce work for the Verve label in > 1969, sums > > up his musical vision and prowess behind the tenor-saxophone. Born
> July > > 13th, 1936, Ayler didn’t make his mark playing his way up the > ranks in > > be-bop bands, yet he was exposed to the world of Little Walter > inspired
> > R&B and the gritty sounds of the New Orleans tradition. Ayler > began > > making sparse, free arrangements of marching band tunes, brass > band > > explorations, and alto-experimentation that led him to be a > driving > > factor in the careers of everyone from
> >
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

49. Jeffrey Side
Amiri Baraka interview at The Argotist Online
Wed 7 Jul 2010

Amiri Baraka interview at The Argotist Online:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Baraka%20interview.htm

Excerpt:
"The official Ivy League University line is that Europe is the place and the culture we Uncle Sam hicks must emulate and imitate. That is why it is still the 'English' department because they are still teaching from the point of view of The US as an English Colony [...] Today the cultural and arts 'police', i.e. the formalist and academic establishment have tried to cover most of the art from the turbulent 60â€™s and 70â€s and reintroduce the passive unmusical self focused academic and formalist models. Most of the poets from the Beat, Black Mountain, San Francisco, New York Movements and Black Arts Movement are rarely published, except occasional mentions of Allen Ginsberg or another prize to John Ashbery. Great poets like Larry Neal or Frank Oâ€™Hara are rarely mentioned."

↑ Index

50. paolo javier
PRJCTNS Summer Finale, 7/11 @ the BPC
Wed 7 Jul 2010

Bowery Poetry Club Hosts Summer Finale of PRJCTNS: A Motion Picture Reading Series July 11th at 6PM Featuring Adam Pendleton and Nada Gordon

Bowery Poetry Club is pleased to announce the summer finale of PRJCTNS: A Motion Picture Reading Series (formerly P||R||O||J||E||C||T||I||O||N|| S) the only event showcase in New York City spotlighting practices specifically at the intersection of poetics, performance, and the moving image, PRJCTNS repositions the reading series as multi-genre platform, retracing its lineage to encompass the historical phenomenon of movie-telling as well as broader histories of performative practice. The upcoming summer finale features multimedia artist Adam Pendleton and Nada Gordon. The performances will be followed by a Q&A with the artists.

Nodding in part to early 20th-century traditions of live film narration like those of Benshi in Japan and Gavrilov Translation in the USSR - often strategies for the ideological control of cinematic content - PRJCTNS emerges alongside recent nationwide recuperations of related practices in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and beyond. The series expands movie-telling's mechanisms of destabilizing visual meaning in considering game-based genres like cartridge hacking and in-game intervention; post-production video editing tactics such as gag dubbing and re-subtitling; as well as electronic techniques of appropriation and misuse including data sculpting, browser poetry, and computational aesthetics.

A multidisciplinary ensemble of poets, filmmakers, musicians, performance artists, scholars, critics, and editors will investigate the implementation of these strategies across the wide spectrum of their respective fields. PRJCTNS presents a series of scenarios whose fundamental components are live narrators textually mediating between spectator and screen, marking the virally trending collective urge to intervene in regulated flows of data in media and information systems.

PRESENTERS

ADAM PENDLETON is a New York based artist, working in multiple media, including silkscreen, installation, performance, sculpture, and text, Pendleton's conceptual practice probes historical consciousness through an investigation of language. Pendleton's work has been exhibited nationally and internationally notably at the Museum of Contemporary Art, Chicago; the Indianapolis Museum of Contemporary Art, Indiana; the Contemporary Arts Museum, Houston; the Studio Museum, New York; the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York; the Stedelijk Museum, Amsterdam; and the Deutsche Guggenheim, Berlin. Recent biennials and exhibitions include Greater New York, MoMA/PS1, Long Island City, New York; The Generational: Younger Than Jesus, New Museum, New York; Performa 07, New York; Manifesta 7, Trentino-South Tyrol, Italy; Object, The Undeniable Success of Operations, Stedelijk Museum, Amsterdam; The Future as Disruption, The Kitchen, New York; Sympathy for the Devil: Art and Rock n' Roll since 1967, Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago, Chicago; After 1968: Contemporary Artists and the Civil Rights Legacy, High Museum, Atlanta; Hey Hey Glossolalia, Creative Time, New York; and Manifesto Marathon at The Serpentine Gallery, London amongst many others.

NADA GORDON is the author of Folly (Roof) V. Imp. (Faux Press), Are Not Our Lowing Heifers Sleeker Than Night-Swollen Mushrooms? (Spuyten Duyvil), Foriegnn Bodie [stet], (Detour) and (with Gary Sullivan) Swoon (Granary Books), an e-pistolary [stet] non-fiction novel. Scented Rushes is forthcoming from Roof in the fall. Her interests include: biodiversity, enka, alternative pedagogies, home couture, free color samples, canon destruction, movie repurposing, felines, spice, rufflers, peoples of the world, soups and salads, decorative papers, temporary dependent zones, sparrows, and theories. Visit her blog at http://ululate.blogspot.com/.

CURATORS

JEREMY JF THOMPSON is the author of Autographography, forthcoming from Cuneiform Press. He received an MFA in Poetics from Mills College in 2006. He is the curator of the Oakland-based series Plastique: A Gallery of Poetics, and more recently Textform, a Center for Book Arts reading series. His practice seeks to investigate the process of collaboration and the notion of a practical avant-garde. He has presented his work at Performance Space 122, Galapagos Art Space, Bowery Poetry Club, the Poetry Project, Poets' Theater, the Supermachine Series, the Front Room Gallery, the University of Miami, and the Kelly Writers House at the University of Pennsylvania. His work has appeared in the Houston Literary Review, Cricket Online Review, EAOGH, and Viz. Inter-Arts: a Trans-Genre Anthology. He most recently contributed to EDIT: Performing Networked Publishing orchestrated in conjunction with the release of Tan Lin's Seven Controlled Vocabularies. * PAOLO JAVIER* is the newly-appointed Queens Borough Poet Laureate. He is the author of two full-length poetry collections and four chapbooks, and runs 2nd Avenue Poetry, a tiny press devoted to innovative language art.

For additional information, please contact Paolo Javier and Jeremy JF Thompson at [redacted], or visit the PRJCTNS Facebook Group.

*PRJCTNS Summer Finale
Sunday, July 11th
Bowery Poetry Club
6:00PM - 7:30PM
$6 At the Door
Full Bar Available

Bowery Poetry Club is located at:
308 Bowery
(Between Houston & Bleecker)
New York, NY 10012-2802
[redacted]*

--
http://blog.myspace.com/paolojavier
http://queenspoetlore.tumblr.com/

↑ Index

51. Maria Damon
Re: lesbians don't want...
Wed 7 Jul 2010

---

hear hear. i heard it too. it was the most simultaneously hubristic and pathetic sex fantasy (and the least turn-on) I've ever heard. eeeeew!

CA Conrad wrote:
> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>
> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>
> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily
> Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing > someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly > cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>
> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual > preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a > lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS > poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, > and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little > sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her > body.
>
> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT > very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting > his poet laureate prick inside her!
>
> I VOMIT
> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY
>
> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes
> such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES > AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE > WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>
> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the > way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me > think he needs to read Howe.
>
> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for > every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, > I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>
> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear
> Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how > he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!

>
> CAConrad
>
> poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com
>
> TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com
>
> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s:
> http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com
>
> PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
>

↑ Index

52. Séamas Cain

Fwd: The death of Andrei Voznesensky

Wed 7 Jul 2010

_____

http://www.independent.co.uk/news/obituaries/andrei-voznesensky-poet-who-fought-against-artistic-censorship-in-the-soviet-union-2018291.html

Regards,

Séamas Cain
http://seamascain-writernetwork.org

_____

↑ Index

53. Gloria Frym

Re: lesbians don't want...

Wed 7 Jul 2010

Go CA! There's all kinds of new conjectural/fantasy bio material out there, including the bio that posits epilepsy and the wacked novel, The Secret Life of Emily Dickinson, replete with an image of a see-through skirt. None of this has any bearing on the poems. The industry with which these writers produce might be better applied to close reading. Gloria Frym

On 7/6/2010 7:08 PM, CA Conrad wrote:
> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>

> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>
> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily
> Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing > someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly > cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>
> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual > preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a > lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS > poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, > and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little > sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her > body.
>
> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT
> very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting > his poet laureate prick inside her!
>
> I VOMIT
> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY
>
> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes
> such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES > AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE > WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>
> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the > way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me > think he needs to read Howe.
>
> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for
> every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, > I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>
> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear
> Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how > he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!
>
> CAConrad
>

> poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com
>
> TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com
>
> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING& other videos and MP3s:
> http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com
>
> PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
>
>
>
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
> Version: 9.0.830 / Virus Database: 271.1.1/2986 - Release Date: 07/06/10 11:36:00
>
>

↑ Index

54. John Cleary

Re: lesbians don't want...

Wed 7 Jul 2010

Could someone explain whether or not Emily Dickinson's sexual preference should matter in an understanding and appreciation of her work? Should I care, does it inform me somehow, to know if a writer is gay or not?

I am not being snarky, I am legitimately wondering.

On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 10:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:

> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>
> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>
> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>
> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her body.

Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting his poet laureate prick inside her!

I VOMIT
I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY

Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!

Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me think he needs to read Howe.

When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!

May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!

CAConrad

poetryisthecenterofmyworld:
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>

TAROT READINGS:
http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com<http://caconradtarot.blogspot.com/>

MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s:
http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com <http://caconradmp3.blogspot.com/>

PhillySound: new poetry:
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

55. Daniel Godston
interview with Vanessa Place
Wed 7 Jul 2010

Hi,

Recently I interviewed Vanessa Place. You can read the interview by clicking on this link: http://tinyurl.com/2folm5j

Cheers,

Dan

↑ Index

56. Angela Vasquez-Giroux
Re: lesbians don't want...
Wed 7 Jul 2010

CA, I am marooned in missouri without civilization or internet connection, yet I feel prone to respond. While I was utterly bowled over by 'Nine Horses' -- much to my surprise -- I am utterly disgusted by the recurring trope of "all she needs is a night with me."

Also, Terri Gross is simply horrid.

Thanks for sharing.

On 7/7/10, John Cleary <[redacted]> wrote:
> Could someone explain whether or not Emily Dickinson's sexual preference > should matter in an understanding and appreciation of her work? Should I > care, does it inform me somehow, to know if a writer is gay or not?
>
> I am not being snarky, I am legitimately wondering.
>
> On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 10:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>>
>> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>>
>> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily
>> Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing >> someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly >> cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>>
>> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible

sexual
>> preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a >> lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS >> poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, >> and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little >> sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her >> body.
>>
>> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT
>> very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting >> his poet laureate prick inside her!
>>
>> I VOMIT
>> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY
>>
>> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes
>> such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES >> AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS
TO HIM THAT HE >> WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>>
>> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by
the
>> way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me >> think he needs to read Howe.
>>
>> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for
>> every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, >> I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>>
>> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear >> Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how
>> he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!
>>
>> CAConrad
>>
>> poetryisthecenterofmyworld:
>> http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> TAROT READINGS:
>> http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com<http://caconradtarot.blogspot.com/>

>>
>> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s:
>> http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com <http://caconradmp3.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> PhillySound: new poetry:
>> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>
>

--
Sent from my mobile device

↑ Index

57. Catherine Daly
Re: lesbians don't want...
Wed 7 Jul 2010

He wrote this poem a loong time ago. I've got a parody of it in my unpublished chap of poems I hate turned into love poems. I've got one in there for Marvin Bell's Emily Dickinson poem, too.

There's an ENTIRE anthology of questionable Emily Dickinson poems.

Janet Holmes MS OF MY KIN is pretty nice, tho.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

58. Mary Kasimor
Re: lesbians don't want...
Wed 7 Jul 2010

This specific interview sounds horrible, but why do you say that Terry Gross is simply horrible? I don't listen to her very much, so I am not terribly familiar with her interviewing style. I am just curious.

Mary
--- On Wed, 7/7/10, Angela Vasquez-Giroux <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Angela Vasquez-Giroux <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: lesbians don't want...
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, July 7, 2010, 1:37 PM

CA, I am marooned in missouri without civilization or internet connection, yet I feel prone to respond. While I was utterly bowled over by 'Nine Horses' -- much to my surprise -- I am utterly disgusted by the recurring trope of "all she needs is a night with me."

Also, Terri Gross is simply horrid.

Thanks for sharing.

On 7/7/10, John Cleary <[redacted]> wrote:
> Could someone explain whether or not Emily Dickinson's sexual preference > should matter in an understanding and appreciation of her work? Should I > care, does it inform me somehow, to know if a writer is gay or not?
>
> I am not being snarky, I am legitimately wondering.
>
> On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 10:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>>
>> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>>
>> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily
>> Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing >> someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly >> cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>>
>> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible
sexual
>> preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a >> lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS >> poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, >> and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little >> sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her >> body.
>>
>> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT
>> very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting >> his poet laureate prick inside her!

>>
>> I VOMIT
>> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY
>>
>> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes
>> such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES >> AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS
TO HIM THAT HE >> WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>>
>> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by
the
>> way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me >> think he needs to read Howe.
>>
>> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for
>> every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, >> I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>>
>> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear >> Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see
how
>> he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!
>>
>> CAConrad
>>
>> poetryisthecenterofmyworld:
>> http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> TAROT READINGS:
>> http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com<http://caconradtarot.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s:
>> http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com <http://caconradmp3.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> PhillySound: new poetry:
>> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>
>

--
Sent from my mobile device

↑ Index

59. Sarah Fox
Re: lesbians don't want...
Wed 7 Jul 2010

Susan Howe's MED is my favorite book of lit crit/biography, I would even favorite it categorized as poetry, and now that it's recently reprinted obviously every library should have it! I will join that crusade. And can't WAIT to read Undressing Billy Collins! HAVE FUN!

Your fan,

S. Fox

On Wed, Jul 7, 2010 at 1:44 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]> wrote:

> He wrote this poem a loong time ago. I've got a parody of it in my unpublished chap of poems I hate turned into love poems. I've got one in there for Marvin Bell's Emily Dickinson poem, too.
>
> There's an ENTIRE anthology of questionable Emily Dickinson poems.
>
> Janet Holmes MS OF MY KIN is pretty nice, tho.
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

↑ Index

60. Aldonlnielsen
Re: lesbians don't want...
Wed 7 Jul 2010

---

the form of the question is a bit odd - "should" it make a difference? - there must be an entire series of presuppositions in place about the reading of poetry before anyone can answer that one.

"does" it make a difference? it already has if we ask the question.

Aldon Lynn Nielsen

Kelly Professor of American Literature
Department of English
117 Burrowes Building
The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, PA
16802-6200

I never wanted to be the man who broke your heart --
Only wanted to be the man who wrote the song --

That broke your heart

On Jul 7, 2010, at 8:08 AM, John Cleary <[redacted]> wrote:

> Could someone explain whether or not Emily Dickinson's sexual preference should matter in an understanding and appreciation of her work? Should I care, does it inform me somehow, to know if a writer is gay or not?
>
> I am not being snarky, I am legitimately wondering.
>
> On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 10:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>
> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>
> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>
> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her body.
>
> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting his poet laureate prick inside her!
>
> I VOMIT
> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY
>
> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM

> THAT HE > WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>
> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me think he needs to read Howe.
>
> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>
> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!
>
> CAConrad
>
> poetryisthecenterofmyworld:
> http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>
>
> TAROT READINGS:
> http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com<http://caconradtarot.blogspot.com/>
>
> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s:
> http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com <http://caconradmp3.blogspot.com/>
>
> PhillySound: new poetry:
> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

61. CA Conrad

Re: lesbians don't want...

Wed 7 Jul 2010

Maria, Gloria, Angela, Catherine, YES, thank you! SOLIDARITY WITH EMILY! (Catherine I'd love to see your poem!) And I actually had no idea that his poem was old. He's such a drag.

John, the thing I try to make clear in my post is that it's VERY IMPORTANT information to Collins.

Hearing him talk with Terry Gross completely grossed me out. First, sticking with the issue at hand, in his preface to reading his poem he is literally saying that THAT poem puts to rest the argument of her sexuality. As though all she needed was ONE NIGHT with Billy Zoom-Zoom Collins and she would be off women! His language suggests he is an antidote to an illness, or something. But he's clearly masturbated thinking about bringing Emily Dickinson to her senses. I VOMIT AGAIN FOR HER! And WHY didn't Terry Gross confront him???? I don't get it. What a lousy form for an interview! TELL HIM HE'S A JOKE! For crying out loud someone has to!

The OTHER crime is how he discusses her poems. Simple this, and simple that. She's so simple. He talks as if she GOT LUCKY a lot when writing, or something. He didn't even allow her the surrealism in her poems, linking that to a regional view of the world. WHO INVITED HIM TO WRITE THIS INTRODUCTION TO HER NEW COLLECTION? It's horrible that it's him! They should have invited Susan Howe to write an introduction and edit the collection.

Abhorrent man that Billy Phil Collins! And his poems stink!

CAConrad

poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com

MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s: http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com

PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

62. Calum Gardner

Re: lesbians don't want...

Wed 7 Jul 2010

I feel inclined to stick up for him a little. I admit "Taking Off Emily Dickinson's Clothes" seems straightforwardly abhorrent. Like, the line "it was like riding a swan into the night": that line for me fell out of the offensive tree and hit every branch on the way down. So: was it pushed? Looked at with critical detachment, can this poem possibly not be DESIGNED to excruciate?

Calum

On 7 Jul 2010, at 03:08, CA Conrad wrote:

> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>
> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>
> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!

What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her body.

Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting his poet laureate prick inside her!

I VOMIT
I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY

Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!

Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me think he needs to read Howe.

When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!

May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!

CAConrad

poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com

MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s: http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com

PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

63. Nana Zabic
Re: lesbians don't want...
Thu 8 Jul 2010

CA et co.,

Billy Collins is more on the periphery of my world, a name whose bad poems often appear in poetry textbooks I peruse to decide what to use when I teach. I used to listen to NPR as white noise, but then I couldn't stand it even as that, so I stopped listening quite a while ago, and I didn't hear that interview. But based on what I know, I wanna put it out there that non-lesbians also don't want to be fucked by Billi Collins. Yuuuuck.

CA, I think the best revenge is for you to write that poem "Undressing Billy Collins" if you can, but I understand if you're too repulsed.

Snezana

On Wed, Jul 7, 2010 at 1:44 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]> wrote:
> He wrote this poem a loong time ago. I've got a parody of it in my > unpublished chap of poems I hate turned into love poems. I've got one in > there for Marvin Bell's Emily Dickinson poem, too.
>
> There's an ENTIRE anthology of questionable Emily Dickinson poems.
>
> Janet Holmes MS OF MY KIN is pretty nice, tho.
>
>
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
>

↑ Index

64. Christine Hamm
Re: POETICS Digest - 6 Jul 2010 to 7 Jul 2010 (#2010-158)
Thu 8 Jul 2010

---

submit to [redacted]

L
ALL SUBMISSIONS ARE DUE JULY 15TH!!

submit to [redacted]

Like a Fat Gold Watch: I am collecting an anthology of poems and more that celebrate Sylvia Plathâ€™s life and works, but do not fetishize her suicide and death. Please submit your work about Sylvia Plath for an anthology to come out in Fall of 2011. All texts/images must be either a response to her work, or her life, with one caveat â€” they cannot be about death or suicide. Work will be looked at more favorably if it responds to, for example, The Bee Poems, rather than â€œDaddyâ€ or â€œLady Lazarusâ€. The book will be published through Fat Gold Watch Press. Authors will get reduced price copies.

Please send three to five poems, 1 essay, or 1 short story as either an rtf or doc attachment. For art (black and white only), send a low res jpg -- if I am interested, I will ask for a higher res version. For the subject heading, please write, Sylvia and your name. For the cover letter, please include a short bio â€” 150 words or less, and describe how your poems are a response to her work or life. If thereâ€™s a particular poem you are responding to, please tell me its name. Submissions are due July 15, 2010, and you should hear back by September 15. I am also considering essays, shorter than ten pages (double spaced), and black and white artwork.

The anthology will not be published if there is an insufficient amount of submissions.

Send submissions to: [redacted].
Christine Hamm

_____

www.christinehamm.com

↑ Index

65. David Chirot

Re: lesbians don't want...//geological survey of ED bio-fantasies--

Thu 8 Jul 2010

"To shut the eyes is travel," Emily Dickinson wrote--
"I have but to cross the room to reach the Spice Islands."

(Who knows, some psycho-babble--fantasy bio of today might say to "reach the Spice Girls"--??--)

One might do a kind of geological survey of the succeeding strati of the investigations into ED's life, decade by decade, and "decode" this as a seismograph of the changing popular fads decade by decade for "psycho-biographical interpretations . . . "-- running one's eyes along the shelves of Dickinson lore, editions of Dickinson-- one faces a mirror not of the poet, but of the biographers-- a cracked mirror-- whose crevices, schisms, chasms, abysses, receding & advancing glaciers-- present the rhizomatic activities of a full blown "cottage" industry-

My favorite Dickinson-related tome, though, takes a slightly different tack, though the changes in its name from one edition to another indicate some slight geological shifting going on here, as well.

This is:
The Poet and the Murderer: A True Story of Literary Crime and the Art of Forgery-- changed in its new edition to:

The Poet and the Murderer: A True Story of Verse, Violence and the Art of Forgery.

Note how "A True Story of Literary Crime" must be seen as "too 'literary'" and so is changed to "A True Story of Verse, Violence"-- someone thinking that "verse, violence" by its use of alliteration is both "more catchy" and "more poetic"--

I highly recommend this book, which concerns not only a forged document of ED's handwriting, but one of a forged--invented--"new" ED poem--so well forged it was purchased by Amherst as a crowning display for its ED collection--until . . . the honest person in charge's doubts intiates a trip straight into the bizarre, bomb filled world of anti-Mormon ex-Mormon Mark Hofmann, one of the great forgers of all time--

↑ Index

66. a. tsai
Re: lesbians don't want...
Thu 8 Jul 2010

Wow, as a fellow lesbian, I agree with Conrad. I think CA should do the following:

1. Write Billy Collins a letter and include this email. 2. Send Billy Collins Susan Howe's book with an explanation as to why. 3. Write an article for a very prominent review that deals with the explicit exploitation and objectification involved both in the poem itself and in the act of using it as an argument regarding her sexual orientation.

On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 9:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:
> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>
> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!

>
> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily
> Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing > someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly > cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>
> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual > preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a > lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS > poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, > and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little > sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her > body.
>
> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT
> very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting > his poet laureate prick inside her!
>
> I VOMIT
> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY
>
> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes
> such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES > AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE > WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>
> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the > way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me > think he needs to read Howe.
>
> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for
> every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, > I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>
> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear
> Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how > he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!
>
> CAConrad
>
> poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

>
> TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com
>
> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s:
> http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com
>
> PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com
>
>

↑ Index

67. a. tsai
Re: lesbians don't want...
Thu 8 Jul 2010

John:

I think this is a very good question. For myself, I am more interested in gender/sexual politics only as it exists in someone's WORK as one lens of examination of poetry (or literature) rather than as mere fascination/autobiography. But, I would further say that when it comes to programs that are meant for wide distribution, those questions are asked because the answers themselves are talked about widely and the mainstream public loves scandal and intrigue, not because it's a worthy question for discussion.

On Wed, Jul 7, 2010 at 10:08 AM, John Cleary <[redacted]> wrote:
> Could someone explain whether or not Emily Dickinson's sexual preference > should matter in an understanding and appreciation of her work? Should I > care, does it inform me somehow, to know if a writer is gay or not?
>
> I am not being snarky, I am legitimately wondering.
>
> On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 10:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>>
>> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>>
>> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily
>> Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing >> someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly >> cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!

>>
>> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual >> preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a >> lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS >> poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, >> and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little >> sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her >> body.
>>
>> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT
>> very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting >> his poet laureate prick inside her!
>>
>> I VOMIT
>> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY
>>
>> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes
>> such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES >> AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE >> WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>>
>> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the >> way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me >> think he needs to read Howe.
>>
>> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for
>> every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, >> I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>>
>> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear
>> Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how >> he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!
>>
>> CAConrad
>>
>> poetryisthecenterofmyworld:
http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>
>>

>> TAROT READINGS:
http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com<http://caconradtarot.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s:
>> http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com <http://caconradmp3.blogspot.com/>
>>
>> PhillySound: new poetry:
http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

68. David A. Kirschenbaum

Wed./Simon's Graceland & Johnston's Hi, How Are You Live

Thu 8 Jul 2010

Please forward

Boog City's Classic Albums Live presents our performers' choice albums

Paul Simon
Graceland

and

Daniel Johnston
Hi, How Are You

This Wed., July 14, 7:30 p.m.
Free with a two-drink minimum

Sidewalk Café
94 Ave. A
NYC

performed live by

The Devil and Christy Davis
Steve Espinola
Dan Fishback
Casey Holford
Bob Kerr
The Infringers

Jesse Schoen
Preston Spurlock
The Trouble Dolls
Kathy Zimmer

Hosted by Boog City editor and publisher David Kirschenbaum

Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave., L to 1st Ave.
Venue is at E. 6th St.

For further information:
212-842-BOOG (2664), [redacted]

Musical acts' bios and websites follow show running order

Paul Simon
Graceland

*Casey Holford
The Boy in the Bubble
Graceland
I Know What I Know

*Dan Fishback
Gumboots

*Kathy Zimmer
Diamonds on the Soles of Her Shoes

*Dan Fishback
You Can Call Me Al

*Jesse Schoen
Under African Skies
Homeless
Crazy Love, Vol. II

*The Infringers
That Was Your Mother
All Around the World or the Myth of Fingerprints

Daniel Johnston
Hi, How Are You

*The Trouble Dolls
Poor You
Big Business Monkey
Walking the Cow

*Bob Kerr
I Picture Myself With a Guitar
Despair Came Knocking
I Am A Baby (In My Universe)

*Steve Espinola
Nervous Love
I'll Never Marry
Get Yourself Together
Running Water

*Preston Spurlock
Desperate Man Blues
Hey Joe
She Called Pest Control

*The Devil and Christy Davis
Keep Punching Joe
No More Pushing Joe Around

Bios:

Boog City
http://www.welcometoboogcity.com

Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 19th year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women's writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates two regular performance series —d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Chelsea's ACA Galleries; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, Cake Shop, CBGB's, and The Knitting Factory. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; Radiohead, OK Computer; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

The Devil and Christy Davis

Christy Davis is a drummer and singer/songwriter who has been playing in bands since 1989. She plays with Olive Juice Music's Kansas State Flower and has been a part of many projects, including Rebecca Moore and the Prevention of Blindness, Reverend Billy and His Stop Shopping Choir, and the popular kid's band Audrarox.

Christy was the lead singer and drummer for the band Mold from 1993-1999. She has recently reunited with the two guitarists from Mold to work on their new instrumental project, Gatos de Sensei. While playing with Rebecca Moore, she had the honor of playing on the same bill as Lou Reed, Laurie Anderson, Marc Ribot, and Lee Ranaldo as part of a tribute show for John Zorn at Town Hall in NYC. She will be joined by Glenn Hillman and Jim Williams (AKA "Southside Slim") for this show.

Steve Espinola
http://www.steveespinola.com/

Recently, Steve played on a bunch of recordings by the fabulous Sprinkle Genies. Check 'em out! Steve is now producing several songs for their next album, and seems to be evolving into a sometimes 6th member of the band.

Steve also plays piano on songs at the myspace page of Tom Warnick and the World's Fair, a great band. (Tom is the guitarist on "Bumbling Along.") Steve was a longtime member of the magical, fondly remembered Dan Emery Mystery Band.

A bit of a band slut, Steve has also played keys and/or electric tennis racket on NYC gigs and/or recordings of The Moldy Peaches (“Jorge Regula”), Sport Murphy, Amy X Neuberg, Peter Dizozza, Debby Schwartz, Dan Fishback, cub, Lisa Marr, and Dallam Dougou, to name a mere few.

For a recent stretch, Steve played piano for The Teenage Prayers, and the gospel oriented offshoot of the Prayers and Steve Wynn, Hazel Motes. He toured Europe extensively with Steve Wynn in the olden days. Espinola and Malcolm Rollick improv’d together rather magically at one of her shows, and the song, “Don’t Stop Reading Me the News” is on her myspace page if you click on her name.

Dan Fishback
http://www.danfishback.com/

Dan Fishback has been writing and performing in New York City since 2003. Major works include "You Will Experience Silence" (Dixon Place), "No Direction Homo" (P.S. 122), and "Please Let Me Love You" (Dixon Place), among others. His band Cheese On Bread has toured Europe and North America and released albums in the United States and Japan. Fishback has had artists residencies at Yaddo and the MacDowell Colony, and was a 2007-2009 recipient of the Six Points Fellowship for Emerging Jewish Artists. He is a 2010-2011 Artist-in-Residence at Brooklyn Arts Exchange, where he is developing "thirtynothing," a solo performance about growing up in the shadow of the AIDS epidemic. His new musical, "The Material World," will be workshopped in the HOT! Festival at Dixon Place on July 22nd at 7pm.

Casey Holford
http://caseyholford.com/
http://framedfractions.com/

Casey Holford is a musician, producer, and photographer living in Brooklyn. He has played in the bands Outlines, Urban Barnyard, Art Sorority for Girls, Gilmore Boys, and too many others to list in this space. He has produced recent albums for Phoebe Kreutz and Erin Regan, and toured the U.S. and Europe playing his songs. His music and photos exist online at the above sites.

Bob Kerr

Bob Kerr is a playwright living in Brooklyn. He was in the band Alien Detector while he lived in Minneapolis, where he also served as musical director for Bedlam Theatre’s production of Land Without Trees. He wrote the book and lyrics for the 10-minute musical The Sticky-Fingered Fiancee with composer Mat Eisenstein, and often writes songs for his own plays.

The Infringers

Valerie is a drummer and guitar player from New Orleans who is recently in collaboration with keyboardist Philip Cooper of Portland, Ore. Her background extends to punk, bluegrass, and bohemian folk rock, while Philip's is in experimental electronic music and pschedelic dance-pop. Former bands include Skin Verb (featuring poet Brett Evans) and Los Regretos—the country and bluegrass auction band of Louisiana. Philip was in the Sensualists and Light White of Portland.

Jesse Schoen
http://www.myspace.com/jesseschoen

Dystopian sci-fi, inept technicians, and the universe’s tendency toward chaos inspire Jesse Schoen’s songs. He lives in Chelsea.

Preston Spurlock
http://www.myspace.com/prestonspurlock

Born and raised in South Florida, Preston Spurlock has been making lo- fi bedroom records for eight years. He started making a name for himself in the NYC arts community in 2004, performing solo as The Sewing Circle, as well as in groups including the Elastic No-No Band and Huggabroomstik. Influenced equally by postpunk, bluegrass, avant- garde composition, and novelty music, Preston’s rough-hewn songs are idiosyncratic and intimate. He’s also a visual artist and short filmmaker. He will be your friend.

The Trouble Dolls
http://www.troubledolls.net/

Trouble Dolls are Cheri, Matty, and Chris. They play pop music. They are from Brooklyn. They do not smoke. Their album "Sticky" is available on Half a Cow Records. They thank you for coming to see them play.

Kathy Zimmer
http://www.kathyzimmermusic.com/

If sophistication and open-hearted goodwill could combine into a sound, what would it be? Enter Kathy Zimmer, a New York City singer/ songwriter sporting a richly wistful set of pipes and speaking the language of shell-shocked wildflowers. If you're looking in earnest for something new, this is it.

Here's a theory: Joni Mitchell is less jazz and more art song… as is Kathy Zimmer. The girl in the upstairs choir is originally from the rural Great Plains, and she sings to the world with a clear voice and a clear gaze.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

69. Sarah Sarai
Re: lesbians don't want…
Thu 8 Jul 2010

---

wow and nice going, CA Conrad.

here is a link to the show although you can hammer sharp nails into vulnerable portions of your body to get the same effect as listening offers.
http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=128272101 to John: i dislike the solidification of inclination. all this all that. i don't care.

finally, & i feel like governor patterson announcing to the press when he took office that he'd had affairs (me, too), but i wrote the poem "Emily Dickinson Is Jewish" -- published in Fine Madness; and last yr. a student presented a paper on it at some conference in Hungary. backchannel and i'll send it to anyone. without apology.

↑ Index

70. steve russell

Re: my first one man show and..

Thu 8 Jul 2010

Wish I could be there 2.
I also wish I could hear the experimental curators ...Â experiment.

Blues Alley is the last remaining jazz club in D. C. Â

_____
From: Allan Revich <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, July 6, 2010 1:32:03 PM
Subject: Re: my first one man show and..

Congratulations Steve!

I wish I could be there for the show.

Allan

On 7/5/2010 8:52 AM, steve dalachinsky wrote:
>Â please check out my first
> one man show of assemblage abnd collage
>Â in lower gallery at fusion arts gallery
> 57 stanton street manhattan
>
> also i will be reading at the stone with pianist matthew shipp
> on august 18th at 10pm preceeded by stephanie stone with yuko otomo and > eve packer
>
> and
>
> The 1st Annual
> Albert Ayler Festival
> Record Fair&Â Musical Celebration
>
>
> steve dalachinsky will read a poem and mc this event
>
> Saturday July 10th, 2010
>

>
>
> Highly influential jazz label teams up with leading experimental curators
> to honor Albert Ayler on the anniversary of his 74th birthday > with a free outdoor day-long tribute concert on Roosevelt Island.
>
>
> "Music Is the Healing Force of the Universe"
>
>
> In celebration of the life and music of legendary free-jazz > tenor-saxophonist Albert Ayler, ESP-Diskâ€™ and Issue Project Room, in > conjunction with Roosevelt L!ve have curated a day-long free concert, > Saturday July 10th from 2-10pm, in honor of the groundbreaking
musicianâ€™s
> 74th birthday.Â With performances by some of the most prolific artists > dedicated to pushing the boundaries in the avant-jazz world the same way
> Ayler did over 40 years ago, this festival will feature sets from The New > Atlantis Sextet with Marshall Allen, William Hooker, Charles Gayle,
> Gunter Hampel, Giuseppi Logan, and more all taking place at RiverWalk > Commons on picturesque Roosevelt Island: NYC's Best Kept Secret.
>
> The outdoor festival will also feature a record fair with a variety of > new and used vinyl vendors hosted by ESP-Disk's own in-house retail > operation, ESP Records.
>
> Great live music, a great selection of vinyl&Â CDs, great food from the > local Roosevelt Island restaurants and a view of Manhattan that can't be > beat. What more could a music lover want on a summer day?
>
> Location&Â Directions:
> Riverwalk Commons, Roosevelt Island, New York,Â F Train to Roosevelt > Island Map
>
> www.albertaylerfestival.com
> www.esprecodstore.com
>
>
> Performance Schedule:
>
> 2pm
> Giuseppi Logan Quartet

> Matt Lavelle: trumpet, bass clarinet
> Francois Grillot: bass
> Dave Miller: drums
> Giuseppi Logan: alto sax, bass clarinet (ESP 1007, 1013, 1055)
>
>
> 3pm
> Charles Gayle Trio
> Michael Wimberly: drums
> TBA: bass
> Charles Gayle: tenor sax
>
> 4pm
> Gunter Hampel Trio
> Gunter Hampel: vibraphones, bass clarinet (ESP 1042)
>
> 5pm
> Flow Trio
>
> Louie Belogenis: tenor sax (ESP 4052)
>
> Charles Downs: drums (ESP 4052)
>
> Joe Morris: bass (ESP 4052, 4056)
>
>
>
> 6pm
> William Hooker Trio featuring Sabir Mateen
>
> David Soldier: mandolin, banjo, violin
> Sabir Mateen: saxophone, flute, clarinet
> William Hooker: drums, spoken word
>
>
> 7pm
> New Atlantis Sextet featuring Marshall Allen
> Ed Ricart: guitar
> Sam Lohman: tba
> Andrew Barker: drums
> Danny Ray Thompson: flute
> Marshall Allen: alto saxophone (ESP 1008, 1014, 1017, 1045, 3033, 4002, > 4054, 4060)

>
> 8pm
> DJ Spun (Rong/DFA)
>
>
>
>
>
> Saturday July 10, 2010 from 2pm-10pm
> $ FREE $
>
> ESP LIVE and Issue Project Room Presents in conjunction with Roosevelt
> L!ve:
> The 1st Annual
> Albert Ayler Festival
> 'Record Fair&Â Musical Celebration'
> Riverwalk Commons, Roosevelt Island, New York
>
>
>
>
> About Albert Ayler
> (July 13, 1936 â€“ November 25, 1970)
> "Music is the Healing Force of the Universe," the title of prolific
> free-jazz musician Ayler's fierce work for the Verve label in 1969, sums > up his musical vision and prowess behind the tenor-saxophone. Born July > 13th, 1936, Ayler didnâ€™t make his mark playing his way up the ranks in > be-bop bands, yet he was exposed to the world of Little Walter inspired > R&B and the gritty sounds of the New Orleans tradition. Ayler began > making sparse, free arrangements of marching band tunes, brass band > explorations, and alto-experimentation that led him to be a driving > factor in the careers of everyone from
>
>Â Â

↑ Index

71. steve russell

Re: lesbians don't want...

Thu 8 Jul 2010

Jeanette Winterson (Art Objects: Essays on Ecstasy and Effrontery) explains.

Billy Collins, to sort of quote C A C, is a prick.

From: John Cleary <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, July 7, 2010 11:08:03 AM
Subject: Re: lesbians don't want...

Could someone explain whether or not Emily Dickinson's sexual preference should matter in an understanding and appreciation of her work? Should I care, does it inform me somehow, to know if a writer is gay or not?

I am not being snarky, I am legitimately wondering.

On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 10:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:

> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>
> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>
> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>
> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her body.
>
> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting his poet laureate prick inside her!
>
> I VOMIT
> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY
>
> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE > WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>
> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me think he needs to read Howe.

> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>
> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!
>
> CAConrad
>
> poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>
>
> TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com<http://caconradtarot.blogspot.com/>
>
> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s: http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com <http://caconradmp3.blogspot.com/>
>
> PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>

↑ Index

72. Jennifer Karmin

July 10: Literary Science Fair in Chicago

Thu 8 Jul 2010

The Chicago Underground Library
celebrates the Science of Obscurity!

SATURDAY, JULY 10th from 7â€“10pm
at the Jupiter Outpost 1139 W. Fulton Market -- Chicago, IL this event is free & for all ages food & drink will be available for sale

An annual lead up event to the Printersâ€™ Ball featuring new, unpublished, and in-progress works presented as science fair experiments. Join an awesome line up of writers, designers, and publishers as the intricately explain the scientific principles underlying their work, real or imagined.

Reading experiments with Jennifer Karmin!
Storigami with Zach Dodson!
Distress charts with A D Jameson!

Teenage taxonomies with Mairead Case!
Curmudgeonly cuttlefish with Libby Walker!
Hand-cranked projector mad libs with Two With Water!
All participants will also have work for sale.

Special projects from the Society of Furthering Truth (SOFT), The Book Bike, readings from Featherproof Booksâ€™ iPhone application TripleQuick, surprise musical guests, video interviews with the CUL crew about your favorite forgotten and under-recognized Chicago publishers and writers.

The night will also feature a public â€œebook launchâ€ via catapult, scientist speed dating, and digital readings to warm your hardened techie heart. Left and right brains come together, print <3s digital, everyone wins when the laws of physics and literature collide.

If youâ€™re a writer, publisher, bookmaker, or booklover of any stripe who has recently finished writing a book, has published a book in the past year, or just feels like taking out some aggression on a publication of your choice, we invite you to celebrate by participating in our public reading and launching your work into space--or at least halfway down the block. We define "book" broadly, so zines, magazines, chapbooks, textbooks, and more are welcome. Read a paragraph, then release! And if you want to donate your book to the collection of the Chicago Underground Library after itâ€™s caught some air, weâ€™re here for you.

About the Chicago Underground Library
The Chicago Underground Library provides an open forum for creative exchange between all producers and patrons of Chicagoâ€™s independent media, facilitating collaboration and awareness between diverse communities. Through innovative and inclusive approaches to acquisitions, cataloging and programming, we illuminate connections and provide both a historical and contemporary context for the creation of new local media.
http://www.underground-library.org/
http://www.facebook.com/chicago.underground.library

About the Printersâ€™ Ball
Founded by Poetry magazine with other independent Chicago literary organizations, the Printersâ€™ Ball is an annual celebration of print culture, featuring thousands of magazines, books, and broadsides available free of charge; live readings and music; letterpress, offset, and paper-making demonstrations; and much more. The Printersâ€™ Ball is co-produced with Columbia College Chicago and the Center for Book & Paper Arts, and takes place July 30th, 2010 in Chicago's landmark Ludington Building, former home to the American Book Company, at 1104 South Wabash.

http://www.printersball.org/
http://www.facebook.com/pages/THE-PRINTERS-BALL/113776545311074

↑ Index

73. aslongasittakes

aslongasittakes issue 5 is now live

Thu 8 Jul 2010

Issue five of aslongasitakes is finally out! The issue includes an improvised performance by the Atlanta Poets Group, a vocal drone by Shane Jesse Christmass, a digital haunt by Andy June, an audio cut-up by gtrabbit, phonetic tapestries by Gabe Raines, a glitchy, gremlined ditty by Francis Raven, a computer-interactive piece by Hazel Smith and Roger Dean, and a chambered dub by Jasmine Tutum. We hope you enjoy, and we're always looking for submissions. James Sanders

↑ Index

74. charles alexander

4 New Books from Chax Press

Fri 9 Jul 2010

Announcing 4 New Books from Chax Press

Special Offer Through August 15 Buy any one for $15, any two for $26, any three for $35, or all four for $45, and pay no shipping charges (for US Domestic Media Mail only). Orders must be paid for by check or credit card in advance of shipment. Add $5 for Priority Mail. Add $8 for international shipping for one book, $11 for two, $13 for three, or $15 for four. Order by mail with check to Chax Press, 411 N 7th Ave Ste 103, Tucson, AZ 85705-8388; or order by phone to [redacted] (hours are irregular; we will return your call). Inquiries by email to [redacted].

1. Leslie Scalapino, Flow — Winged Crocodile & A Pair / Actions are Erased / Appear
Two Plays
ISBN: 9780925904935
117 pages
$16

"For myself and the cast, directing Leslie Scalapino's FLOW has been an extraordinary journey into language and the language in breath, the rhythms of effort to say as precisely as her savage delicacy of thought, her forcing us all to assume nothing in examining the fineness of our implication in each other"

— Fiona Templeton.

2. Charles Olson, The Principle of Measure in Composition by Field: Projective Verse II, ed. by Joshua Hoeynck
Work from the Olson archive, an important edition to the original Projective Verse essay by Olson.
ISBN 9780925904959
56 pages
$15

"A poem has so many things to which it must do equal justice if it is to establish its own bounds (be inclusive). They can be summarized (and my intent here is to say it all): atomism (that sounds, at no smallest point ain't also particles, as both said & heard); continuity (that old flow still flows, even though statement can no longer be an adequate syntax to it – wave is wave of something at all points, both the particle and, because it is a thing, its 'environment' – what, its passing through, it is different by as well as what it catches up, what adheres to it); causation (but not that moralistic one – the Coleridgian – of fact & reason; cause in physical sensation, the obverse of which – what lies under it – giving it its allowance at all, that the systematic geometries occur superficially as the face of, cause); memory (than whom there is still no muse more, the more that things, in their retention, put more demand on the poet than merely his 'own' material, shall we say); perception (of which the same extension as of memory needs to be emphasized – that the conceptual, no matter how 'mental,' and as such the dipolar to perception, still a powerful discrimination is basic, it is this, the actualities have to be felt, while the pure potentials can be dismissed. This is the great distinction between an actual entity (nothing is there except for feeling) and an eternal object (Idea). A poem is made up of both." — Charles Olson, from "Notes on Poetics (towards Projective Verse II)"

3. Mark Weiss, As Landscape
114 pages
Poetry
ISBN 9780925904768
$16

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through very one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are like Chekhov's short stories—the more that gets left out, the more they seem to contain." — Mike Stephens (from review in Jacket)

4. Jonathan Stalling, Grotto Heaven
ISBN 9780925904928
Poetry
80 pages
$16

"In this book, Jonathan Stalling extends to us his hospitality. Enter this grotto, this book of poems a haven & lodge for light & dark, made by Jonathan Stalling with an ethics of respect & reverence. Pen opens to penumbra, shadowing each word. This book constitutes an attentive reaching, reading, a leaning into language, so that learning an other language rhymes with listening to & learning the emerging language- scape of one's own child. In Stalling's book we are lodged here, in poems, in a place allowing passage back & forth from the mystery of "I" and "we" to the mysterious housings of words in our language and in others. Words, characters, & embodiments make up the constellations, the figured stars within a larger darkness. I recommend to you Grotto Heaven as a fine place to take up lodging. " —Hank Lazer

charles alexander
[redacted]

chax press / poetry & the book arts
411 n seventh ave ste 103 / tucson, az 85705-8388

Chax Press Summer Intensive in book arts and creative writing, July 12-25, 2010

DONATE TO CHAX PRESS at http://chax.org/donate.htm
Chax Press is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, and your contribution is tax deductible.

↑ Index

75. Kenneth Sherwood
Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Fri 9 Jul 2010

I'm drawing together a list of poetry in English, especially book-length collections that might be described as documentary or social texts. Poems that respond in a self-conscious way to a temporal moment, be it contemporary or historical .... poems that absorb and refashion documents and found texts. The definition and scope are somewhat flexible; I'll list some of the titles I've already come up with. I suspect there are some egregious holes and oversights. I'd welcome suggestions of further additions that bear some family resemblance to these:

Charles Reznikoff, _Testimony_
Muriel Rukeyser, _US 1_
Kamau Brathwaite, _Middle Passages_
Rosemarie Waldrop, _A Key Into the Language of America_
Mark Nowak, _Coal Mountain Elementary_
Allen Ginsberg, _Kaddish_
David Antin, _Code of Flag Behavior_
WC Williams, _Paterson_
Charles Olson, _Maximus_
Melvin Tolson, _Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_
Susan Howe, _Singularities_
Lorine Niedecker, "North Central"
Jerome Rothenberg, "14 Stations"

Thanks for any help.

↑ Index

76. Angela Vasquez-Giroux
Re: lesbians don't want...
Fri 9 Jul 2010

For me, it's a combination of the questions (asking Catherine Deneauve - sp?) If she still wore perfume (wtf???) and her insipid laughter. It's as tho she has no real background on her topics -- if she did, she wdnt have allowed collins to write dickinson off as simple.

On 7/7/10, Mary Kasimor <[redacted]> wrote:
> This specific interview sounds horrible, but why do you say that Terry Gross > is simply horrible? I don't listen to her very much, so I am not terribly > familiar with her interviewing style. I am just curious.
>
> Mary
> --- On Wed, 7/7/10, Angela Vasquez-Giroux <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
>
> From: Angela Vasquez-Giroux <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: lesbians don't want...
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Wednesday, July 7, 2010, 1:37 PM
>
>
> CA, I am marooned in missouri without civilization or internet > connection, yet I feel prone to respond. While I was utterly bowled > over by 'Nine Horses' -- much to my surprise -- I am utterly disgusted > by the recurring trope of "all she needs is a night with me."

>
> Also, Terri Gross is simply horrid.
>
> Thanks for sharing.
>
> On 7/7/10, John Cleary <[redacted]> wrote:
>> Could someone explain whether or not Emily Dickinson's sexual preference >> should matter in an understanding and appreciation of her work? Should I >> care, does it inform me somehow, to know if a writer is gay or not?
>>
>> I am not being snarky, I am legitimately wondering.
>>
>> On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 10:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>>> ...to be fucked by Billy Collins!
>>>
>>> SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!
>>>
>>> A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily
>>> Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing >>> someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly >>> cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!
>>>
>>> What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible
sexual
>>> preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a >>> lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS >>> poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON,
>>> and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little >>> sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her >>> body.
>>>
>>> Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT
>>> very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting >>> his poet laureate prick inside her!
>>>
>>> I VOMIT
>>> I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY

>>>
>>> Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes
>>> such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES >>> AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS
TO HIM THAT HE >>> WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!
>>>
>>> Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by
the
>>> way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me >>> think he needs to read Howe.
>>>
>>> When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON
for
>>> every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, >>> I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!
>>>
>>> May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear >>> Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see
how
>>> he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!
>>>
>>> CAConrad
>>>
>>> poetryisthecenterofmyworld:
>>> http://CAConrad.blogspot.com<http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>
>>>
>>> TAROT READINGS:
>>>
http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com<http://caconradtarot.blogspot.com/>
>>>
>>> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s:
>>> http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com <http://caconradmp3.blogspot.com/>
>>>
>>> PhillySound: new poetry:
>>> http://PhillySound.blogspot.com<http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>
>>>
>>> guidelines
>>>
>>
>> guidelines
>>

>
> --
> Sent from my mobile device
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

--
Sent from my mobile device

↑ Index

77. David-Baptiste Chirot

Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry

Fri 9 Jul 2010

Dear Kenneth--

In the tradition of his great grandfather Herman Melville, Paul Metcalf combined documentary materials with fiction (as Melville does in Moby Dick)--in his great collage book Genoa: A Telling of Wonders, which is a novel interspersed with writings of Melville's and the Dairies of Columbus. Metcalf then went further, creating works which are completely made of others' writing, arranged as both historical/geological/floarl/fauna documentary materials arranged with a brilliant ear, creating music out of documentary (non-literary often) texts--his masterpiece in this vein is APALACHE--not a word of it being Paul's, yet at the same time, by way of his eye, ears, hands, tongue making the materials both intensely personal and and opening them outwards as though they have arisen from the ground itself. (Paul lived for some time on Quarry Road, very appropriately, as Susan Howe once pointed out--Paul had a great influence/effect on Howe's writings, as he himself had made use of Olson's works--minus the misogyny.) Other works by Paul treat the landscape, the shifting of the earth's tectonic plates in relation with migraines and a trip on route I-57, through Illinois, investigating the history and landscape of the region a he celebrates being"I-57" (he literally had just become "I-57" as in--Paul Metcalf, 57 years old.) Several others of Paul's works combine documentary materials with a kind of theatrical performance, a staging of historical events and personages in an imagined and associate theater --as in BOTH, a book which combines the lives & personages of John Wilkes Booth & Edgar Allan Poe (Booth/Poe yielding the "both" of the tile.) The performance and theatre aspect of the book, (Paul also wrote plays and performed in a few)--of course, has as cathartic event the famous night in Ford's theater, in which Booth plays the role of his life & assassinates President Lincoln. Place also plays a great role, is a great theme in Metcalf's works--as in Apalache & I-57--and in others works such as Huscaran, regarding he Indians of Peru, and The Wonderful White Whale of Kansas, which combines the life and works of Franck Baum author of the Oz Books, with Moby Dick into a study of the meaning of home. Waters of Potomac, like Apache is the "telling of --historical/geological/botanical etc--of wonders of that region, told, like Apalache via the poetic arrangement of documentary materials. In Zip Odes, small poems are composed for each state in the Union by using places names in the different Zip Code areas of rhe country. Many other works combines geographical an historical materials linking race tracks in North Carolinia with sites and histories in South America--

Though Metcal's works are in prose, it is a prose which traverses many modulations of the prose poem, making use of the lyrical impulse, the "voices" of history as in Pound's and WCW's works, documentary drawing on popular culture and contemporary historical events as John Dos Passos did in the USA trilogy, and the grandeur a form of epic in APALACHE. Though the form is in physical appearance prose or prose poem, the underlying structuring of the works is via the ear, via the poetic impulses and rhythms which run through the flow of time, history, ge0ology, the lives of people, places, things, animals, insects, plants--

Often the poetry of Metcalf's most astonishing passages attains the condition of music-Paul was a great admirer of another user of documentary materials, composer Charles Ives.

Coffee House, fortunately while Paul was stil alive--published a magnificent three volume Collected Works by Paul, which includes also his theatrical pieces and essays.

Asked at one point about his "collage" style of poetic/documentary construction, Paul jokingly called it "Totem Paul"--a vertical construction of the materials in space and time.

In another joking vein, as though seeing a cockeyed reflection of his own mixture of the documentary and other genres/media, Paul once wrote to me that a collage in Missouri was offering a course in the "South Sea Island Works of Herman Melville and the Hwiian films of Elvis Presley."

Paul was greatly admired by poets, more so than by prose writers. Besides Susan Howe, Robert Creeley was a great admirer of his works, s was Clark Coolidge, among many others. For roughly a decade Paul and his wife Nancy lived in close proximity to Black Mountain College and often attended events there as well as developing friendships with many of the poets and artists.

Paul first met Charles Olson when the latter was traveling about New England & New York, in search of the scattered volumes of Melville's library--with an eye towards assebling as many of the volumes as possible for the literary treasures they contained by way of Melville's Marginalia. 12-14 years old at the time, the much older Olson appeared to Paul as yet another one of the stream of Melville fans and obssssed fanatics, though far larger, and far more intensely essaying not only to collect information, but to become, as much as possible, a member of the Melville/Metcalf family line. For example, a vivid memory of Paul's was watching the gigatically framed Olson trying to hide behind bushes as he followed Melville's daughter down the street, trying to imitate her wlk, as though a "magical" way of "walking the walk" or "faking it until you make it" would transform him into an actual "embodiment" of the Melville "line."

I can't recommend Paul's work to you highly enough, with the understanding, however, that he may not be techncally/formally speaking, conventionally "poet enough" to "qualify." As Prose poetry, perhaps Paul's work might qualify--

Another work which is similar in some ways to Paul's is the brilliant Smithsonian Decompositions by Clark Coolidge. I would highly recommend this work, also--as Coolidge weaves a poetic "narrative" od a sort by combining quotes from interviews with Jean-Luc Godard, historical, geological texts, quotations from various fictional/poetical works linked by both associative trains of thought and the poetry of pure sound (as does Paul). Smithsonian Decompositions, like many of Paul's works, is a work of the imagination constructed out of streams of factual "things"--quotations, allusions, puns, "sound poetry" aspects, and the conveyance of visions of the imagination via the sturdy poem's "machine made out of words" (WCW).

I hope perhaps to have interested you into at least taking a look at Paul's works, as well as Coolidge's extraordinary Smithsonian Decompositions--

> Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 10:22:49 -0400
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
> To: [redacted]
>
> I'm drawing together a list of poetry in English, especially book-length collections that might be described as documentary or social texts. Poems that respond in a self-conscious way to a temporal moment, be it contemporary or historical .... poems that absorb and refashion documents and found texts. The definition and scope are somewhat flexible; I'll list some of the titles I've already come up with. I suspect there are some egregious holes and oversights. I'd welcome suggestions of further additions that bear some family > resemblance to these:

>
> Charles Reznikoff, _Testimony_
> Muriel Rukeyser, _US 1_
> Kamau Brathwaite, _Middle Passages_
> Rosemarie Waldrop, _A Key Into the Language of America_
> Mark Nowak, _Coal Mountain Elementary_
> Allen Ginsberg, _Kaddish_
> David Antin, _Code of Flag Behavior_
> WC Williams, _Paterson_
> Charles Olson, _Maximus_
> Melvin Tolson, _Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_
> Susan Howe, _Singularities_
> Lorine Niedecker, "North Central"
> Jerome Rothenberg, "14 Stations"
>
> Thanks for any help.

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

78. Catherine Daly
Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Fri 9 Jul 2010

CS Giscombe

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

79. Loretta Clodfelter
New Issue of There Is Now Online
Fri 9 Jul 2010

The most recent issue of There is now up at http://www.therejournal.com.

Check out new work from Dean Brink, Jeff Crouch, Lara Durback, Melissa Eleftherion, Mark Stephen Finein, Crag Hill, Carrie Hunter, erica lewis, Anne Elezabeth Pluto, Francis Raven, Christopher Rizzo, Sam Schild, Jennifer Styperk, and Nicolette Westfall.

↑ Index

80. Maria Damon

Re: lesbians don't want...

Fri 9 Jul 2010

Okay, let's form a poetry collective: Lesbians and Non-lesbians Who Don't Want To Be Fucked By Billy Collins.

Nana Zabic wrote:
> CA et co.,
>
> Billy Collins is more on the periphery of my world, a name whose bad > poems often appear in poetry textbooks I peruse to decide what to use > when I teach. I used to listen to NPR as white noise, but then I > couldn't stand it even as that, so I stopped listening quite a while > ago, and I didn't hear that interview. But based on what I know, I > wanna put it out there that non-lesbians also don't want to be fucked
> by Billi Collins. Yuuuuck.
>
> CA, I think the best revenge is for you to write that poem "Undressing > Billy Collins" if you can, but I understand if you're too repulsed.
>
> Snezana
>
> On Wed, Jul 7, 2010 at 1:44 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>> He wrote this poem a loong time ago. I've got a parody of it in my >> unpublished chap of poems I hate turned into love poems. I've got one in >> there for Marvin Bell's Emily Dickinson poem, too.
>>
>> There's an ENTIRE anthology of questionable Emily Dickinson poems.
>>
>> Janet Holmes MS OF MY KIN is pretty nice, tho.
>>
>>
>>
>> --
>> All best,
>> Catherine Daly
>> [redacted]
>>
>>

>>
>
>

↑ Index

81. Stephen Vincent
Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Fri 9 Jul 2010

Beautifully put, David, I was also thinking of Paul's work in this context. Thanks for taking the patient time to put this up!

Stephen Vincent

--- On Fri, 7/9/10, David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:

From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, July 9, 2010, 1:13 PM

Dear Kenneth--

In the tradition of his great grandfather Herman Melville, Paul Metcalf combined documentary materials with fiction (as Melville does in Moby Dick)--in his great collage book Genoa: A Telling of Wonders, which is a novel interspersed with writings of Melville's and the Dairies of Columbus. Metcalf then went further, creating works which are completely made of others' writing, arranged as both historical/geological/floarl/fauna documentary materials arranged with a brilliant ear, creating music out of documentary (non-literary often) texts--his masterpiece in this vein is APALACHE--not a word of it being Paul's, yet at the same time, by way of his eye, ears, hands, tongue making the materials both intensely personal and and opening them outwards as though they have arisen from the ground itself. (Paul lived for some time on Quarry Road, very appropriately, as Susan Howe once pointed out--Paul had a great influence/effect on Howe's writings, as he himself had made use of Olson's works--minus the misogyny.) Other works by Paul treat the landscape, the shifting of the earth's tectonic plates in relation with migraines and a trip on route I-57, through Illinois, investigating the history and landscape of the region a he celebrates being"I-57" (he literally had just become "I-57" as in--Paul Metcalf, 57 years old.) Several others of Paul's works combine documentary materials with a kind of theatrical performance, a staging of historical events and personages in an imagined and associate theater --as in BOTH, a book which combines the lives & personages of John Wilkes Booth & Edgar Allan Poe (Booth/Poe yielding the "both" of the tile.) The performance

and theatre aspect of the book, (Paul also wrote plays and performed in a few)--of course, has as cathartic event the famous night in Ford's theater, in which Booth plays the role of his life & assassinates President Lincoln. Place also plays a great role, is a great theme in Metcalf's works--as in Apalache & I-57--and in others works such as Huscaran, regarding he Indians of Peru, and The Wonderful White Whale of Kansas, which combines the life and works of Franck Baum author of the Oz Books, with Moby Dick into a study of the meaning of home. Waters of Potomac, like Apache is the "telling of --historical/geological/botanical etc--of wonders of that region, told, like Apalache via the poetic arrangement of documentary materials. In Zip Odes, small poems are composed for each state in the Union by using places names in the different Zip Code areas of rhe country. Many other works combines geographical an historical materials linking race tracks in North Carolinia with sites and histories in South America--

Though Metcal's works are in prose, it is a prose which traverses many modulations of the prose poem, making use of the lyrical impulse, the "voices" of history as in Pound's and WCW's works, documentary drawing on popular culture and contemporary historical events as John Dos Passos did in the USA trilogy, and the grandeur a form of epic in APALACHE. Though the form is in physical appearance prose or prose poem, the underlying structuring of the works is via the ear, via the poetic impulses and rhythms which run through the flow of time, history, ge0ology, the lives of people, places, things, animals, insects, plants--

Often the poetry of Metcalf's most astonishing passages attains the condition of music-Paul was a great admirer of another user of documentary materials, composer Charles Ives.

Coffee House, fortunately while Paul was stil alive--published a magnificent three volume Collected Works by Paul, which includes also his theatrical pieces and essays.

Asked at one point about his "collage" style of poetic/documentary construction, Paul jokingly called it "Totem Paul"--a vertical construction of the materials in space and time.

In another joking vein, as though seeing a cockeyed reflection of his own mixture of the documentary and other genres/media, Paul once wrote to me that a collage in Missouri was offering a course in the "South Sea Island Works of Herman Melville and the Hwiian films of Elvis Presley."

Paul was greatly admired by poets, more so than by prose writers. Besides Susan Howe, Robert Creeley was a great admirer of his works, s was Clark Coolidge, among many others. For roughly a decade Paul and his wife Nancy lived in close proximity to Black Mountain College and often attended events there as well as developing friendships with many of the poets and artists.

Paul first met Charles Olson when the latter was traveling about New England & New York, in search of the scattered volumes of Melville's library--with an eye towards assebling as many of the volumes as possible for the literary treasures they contained by way of Melville's Marginalia. 12-14 years old at the time, the much older Olson appeared to Paul as yet another one of the stream of Melville fans and obssssed fanatics, though far larger, and far more intensely essaying not only to collect information, but to become, as much as possible, a member of the Melville/Metcalf family line. For example, a vivid memory of Paul's was watching the gigatically framed Olson trying to hide behind bushes as he followed Melville's daughter down the street, trying to imitate her wlk, as though a "magical" way of "walking the walk" or "faking it until you make it" would transform him into an actual "embodiment" of the Melville "line."

I can't recommend Paul's work to you highly enough, with the understanding, however, that he may not be techncally/formally speaking, conventionally "poet enough" to "qualify." As Prose poetry, perhaps Paul's work might qualify--

Another work which is similar in some ways to Paul's is the brilliant Smithsonian Decompositions by Clark Coolidge. I would highly recommend this work, also--as Coolidge weaves a poetic "narrative" od a sort by combining quotes from interviews with Jean-Luc Godard, historical, geological texts, quotations from various fictional/poetical works linked by both associative trains of thought and the poetry of pure sound (as does Paul). Smithsonian Decompositions, like many of Paul's works, is a work of the imagination constructed out of streams of factual "things"--quotations, allusions, puns, "sound poetry" aspects, and the conveyance of visions of the imagination via the sturdy poem's "machine made out of words" (WCW).

I hope perhaps to have interested you into at least taking a look at Paul's works, as well as Coolidge's extraordinary Smithsonian Decompositions--

> Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 10:22:49 -0400
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
> To: [redacted]
>
> I'm drawing together a list of poetry in English, especially book-length collections that might be described as documentary or social texts. Poems that respond in a self-conscious way to a temporal moment, be it contemporary or historical .... poems that absorb and refashion documents and found texts. The definition and scope are somewhat flexible; I'll list some of the titles I've already come up with. I suspect there are some egregious holes and oversights. I'd welcome suggestions of further additions that bear some family

> resemblance to these:
>
> Charles Reznikoff, _Testimony_
> Muriel Rukeyser, _US 1_
> Kamau Brathwaite, _Middle Passages_
> Rosemarie Waldrop, _A Key Into the Language of America_
> Mark Nowak, _Coal Mountain Elementary_
> Allen Ginsberg, _Kaddish_
> David Antin, _Code of Flag Behavior_
> WC Williams, _Paterson_
> Charles Olson, _Maximus_
> Melvin Tolson, _Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_
> Susan Howe, _Singularities_
> Lorine Niedecker, "North Central"
> Jerome Rothenberg, "14 Stations"
>
> Thanks for any help.

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

82. Crane's Bill Books

Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry

Fri 9 Jul 2010

Haniel Long's "Pittsburgh Memoranda" is worth a glance.
Jeffrey

> Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 10:22:49 -0400
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
> To: [redacted]
>
> I'm drawing together a list of poetry in English, especially book-length collections that might be described as documentary or social texts. Poems that respond in a self-conscious way to a temporal moment, be it contemporary or historical .... poems that absorb and refashion documents and found texts. The definition and scope are somewhat flexible; I'll list some of the titles I've already come up with. I suspect there are some egregious holes and oversights. I'd welcome suggestions of further additions that bear some family resemblance to these:
>
> Charles Reznikoff, _Testimony_

> Muriel Rukeyser, _US 1_
> Kamau Brathwaite, _Middle Passages_
> Rosemarie Waldrop, _A Key Into the Language of America_
> Mark Nowak, _Coal Mountain Elementary_
> Allen Ginsberg, _Kaddish_
> David Antin, _Code of Flag Behavior_
> WC Williams, _Paterson_
> Charles Olson, _Maximus_
> Melvin Tolson, _Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_
> Susan Howe, _Singularities_
> Lorine Niedecker, "North Central"
> Jerome Rothenberg, "14 Stations"
>
> Thanks for any help.

_____ Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

83. Crane's Bill Books

Re: lesbians don't want...

Sat 10 Jul 2010

To be fair, you could read the poem as saying that once you've stripped away the frills and laces generations of biographers have forced on her, what's left are Dickinson's words. They ARE the details of her life, as Howe writes, because it was a life lived in language. The problem is, Collins isn't committed or crafty enough to pull it off; he settles for elaborating a metaphor in that ernest English Professor fashion, because that's what he thinks poetry is. A comparison with Jimenez's "First she came to me naked" might be interesting. Jeffrey

----- Original Message -----
From: "CA Conrad" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, July 07, 2010 2:25 PM
Subject: Re: lesbians don't want...

> Maria, Gloria, Angela, Catherine, YES, thank you! SOLIDARITY WITH EMILY! (Catherine I'd love to see your poem!) And I actually had no idea that his poem was old. He's such a drag.
>
> John, the thing I try to make clear in my post is that it's VERY IMPORTANT information to Collins.

> Hearing him talk with Terry Gross completely grossed me out. First, sticking with the issue at hand, in his preface to reading his poem he is literally saying that THAT poem puts to rest the argument of her sexuality. As though all she needed was ONE NIGHT with Billy Zoom-Zoom Collins and she would be off women! His language suggests he is an antidote to an illness, or something. But he's clearly masturbated thinking about bringing Emily Dickinson to her senses. I VOMIT AGAIN FOR HER! And WHY didn't Terry Gross confront him???? I don't get it. What a lousy form for an interview! TELL HIM HE'S A JOKE! For crying out loud someone has to!
>
> The OTHER crime is how he discusses her poems. Simple this, and simple that. She's so simple. He talks as if she GOT LUCKY a lot when writing, or something. He didn't even allow her the surrealism in her poems, linking that to a regional view of the world. WHO INVITED HIM TO WRITE THIS INTRODUCTION TO HER NEW COLLECTION? It's horrible that it's him! They should have invited Susan Howe to write an introduction and edit the collection.
>
> Abhorrent man that Billy Phil Collins! And his poems stink!
>
> CAConrad
>
> poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com
>
> TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com
>
> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s: http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com
>
> PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

↑ Index

84. Mark DuCharme

Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry

Sat 10 Jul 2010

Dave,

The correct title of the Coolidge work that you speak of is Smithsonian Depositions / Subject to a Film.

All Best,

Mark DuCharme

Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 15:13:22 -0500
From: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
To: [redacted]

Dear Kenneth--

In the tradition of his great grandfather Herman Melville, Paul Metcalf combined documentary materials with fiction (as Melville does in Moby Dick)--in his great collage book Genoa: A Telling of Wonders, which is a novel interspersed with writings of Melville's and the Dairies of Columbus. Metcalf then went further, creating works which are completely made of others' writing, arranged as both historical/geological/floarl/fauna documentary materials arranged with a brilliant ear, creating music out of documentary (non-literary often) texts--his masterpiece in this vein is APALACHE--not a word of it being Paul's, yet at the same time, by way of his eye, ears, hands, tongue making the materials both intensely personal and and opening them outwards as though they have arisen from the ground itself. (Paul lived for some time on Quarry Road, very appropriately, as Susan Howe once pointed out--Paul had a great influence/effect on Howe's writings, as he himself had made use of Olson's works--minus the misogyny.) Other works by Paul treat the landscape, the shifting of the earth's tectonic plates in relation with migraines and a trip on route I-57, through Illinois, investigating the history and landscape of the region a he celebrates being"I-57" (he literally had just become "I-57" as in--Paul Metcalf, 57 years old.) Several others of Paul's works combine documentary materials with a kind of theatrical performance, a staging of historical events and personages in an imagined and associate theater --as in BOTH, a book which combines the lives & personages of John Wilkes Booth & Edgar Allan Poe (Booth/Poe yielding the "both" of the tile.) The performance and theatre aspect of the book, (Paul also wrote plays and performed in a few)-- of course, has as cathartic event the famous night in Ford's theater, in which Booth plays the role of his life & assassinates President Lincoln.
Place also plays a great role, is a great theme in Metcalf's works--as in Apalache & I-57--and in others works such as Huscaran, regarding he Indians of Peru, and The Wonderful White Whale of Kansas, which combines the life and works of Franck Baum author of the Oz Books, with Moby Dick into a study of the meaning of home. Waters of Potomac, like Apache is the "telling of --historical/geological/botanical etc--of wonders of that region, told, like Apalache via the poetic arrangement of documentary materials. In Zip Odes, small poems are composed for each state in the Union by using places names in the different Zip Code areas of rhe country. Many other works combines geographical an historical materials linking race tracks in North Carolinia with sites and histories in South America--

Though Metcal's works are in prose, it is a prose which traverses many modulations of the prose poem, making use of the lyrical impulse, the "voices" of history as in Pound's and WCW's works, documentary drawing on popular culture and contemporary historical events as John Dos Passos did in the USA trilogy, and the grandeur a form of epic in APALACHE. Though the form is in physical appearance prose or prose poem, the underlying structuring of the works is via the ear, via the poetic impulses and rhythms which run through the flow of time, history, ge0ology, the lives of people, places, things, animals, insects, plants--

Often the poetry of Metcalf's most astonishing passages attains the condition of music-Paul was a great admirer of another user of documentary materials, composer Charles Ives.

Coffee House, fortunately while Paul was stil alive--published a magnificent three volume Collected Works by Paul, which includes also his theatrical pieces and essays.

Asked at one point about his "collage" style of poetic/documentary construction, Paul jokingly called it "Totem Paul"--a vertical construction of the materials in space and time.

In another joking vein, as though seeing a cockeyed reflection of his own mixture of the documentary and other genres/media, Paul once wrote to me that a collage in Missouri was offering a course in the "South Sea Island Works of Herman Melville and the Hwiian films of Elvis Presley."

Paul was greatly admired by poets, more so than by prose writers. Besides Susan Howe, Robert Creeley was a great admirer of his works, s was Clark Coolidge, among many others. For roughly a decade Paul and his wife Nancy lived in close proximity to Black Mountain College and often attended events there as well as developing friendships with many of the poets and artists.

Paul first met Charles Olson when the latter was traveling about New England & New York, in search of the scattered volumes of Melville's library--with an eye towards assebling as many of the volumes as possible for the literary treasures they contained by way of Melville's Marginalia. 12-14 years old at the time, the much older Olson appeared to Paul as yet another one of the stream of Melville fans and obssssed fanatics, though far larger, and far more intensely essaying not only to collect information, but to become, as much as possible, a member of the Melville/Metcalf family line. For example, a vivid memory of Paul's was watching the gigatically framed Olson trying to hide behind bushes as he followed Melville's daughter down the street, trying to imitate her wlk, as though a "magical" way of "walking the walk" or "faking it until you make it" would transform him into an actual "embodiment" of the Melville "line."

I can't recommend Paul's work to you highly enough, with the understanding, however, that he may not be techncally/formally speaking, conventionally "poet enough" to "qualify." As Prose poetry, perhaps Paul's work might qualify--

Another work which is similar in some ways to Paul's is the brilliant Smithsonian Decompositions by Clark Coolidge. I would highly recommend this work, also--as Coolidge weaves a poetic "narrative" od a sort by combining quotes from interviews with Jean-Luc Godard, historical, geological texts, quotations from various fictional/poetical works linked by both associative trains of thought and the poetry of pure sound (as does Paul). Smithsonian Decompositions, like many of Paul's works, is a work of the imagination constructed out of streams of factual "things"--quotations, allusions, puns, "sound poetry" aspects, and the conveyance of visions of the imagination via the sturdy poem's "machine made out of words" (WCW).

I hope perhaps to have interested you into at least taking a look at Paul's works, as well as Coolidge's extraordinary Smithsonian Decompositions--

Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 10:22:49 -0400
From: [redacted]
Subject: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
To: [redacted]

I'm drawing together a list of poetry in English, especially book-length collections that might be described as documentary or social texts. Poems that respond in a self-conscious way to a temporal moment, be it contemporary or historical .... poems that absorb and refashion documents and found texts. The definition and scope are somewhat flexible; I'll list some of the titles I've already come up with. I suspect there are some egregious holes and oversights. I'd welcome suggestions of further additions that bear some family resemblance to these:

Charles Reznikoff, _Testimony_
Muriel Rukeyser, _US 1_
Kamau Brathwaite, _Middle Passages_
Rosemarie Waldrop, _A Key Into the Language of America_
Mark Nowak, _Coal Mountain Elementary_
Allen Ginsberg, _Kaddish_
David Antin, _Code of Flag Behavior_
WC Williams, _Paterson_
Charles Olson, _Maximus_
Melvin Tolson, _Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_
Susan Howe, _Singularities_
Lorine Niedecker, "North Central"
Jerome Rothenberg, "14 Stations"

Thanks for any help.

Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

85. Douglas Manson
Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Sat 10 Jul 2010

My favorite is Jackson Mac Low's Stanzas for Iris Lezak. Amazing.

also John Cage's acrostics.

On Fri, Jul 9, 2010 at 10:12 PM, Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>wrote:

> Beautifully put, David, I was also thinking of Paul's work in this context. Thanks for taking the patient time to put this up!
>
> Stephen Vincent
>
> --- On Fri, 7/9/10, David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Friday, July 9, 2010, 1:13 PM
>
> Dear Kenneth--
>
> In the tradition of his great grandfather Herman Melville, Paul Metcalf combined documentary materials with fiction (as Melville does in Moby Dick)--in his great collage book Genoa: A Telling of Wonders, which is a novel interspersed with writings of Melville's and the Dairies of Columbus. Metcalf then went further, creating works which are completely made of others' writing, arranged as both historical/geological/floarl/fauna documentary materials arranged with a brilliant ear, creating music out of documentary (non-literary often) texts--his masterpiece in this vein is APALACHE--not a word of it being Paul's, yet at the same time, by way of his eye, ears, hands, tongue making the materials both intensely personal and and opening them outwards as though they have arisen from the ground itself. (Paul lived for some time on Quarry Road, very appropriately, as Susan Howe once pointed out--Paul had a great influence/effect on Howe's writings, as he > himself had made use of Olson's works--minus the misogyny.) Other works by Paul treat the landscape, the shifting of the earth's tectonic plates in relation with migraines and a trip on route I-57, through Illinois, investigating the history and landscape of the region a he celebrates being"I-57" (he literally had just become "I-57" as in--Paul Metcalf, 57 years old.) Several others of Paul's works combine documentary materials with a kind of theatrical performance, a staging of historical events and personages in an imagined and associate theater --as in BOTH, a book which combines the lives & personages of John Wilkes Booth & Edgar Allan Poe (Booth/Poe yielding the "both" of the tile.) The performance and theatre aspect of the book, (Paul also wrote plays and performed in a few)-- of course, has as cathartic event the famous night in Ford's theater, in which Booth plays the role of his life & assassinates President Lincoln.

Place also plays a great role, is a great theme in Metcalf's works--as in Apalache & I-57--and in others works such as Huscaran, regarding he Indians of Peru, and The Wonderful White Whale of Kansas, which combines the life and works of Franck Baum author of the Oz Books, with Moby Dick into a study of the meaning of home. Waters of Potomac, like Apache is the "telling of --historical/geological/botanical etc--of wonders of that region, told, like Apalache via the poetic arrangement of documentary materials. In Zip Odes, small poems are composed for each state in the Union by using places names in the different Zip Code areas of rhe country. Many other works combines geographical an historical materials linking race tracks in North Carolinia with sites and histories in South America--

Though Metcal's works are in prose, it is a prose which traverses many modulations of the prose poem, making use of the lyrical impulse, the "voices" of history as in Pound's and WCW's works, documentary drawing on popular culture and contemporary historical events as John Dos Passos did in the USA trilogy, and the grandeur a form of epic in APALACHE. Though the form is in physical appearance prose or prose poem, the underlying structuring of the works is via the ear, via the poetic impulses and rhythms which run through the flow of time, history, ge0ology, the lives of people, places, things, animals, insects, plants--

Often the poetry of Metcalf's most astonishing passages attains the condition of music-Paul was a great admirer of another user of documentary materials, composer Charles Ives.

Coffee House, fortunately while Paul was stil alive--published a magnificent three volume Collected Works by Paul, which includes also his theatrical pieces and essays.

Asked at one point about his "collage" style of poetic/documentary construction, Paul jokingly called it "Totem Paul"--a vertical construction of the materials in space and time.

In another joking vein, as though seeing a cockeyed reflection of his own mixture of the documentary and other genres/media, Paul once wrote to me that a collage in Missouri was offering a course in the "South Sea Island Works of Herman Melville and the Hwiian films of Elvis Presley."

Paul was greatly admired by poets, more so than by prose writers. Besides Susan Howe, Robert Creeley was a great admirer of his works, s was Clark Coolidge, among many others. For roughly a decade Paul and his wife Nancy lived in close proximity to Black Mountain College and often attended events there as well as developing friendships with many of the poets and artists.

Paul first met Charles Olson when the latter was traveling about New England & New York, in search of the scattered volumes of Melville's library--with an eye towards assebling as many of the volumes as possible for the literary treasures they contained by way of Melville's Marginalia. 12-14 years old at the time, the much older Olson appeared to Paul as yet another one of the stream of Melville fans and obssssed fanatics, though far larger, and far more intensely essaying not only to collect information, but to become, as much as possible, a member of the Melville/Metcalf family line. For example, a vivid memory of Paul's was watching the gigatically framed Olson trying to hide behind bushes as he followed Melville's daughter down the street, trying to imitate her wlk, as though a "magical" way of "walking the walk" or "faking it until you make it" would transform him into an actual "embodiment" of the Melville "line."

I can't recommend Paul's work to you highly enough, with the understanding, however, that he may not be techncally/formally speaking, conventionally "poet enough" to "qualify." As Prose poetry, perhaps Paul's work might qualify--

Another work which is similar in some ways to Paul's is the brilliant Smithsonian Decompositions by Clark Coolidge. I would highly recommend this work, also--as Coolidge weaves a poetic "narrative" od a sort by combining quotes from interviews with Jean-Luc Godard, historical, geological texts, quotations from various fictional/poetical works linked by both associative trains of thought and the poetry of pure sound (as does Paul). Smithsonian Decompositions, like many of Paul's works, is a work of the imagination constructed out of streams of factual "things"--quotations, allusions, puns, "sound poetry" aspects, and the conveyance of visions of the imagination via the sturdy poem's "machine made out of words" (WCW).

I hope perhaps to have interested you into at least taking a look at Paul's works, as well as Coolidge's extraordinary Smithsonian Decompositions--

Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 10:22:49 -0400
From: [redacted]
Subject: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
To: [redacted]

> I'm drawing together a list of poetry in English, especially book-length collections that might be described as documentary or social texts. Poems that respond in a self-conscious way to a temporal moment, be it contemporary or historical .... poems that absorb and refashion documents and found texts. The definition and scope are somewhat flexible; I'll list some of the titles I've already come up with. I suspect there are some egregious holes and oversights. I'd welcome suggestions of further additions that bear some family resemblance to these:
>
> Charles Reznikoff, _Testimony_
> Muriel Rukeyser, _US 1_
> Kamau Brathwaite, _Middle Passages_
> Rosemarie Waldrop, _A Key Into the Language of America_
> Mark Nowak, _Coal Mountain Elementary_
> Allen Ginsberg, _Kaddish_
> David Antin, _Code of Flag Behavior_
> WC Williams, _Paterson_
> Charles Olson, _Maximus_
> Melvin Tolson, _Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_
> Susan Howe, _Singularities_
> Lorine Niedecker, "North Central"
> Jerome Rothenberg, "14 Stations"
>
> Thanks for any help.
>
> _____
> Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

↑ Index

86. David-Baptiste Chirot

Mark Twain's Unexpurgated Autobio: Dead for a Century, Twain Says What He Meant--NY Times Book Review

Sat 10 Jul 2010

BOOKS

| July 10, 2010

Dead for a Century, Twain Says What He Meant

By LARRY ROHTER

A very different and more pointedly political Mark Twain emerges in his new unexpurgated autobiography.

http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/10/books/10twain.html?emc=eta1

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

87. David-Baptiste Chirot

Avaaz: Save Sakineh

Sat 10 Jul 2010

Avaaz.org - The World in Action

Dear Friends,

Yesterday an Iranian woman, Sakineh Mohammadi Ashtiani, was saved by global protests from being stoned to death.

But she may still be hanged -- and, meanwhile, execution by stoning continues. Right now fifteen more people are on death row awaiting stoning in which victims are buried up to their necks in the ground and then large rocks are thrown at their heads.

The partial reprieve of Sakineh, triggered by the call from her children for international pressure to save her life, has shown that if enough of us come together and voice our horror, we may be able to save her life, and stop stoning once and for all. Sign the urgent petition now and send it onto everyone you know -- let's end this cruel slaughter NOW!

http://www.avaaz.org/en/stop_stoning/?vl

Sakineh was convicted of adultery, like all the other 12 women and one of the men awaiting stoning. But her children and lawyer say she is innocent and that she did not get a fair trial -- they state her confession was forced from her and, speaking only Azerbaijani, she did not understand what was being asked of her in court.

Despite Iran's signing of a UN convention that requires the death penalty only be used for the "most serious crimes" and despite the Iranian Parliament passing a law banning stoning last year, stoning for adultery continues.

Sakineh's lawyer says the Iranian government "is afraid of Iranian public reaction and international attention" to the stoning cases. And after Turkey and Britain's Foreign Ministers spoke out against Sakineh's sentence, it was suspended.

Sakineh's brave children are leading the international campaign to save their mother and stop stoning. Massive international condemnation now could finally stop this sickening punishment. Let's join together today across the world to end this brutality. Sign the petition to save Sakineh and end stoning here:

http://www.avaaz.org/en/stop_stoning/?vl

In hope and determination,

Alice, David, Milena, Ben and the whole Avaaz team

SOURCES:

Iranians still facing death by stoning despite 'reprieve', The Guardian:

http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2010/jul/08/iran-death-stoning-adultery

Britain condemns planned Iran stoning as 'medieval', AFP:

http://www.google.com/hostednews/afp/article/ALeqM5hjVdkvkzicGeInqw2R10rCKrqs3A

Support the Avaaz community! We're entirely funded by donations and receive no money from governments or corporations. Our dedicated team ensures even the smallest contributions go a long way -- donate here.

Avaaz.org is a 5.5-million-person global campaign network that works to ensure that the views and values of the world's people shape global decision-making. ("Avaaz" means "voice" or "song" in many languages.) Avaaz members live in every nation of the world; our team is spread across 13 countries on 4 continents and operates in 14 languages. Learn about some of Avaaz's biggest campaigns here, or follow us on Facebook or Twitter.

To contact Avaaz, please do not reply to this email. Instead, write to us at www.avaaz.org/en/contact or call us at [redacted] (US).

_____ The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multicalendar&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_5

↑ Index

88. Lisa Samuels
Re: lesbians don't want...
Sat 10 Jul 2010

Totally there agreeing - but I would avoid adding more glamor to Collins's economic clout by forming anything with his name in it. Especially my mouth. Therefore othering the story by writing/speaking differently is my preference. with loves, Lisa

On Sat, Jul 10, 2010 at 12:54 PM, Maria Damon <[redacted]> wrote:
> Okay, let's form a poetry collective: Lesbians and Non-lesbians Who Don't > Want To Be Fucked By Billy Collins.
>
> Nana Zabic wrote:
>>
>> CA et co.,
>>
>> Billy Collins is more on the periphery of my world, a name whose bad >> poems often appear in poetry textbooks I peruse to decide what to use >> when I teach. I used to listen to NPR as white noise, but then I >> couldn't stand it even as that, so I stopped listening quite a while >> ago, and I didn't hear that interview. But based on what I know, I >> wanna put it out there that non-lesbians also don't want to be fucked
>> by Billi Collins. Yuuuuck.
>>
>> CA, I think the best revenge is for you to write that poem "Undressing >> Billy Collins" if you can, but I understand if you're too repulsed.
>>
>> Snezana
>>
>> On Wed, Jul 7, 2010 at 1:44 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]>
>> wrote:
>>
>>>
>>> He wrote this poem a loong time ago. I've got a parody of it in my >>> unpublished chap of poems I hate turned into love poems. I've got one in >>> there for Marvin Bell's Emily Dickinson poem, too.
>>>
>>> There's an ENTIRE anthology of questionable Emily Dickinson poems.
>>>
>>> Janet Holmes MS OF MY KIN is pretty nice, tho.
>>>
>>>

>>>
>>> --
>>> All best,
>>> Catherine Daly
>>> [redacted]
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

89. carol dorf
Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Sat 10 Jul 2010

Nellie Wong "Dreams in Harrison Railroad Park"

↑ Index

90. carol dorf
Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Sat 10 Jul 2010

Marillyn Nelson "A Wreath for Emmett Till"

Perhaps less specific to what you are looking for but Rita Dove "Thomas and Belulah"

↑ Index

91. Pam Brown
Re: : Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Sun 11 Jul 2010

Dear Kenneth,

Laurie Duggan - The Ash Range - first published by University of Queensland Press, 2nd Edition Shearsman Books, 2005

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2005/duggan_ash.html

Best wishes,
Pam Brown

Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 10:22:49 -0400
From: Kenneth Sherwood <[redacted]>
Subject: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry

I'm drawing together a list of poetry in English, especially book-length collections that might be described as documentary or social texts. Poems that respond in a self-conscious way to a temporal moment, be it contemporary or historical .... poems that absorb and refashion documents and found texts. The definition and scope are somewhat flexible; I'll list some of the titles I've already come up with. I suspect there are some egregious holes and oversights. I'd welcome suggestions of further additions that bear some family resemblance to these:

Charles Reznikoff, _Testimony_
Muriel Rukeyser, _US 1_
Kamau Brathwaite, _Middle Passages_
Rosemarie Waldrop, _A Key Into the Language of America_
Mark Nowak, _Coal Mountain Elementary_
Allen Ginsberg, _Kaddish_
David Antin, _Code of Flag Behavior_
WC Williams, _Paterson_
Charles Olson, _Maximus_
Melvin Tolson, _Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_
Susan Howe, _Singularities_
Lorine Niedecker, "North Central"
Jerome Rothenberg, "14 Stations"

Thanks for any help.

↑ Index

92. Justin Katko
Contranight Escha Black
Sun 11 Jul 2010

English poet Josh Stanley's fourth book, Contranight Escha Black, is now out from Critical Documents. The title sequence was lobbed off in one goetic strike on the anniversary of the sepulchral evac; the thing itself just egregiously Black, with our 'cute Israeli / complicity' dripping from the platinum railroad ties I mean staples. SoundEye snug-lumberers will find it leaked discretely into their time-wallets; Greenwich meridian jumpers will find it catapulted indiscretely into their space-purses. In all cases, owners of the future past tense will find themselves five pounds or ten dollars less rich. Don't just buy one!

They're nearly sold out! They aren't even paid for yet! >> http://plantarchy.us/contranight.html

My sword thou shalt put my palms around your sides split across volcanic cash eruption it is called capitalism in crisis is fucking stupid kill them other simplifiers pronounce this return of Marx
but racists come back too I’m for all resistance when I am most unafraid
the good me in the lime tree flower like my prison fire
my infinite blood time
my still wanting you my angry
angelic love world is also glacier
as furious burying

And that's the kind of fucking stupid ass go kill us all and bring us back shit you can't never take back. This latest artefact of the poetic mind is so indistinctly a farewell to England that the reader who chooses to regard it as an exclusively American edition may as well omit it and turn at once to page 999. The recent poem 'Relevant to the Kompany' is also appended to the sequence.

↑ Index

93. Dan Wilcox
Third Thursday Poetry Night, July 15: Jason Crane
Sun 11 Jul 2010

---

the Poetry Motel Foundation
presents

Third Thursday Poetry Night

at
the Social Justice Center
33 Central Ave., Albany, NY

Thursday, July 15
7:00 sign up; 7:30 start

Featured Poet: Jason Crane

-- with an open mic for community poets before & after the feature: $3.00 donation, suggested; more if you got it, less if you can't.

Your saxy host: Dan Wilcox.

Jason Crane was born in Lenox, Massachusetts. He's a jazz broadcaster and writer. He's a husband and father. And he rides a bicycle.

Jason hosts the online jazz interview show The Jazz Session (http://thejazzsession.com), featuring in-depth interviews with jazz musicians from around the world.

Jason's first collection of poems, "Unexpected Sunlight," was recently published by FootHills Publishing. His work has been published in "Blue Collar Review" and "qarrtsiluni." You can read Jason's writing at http://jasoncrane.org.

(by Jason Crane)

*
Desperate young man with haggard face
and flapping pants --

as best they can* * under the streetlights
the shadows are wrapping you about --* * in your fatigue and isolation, in all the beauty of your * * commonplace against the incestuous

and leaning stars --* *
*

↑ Index

94. steve dalachinsky

great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists

Mon 12 Jul 2010

---

great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon
please pass on to your lists

↑ Index

95. steve dalachinsky

Re: Mark Twain's Unexpurgated Autobio: Dead for a Century, Twain Says What He Meant--NY Times Book Review

Mon 12 Jul 2010

---

harvey picar passed as well today

On Sat, 10 Jul 2010 10:24:09 -0500 David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]> writes:
> BOOKS
>
>
> | July 10, 2010
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Dead for a Century, Twain Says What He Meant
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> By LARRY ROHTER
>
>
>
>

> A very different and more pointedly political Mark Twain emerges in > his new unexpurgated autobiography.
>
> http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/10/books/10twain.html?emc=eta1
>
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your > inbox.
>
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?
ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:O N:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3
>
>

↑ Index

96. John Cleary
Re: lesbians don't want...
Mon 12 Jul 2010

Hello, I think this is it exactly. I haven't listened to the interview, but it seems as if Gross wanted some spicy gossip about Dickinson, not information that would expand understanding of her work. At some point, I hope, we will evolve past the point of thinking of someone's sexuality as a juicy tidbit to snicker about. John

On Thu, Jul 8, 2010 at 1:10 PM, a. tsai <[redacted]> wrote:

> John:
>
> I think this is a very good question. For myself, I am more interested in gender/sexual politics only as it exists in someone's WORK as one lens of examination of poetry (or literature) rather than as mere fascination/autobiography. But, I would further say that when it comes to programs that are meant for wide distribution, those questions are asked because the answers themselves are talked about widely and the mainstream public loves scandal and intrigue, not because it's a worthy question for discussion.
>
> On Wed, Jul 7, 2010 at 10:08 AM, John Cleary <[redacted]> wrote:
> Could someone explain whether or not Emily Dickinson's sexual preference should matter in an understanding and appreciation of her work? Should I care, does it inform me somehow, to know if a writer is gay or not?
>
> I am not being snarky, I am legitimately wondering.

On Tue, Jul 6, 2010 at 10:08 PM, CA Conrad <[redacted]> wrote:

...to be fucked by Billy Collins!

SOMEONE PLEASE TELL HIM THIS!

A dear friend of mine who knows how much I LOVE the poetry of Emily Dickinson called me today to tell me that Terry Gross was interviewing someone about Dickinson's poems. So I tuned into NPR and instantly cringed at the voice of Billy Collins (the Phil Collins of poetry!)!

What ANGERED me most was when they were discussing her possible sexual preference(s). And he said, HE ACTUALLY SAID, that whether she was a lesbian or not, HE was going to put to rest this argument with HIS poem. Which he then read. It's called UNDRESSING EMILY DICKINSON, and it's about wanting to FUCK HER, and how she sighs and makes little sounds in between his removing various items of clothing from her body.

Whether she was a lesbian or not, it's pretty clear to me that THAT very issue turned him on enough to write his sexual fantasy of putting his poet laureate prick inside her!

I VOMIT
I VOMIT FOR YOU EMILY

Not only that, if you listen to this show PLEASE NOTE how he makes such a big deal about how irrelevant her biography is. BUT THEN GOES AHEAD AND SHOWS HOW IMPORTANT HER BIOGRAPHY ACTUALLY IS TO HIM THAT HE WANTS TO SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT (SO TO SPEAK!)!

Has this dude NEVER heard of Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON by the way? Because his excessively reductive view of her poems makes me think he needs to read Howe.

When I win the lottery I'm buying Susan Howe's MY EMILY DICKINSON for every single library in the world! And if they REFUSE TO TAKE IT, I'll just put in on the shelf MYSELF!

May Emily Dickinson's ghost exact REVENGE on Billy Collins! Dear Emily, I'm writing a poem called UNDRESSING BILLY COLLINS, to see how he likes gay sex! I'll let you know how it goes!

CAConrad

poetryisthecenterofmyworld: http://CAConrad.blogspot.com< http://caconrad.blogspot.com/>

> TAROT READINGS: http://CAConradTAROT.blogspot.com< http://caconradtarot.blogspot.com/>
>
> MY BATHTUB POETRY READING & other videos and MP3s: http://CAConradMP3.blogspot.com <http://caconradmp3.blogspot.com/>
>
> PhillySound: new poetry: http://PhillySound.blogspot.com< http://phillysound.blogspot.com/>
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

97. Iris Law

LANTERN REVIEW seeks bloggers.

Mon 12 Jul 2010

Lantern Review: A Journal of Asian American Poetry is looking for a handful of talented bloggers to add to its staff for next year. We seek strong writers with an interest in Asian American poetry and a knowledge of the contemporary literary scene. Positions available: Book Reviewers, Columnists, Interviewers, Event Reporters. Prior blogging experience is not necessary, though it is a plus, as is experience with social media. More details, including qualifications and requirements, are available on our blog, at the following url:

http://lanternreview.com/blog/2010/07/07/lr-news-apply-to-blog-for-us/

Please apply via email (editors [at] lanternreview [dot] com) by July 23rd.

* * *

*Lantern Review: A Journal of Asian American Poetry
*Iris A. Law, Editor
Mia Ayumi Malhotra, Associate Editor
www.lanternreview.com

↑ Index

98. Camille Martin

New @ Rogue Embryo: Leslie Scalapino's Plural Time + Blue Tulip Tree Leaf

Mon 12 Jul 2010

New @ Rogue Embryo

* Reading the Minds of Events: Leslie Scalapino's Plural Time (originally published in HOW2) (alert: long essay with probably too many footnotes, but if you like that kind of thing, take some vitamins and go for it)

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/07/08/reading-the-minds-of-events-leslie-scalapinos-plural-time/

* Blue Tulip Tree Leaf (photograph): The tulip tree is one of my favourite trees that grows in Louisiana (and a large portion of North America as well). The exquisite flowers resemble tulips. Something about the light or water made the leaf appear bluish. The un-bayou-like sandy creek in Mississippi is named "Bayou LaTerre").

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/blue-tulip-tree-leaf-bayou-laterre/

Cheers!

Camille Martin

Sonnets:
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html

Codes of Public Sleep :
http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781897388112/codes-of-public-sleep.aspx

↑ Index

99. David Chirot

O Cleveland! As Lebron Leaves, Harvey Pekar Goes on the "Big Sleep"

Mon 12 Jul 2010

Cult comic writer Harvey Pekar dead at 70 in Ohio
July 12, 2010, 10:44 AM EST
http://today.msnbc.msn.com/id/38206191/ns/today-today_books/?GT1=43001

CLEVELAND (AP) -- Comic-book writer Harvey Pekar, whose autobiographical comic book series "American Splendor<http://movies.msn.com/movies/movie/american-splendor.1/>" portrayed his life with bone-dry honesty and wit, was found dead at home early Monday, authorities said. He was 70.

Officers were called to Pekar's suburban home by his wife about 1 a.m., Cleveland Heights police Capt. Michael Cannon said. His body was found between a bed and dresser.

Pekar had been suffering from prostate cancer, asthma, high blood pressure and depression, according to Cannon. Pekar had gone to bed about 4:30 p.m. Sunday in good spirits, his wife told police.

An autopsy was planned, said Powell Caesar, a spokesman for the Cuyahoga County coroner's office in Cleveland. He had no information on the cause of death.

Pekar took a radically different track from the superhero-laden comics that had dominated the industry. He instead specialized in the lives of ordinary people, chronicling his life as a file clerk in Cleveland and his relationship with his third wife, Joyce Brabner. His 1994 graphic novel, "Our Cancer Year," detailed his battle with lymphoma.

The dreary cover scene shows him sprawled beside his wife on a snowy curbside with shopping bags on the ground. "Harvey, forget about the groceries, honey. Let's get you inside first," she says.

Pekar never drew himself but depended on collaborations with artists, most notably his friend R. Crumb, who helped illustrate the first issue of the ironically titled "American Splendor," published in 1976. It was made into an acclaimed 2003 film<http://movies.msn.com/movies/movie/american-splendor.1/>starring Paul Giamatti <http://movies.msn.com/celebrities/celebrity/paul-giamatti/>. The most recent "American Splendor" was released in 2008.

Pekar's quirky commentary developed a following and his insights and humor were often a bit on the dark side.

Lucy Shelton Caswell, curator of the Billy Ireland Cartoon Library & Museum at Ohio State University, said it was inaccurate to describe Pekar's work as "cult."

"His work was accepted by the mainstream," Caswell said. "It was bought by public libraries and read widely." The cartoon library has all of Pekar's works in its collection, she said.

"He will be remembered as an innovator who wrote stories about ordinary things that were then illustrated by some of the most notable cartoonists of the late 20th century," Caswell said. "People identified with what was writing about and the stories that these people were drawing because it was so ordinary."

In 2003, the New York Film Critics Circle honored "American Splendor" as best first film for the directing-writing team of Shari Springer Berman and Robert Pulcini <http://movies.msn.com/celebrities/celebrity/robert-pulcini/>. Part

feature and part documentary, with animated elements added, the film starred Giamatti as the disgruntled Pekar.

Pekar, who was a repeat TV guest of David Letterman<http://movies.msn.com/celebrities/celebrity/david-letterman/>, told The Associated Press in a 1997 interview that he was determined to keep writing his "American Splendor" series.

"There's no end in sight for me. I want to continue to do it," Pekar said. "It's a continuing autobiography, a life's work."

↑ Index

100. Mark Prejsnar

Atlanta Poets Group this week

Mon 12 Jul 2010

Â

Â

This Thursday night

Â

at

Â

Â

This Thursday night

Â

at the 7 Stages Theater

1105 Euclid Ave.

Little Five PointsAtlanta, Georgia

Â

Â

The Atlanta Poets Group

will perform a panoply of polyphonic and monophonic poetry

Â

Â

Â

Â

also appearing,

Kodac Harrison & other local poets

Â

Â

Â

8:00 pm

Admission $5

Â

Â

be there, or be mainstream

Â

Â

Â

--mark

Â

â€œA poet laureate is a pretender, pseudo-poet, or phantom.â€

Â

Â Â Â

Get yourself at least 31 postcards. These can be found at book stores, thrift shops, online, drug stores, antique shops, museums, gift shops. (You'll be amazed at how quickly you become a postcard addict.)

On or about July 27th, write an original poem right on a postcard and mail it to the person on the list below your name. (If you are at the very bottom, send a card to the name at the top.) And please WRITE LEGIBLY!

Starting on August 1st, ideally in response to a card YOU receive, keep writing a poem a day on a postcard and mailing it to successive folks on the list until you've sent out 31 postcards. Of course you can keep going and send as many as you like but we ask you to commit to at least 31 (a month's worth).

What to write? Something that relates to your sense of "place" however you interpret that, something about how you relate to the postcard image, what you see out the window, what you're reading, using a phrase/topic/or image from a card that you got, a dream you had that morning, or an image from it, etc. Like "real" postcards, get to something of the "here and now" when you write.

Do write original poems for the project. Taking old poems and using them is not what we have in mind. These cards are going to an eager audience of one, so there's no need to agonize. That's what's unique about this experience. Rather than submitting poems for possible rejection, you are sending your words to a ready-made and excited audience awaiting your poems in their mailboxes. Everyone loves getting postcards. And postcards with poems, all the better.

Once you start receiving postcard poems in the mail, you'll be able to respond to the poems and imagery with postcard poems or your own. That will keep your poems fresh and flowing. Be sure to check postage for cards going abroad. The Postcard Graveyard is a very sad place.

That's all there it to it. It's that fun and that easy.

To check out what we've done before, visit the blog [where you'll also see we also have Perennial Poetry Postcard List of folks who try to write a postcard poem at least once a week regardless of receiving in order to keep connections flowing.], Paul Nelson's website or our Facebook group.

To get started, click to register. Once you've registered, you just need to login to see the list of participants.

Email [redacted] if you have any questions. Paul E. Nelson

SPLAB!
C. City, WA
[redacted]

↑ Index

102. Dan Godston
World Listening Day / Passport to Texas radio series
Mon 12 Jul 2010

Hi,

World Listening Day happens this Sunday, July 18. You are invited to participate! For more info, please visit http://www.worldlisteningproject.org/?p=667.

Several weeks ago Cecilia Nasti, Executive Producer of the Passport to Texas radio series, interviewed me about World Listening Day. You can listen to that interview / episode of Passport to Texas by tuning in to one of these stations: http://passporttotexas.org/listen/. The podcast and transcription of the episode are available at http://passporttotexas.org/world-listening-day/

Cheers,

Dan

↑ Index

103. Vernon Frazer
The SEx Queen of the Berlin Turnpike -- "Vernon Frazer's Greatest Hits"
Mon 12 Jul 2010

---

http://www.youtube.com/my_videos_edit?ns=1&video_id=zAmpdRiSIsk&next=%2Fmy_videos

↑ Index

104. Lou Rowan
Golden Handcuffs Review 13
Mon 12 Jul 2010

Dear Colleagues, GH13 at the distributors, and ready for subscriptions. Contributors: David Antin, Charles Baudelaire, Charles Bernstein, Matt Briggs, Joseph Donahue, Francesca Duranti, Ken Edwards, Bernard Hoepffner, Victor Hugo, A D Jameson, Leslie Kaplan, Jami Macarty, Susan Smith Nash, Toby Olson, Meredith Quartermain, Peter Quartermain, Jed Rasula, Joyce Ravid, Leonard Schwartz, Pierre Senges, Tyrone Williams, Augustus Young.

It is distributed by Ingram and Ubiquity, so your bookseller or news- stand can order readily.

We REALLY, REALLY need support. Subscriptions only $20/annum in the US. Checks to Golden Handcuffs Review (1825 NE 58th St, Seattle, WA 98105). Paypal available through: [redacted]

Onward! Lou

Lou Rowan

[redacted]
www.lourowan.com

1825 NE 58th St.
Seattle, WA 98105

[redacted]

↑ Index

105. laura oliver
Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Mon 12 Jul 2010

Please excuse me if these titles have already been mentioned in this thread:

Ed Sanders' 1968
http://poetry.about.com/library/weekly/aa082697.htm

and

Strange Big Moon, The Japan and India Journals: 1960-1964 by Joanne Kyger

-Laura

> Date: Sat, 10 Jul 2010 17:10:19 -0800
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
> To: [redacted]
>
> Marillyn Nelson "A Wreath for Emmett Till"
>
> Perhaps less specific to what you are looking for but Rita Dove "Thomas and Belulah"

_____ The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multicalendar&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_5

↑ Index

106. amy king
YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
Mon 12 Jul 2010

â€œTh
WHAT WOULD WOOLF AND WHITMAN DO?
(A PRACTICAL PRIMER)

â€œThis is the beauty of the new media. There is no way to control it.â€
â€“Srdja Popovic

Cont --
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/

↑ Index

107. Thomas savage
Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists
Mon 12 Jul 2010

I'm really sorry to hear about this. Tuli has been a part of my life since I first heard the Fugs live when I was in my teens. So the man who jumped off the Brooklyn Bridge but didn't die, according to Ginsberg's great poem, has finally passed away. He had a long, good life and was a joy to many poets and other people both with his poems and his drawings.

_____
From: steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 12, 2010 5:04:27 AM
Subject: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists

great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon
please pass on to your lists

↑ Index

108. Jim Andrews

Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET

Mon 12 Jul 2010

---

do alternative means of publishing and/or distributing the same old stuff constitute a revolution?

ja
http://vispo.com

----- Original Message -----
From: "amy king" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, July 12, 2010 1:21 PM
Subject: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET

â€œTh
WHAT WOULD WOOLF AND WHITMAN DO?
(A PRACTICAL PRIMER)

â€œThis is the beauty of the new media. There is no way to control it.â€ â€“Srdja Popovic

Cont --
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/

↑ Index

109. amy king

Goodbye -- Transfer of the Stain Series! [& Popsickle Literary Festival, July 24 & 25]

Mon 12 Jul 2010

Before we tell you all about the next poetry extrava
Dear Stain-goers,

Before we tell you all about the next poetry extravaganza from Stain, we have an exciting announcement for you. As of 2011, Stain of Poetry will be directed by three brilliant new curators: the poets STEVEN KARL, ERIKA MOYA, and CHRISTIE ANN REYNOLDS. The Stain of Poetry founder Amy King & her co-director Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ â€” ie, we â€” will bow out to focus on our new books and on editing the soon-to-launch e-journal ESQUE.

Our incoming trio of curators will introduce themselves to you at POPSICKLE: A FESTIVAL OF LITERARY ARTS on July 24 & 25, where they will host the Stain portion of the readings, as well as at regularly scheduled Stain readings throughout the summer and fall. Donâ€™t worry, we (Amy and Ana) will be around till the close of year, so there will be plenty of opportunity to raise glasses of sake lemonade together. We are so excited to welcome Steven, Erika & Christie Ann to Stain of Poetry!

The next Stain reading will be part of POPSICKLE: A FESTIVAL OF LITERARY ARTS:

http://www.facebook.com/#!/event.php?eid=108175169234412

POPSICKLE 2010 unites Brooklynâ€™s literary curators for a two-day festival of readings, performances and screenings. The festival will take place on July 24th and 25th, from 3-8 PM on Saturday July 24th & 1-5 PM on Sunday July 25th.

POPSICKLE will take place at Bushwickâ€™s beloved MARKET HOTEL at 1142 Myrtle Ave, Brooklyn.

Readers for the Festival include:

BEN FAMA, BRETT PRICE & DANI LEVENTHAL, CARTER EDWARDS, DAN MAGERS, EDDIE HOPELY, EMILY PETTIT, EVAN BURTON, GINA ABELKOP, JAMES COPELAND, JOSHUA MEHIGAN, LAUREN, RUSSELL, LEIGH STEIN, MARC NASDOR, MICHAEL BARRON, NATALIE LYALIN, NICOLE TRIGG, PAIGE TAGGART, TIMOTHY DONNELLY AND MORE.

Curated by the series organizers of the following: Body Actualized Control, The Bushwick Reading Series, CROWD, POETRY Time at SPACE SPACE, STAIN, and SUPERMACHINE.

Show up on July 24th and 25 for Bushwickâ€™s first monster literary festival, and visithttp://www.facebook.com/l/c3ff5xqDTBno9JXYyBy5r_VYnTg;HTTP://POPSICKLEFESTIVAL.BLOGSPOT.COM/ for updates.

Cheers,

Amy & Ana
****

Juice + http://amyking.org

****

↑ Index

110. amy king

Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET

Mon 12 Jul 2010

Taking an alternate route might be 'your own revolution,' as indicated by the title.

Or you really could just sit around waiting for the marketplace to find you, ever the undiscovered genius-in-wait.

Must we all stick to prescribed, 'sanctioned' publication methods?

****

Juice -
+ http://www.huffingtonpost.com/ travis-nichols/the-poetry-feminaissance_b_607561.html
+ http://www.pw.org/content/ poets_take_action_in_wake_of_ gulf_coast_disaster
+ http://poetry.about.com/b/ 2010/06/16/poems-for-the-gulf- of-mexico.htm
+ http://amyking.org
****

----- Original Message ----
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>

do alternative means of publishing and/or distributing the same old stuff constitute a revolution?

ja
http://vispo.com

----- Original Message ----- From: "amy king" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, July 12, 2010 1:21 PM
Subject: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET

WHAT WOULD WOOLF AND WHITMAN DO?
(A PRACTICAL PRIMER)

â€œThis is the beauty of the new media. There is no way to control it.â€ â€“Srdja Popovic

Cont --
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/

↑ Index

111. Nicholas Karavatos
at Tigress Books in Salem, OR on Thursday, July 15 at 5:30 PM
Mon 12 Jul 2010

The Third Thursday Poets welcomes Nicholas Karavatos to Tigress Books in Salem, Oregon on July 15 at 5:30pm.

NICHOLAS KARAVATOS is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa's Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review (University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009).
http://www.amazon.com/dp/0984280006/ref=cm_sw_su_dp

David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: "Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity."

Nicholas Karavatos lives near Dubai, teaching at the American University of Sharjah in the United Arab Emirates. Previously he taught in Muscat, Sultanate of Oman. He is a graduate of New College of California and Humboldt State University.

https://www.thirdthursdaypoets.org/
http://www.teapartybookshop.com/

Nicholas Karavatos' next poetry reading / book-signing is sponsored by Bay Area Writing Project as part of their series "Writing Teachers Write" at the Nomad Café, 6500 Shattuck, Oakland, CA on Wednesday, July 28, 2010 at 5:00pm.

NO ASYLUM is available from these independent booksellers:
Arcata, CA – Northtown Books
La Jolla, CA – D.G. Wills Books
Portland, OR – Powell's Books
San Francisco, CA – Bird & Beckett
San Francisco, CA – Books & Bookshelves
Venice, CA – Beyond Baroque

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

112. John Cleary
Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
Mon 12 Jul 2010

Thank you for sharing this post.
-- John

On Mon, Jul 12, 2010 at 4:21 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> "Th
> WHAT WOULD WOOLF AND WHITMAN DO?
> (A PRACTICAL PRIMER)
>
> "This is the beauty of the new media. There is no way to control it."
> –Srdja
> Popovic
>
> Cont --
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/

↑ Index

113. Jennifer Karmin
Red Rover Series / Experiment #38
Mon 12 Jul 2010

Red Rover Series
{readings that play with reading}

Experiment #38:
Poetics of the Multitude

SATURDAY, JULY 17th
7pm / doors lock 7:30

Featuring:
The Next Objectivists
with members

Adriene Dodt
Denise Dooley
Elizabeth Marino
Scott McFarland
Matthias Regan
Gene Tanta
Adam Weg
and a few surprises

at Outer Space Studio
1474 N. Milwaukee Ave
Chicago, Illinois
suggested donation $4
we've got air-conditioning!

NEW VENUE
near CTA Damen blue line
third floor walk up
not wheelchair accessible

THE NEXT OBJECTIVISTS is a free, open-to-the-public poetry workshop dedicated to the study & reproduction of the outsidereal. We take this term from the â€œBlack Mountainâ€ poet Edward Dorn & our name from the second generation modernist poets associated with The Objectivist Press. Although writers associated with the Objectivists and Black Mountain â€œschoolsâ€ (Bunting, Creeley, H.D., Niedecker, Pound, Reznikoff, Williams, Zukofsky to name only those we've already studied) are prominent stars in our constellation, our objective is not to reproduce any particular style, mode or tradition, but instead to draw on many different ways of doing and making in order to isolate those practices of writing & publishing & above all those poetic effects which lead us out of the neoliberal present & the future it imagines.

The Next Objectivists Poetry Workshop was founded in January 2009. From then until now it meets every other Thursday evening (7:00 - 10:00) at Mess Hall (http://www.messhall.org/) in Rogers Park, Chicago. Members make the curriculum as we go along. Our meetings are potlucks and beginners are always welcome. We read, discuss & write poetry together. As time allows we publish our findings through our website: http://nextobjectivists.blogspot.com

Red Rover Series is curated by Laura Goldstein and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national, and international writers, artists, and performers. The series was founded in 2005 by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin.

Email ideas for reading experiments
to us at [redacted]

The schedule for events is listed at http://groups.yahoo.com/group/redroverseries

↑ Index

114. Ruth Lepson

Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists

Mon 12 Jul 2010

I am, too. I first heard the Fugs in a lobby at Stony Brook around 1967 & once stood behind Tuli K. in line at the Toronto Zoo.

On 7/12/10 4:30 PM, "Thomas savage" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'm really sorry to hear about this. Tuli has been a part of my life since I first heard the Fugs live when I was in my teens. So the man who jumped off the Brooklyn Bridge but didn't die, according to Ginsberg's great poem, has finally passed away. He had a long, good life and was a joy to many poets and other people both with his poems and his drawings.
>
> _____
> From: steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Mon, July 12, 2010 5:04:27 AM
> Subject: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists
>
> great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon
> please pass on to your lists

↑ Index

115. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: O Cleveland! As Lebron Leaves, Harvey Pekar Goes on the "Big Sleep"

Mon 12 Jul 2010

Sorry to hear that. American Splendor also was a very interesting movie.

Murat

On Mon, Jul 12, 2010 at 2:50 PM, David Chirot <[redacted]>wrote:

> Cult comic writer Harvey Pekar dead at 70 in Ohio
> July 12, 2010, 10:44 AM EST
> http://today.msnbc.msn.com/id/38206191/ns/today-today_books/?GT1=43001
>
> CLEVELAND (AP) -- Comic-book writer Harvey Pekar, whose autobiographical comic book series "American Splendor<http://movies.msn.com/movies/movie/american-splendor.1/>" portrayed his life with bone-dry honesty and wit, was found dead at home early Monday, authorities said. He was 70.
>
> Officers were called to Pekar's suburban home by his wife about 1 a.m., Cleveland Heights police Capt. Michael Cannon said. His body was found between a bed and dresser.
>
> Pekar had been suffering from prostate cancer, asthma, high blood pressure and depression, according to Cannon. Pekar had gone to bed about 4:30 p.m. Sunday in good spirits, his wife told police.
>
> An autopsy was planned, said Powell Caesar, a spokesman for the Cuyahoga County coroner's office in Cleveland. He had no information on the cause of death.
>
> Pekar took a radically different track from the superhero-laden comics that had dominated the industry. He instead specialized in the lives of ordinary people, chronicling his life as a file clerk in Cleveland and his relationship with his third wife, Joyce Brabner. His 1994 graphic novel, "Our Cancer Year," detailed his battle with lymphoma.
>
> The dreary cover scene shows him sprawled beside his wife on a snowy curbside with shopping bags on the ground. "Harvey, forget about the groceries, honey. Let's get you inside first," she says.
>
> Pekar never drew himself but depended on collaborations with artists, most notably his friend R. Crumb, who helped illustrate the first issue of the ironically titled "American Splendor," published in 1976. It was made into an acclaimed 2003 film<http://movies.msn.com/movies/movie/american-splendor.1/>starring Paul

Giamatti <http://movies.msn.com/celebrities/celebrity/paul-giamatti/>. The most recent "American Splendor" was released in 2008.

Pekar's quirky commentary developed a following and his insights and humor were often a bit on the dark side.

Lucy Shelton Caswell, curator of the Billy Ireland Cartoon Library & Museum at Ohio State University, said it was inaccurate to describe Pekar's work as "cult."

"His work was accepted by the mainstream," Caswell said. "It was bought by public libraries and read widely." The cartoon library has all of Pekar's works in its collection, she said.

"He will be remembered as an innovator who wrote stories about ordinary things that were then illustrated by some of the most notable cartoonists of the late 20th century," Caswell said. "People identified with what was writing about and the stories that these people were drawing because it was so ordinary."

In 2003, the New York Film Critics Circle honored "American Splendor" as best first film for the directing-writing team of Shari Springer Berman and Robert Pulcini <http://movies.msn.com/celebrities/celebrity/robert-pulcini/>. Part feature and part documentary, with animated elements added, the film starred Giamatti as the disgruntled Pekar.

Pekar, who was a repeat TV guest of David Letterman<http://movies.msn.com/celebrities/celebrity/david-letterman/>, told The Associated Press in a 1997 interview that he was determined to keep writing his "American Splendor" series.

"There's no end in sight for me. I want to continue to do it," Pekar said. "It's a continuing autobiography, a life's work."

↑ Index

116. Jules Boykoff
Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Tue 13 Jul 2010

Allison Cobb, _Green-Wood_ (Factory School Press, 2010). :
http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781600010675/greenwood.aspx

Kaia Sand, _Remember to Wave_ (Tinfish Press, 2010). :
http://tinfishpress.com/remember_to_wave.html

↑ Index

117. Obododimma Oha
The Naked Truth
Tue 13 Jul 2010

"The metaphors used in describing the aesthetics of the naked body in those days suggested the people's innocent appreciation of the pleasures of being in the flesh. The pubic hair that was rich and exuberant was called the "ozo ebule," the mane of the ram. The woman's breasts that were firm and ready were described as the ripe udala fruit. Naked bodies of humans always stimulated the creative sensibility and provided a language that said things beyond taboo."

Read the rest of "The Naked Truth<http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Opinion/Columns/5593034-182/story.csp>"
at:
http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Opinion/Columns/5593034-182/story.csp

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

118. Pam Brown
Calling doublechange or Kristin Prevallet
Tue 13 Jul 2010

Dear Poeticists,

Does anyone have an email address for 'doublechange.com' editorial contact please?
Or, failing that, does anyone have Kristin Prevallet's current email address?

Please back channel if you can help
[redacted]

Thanks a million,
Pam Brown

--

_____

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

_____

↑ Index

119. steve dalachinsky
Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists
Tue 13 Jul 2010

---

the kind that never spoke back HA

On Tue, 13 Jul 2010 07:32:01 -0500 mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
writes:
> Tuli had parrots? Anyone know what kind?
>
> On Tue, Jul 13, 2010 at 6:00 AM, Gerald Schwartz
> <[redacted]> wrote:
> > As the 1st Gulf War broke out I interviewed him live over the air > on WRPI... for over an hour... and at one point he said (with his > parrots bickering in the background) "You know, this all comes down > to Apha apes wanting their ways, having their way."
> >
> > Gerald S.
> >

> >
> > ---- Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
> >> I am, too. I first heard the Fugs in a lobby at Stony Brook > around 1967 &
> >> once stood behind Tuli K. in line at the Toronto Zoo.
> >>
> >>
> >> On 7/12/10 4:30 PM, "Thomas savage" <[redacted]>
> wrote:
> >>
> >> > I'm really sorry to hear about this. Tuli has been a part of > my life since I > >> > first heard the Fugs live when I was in my teens. So the man > who jumped off
> >> > the > >> > Brooklyn Bridge but didn't die, according to Ginsberg's great > poem, has > >> > finally > >> > passed away. He had a long, good life and was a joy to many > poets and other > >> > people both with his poems and his drawings.
> >> >
> >> >
> >> >
> >> >
> >> > _____
> >> > From: steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>
> >> > To: [redacted]
> >> > Sent: Mon, July 12, 2010 5:04:27 AM
> >> > Subject: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli > kupferberg passed > >> > away
> >> > today at noon please pass on to your lists
> >> >
> >> > great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg > passed away
> >> > today at noon
> >> > please pass on to your lists
> >> >
> Check guidelines &
> >> >
> >> >

> >> >
> >> >
> >> >
> Check guidelines &
> >>
> >
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

120. Jim Andrews
Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET
Tue 13 Jul 2010

> Taking an alternate route might be 'your own revolution,' as indicated by the title.

I would have thought "revolution" operates at at least a slightly higher level than the solipsistic.

> Or you really could just sit around waiting for the marketplace to find > you,
ever the undiscovered genius-in-wait.

it had dawned on some of them that they were already living in a post-capitalist world, but still it wasn't quite clear what that would eventually mean. what was clear, however, was that "marketplaces" and "poetry" just didn't have much in common anymore. paying the meagre connection even lip service had become tiresome and insulting.

> Must we all stick to prescribed, 'sanctioned' publication methods?

of course not.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

121. steve dalachinsky
tuli
Tue 13 Jul 2010

"WHAT THE HELL WAS THAT?"

Tuli Kupferberg, Poet, Songwriter, Anarchist, Jew - Dies at 86

Born Norman or in Hebrew, Naphtali on Sept 28, 1923 (one day and 22 years before me), poet, singer-songwriter, revolutionary, publisher, street vender, historian, mentor sage, wise man and wise guy, forward-thinking artist, activist, intellectual,pacifist, teacher, dreamer with a desire to contribute his ideas for the construction of a better world, boho and dear friend Tuli Kupferberg,who, though never really considering himself Beat was anthologized as early as 1959 in Fred Mcdarrah's The Beat Scene, died on Monday at N.Y. Downtown Hospital in Manhattan at the age of 86 after a prolonged battle with Life and all its joys and griefs and after suffering two dibilitating strokes. In the 1964 at age 40 he went on to become, in own his words, “the world’s oldest rock star” after co-founding the Fugs with poet Ed Sanders, and then-member Ken Weaver. They were in my opinion the first poetry/folk-rock band and a definite precursor of punk, bawdy and politically outspoken. Their first lp was produced by the equally legendary Harry Smith on Broadside and later re-issued on ESP along with their other lps. His first solo record, No Deposit, No Return was also issued by ESP. At the height of their career during the psychedelic era the group was signed by the then co-owned Frank Sinatra label Reprise who also signed Hendrix among others. When very he young worked as a medical librarian.

Tuli lived 2 blocks from my apt. We first officially met while both of us were hawking our wares on the street though I had known him through the music having first seen the Fugs play way back in the '60s in various venues such as a loft space on Great Jones street, the Provincetown Theatre, The Astor Place Theater, and once even at a free concert in Thompkins Square Park, where, standing behind me to my amazement was none other than Charles Mingus. When Tuli and I first conversed some time in the mid-70's he was hawking these pamphlets which were I think, like $1.29 for one and 99 cents for two, the catch being the more you bought the cheaper the became. Though I could be wrong , memory being what it is > Hey Tuli help me out here. He was fluent in yiddish. Had a passion for Yiddish theater which he shared with fellow poet and street vendor Harry Nudel and though he loved being a Yid was an avid supporter of Palestine. Tuli always told me he hated poetry and the scene in general. He was never hierarchical and didn't choose his friends on their status in the art world but on his ability to share with them his knowledge, sharp wit and love. There were the many times we sat together in the park sharing a pint of Haagen Daz or a Good Humor bar. He loved ice cream. Particularly chocolate.

Tuli's great songs included Morning, Morning, Kill For Peace and Nothing. On their last cd he wrote the poignantly beautiful " Where is My Wandering Jew Tonight" never forgetting his roots. Another song in that vein and of mocking protest was "Backward Jewish Soldiers" a para-song based on "Onward Christrian Soldiers." Tuli became something of celebrity when he was mentioned in Allen Ginsberg’s “Howl” as being the one who “jumped off the Brooklyn Bridge" then walking away "unknown and forgotten.” It was actually the Manhattan Bidge but the Brooklyn Bridge seemed more romantic. Actually he didn't walk away but was to Gouveneur Hospital with a minor spinal fracture.

He was published in and published such zines as Birth and Yeah and was the first to publish the African - American Beat poet Ted Joans as well as over 50 of his own books. He loved to take standard tunes which were called para-songs and write his own lyrics to them doing this more and more in his later years and while bedridden wrote a series of short pieces he called "perverbs" punning on well-known aphorisms and posting them on YouTube. He had a long running cable show called Revolting News which in its latter stages was filmed and edited by his long time partner Thelma Blitz.

Tuli has spent the past 20 or so years selling his cartoons on the street (me spending many of them with him or directly across the street selling lps and books) and inspiring many of us to not give up despite the adversities of government, war and $$$$. He embraced his Beatnik lifestyle as a friend once told me I should. He never shrank from his commitment to protest injustice. Never gave into the "MAN". Never took the straight and narrow path. Always fought corporate interests and a greedy, demonic capitalistic value system.

Long time drummer for the Fugs Coby Batty told me this story on the phone the day Tuli passed that one day while walking in Brooklyn Tuli turned and said that he wanted his epitaph to read "What the hell was that?" - and as he mentioned in one of his perverbs - "Life is funny, you can die." How Jewish can ya get??

His is survived by his wife, Sylvia Topp, three children, grand kids.

On Tue, 13 Jul 2010 12:54:16 +0000 Joel Lewis <[redacted]>
writes:
> I knew Pekar before he gained fame as a comic book writer. I worked > in a > jazz collectors shop in North Bergen, NJ & he was a legend among a > group of > Cleveland jazzbeaus. He would call us up on saturday (our only real > sales
> day0 & want to speak to my boss, soul jazz producer Bob Porter, > about Gene > Ammons.

>
> Harvey did a fantastic strip called "Local Poet" which is sadly not
> in > the "best of" volume that came out when the movie was released. It
>
> perfectly captured a local scene (with even a nod to da levy!) & to
> the > reality of being a working poet. This was characteristic of the best > of his > work -- being able to get inside the nuances of everyday lived life
> --
> another example was "Standing Behind Old Jewish Ladies in the > Supermarket
> Line". he was also an acute observer of racial and ethnic differnces
> in a > working class community. The best of this stuff is found in the > early > issues, before Harvey starts appearing on the old Letterman Late,
> late show
> & becomes a bit of a cult object.
>
> Hopefully, someone will collect pekar's jazz writings, mostly > reviews and,
> in later years, liner notes. They were honest and informed. Unlike a > lot of > older fans, he keep up with jazz currents. I interviewed him for an > article
> at the time of his "Our Cancer Year". He was telling me about his > interest
> in John Zorn & the then-rising "downtown scene" & added "I'm always
>
> interested in what's going on NOW."
>
> Joel Lewis
>
>
>

↑ Index

122. whit griffin
New Skysill Press Publication
Tue 13 Jul 2010

Dear All, I'm excited to announce the Skysill Press publication of my new book, Pentateuch: http://skysillpress.blogspot.com/2010/07/just-published.html whit

↑ Index

123. Gerald Schwartz
Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists
Tue 13 Jul 2010

As the 1st Gulf War broke out I interviewed him live over the air on WRPI... for over an hour... and at one point he said (with his parrots bickering in the background) "You know, this all comes down to Apha apes wanting their ways, having their way."

Gerald S.

---- Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
> I am, too. I first heard the Fugs in a lobby at Stony Brook around 1967 &
> once stood behind Tuli K. in line at the Toronto Zoo.
>
>
> On 7/12/10 4:30 PM, "Thomas savage" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > I'm really sorry to hear about this.Â Tuli has been a part of my life since I > > first heard the Fugs live when I was in my teens.Â So the man who jumped off
> > the > > Brooklyn Bridge but didn't die, according to Ginsberg's great poem, has > > finally > > passed away.Â He had a long, good life and was a joy to many poets and other > > people both with his poems and his drawings.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > _____
> > From: steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>
> > To: [redacted]
> > Sent: Mon, July 12, 2010 5:04:27 AM

> > Subject: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed > > away
> > today at noon please pass on to your lists
> >
> > great friend and poet writer anarchist fugÂ tuliÂ kupferberg passed away
> > today at noon
> > please pass on to your lists
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>

↑ Index

124. David-Baptiste Chirot

Tuli Kupferberg, Bohemian and Fug, Dies at 86

Tue 13 Jul 2010

Tuli Kupferberg, Bohemian and Fug, Dies at 86
http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/13/arts/music/13kupferberg.html?ref=arts

_____ The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multicalendar&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_5

↑ Index

125. amy king

Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET

Tue 13 Jul 2010

----- Original Message ----
From: John Cleary <j
Most welcome, John!

----- Original Message ----
From: John Cleary <[redacted]>

Thank you for sharing this post.
-- John

On Mon, Jul 12, 2010 at 4:21 PM, amy king <[redacted]> wrote:

> WHAT WOULD WOOLF AND WHITMAN DO?
> (A PRACTICAL PRIMER)
>
> â€œThis is the beauty of the new media. There is no way to control it.â€
> â€“Srdja
> Popovic
>
> Cont --
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/
> /

↑ Index

126. mIEKAL aND

Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists

Tue 13 Jul 2010

Tuli had parrots? Anyone know what kind?

On Tue, Jul 13, 2010 at 6:00 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]> wrote:
> As the 1st Gulf War broke out I interviewed him live over the air on WRPI... for over an hour... and at one point he said (with his parrots bickering in the background) "You know, this all comes down to Apha apes wanting their ways, having their way."
>
> Gerald S.
>
>
> ---- Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
>> I am, too. I first heard the Fugs in a lobby at Stony Brook around 1967 &
>> once stood behind Tuli K. in line at the Toronto Zoo.
>>
>>
>> On 7/12/10 4:30 PM, "Thomas savage" <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>> > I'm really sorry to hear about this. Tuli has been a part of my life since I >> > first heard the Fugs live when I was in my teens. So the man who jumped off

>> > the >> > Brooklyn Bridge but didn't die, according to Ginsberg's great poem, has >> > finally >> > passed away. He had a long, good life and was a joy to many poets and other >> > people both with his poems and his drawings.
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> > _____
>> > From: steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>
>> > To: [redacted]
>> > Sent: Mon, July 12, 2010 5:04:27 AM
>> > Subject: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed >> > away
>> > today at noon please pass on to your lists
>> >
>> > great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away
>> > today at noon
>> > please pass on to your lists
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >
>>
>
>

↑ Index

127. amy king

Re: YOUR OWN REVOLUTION: POETRY, PUBLISHING & THE INTERNET

Tue 13 Jul 2010

"Revolution" can operate on any level at any scale, including that of a 45 rpm record player, even now.

No one escapes the marketplace, not even the supposed hermit or the virtual interloper using the gas of his own 'private' internet / feelings.

----- Original Message ----
From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>

> Taking an alternate route might be 'your own revolution,' as indicated by the title.

I would have thought "revolution" operates at at least a slightly higher level than the solipsistic.

> Or you really could just sit around waiting for the marketplace to find you, ever the undiscovered genius-in-wait.

it had dawned on some of them that they were already living in a post-capitalist world, but still it wasn't quite clear what that would eventually mean. what was clear, however, was that "marketplaces" and "poetry" just didn't have much in common anymore. paying the meagre connection even lip service had become tiresome and insulting.

> â€œThis is the beauty of the new media. There is no way to control it.â€ â€“Srdja Popovic
>
> Cont --
>
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/
>
> /

↑ Index

128. steve dalachinsky
re tuli funeral
Tue 13 Jul 2010

tuli to be funeralized at st marks sat 12-3 then buried and afterward a "party" somewhere maybe at st marks

↑ Index

129. Joel Lewis
Harvey Pekar
Tue 13 Jul 2010

I knew Pekar before he gained fame as a comic book writer. I worked in a jazz collectors shop in North Bergen, NJ & he was a legend among a group of Cleveland jazzbeaus. He would call us up on saturday (our only real sales day0 & want to speak to my boss, soul jazz producer Bob Porter, about Gene Ammons.

Harvey did a fantastic strip called "Local Poet" which is sadly not in the "best of" volume that came out when the movie was released. It perfectly captured a local scene (with even a nod to da levy!) & to the reality of being a working poet. This was characteristic of the best of his work -- being able to get inside the nuances of everyday lived life -- another example was "Standing Behind Old Jewish Ladies in the Supermarket Line". he was also an acute observer of racial and ethnic differnces in a working class community. The best of this stuff is found in the early issues, before Harvey starts appearing on the old Letterman Late, late show & becomes a bit of a cult object.

Hopefully, someone will collect pekar's jazz writings, mostly reviews and, in later years, liner notes. They were honest and informed. Unlike a lot of older fans, he keep up with jazz currents. I interviewed him for an article at the time of his "Our Cancer Year". He was telling me about his interest in John Zorn & the then-rising "downtown scene" & added "I'm always interested in what's going on NOW."

Joel Lewis

↑ Index

130. steve dalachinsky
Re: tuli
Tue 13 Jul 2010

not done yet

On Tue, 13 Jul 2010 15:02:14 -0500 Maria Damon <[redacted]> writes:
> lovely, steve. thanks.
>
> steve dalachinsky wrote:
> > "WHAT THE HELL WAS THAT?"
> >
> > Tuli Kupferberg, Poet, Songwriter, Anarchist, Jew - Dies at 86
> >
> > Born Norman or in Hebrew, Naphtali on Sept 28, 1923 (one day and > 22 > > years before me), poet, singer-songwriter, revolutionary, > publisher,

> > street vender, historian, mentor sage, wise man and wise guy,
> > forward-thinking artist, activist, intellectual,pacifist, teacher, > > dreamer with a desire to contribute his ideas for the construction > of a > > better world, boho and dear friend Tuli Kupferberg,who, though > never > > really considering himself Beat was anthologized as early as 1959
> in
> > Fred Mcdarrah's The Beat Scene, died on Monday at N.Y. Downtown > Hospital
> > in Manhattan at the age of 86 after a prolonged battle with Life > and all > > its joys and griefs and after suffering two dibilitating strokes.
> In the > > 1964 at age 40 he went on to become, in own his words, “the > world’s > > oldest rock star” after co-founding the Fugs with poet Ed > Sanders, and > > then-member Ken Weaver. They were in my opinion the first > > poetry/folk-rock band and a definite precursor of punk, bawdy and > > politically outspoken. Their first lp was produced by the equally > > legendary Harry Smith on Broadside and later re-issued on ESP > along with > > their other lps. His first solo record, No Deposit, No Return was > also > > issued by ESP. At the height of their career during the > psychedelic era
> > the group was signed by the then co-owned Frank Sinatra label > Reprise who > > also signed Hendrix among others. When very he young worked as a > medical > > librarian.
> >
> >
> > Tuli lived 2 blocks from my apt. We first officially met while > both of > > us were hawking our wares on the street though I had known him > through > > the music having first seen the Fugs play way back in the '60s in > various > > venues such as a loft space on Great Jones street, the Provincetown > > Theatre, The Astor Place Theater, and once even at a free concert

> in > > Thompkins Square Park, where, standing behind me to my amazement > was none > > other than Charles Mingus. When Tuli and I first conversed some > time in > > the mid-70's he was hawking these pamphlets which were I think, > like
> > $1.29 for one and 99 cents for two, the catch being the more you > bought > > the cheaper the became. Though I could be wrong , memory being > what it is
> >
> >> Hey Tuli help me out here. He was fluent in yiddish. Had a > passion for
> >>
> > Yiddish theater which he shared with fellow poet and street vendor
> Harry
> > Nudel and though he loved being a Yid was an avid supporter of > Palestine.
> > Tuli always told me he hated poetry and the scene in general. He > was > > never hierarchical and didn't choose his friends on their status
> in the > > art world but on his ability to share with them his knowledge, > sharp wit
> > and love. There were the many times we sat together in the park > sharing a > > pint of Haagen Daz or a Good Humor bar. He loved ice cream.
> Particularly
> > chocolate.
> >
> >
> > Tuli's great songs included Morning, Morning, Kill For Peace and > Nothing.
> > On their last cd he wrote the poignantly beautiful " Where is My > > Wandering Jew Tonight" never forgetting his roots. Another song in > that > > vein and of mocking protest was "Backward Jewish Soldiers" a > para-song

> > based on "Onward Christrian Soldiers." Tuli became something of > > celebrity when he was mentioned in Allen Ginsberg’s “Howl” as > being the > > one who “jumped off the Brooklyn Bridge" then walking away
> "unknown and > > forgotten.” It was actually the Manhattan Bidge but the Brooklyn > Bridge > > seemed more romantic. Actually he didn't walk away but was to > Gouveneur
> > Hospital with a minor spinal fracture.
> >
> > He was published in and published such zines as Birth and Yeah and
> was > > the first to publish the African - American Beat poet Ted Joans as > well
> > as over 50 of his own books.
> > He loved to take standard tunes which were called para-songs and > write > > his own lyrics to them doing this more and more in his later years
> and > > while bedridden wrote a series of short pieces he called > "perverbs" > > punning on well-known aphorisms and posting them on YouTube. He > had a > > long running cable show called Revolting News which in its latter > stages
> > was filmed and edited by his long time partner Thelma Blitz.
> >
> > Tuli has spent the past 20 or so years selling his cartoons on the > street > > (me spending many of them with him or directly across the street > selling
> > lps and books) and inspiring many of us to not give up despite the > > adversities of government, war and $$$$. He embraced his Beatnik > > lifestyle as a friend once told me I should. He never shrank from > his > > commitment to protest injustice. Never gave into the "MAN". Never > took > > the straight and narrow path. Always fought corporate interests > and a > > greedy, demonic capitalistic value system.
> >

> >
> >
> > Long time drummer for the Fugs Coby Batty told me this story on > the phone
> > the day Tuli passed that one day while walking in Brooklyn Tuli > turned > > and said that he wanted his epitaph to read "What the hell was > that?" -
> > and as he mentioned in one of his perverbs - "Life is funny, you > can > > die." How Jewish can ya get??
> >
> > His is survived by his wife, Sylvia Topp, three children, grand > kids.
> >
> > On Tue, 13 Jul 2010 12:54:16 +0000 Joel Lewis <[redacted]>
> > writes:
> >
> >> I knew Pekar before he gained fame as a comic book writer. I > worked
> >> in a > >> jazz collectors shop in North Bergen, NJ & he was a legend among
> a > >> group of > >> Cleveland jazzbeaus. He would call us up on saturday (our only > real
> >> sales
> >> day0 & want to speak to my boss, soul jazz producer Bob Porter,
> >> about Gene
> >> Ammons.
> >>
> >> Harvey did a fantastic strip called "Local Poet" which is sadly > not
> >> in > >> the "best of" volume that came out when the movie was released.
> It
> >>
> >> perfectly captured a local scene (with even a nod to da levy!) &
> to
> >> the > >> reality of being a working poet. This was characteristic of the > best

> >> of his > >> work -- being able to get inside the nuances of everyday lived > life
> >> --
> >> another example was "Standing Behind Old Jewish Ladies in the > >> Supermarket
> >> Line". he was also an acute observer of racial and ethnic > differnces
> >> in a > >> working class community. The best of this stuff is found in the > >> early > >> issues, before Harvey starts appearing on the old Letterman Late,
>
> >> late show
> >> & becomes a bit of a cult object.
> >>
> >> Hopefully, someone will collect pekar's jazz writings, mostly > >> reviews and,
> >> in later years, liner notes. They were honest and informed.
> Unlike a
> >> lot of > >> older fans, he keep up with jazz currents. I interviewed him for > an > >> article
> >> at the time of his "Our Cancer Year". He was telling me about his
>
> >> interest
> >> in John Zorn & the then-rising "downtown scene" & added "I'm > always
> >>
> >> interested in what's going on NOW."
> >>
> >> Joel Lewis
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >
> >
>
>
>

↑ Index

131. Pierre Joris
Current Nomadics Blog Posts
Tue 13 Jul 2010

Check out these recent post from Nomadics blog at http://pierrejoris.com/blog/

Water, Rather than Oil

Tuli Kupferberg (1923-2010)

Robin Blaser Reading in Berkeley

Celan, Goethe, Hahneman, Handke and more.

Enough Oily Eyesores Already — I want Desert!

Jamais Deux sans Trois: Oil Dispersal Projection

Gulf Of Mexico Sea Floor Fractured Beyond Repair

Gulf Oil isn't All that's Leaking…

Picasso, Pablo Ruiz: Spanish Poet Who Dabbled in Painting, Drawing, and Sculpture

& have a great summer!

Pierre
==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========

↑ Index

132. Nicholas Ruiz III
What Is a Philosopher?
Tue 13 Jul 2010

Kritikos V.7, May-June 2010

What is a Philosopher?

http://intertheory.org/philosopher.htm

Nicholas Ruiz III, Ph.D
NRIII for Congress 2010
http://intertheory.org/nriiiforcongress2010.html

_____
Editor, Kritikos
http://intertheory.org

↑ Index

133. Nic Sebastian
Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: John Vick
Tue 13 Jul 2010

John Vick responds this week to Ten Questions on Poets and Technology - http://bit.ly/abA09T. Best, Nic

Nic Sebastianhttp://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com

_____ The New Busy is not the too busy. Combine all your e-mail accounts with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?tile=multiaccount&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_4

↑ Index

134. Dean Brink
Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
Tue 13 Jul 2010

Dear Kenneth,

If you are interested in exploring historically grounded writing that is just beyond the standard canon you might take a look at Brian Turner's _Here Bullet_, Barrett Watten's _Bad History_, Eliot Weinberger's _What Happened Here_, Rodrigo Toscano's dramatic-poetic engagements in _Collapsible Poetics Theater_, and Ali Zarrin's _I Made You Mine, America_ and _The Book of I_.

Best wishes for your project.

Dean Brink
Tamkang University, Taiwan
interpoetics.blogspot.com

↑ Index

135. David Chirot

Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry & Dyslexic Decompostions

Tue 13 Jul 2010

Dear Mark--

Many thanks!! (How cd i forget a title i love so much!--)

I had just been writing abt "Decompositions" and so "they" found their way into the "Smithsonian Depostions"--!!

Perhaps one might call it the "Decomposition of Old Depositions Muddied the Inks of Composition: Seismic Shifts in Title Recall Affect Textual Topographies"

Thanks again Mark and all very best for your summer-- et--- Joyeux Fetes!! pour le Quartrorze Juillet!

abrazos!
david

On Fri, Jul 9, 2010 at 11:34 PM, Mark DuCharme <[redacted]>wrote:

> Dave,
>
> The correct title of the Coolidge work that you speak of is Smithsonian Depositions / Subject to a Film.
>
> All Best,
>
> Mark DuCharme
>
> Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 15:13:22 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
> To: [redacted]
>
> Dear Kenneth--
>
> In the tradition of his great grandfather Herman Melville, Paul Metcalf combined documentary materials with fiction (as Melville does in Moby Dick)--in his great collage book Genoa: A Telling of Wonders, which is a novel interspersed with writings of Melville's and the Dairies of Columbus. Metcalf then went further, creating works which are completely made of others' writing, arranged as both historical/geological/floarl/fauna documentary materials arranged with a brilliant ear, creating music out of documentary (non-literary often) texts--his masterpiece in this vein is APALACHE--not a word of it being Paul's, yet at the same time, by way of his eye, ears, hands, tongue making the materials both intensely personal and and opening them outwards as though they have arisen from the ground itself. (Paul lived for some time on Quarry Road, very appropriately, as Susan Howe once pointed out--Paul had a great influence/effect on Howe's writings, as he himself had made use of Olson's works--minus the misogyny.) Other works by Paul treat the landscape, the shifting of the earth's tectonic plates in relation with migraines and a trip on route I-57, through Illinois, investigating the history and landscape of the region a he celebrates being"I-57" (he literally had just become "I-57" as in--Paul Metcalf, 57 years old.) Several others of Paul's works combine documentary materials with a kind of theatrical performance, a staging of historical events and personages in an imagined and associate theater --as in BOTH, a book which combines the lives & personages of John Wilkes Booth & Edgar Allan Poe (Booth/Poe yielding the "both" of the tile.) The performance and theatre aspect of the book, (Paul also wrote plays and performed in a few)-- of course, has as cathartic event the famous night in Ford's theater, in which Booth plays the role of his life & assassinates President Lincoln.

Place also plays a great role, is a great theme in Metcalf's works--as in Apalache & I-57--and in others works such as Huscaran, regarding he Indians of Peru, and The Wonderful White Whale of Kansas, which combines the life and works of Franck Baum author of the Oz Books, with Moby Dick into a study of the meaning of home. Waters of Potomac, like Apache is the "telling of --historical/geological/botanical etc--of wonders of that region, told, like Apalache via the poetic arrangement of documentary materials. In Zip Odes, small poems are composed for each state in the Union by using places names in the different Zip Code areas of rhe country. Many other works combines geographical an historical materials linking race tracks in North Carolinia with sites and histories in South America--

Though Metcal's works are in prose, it is a prose which traverses many modulations of the prose poem, making use of the lyrical impulse, the "voices" of history as in Pound's and WCW's works, documentary drawing on popular culture and contemporary historical events as John Dos Passos did in the USA trilogy, and the grandeur a form of epic in APALACHE. Though the form is in physical appearance prose or prose poem, the underlying structuring of the works is via the ear, via the poetic impulses and rhythms which run through the flow of time, history, ge0ology, the lives of people, places, things, animals, insects, plants--

Often the poetry of Metcalf's most astonishing passages attains the condition of music-Paul was a great admirer of another user of documentary materials, composer Charles Ives.

Coffee House, fortunately while Paul was stil alive--published a magnificent three volume Collected Works by Paul, which includes also his theatrical pieces and essays.

Asked at one point about his "collage" style of poetic/documentary construction, Paul jokingly called it "Totem Paul"--a vertical construction of the materials in space and time.

In another joking vein, as though seeing a cockeyed reflection of his own mixture of the documentary and other genres/media, Paul once wrote to me that a collage in Missouri was offering a course in the "South Sea Island Works of Herman Melville and the Hwiian films of Elvis Presley."

Paul was greatly admired by poets, more so than by prose writers. Besides Susan Howe, Robert Creeley was a great admirer of his works, s was Clark Coolidge, among many others. For roughly a decade Paul and his wife Nancy lived in close proximity to Black Mountain College and often attended events there as well as developing friendships with many of the poets and artists.

Paul first met Charles Olson when the latter was traveling about New England & New York, in search of the scattered volumes of Melville's library--with an eye towards assebling as many of the volumes as possible for the literary treasures they contained by way of Melville's Marginalia. 12-14 years old at the time, the much older Olson appeared to Paul as yet another one of the stream of Melville fans and obssssed fanatics, though far larger, and far more intensely essaying not only to collect information, but to become, as much as possible, a member of the Melville/Metcalf family line. For example, a vivid memory of Paul's was watching the gigatically framed Olson trying to hide behind bushes as he followed Melville's daughter down the street, trying to imitate her wlk, as though a "magical" way of "walking the walk" or "faking it until you make it" would transform him into an actual "embodiment" of the Melville "line."

I can't recommend Paul's work to you highly enough, with the understanding, however, that he may not be techncally/formally speaking, conventionally "poet enough" to "qualify." As Prose poetry, perhaps Paul's work might qualify--

Another work which is similar in some ways to Paul's is the brilliant Smithsonian Decompositions by Clark Coolidge. I would highly recommend this work, also--as Coolidge weaves a poetic "narrative" od a sort by combining quotes from interviews with Jean-Luc Godard, historical, geological texts, quotations from various fictional/poetical works linked by both associative trains of thought and the poetry of pure sound (as does Paul). Smithsonian Decompositions, like many of Paul's works, is a work of the imagination constructed out of streams of factual "things"--quotations, allusions, puns, "sound poetry" aspects, and the conveyance of visions of the imagination via the sturdy poem's "machine made out of words" (WCW).

I hope perhaps to have interested you into at least taking a look at Paul's works, as well as Coolidge's extraordinary Smithsonian Decompositions--

Date: Fri, 9 Jul 2010 10:22:49 -0400
From: [redacted]
Subject: Seeking Titles: Documentary / Social Poetry
To: [redacted]

I'm drawing together a list of poetry in English, especially book-length collections that might be described as documentary or social texts. Poems that respond in a self-conscious way to a temporal moment, be it contemporary or historical .... poems that absorb and refashion documents and found texts. The definition and scope are somewhat flexible; I'll list some of the titles I've already come up with. I suspect there are some egregious holes and oversights. I'd welcome suggestions of further additions that bear some family resemblance to these:

Charles Reznikoff, _Testimony_
Muriel Rukeyser, _US 1_
Kamau Brathwaite, _Middle Passages_
Rosemarie Waldrop, _A Key Into the Language of America_
Mark Nowak, _Coal Mountain Elementary_
Allen Ginsberg, _Kaddish_
David Antin, _Code of Flag Behavior_
WC Williams, _Paterson_
Charles Olson, _Maximus_
Melvin Tolson, _Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_
Susan Howe, _Singularities_
Lorine Niedecker, "North Central"
Jerome Rothenberg, "14 Stations"

Thanks for any help.

Hotmail is redefining busy with tools for the New Busy. Get more from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_2

Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?

> ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

136. David-Baptiste Chirot
FW: Klebnikov Karnaval--from Guido Vermeulen
Tue 13 Jul 2010

---

includes invite--takes place in belgium in sept--in belgian russian french etc
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Klebnikov Karnaval--from Guido Vermeual
Date: Tue, 13 Jul 2010 10:42:07 -0500

KLEBNIKOVJul 13, '10 10:16 AM for everyoneLink: http://khlebnikov.wordpress.com

Organisers of a yearly poetry festivalTags: belgium, poetry, vispo The New Busy think 9 to 5 is a cute idea. Combine multiple calendars with Hotmail. Get busy. _____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

137. nieuwland jeroen
Re: What Is a Philosopher?
Tue 13 Jul 2010

Nice piece, thanks. You raise this as the most presssing question for our time: "Why is the world failing in its promise of justice for all?" Well what about Badiou to name just one obvious example? He has a radical egalitarian philosophy & is also active politically, involved with the sans papiers in France. Agreed, though, that there are too few philosophers around, in your sense of the word, but were there ever enough? Best, Jeroen

_____
From: Nicholas Ruiz III <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, July 13, 2010 3:49:55 PM
Subject: What Is a Philosopher?

Kritikos V.7, May-June 2010

What is a Philosopher?

http://intertheory.org/philosopher.htm

Nicholas Ruiz III, Ph.D
NRIII for Congress 2010
http://intertheory.org/nriiiforcongress2010.html

_____
Editor, Kritikos
http://intertheory.org

↑ Index

138. steve dalachinsky
Re: re tuli funeral
Tue 13 Jul 2010

cemetery for tuli is

Greenwood Cemetry is on 5th Ave and 25th Street Brookyn, (kind of Bay Ridge - Bensonhurst but I'm not sure,
interdenominational - Henry Ward Beecher, Basquiat
and Leonard Bernstein all rest there.
> tuli to be funeralized at st marks sat 12-3 then buried and > afterward a
> "party" somewhere maybe at st marks

↑ Index

139. amy king
CFW -- call for submissions
Tue 13 Jul 2010

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: Katerina Stoykova-Klemer

Call for submissions: Accents Publishing, an independent press for brilliant voices (http://www.accents-publishing.com/), seeks poems of up to 50 words for an anthology of very short poems, edited by Katerina Stoykova-Klemer. Previously published work is accepted if credited. Send submissions, along with short bio, in the body of an e-mail to [redacted]

****

Poetry, Publishing, Women & the Internet
+ http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/

Poets for Living Waters
+ http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/
****

↑ Index

140. Benjamin Rybeck
Sonora Review Poetry Contest - $1000 Prize
Tue 13 Jul 2010

A prize of $1,000 and publication in Sonora Review - the literary journal published at the University of Arizona - is given annually for a poem. Claudia Rankine will judge. Submit up to three poems totaling no more than 10 pages with a $15 entry fee, either by post or online through our website. Each submission includes a copy of the winter issue and must be submitted online or postmarked by midnight December 1. Last year's recipient of the award, judged by Caroline Bergvall, was Peter Jay Shippy for his poem "White for diluting dreams."

Submit online at sonorareview.com.

Submit by post:

Sonora Review, Poetry Contest,
Department of English, University of Arizona
Tucson, AZ 85721.

↑ Index

141. carol dorf
Re: Harvey Pekar
Tue 13 Jul 2010

I didn't know Pekar, but this spring he came out to Berkeley to do a performance along with Dan Plonsey (a local composer & a colleague) at the Center for Jewish Studies. Plonsey and Pekar they had collaborated on an opera. The evening was very loosely structured; but I agree that Pekar's discussion of jazz was very much focused on contemporary music. The parts of the opera Plonsey's band and Pekar performed were compelling -- I hope the performance as a whole is revived.

On Tue, Jul 13, 2010 at 4:54 AM, Joel Lewis <[redacted]> wrote:

> I knew Pekar before he gained fame as a comic book writer. I worked in a jazz collectors shop in North Bergen, NJ & he was a legend among a group of Cleveland jazzbeaus. He would call us up on saturday (our only real sales day0 & want to speak to my boss, soul jazz producer Bob Porter, about Gene Ammons.

> Harvey did a fantastic strip called "Local Poet" which is sadly not in the "best of" volume that came out when the movie was released. It perfectly captured a local scene (with even a nod to da levy!) & to the reality of being a working poet. This was characteristic of the best of his work -- being able to get inside the nuances of everyday lived life -- another example was "Standing Behind Old Jewish Ladies in the Supermarket Line". he was also an acute observer of racial and ethnic differnces in a working class community. The best of this stuff is found in the early issues, before Harvey starts appearing on the old Letterman Late, late show & becomes a bit of a cult object.
>
> Hopefully, someone will collect pekar's jazz writings, mostly reviews and, in later years, liner notes. They were honest and informed. Unlike a lot of older fans, he keep up with jazz currents. I interviewed him for an article at the time of his "Our Cancer Year". He was telling me about his interest in John Zorn & the then-rising "downtown scene" & added "I'm always interested in what's going on NOW."
>
> Joel Lewis

↑ Index

142. Maria Damon

Re: tuli

Tue 13 Jul 2010

---

lovely, steve. thanks.

steve dalachinsky wrote:
> "WHAT THE HELL WAS THAT?"
>
> Tuli Kupferberg, Poet, Songwriter, Anarchist, Jew - Dies at 86
>
> Born Norman or in Hebrew, Naphtali on Sept 28, 1923 (one day and 22 > years before me), poet, singer-songwriter, revolutionary, publisher, > street vender, historian, mentor sage, wise man and wise guy,
> forward-thinking artist, activist, intellectual,pacifist, teacher, > dreamer with a desire to contribute his ideas for the construction of a > better world, boho and dear friend Tuli Kupferberg,who, though never > really considering himself Beat was anthologized as early as 1959 in > Fred Mcdarrah's The Beat Scene, died on Monday at N.Y. Downtown Hospital > in Manhattan at the age of 86 after a prolonged battle with Life and all > its joys and griefs and after suffering two dibilitating strokes. In the > 1964 at age 40 he went on to become, in own his words, “the world’s > oldest rock star” after co-founding the Fugs with poet Ed Sanders, and > then-member Ken Weaver. They were in my opinion the first > poetry/folk-rock band and a definite precursor of punk, bawdy and > politically outspoken. Their first lp was produced by the equally > legendary Harry Smith on Broadside and later re-issued on ESP along with > their other lps. His first solo record, No Deposit, No Return was also > issued by ESP. At the height of their career during the psychedelic era > the group was signed by the then co-owned Frank Sinatra label Reprise who > also signed Hendrix among others. When very he young worked as a medical > librarian.

>
>
> Tuli lived 2 blocks from my apt. We first officially met while both of > us were hawking our wares on the street though I had known him through > the music having first seen the Fugs play way back in the '60s in various > venues such as a loft space on Great Jones street, the Provincetown > Theatre, The Astor Place Theater, and once even at a free concert in > Thompkins Square Park, where, standing behind me to my amazement was none > other than Charles Mingus. When Tuli and I first conversed some time in > the mid-70's he was hawking these pamphlets which were I think, like > $1.29 for one and 99 cents for two, the catch being the more you bought > the cheaper the became. Though I could be wrong , memory being what it is
>
>> Hey Tuli help me out here. He was fluent in yiddish. Had a passion for
>>
> Yiddish theater which he shared with fellow poet and street vendor Harry > Nudel and though he loved being a Yid was an avid supporter of Palestine.
> Tuli always told me he hated poetry and the scene in general. He was > never hierarchical and didn't choose his friends on their status in the > art world but on his ability to share with them his knowledge, sharp wit > and love. There were the many times we sat together in the park sharing a > pint of Haagen Daz or a Good Humor bar. He loved ice cream. Particularly > chocolate.
>
>
> Tuli's great songs included Morning, Morning, Kill For Peace and Nothing.
> On their last cd he wrote the poignantly beautiful " Where is My > Wandering Jew Tonight" never forgetting his roots. Another song in that > vein and of mocking protest was "Backward Jewish Soldiers" a para-song > based on "Onward Christrian Soldiers." Tuli became something of > celebrity when he was mentioned in Allen Ginsberg’s “Howl” as being the > one who “jumped off the Brooklyn Bridge" then walking away "unknown and > forgotten.” It was actually the Manhattan Bidge but the Brooklyn Bridge > seemed more romantic. Actually he didn't walk away but was to Gouveneur > Hospital with a minor spinal fracture.

>
> He was published in and published such zines as Birth and Yeah and was > the first to publish the African - American Beat poet Ted Joans as well > as over 50 of his own books.
> He loved to take standard tunes which were called para-songs and write > his own lyrics to them doing this more and more in his later years and > while bedridden wrote a series of short pieces he called "perverbs" > punning on well-known aphorisms and posting them on YouTube. He had a > long running cable show called Revolting News which in its latter stages > was filmed and edited by his long time partner Thelma Blitz.
>
> Tuli has spent the past 20 or so years selling his cartoons on the street > (me spending many of them with him or directly across the street selling > lps and books) and inspiring many of us to not give up despite the > adversities of government, war and $$$$. He embraced his Beatnik > lifestyle as a friend once told me I should. He never shrank from his > commitment to protest injustice. Never gave into the "MAN". Never took > the straight and narrow path. Always fought corporate interests and a > greedy, demonic capitalistic value system.
>
>
>
> Long time drummer for the Fugs Coby Batty told me this story on the phone > the day Tuli passed that one day while walking in Brooklyn Tuli turned > and said that he wanted his epitaph to read "What the hell was that?" - > and as he mentioned in one of his perverbs - "Life is funny, you can > die." How Jewish can ya get??
>
> His is survived by his wife, Sylvia Topp, three children, grand kids.
>
> On Tue, 13 Jul 2010 12:54:16 +0000 Joel Lewis <[redacted]>
> writes:
>
>> I knew Pekar before he gained fame as a comic book writer. I worked
>> in a >> jazz collectors shop in North Bergen, NJ & he was a legend among a
>> group of >> Cleveland jazzbeaus. He would call us up on saturday (our only real

>> sales
>> day0 & want to speak to my boss, soul jazz producer Bob Porter, >> about Gene
>> Ammons.
>>
>> Harvey did a fantastic strip called "Local Poet" which is sadly not
>> in >> the "best of" volume that came out when the movie was released. It
>>
>> perfectly captured a local scene (with even a nod to da levy!) & to
>> the >> reality of being a working poet. This was characteristic of the best >> of his >> work -- being able to get inside the nuances of everyday lived life
>> --
>> another example was "Standing Behind Old Jewish Ladies in the >> Supermarket
>> Line". he was also an acute observer of racial and ethnic differnces
>> in a >> working class community. The best of this stuff is found in the >> early >> issues, before Harvey starts appearing on the old Letterman Late,
>> late show
>> & becomes a bit of a cult object.
>>
>> Hopefully, someone will collect pekar's jazz writings, mostly >> reviews and,
>> in later years, liner notes. They were honest and informed. Unlike a >> lot of >> older fans, he keep up with jazz currents. I interviewed him for an >> article
>> at the time of his "Our Cancer Year". He was telling me about his >> interest
>> in John Zorn & the then-rising "downtown scene" & added "I'm always
>>
>> interested in what's going on NOW."
>>
>> Joel Lewis
>>
>>
>>
>>

>
>

↑ Index

143. Francis Raven
Re: New Issue of There Is Now Online
Tue 13 Jul 2010

---

it looks so great, thanks again for including me!
all my best
Francis

On Fri, Jul 9, 2010 at 7:49 PM, Loretta Clodfelter
<[redacted]> wrote:
> The most recent issue of There is now up at http://www.therejournal.com.
>
> Check out new work from Dean Brink, Jeff Crouch, Lara Durback, Melissa > Eleftherion, Mark Stephen Finein, Crag Hill, Carrie Hunter, erica > lewis, Anne Elezabeth Pluto, Francis Raven, Christopher Rizzo, Sam > Schild, Jennifer Styperk, and Nicolette Westfall.
>
>

--
Francis Raven
2125 14th St. NW #332
Washington DC 20009
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://www.ravensaesthetica.com/

Raven's Occasional Spice Club:
http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/716933849/ravens-occasional-spice-club

↑ Index

144. Pam Brown
thanks - I have double change & Kristin Prevallet contacts
Tue 13 Jul 2010

Dear Poeticists,

Thanks very much

I have double change & Kristin Prevallet contacts now

All the best,
Pam

--

_____

blog : http://thedeletions.blogspot.com
website : http://pambrownbooks.blogspot.com/
associate editor : http://jacketmagazine.com/

& continuing with Jacket2 in 2011

_____

↑ Index

145. William James Austin

Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists

Tue 13 Jul 2010

Very sorry to hear this. I spent some time with Ed Sanders many years ago. I met Tuli on the streets of Soho. He was sitting behind a little sidewalk table (Spring Street), selling his poetry. Of course I own the Fugs' recordings. When they were appearing at the Cafe Wha, I was a regular performer a block away at the Cafe Bizarre. Those were great days.

So long, Tuli. Write for the sky.

William James Austin

-----Original Message-----
From: mIEKAL aND <[redacted]>
To: POETICS <[redacted]>
Sent: Tue, Jul 13, 2010 8:39 am
Subject: Re: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away today at noon please pass on to your lists

Tuli had parrots? Anyone know what kind? On Tue, Jul 13, 2010 at 6:00 AM, Gerald Schwartz <[redacted]> wrote: As the 1st Gulf War broke out I interviewed him live over the air on WRPI... or over an hour... and at one point he said (with his parrots bickering in the ackground) "You know, this all comes down to Apha apes wanting their ways, aving their way."

Gerald S.

---- Ruth Lepson <[redacted]> wrote:
> I am, too. I first heard the Fugs in a lobby at Stony Brook around 1967 &
> once stood behind Tuli K. in line at the Toronto Zoo.
>

>
> On 7/12/10 4:30 PM, "Thomas savage" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > I'm really sorry to hear about this. Tuli has been a part of my life since > > first heard the Fugs live when I was in my teens. So the man who jumped ff
> > the > > Brooklyn Bridge but didn't die, according to Ginsberg's great poem, has > > finally > > passed away. He had a long, good life and was a joy to many poets and ther > > people both with his poems and his drawings.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > _____
> > From: steve dalachinsky <[redacted]>
> > To: [redacted]
> > Sent: Mon, July 12, 2010 5:04:27 AM
> > Subject: great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed > > away
> > today at noon please pass on to your lists
> >
> > great friend and poet writer anarchist fug tuli kupferberg passed away
> > today at noon
> > please pass on to your lists
> >

↑ Index

146. Rob McLennan
12 or 20 questions with Jessica Smith,
Tue 13 Jul 2010

http://robmclennansindex.blogspot.com/2009/06/12-or-20-questions-second-series.html

rob

-- writer/editor/publisher ...STANZAS mag, above/ground press & Chaudiere Books (www.chaudierebooks.com) ...coord.,SPAN-O + ottawa small press fair ...poetry - wild horses (U of Alberta) ...2nd novel - missing persons www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com * http://robmclennan.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

147. steve dalachinsky
tuli update from family
Wed 14 Jul 2010

We have arranged to hold a service for Tuli at St. Marks church from 12-3 on Saturday, with a reception following shortly thereafter. We will have a viewing in a separate room at the beginning of the service for anyone who wishes to see him. We are still working on the details for the reception and will let you know shortly. There will be no religious element to the service, and Coby, Steve and Ed will be the main speakers, after which anyone who wants to can talk, sing, recite poetry, or whatever they like. He will be buried at Greenwood cemetery in Brooklyn on Monday morning at 9 am. We will send out another email with more details once we have figured them out, but you are welcome to tell anyone who asks, the funeral is open to whoever wishes to attend.

↑ Index

148. steve dalachinsky
Re: re tuli funeral
Wed 14 Jul 2010

---

update burial on monday reeption and srvice saturday

We have arranged to hold a service for Tuli at St. Marks church from 12-3 on Saturday, with a reception following shortly thereafter. We will have a viewing in a separate room at the beginning of the service for anyone who wishes to see him. We are still working on the details for the reception and will let you know shortly. There will be no religious element to the service, and Coby, Steve and Ed will be the main speakers, after which anyone who wants to can talk, sing, recite poetry, or whatever they like. He will be buried at Greenwood cemetery in Brooklyn on Monday morning at 9 am. We will send out another email with more details once we have figured them out, but you are welcome to tell anyone who asks, the funeral is open to whoever wishes to attend.

On Wed, 14 Jul 2010 01:02:06 +0530 steve dalachinsky <[redacted]> writes:
> cemetery for tuli is

>
> Greenwood Cemetry is on 5th Ave and 25th Street Brookyn, > (kind of Bay Ridge - Bensonhurst but I'm not sure,
> interdenominational - Henry Ward Beecher, Basquiat
> and Leonard Bernstein all rest there.
> > tuli to be funeralized at st marks sat 12-3 then buried and
> > afterward a
> > "party" somewhere maybe at st marks
>
>
>

↑ Index

149. Jonathan Morse

I blog about censorship, representation, and a line by Wallace Stevens

Wed 14 Jul 2010

---

at http://jonathan-morse.blogspot.com/2010/07/descartes-and-plato-humorists-in.html

Jonathan Morse

↑ Index

150. David Hadbawnik

kadar koli #5 now available

Wed 14 Jul 2010

Announcing the new issue of Kadar Koli <http://habenichtpress.com/?p=443>

http://habenichtpress.com/?p=443

Featuring visual art, translation, and poetry by: Barbara Maloutas, Brenda Ijima, Roger Snell, Nathaniel Mackey, Clifton Riley, Susan Briante, Teresa K. Miller, Kim Gek Lin Short, Warren Craghead, Ammiel Alcalay, Eileen Myles, Richard Owens, Carrie Kaser, Jessica Smith, Aaron Lowinger, Sarah Peters, Lisa A. Forrest, Michael Kelleher, Maria Mazziotti Gillan, Sean Reynolds. Edited by Micah Robbins and David Hadbawnik. Designed by Clifton Riley.

$10 plus shipping

get your copy today....

--DH

↑ Index

151. Nicholas Karavatos

Re: at Tigress Books in Salem, OR on Thursday, July 15 at 5:30 PM

Wed 14 Jul 2010

The poet will be accompanied by electronic guitarist Jeff Kelley.

Nicholas Karavatos
Dept of Language & Literature
American University of Sharjah
PO Box 26666
Sharjah
United Arab Emirates

> Date: Mon, 12 Jul 2010 21:19:01 +0000
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: at Tigress Books in Salem, OR on Thursday, July 15 at 5:30 PM
> To: [redacted]
>
>
> The Third Thursday Poets welcomes Nicholas Karavatos to Tigress Books in Salem, Oregon on July 15 at 5:30pm.
>
> NICHOLAS KARAVATOS is included in the anthology Punk Rock Saved My Ass (Ukiah: Medusa's Muse, 2010) and the latest issue of West Wind Review (University of Southern Oregon, 2010). In December 2009, Amendment Nine published his first book titled No Asylum (Arcata, 2009).
http://www.amazon.com/dp/0984280006/ref=cm_sw_su_dp
>
> David Meltzer wrote on the back cover: "Nicholas Karavatos is a poet of great range and clarity. This book is an amazing collectanea of smart sharp political poetry in tandem with astute and tender love lyrics. All of it voiced with an impressive singularity."
>
> Nicholas Karavatos lives near Dubai, teaching at the American University of Sharjah in the United Arab Emirates. Previously he taught in Muscat, Sultanate of Oman. He is a graduate of New College of California and Humboldt State University.
>
> https://www.thirdthursdaypoets.org/
> http://www.teapartybookshop.com/
>

> Nicholas Karavatos’ next poetry reading / book-signing is sponsored by Bay Area Writing Project as part of their series "Writing Teachers Write" at the Nomad Café, 6500 Shattuck, Oakland, CA on Wednesday, July 28, 2010 at 5:00pm.
>
> NO ASYLUM is available from these independent booksellers:
> Arcata, CA – Northtown Books
> La Jolla, CA – D.G. Wills Books
> Portland, OR – Powell’s Books
> San Francisco, CA – Bird & Beckett
> San Francisco, CA – Books & Bookshelves
> Venice, CA – Beyond Baroque
>
>
>
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

_____
Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

152. Alan Sondheim

Video documentation of Netfilmmakers event and talks in Copenhagen last year -

Wed 14 Jul 2010

Video documentation of Netfilmmakers event and talks in Copenhagen last year -

Gazira Babeli, Lance Shields, myself - check it out -

http://www.netfilmmakers.dk/netblog/?p=1333

Thanks to everyone at Netfilmmakers for this!

↑ Index

153. Nicholas Ruiz III
Re: What Is a Philosopher?
Thu 15 Jul 2010

Thanks - I've a few of Badiou's books - his writing is fairly interesting. I agree - if you're implying that there have never been enough philosophers. And that's one point, I suppose. And we've reached the point of diminishing returns for institutionalized philosophy, and poetics, I imagine.

Nick

Nicholas Ruiz III, Ph.D
NRIII for Congress 2010
http://intertheory.org/nriiiforcongress2010.html

_____
Editor, Kritikos
http://intertheory.org

_____
Director, Florida Forum for Social Justice http://intertheory.org/ffsj.htm

_____
From: nieuwland jeroen <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, July 13, 2010 1:55:20 PM
Subject: Re: What Is a Philosopher?

Nice piece, thanks. You raise this as the most presssing question for our time: "Why is the world failing in its promise of justice for all?" Well what about Badiou to name just one obvious example? He has a radical egalitarian philosophy

& is also active politically, involved with the sans papiers in France. Agreed, though, that there are too few philosophers around, in your sense of the word, but were there ever enough?
Best,
Jeroen

_____
From: Nicholas Ruiz III <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Tue, July 13, 2010 3:49:55 PM
Subject: What Is a Philosopher?

Kritikos V.7, May-June 2010

What is a Philosopher?

http://intertheory.org/philosopher.htm

Nicholas Ruiz III, Ph.D
NRIII for Congress 2010
http://intertheory.org/nriiiforcongress2010.html

Editor, Kritikos
http://intertheory.org

↑ Index

154. Dan Godston
Sounding into World Listening Day
Thu 15 Jul 2010

Sounding into World Listening Day

Saturday July 17 (10 p.m.) at Brown Rice

"Sounding into World Listening Day" is an event that starts on the eve of the first World Listening Day and concludes on World Listening Day. This event is being organized by members of the World Listening Project. The purposes of World Listening Day are:

. to celebrate the practice of listening as it relates to the world around us, environmental awareness, and acoustic ecology;

. to raise awareness about issues related to the World Soundscape Project, World Listening Project, World Forum for Acoustic Ecology, and individual and group efforts to creatively explore phonography;

. and to design and implement educational initiatives which explore these concepts and practices.

performers / performances will include:

excerpted performance of Staring at Walls, a play by Spencer Hutchinson

Alpha Bruton -- Vibrational Sound Narratives Projection

Jayve Montgomery -- reeds, electronics

Mojdeh Stoakley -- audio

Alex Wing -- upright bass, guitar

Jennifer Mosier -- electronics

Norman Long -- electronics

Paul Hartsaw -- tenor saxophone

Dan Godston -- trumpet, poetry

Kai Kraatz -- electronics

Bill Whitmer -- amplified banjo

Audio contributed by other World Listening Day participants around the world will be integrated into the performance. This includes contributions by DJ Spooky and other individuals, as well as audio which will be streaming live from locations around the world.

$10 suggested donation / sliding scale

Brown Rice

4432 N. Kedzie Ave., 1st floor

Chicago, IL 60625

www.brownricemusic.org

http://www.worldlisteningproject.org/?p=667

↑ Index

155. CA Conrad
NYC Chinatown poetry...
Thu 15 Jul 2010

NYC Chinatown (Soma)tic Poetry Workshop, all details here: http://myforehead.blogspot.com/

I'm looking forward to this!
CAConrad

--
PhillySound: new poetry http://PhillySound.blogspot.com

THE BOOK OF FRANK by CAConrad http://CAConrad.blogspot.com

↑ Index

156. steve dalachinsky
Re: OIl at 3:25 p.m. Today...
Thu 15 Jul 2010

---

hooray but it's just a band aid right now

On Thu, 15 Jul 2010 14:45:57 -0700 amy king <[redacted]>
writes:
> As of 3:25 p.m. TODAY the oil flow has supposedly stopped
>
> --
>

http://abcnews.go.com/WN/gulf-oil-spill-bps-cap-success-oil-stops/story?id=11173330
>
>
>
> But the poems have not -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/
>
>
>
> ********
> Poetry, Publishing, Women & the Internet
> +
> http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/
>
>
>
>
>
> Poets for Living Waters
> + http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/
> ********
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

157. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "King Amour" by Jack Foley

Thu 15 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "King Amour" by Jack Foley.

Description:

Jack Foleyâ€™s â€œKing Amourâ€ are amour-plated adventures that take the rider on a fifty-year journey in a soi-disant con-sciousness that takes itself serially and postulates both pos and impostures in a grand, grad granulation of mic and picturation. The Kong is dead, but the Konig kicks. Who but Amour would dorothy these ravings? As the great, inspiring, and possibly loony Samuel Greenberg wrote, â€œThe blue, faded purple, horizon mount / Seemed to bellow the valleys in mists / Of enriching, ensuing, divine shadowings... / Where may this be?

Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/king-amour/11781047

↑ Index

158. Christophe Casamassima

Dialogue's End: Chris McCreary & Marthe Reed Inter[Re]View each other

Thu 15 Jul 2010

Dialogue's End is a locus for interview, reviews, views...

http://thedialoguesend.blogspot.com/

This week's feature centers around Chris McCreary's new Furniture Press Books title, Undone: a fakebook, and Marthe Reed's Black Radish Books title, Gaze...

Next up, Emily Carr and David Wolach...

↑ Index

159. amy king

OIl at 3:25 p.m. Today...

Thu 15 Jul 2010

As of 3:25 p.m. TODAY the oil flow has supposedly stopped

--
http://abcnews.go.com/WN/gulf-oil-spill-bps-cap-success-oil-stops/story?id=11173330

But the poems have not -- http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/

****
Poetry, Publishing, Women & the Internet
+ http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/

Poets for Living Waters
+ http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/
****

↑ Index

160. Stephen Vincent
Reading Report: D McNaughton & L Kearney
Thu 15 Jul 2010

Bullets into the dark - so well crafted; tender, sharp, so much on target: Lawrence Kearney & Duncan McNaughton at Books &
Bookshelves (SF) last night, the darkness in the psychic eaves. To my knowledge, nothing quite like it in Contemp. Am.
Poetry. Poe in hand & much else unveiling the historic & present street, here & wars abroad, the Papacy included. Tar dark shivers. Terrific.If unfamiliar, suggest looking for their books!

Stephen Vincent
thttp://stephenvincent.net/blog/
New piece/ Paris: Ellsworth Kelly, C Brancusi, the Mali gazelle,
& the staircase shadow (pix inclu)

↑ Index

161. Jeffrey Side
Interview with Norman Fischer at The Argotist Online
Thu 15 Jul 2010

Interview with Norman Fischer at The Argotist Online:
Excerpt:
"First, no one needs me to write, there are enough great writers already. Second, I must do this, and will always fail, yet this doesnâ€™t matter. I will continue to believe that I will get it right the next time and this belief will keep me going. It strikes me that writing (at least writing as I view it, experimental--if that is the word, though I am sure it is not--writing) is a faith. An irrational faith. Really, it is a religion for writers, writing. Writing, you feel whole. Not writing, you feel sinful, unholy, incomplete, guilty, not right. Even if no one is paying money or attention, and you are not getting anywhere at all, you have to do it. I was thinking this the other day, talking to the many good friends, poets, who were at Leslie Scalapinoâ€™s funeral, a full on Zen Buddhist funeral at which I was officiating: that religion is essentially an imaginative practice. As writing is. Itâ€™s not â€œrealâ€ in the sense we commonly use that word. Writing is also not real. And yet it is essential."
http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Fischer%20interview.htm

↑ Index

162. Jen Tynes
Call for submissions: Horse Less Review #8
Thu 15 Jul 2010

From now until August 15, horse less press will be accepting submissions for horse less review #8. please send 3-10 pages of text to [redacted]. We prefer all pieces to be collected in one Word or RTF or PDF attached file. To get a sense of what we're into, check out the archives: http://www.horselesspress.com/horselessreview.html

↑ Index

163. steve dalachinsky
my short piece about tuli on line
Fri 16 Jul 2010

The piece is now up: http://blogs.forward.com/the-arty-semite/.

↑ Index

164. Obododimma Oha
CONTEXT, Volume 13, Number 1, March 2010
Fri 16 Jul 2010

The current issue of *CONTEXT: Journal of Social & Cultural Studies<http://contextjournal.wordpress.com/current-issue/> * (ISSN 1119 -- 9229) is now available. Contributors to this edition are: Jen Westmoreland Bouchard, John M. Bennett, Judith E. Johnson, Ayo Kehinde, Sarala Krishnamurthy, Biko Agozino, Tim Mayo, Francis Raven, Ifeyinwa Okolo, Alexander Kure, Sule E. Egya, Abdullahi M. Ashafa, Mukhtar U. Bunza, and Musa Idris Okpanachi.

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

165. Dan Godston

World Listening Day at the Chicago Underground Library

Fri 16 Jul 2010

World Listening Day at the Chicago Underground Library

Sunday, July 18 (2 p.m.)

You are invited to come to a World Listening Day event that is being hosted by the Chicago Underground Library --

* a soundwalk that happens inside the building and around the neighborhood * a performance led by composer and instrument builder Douglas Ewart * a listening party, with field recordings being played. Participants will include Eric Leonardson, Fereshteh Toosi, Norman Long, Jimmy Bennington, Dan Godston, and other TBA individuals.

This event is being organized by the Midwest Society for Acoustic Ecology. It is free and open to the public, BYOB, bring your own food!

Chicago Underground Library -- 621 W. Belmont, 2nd Floor, Chicago, http://underground-library.org

World Listening Day -- http://www.worldlisteningproject.org/?p=667

Midwest Society for Acoustic Ecology -- http://mwsae.org/

↑ Index

166. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Brainiography” by Evelyn Posamentier

Sat 17 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œBrainiographyâ€ by Evelyn Posamentier
Description:
In â€œBrainiographyâ€ Evelyn Posamentier creates a dreamscape in which objects become animate and humans objectified, both inhabiting a marginal realm between physical and virtual dimensions. In language that is neither pre-modern nor postmodern, a compelling narrative brings language to a turning point. Here is poetry responsive to encounters with world and technologyâ€”brutal and immediate. A new form of witness.

Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/brainiography/11786920

↑ Index

167. Jeffrey Side
Jake Berry and Chris Mansel in Conversation at The Argotist Online
Sat 17 Jul 2010

Jake Berry and Chris Mansel in Conversation

â€œThere is still great poetry sneaking out as pop music because that's the medium in which it is performed. It's a long list and everyone that really loves popular music and devotes time to listening to it will know immediately what I'm talking about. When I use the term popular music, I mean all the music that has been popular in terms of a large audience (compared to other forms like classical, avant-garde, art song and so forth) over the last century as recording technology has made music available to everyone.

There's no small amount of modernism in pop music either. But you rarely hear people complain about the difficulty of a Radiohead lyric for instance, or the obscurity of Beck's references. People talk about the words. They recognize them as being more abstract, but that isn't a problem. There are millions of people walking around singing lyrics that are open to as many interpretations as there are listeners and few have a problem with this.

Does the fact that you can sing an obscure bit of poetry make it better somehow than reading it in a book? Maybe it does. Maybe someone should set The Maximus Poems to a nice backbeat, mix in a heavy bass line and some nice guitar licks. I bet if a successful artist did that and didn't call any attention to the fact, beyond the essential permission notice buried in the credits, we'd have people all over the world singing Olson.â€

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/Berry%20interview.htm

↑ Index

168. Jim Finnegan
Gloucester Writers House
Sat 17 Jul 2010

GLOUCESTER WRITERS CENTER
Contact: [redacted] or [redacted]
(Peter Anastas, Charles Olson and Vincent Ferrini, left to right, at 126 East Main Street c.1965. Mark Power photograph)

Gloucester may soon be home to a new cultural and literary center.

When Gloucesterâ€™s Poet Laureate Vincent Ferrini died on Christmas Eve 2007, many of his friends in Gloucester and around the world hoped his house could be purchased and turned into a center where artistic activities could be shared with the community. Today this idea is very close to becoming a reality.

Plans are progressing to establish The Gloucester Writers Center at the Ferrini house in Gloucester, Massachusetts. This former home of Vincent Ferrini (1913-2007) lies across the harbor from Charles Olsonâ€™s (1910-1970) 28 Fort Square home. These two poets, known as the consciences of our city for over half a century, wrote about Gloucester with enlightened passion and energy. Organizers of this project believe it is only fitting that a place that honors their work and keeps their vision alive be established.

Since Ferriniâ€™s death Paul Sawyer, an old friend of Vincentâ€™s who lives in California, has been advocating for the purchase of the house. This spring, Sawyer, a Unitarian- Universalist Minister, called Vincentâ€™s nephew filmmaker Henry Ferrini to report that he has Pancreatic Cancer and has been given a year to live. With that time he wanted to put his energy toward helping to create a Vincent Ferrini/ Charles Olson Writers Center at Vincentâ€™s East Main Street studio. The poetâ€™s nephew was moved by Reverend Sawyerâ€™s decision.

â€œHis decision has motivated many people close to Vincent, Charles and Paul to work toward creating an innovative educational and cultural organization that will be a lasting asset to Gloucester.â€ Ferrini said.

To date the group has raised $84,900 toward the purchase price of $100,000. According to Ferrini, the timing and situation for this project couldnâ€™t be better.â€

â€œ Raising the $100,000 means weâ€™ll be mortgage free and tax-exempt, an enviable position for any organization. The Center can live on in perpetuity with out much overhead. Plus 2010 is Charles Olsonâ€™s Centenary,â€ he says, â€œand attention is focused on Olson and Gloucester.â€

The group hopes that by the time Gloucester celebrates Olsonâ€™s centenary in October the house will be open to tour. Tax-deductible contributions for the establishing of the Ferrini Olson Writers Center can be made to the Charles Olson Society and sent to Henry Ferrini, 5 Wall Street, Gloucester, MA 01930

↑ Index

169. Jeffrey Side
(no subject)
Sat 17 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is 'Light as a Fetter' by Chris Stroffolino
Description:
Chris Stroffolinoâ€™s 'Light as a Fetter' is a collection of poems inspired by Cliffs Notes, which John Ashbery has described as â€˜carelessly brilliantâ€™.
Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/light-as-a-fetter/11787261

↑ Index

170. Jeffrey Side
The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is Light as a Fetter by Chris Stroffolino
Sat 17 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is 'Light as a Fetter' by Chris Stroffolino.
Description:
Chris Stroffolinoâ€™s 'Light as a Fetter' is a collection of poems inspired by Cliffs Notes, which John Ashbery has described as "carelessly brilliant"..
Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/product/ebook/light-as-a-fetter/11787261

↑ Index

171. Brian Seabolt
Raft Magazine: call for new work
Sat 17 Jul 2010

Raft, a new online literary journal, is currently accepting submissions. Please click http://www.raftmagazineonline.com for our mission statement and contact information.

--

_____
Search for products and services at:
http://search.mail.com

↑ Index

172. Ruth Lepson
Re: Gloucester Writers House
Sat 17 Jul 2010

I'm there!

On 7/17/10 9:40 AM, "Jim Finnegan" <[redacted]> wrote:

> GLOUCESTER WRITERS CENTER
> Contact: [redacted] or [redacted]
> (Peter Anastas, Charles Olson and Vincent Ferrini, left to right, > at 126 East Main Street c.1965. Mark Power photograph)
>
> Gloucester may soon be home to a new cultural and literary center.
>
> When Gloucester¹s Poet Laureate Vincent Ferrini died on Christmas Eve 2007, many of > his friends in Gloucester and around the world hoped his house could be purchased and > turned into a center where artistic activities could be shared with the community. Today > this idea is very close to becoming a reality.
>
> Plans are progressing to establish The Gloucester Writers Center at the Ferrini house in > Gloucester, Massachusetts. This former home of Vincent Ferrini (1913-2007) lies across > the harbor from Charles Olson¹s (1910-1970) 28 Fort Square home. These two poets, > known as the consciences of our city for over half a century, wrote about Gloucester with > enlightened passion and energy. Organizers of this project believe it is only fitting that a > place that honors their work and keeps their vision alive be established.
>
> Since Ferrini¹s death Paul Sawyer, an old friend of Vincent¹s who lives in California, has > been advocating for the purchase of the house. This spring, Sawyer, a Unitarian- > Universalist Minister, called Vincent¹s nephew filmmaker Henry Ferrini to report that he > has Pancreatic Cancer and has been given a year to live. With that time he wanted to put > his energy toward helping to create a Vincent Ferrini/ Charles Olson Writers Center at > Vincent¹s East Main Street studio. The poet¹s nephew was moved by Reverend Sawyer¹s > decision.
>
> ³His decision has motivated many people close to Vincent, Charles and Paul to work toward creating an innovative educational and cultural organization that will be a > lasting asset to Gloucester.² Ferrini said.
>
> To date the group has raised $84,900 toward the purchase price of $100,000.

> According to Ferrini, the timing and situation for this project couldn¹t be better.²
>
> ³ Raising the $100,000 means we¹ll be mortgage free and tax-exempt, an enviable > position for any organization. The Center can live on in perpetuity with out much > overhead. Plus 2010 is Charles Olson¹s Centenary,² he says, ³and attention is focused on > Olson and Gloucester.²
>
> The group hopes that by the time Gloucester celebrates Olson¹s centenary in October the house will be open to tour. Tax-deductible contributions for the establishing of the Ferrini Olson Writers Center can be made to the Charles Olson
> Society and sent to Henry Ferrini, 5 Wall Street, Gloucester, MA 01930

↑ Index

173. Jeff Davis

Fwd: 2nd Annual Re-Viewing Black Mountain College Conference

Sat 17 Jul 2010

This in from the Black Mountain College Museum + Arts Center:

The July 31st Deadline for Proposals is Approaching!
2nd Annual Re-Viewing Black Mountain College Conference
October 8-10, 2010

The legacy of Black Mountain College continues to influence contemporary culture in multiple realms. This conference aims to investigate its history as well as the multiple paths of influence, actual and possible, identifiable in the contemporary world and beyond.

Co-hosted by The Black Mountain College Museum + Arts Center and the University of North Carolina at Asheville

Keynote Speaker: Kenneth Snelson Kenneth Snelson is a major American sculptor with work in collections including the Metropolitan Museum of Art, MOMA, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis, the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington, D.C., museums in Holland, Australia, Japan and Germany and public art commissions all over the world. He also holds several U.S. patents. Snelson was a student at Black Mountain College in the summers of 1948 and 1949, where he worked closely with Buckminster Fuller, and where he discovered the principle known as "tensegrity". Known primarily for his gravity defying sculptures, Snelson is also an accomplished photographer with a particular interest in panoramic photographs. The recent publication Kenneth Snelson: Forces Made Visible traces this important artist's five-decade career.

Papers, performances, multi-media and panel proposals in all relevant disciplines are welcome. Abstracts of 400-600 words should be submitted to Brian Butler ([redacted]) by July 31, 2010. Notification will be made by August 28, 2010.

(I'm hoping for some good panels on Olson, myself)

On the web at http://naturespoetry.blogspot.com

↑ Index

174. Kyle Schlesinger
Poems & Pictures
Sat 17 Jul 2010

POEMS & PICTURES
Curated by Kyle Schlesinger
Center for Book Arts
28 West 27th Street, 3rd Floor
New York City
July 7, 2010 - September 11, 2010

Poems and Pictures: A Renaissance in the Art of the Book (1946 - 1981) examines relationships between visual and language art. The exhibit features over 60 books produced between 1946 and 1981, as well as paintings, collages, periodicals, and ephemera. Poets, artists and collaborators include John Ashbery, Asa Benveniste, Bill Berkson, Wallace Berman, Joe Brainard, Frances Butler, Robert Creeley, Jim Dine, Johanna Drucker, Kenward Elmslie, Ted Greenwald, Philip Guston, Alastair Johnston, RB Kitaj, Joanne Kyger, Henry Miller, Michael Myers, Frank O¹Hara, Ron Padgett, Kenneth Patchen, Tom Raworth, Larry Rivers, George Schneeman, Holbrook Teter, Wes Wilson, and many more. The exhibition concludes with corresponding works by emerging artists and writers such as Charles Alexander, Aaron Cohick, Karen Randall, and Emily McVarish.

&

Don¹t miss the panel discussion featuring painter Trevor Winkfield, poet Miles Champion and publisher of Granary Books Steve Clay. Moderated by Michael Basinski, poet and curator of the Poetry Collection at the University at Buffalo. Wednesday, July 28th @ 6:30pm

A comprehensive catalog will be available in August. Reserve your copy by writing to [redacted]

http://www.centerforbookarts.org/exhibits/.org

↑ Index

175. sam truitt

Wolsak's SQUEEZED LIGHT.... Review Copies Available

Sat 17 Jul 2010

Station Hill announces the fall publication of:

Squeezed Light: Collected Poems 1994-2005
by Lissa Wolsak

Lissa Wolsak, a poet who seemingly emerged fully-formed in the mid-1990s, now offers access to the realized body of her work in this collection. Neither easily classified nor directly traceable to a particular school or lineage, she stands instead within her own continuously evolving context—one as free of convention and fashion as it is independent of thought outside the work itself. “The mirror would do well to reflect further,” demands Jean Cocteau’s Orphic radio voice, and Wolsak’s poetry answers to this strange admonition: For the self-reflective moment in her work takes us far beyond familiar literary practices of self-attention and recursive discourse. Again and again this work reaches a genuinely mysterious interpenetration of vivid awareness, renewed language, and human care.

SQUEEZED LIGHT includes all of Wolsak’s previously published poetry to date, her essay in poetics “An Heuristic Prolusion,” an interview with the author, and an introductory essay by George Quasha with Charles Stein.

For a PDF of SQUEEZED LIGHT for review consideration, please email [redacted]

All past poets, in particular, Pound and Zukofsky, were not porous enough. Lissa Wolsak subtends as egregiously porous. She pours tenacious slipperiness every which way—how very yes. —Madeline Gins

It’s not that Lissa Wolsak’s words are made up, but that the words have made up a relation between themselves that is of the author. In order for isolate words to be continuous “acts of symmetry,” they are “to move through that silence which linear language admits, its lack of fullness, its utter necessity.” Her words are this non-random arising in necessity. —Leslie Scalapino

I am still learning to read Lissa Wolsak—an immensely entertaining and demanding project. I am being reeducated in the pleasures of using the dictionary to discover how awareness of the roots and branches of words tightens their hold on the world. —Charles Altieri

ISBN 978-1-58177-116-9 1-58177-116-9
Publication September 1, 2010
Pages 288 Size 6.00 x 9.00 in.
Price $21.95
Binding Paperback

Sam Truitt
Managing Director
Station Hill Press of Barrytown
120 Station Hill Road
Barrytown, NY 12507
O-[redacted]
C-[redacted]
www.stationhill.org

↑ Index

176. Camille Martin

New @ Rogue Embryo: Monty Reid's phantom settlement + passion flowers, Gulf fritillaries, and cultural exoticism

Sun 18 Jul 2010

New @ Rogue Embryo

* Passion Flowers, Gulf Fritillary Butterfies, and Cultural Exocitism

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/07/17/passion-flowers-gulf-fritillary-butterflies-and-cultural-exoticism/

* Monty Reid’s The Luskville Reductions: Poems from a Phantom Settlement

http://rogueembryo.wordpress.com/2010/07/13/monty-reids-the-luskville-reductions-poems-from-a-phantom-settlement/

Cheers!

Camille Martin

Sonnets:
http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2010/martin.html

Codes of Public Sleep :
http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781897388112/codes-of-public-sleep.aspx

↑ Index

177. Noah Eli Gordon
2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sun 18 Jul 2010

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date). _____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

178. Mark Young
Now out from Otoliths—"Expanding The Radius" by Mary Ellen Derwis & Joe Balaz
Sun 18 Jul 2010

Expanding The Radius

Mary Ellen Derwis & Joe Balaz

72 pages, full color

Otoliths, 2010

ISBN: 978-0-9807651-0-6

$24.95 (currently with free postage in the U.S.)

URL: http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/expanding-the-radius/11020602

Early on in Expanding The Radius, Mary Ellen Derwis gives us an untitled narrative sequence of digital art, hinting at the human form, which picks up again towards the end of the book in a more figurative sequence— “Rendezvous”. Intimate portraits, wider anthropological insights, and other strongly titled art also prevail. Among other tightly woven directives, Joe Balaz includes multi-paged narrations “High in Blue”, “Fairly Textual”, and “The Industrial Poet”. Then there are the collaborations which find a distinct third voice, as often happens when two people are so creatively in synch. The book ends with two of Mary Ellen’s urban shots that include typographical symbols and a similar photo, a final pun by Joe— “C and Leave”. Many of these images have appeared separately in the quarterly “Otoliths”; now it’s a pleasure to see/read this combined three headed body of always direct, sometimes humorous, often profound digital art, visual poetry, and collaborations. —C. Mehrl Bennett

& a reminder that the full Otoliths catalog, which includes Paul Siegell, Nick Piombino, Sheila Murphy, Adam Fieled, Martin Edmond, Eileen Tabios, Nico Vassilakis, Spencer Selby, Denise Duhamel & Sandy McIntosh, Anny Ballardini, Geof Huth, & many more authors, can be found at The Otoliths Storefront <http://stores.lulu.com/l_m_young>.

↑ Index

179. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sun 18 Jul 2010

---

for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).

but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?

Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."

&&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell. & it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.

but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right? & so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]>
Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date). _____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

180. Adam Fieled
"The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Sun 18 Jul 2010

This is an essay of mine newly published in Word for Word, "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry":

http://www.wordforword.info/vol17/Fieled.htm

Many thanks to Jonathan Minton.

Enjoy.

Adam

↑ Index

181. Jennifer Karmin
4000 WORDS 4000 DEAD: call for submissions
Sun 18 Jul 2010

4000 WORDS 4000 DEAD
call for submissions

"I want to start with the milestone today of 4,000 dead in Iraq. Americans. And just what effect do you think it has on the country?"

-- Martha Raddatz,
ABC News' White House correspondent
to Dick Cheney in 2008

Jennifer Karmin has been collecting 4000 WORDS for the over 4000 DEAD Americans in Iraq. All words are being used to create a public poem. During street performances, she gives away these words to passing pedestrians. Submissions are ongoing as the Iraq War continues and the number of dead grows. Send 1-10 words with subject 4000 WORDS to [redacted].

Sponsored by:
NOT CONTENT
A series of text projects curated by Les Figues Press
as part of Los Angeles Contemporary Exhibitions
year-long initiative Public Interest
http://www.notcontent.lesfigues.com

UNNATURAL ACTS
July 21-August 11
Los Angeles, California

Taking its name from the historic collaborative writing marathons led by Bernadette Mayer and others in NYC during 1972-73, Unnatural Acts will explore the themes of hunger, war, and desire through public acts of collaboration.

Beginning with two days of installation and performance by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin, a group of eleven writers/artists will gather on the third day to write together over the course of eight hours. In a daily ritual inaugurated on the fourth day, the outline of a new personâ€™s body will be traced onto the bodies of text until the exhibit closes on August 11th.

ALL EVENTS OPEN TO THE PUBLIC - 6522 Hollywood Blvd
http://www.welcometolace.org/events/view/unnatural-acts

July 21: Amina Cain
Installation (12-5)
Hunger Texts Read in the Dark performance (5-5:30pm)

July 22: Jennifer Karmin
Installation (12-5)
4000 Words 4000 Dead street performance (5-6pm)

July 23: Unnatural Acts
8 hours of collaborative writing (12-8pm)
Collaborators include: Harold Abramowitz, Tisa Bryant, Amina Cain, Teresa

Carmody, Saehee Cho, Kate Durbin, K. Lorraine Graham, Jennifer Karmin, Laida Lertxundi, India Radfar, and Mark Wallace.

July 24: Presentations
Artistsâ€™ Talk (2-3pm)
Collaborative Reading (4-6pm)
Readers include: Harold Abramowitz, Tisa Bryant, Amina Cain, Teresa Carmody, Kate Durbin, K. Lorraine Graham, Jennifer Karmin, India Radfar, and Mark Wallace.

AMINA CAIN is the author of the short story collection I Go To Some Hollow (Les Figues Press, 2009), and a forthcoming chapbook, Tramps Everywhere (Insert Press/PARROT SERIES). A recording of her story â€œAttached to a Selfâ€ was included in the group show A Diamond in the Mud at Literaturhaus Basel in Switzerland in 2008; other work has appeared in publications such as 3rd Bed, Action Yes, Denver Quarterly, onedit, Sidebrow, and Wreckage of Reason: Xxperimental Prose by Women Writers. She lives in Los Angeles. http://aminacain.com

JENNIFER KARMIN's text-sound epic, Aaaaaaaaaaalice, was published by Flim Forum Press in 2010. She curates the Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. A proud member of the Dusie Kollektiv, she is the author of the Dusie chapbook Evacuated: Disembodying Katrina. Walking Poem, a collaborative street project, is featured online at How2. In Chicago, Jennifer teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the public schools. http://aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

↑ Index

182. Francesco Levato

Call for Submissions: Atlanta Review - Italy Issue

Sun 18 Jul 2010

Atlanta Review seeks submissions of Italian poetry translated into English for an upcoming issue focused on Italy.

Please send 3-5 unpublished poetry translations, via email, as an attachment, to the address below. Submissions should be in Microsoft Word format, 12 point type. Please include your name and contact email, as well as the original title and author in your submission. And though only the English version will appear in Atlanta Review, please include the original language version of each poem.

Deadline: submissions must be received by September 15th, 2010

Send submissions to:

Francesco Levato
[redacted]

Please put Atlanta Review and your name in the subject line.

↑ Index

183. Jessica Wickens
New Issue of Monday Night
Sun 18 Jul 2010

Announcing Issue 9 of Monday Night <http://www.mondaynightlit.com/> in print and online editions!

*Including poetry, fiction, and things in-between from: *Ben Bellizi, Joe Celizic, Amber DiPietra, Steffi Drewes, Israel Francisco Haros, Colin James, Dan Moreau, Joa Suorez, Elizabeth Terrazas, Marissa Bell Toffoli, Noah Uitermark, & Della Watson

Order <http://www.mondaynightlit.com/read/8_allen.html> a print copy today for $3 or read <http://www.mondaynightlit.com/read/8_allen.html> it online at Monday Night <http://www.mondaynightlit.com/index.html>: because new lit beats old TV any night of the week. Also available soon in these fine bookstores: Diesel <http://www.dieselbookstore.com/> (Oakland), City Lights<http://www.citylights.com/>(SF), Quimby's <http://www.quimbys.com/> (Chicago), & Pegasus<http://www.pegasusbookstore.com/>(Berkeley).

↑ Index

184. Lisa Samuels
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sun 18 Jul 2010

Thank you Richard for expressing your clear principles concerning prize culture and languages of 'submission'. With warmth and respect I note that the latter part of your message might get a little away from that message - I see no need to suggest editorial incompetence in order to make points about competition and the politics of speech acts. And I can't make an easy equation between competition and acceptable topics for poetry & critical work.

But I do concur with your points about competitiveness and the 'submit' button. About prize culture especially I agree - universites love to have their workers win prizes, and it is a challenge to find ways of opting out of submitting to prizes. Part of that resistance involves, at least for me, reminding my employers, locally, of the kind of work I do, aspire to do, and value from others. And creating and participating in contexts for cooperation, which are sometimes local - like the current trans-Tasman Home & Away events we're doing here this year - and sometimes as wide as this list is long. Warm regards, Lisa

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 5:53 AM, richard owens <[redacted]> wrote:
> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).
>
> but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?
>
> Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."
>
> &&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell. & it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.
>
> but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right? & so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.
>
>
> .....richard owens
> 810 richmond ave
> buffalo NY 14222-1167
>
> damn the caesars, the journal
> damn the caesars, the blog

>
> --- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> From: Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]>
> Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
> To: [redacted]
> Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM
>
> 2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.
>
>
> Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

185. Pierre Joris
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

hear! hear! in all my years of teaching one of the first recommendations I give young writers is never ever to enter such "small reading fee" competitions as they are by their nature scam affairs, no matter how hip and experimental they claim to be. Basic capitalist exploitation. Right on Richard. — Pierre

On Jul 18, 2010, at 1:53 PM, richard owens wrote:

> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).

but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?

Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."

&&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell. & it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.

but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right? & so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]>
Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).

The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

==========
=
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
=
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========
=

↑ Index

186. Brian Seabolt

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Mon 19 Jul 2010

---

it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell.

Who?

_____

While he read Moll held a little aloof,
with downcast eyes, saying to herself,
Now he's at the part where, and a little later, Now he's at the part where, and
so remained until the rustle of the sheet
going back into the envelope announced
that he had finished.

Samuel Beckett, Malone Dies_____

--

_____

Search for products and services at:
http://search.mail.com

↑ Index

187. Kimmelman, Burt

Kimmelman et al. Readings in Pacific Northwest

Mon 19 Jul 2010

Please come if you are nearby to these upcoming readings (listed below) in late July and August 1st.

Burt Kimmelman (poetry) and Diane Simmons (fiction)
7/26, 5 PM
Pilot Books<http://www.google.com/url?sa=t&source=web&cd=1&ved=0CBYQFDAA&url=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.pilotbooksseattle.com%2F&rct=j&q=pilot+books+seattle&ei=GpUbTPasKsL7lwfFrq2YCg&usg=AFQjCNFFpsVB1xCLfJc_zve3CWf63L_Ihg>
www.pilotbooksseattle.com
Upstairs
219 Broadway E
Seattle, WA 98102
[redacted]

Burt Kimmelman (poetry), Diane Simmons (fiction), Lyn Coffin (poetry)
7/27, 7 PM
Makeda Coffee<http://www.makedacoffee.com/> www.makedacoffee.com
153 North 78th Street
Seattle, WA 98103-4607
[redacted]
[redacted]<mailto:[redacted]>

Burt Kimmelman (poetry), Diane Simmons (fiction), Lyn Coffin (drama)
7/28, 7 PM
Nordic Museum
3014 NW 67th Street
Seattle, WA 98117

Burt Kimmelman and Rob Schlegel
8/1, 7:30 PM
Spare Room Reading Series at the Concordia Coffee House
2909 NE Alberta St
Portland OR 97211
[redacted]

concordiacoffeehouse.com<http://www.yelp.com/biz_redir?url=http%3A%2F%2Fconcordiacoffeehouse.com&src_bizid=sFcrrwKyKV0V9l2qWym0WQ&cachebuster=1279552594>

↑ Index

188. Mary Jo Malo
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Wonderful essay, Adam. Romantic Deconstructionist poetry is a possibility. I've come to believe the words 'soul' and 'spirit' aren't offensive as much as inadequate for describing our encounter with the infinite.

Mary Jo

--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

189. John Latta
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

This message is in MIME format. The first part should be readable text, while the remaining parts are likely unreadable without MIME-aware tools.

---745680382-780168617-1279563483=:7679

Bravo, Rich. Freshest blast unleash'd here in career-boost central since the end of the Eisenhower administration, at least!

JL

On Sun, 18 Jul 2010, richard owens wrote:

> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).
>
> but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?

Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."

&&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell. & it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.

but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right? & so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]>
Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).

The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

---745680382-780168617-1279563483=:7679--

↑ Index

190. Amish Trivedi
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

What I still wonder, though, is:

What else are younger poets supposed to do? Which door does one stick one's foot into in the hopes of keeping it open?

I feel like I hear a lot of anti-reading period/submission stuff from people who are further ahead in their careers.

Are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope somebody takes notice?

Amish

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Brian Seabolt <[redacted]> wrote:

> it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many
> poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not,
> are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula
> or Simon Cowell.
>
> Who?
>
> _____
>
> While he read Moll held a little aloof,
> with downcast eyes, saying to herself,
> Now he's at the part where, and a little
> later, Now he's at the part where, and
> so remained until the rustle of the sheet
> going back into the envelope announced
> that he had finished.
>
> *Samuel Beckett, Malone Dies*_____

--

_____
Search for products and services at:
http://search.mail.com

↑ Index

191. Adam Fieled
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Many thanks. And I hope that transc
Mary Jo,

Many thanks. And I hope that transcendentalism will be channeled into many of our poems as well.

Adam

_____
From: Mary Jo Malo <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 1:55:20 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Wonderful essay, Adam. Romantic Deconstructionist poetry is a possibility. I've come to believe the words 'soul' and 'spirit' aren't offensive as much as inadequate for describing our encounter with the infinite.

Mary Jo

--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

192. Eric Weinstein
Eric Weinstein & Adam Eaglin KGB Reading Thursday, 7/22 (NYC)
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Hey all,

Adam Eaglin and I will be reading<http://kgbbar.com/calendar/events/eric_weinstein_adam_eaglin_poetry_reading>this Thursday, July 22nd from 7:00p - 9:00p at KGB Bar <http://kgbbar.com/>in New York City, and I'd be thrilled if you could make it.

KGB is located at 85 E. 4th Street<http://maps.google.com/maps?oe=utf-8&client=firefox-a&ie=UTF8&q=kgb+bar,+ny&fb=1&gl=us&hq=kgb+bar,&hnear=New+York,+NY&cid=0,0,66577065433722887&ei=WIpETOvnI8L38AaYz4mTBw&ved=0CBkQnwIwAQ&ll=40.728869,-73.989809&spn=0.006147,0.018904&z=16&iwloc=A>
and is close to the B, D, F, V, 6, R, and W subway lines. Feel free to shoot me an e-mail if you have any questions.

Thanks & all best,

Eric

↑ Index

193. Cara Benson
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Judy Johnson at 13th Moon asks for an "offering" rather than submission of work. I'm going to change language at Sous Rature shortly. Not sure what the change will be, but totally agreed change should be a comin....C

_____
http://www.necessetics.com {homepage}
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.html {journal}

_____
From: John Latta <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 2:18:03 PM
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Bravo, Rich. Freshest blast unleash'd here in career-boost central since the end of the Eisenhower administration, at least!

JL

On Sun, 18 Jul 2010, richard owens wrote:

for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).

but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?

Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."

&&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell. & it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.

but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right? & so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]>
Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the > University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

>
> pages fiction (double spaced) along with a $20 reading fee and an SASE for notification of results. Please see www.subitopress.org for complete Boulder, Colorado, 80309-0226. Former students, friends and relatives of UCB faculty are ineligible.
>
> Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).
>
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3 3

↑ Index

194. Halvard Johnson

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Mon 19 Jul 2010

We don't need no stinkin' competitions. We don't need no readin' fees.

Hal Serving the tri-state area.

Halvard Johnson
==========

[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
<http://www.hamiltonstone.org>
<http://www.hamiltonstone.org>The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye and Other Sonnets
http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets

Tango Bouquet
<http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets>
https://docs.google.com/Doc?docid=0ATDp6rzKkBkhZGZwand2cHdfOWc1Mnh3Zw&hl=en

<https://docs.google.com/Doc?docid=0ATDp6rzKkBkhZGZwand2cHdfOWc1Mnh3Zw&hl=en>
Theory of Harmony
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/fall04/theory1.pdf
*
Rapsodie espagnole
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/rapsodi.pdf
*
*
*
<https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/rapsodi.pdf>The Sonnet Project
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/hsonnet.pdf
*
*
*
*<https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/hsonnet.pdf>
G(e)nome*
*http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/fall03/genome.pdf
*

On Sun, Jul 18, 2010 at 12:53 PM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:

> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).

but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?

Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."

&&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell. & it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.

but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right? & so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]>
Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

pages fiction (double spaced) along with a $20 reading fee and an SASE for notification of results. Please see www.subitopress.org for complete Boulder, Colorado, 80309-0226. Former students, friends and relatives of UCB faculty are ineligible.

> Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).
>
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

195. Chad Sweeney

Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Mon 19 Jul 2010

Yes, good essay, Adam, and I agree with Mary Jo about the words â€œsoulâ€ and â€œspiritâ€; Â and the issue of the spiritual in poetry (or its decay) is an important one which I continue to feel keenly. In addition to transcendence, its inverse (I guess) is immanence, which is another frontier for spirituality, the divine material, the mystery of what "is" of the visible granite and bark, the impenetrable threshold into the material, a miracle as grand and as intricate as any angelâ€™s wing. Oppen (and the objectivists generally) are strong in this way, as is Heidegger, Nietzsche, Walter Benjamin, and others. Levertov borrows the Buddhist term â€œsuchnessâ€ to describe the frogness of the frog, the rockness of the rock, which is another way into spirituality via the real, the material. As for language, perhaps language is the human soul, in the collective, the alpha and the omega, quite literally. I think the best scientists have always been awestruck by the World, and in this light, the noon-light of wonder, itâ€™s possible to see the material and the spiritual in theÂ same frame.Â Forgive my rambling thoughts.

Cheers,
Chad

_____
From: Mary Jo Malo <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 1:55:20 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Wonderful essay, Adam. Romantic Deconstructionist poetry is a possibility. I've come to believe the words 'soul' and 'spirit' aren't offensive as much as inadequate for describing our encounter with the infinite.

Mary Jo

--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

196. Dan Glass
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Just do it yourself—

http://withplusstand.blogspot.com

—

DTG

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 12:28 PM, Amish Trivedi <[redacted]> wrote:

> What I still wonder, though, is:
>
> What else are younger poets supposed to do? Which door does one stick one's foot into in the hopes of keeping it open?
>
> I feel like I hear a lot of anti-reading period/submission stuff from people > who are further ahead in their careers.
>
> Are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope somebody takes notice?
>
> Amish
>
> On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Brian Seabolt <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many
> poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not,
> are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula
> or Simon Cowell.
>
> Who?
>
> _____

> While he read Moll held a little aloof,
> with downcast eyes, saying to herself,
> Now he's at the part where, and a little
> later, Now he's at the part where, and
> so remained until the rustle of the sheet
> going back into the envelope announced
> that he had finished.
>
> *Samuel Beckett, Malone Dies*_____
>
> --
>
> _____
> Search for products and services at:
> http://search.mail.com
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

197. Gloria Frym

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Mon 19 Jul 2010

---

double right on, Richard. A trenchant analysis. And thanks, Pierre, for reinforcing it.
Gloria Frym

On 7/19/2010 5:01 AM, Pierre Joris wrote:
> hear! hear! in all my years of teaching one of the first recommendations I give young writers is never ever to enter such "small reading fee" competitions as they are by their nature scam affairs, no matter how hip and experimental they claim to be. Basic capitalist exploitation. Right on Richard. — Pierre
>
> On Jul 18, 2010, at 1:53 PM, richard owens wrote:
>

>
>> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).
>>
>> but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?
>>
>> Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."
>>
>> &&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell.& it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.
>>
>> but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right?& so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.
>>
>>
>> .....richard owens
>> 810 richmond ave
>> buffalo NY 14222-1167
>>
>> damn the caesars, the journal
>> damn the caesars, the blog
>>
>> --- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]> wrote:
>>

>> From: Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
>> Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM
>>
>> 2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.
>>
>>
>> Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).
>> _____
>> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
>> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
==========
=
> "Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
>
==========
=
> Pierre Joris
> cell phone: [redacted]
> email: [redacted]
> http://pierrejoris.com
> Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
>
==========
=
>
>
>
>
>

>
>
>
>
>
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
> Version: 9.0.839 / Virus Database: 271.1.1/3015 - Release Date: 07/18/10 23:36:00
>
>

↑ Index

198. E. Gambadé
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 2:28 PM, Amish Trivedi <[redacted]> wrote:

> What I still wonder, though, is:
>
> What else are younger poets supposed to do? Which door does one stick one's foot into in the hopes of keeping it open?
>
> I feel like I hear a lot of anti-reading period/submission stuff from people > who are further ahead in their careers.
>
> Are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope somebody takes notice?

"Stay in Cagnes. The view is charming."

"Holland's not bad." I said. "Canals everywhere ..."

"What are you going to do there?" Hélène asked.

"A scandal," said Gilles.

"That goes without saying. But what else?"

"A real scandal," I said. "In a museum."

Bertrand intervened, very interested:

"Is that really why you're going?"

"Not exactly," I explained. "Some friends will do it. But in cases like these, Gilles usually shows up ahead of time to organize the thing."

"We all end up specializing in something," said Gilles.

"And do you always organize them?" insisted Bertrand.

"One well-planned scandal is worth two," I said.

"Will they talk about it in the papers?"

"In books, rather."

"Let's go have a drink," proposed Hélène.

"Or eat, if it's not too late."

↑ Index

199. Adam Fieled

Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Mon 19 Jul 2010

Â Â Â Â Thanks. I like
Â Â Â Â Chad,

Â Â Â Â Thanks. I like the Heideggerian version of this; what comes behind the fundamental "what is,"Â is anÂ affirmation/acknowledgement of the Other. There are some neat clips of Derrida addressing this on YouTube.

Â Â Â Â Â Adam

_____
From: Chad Sweeney <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 4:23:49 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Yes, good essay, Adam, and I agree with Mary Jo about the words â€œsoulâ€ and â€œspiritâ€; Â and the issue of the spiritual in poetry (or its decay) is an important one which I continue to feel keenly. In addition to transcendence, its inverse (I guess) is immanence, which is another frontier for spirituality, the divine material, the mystery of what "is" of the visible granite and bark, the impenetrable threshold into the material, a miracle as grand and as intricate as any angelâ€™s wing. Oppen (and the objectivists generally) are strong in this way,

as is Heidegger, Nietzsche, Walter Benjamin, and others. Levertov borrows the Buddhist term â€œsuchnessâ€ to describe the frogness of the frog, the rockness of the rock, which is another way into spirituality via the real, the material. As for language, perhaps language is the human soul, in the collective, the alpha and the omega, quite literally. I think the best scientists have always been awestruck by the World, and in this light, the noon-light of wonder, itâ€™s possible to see the material and the spiritual in theÂ same frame.Â Forgive my rambling thoughts.

Cheers,
Chad

_____
From: Mary Jo Malo <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 1:55:20 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Wonderful essay, Adam. Romantic Deconstructionist poetry is a possibility. I've come to believe the words 'soul' and 'spirit' aren't offensive as much as inadequate for describing our encounter with the infinite.

Mary Jo

--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

200. Adam Fieled
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Â Â Â Â Thanks. I like
Â Â Â Â Chad,

Â Â Â Â Thanks. I like the Heideggerian version of this; what comes behind the fundamental "what is,"Â is anÂ affirmation/acknowledgement of the Other. There are some neat clips of Derrida addressing this on YouTube.

Â Â Â Â Â Adam

_____
From: Chad Sweeney <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 4:23:49 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Yes, good essay, Adam, and I agree with Mary Jo about the words â€œsoulâ€ and â€œspiritâ€; Â and the issue of the spiritual in poetry (or its decay) is an important one which I continue to feel keenly. In addition to transcendence, its

inverse (I guess) is immanence, which is another frontier for spirituality, the divine material, the mystery of what "is" of the visible granite and bark, the impenetrable threshold into the material, a miracle as grand and as intricate as any angelâ€™s wing. Oppen (and the objectivists generally) are strong in this way, as is Heidegger, Nietzsche, Walter Benjamin, and others. Levertov borrows the Buddhist term â€œsuchnessâ€ to describe the frogness of the frog, the rockness of the rock, which is another way into spirituality via the real, the material. As for language, perhaps language is the human soul, in the collective, the alpha and the omega, quite literally. I think the best scientists have always been awestruck by the World, and in this light, the noon-light of wonder, itâ€™s possible to see the material and the spiritual in theÂ same frame.Â Forgive my rambling thoughts

Cheers,
Chad

_____
From: Mary Jo Malo <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 1:55:20 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Wonderful essay, Adam. Romantic Deconstructionist poetry is a possibility. I've come to believe the words 'soul' and 'spirit' aren't offensive as much as inadequate for describing our encounter with the infinite.

Mary Jo

--
http://thisshiningwound.blogspot.com/
http://apophisdeconstructingabsurdity.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

201. michael farrell
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

---

what if submission were a holy action?

what if it allowed humility?

> Date: Mon, 19 Jul 2010 13:27:09 -0700
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
> To: [redacted]

Just do it yourself—

http://withplusstand.blogspot.com

—

DTG

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 12:28 PM, Amish Trivedi <[redacted]> wrote:

What I still wonder, though, is:

What else are younger poets supposed to do? Which door does one stick one's foot into in the hopes of keeping it open?

I feel like I hear a lot of anti-reading period/submission stuff from people who are further ahead in their careers.

Are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope somebody takes notice?

Amish

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Brian Seabolt <[redacted]> wrote:

it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many
poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not,
are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula
or Simon Cowell.

Who?

While he read Moll held a little aloof,
with downcast eyes, saying to herself,
Now he's at the part where, and a little later, Now he's at the part where, and
so remained until the rustle of the sheet
going back into the envelope announced
that he had finished.

*Samuel Beckett, Malone Dies*_____

> --
> _____
> Search for products and services at:
> http://search.mail.com
>
> guidelines

_____ If It Exists,
You'll Find it on SEEK. Australia's #1 job site http://clk.atdmt.com/NMN/go/157639755/direct/01/

↑ Index

202. Mark Weiss
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Send work to journals you admire. And don't think of it as a career. What matters is the conversation with one's peers, and with the history of the craft.

Best,

Mark

At 04:27 PM 7/19/2010, you wrote:
>Just do it yourself—
>
>http://withplusstand.blogspot.com
>
>—
>
>DTG
>
>On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 12:28 PM, Amish Trivedi <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > What I still wonder, though, is:

> >
> > What else are younger poets supposed to do? Which door does one stick one's > > foot into in the hopes of keeping it open?
> >
> > I feel like I hear a lot of anti-reading period/submission stuff from > > people
> > who are further ahead in their careers.
> >
> > Are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope > > somebody takes notice?
> >
> > Amish
> >
> > On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Brian Seabolt <[redacted]> wrote:
> >
> > > it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many
> > > poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not,
> > > are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula
> > > or Simon Cowell.
> > >
> > > Who?
> > >
> > > _____
> > >
> > > While he read Moll held a little aloof,
> > > with downcast eyes, saying to herself,
> > > Now he's at the part where, and a little > > > later, Now he's at the part where, and
> > > so remained until the rustle of the sheet
> > > going back into the envelope announced
> > > that he had finished.
> > >
> > > Samuel Beckett, Malone Dies_____
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >

> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > _____
> > > Search for products and services at:
> > > http://search.mail.com
> > >
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> >
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets left out, the more they seem to contain… One can hear echoes from all the various ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure musical threnody…[it] opens a window, not only into a mind, but a person, a personality, this human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

203. Deborah A. Meadows

Beyond Baroque reading for Factory School poets--July 30

Mon 19 Jul 2010

You are invited to a Beyond Baroque reading on July 30th at 7:30 pm with Factory School Press poets including: Diane Ward, Deborah Meadows, Kathyrn Pringle, Sarah Menefee, Allison Cobb, Brian Kim Stefans, Catherine Daly, and Carol Mirkove.

The doors open for a reception and to the book store at 6 pm.

Beyond Baroque is located:
681 Venice Blvd.
Venice, CA 90291

Deborah Meadows teaches in the Liberal Studies department at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona. Her sixth collection of poetry is from Factory School, Depleted Burden Down. Other recent titles include How, the means (Mindmade, 2010) and Goodbye Tissues (Shearsman Press, 2009). Her Electronic Poetry Center author page is located:
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/meadows/

Diane Ward was born in Washington, DC and currently lives in Santa Monica, California. She attended the Corcoran School of Art in Washington, DC and is studying Geography and Urban Studies at University of California, Los Angeles. She has published eleven books of poetry including, most recently, a collaboration with Tina Darragh and Jane Sprague at #8 in the Belladonna Elders series,2009, No List (no list) from Seeing Eye Books, Los Angeles, 2008, Flim-Yoked Scrim, Factory School, 2006, and When You Awake, New York: Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs. Several of her poems have been set to music by the Los Angeles composer Michael Webster, including “Fade on Family” which was performed in 2005 as part of The Society for the Activation of Social Space through Art and Sound series at the Schindler House in West Hollywood. “InHouse,” a constructed poem, is forthcoming as part of Kindergarde, the First Avant Garde Anthology for Children.

Catherine Daly's book Chanteuse / Cantatrice was published in the Heretical Texts series in 2007. It is a book about collaboration and complicity during World War II and now; it can be read from the bottom of the page to the top and normally.

Allison Cobb is the author of Born2 (Chax Press) and Green-Wood (Factory School). She was born in Los Alamos, New Mexico, as were the first atomic bombs, and she now lives in Portland, Oregon.

Sarah Menefee is a San Francisco poet whose latest books are Human Star [Factory School] and In Your Fish Helmet [Transmission Press].

kathryn l. pringle has written RIGHT NEW BIOLOGY (Factory School), The Stills (Duration Press), and Temper and Felicity are lovers. (TAXT). she lives in Oakland, Ca.

Brian Kim Stefans lives in Los Angeles, California, and teaches digital media and literature at UCLA. His latest books are What is Said to the Poet Concerning Flowers (2006) and Kluge: A Meditation, and other works (2007). In manuscript is a short collected titled Viva Miscegenation. His digital text works and other art projects can be seen at www.arras.net.

Carol Mirakove is the author of Occupied and Mediated. Her work is included in the forthcoming issues of make/shift and Model Homes magazines. She lives in the SF Bay Area.

#####

↑ Index

204. Matthew Landis
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

I've self published a chapbook. But it can be so expensive, especially if yr trying to go beyond typical chapbook formatting (for instance with my DIY chapbook, the vellum cover with card stock backing, the paper I bought, the printer's fee...all of this cost me nearly $200 for 30 COPIES. And then, I think I've sold 5. I gave away some, but for the most part people ask how they can get one and then when I tell them the 25 (roughly) page hand stitched, designed from scratch, all materials bought and paid for and all the production work done by me and a couple friends is say $10 or even $8 it's an oh never mind. That's pricey for a book. Self-publishing has its merits (obviously, since I've done it a few times), but it IS difficult to up the ante sometimes on an aesthetic level.

I'd also like to echo the comment about people who already have established themselves opposing these competitions and reading fees. Where is this door? Call me shallow but I actually CRAVE the opportunity to be associated with a press, to engage in a community of fellow authors, to interact with a nexus of people who are involved in the book and in poetry in mediums and artways drastically different than my own. It's valuable. Typesetting my own work, designing the cover and layout, choosing the paper and materials for the cover, scrounging up public domain visuals, hand stitching...it's an invaluable experience, but it's also completely monological. And you become limited, very often in a technological sense if yr working with other people who are self-publishing. You simply don't have the means to produce work the way a boutique press, or academic press, or even some small presses can. Yr aesthetic choices are STILL LIMITED (although the interaction I've had with other self-publishing writers has been invaluable as well). So while I agree with Richard's sentiment and am immeasurably appreciative of Pierre supporting the sentiment it's worth pointing out that besides the exploitative nature of the competition and reading fee system, it's worth pointing out the other drawbacks behind another fundamental feature of capitalist production and culture: (1) the "workers" don't own the means of production (2) in many cases the "workers" are producing above "value" and beyond what they are paid in return for that production—i.e, we produce more than enough value to provide for our own subsistence and yet only receive "wages" enough to subsist—which is really just an unnecessarily wordy definition of the labor theory of value. Anyway, I think both of those points should be considered as well.

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 5:22 PM, Gloria Frym <[redacted]> wrote:

> double right on, Richard. A trenchant analysis. And thanks, Pierre, for reinforcing it.
> Gloria Frym
>
> On 7/19/2010 5:01 AM, Pierre Joris wrote:
>
> hear! hear! in all my years of teaching one of the first recommendations I give young writers is never ever to enter such "small reading fee" competitions as they are by their nature scam affairs, no matter how hip and experimental they claim to be. Basic capitalist exploitation. Right on Richard. — Pierre
>
> On Jul 18, 2010, at 1:53 PM, richard owens wrote:
>
> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).
>
> but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?
>
> Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."
>
> &&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell.& it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.

but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right?& so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

100 pages fiction (double spaced) along with a $20 reading fee and an SASE for notification of results. Please see www.subitopress.org for 226 UCB, Boulder, Colorado, 80309-0226. Former students, friends and relatives of UCB faculty are ineligible.

Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).

The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn

> ==========
> Pierre Joris
> cell phone: [redacted]
> email: [redacted]
> http://pierrejoris.com
> Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
> ==========
>
> No virus found in this incoming message.
> Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
> Version: 9.0.839 / Virus Database: 271.1.1/3015 - Release Date: 07/18/10 23:36:00

↑ Index

205. Peter Quartermain

Robert Duncan and NORGOL. Help needed!

Mon 19 Jul 2010

HELP ! ! !

I need some help. I'm annotating Robert Duncan's poems (translating foreign words and phrases, identifying their source) for the Collected Later Poetry and Plays, and I'm getting into difficulties in GROUND WORK II: IN THE DARK. I'm stuck in more than one place, and may be calling for help from time to time. Here's the first:

The poem is "IN WONDER" (pages 227-229 in the single-volume Ground Work)

1. "NORGOL" - the word occurs twice: "norgol" and "Nor-gol."

The poem hints it might come from science fiction - Duncan read Andre Norton (among others) and it might be from something by her - or from Tolkien's The Lord of the Rings (but there I'm grasping at straws). Googling "Norgol" I find that it's a name in a wargame, but so far as I can tell the game post-dates the poem.

Does anyone out there know?

2. The mixed German and French at the top of page 228 ends with "kasts", but my sources (native-speakers of German) tell me this is not a word in German, though it appears in the title of an autobiographical novel (The Unrestrained Life of Kast) by Volker Braun, published in 1972. I don't know German; Braun's book has not been translated into English.

Can anyone help me here?

Thanks.

Peter

=========
Peter Quartermain
846 Keefer Street
Vancouver
BC Canada V6A 1Y7
[redacted] (voice and fax)
[redacted]
=========

↑ Index

206. Mark Weiss

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Mon 19 Jul 2010

Yeah, but there's no shortage of presses that read work without charging for the privilege. And if those that charge were to go under for lack of takers 20 would spring up in their place.

At 09:12 PM 7/19/2010, you wrote:
>I've self published a chapbook. But it can be so expensive, especially if yr >trying to go beyond typical chapbook formatting (for instance with my DIY >chapbook, the vellum cover with card stock backing, the paper I bought, the >printer's fee...all of this cost me nearly $200 for 30 COPIES. And then, I >think I've sold 5. I gave away some, but for the most part people ask how >they can get one and then when I tell them the 25 (roughly) page hand >stitched, designed from scratch, all materials bought and paid for and all >the production work done by me and a couple friends is say $10 or even $8
>it's an oh never mind. That's pricey for a book. Self-publishing has its >merits (obviously, since I've done it a few times), but it IS difficult to >up the ante sometimes on an aesthetic level.

>
>I'd also like to echo the comment about people who already have established >themselves opposing these competitions and reading fees. Where is this door?
>Call me shallow but I actually CRAVE the opportunity to be associated with a >press, to engage in a community of fellow authors, to interact with a nexus
>of people who are involved in the book and in poetry in mediums and artways >drastically different than my own. It's valuable. Typesetting my own work, >designing the cover and layout, choosing the paper and materials for the >cover, scrounging up public domain visuals, hand stitching...it's an >invaluable experience, but it's also completely monological. And you become >limited, very often in a technological sense if yr working with other people >who are self-publishing. You simply don't have the means to produce work the >way a boutique press, or academic press, or even some small presses can. Yr >aesthetic choices are STILL LIMITED (although the interaction I've had with >other self-publishing writers has been invaluable as well). So while I agree >with Richard's sentiment and am immeasurably appreciative of Pierre >supporting the sentiment it's worth pointing out that besides the >exploitative nature of the competition and reading fee system, it's worth >pointing out the other drawbacks behind another fundamental feature of >capitalist production and culture: (1) the "workers" don't own the means of >production (2) in many cases the "workers" are producing above "value" and >beyond what they are paid in return for that production—i.e, we produce more >than enough value to provide for our own subsistence and yet only receive
>"wages" enough to subsist—which is really just an unnecessarily wordy >definition of the labor theory of value. Anyway, I think both of those >points should be considered as well.
>
>On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 5:22 PM, Gloria Frym <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > double right on, Richard. A trenchant analysis. And thanks, Pierre, for > > reinforcing it.
> > Gloria Frym
> >
> >
> > On 7/19/2010 5:01 AM, Pierre Joris wrote:
> >
> >> hear! hear! in all my years of teaching one of the first recommendations I > >> give young writers is never ever to enter such "small reading fee"
> >> competitions as they are by their nature > scam affairs, no matter how hip and > >> experimental they claim to be. Basic capitalist exploitation. Right on > >> Richard. — Pierre

> >>
> >> On Jul 18, 2010, at 1:53 PM, richard owens wrote:
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with > >>> radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do > >>> nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity > >>> culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions > >>> engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a > >>> competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, > >>> competition and cooperation are in _no_ > uncertain way mutually exclusive).
> >>>
> >>> but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed > >>> out a few greedy apples then market-based > economies (cultural and otherwise) > >>> would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?
> >>>
> >>> Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles
> >>> Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."
> >>>
> >>> &&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of > >>> cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of > >>> submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to > see so many poets so willingly
> >>> "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of > >>> recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell.& it's even > >>> more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to > >>> "submit." man, for people so attuned to the > complexities and the ideological > >>> underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many > >>> gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of > >>> competition.

> >>>
> >>> but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right?& so > >>> long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class > >>> politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt > >>> how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce
the > >>> logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> .....richard owens
> >>> 810 richmond ave
> >>> buffalo NY 14222-1167
> >>>
> >>> damn the caesars, the journal
> >>> damn the caesars, the blog
> >>>
> >>> --- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]> wrote:
> >>>
> >>> From: Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
> >>> Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
> >>> To: [redacted]
> >>> Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM
> >>>
> >>> 2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of > >>> innovative writing, one each of fiction and > poetry. Winners will be flown > >>> to the University of Colorado at Boulder to > give a reading in the spring of > >>> 2011.
> >>>
> >>> 100 pages fiction (double spaced) along > with a $20 reading fee and an SASE > >>> for notification of results. Please see www.subitopress.org for > English Department, Hellems 101,
> >>> 226 UCB, Boulder, Colorado, 80309-0226. Former students, friends and > >>> relatives of UCB faculty are ineligible.
> >>>
> >>> Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark
> >>> date).
> >>> _____
> >>> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your > >>> inbox.

> >>>
> >>>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?
ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>
==========
=
> >> "Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
> >>
==========
=
> >> Pierre Joris
> >> cell phone: [redacted]
> >> email: [redacted]
> >> http://pierrejoris.com
> >> Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
> >>
==========
=
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> No virus found in this incoming message.
> >> Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
> >> Version: 9.0.839 / Virus Database: 271.1.1/3015 - Release Date: 07/18/10
> >> 23:36:00
> >>

> >>
> >>
> >
> >
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets left out, the more they seem to contain… One can hear echoes from all the various ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure musical threnody…[it] opens a window, not only
into a mind, but a person, a personality, this human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

207. Hilary Clark
Re: Robert Duncan and NORGOL. Help needed!
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Hi Peter,

"kast" seems to be a Dutch word, for a sort of armoire that was taken up in parts of America: see this link
http://www.artnet.com/magazine/features/garrett/garrett2-14-00.asp

I'm not sure whether "kasts" would be plural--don't know Dutch.

Hope you're well.

Hilary Clark

Quoting Peter Quartermain <[redacted]>:

> HELP ! ! !

I need some help. I'm annotating Robert Duncan's poems (translating foreign words and phrases, identifying their source) for the Collected Later Poetry and Plays, and I'm getting into difficulties in GROUND WORK II: IN THE DARK. I'm stuck in more than one place, and may be calling for help from time to time. Here's the first:

The poem is "IN WONDER" (pages 227-229 in the single-volume Ground Work)

1. "NORGOL" - the word occurs twice: "norgol" and "Nor-gol."

The poem hints it might come from science fiction - Duncan read Andre Norton (among others) and it might be from something by her - or from Tolkien's The Lord of the Rings (but there I'm grasping at straws). Googling "Norgol" I find that it's a name in a wargame, but so far as I can tell the game post-dates the poem.

Does anyone out there know?

2. The mixed German and French at the top of page 228 ends with "kasts", but my sources (native-speakers of German) tell me this is not a word in German, though it appears in the title of an autobiographical novel (The Unrestrained Life of Kast) by Volker Braun, published in 1972. I don't know German; Braun's book has not been translated into English.

Can anyone help me here?

Thanks.

Peter

==========
Peter Quartermain
846 Keefer Street
Vancouver

> BC Canada V6A 1Y7
> [redacted] (voice and fax)
> [redacted]
> =========

↑ Index

208. Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Not to be glib, but the solution to the monologicalness of se Matthew,

Not to be glib, but the solution to the monologicalness of self-publishing is to publish other people. Instead of kvetching about how unfair all these contests are, form a collective, share costs, use POD and get those books out into the world.

Hugh Behm-Steinberg

_____
From: Matthew Landis <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 6:12:12 PM
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

I've self published a chapbook. But it can be so expensive, especially if yr trying to go beyond typical chapbook formatting (for instance with my DIY chapbook, the vellum cover with card stock backing, the paper I bought, the printer's fee...all of this cost me nearly $200 for 30 COPIES. And then, I think I've sold 5. I gave away some, but for the most part people ask how they can get one and then when I tell them the 25 (roughly) page hand stitched, designed from scratch, all materials bought and paid for and all the production work done by me and a couple friends is say $10 or even $8 it's an oh never mind. That's pricey for a book. Self-publishing has its merits (obviously, since I've done it a few times), but it IS difficult to up the ante sometimes on an aesthetic level.

I'd also like to echo the comment about people who already have established themselves opposing these competitions and reading fees. Where is this door? Call me shallow but I actually CRAVE the opportunity to be associated with a press, to engage in a community of fellow authors, to interact with a nexus of people who are involved in the book and in poetry in mediums and artways drastically different than my own. It's valuable. Typesetting my own work, designing the cover and layout, choosing the paper and materials for the cover, scrounging up public domain visuals, hand stitching...it's an invaluable experience, but it's also completely monological. And you become limited, very often in a technological sense if yr working with other people who are self-publishing. You simply don't have the means to produce work the way a boutique press, or academic press, or even some small presses can. Yr aesthetic choices are STILL LIMITED (although the interaction I've had with other self-publishing writers has been invaluable as well). So while I agree with Richard's sentiment and am immeasurably appreciative of Pierre supporting the sentiment it's worth pointing out that besides the exploitative nature of the competition and reading fee system, it's worth pointing out the other drawbacks behind another fundamental feature of capitalist production and culture: (1) the "workers" don't own the means of production (2) in many cases the "workers" are producing above "value" and beyond what they are paid in return for that productionâ€”i.e, we produce more than enough value to provide for our own subsistence and yet only receive "wages" enough to subsistâ€”which is really just an unnecessarily wordy definition of the labor theory of value. Anyway, I think both of those points should be considered as well.

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 5:22 PM, Gloria Frym <[redacted]> wrote:

> double right on, Richard. A trenchant analysis. And thanks, Pierre, for reinforcing it.
> Gloria Frym
>
> On 7/19/2010 5:01 AM, Pierre Joris wrote:
>
> hear! hear! in all my years of teaching one of the first recommendations I give young writers is never ever to enter such "small reading fee" competitions as they are by their nature scam affairs, no matter how hip and experimental they claim to be. Basic capitalist exploitation. Right on Richard. â€” Pierre
>
> On Jul 18, 2010, at 1:53 PM, richard owens wrote:
>
> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).

but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?

Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."

&&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell.& it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.

but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right?& so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

100 pages fiction (double spaced) along with a $20 reading fee and an SASE for notification of results. Please see www.subitopress.org for 226 UCB, Boulder, Colorado, 80309-0226. Former students, friends and relatives of UCB faculty are ineligible.

Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).

The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_33

==========

"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn

==========

Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/

==========

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
Version: 9.0.839 / Virus Database: 271.1.1/3015 - Release Date: 07/18/10 23:36:00

↑ Index

209. Hugh Behm-Steinberg
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

Not to be glib, but the solution to the monologicalness of se Matthew,

Not to be glib, but the solution to the monologicalness of self-publishing is to publish other people. Instead of kvetching about how unfair all these contests are, form a collective, share costs, use POD and get those books out into the world.

Hugh Behm-Steinberg

_____
From: Matthew Landis <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 6:12:12 PM
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

I've self published a chapbook. But it can be so expensive, especially if yr trying to go beyond typical chapbook formatting (for instance with my DIY chapbook, the vellum cover with card stock backing, the paper I bought, the printer's fee...all of this cost me nearly $200 for 30 COPIES. And then, I think I've sold 5. I gave away some, but for the most part people ask how they can get one and then when I tell them the 25 (roughly) page hand stitched, designed from scratch, all materials bought and paid for and all the production work done by me and a couple friends is say $10 or even $8 it's an oh never mind. That's pricey for a book. Self-publishing has its merits (obviously, since I've done it a few times), but it IS difficult to up the ante sometimes on an aesthetic level.

I'd also like to echo the comment about people who already have established themselves opposing these competitions and reading fees. Where is this door? Call me shallow but I actually CRAVE the opportunity to be associated with a press, to engage in a community of fellow authors, to interact with a nexus of people who are involved in the book and in poetry in mediums and artways drastically different than my own. It's valuable. Typesetting my own work, designing the cover and layout, choosing the paper and materials for the cover, scrounging up public domain visuals, hand stitching...it's an invaluable experience, but it's also completely monological. And you become limited, very often in a technological sense if yr working with other people who are self-publishing. You simply don't have the means to produce work the way a boutique press, or academic press, or even some small presses can. Yr aesthetic choices are STILL LIMITED (although the interaction I've had with other self-publishing writers has been invaluable as well). So while I agree with Richard's sentiment and am immeasurably appreciative of Pierre supporting the sentiment it's worth pointing out that besides the exploitative nature of the competition and reading fee system, it's worth pointing out the other drawbacks behind another fundamental feature of capitalist production and culture: (1) the "workers" don't own the means of production (2) in many cases the "workers" are producing above "value" and beyond what they are paid in return for that productionâ€”i.e, we produce more than enough value to provide for our own subsistence and yet only receive "wages" enough to subsistâ€”which is really just an unnecessarily wordy definition of the labor theory of value. Anyway, I think both of those points should be considered as well.

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 5:22 PM, Gloria Frym <[redacted]> wrote:

> double right on, Richard. A trenchant analysis. And thanks, Pierre, for reinforcing it.
> Gloria Frym
>
> On 7/19/2010 5:01 AM, Pierre Joris wrote:
>
> hear! hear! in all my years of teaching one of the first recommendations I give young writers is never ever to enter such "small reading fee" competitions as they are by their nature scam affairs, no matter how hip and experimental they claim to be. Basic capitalist exploitation. Right on Richard. â€" Pierre
>
> On Jul 18, 2010, at 1:53 PM, richard owens wrote:
>
> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves with radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry competitions engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes, competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually exclusive).
>
> but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could weed out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural and otherwise) would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?
>
> Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse." Charles Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."
>
> &&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language of submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so willingly

"submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell.& it's even more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others to "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the ideological underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of competition.

but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right?& so long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry abt how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce the logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM

2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners will be flown to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in the spring of 2011.

100 pages fiction (double spaced) along with a $20 reading fee and an SASE for notification of results. Please see www.subitopress.org for 226 UCB, Boulder, Colorado, 80309-0226. Former students, friends and relatives of UCB faculty are ineligible.

Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 (postmark date).

The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_33

==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========

No virus found in this incoming message.
Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
Version: 9.0.839 / Virus Database: 271.1.1/3015 - Release Date: 07/18/10 23:36:00

↑ Index

210. Noah Eli Gordon
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

As Richard's email was in response to the announcement I'd posted here, I can't help but take his comment about the lack of editorial acumen as personal, even if it included the "more often that not" caveat. Subito Press was founded at the University of Colorado-Boulder by my colleague Elisabeth Sheffield. It's not "my" press. I was simply passing on an announcement about it. Like Richard, I've been frustrated in the past by what I perceived of as a dearth of uninteresting work being brought into the world. But rather than grip about it, I decided, along with a friend to found a press (http://www.lettermachine.org/catalog.html) that would function as a sort of polemic, where our books would collectively make an argument for what we see as representative of the work being done that is wholly valuable for the state of (& future of) the art.

Letter Machine Editions does not have a contest. We did, however, have an open reading period recently, one where we asked for $10. For this $10, we offered to mail any title from our backlist to whomever submitted. The cost of a mailing envelop is around one dollar. The cost to mail the book is about two dollars. The actual cost per book, the amount we pay to publish each book, including all fees, shipping, charges to list the book with SPD, designer fees, etc. ranges from about $4 to $8 per book (our full-length titles are offset pressed, not digit), for a total cost of from $7 to $11 dollars. This is to say we are not making money off of our reading fees, rather we're getting our books out into the world and getting a chance to see work by folks we might not otherwise see. I've personally already gone over $5,000 into debt, and had to open up new credit cards, just to fund this press. Not for some sort of careerist gain, but because I believe in the books we’re publishing & want to see them move into the world.

That said, I realize that the initial response to my email was more of an attack on the contest system. Yes, I also think it has its faults. But no, I don't think those poet who've won contests really care all that much about the contest itself. It's more of a means to simply get the work into the world. I mean, even John Latta, who commented here is a book contest winner. Here are a few more off the top of my head:

Nathaniel Mackey
Juliana Spahr
Cole Swensen
Elizabeth Willis
John Ashbery
Rodrigo Toscano
Ange Mlinko
Joshua Clover
Ed Roberson
John Yau
Laura Mullen
Graham Foust
Jena Osman
Laynie Browne

Eleni Sikelianos
Elizabeth Robinson

Maybe these people would shun contest now, but that's because they've had the opportunity to establish themselves in some (& not always so) small way through having won one. This is why I think Pierre Joris's comment about them being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege. Although I respect all of the many years he’s put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc., it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi notes, for a young poet to break into the scene. Yes, I'm an advocate for starting your own press and journal, both of which I did. But for folks not lucky enough to live in a city with a large, active poetry community, or to study at a school like the University of Buffalo (as Richard did), with its instant community and funding for student-editing projects, it can be a daunting thing. Yes, creating alterative market systems is one answer. I think we all think Sub Press is pretty amazing. But the problem is much deeper than the tiny market systems of poetry. One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet these days without being somehow independently wealthy. That wasn't always the case, tho.

I just think the energy expended in arguing about this would be better directed into actual action. I mean if you're going to end your email, as Richard did, by bringing up inequality and injustice, aren't there other means to more efficaciously address these issues?

--Noah

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

211. Noah Eli Gordon
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 19 Jul 2010

As Richard's email was in response to the announcement I'd posted here, I can't help but take his comment about the lack of editorial acumen as personal, even if it included the "more often that not" caveat. Subito Press was founded at the University of Colorado-Boulder by my colleague Elisabeth Sheffield. It's not "my" press. I was simply passing on an announcement about it. Like Richard, I've been frustrated in the past by what I perceived of as a dearth of uninteresting work being brought into the world. But rather than grip about it, I decided, along with a friend to found a press (http://www.lettermachine.org/catalog.html) that would function as a sort of polemic, where our books would collectively make an argument for what we see as representative of the work being done that is wholly valuable for the state of (& future of) the art.

Letter Machine Editions does not have a contest. We did, however, have an open reading period recently, one where we asked for $10. For this $10, we offered to mail any title from our backlist to whomever submitted. The cost of a mailing envelop is around one dollar. The cost to mail the book is about two dollars. The actual cost per book, the amount we pay to publish each book, including all fees, shipping, charges to list the book with SPD, designer fees, etc. ranges from about $4 to $8 per book (our full-length titles are offset pressed, not digit), for a total cost of from $7 to $11 dollars. This is to say we are not making money off of our reading fees, rather we're getting our books out into the world and getting a chance to see work by folks we might not otherwise see. I've personally already gone over $5,000 into debt, and had to open up new credit cards, just to fund this press. Not for some sort of careerist gain, but because I believe in the books we’re publishing & want to see them move into the world.

That said, I realize that the initial response to my email was more of an attack on the contest system. Yes, I also think it has its faults. But no, I don't think those poet who've won contests really care all that much about the contest itself. It's more of a means to simply get the work into the world. I mean, even John Latta, who commented here is a book contest winner. Here are a few more off the top of my head:

Nathaniel Mackey
Juliana Spahr
Cole Swensen
Elizabeth Willis
John Ashbery
Rodrigo Toscano
Ange Mlinko
Joshua Clover
Ed Roberson
John Yau
Laura Mullen
Graham Foust
Jena Osman
Laynie Browne
Eleni Sikelianos
Elizabeth Robinson

Maybe these people would shun contest now, but that's because they've had the opportunity to establish themselves in some (& not always so) small way through having won one. This is why I think Pierre Joris's comment about them being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege. Although I respect all of the many years he’s put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc., it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi notes, for a young poet to break into the scene. Yes, I'm an advocate for starting your own press and journal, both of which I did. But for folks not lucky enough to live in a city with a large, active poetry community, or to study at a school like the University of Buffalo (as Richard did), with its instant community and funding for student-editing projects, it can be a daunting thing. Yes, creating alterative market systems is one answer. I think we all think Sub Press is pretty amazing. But the problem is much deeper than the tiny market systems of poetry. One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet these days without being somehow independently wealthy. That wasn't always the case, tho.

I just think the energy expended in arguing about this would be better directed into actual action. I mean if you're going to end your email, as Richard did, by bringing up inequality and injustice, aren't there other means to more efficaciously address these issues?

--Noah

_____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

212. Sarah Sarai

Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Tue 20 Jul 2010

I believe it should be "artists WHO live" not "artists THAT live," a mistake replicated in your essay.

Here's a poem; 3, actually:
http://www.terrain.org/poetry/22/sarai.htm

Sarah Sarai
another angry sinner in the soft hands of something greater than her ego http://my3000lovingarms.blogspot.com/

↑ Index

213. Pierre Joris
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

On Jul 19, 2010, at 3:28 PM, Amish Trivedi wrote:

> What else are younger poets supposed to do?

Get together with other young poets with similar ideas about poetry & poetics, and start your own magazine and small presses.

> Which door does one stick one's > foot into in the hopes of keeping it open?

you don't use the door, you use the window, the skylight, the back door. What is this door anyway? leading to what? The House of Succesful Poets? Ain't no such abode. Of course if you mean the University's Creative Writing departments and your career move is to land a job there in order to pay the rent, that's different from being a poet who wants to write the best poetry she can.
>
> I feel like I hear a lot of anti-reading period/submission stuff from people
> who are further ahead in their careers.

Maybe the late sixties/seventies, when I came off age as a poet, were more politically radical, but it never entered my or my contemporaries' mind to get involved with any outfit, magazine or publisher, that smacked of reading period / paid submission / contest, what have you. In fact, thinking back, those kind of gimmicks didn't exist much, as they are to a great extent the invention of the MFA industry.
>
> Are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope > somebody takes notice?

No (see first answer), work quietly or loudly wherever & however you work best, and then go make a loud noise in the streets. There probably is no quieter burial than to win the 20whatever $50whatever XXXPress Prize. You think you've achieved something (which will lure you into trying to repeat, thus imitating yourself) and everyone else knows what such prizes means & it will just be another hurdle for someone to read you straight.

Pierre

==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========

Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========

↑ Index

214. Wanda Phipps

Cool News!

Tue 20 Jul 2010

Hey:

I'm so excited. My book Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems is now available as an Amazon Kindle book (downloadable also for mac laptop, iPhone, iPad, iPod Touch, blackberry and Android)--buy one :) and tell all your friends:

http://www.amazon.com/Wake-Up-Calls-Morning-Poems-ebook/dp/B003OYIH5O/ref=sr_1_4?ie=UTF8&m=AG56TWVU5XWC2&s=books&qid=1275535066&sr=1-4

and

I just found out one of my poems will be included in this wild shoe museum in Belgium as well as on their website.

The exhibit includes artists' work shoes they sometimes turned into artwork as well as an ethnographic section of shoes from traditional cultures, a designer section and now drawing, cartoons and writings about shoes.

You can find my poem on their website if you click on the writers section on the bottom right hand corner then scroll down to my name: www.shoesornoshoes.com/

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

215. teersteeg
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

Same story--submission fees--in "anonymous" visual art competitions. The only difference is that I've never heard of an exhibition opportunity that didn't include a hefty per item fee.

regards,
brunoT
cape cod

> Yeah, but there's no shortage of presses that read work without charging for the privilege. And if those that charge were to go under for lack of takers 20 would spring up in their place.

At 09:12 PM 7/19/2010, you wrote:
>I've self published a chapbook. But it can be so expensive, especially if >yr
>trying to go beyond typical chapbook formatting (for instance with my DIY >chapbook, the vellum cover with card stock backing, the paper I bought, the >printer's fee...all of this cost me nearly $200 for 30 COPIES. And then, I >think I've sold 5. I gave away some, but for the most part people ask how >they can get one and then when I tell them the 25 (roughly) page hand >stitched, designed from scratch, all materials bought and paid for and all >the production work done by me and a couple friends is say $10 or even $8
>it's an oh never mind. That's pricey for a book. Self-publishing has its >merits (obviously, since I've done it a few times), but it IS difficult to >up the ante sometimes on an aesthetic level.
>
>I'd also like to echo the comment about people who already have established >themselves opposing these competitions and reading fees. Where is this >door?
>Call me shallow but I actually CRAVE the opportunity to be associated with
>a >press, to engage in a community of fellow authors, to interact with a nexus
>of people who are involved in the book and in poetry in mediums and artways >drastically different than my own. It's valuable. Typesetting my own work, >designing the cover and layout, choosing the paper and materials for the >cover, scrounging up public domain visuals, hand stitching...it's an >invaluable experience, but it's also completely monological. And you become >limited, very often in a technological sense if yr working with other >people >who are self-publishing. You simply don't have the means to produce work

>the >way a boutique press, or academic press, or even some small presses can. Yr >aesthetic choices are STILL LIMITED (although the interaction I've had with >other self-publishing writers has been invaluable as well). So while I >agree
>with Richard's sentiment and am immeasurably appreciative of Pierre >supporting the sentiment it's worth pointing out that besides the >exploitative nature of the competition and reading fee system, it's worth >pointing out the other drawbacks behind another fundamental feature of >capitalist production and culture: (1) the "workers" don't own the means of >production (2) in many cases the "workers" are producing above "value" and >beyond what they are paid in return for that production-i.e, we produce >more >than enough value to provide for our own subsistence and yet only receive
>"wages" enough to subsist-which is really just an unnecessarily wordy >definition of the labor theory of value. Anyway, I think both of those >points should be considered as well.
>
>On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 5:22 PM, Gloria Frym <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > double right on, Richard. A trenchant analysis. And thanks, Pierre,
> > for
> > reinforcing it.
> > Gloria Frym
> >
> >
> > On 7/19/2010 5:01 AM, Pierre Joris wrote:
> >
> >> hear! hear! in all my years of teaching one of the first > >> recommendations I > >> give young writers is never ever to enter such "small reading fee"
> >> competitions as they are by their nature
> scam affairs, no matter how hip and > >> experimental they claim to be. Basic capitalist exploitation. Right on > >> Richard. - Pierre
> >>
> >> On Jul 18, 2010, at 1:53 PM, richard owens wrote:
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify themselves

> >>> with > >>> radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative practices) do > >>> nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and commodity
> >>> culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry > >>> competitions
> >>> engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and fostering a > >>> competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&, yes,
> >>> competition and cooperation are in _no_ > uncertain way mutually exclusive).
> >>>
> >>> but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we could > >>> weed
> >>> out a few greedy apples then market-based > economies (cultural and otherwise)
> >>> would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?
> >>>
> >>> Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | refuse."
> >>> Charles
> >>> Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."
> >>>
> >>> &&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense of > >>> cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the language
> >>> of
> >>> submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to > see so many poets so willingly
> >>> "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as capable of > >>> recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell.& it's > >>> even > >>> more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects others
> >>> to
> >>> "submit." man, for people so attuned to the > complexities and the ideological
> >>> underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so many > >>> gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of > >>> competition.
> >>>
> >>> but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, right?&
> >>> so
> >>> long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or class > >>> politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to worry

> >>> abt
> >>> how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also reproduce
> >>> the > >>> logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.
> >>>
> >>>
> >>> .....richard owens
> >>> 810 richmond ave
> >>> buffalo NY 14222-1167
> >>>
> >>> damn the caesars, the journal
> >>> damn the caesars, the blog
> >>>
> >>> --- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
> >>> wrote:
> >>>
> >>> From: Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
> >>> Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
> >>> To: [redacted]
> >>> Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM
> >>>
> >>> 2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of > >>> innovative writing, one each of fiction and > poetry. Winners will be flown
> >>> to the University of Colorado at Boulder to > give a reading in the spring of > >>> 2011.
> >>>
> >>> to > >>> 100 pages fiction (double spaced) along > with a $20 reading fee and an SASE
> >>> for notification of results. Please see www.subitopress.org for > English Department, Hellems 101,
> >>> 226 UCB, Boulder, Colorado, 80309-0226. Former students, friends and > >>> relatives of UCB faculty are ineligible.
> >>>
> >>> Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 > >>> (postmark
> >>> date).
> >>> _____
> >>> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your > >>> inbox.

> >>>
> >>>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?
ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>
==========
=
> >> "Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
> >>
==========
=
> >> Pierre Joris
> >> cell phone: [redacted]
> >> email: [redacted]
> >> http://pierrejoris.com
> >> Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
> >>
==========
=
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> No virus found in this incoming message.
> >> Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
> >> Version: 9.0.839 / Virus Database: 271.1.1/3015 - Release Date:
> >> 07/18/10
> >> 23:36:00
> >>

> >>
> >>
> >
> > guidelines
> >
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are
like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets
left out, the more they seem to contain. One can hear echoes from all the various
ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment
is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure
musical threnody.[it] opens a window, not only
into a mind, but a person, a personality, this
human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

216. Pierre Joris
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

On Jul 19, 2010, at 11:07 PM, Noah Eli Gordon wrote:
> ... I think Pierre Joris's comment about them being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege.

Where do you want me to write from? Can't quit my job in a provincial upstate English department to answer you, really. Wouldn't know how to pay the rent. Been there for 18 years now, after 20+ freelancing, doing mimeo-mags, translating for peanuts or less, editing, teaching EFL, bartending, whatever. It is exactly because of that experience that I feel that I can speak to yours & Amish's posts, & that that's coming from a place of experience, not privilege.

> Although I respect all of the many years he’s put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc., it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi notes, for a young poet to break into the scene.

It was never easy. It was actually even less easy back when as there was no poetry "scene" that offered careers — that came about in the eighties & nineties with the expansion of the MFA programs, with AWP, etc. One never thought one could make a living at poetry, one paid the rent with whatever job — & it would certainly not be poetry related — that came to hand. So the place of privilege would actually be today when there seem to be so much available possibilities — cf. the ads throughout every issue of AWP mag.

> One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet these days without being somehow independently wealthy.
How much money does it take to get an MFA? Enough to live in NYC for the same amount of years & write poetry & find out if that is what one is good at and wants to spend one's life doing. That involves a risk of course —but the kind of risk any artist worth her salt needs to take. Of course if you find out that you are not very good or even any good at all at writing poetry while doing an MFA, you haven't really lost any of your investment, as you will get the degree anyhow and then can still go on & get a job teaching the writing of poetry for the next 40 years.

>
> I just think the energy expended in arguing about this would be better directed into actual action. I mean if you're going to end your email, as Richard did, by bringing up inequality and injustice, aren't there other means to more efficaciously address these issues?
I think it is indeed worth arguing about, Noah, because it is exactly these questions that keep coming up while teaching or talking with young poets. They define in a certain way the political economy of the current situation in the US. (Poets anywhere else, from Paris to Timbuktu, Beijing to Sofia, would laugh out loud at the puny problems encountered by well-fed, well-clothed young Norte Americanos bitching about not getting into some poetry "scene." The real place of privilege is this country.

btw, I admire Letter Machine Editions & your description of the economy of it in this post — important in fact to do that, explain it publicly. (In the seventies, in London, Allen Fisher would always have an page in the back of the books he published that would itemize the exact cost of the book & its relation to the number of copies printed and the price asked per copy.)

Pierre
==========
=

"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
=
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========
=

↑ Index

217. Mary Kasimor
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

This has been a very interesting discussion, in my opinion. Noah, I really appreciate your comments and defense of the poetry contests in response. I have very little to do with other poets in my daily life, other than the poets who I "meet" online and whose work I read. I find it reassuring that even though our motives are not ALWAYS the purest if we were to be honest with ourselves, we are/ you are/I am working towards an openness and a non-competitiveness in creating and getting poems out there, considering that most everything else is so very competitive; we live in a cut throat dog eat dog...and other cliches, world. Without a doubt, we, poets, cannot always get away from what we deplore, but we can look at it, respond to it, and think of other ways to do what we believe in, which is to write, read, and respond to poetry, since poetry is really about the world, the universe, each other, etc. etc.

Thanks.

Mary Kasimor

--- On Mon, 7/19/10, Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, July 19, 2010, 10:07 PM

As Richard's email was in response to the announcement I'd posted here, I can't help but take his comment about the lack of editorial acumen as personal, even if it included the "more often that not" caveat. Subito Press was founded at the University of Colorado-Boulder by my colleague Elisabeth Sheffield. It's not "my" press. I was simply passing on an announcement about it. Like Richard,

I've been frustrated in the past by what I perceived of as a dearth of uninteresting work being brought into the world. But rather than grip about it, I decided, along with a friend to found a press (http://www.lettermachine.org/catalog.html) that would function as a sort of polemic, where our books would collectively make an argument for what we see as representative of the work being done that is wholly valuable for the state of (& future of) the art.

Letter Machine Editions does not have a contest. We did, however, have an open reading period recently, one where we asked for $10. For this $10, we offered to mail any title from our backlist to whomever submitted. The cost of a mailing envelop is around one dollar. The cost to mail the book is about two dollars. The actual cost per book, the amount we pay to publish each book, including all fees, shipping, charges to list the book with SPD, designer fees, etc. ranges from about $4 to $8 per book (our full-length titles are offset pressed, not digit), for a total cost of from $7 to $11 dollars. This is to say we are not making money off of our reading fees, rather we're getting our books out into the world and getting a chance to see work by folks we might not otherwise see. I've personally already gone over $5,000 into debt, and had to open up new credit cards, just to fund this press. Not for some sort of careerist gain, but because I believe in the books weâ€™re publishing & want to see them move into the world.

That said, I realize that the initial response to my email was more of an attack on the contest system. Yes, I also think it has its faults. But no, I don't think those poet who've won contests really care all that much about the contest itself. It's more of a means to simply get the work into the world. I mean, even John Latta, who commented here is a book contest winner. Here are a few more off the top of my head:

Nathaniel Mackey
Juliana Spahr
Cole Swensen
Elizabeth Willis
John Ashbery
Rodrigo Toscano
Ange Mlinko
Joshua Clover
Ed Roberson
John Yau
Laura Mullen
Graham Foust
Jena Osman
Laynie Browne

Eleni Sikelianos
Elizabeth Robinson

Maybe these people would shun contest now, but that's because they've had the opportunity to establish themselves in some (& not always so) small way through having won one. This is why I think Pierre Joris's comment about them being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege. Although I respect all of the many years heâ€™s put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc., it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi notes, for a young poet to break into the scene. Yes, I'm an advocate for starting your own press and journal, both of which I did. But for folks not lucky enough to live in a city with a large, active poetry community, or to study at a school like the University of Buffalo (as Richard did), with its instant community and funding for student-editing projects, it can be a daunting thing. Yes, creating alterative market systems is one answer. I think we all think Sub Press is pretty amazing. But the problem is much deeper than the tiny market systems of poetry. One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet these days without being somehow independently wealthy. That wasn't always the case, tho.

I just think the energy expended in arguing about this would be better directed into actual action. I mean if you're going to end your email, as Richard did, by bringing up inequality and injustice, aren't there other means to more efficaciously address these issues?

--Noah
Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â

_____

Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

218. Douglas Manson
Courses offered in all forums, formats
Tue 20 Jul 2010

Hi All,
Please check out my poetics link--I'm in love with learning!

http://dougfinmanson.blogspot.com/2010/07/courses-workshops-and-seminars-offered.html

Thank you,
Douglas Manson

[redacted]

↑ Index

219. Elizabeth Switaj
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

Not one of us burns every one of our poems before letting anyone else read them. We all have a little mud on us if we want to talk about careerism. And purity is repulsive anyway.

Collectives and conversations with your peers start to look a lot like cliques and cronyism if you have lousy social skills, particularly if those social skills are affected by neurological differences. Oh, I know that's a marginal concern but aren't the margins where distinctive writing happens more often than not?

Elizabeth Switaj
elizabethkateswitaj.net

↑ Index

220. Peter Quartermain
Re: Robert Duncan and NORGOL. Help needed!
Tue 20 Jul 2010

Hilary:

Wow. I wonder. The plural is kasten, but Duncan might not have known that. I didn't know the dutch in its singular either (did Duncan?), which says something about my ignorance speculating upon his putative same. How to deal with a writer's ignorance is a subject worthy of several books, I'd think, but what ignorant editor or professor who says s/he knows something can protect the poet the poem and other readers from that knowing. So THANKS -- and the conundrum is still conundering.

Which means Duncan's work is, no doubt, endless in its demands -- but I can live with walking away from itall once the deadline arrives. And that tells you I'm getting a bit tiured of this project, look forward to other stuff so do, and seem to be thriving.

Just finished the first of two longish-weekend visits from my son and his children (aged 4 and 2) -- fun, but oh my, exhausting. And that tells you we're both well, happy, busy -- and (oh dear) looking forward to the grandchildren's return visit this weekend, before they fly home to Ottawa. Good job the summer is, so far, generally cool enough to be pleasant rather than too hot to be tolerable. BC is not Saskatchewan.

Best, yes indeed,

Peter
=========
Peter Quartermain
846 Keefer Street
Vancouver
BC Canada V6A 1Y7
[redacted] (voice and fax)
[redacted]
=========

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Hilary Clark
Sent: 19 July 2010 07:26 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Robert Duncan and NORGOL. Help needed!

Hi Peter,

"kast" seems to be a Dutch word, for a sort of armoire that was taken up in parts of America: see this link
http://www.artnet.com/magazine/features/garrett/garrett2-14-00.asp

I'm not sure whether "kasts" would be plural--don't know Dutch.

Hope you're well.

Hilary Clark

Quoting Peter Quartermain <[redacted]>:

> HELP ! ! !
>
>
>
> I need some help. I'm annotating Robert Duncan's poems (translating foreign > words and phrases, identifying their source) for the Collected Later Poetry > and Plays, and I'm getting into difficulties in GROUND WORK II: IN THE DARK.
> I'm stuck in more than one place, and may be calling for help from time to > time. Here's the first:

>
> The poem is "IN WONDER" (pages 227-229 in the single-volume Ground Work)
>
> 1. "NORGOL" - the word occurs twice: "norgol" and "Nor-gol."
>
> The poem hints it might come from science fiction - Duncan read Andre Norton > (among others) and it might be from something by her - or from Tolkien's The > Lord of the Rings (but there I'm grasping at straws). Googling "Norgol" I > find that it's a name in a wargame, but so far as I can tell the game > post-dates the poem.
>
> Does anyone out there know?
>
>
>
> 2. The mixed German and French at the top of page 228 ends with "kasts", but > my sources (native-speakers of German) tell me this is not a word in German, > though it appears in the title of an autobiographical novel (The > Unrestrained Life of Kast) by Volker Braun, published in 1972. I don't know > German; Braun's book has not been translated into English.
>
> Can anyone help me here?
>
>
>
> Thanks.
>
>
>
> Peter
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
> =========
> Peter Quartermain
> 846 Keefer Street
> Vancouver
> BC Canada V6A 1Y7
> [redacted] (voice and fax)
> [redacted]
> =========
>
>
guidelines &
>

↑ Index

221. Matthew Landis
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

TO respond to Hugh's point:

That's a great point and, in fact, I do work with a group of poets here in Philadelphia who have set up their own small presses, or put out small limited editions of other poets just for fun, and set up readings for other poets, and readings which celebrate presses that we admire or are fond of. All of that certainly helps, so yr point is well taken. That still doesn't address the point I made regarding how engaging in such communities can still, very often, limit the aesthetic choices available to you (printing in color, paper quality) not to mention the fact that most of us are recent college graduates or grad students who don't have the time to raise the money to do more ambitious publishing projects because we have to work in order to payoff ridiculous student loans and are already sacrificing sleep, social lives, and sanity in order to do what little we can...we're not "professional" poets who have institutional support; we're 20 somethings who are already publishing our friends work, setting up readings, attending readings, meeting to share and discuss work. The group that I work with, the New Philadelphia Poets, some of our members work 2 or 3 jobs, than have to hussle to meetings where we set up a reading, or meet with a friend who's putting out a chapbook by one of us, or go to a reading we've set up or that we're performing in. Or for the reading series I help run, the 3 of us who work on it work all week and then sacrifice most if not all of our Sunday to set up the bookstore where we hold it, run the reading and the open reading which follows, and then clean up. And I swear I'm not complaining about it. None of us. We all love poetry and art and music too much to bother complaining. It's a source of joy in the midst of an otherwise workaday existence. My point is, I suppose, we're already at the mercy of and subject to capitalist exploitation in order to simply have the money to afford the leisure time necessary to sustain our artistic lives. There's a real poetic community in Philadelphia—one of the most open and engaging in the country I'd venture to say; but it's still difficult simply because most, though admittedly not all, of the people I know in this community are not in a position of economic privilege (due to student loans, or health concerns combined with a lack of health insurance, or any of the other myriad social problems) wherein they have the leisure time required to do what yr talking about—& even if they did the resources would still be limited.

On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 11:07 PM, Noah Eli Gordon <[redacted]
> wrote:

> As Richard's email was in response to the announcement I'd posted here, I can't help but take his comment about the lack of editorial acumen as personal, even if it included the "more often that not" caveat. Subito Press was founded at the University of Colorado-Boulder by my colleague Elisabeth Sheffield. It's not "my" press. I was simply passing on an announcement about it. Like Richard, I've been frustrated in the past by what I perceived of as a dearth of uninteresting work being brought into the world. But rather than grip about it, I decided, along with a friend to found a press (http://www.lettermachine.org/catalog.html) that would function as a sort of polemic, where our books would collectively make an argument for what we see as representative of the work being done that is wholly valuable for the state of (& future of) the art.
>
> Letter Machine Editions does not have a contest. We did, however, have an open reading period recently, one where we asked for $10. For this $10, we offered to mail any title from our backlist to whomever submitted. The cost of a mailing envelop is around one dollar. The cost to mail the book is about two dollars. The actual cost per book, the amount we pay to publish each book, including all fees, shipping, charges to list the book with SPD, designer fees, etc. ranges from about $4 to $8 per book (our full-length titles are offset pressed, not digit), for a total cost of from $7 to $11 dollars. This is to say we are not making money off of our reading fees, rather we're getting our books out into the world and getting a chance to see work by folks we might not otherwise see. I've personally already gone over $5,000 into debt, and had to open up new credit cards, just to fund this press. Not for some sort of careerist gain, but because I believe in the books we're publishing & want to see them move into the world.
>
> That said, I realize that the initial response to my email was more of an attack on the contest system. Yes, I also think it has its faults. But no, I don't think those poet who've won contests really care all that much about the contest itself. It's more of a means to simply get the work into the world. I mean, even John Latta, who commented here is a book contest winner. Here are a few more off the top of my head:

Nathaniel Mackey
Juliana Spahr
Cole Swensen
Elizabeth Willis
John Ashbery
Rodrigo Toscano
Ange Mlinko
Joshua Clover
Ed Roberson
John Yau
Laura Mullen
Graham Foust
Jena Osman
Laynie Browne
Eleni Sikelianos
Elizabeth Robinson

Maybe these people would shun contest now, but that's because they've had the opportunity to establish themselves in some (& not always so) small way through having won one. This is why I think Pierre Joris's comment about them being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege. Although I respect all of the many years he's put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc., it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi notes, for a young poet to break into the scene. Yes, I'm an advocate for starting your own press and journal, both of which I did. But for folks not lucky enough to live in a city with a large, active poetry community, or to study at a school like the University of Buffalo (as Richard did), with its instant community and funding for student-editing projects, it can be a daunting thing. Yes, creating alterative market systems is one answer. I think we all think Sub Press is pretty amazing. But the problem is much deeper than the tiny market systems of poetry. One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet these days without being somehow independently wealthy. That wasn't always the case, tho.

I just think the energy expended in arguing about this would be better directed into actual action. I mean if you're going to end your email, as Richard did, by bringing up inequality and injustice, aren't there other means to more efficaciously address these issues?

--Noah

Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

222. sheila black

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Tue 20 Jul 2010

I think you are correct in giving the word "submission" another connotation (i.e. humility).Â An apprentice by nature of being an apprentice is in a process of learning her craft. Why not learn by submitting work (however tentative).Â Art requires great humility and great arrogance (in my humble opinion). Of course, I think there are many artists whose gifts put them in the category of linguistic savants; however, for most of us who began with "just" :) :) a passion for literature, writing, language, etc. it is a craft that grows with experience and sometimes acknowledgment (depending on the person). I write because I love to write. Its always nice to get things published occasionally. Many of my young students express their ultimate desire is to be published, but most students, (and I include myself in this), feel driven to say something, driven to tell their outside world something. I love that there are so many small presses now providing that service in whatever form they choose.

Sheila e. Black Â Â
Â Sheila Black

--- On Mon, 7/19/10, michael farrell <[redacted]> wrote:

From: michael farrell <[redacted]>
Subject: RE: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, July 19, 2010, 4:40 PM

what if submission were a holy action?

what if it allowed humility?

> Date: Mon, 19 Jul 2010 13:27:09 -0700
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
> To: [redacted]
>
> Just do it yourselfâ€”
>
> http://withplusstand.blogspot.com
>

> â€”
>
> DTG
>
> On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 12:28 PM, Amish Trivedi <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> > What I still wonder, though, is:
> >
> > What else are younger poets supposed to do? Which door does one stick one's > > foot into in the hopes of keeping it open?
> >
> > I feel like I hear a lot of anti-reading period/submission stuff from > > people
> > who are further ahead in their careers.
> >
> > Are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope > > somebody takes notice?
> >
> > Amish
> >
> > On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Brian Seabolt <[redacted]> wrote:
> >
> > >Â Â Â it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many > > >Â poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not,
> > >Â are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula > > >Â or Simon Cowell.
> > >
> > > Who?
> > >
> > > _____
> > >
> > > While he read Moll held a little aloof,
> > > with downcast eyes, saying to herself,
> > > Now he's at the part where, and a little > > > later, Now he's at the part where, and
> > > so remained until the rustle of the sheet
> > > going back into the envelope announced
> > > that he had finished.
> > >
> > > Samuel Beckett, Malone Dies_____
> > >

> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > _____
> > > Search for products and services at:
> > > http://search.mail.com
> > >
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
> >
>
 Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â

_____
If It Exists, You'll Find it on SEEK. Australia's #1 job site
http://clk.atdmt.com/NMN/go/157639755/direct/01/

↑ Index

223. jason snyder

Sidebrow Open Reading Period in August

Tue 20 Jul 2010

Sidebrow Books will hold an open reading period for unpublished book-length manuscripts of prose, poetry, cross-genre, and collaborative work during the month of August.

Details regarding the submission process are available on the Sidebrow Web site (http://www.sidebrow.net/submit). There will be a $20 reading fee for each manuscript submitted. As thanks for helping develop Sidebrow's collaborative projects, Sidebrow contributors will be offered a discounted reading fee of $10 per manuscript. All writers who submit during the open reading period will receive a complimentary Sidebrow title.

Simultaneous submissions will be considered where noted, but we ask you to notify us promptly should your manuscript be accepted elsewhere. Work published in part as a chapbook will be considered, as long as the manuscript in its current form has not been previously published.

Manuscripts not postmarked in the month of August will be discarded.

More information can be found on the Sidebrow Web site: http://www.sidebrow.net/submit

Those unfamiliar with Sidebrow are encouraged to explore our press before submitting by purchasing one of our titles: http://www.sidebrow.net/books _____ Hotmail has tools for the New Busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_1

↑ Index

224. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

When Eda: An Anthology of Contemporary Turkish Poetry edited by me was published, among acknowledgments, I thanked my business at the time Murat Oriental Rugs, Inc. for the financial sacrifices it had to make for the writing of the book. I spent endless hours at my office working on the book, neglecting my business. That is what it takes to be a poet. I wanted the book to contain a record of that.

Ciao,

Murat

On Tue, Jul 20, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Pierre Joris <[redacted]> wrote:

> On Jul 19, 2010, at 11:07 PM, Noah Eli Gordon wrote:
> ... I think Pierre Joris's comment about them being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege.
>
> Where do you want me to write from? Can't quit my job in a provincial upstate English department to answer you, really. Wouldn't know how to pay the rent. Been there for 18 years now, after 20+ freelancing, doing mimeo-mags, translating for peanuts or less, editing, teaching EFL, bartending, whatever. It is exactly because of that experience that I feel that I can speak to yours & Amish's posts, & that that's coming from a place of experience, not privilege.
>
> Although I respect all of the many years he’s put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc., it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi notes, for a young poet to break into the scene.

It was never easy. It was actually even less easy back when as there was no poetry "scene" that offered careers — that came about in the eighties & nineties with the expansion of the MFA programs, with AWP, etc. One never thought one could make a living at poetry, one paid the rent with whatever job — & it would certainly not be poetry related — that came to hand. So the place of privilege would actually be today when there seem to be so much available possibilities — cf. the ads throughout every issue of AWP mag.

One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet these days without being somehow independently wealthy.
How much money does it take to get an MFA? Enough to live in NYC for the same amount of years & write poetry & find out if that is what one is good at and wants to spend one's life doing. That involves a risk of course —but the kind of risk any artist worth her salt needs to take. Of course if you find out that you are not very good or even any good at all at writing poetry while doing an MFA, you haven't really lost any of your investment, as you will get the degree anyhow and then can still go on & get a job teaching the writing of poetry for the next 40 years.

I just think the energy expended in arguing about this would be better directed into actual action. I mean if you're going to end your email, as Richard did, by bringing up inequality and injustice, aren't there other means to more efficaciously address these issues?
I think it is indeed worth arguing about, Noah, because it is exactly these questions that keep coming up while teaching or talking with young poets. They define in a certain way the political economy of the current situation in the US. (Poets anywhere else, from Paris to Timbuktu, Beijing to Sofia, would laugh out loud at the puny problems encountered by well-fed, well-clothed young Norte Americanos bitching about not getting into some poetry "scene." The real place of privilege is this country.

btw, I admire Letter Machine Editions & your description of the economy of it in this post — important in fact to do that, explain it publicly. (In the seventies, in London, Allen Fisher would always have an page in the back of the books he published that would itemize the exact cost of the book & its relation to the number of copies printed and the price asked per copy.)

Pierre
==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/

> ==========

↑ Index

225. Matthew Landis

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Tue 20 Jul 2010

The one thing I'd add Pierre, when you address the relative costs of an MFA compared to living in NYC for a similar number of years: The difference is it's far easier to get a loan for an MFA from a bank, or some other institution when yr a 20 something with no collateral and little to no credit history (and if the statistics bear out, if you are a 20 something, chances are yr credit history is awful) than it is to walk into a bank and ask for a comparable loan in order to move to NYC and write poetry for two years. Which isn't to say yr wrong, I agree with many of yr points in fact. After all, fortune favors the brave and all that...still, as it was in the 60's and 70's I'm sure, there's a tremendous amount of volatility that comes into play in the economic lives of younger poets now. We're extremely vulnerable, especially if we've bought in to the MFA racket. They prey on the sort of competition/prize fed homunculus which is bred inside of you from Kindergarten on and on yr economic vulnerability. I feel like a lot of kids of my generation (I'm 28) get sold into believing that the MFA route is the only economically viable route to becoming a writer. There's such an emphasis on "professional" or "career" being the suffix to "writer". Hell, I bought into it. I didn't attend an MFA, I got my Masters in Liberal Arts at Penn (i certainly didn't get an interdisciplinary degree to advance my career though...I did it because well...I like being a student, I like learning...) but if there's one thing I've learned in my brief time trying to participate in and grow WITH the scene here in Philadelphia it's that I hope I stay an amateur forever. After all, the Latin route "amo" implies love. If I ever stop loving poetry and it becomes PRIMARILY a career for me (I still think it's a valid and admirable thing to spend yr life doing as a vocation or even a professional vocation), I hope someone has the good sense and compassion to put me out of my misery.

On Tue, Jul 20, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Pierre Joris <[redacted]> wrote:

> On Jul 19, 2010, at 11:07 PM, Noah Eli Gordon wrote:
> ... I think Pierre Joris's comment about them being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege.

Where do you want me to write from? Can't quit my job in a provincial upstate English department to answer you, really. Wouldn't know how to pay the rent. Been there for 18 years now, after 20+ freelancing, doing mimeo-mags, translating for peanuts or less, editing, teaching EFL, bartending, whatever. It is exactly because of that experience that I feel that I can speak to yours & Amish's posts, & that that's coming from a place of experience, not privilege.

Although I respect all of the many years he's put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc., it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi notes, for a young poet to break into the scene.

It was never easy. It was actually even less easy back when as there was no poetry "scene" that offered careers — that came about in the eighties & nineties with the expansion of the MFA programs, with AWP, etc. One never thought one could make a living at poetry, one paid the rent with whatever job — & it would certainly not be poetry related — that came to hand. So the place of privilege would actually be today when there seem to be so much available possibilities — cf. the ads throughout every issue of AWP mag.

One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet these days without being somehow independently wealthy.
How much money does it take to get an MFA? Enough to live in NYC for the same amount of years & write poetry & find out if that is what one is good at and wants to spend one's life doing. That involves a risk of course —but the kind of risk any artist worth her salt needs to take. Of course if you find out that you are not very good or even any good at all at writing poetry while doing an MFA, you haven't really lost any of your investment, as you will get the degree anyhow and then can still go on & get a job teaching the writing of poetry for the next 40 years.

I just think the energy expended in arguing about this would be better directed into actual action. I mean if you're going to end your email, as Richard did, by bringing up inequality and injustice, aren't there other means to more efficaciously address these issues?
I think it is indeed worth arguing about, Noah, because it is exactly these questions that keep coming up while teaching or talking with young poets. They define in a certain way the political economy of the current situation in the US. (Poets anywhere else, from Paris to Timbuktu, Beijing to Sofia, would laugh out loud at the puny problems encountered by well-fed, well-clothed young Norte Americanos bitching about not getting into some poetry "scene." The real place of privilege is this country.

btw, I admire Letter Machine Editions & your description of the economy of it in this post — important in fact to do that, explain it publicly. (In the > seventies, in London, Allen Fisher would always have an page in the back of the books he published that would itemize the exact cost of the book & its relation to the number of copies printed and the price asked per copy.)

>
> Pierre
> ==========
> "Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
> ==========
> Pierre Joris
> cell phone: [redacted]
> email: [redacted]
> http://pierrejoris.com
> Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
> ==========

↑ Index

226. Brian Clements

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Tue 20 Jul 2010

While I appreciate the reservations many poets have about contest culture (especially after the whole Foetry thing a few years ago), and while there is no doubt that there are outfits out there taking improper advantage of that culture, I don't think ALL small presses out there running contests have dubious motives--in fact, I run two awards myself at Firewheel (the Sentence Book Award and the Firewheel Chapbook Award) in addition to publishing Sentence and unsolicited book manuscripts. I'm sure many other folks on this list who aren't speaking up run contests and awards as well.

First, many (most?) small presses are run as nonprofits on an entirely volunteer basis. Many of them, like Noah's press and like Firewheel was when I first started, are run mostly out of the editor's pocket, without support from a university and without NEA or state grant moneys. So to imply that these presses somehow are pouring contest money into their editors' own pockets simply isn't the case in most instances. The funds from contest fees, if there is any left after publication of the winning title, is poured back into other titles, which the press would be unable to publish without those funds. So there actually is an element of the co-op in many of these small presses; I would hope that entrants in such contests actually KNOW the presses to which they are sending their work and can take some satisfaction in knowing that if they themselves are not offered publication, they are supporting a press they admire and helping that press to publish other worthy work. Isn't that what a co-op is?

The Firewheel Chapbook Award, for example, is dedicated to publishing work that is difficult to place for publication due to format, typography, whatever reason. Our last publication was a box with cover art and loose leaf printed pages, Marjorie Tesser's poem/game _The important thing is..._. I would hope that the folks who entered and whom we did not publish feel that they contributed to the publication of Marjorie's title, because they did. It wouldn't have happened without them. The Sentence Book Award, which is devoted to prose poetry, appeals to a specific audience who form a kind of co-op in expressing their support for their fellow prose poets, for Sentence and for Firewheel with their entries. Is there really a difference between sending an entry fee to a publisher you admire and sending a small donation?

Maybe one would argue that no publisher should be publishing who can't afford to do so without the contest structure. One might argue that there are too many books anyway and these contests are publishing work that aren't worthy of publication. And my response would be to challenge you to read Marjorie's _The important thing is..._ or Catherine Sasanov's _Had Slaves_ and see if you still feel that way--I'm sure the same applies to many award-winning books that I didn't publish as well...

If Firewheel ever is successful enough (that is, has enough ongoing sales of existing titles) to support these awards without fees, then we will run them for free or cease the awards and just publish more books that come over the transom, that would be great! Just as we'd love to be able to pay all of our contributors gobs of money every time we print their work in Sentence. But until that time, we feel like we're providing a service to a certain audience by doing things the way we do them. And it sure as hell hasn't given me any kind of career boost, I can tell you that! What it has done for me personally, though, is give me an opportunity to get to know many excellent people who are interested in building respectful relationships through books, journals, and poems.

↑ Index

227. Pierre Joris

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Tue 20 Jul 2010

So this afternoon I am trying to catch up with the magazines that have accumulated around my table and come across this, by Jennifer Moxley — from

Fragments of a Broken Poetics — in the latest issue of Chicago Review (55:2, spring 2010), which speaks to what we have been discussing in this thread:

"Publication, popularity, and prizes. All three are unreliable measures of value. In fact, any indicator of poetics worth that is immediately perceptible to people who care nothing of poetry is likely to be, in some part, false."

==========
"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
==========
Pierre Joris
cell phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
http://pierrejoris.com
Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
==========

↑ Index

228. Jared Schickling
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

"can't make an easy equation between competition and acceptable topics"

Maybe not easy, but concretized ethics value as "prize culture."

"editorial incompetence in order to make points about competition and the politics of speech acts"

Very much in order: "$"

"a challenge to find ways of opting out of submitting to prizes" / "are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope somebody takes notice"

No.

js

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781609640019/zeros-blooming-excursion.aspx

etc

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

229. Catherine Daly
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

Just an idea: as list after list descends into exchanges of marketing info. or announcements of products and events that are part of our culture of mini-celebrity, and now that facebook and blogs are also going that way, perhaps it might be time to return to critical/aesthetic debates?

For example, I haven't replied to Adam's post because I think it might be more appropriate for me to write (as I mention on my blog, which I don't "market" -- I made it as a sort of blog in 2002? when? that isn't in the direction blogging went --) a more positively-positioned summary of my ideas about how the ideas of soul and spirit might be entirely inappropriate for poetry -- but because this list was so contentious in the past, also, there's no way I could really post what I think here.

Maybe there's a new way? Something more descriptive and anecdotal, less like the poetry we write?

To write poetry is to be on the margins, but to write experimental poetry, more so, and to spend most of the days and nights locked outside of both the academic/critical realm and the mainstream poetry realm is painful, and to have a different aesthetic -- or even be in a different place in life, or to be tired of "building a following" -- from the local poetry coteries -- is painful as well. And within experimental poetry. I know for me, the lists were a balm at one time. I was so isolated, working as a manager for institutions squandering billions of dollars and creating the recessions. Including schools: isn't it great that art resists professionalism? The familiar? Isn't it nice to be able to see when a work is really vacuous and another is really interesting? That unlike composition, creative writing remains relevant to the way people have to communicate after their last paper is due? That arts, criticism, and theory is the last revenge of the amateur?

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

230. Mark Weiss
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 20 Jul 2010

I pretty much echo the sentiments of this and Pierre's previous messages. Let's be real specific about the privilege of age. To the extent that I'm known, despite my usual lack of attention to beyond a very small public, it's because, purely for love of the art, aside from writing and getting my own work published, I've edited anthologies, published a magazine and a press, translated, run readings, etc., for almost 50 years. Pierre, who's far better known, has an even longer list of services over almost as long a period of time: add for him journalism in several languages, radio shows ditto.
Recoignition has been a by-product, regardless of whether it was wanted. When a twenty-something or even a thirty-something complains about not being known I want to know what he or she is looking for, why they need fame, such as it is for poets, so young. Do they think it's like being a rock star? Do they think the craft is so easily learned?

At 09:09 AM 7/20/2010, you wrote:
>On Jul 19, 2010, at 11:07 PM, Noah Eli Gordon wrote:
> > ... I think Pierre Joris's comment about them > being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege.
>
>Where do you want me to write from? Can't quit >my job in a provincial upstate English >department to answer you, really. Wouldn't know >how to pay the rent. Been there for 18 years >now, after 20+ freelancing, doing mimeo-mags, >translating for peanuts or less, editing, >teaching EFL, bartending, whatever. It is >exactly because of that experience that I feel >that I can speak to yours & Amish's posts, & >that that's coming from a place of experience, not privilege.
>
> > Although I respect all of the many years he’s > put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc.,

> it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi > notes, for a young poet to break into the scene.
>
>It was never easy. It was actually even less >easy back when as there was no poetry "scene" >that offered careers — that came about in the >eighties & nineties with the expansion of the >MFA programs, with AWP, etc. One never thought >one could make a living at poetry, one paid the >rent with whatever job — & it would certainly >not be poetry related — that came to hand. So >the place of privilege would actually be today >when there seem to be so much available >possibilities — cf. the ads throughout every issue of AWP mag.
>
> > One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet
> these days without being somehow independently wealthy.
>How much money does it take to get an MFA?
>Enough to live in NYC for the same amount of >years & write poetry & find out if that is what >one is good at and wants to spend one's life >doing. That involves a risk of course —but the >kind of risk any artist worth her salt needs to >take. Of course if you find out that you are not >very good or even any good at all at writing >poetry while doing an MFA, you haven't really >lost any of your investment, as you will get the >degree anyhow and then can still go on & get a >job teaching the writing of poetry for the next 40 years.
>
> >
> > I just think the energy expended in arguing > about this would be better directed into actual > action. I mean if you're going to end your > email, as Richard did, by bringing up > inequality and injustice, aren't there other > means to more efficaciously address these issues?
>I think it is indeed worth arguing about, Noah, >because it is exactly these questions that keep >coming up while teaching or talking with young >poets. They define in a certain way the >political economy of the current situation in >the US. (Poets anywhere else, from Paris to >Timbuktu, Beijing to Sofia, would laugh out loud >at the puny problems encountered by well-fed, >well-clothed young Norte Americanos bitching >about not getting into some poetry "scene." The >real place of privilege is this country.

>
>btw, I admire Letter Machine Editions & your >description of the economy of it in this post — >important in fact to do that, explain it >publicly. (In the seventies, in London, Allen >Fisher would always have an page in the back of >the books he published that would itemize the >exact cost of the book & its relation to the >number of copies printed and the price asked per copy.)
>
>Pierre
>==========
==
>"Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
>==========
==
>Pierre Joris
>cell phone: [redacted]
>email: [redacted]
>http://pierrejoris.com
>Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
>==========
==
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets left out, the more they seem to contain… One can hear echoes from all the various ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure musical threnody…[it] opens a window, not only into a mind, but a person, a personality, this human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

231. Lori Emerson

CFP: Steve McCaffery special issue of Open Letter

Tue 20 Jul 2010

Dear all - I'm passing this on for a colleague but please do consider submitting or please pass it on to anyone you think might be interested in contributing!

best, Lori
=======

Breakthrough Nostalgia: Reading Steve McCaffery Then and Now

As Steve McCaffery approaches his mid-60s, his poetic and critical output shows no signs of abating. Within the last decade, in fact, McCaffery has produced five new collections of poetry, a new collection of critical essays, and three volumes of selected material: Seven Pages Missing Vols. 1 & 2, and Verse and Worse. Yet it has also been nearly 25 years since Open Letter's first festschrift on McCaffery appeared, and both the critical community surrounding McCaffery's work specifically, and of innovative writing in general, has changed dramatically. Thus, this new issue of Open Letter seeks to examine the changes in the reception of McCaffery's work, as well has his own poetic development, over the last quarter century. Intended as a continuum from the first collection of Open Letter essays on McCaffery, this new gathering seeks critical essays (both scholarly and experimental) on any aspect of McCaffery's criticism or poetry (including sound, visual, and performance poetry), with a particular interest in writing produced since 1990. Some points of departure, or lines of inquiry may include:

- Reassessments of McCaffery early writing or analysis of recent writing - Is there a McCaffery canon? The significance of Teachable Texts, Carnival, or The Black Debt? - McCaffery and digital poetics: his inclusion in Poems for the Millennium Vol. 2 as a cyberpoet? Carnival: Panel 3 as his first self-identified digital work? - McCaffery collaborations (TRG, Nichol, The Four Horsemen, Mac Cormack) - McCaffery's contributions to theories of translation, sound poetry, or pataphysics - McCaffery's influence on writers, both younger and contemporary - The concept of nationality in McCaffery's career: his international reputation or his interrogation of nationality in assessing literature? - McCaffery and trans-historicism: making the new old, or making the old new? - The critical and theoretical contributions of McCaffery to literary debate

Priority will be given to critical writing on McCaffery's work, but submissions of poetry or visuals inspired by, or related to the work of, McCaffery will also be considered.

Please send proposals/ intentions/ ideas to Stephen Cain <[redacted]> by October 1st, 2010. Complete work will be requested by January 2011.

--
Lori Emerson
Assistant Professor | Electropoetics Thread Editor, Electronic Book Review
Department of English, University of Colorado at Boulder Hellems 101, 226 UCB, Boulder, CO 80309-0226
http://www.loriemerson.com
http://www.electronicbookreview.com http://twitter.com/loriemerson

↑ Index

232. Nic Sebastian
Ten Questions on Poets and Technology: Sandra Beasley
Tue 20 Jul 2010

Sandra Beasley responds this week to Ten Questions on Poets and Technology - http://bit.ly/aKK8Ws.
Series' standing page: http://bit.ly/c0aBUb
Best, Nic
Nic Sebastianhttp://verylikeawhale.wordpress.com

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

233. David-Baptiste Chirot
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Wed 21 Jul 2010

Adam-many thanks for your sharing the essay--

a thought: historically, the USA is a nation based on spirtiuality & materialism being intimately interrelated ("In God We Trust" on the money--)

also my sense of Marxist readings by poets in the US has been it is not very well thought through, not well enough read in the original writings of both the "Early/Romantic" Marx and the later "Scientific" Marx-- as well as the "Traditions of Modern Leftism" including Situationism-- Marx is an excellent writer--i wish i read German much better!!--many passages of poetry in his works even in the French and English editions i have read-- i have been corresponding with a fellow Russian Sound/Visual/Asemic poet who is a fanatic abt the place of philosphy in the face of the hells of the current world-- like many he has taken the route laid out--there are many--by Gilles Deleuze--

a problem facing language used in the USA today is that of "Torture: Cancer of Democracy" as a great book on France-Algeria 1944-62 by Pierre Vidal-Naquet calls it-- and the Orwellian demands of language used in order to accommodate support for Apartheid --

with the Taoist Chung Tzu ("Look under your feet!")-- and my ancestors here tens of thousands of years in the Americas i wd say we have lost the sense of the ground beneath our feet--of the Earth-- when we begin to lose the Mother-- we see it every day what is happening--from the oil spill to everywhere any town usa--

often the thing in front of one is the lesson to be learned from

thank you again--
onwo/ards!!
david-bc

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

234. David Kirschenbaum
Boog City presents Eleven Eleven and Churchill Downs
Wed 21 Jul 2010

please forward

Boog City presents

d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press

Eleven Eleven
(San Francisco)

Tues., July 27, 6:00 p.m. sharp, free

ACA Galleries
529 W. 20th St., 5th Flr.
NYC

Event will be hosted by Eleven Eleven editor
Hugh Behm-Steinberg

Featuring readings from

J. Mae Barizo
Suzanne Gardinier
Steven Karl
Amy King

and music from

Churchill Downs

There will be wine, cheese, and crackers, too.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

---

Eleven Eleven
http://www.elevenelevenjournal.com/

Eleven Eleven is a biannual journal of literature and art based at California College of the Arts in San Francisco. The aim of the publication is to provide a forum for risk and experimentation and to serve as an exchange between writers and artists. Founded by Youmna Chlala and Gayle Romasanta, since 2007 Eleven Eleven has been edited by Hugh Behm-Steinberg and the students of CCA's M.F.A. Writing Program.

J. Mae Barizo

Born in Toronto, J. Mae Barizo was shortlisted for Canada's Robert Kroetsch award for Innovative Poetry and Ahsahta Press's Sawtooth Poetry Prize. New work appears in Prairie Schooner, Denver Quarterly, and Bellingham Review. She is the author of two chapbooks, The Concert Review and The Marble Palace.

Churchill Downs
http://www.facebook.com/home.php#!/pages/Churchill-Downs/127643877255339?v=wall&ref=search

From the stable of Postparade, Churchill Downs have recorded a CDR called Paddock. Churchill Downs has done shows at Goodbye Blue Monday, Webster Hall, and Sidewalk Cafe.

Suzanne Gardinier

Suzanne Gardinier is the author of Today: 101 Ghazals, the long poem Dialogue with the Archipelago, and the forthcoming Iridium & Selected Poems, all from Sheep Meadow Press. She teaches at Sarah Lawrence College and lives in Manhattan.

Steven Karl
http://stevenkarl.blogspot.com/

Steven Karl is the author of State(s) of Flux, a collaborative chapbook with Joseph Lappie (Peptic Robot Press), (Ir)Rational Animals (Flying Guillotine Press), and Saturday(s) (forthcoming from Scantily Clad Press). He is a frequent poetry reviewer for Sink Review and Coldfront Magazine. He lives in Chinatown, NYC.

Amy King
http://amyking.org/

Amy King's most recent book is Slaves to Do These Things (Blazevox), and forthcoming, I Want to Make You Safe (Litmus Press). She is currently preparing a book of interviews with the poet Ron Padgett. She also teaches English and creative writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. With Ana Bozicevic, King co-curates the Brooklyn-based reading series, The Stain of Poetry.

Directions:
C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. Sept. 28
Satellite Telephone
http://nolongdistance.endingthealphabet.org/(Buffalo)
Robert Dewhurst, ed.

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

235. Gary Sullivan

Compton, Degentesh, Downing, Gardner, Gordon, Mesmer, Sullivan

Wed 21 Jul 2010

Thursday July 22, 6:00pm - 8:00pm

We-Are-Familia
Pop Up Gallery & Event Space

539 Atlantic Avenue,Brooklyn,
NYhttp://www.we-are-familia.com/

On Thursday, July 22, WE-ARE-FAMILIA Gallery will host a gathering of flarf poets. Flarf is an international avant-garde poetry movement of the late 20th century / early 21st century whose 30+ practitioners explore “the inappropriate” in all of its guises. Their method is to mine the Internet with odd search terms then distill the results into often hilarious and sometimes disturbing poems, plays, and other texts. Recently profiled on the front page of The Wall Street Journal, the flarf collective create hilarious, shocking, and sometimes downright offensive works. Heated discussions about flarf have been broadcast by the BBC and National Public Radio, and published in The Village Voice, The Nation, Poetry, Poets & Writers, and The Wall Street Journal. “Flarf is a hip, digital reaction to... boring, genteel poetry,” writes poet and critic Marjorie Perloff. Whatever flarf is––whatever you think flarf is––it is most definitely the 21st century's first poetry movement. Host and flarfista Sharon Mesmer will introduce some of the collective's New York members: Shanna Compton (For Girls), Katie Degentesh (The Anger Scale), Nada Gordon (Folly), Gary Sullivan (PPL In A Depot), Brandon Downing (Lake Antiquity), and Drew Gardner (Petroleum Hat).

WE-ARE-FAMILIA is an extensive global network of creative individuals from all disciplines who have come together to explore the powerful, complex ties which consciously and unconsciously touch all that we experience as humans. Spearheaded by Creative Director Jennifer Garcia, their primary ongoing project is a series of 25 one-of-a-kind Keepsake Boxes showcasing original "mementos" engaging the con...cept of family.

WE-ARE-FAMILIA, with help from sponsors Art Assets, Atlantic Assets, and GFI Realty, have recently transformed a raw, formerly vacant storefront on Atlantic Avenue into an open studio where they will continue assembling new Keepsake Boxes including a special commission for the Museum of Art and Design. The space additionally functions as a gallery to exhibit new works by Keepsake Box contributors as well as a free event space which aims to extend their family dialogue. The space opened its doors on June 11th, 2010, during Atlantic Avenue ArtWalk and has since had a showing of Jeff Lewis' meticulous pencil grid drawings as well as electronic performances by Mitchell Akiyama and Nina Mehta of bands First Nation and Rings from Animal Collective's Paw Tracks label.

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

236. richard owens
Damn the Caesars vol. N &c
Wed 21 Jul 2010

Announcing FOUR new publications:

http://damnthecaesars.org/

1. DAMN THE CAESARS vol. N ($15.00)

NEW WRITING: Keston Sutherland, Justin Katko, Emily Critchley, Luke Roberts, Francesca Lisette, Dale Smith, Geoffrey Gatza, Josh Stanley, Frances Kruk, David Hadbawnik, Carrie Etter, Francis Crot, and Rosa Alcala.

FEATURE: New writing and 6 full-color visual pieces from Allen Fisher followed by an extended consideration of Allen Fisher's work by Pierre Joris.

ESSAY: Dennis Tedlock on Alcheringa's relationship to Language Writing.

TRANSLATION: The Papyrus of Ani translated by Steve McCaffery; writing from Egyptian poet Ahmed Abdel Muti Hijazi translated by Rick London and Omnia Amin.

http://damnthecaesars.org/punchpress.html

2. DALE SMITH | JOSIAH WILBARGER: 1833 ($5.00)

Scalped in Texas, 1833. Survived some years. Skull half exposed. Single poem. Letterpress. Bare black bristol wraps. Hand-stitched. 4 pages.

3. MARIANNE MORRIS | TOO FEW RICHARDS TOO MANY DICKS ($5.00)

"Father, Goon and Executive Fucker." Single poem. Letterpress. Black bristol wraps. Hand-stitched. 8 pages.

4. CARRIE ETTER | DIVINATIONS ($10.00)

Twenty from Divinations for Starters (forthcoming from Shearsman). Two-color letterpress on Fabriano Tiziano folded over black bristol wraps. Hand-stitched. Cover image: adaptation of Lee Bontecou's untitled 1993 mixed-media sculpture. 24 pages.

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

↑ Index

237. Nana Zabic
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Wed 21 Jul 2010

I think there is no need for pitting established poets vs. unestablished poets, MFA/AWP generation vs. pre-MFA/AWP generation. First of all, the latter learn everything they know from the former, and the former may learn new things from the latter. Second, in a slightly larger picture, we are all pretty insignificant and powerless. That fact might be the underlying reason why there is so much frustration, and why it seems we're fighting over crumbs on the table.

But when you look at who celebrities and powerful people are nowadays, being so deep in the shadow must mean we're doing something right. Think about it. On the one hand, we are left alone by the powers that be. On the other hand, there are resources available to keep writing, reading, publishing, and sharing work. These resources may be mere crumbs on the table, but they do. (James Franco, stay away from our crumbs! Actually, no, throw us a loaf of bread! ;-))

Nana Zabic

P.S. I can write about how we (grad students who founded and run the journal) raise money for Packingtown Review, and how we spend it, and how our university affiliation works, if anyone is interested. Long story short, it takes a lot of time and effort to raise the money; no silver spoons in sight. As far as other policies, we do use the word "submission," we read year-round, we have a system to prevent nepotism (I can provide details about that too), we ran one contest in the past, which didn't charge fees, but offered no cash prize either, we might have fee+prize contest in the future...

P.P.S. Sometimes it costs almost nothing to get an MFA and a Ph.D. You get a tuition waiver, a TA-ship, live very modestly, and scramble for a summer job. There are all kinds of scenarios, though, it's hard to generalize.

↑ Index

238. Nana Zabic
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Wed 21 Jul 2010

Wait, I need to correct something here. Sorry. (Note to self, always proofread meticulously.)

Corrected version:

I think there is no need for pitting established poets vs. unestablished poets, pre-MFA/AWP generation vs. MFA/AWP generation. First of all, the latter learn everything they know from the former, and the former may learn new things from the latter. Second, in a slightly larger picture, we are all pretty insignificant and powerless. That fact might be the underlying reason why there is so much frustration, and why it seems we're fighting over crumbs on the table.

But when you look at who celebrities and powerful people are nowadays, being so deep in the shadow must mean we're doing something right. Think about it. On the one hand, we are left alone by the powers that be. On the other hand, there are resources available to keep writing, reading, publishing, and sharing work. These resources may be mere crumbs on the table, but they do. (James Franco, stay away from our crumbs! Actually, no, throw us a loaf of bread! ;-))

Nana Zabic

P.S. I can write about how we (grad students who founded and run the journal) raise money for Packingtown Review, and how we spend it, and how our university affiliation works, if anyone is interested. Long story short, it takes a lot of time and effort to raise the money; no silver spoons in sight. As far as other policies, we do use the word "submission," we read year-round, we have a system to prevent nepotism (I can provide details about that too), we ran one contest in the past, which didn't charge fees, but offered no cash prize either, we might have fee+prize contest in the future...

P.P.S. Sometimes it costs almost nothing to get an MFA and a Ph.D. You get a tuition waiver, a TA-ship, live very modestly, and scramble for a summer job. There are all kinds of scenarios, though, it's hard to generalize.

↑ Index

239. Tribbey, Hugh R.
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Wed 21 Jul 2010

Three cheers.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List (UPenn, UB) [mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Mark Weiss
Sent: Monday, July 19, 2010 4:50 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Send work to journals you admire. And don't think of it as a career. What matters is the conversation with one's peers, and with the history of the craft.

Best,

Mark

At 04:27 PM 7/19/2010, you wrote:
>Just do it yourself-
>
>http://withplusstand.blogspot.com
>
>-
>
>DTG
>

>On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 12:28 PM, Amish Trivedi <[redacted]>
wrote:
>
> > What I still wonder, though, is:
> >
> > What else are younger poets supposed to do? Which door does one stick one's > > foot into in the hopes of keeping it open?
> >
> > I feel like I hear a lot of anti-reading period/submission stuff from > > people
> > who are further ahead in their careers.
> >
> > Are the rest of us just supposed to work quietly in our bedrooms and hope > > somebody takes notice?
> >
> > Amish
> >
> > On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Brian Seabolt <[redacted]>
wrote:
> >
> > > it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many
> > > poets so willingly "submit" to editors that, more often than not, > > > are about as capable of recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula
> > > or Simon Cowell.
> > >
> > > Who?
> > >
> > > _____
> > >
> > > While he read Moll held a little aloof,
> > > with downcast eyes, saying to herself,
> > > Now he's at the part where, and a little > > > later, Now he's at the part where, and
> > > so remained until the rustle of the sheet
> > > going back into the envelope announced
> > > that he had finished.
> > >
> > > Samuel Beckett, Malone Dies_____

> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --
> > > _____
> > > Search for products and services at:
> > > http://search.mail.com
> > >
> > guidelines
> > >
> >
guidelines
> >
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are like Chekhov's short stories-the more that gets left out, the more they seem to contain... One can hear echoes from all the various ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure musical threnody...[it] opens a window, not only into a mind, but a person, a personality, this human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

240. Jennifer Karmin

Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles

Wed 21 Jul 2010

A series of text pro
NOT CONTENT
http://www.notcontent.lesfigues.com

A series of text projects curated by Les Figues Press
as part of Los Angeles Contemporary Exhibitions
year-long initiative Public Interest

UNNATURAL ACTS
July 21-August 11
Los Angeles, California

Taking its name from the historic collaborative writing marathons led by Bernadette Mayer and others in NYC during 1972-73, Unnatural Acts will explore the themes of hunger, war, and desire through public acts of collaboration.

Beginning with two days of installation and performance by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin, a group of eleven writers/artists will gather on the third day to write together over the course of eight hours. In a daily ritual inaugurated on the fourth day, the outline of a new personâ€™s body will be traced onto the bodies of text until the exhibit closes on August 11th.

ALL EVENTS OPEN TO THE PUBLIC - 6522 Hollywood Blvd
http://www.welcometolace.org/events/view/unnatural-acts

July 21: Amina Cain
Installation (12-5)
Hunger Texts Read in the Dark performance (5-5:30pm)

July 22: Jennifer Karmin
Installation (12-5)
4000 Words 4000 Dead street performance (5-6pm)

July 23: Unnatural Acts
8 hours of collaborative writing (12-8pm)
Collaborators include: Harold Abramowitz, Tisa Bryant, Amina Cain, Teresa Carmody, Saehee Cho, Kate Durbin, K. Lorraine Graham, Jennifer Karmin, Laida Lertxundi, India Radfar, and Mark Wallace.

July 24: Presentations
Artistsâ€™ Talk (2-3pm)
Collaborative Reading (4-6pm)
Readers include: Harold Abramowitz, Tisa Bryant, Amina Cain, Teresa

Carmody, Kate Durbin, K. Lorraine Graham, Jennifer Karmin, India Radfar, and Mark Wallace.

AMINA CAIN is the author of the short story collection I Go To Some Hollow (Les Figues Press, 2009), and a forthcoming chapbook, Tramps Everywhere (Insert Press/PARROT SERIES). A recording of her story â€œAttached to a Selfâ€ was included in the group show A Diamond in the Mud at Literaturhaus Basel in Switzerland in 2008; other work has appeared in publications such as 3rd Bed, Action Yes, Denver Quarterly, onedit, Sidebrow, and Wreckage of Reason: Xxperimental Prose by Women Writers. She lives in Los Angeles. http://aminacain.com

JENNIFER KARMIN's text-sound epic, Aaaaaaaaaaalice, was published by Flim Forum Press in 2010. She curates the Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity Surprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. A proud member of the Dusie Kollektiv, she is the author of the Dusie chapbook Evacuated: Disembodying Katrina. Walking Poem, a collaborative street project, is featured online at How2. In Chicago, Jennifer teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a Poet-in-Residence for the public schools. http://aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.com

COLLABORATORS:

Harold Abramowitz's recent publications include Not Blessed (Les Figues Press) and A House on a Hill {A House on a Hill, Part One} (Insert Press). Harold writes collaboratively as part of SAM OR SAMANTHA YAMS and UNFO, and co-edits the short-form literary press eohippus labs. http://www.eohippuslabs.com

Tisa Bryant is author of Unexplained Presence (Leon Works, 2007), co-editor, with Ernest Hardy, of the anthology War Diaries (AIDS Project Los Angeles, 2010), co-editor of The Encyclopedia Project's Encyclopedia Vol. 2 F-K, due out Fall 2010, and has work forthcoming in Animal Shelter 2 and Mixed Blood. Her creative process demands she write longhand, one of her favorite words is 'autochthonous,' and she teaches in the MFA Writing Program at CalArts. http://www.encyclopediaproject.org

Teresa Carmody is the author of Requiem (Les Figues Press, 2005), and two chapbooks: Eye Hole Adore (PS Books, 2008), and Your Spiritual Suit of Armor by Katherine Anne (Woodland Editions, 2009). She lives in Los Angeles and is co-director of Les Figues Press. http://www.lesfigues.com/lfp/24/requiem

Saehee Cho holds a BA in Literature/Writing from The University of California, San Diego and an MFA in Writing from Calarts. She has just completed her first collection of short stories tentatively titled Form, Composite. Her work has been featured in Shrapnel and Ex Nihilo. http://www.thesproutandthebean.com

Kate Durbin is a writer & fashion artist. Her full-length collection of poetry, The Ravenous Audience, is available from Akashic Books. http://www.katedurbin.blogspot.com

K. Lorraine Graham is the author of Terminal Humming (Edge Books). Visual work appeared in the 2008 Zaoem International Poetry Exhibition at the Minardschouwburg, Gent, Belgium and the Infusoria visual poetry exhibition in Brussels and Ghent, 2009. http://www.spooksbyme.org

Laida Lertxundi, (Bilbao, Spain) works on film making non-stories with non-actors that play with diegetic space and a particular sound and image syntax to create moments of downtime, of a time between events. Her work has been shown at MoMa, Lacma, Viennale and the New York Film Festival views of the Avant Garde among other places. http://www.laidalertxundi.net

India Radfar is the author of four books of poetry: India Poem (Pir Press), the desire to meet with the beautiful (Tender Buttons Press), Breathe (Shivastan Publications) and most recently, Position & Relation (Station Hill/Barrytown Books) and one chapbook, 12 Poems That Were Never Written (Mind Made Books). She has lived in Los Angeles for the past 6 years. http://www.stationhill.org/authors/profile/230-India_Hixon_Radfar

Mark Wallace is the author and editor of more than fifteen books and chapbooks of poetry, fiction, and essays. Most recently he has published a collection of tales, Walking Dreams, and a book of poems, Felonies of Illusion. http://wallacethinksagain.blogspot.com

↑ Index

241. Adam Fieled

Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Wed 21 Jul 2010

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti

David,

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's entire oeuvre, but the intermingling of spirituality & materialism is fascinating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari as well. Think of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being guttered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed to; our spirits are bound to different levels of materialism. The spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions; realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit," like the Whitmanic. But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't work. What about a new spirituality that holds up a mirror and catches the darkness of our current fetishism? And then takes it someplace else. Many Thanks, Adam [redacted]

_____
From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, July 21, 2010 12:36:33 AM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Adam-many thanks for your sharing the essay--

a thought: historically, the USA is a nation based on spirtiuality & materialism being intimately interrelated ("In God We Trust" on the money--)

also my sense of Marxist readings by poets in the US has been it is not very well thought through, not well enough read in the original writings of both the "Early/Romantic" Marx and the later "Scientific" Marx-- as well as the "Traditions of Modern Leftism" including Situationism-- Marx is an excellent writer--i wish i read German much better!!--many passages of poetry in his works even in the French and English editions i have read-- i have been corresponding with a fellow Russian Sound/Visual/Asemic poet who is a fanatic abt the place of philosphy in the face of the hells of the current world-- like many he has taken the route laid out--there are many--by Gilles Deleuze--

a problem facing language used in the USA today is that of "Torture: Cancer of Democracy" as a great book on France-Algeria 1944-62 by Pierre Vidal-Naquet calls it-- and the Orwellian demands of language used in order to accommodate support for Apartheid --

with the Taoist Chung Tzu ("Look under your feet!")-- and my ancestors here tens of thousands of years in the Americas i wd say we have lost the sense of the ground beneath our feet--of the Earth-- when we begin to lose the Mother-- we see it every day what is happening--from the oil spill to everywhere any town usa--

often the thing in front of one is the lesson to be learned from

thank you again--
onwo/ards!!
david-bc

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

242. David Seaman

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition and the State of ....

Wed 21 Jul 2010

I hope someone is recording this exchange and will make it into a book. This has been a fascinating and anguished discussion of the vocation, just like the plight of visual artists.

My trajectory is a bit like Pierre's, but with less publication: a journal here, an odd anthology there, occasional readings, a growing pile of poems to be put into some retrospective volume (after 50 years of writing poetry). And income from a separate career (teaching French). ï»¿

In some ways, my participation in the Lettriste artist group in France has been the most rewarding: group shows, monthly meetings in Paris (when I could make it) and occasional publication of my works (their imprint, my expense).

The only thing I can offer is the familiar exhortation: just do it. Today I saw a video of downhill skateboarders, who put up their hay bales and let it fly. Poets, do the same. Just let it fly. Some of us will be discovered 50 years after our death; meanwhile, leave some traces.

David

David W. Seaman, Ph.D.
http://personal.georgiasouthern.edu/~dseaman/Welcome.html

Follow my Twitter poetry at dseaman40

YouTube video of my Venice Biennale poem:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JQ5bOuJBN_k

On 20 Jul, 2010,at 03:43 PM, Pierre Joris <[redacted]> wrote:

> So this afternoon I am trying to catch up with the magazines that have accumulated around my table and come across this, by Jennifer Moxley â€" from Fragments of a Broken Poetics â€" in the latest issue of Chicago Review (55:2, spring 2010), which speaks to what we have been discussing in this thread:
>
> "Publication, popularity, and prizes. All three are unreliable measures of value. In fact, any indicator of poetics worth that is immediately perceptible to people who care nothing of poetry is likely to be, in some part, false."
>
> ==========
> "Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
> ==========
> Pierre Joris
> cell phone: [redacted]
> email: [redacted]

> http://pierrejoris.com
> Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
> ==========

↑ Index

243. David Seaman
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Wed 21 Jul 2010

I use the same arguments for doing study abroad during college, not after.

DWSï»¿

David W. Seaman, Ph.D.
http://personal.georgiasouthern.edu/~dseaman/Welcome.html

Follow my Twitter poetry at dseaman40

YouTube video of my Venice Biennale poem:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JQ5bOuJBN_k

On 20 Jul, 2010,at 03:18 PM, Matthew Landis <[redacted]> wrote:

> The one thing I'd add Pierre, when you address the relative costs of an MFA compared to living in NYC for a similar number of years: The difference is it's far easier to get a loan for an MFA from a bank, or some other institution when yr a 20 something with no collateral and little to no credit history (and if the statistics bear out, if you are a 20 something, chances are yr credit history is awful) than it is to walk into a bank and ask for a comparable loan in order to move to NYC and write poetry for two years. Which isn't to say yr wrong, I agree with many of yr points in fact. After all, fortune favors the brave and all that...still, as it was in the 60's and 70's I'm sure, there's a tremendous amount of volatility that comes into play in the economic lives of younger poets now. We're extremely vulnerable, especially if we've bought in to the MFA racket. They prey on the sort of competition/prize fed homunculus which is bred inside of you from Kindergarten on and on yr economic vulnerability. I feel like a lot of kids of my generation (I'm 28) get sold into believing that the MFA route is the only economically viable route to becoming a writer. There's such an emphasis on "professional" or "career" being the suffix to "writer". Hell, I bought into it. I didn't attend an MFA, I got my Masters in Liberal Arts at Penn (i certainly didn't get an interdisciplinary degree to advance my career though..I did it because well...I like being a student, I like learning...) but if there's one thing I've learned in my brief time trying to participate in and grow WITH the scene here in Philadelphia it's that I hope I stay an amateur forever. After all, the Latin route "amo" implies love. If I ever stop loving poetry and it becomes PRIMARILY a career for me (I still think it's a valid and admirable thing to spend yr life doing as a vocation or even a professional vocation), I hope someone has the good sense and compassion to put me out of my misery.

On Tue, Jul 20, 2010 at 9:09 AM, Pierre Joris <[redacted]> wrote:

On Jul 19, 2010, at 11:07 PM, Noah Eli Gordon wrote:
... I think Pierre Joris's comment about them being scam affairs comes from a place of privilege.

Where do you want me to write from? Can't quit my job in a provincial upstate English department to answer you, really. Wouldn't know how to pay the rent. Been there for 18 years now, after 20+ freelancing, doing mimeo-mags, translating for peanuts or less, editing, teaching EFL, bartending, whatever. It is exactly because of that experience that I feel that I can speak to yours & Amish's posts, & that that's coming from a place of experience, not privilege.

Although I respect all of the many years heâ€™s put into poetry, teaching, translation, etc., it's just not that easy, as Amish Trivedi notes, for a young poet to break into the scene.

It was never easy. It was actually even less easy back when as there was no poetry "scene" that offered careers â€” that came about in the eighties & nineties with the expansion of the MFA programs, with AWP, etc. One never thought one could make a living at poetry, one paid the rent with whatever job â€” & it would certainly not be poetry related â€” that came to hand. So the place of privilege would actually be today when there seem to be so much available possibilities â€” cf. the ads throughout every issue of AWP mag.

One can't up & move to NYC to be a poet these days without being somehow independently wealthy.
How much money does it take to get an MFA? Enough to live in NYC for the same amount of years & write poetry & find out if that is what one is good at and wants to spend one's life doing. That involves a risk of course â€”but the kind of risk any artist worth her salt needs to take. Of course if you find out that you are not very good or even any good at all at writing poetry while doing an MFA, you haven't really lost any of your investment, as you will get the degree anyhow and then can still go on & get a job teaching the writing of poetry for the next 40 years.

I just think the energy expended in arguing about this would be better directed into actual action. I mean if you're going to end your email, as

> Richard did, by bringing up inequality and injustice, aren't there other means to more efficaciously address these issues?
> I think it is indeed worth arguing about, Noah, because it is exactly these questions that keep coming up while teaching or talking with young poets. They define in a certain way the political economy of the current situation in the US. (Poets anywhere else, from Paris to Timbuktu, Beijing to Sofia, would laugh out loud at the puny problems encountered by well-fed, well-clothed young Norte Americanos bitching about not getting into some poetry "scene." The real place of privilege is this country.
>
> btw, I admire Letter Machine Editions & your description of the economy of it in this post â€" important in fact to do that, explain it publicly. (In the seventies, in London, Allen Fisher would always have an page in the back of the books he published that would itemize the exact cost of the book & its relation to the number of copies printed and the price asked per copy.)
>
> Pierre
> ==========
> "Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried Benn
> ==========
> Pierre Joris
> cell phone: [redacted]
> email: [redacted]
> http://pierrejoris.com
> Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
> ==========

↑ Index

244. Mark Weiss
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Wed 21 Jul 2010

It always costs somebody something to get an MFA, whether it's a foundation or a university endowment, all funds that can't be used other ways.

And there are other ways to get an education. Here's mine: be a psychiatric social worker for

15 years and raise a child, while reading everything you can get your hands on and communicating with poets you respect who don't expect to get paid to talk to you.

At 03:14 PM 7/21/2010, you wrote:
>Wait, I need to correct something here. Sorry. (Note to self, >always proofread meticulously.)
>
>Corrected version:
>
>I think there is no need for pitting established poets vs.
>unestablished poets, pre-MFA/AWP generation vs. MFA/AWP generation.
>First of all, the latter learn everything they know from the former,
>and the former may learn new things from the latter. Second, in a >slightly larger picture, we are all pretty insignificant and >powerless. That fact might be the underlying reason why there is so >much frustration, and why it seems we're fighting over crumbs on the >table.
>
>But when you look at who celebrities and powerful people are nowadays, >being so deep in the shadow must mean we're doing something right.
>Think about it. On the one hand, we are left alone by the powers that >be. On the other hand, there are resources available to keep writing, >reading, publishing, and sharing work. These resources may be mere >crumbs on the table, but they do. (James Franco, stay away from our >crumbs! Actually, no, throw us a loaf of bread! ;-))
>
>Nana Zabic
>
>P.S. I can write about how we (grad students who founded and run the >journal) raise money for Packingtown Review, and how we spend it, and >how our university affiliation works, if anyone is interested. Long >story short, it takes a lot of time and effort to raise the money; no >silver spoons in sight. As far as other policies, we do use the word
>"submission," we read year-round, we have a system to prevent nepotism
>(I can provide details about that too), we ran one contest in the >past, which didn't charge fees, but offered no cash prize either, we >might have fee+prize contest in the future...
>
>P.P.S. Sometimes it costs almost nothing to get an MFA and a Ph.D. You >get a tuition waiver, a TA-ship, live very modestly, and scramble for >a summer job. There are all kinds of scenarios, though, it's hard to >generalize.

>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are
like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets
left out, the more they seem to contain… One can hear echoes from all the various
ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment
is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure
musical threnody…[it] opens a window, not only
into a mind, but a person, a personality, this
human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

245. Nicole Mauro
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition and the State of ....
Thu 22 Jul 2010

MDEwXzE=

↑ Index

246. steve dalachinsky
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

---

misquoting descartes:

ons should not only be judged by how many books one has read but also by one what has seen - and to me if you are indeed a POET or come close to being THAT THING you should be dealing with your SELF your WORK through that axiom

this is a subject that has irked plagued etc me my life my work for many years no mfa's no addressses to look up a native new yorker surrpounded by the scene and never realizing til the 80's there was a SCENE - and in that scene many little splintered scenses- and it's all about schmoozing and who you know manners or lack of... games etc...
contests mfa's prizes i won a contest once so??? nada 3 years ago a small pen award??? so ??? no publisher (and a good one to back me up) nada in 80's not haing academia behind me - not kissing ass (which i sometines at nearly 65 do a bit better now- tho am still a clumsy oaf _spelling?)
i realized i had to do it myself and i did what i initilly hated and did poorly i read in public tho avoided open mics and horrid venues

this list is still basically full of amcademes and folks who followed a paper trial to get where they are and folks who know what they know thru books classes CLASS etc .. pierre had a plan it worked he followed all the trails - to his place of PRIVELEGE i would take moxley's remark a step further "Publication, popularity, and prizes. All three are unreliable > measures of value. In fact, any indicator of poetics worth that is > immediately perceptible to people who care nothing of poetry is > likely to be, in some part, false." EVEN SOME OF THOSE WHO KNOW OR CLAIM TO KNOW about poetry may find that any indicator of poetics worth that is > immediately perceptible to people who care for poetry is > likely to be, in some part, false." you figure out the wording tho i'm sure you get my point

> So this afternoon I am trying to catch up with the magazines that > have accumulated around my table and come across this, by Jennifer > Moxley — from Fragments of a Broken Poetics — in the latest issue of > Chicago Review (55:2, spring 2010), which speaks to what we have > been discussing in this thread:
>
>
On Mon, 19 Jul 2010 19:43:46 -0700 Hugh Behm-Steinberg
<[redacted]> writes:
> Not to be glib, but the solution to the monologicalness of se > Matthew,
>
> Not to be glib, but the solution to the monologicalness of > self-publishing is to > publish other people. Instead of kvetching about how unfair all > these contests > are, form a collective, share costs, use POD and get those books out > into the > world.

>
> Hugh Behm-Steinberg
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> From: Matthew Landis <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Sent: Mon, July 19, 2010 6:12:12 PM
> Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>
> I've self published a chapbook. But it can be so expensive, > especially if yr > trying to go beyond typical chapbook formatting (for instance with > my DIY > chapbook, the vellum cover with card stock backing, the paper I > bought, the > printer's fee...all of this cost me nearly $200 for 30 COPIES. And > then, I > think I've sold 5. I gave away some, but for the most part people > ask how > they can get one and then when I tell them the 25 (roughly) page > hand > stitched, designed from scratch, all materials bought and paid for
> and all > the production work done by me and a couple friends is say $10 or > even $8
> it's an oh never mind. That's pricey for a book. Self-publishing has > its > merits (obviously, since I've done it a few times), but it IS > difficult to
> up the ante sometimes on an aesthetic level.
>
> I'd also like to echo the comment about people who already have > established > themselves opposing these competitions and reading fees. Where is > this door?

> Call me shallow but I actually CRAVE the opportunity to be > associated with a > press, to engage in a community of fellow authors, to interact with > a nexus
> of people who are involved in the book and in poetry in mediums and > artways > drastically different than my own. It's valuable. Typesetting my own > work, > designing the cover and layout, choosing the paper and materials for
> the > cover, scrounging up public domain visuals, hand stitching…it's an > invaluable experience, but it's also completely monological. And you > become > limited, very often in a technological sense if yr working with > other people > who are self-publishing. You simply don't have the means to produce > work the > way a boutique press, or academic press, or even some small presses > can. Yr > aesthetic choices are STILL LIMITED (although the interaction I've > had with > other self-publishing writers has been invaluable as well). So while > I agree
> with Richard's sentiment and am immeasurably appreciative of Pierre > supporting the sentiment it's worth pointing out that besides the > exploitative nature of the competition and reading fee system, it's > worth
> pointing out the other drawbacks behind another fundamental feature
> of > capitalist production and culture: (1) the "workers" don't own the > means of > production (2) in many cases the "workers" are producing above
> "value" and > beyond what they are paid in return for that production—i.e, we > produce more > than enough value to provide for our own subsistence and yet only > receive
> "wages" enough to subsist—which is really just an unnecessarily > wordy

> definition of the labor theory of value. Anyway, I think both of > those > points should be considered as well.
>
> On Mon, Jul 19, 2010 at 5:22 PM, Gloria Frym <[redacted]>
> wrote:
>
> > double right on, Richard. A trenchant analysis. And thanks, > Pierre, for
> > reinforcing it.
> > Gloria Frym
> >
> >
> > On 7/19/2010 5:01 AM, Pierre Joris wrote:
> >
> >> hear! hear! in all my years of teaching one of the first > recommendations I > >> give young writers is never ever to enter such "small reading > fee"
> >> competitions as they are by their nature scam affairs, no matter > how hip and > >> experimental they claim to be. Basic capitalist exploitation.
> Right on > >> Richard. — Pierre
> >>
> >> On Jul 18, 2010, at 1:53 PM, richard owens wrote:
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>> for years now i've watched poets (many of whom identify > themselves with > >>> radical politics, "progressive" thinking, non-normative > practices) do > >>> nothing more than reproduce the logic of market systems and > commodity
> >>> culture by participating in (or, worse, organizing) poetry > competitions
> >>> engineered expressly for the purpose of roping in cash and > fostering a > >>> competitive rather than cooperative cultural environment (&,
> yes,
> >>> competition and cooperation are in _no_ uncertain way mutually > exclusive).

> >>>
> >>> but fair competition is a good thing, right? like, if only we > could weed > >>> out a few greedy apples then market-based economies (cultural > and otherwise)
> >>> would be beneficial to all, no? and who doesn't want to win?
> >>>
> >>> Rexroth was spot on when he wrote: "If offered a crown | > refuse." Charles
> >>> Ives was spot on when he sd: "Awards are badges of mediocrity."
> >>>
> >>> &&& while we're at it, cld poets given to a responsible sense
> of
> >>> cultural politics PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE stop appealing to the > language of > >>> submission. it's incredibly demoralizing to see so many poets so > willingly
> >>> "submit" to editors that, more often than not, are about as > capable of > >>> recognizing productive work as Paula Abdula or Simon Cowell.&
> it's even > >>> more reprehensible when editors create a situation that expects > others to
> >>> "submit." man, for people so attuned to the complexities and the > ideological > >>> underpinnings of language i find it utterly astounding that so > many > >>> gleefully accept that language of submission and the practice of > >>> competition.
> >>>
> >>> but, then again, it's all abt building a respectable career, > right?& so > >>> long as you grapple w/ gender difference, race, subjectivity or > class
> >>> politics in yr poetry or critical work, well there's no need to > worry abt
> >>> how the practices that feed the poetry industry might also > reproduce the > >>> logic that guarantees inequality and injustice.
> >>>
> >>>

> >>> .....richard owens
> >>> 810 richmond ave
> >>> buffalo NY 14222-1167
> >>>
> >>> damn the caesars, the journal
> >>> damn the caesars, the blog
> >>>
> >>> --- On Sun, 7/18/10, Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
> wrote:
> >>>
> >>> From: Noah Eli Gordon<[redacted]>
> >>> Subject: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
> >>> To: [redacted]
> >>> Date: Sunday, July 18, 2010, 2:08 AM
> >>>
> >>> 2010 Subito Press Book Competition: We will publish two books of > >>> innovative writing, one each of fiction and poetry. Winners > will be flown > >>> to the University of Colorado at Boulder to give a reading in > the spring of > >>> 2011.
> >>>
> or up to > >>> 100 pages fiction (double spaced) along with a $20 reading fee > and an SASE
> >>> for notification of results. Please see www.subitopress.org for > Hellems 101,
> >>> 226 UCB, Boulder, Colorado, 80309-0226. Former students, friends
> and > >>> relatives of UCB faculty are ineligible.
> >>>
> >>> Submissions will be accepted from June 1st to August 14th, 2010 > (postmark
> >>> date).
> >>>
> _____
> >>> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from > your
> >>> inbox.
> >>>
> ign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

> >>>3
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>>
> >>
==========
=
> >> "Lyric poetry has to be exorbitant or not at all." -- Gottfried > Benn
> >>
==========
=
> >> Pierre Joris
> >> cell phone: [redacted]
> >> email: [redacted]
> >> http://pierrejoris.com
> >> Nomadics blog: http://pierrejoris.com/blog/
> >>
==========
=
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> No virus found in this incoming message.
> >> Checked by AVG - www.avg.com
> >> Version: 9.0.839 / Virus Database: 271.1.1/3015 - Release Date:
> 07/18/10
> >> 23:36:00
> >>
> >>
> >>

> >
> guidelines
> >
>
> guidelines &
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

247. steve dalachinsky
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

STOP WITH THIS STUFF "IF WE ARE DEEP IN THE SHADOWS WE MUST BE DOING SOMETHING RIGHT" THAT IS MERE CHRIST COMPLEX POESIE CRAP - IF WE ARE AT ALL WORTHY SOME WILL RISE THO MOSTLY ONLY THE SHT FLOATS - AND IF WE ARE LUCKY ENOUGH TO STEP OUT OF THE SHADOWS OUR WORK CAN BE SEEN BY A LARGER AUDIENCE (THO STILL QUITE SMALL) PERHAPS APPRECIATED AND MAYBE WE CAN HELP EVEN EVER SO SLIGHTLY (THO I AM A SKEPTIC IN SUCH MATTERS) TO MOVE PEOPLE AND MAKE MINOR POSITIVE ALTERATIONS IN THE CRACKS--- i'm sure everyone on this list knows of or knows personally someone of wot=rth who has risen ever so slightly out of the shadows even if only to receive the acknowledgement they deserve by our small rather fragmented community

i also agree with mark on some points and pierre tho not on all points we can't get notoriety etc just on the services we perform tho i can name many wo's work (which is medicre) have climbed up the proverbial ladder on that and then the work gets focusded on after same with teacher/student relationships - wow hot gonna take a dip and cash a check for a poet's job well done

On Wed, 21 Jul 2010 14:10:18 -0500 Nana Zabic <[redacted]>
writes:
> I think there is no need for pitting established poets vs.
> unestablished poets, MFA/AWP generation vs. pre-MFA/AWP generation.
> First of all, the latter learn everything they know from the > former,

> and the former may learn new things from the latter. Second, in a > slightly larger picture, we are all pretty insignificant and > powerless. That fact might be the underlying reason why there is so > much frustration, and why it seems we're fighting over crumbs on
> the
> table.
>
> But when you look at who celebrities and powerful people are
> nowadays,
> being so deep in the shadow must mean we're doing something right.
> Think about it. On the one hand, we are left alone by the powers
> that > be. On the other hand, there are resources available to keep > writing,
> reading, publishing, and sharing work. These resources may be mere > crumbs on the table, but they do. (James Franco, stay away from our > crumbs! Actually, no, throw us a loaf of bread! ;-))
>
> Nana Zabic
>
> P.S. I can write about how we (grad students who founded and run
> the > journal) raise money for Packingtown Review, and how we spend it,
> and
> how our university affiliation works, if anyone is interested. Long > story short, it takes a lot of time and effort to raise the money;
> no > silver spoons in sight. As far as other policies, we do use the > word
> "submission," we read year-round, we have a system to prevent > nepotism
> (I can provide details about that too), we ran one contest in the > past, which didn't charge fees, but offered no cash prize either,
> we > might have fee+prize contest in the future...
>
> P.P.S. Sometimes it costs almost nothing to get an MFA and a Ph.D.
> You > get a tuition waiver, a TA-ship, live very modestly, and scramble
> for > a summer job. There are all kinds of scenarios, though, it's hard

> to > generalize.
>
>
>

↑ Index

248. Les Rencontres Internationales

Re: POETICS Digest - 19 Jul 2010 to 20 Jul 2010 (#2010-168)

Thu 22 Jul 2010

Dear friends,

We are writing you just to remind that our call for entries for the next Rencontres Internationales Paris/Berlin/Madrid is still running, and that its deadline is approaching (July 30). Any individual or organization can submit film, video and multimedia works. The next Rencontres Internationales will take place in Paris from November 25 to December 4 at the Centre Pompidou. It will propose during 10 days a film, video and multimedia programme, and a forum for artists, filmmakers, audiences and professionals. PLEASE FORWARD and spread out this information through your networks, to reach art and film organizations, art communities, production organizations, artists and filmmakers.

Best wishes
Jean-François

#PRESS RELEASE [IN ENGLISH]
http://art-action.org/site/_news/10/call/de.htm#retour [EN FRANÇAIS]
http://art-action.org/site/_news/10/call/fr.htm#retour [AUF DEUTSCH]
http://art-action.org/site/_news/10/call/de.htm#retour [EN ESPAÑOL] http://art-action.org/site/_news/10/call/es.htm#retour

C A L L F O R E N T R I E S

||||||| CALL FOR ENTRIES
||||||| EXTENDED DEADLINE
||||||| LAST DEADLINE: JULY 30, 2010
||||||| http://art-action.org

||||||| RENCONTRES INTERNATIONALES PARIS/BERLIN/MADRID
||||||| FILM / VIDEO / MULTIMEDIA

The call for entries is open until July 30, 2010, for the 'Rencontres Internationales' that will take place in Paris at the Centre Pompidou from Nov. 25 to Dec. 4, 2010, and in Madrid and Berlin in 2011. Those three events will feature an international programming focusing on film, video and multimedia, gathering works of artists and filmmakers recognized on the international scene along with young artists and filmmakers.

ANY INDIVIDUAL OR ORGANIZATION CAN SUBMIT ONE OR SEVERAL WORKS. THE CALL FOR ENTRIES IS OPEN TO FILM, VIDEO AND MULTIMEDIA WORKS, without any restrictions for length or genre. All submissions are free, regardless of geographical origin. Click here >>> http://art-action.org/call

• FILMS AND VIDEOS - any film and video format
* Video / Experimental video
* Fiction, exp. fiction / Short, middle and full length
* Documentary, exp. documentary
* Experimental film
* Animation

• MULTIMEDIA
* Video installation, multimedia installation * Net art * Multimedia concert, multimedia performance

TO ENTER A WORK, CLICK HERE >>> http://art-action.org/call You may choose between two types of registration: • Until July 30, 2010: Entry form to use with regular mail • Until July 30, 2010: 100% online entry form with video upload

PLEASE FORWARD this information to art and film organizations, art networks, production organizations, artists and filmmakers you are in contact with.

The 'Rencontres Internationales' offers more than a simple presentation of the works. It introduces an intercultural forum gathering various guests from all over the world - artists and filmmakers, institutions and emerging organizations - to testify of their reflections and their experiences, but also of artistic and cultural contexts that are often undergoing deep changes. The 'Rencontres Internationales' reflects specificities and convergences of artistic practices between new cinema and contemporary art, explores emerging media art practices and their critical purposes, and makes possible a necessary time when points of view meet and are exchanged. The event aims at presenting works to a broad audience, at creating circulations between different art practices and between different audiences, as well as creating new exchanges between artists, filmmakers and professionals. It seeks to contribute to a reflection on our contemporary culture of image via a compelling program opened to everyone..

PARIS/BERLIN/MADRID
In 2007, the Rencontres Internationales, which initially took place in Paris and

Berlin, opened up to a third city: Madrid. The event constitutes a unique artistic and cultural platform in Europe for artists, professional networks and various audiences. The venues in the three cities are in particular the Centre Pompidou in Paris, the Haus der Kulturen der Welt in Berlin, the Reina Sofia National Museum and the Spanish Cinematheque in Madrid.

N E W S L E T T E R , F A C E B O O K , T W I T T E R

• Follow us on Twitter! MicroBlogging, RSS feed, invitations... http://art-action.org/-twitter.htm • Join us on Facebook! Information invitations, reports... http://art-action.org/-facebook.htm • Subscribe to our newsletter http://art-action.org/-newsletter.htm

↑ Index

249. Francis Raven
Announcement: Architectonic Conjectures
Thu 22 Jul 2010

Hi everyone,

My new book, Architectonic Conjectures, just came out from Silenced Press (http://silencedpress.com/).

The organizing principle behind “Architectonic Conjectures” is that we begin our lives unconsciously in fully formed homes, abstract the architectural structure from the built environment, and finally move out into the ethical world of the city. Therefore, there are three main sections, one about homes ("From the Bedroom to the Living Room and Back Again") one investigating architecture proper ("Architexture"), and a third investing the city ("Urbanities").

You can order it here:
http://silencedpress.com/

thanks so much peace out Francis

--
Francis Raven
2125 14th St. NW #332
Washington DC 20009
[redacted]
http://www.ravensaesthetica.com/

Raven's Occasional Spice Club:
http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/716933849/ravens-occasional-spice-club

↑ Index

250. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

---

especially grateful to Pierre, Lisa & Gloria & others for sharing their comments & insights. when Pierre points back to his London years, with Allen Fisher & others, i think it wld serve _all_ of us well to consider what was happening then, how poets were working and, perhaps most importantly, what issues concerned them. Allen Fisher's long running mag Spanner provides us w/ an _invaluable_ model for cultural production -- as do any other number of mags that circulated from the mimeo era thru the xerox era in the US & Britain.

like Osama sz: ask not what a press can do for you; ask what presses are doing. viz. there ain't no omniscient poetry cardinal or congressman behind a curtain of power, at least not one qualified enough to name "good" or "great" work. & it's not like _anyone_ at this stage has a clear meta-sense of what productive work is or shld be. meaningful work is situation & community specific.

ANY press that shakes young poets down for a reading fee FORECLOSES on its own relevance. they are to be ignored. NO exceptions. NO compromise.

nicole wrote:

"I'm not going to call out specific presses here, but will say, in the case of one, beauty pageants--where all the contestants get to learn/consume who won--have better track records. I entered one recently where the press promised to notify me personally. I found out by googling the results several months later. They did send me an e about my paypal account when I first submitted--wanted to make sure I paid. I will be warning my students never, ever to submit to this press."

identifying po contests with beauty contests is an incredibly salient gesture. & given how this identification lays bare the logic of contests, i wonder if contests are something any instructor (always in a position of power) shld encourage students to "submit" to. shldn't our students expect more from us? shldn't we give them more? can't we provide them with models of cultural production and exchange that circumambulate and contest competitive, disingenuous practices grounded in an ethos of exploitation?

the extent to which poetry is or is not itself political (or efficacious in any meaningful way) is a wholly different conversation; the question here isn't so much about poetry as such but how poets _respond to_ one another -- viz. what poets participate in, are complicit in, what practices they accept without question, what practices they refuse.

 there's a dire need for an ethos that discloses itself through an earnest commitment to the work of others. in other words, young poets shld have access to _healthy_ (viz. non-market-based) models. begin by carving out a discrete space, an autonomous field of cultural production, one that disavows demoralizing or destructive practices. &, perhaps as a healthy alternative to Noah's list of prize recipients, maybe a couple quick examples of poets that have refused conventional practices might help:

-- Kevin Killian & Dodie Bellamy (published their own work for decades; ran workshops independently, without funding; _fully_ supported local poetry communities).

-- Keston Sutherland (edits Barque Press and Quid magazine; is perhaps one of the most interesting poets working in Britain today & most _all_ of his major work is *self published).

-- google "nonsite collective."

-- read Thom Donovan's Wild Horses of Fire blog

-- read Dale Smith's Possum Ego (w/ attention to postings on publics & his appeal to Bey's theory of temporary autonomous zones

-- read Kyle Schlesinger's Cuneiform blog.

-- investigate what young Brits are doing; they move within an altogether different economy of cultural exchange & it's stunningly _less_ demoralizing than our own.

-- look back toward Bob Cobbing's Writers Forum, or the Toronto Research Group or Bill Griffith's Pirate Press.

-- MUST READ: Tom Orange's essay "Poetries of the Long Now" published last year in the Slow Po feature curated by Dale Smith for Big Bridge:

http://www.bigbridge.org/BB14/SloPo-gallery3-A.pdf

hugs ... rich ...

↑ Index

251. richard owens

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Thu 22 Jul 2010

NOTA: tho i have deep reservations re flarf as effective practice (i've addressed this elsewhere), i have the deepest admiration for flarf as a wildly

frustrated, cavalier & incredibly productive riposte to usurous po industry practices. flarf first announces itself _thru_ the figure of poetry contests.Â

Cf. Sullivan on the emergence of flarf:

"A couple of years ago, if you'll remember, on the Women's Poetry list,
a number of people began posting in horror at finding their names, with poems they hadn't written, on poetry.com. I remember going to the site and realizing immediately it was one of those "poetry contest"
scams. A year or so before that I had spoken on the phone with my grandfather, not many days before he died, and he had told me then how proud he was that he had won some sort of poetry contest, and that he had ordered the book, etc. I had always felt bad about that, and once I was on the poetry.com site, I wrote what I thought would be the most offensive poem I could manage, and submitted it to the "contest":

Mm-hmm

Yeah, mm-hmm, it's true

big birds make

big doo! I got fire inside

my "huppa"-chimp(TM)

gonna be agreessive, greasy aw yeah god

wanna DOOT! DOOT!

Pfffffffffffffffffffffffffft! hey!

oooh yeah baby gonna shake & bake then take

AWWWWWL your monee, honee (tee hee)

uggah duggah buggah biggah buggah muggah

hey! hey! you stoopid Mick! get off the paddy field and git

me some chocolate Quik

put a Q-tip in it and stir it up sick

pocka-mocka-chocka-locka-DING DONG

fuck! shit! piss! oh it's so sad that

syndrome what's it called tourette's

make me HAI-EE! shout out loud

Cuz I love thee. Thank you God, for listening!

To my amazement, I received, about three weeks later, a letter from poetry.com,
with my poem fully visible through the cellophane window of the envelope.
The letter, in part, read:

"Gary, over the past year, we have conducted an exhaustive examination of over 1.2 million poems that have been submitted to us. Only a small percentage of individuals whose poems we have reviewed were selected to be part of this distinguished project. "'Mm-hmm' was selected for publication because it sparks the imagination and provides the reader with a fresh, unique perspective on life. We believe it will add to the importance and appeal of this special edition. _Of course, Gary, as always,
you are under no obligation whatsoever to submit any entry fee or subsidy payment, or to make a purchase of any kind_. Your poem will be presented in the most elegant way possible. This coffee-table quality book will feature an 'Arristock leather' cover stamped in gold and a satin bookmarker
â€¦"

And it went on like that. I can't remember if I said anything about this on the Women's Poetry list (I might have unsubscribed by then), but I was on the subpoetics list at the time, and posted something about it, and encouraged others to submit poems to poetry.com. There were a few takers, including Kasey Mohammad and maybe Drew Gardner. Meanwhile, Nada, Mitch Highfill and I began writing more of these awful poems, and submitting them to the site under a variety of different names.

Somewhere in all of this, the word "flarf" materialized-it may have been Mitch's word, or Drew's, or Nada's, I'm not sure. But somehow,
"flarf" began to take on a meaning: "having the quality of flarfiness." We now began to look at other things and to see them as "flarfy." I was never 100% sure what it meant-something akin to "campy," but with somewhat different resonances. More awkward, stumbling, "wrong" than camp. The flarf "voice" in my head was that of my father, a transplanted southerner, who likes to pontificate, and who has a lot of opinions that kind of horrify me."

↑ Index

252. steve dalachinsky

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Thu 22 Jul 2010

---

ha cute flarf an extract in a way of cutup methods

should be noted however most flarfers were / are fairly established already as poets so silly experimenting isn't too risky for them at this point in history - where qlmost anything goes

On Thu, 22 Jul 2010 06:13:42 -0700 richard owens
<[redacted]> writes:
> NOTA: tho i have deep reservations re flarf as effective practice > (i've addressed this elsewhere), i have the deepest admiration for > flarf as a wildly frustrated, cavalier & incredibly productive
> riposte to usurous po industry practices. flarf first announces > itself _thru_ the figure of poetry contests.
>
> Cf. Sullivan on the emergence of flarf:
>

> "A couple of years ago, if you'll remember, on the Women's Poetry > list,
> a number of people began posting in horror at finding their > names, with > poems they hadn't written, on poetry.com. I remember going
> to
> the site
> and realizing immediately it was one of those "poetry > contest"
> scams. A year or so before that I had spoken on the phone
> with
> my grandfather,
> not many days before he died, and he had told me then how > proud
> he was
> that he had won some sort of poetry contest, and that he had
>
> ordered the > book, etc. I had always felt bad about that, and once I was > on
> the poetry.com
> site, I wrote what I thought would be the most offensive > poem I
> could > manage, and submitted it to the "contest":
>
>
>
> Mm-hmm
>
> Yeah, mm-hmm, it's true
>
> big birds make
>
> big doo! I got fire inside
>
> my "huppa"-chimp(TM)
>
> gonna be agreessive, greasy aw yeah god
>
> wanna DOOT! DOOT!
>

> Pfffffffffffffffffffffffffffft! hey!
>
> oooh yeah baby gonna shake & bake then take
>
> AWWWWWL your monee, honee (tee hee)
>
> uggah duggah buggah biggah buggah muggah
>
> hey! hey! you stoopid Mick! get
>
> off the paddy field and git
>
> me some chocolate Quik
>
> put a Q-tip in it and stir it up sick
>
> pocka-mocka-chocka-locka-DING DONG
>
> fuck! shit! piss! oh it's so sad that
>
> syndrome what's it called tourette's
>
> make me HAI-EE! shout out loud
>
> Cuz I love thee. Thank you God, for listening!
>
>
>
> To my amazement, I received, about three weeks later, a > letter
> from poetry.com,
> with my poem fully visible through the cellophane window of
> the > envelope.
> The letter, in part, read:
>
>
>
> "Gary, over the past year, we have conducted an exhaustive
> examination
> of over 1.2 million poems that have been submitted to us.
> Only a > small > percentage of individuals whose poems we have reviewed were > selected to > be part of this distinguished project. "'Mm-hmm' was > selected

> for > publication because it sparks the imagination and provides
> the > reader
> with a fresh, unique perspective on life. We believe it will > add
> to the > importance and appeal of this special edition. _Of course, > Gary,
> as always,
> you are under no obligation whatsoever to submit any entry
> fee
> or subsidy > payment, or to make a purchase of any kind_. Your poem will > be > presented > in the most elegant way possible. This coffee-table quality > book
> will > feature an 'Arristock leather' cover stamped in gold and a > satin
> bookmarker
> …"
>
>
>
> And it went on like that. I can't remember if I said > anything
> about this > on the Women's Poetry list (I might have unsubscribed by > then),
> but I > was on the subpoetics list at the time, and posted something
>
> about it,
> and encouraged others to submit poems to poetry.com. There > were a > few > takers, including Kasey Mohammad and maybe Drew Gardner.

> Meanwhile, Nada,
> Mitch Highfill and I began writing more of these awful
> poems,
> and submitting
> them to the site under a variety of different names.
>
>
>
> Somewhere in all of this, the word "flarf" materialized-it
> may > have been Mitch's word, or Drew's, or Nada's, I'm not sure.
> But
> somehow,
> "flarf" began to take on a meaning: "having the quality > of flarfiness." We now began to look at other things and to > see > them
> as "flarfy." I was never 100% sure what it meant-something > akin > to "campy," but with somewhat different resonances. More > awkward,
> stumbling, "wrong" than camp. The flarf "voice" in > my head was that of my father, a transplanted southerner,
> who > likes to > pontificate, and who has a lot of opinions that kind of > horrify
> me."
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

253. Jeffrey Side
The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “A Year of Ordinary Moments” by Rich Curtis
Thu 22 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œA Year of Ordinary Momentsâ€ by Rich Curtis
Description:
As a performance art piece, Rich Curtis became a licensed notary public in 2009. Since that time he has notarized many things, none of which have been legal documents. Curtis is fascinated by the idea of being legally bound to TRUTH. His personal view that truth is inherently subjective runs counter to the notion of a legal and absolute truth. As part of this project he devised an exercise of witnessing one true thing each day. For the most part Curtis tried to pick the most obscure, least significant event of a given day. He distilled each of these moments into one sentence. The result of this is â€œA Year of Ordinary Momentsâ€, where the body of the text is the result of his daily observations.
Available as a free ebook here:
http://www.lulu.com/content/e-book/a-year-of-ordinary-moments/9123881

↑ Index

254. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Thu 22 Jul 2010

Hi, Adam,

My new book of poetry The Spiritual Life of Replicants, to be published by Talisman Books this fall, deals exactly with the themes you mention.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Jul 21, 2010 at 6:34 PM, Adam Fieled <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti
> David,
>
> I'll admit I haven't read Marx's entire oeuvre, but the intermingling of > spirituality & materialism is fascinating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari > as well.
> Think of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being > guttered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed to;

our
spirits are bound to different levels of materialism.
The spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions;
realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit," like the Whitmanic.
But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't work. What about a new spirituality that holds up a mirror and catches the darkness of our current fetishism?
And then takes it someplace else.
Many Thanks,
Adam [redacted]

From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, July 21, 2010 12:36:33 AM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Adam-many thanks for your sharing the essay--

a thought: historically, the USA is a nation based on spirtiuality & materialism being intimately interrelated ("In God We Trust" on the money--)

also my sense of Marxist readings by poets in the US has been it is not very well thought through, not well enough read in the original writings of both the
"Early/Romantic" Marx and the later "Scientific" Marx--
as well as the "Traditions of Modern Leftism" including Situationism-- Marx is an excellent writer--i wish i read German much better!!--many passages of poetry in his works even in the French and English editions i have read--
i have been corresponding with a fellow Russian Sound/Visual/Asemic poet who is a fanatic abt the place of philosphy in the face of the hells of the current world--
like many he has taken the route laid out--there are many--by Gilles Deleuze-- a problem facing language used in the USA today is that of "Torture:

> Cancer of > Democracy" as a great book on France-Algeria 1944-62 by Pierre Vidal-Naquet calls it-- > and the Orwellian demands of language used in order to accommodate support for > Apartheid --
>
> with the Taoist Chung Tzu ("Look under your feet!")-- and my ancestors here > tens of thousands of years in the Americas i wd say we have lost the sense of > the ground beneath our feet--of the Earth--
> when we begin to lose the Mother--we see it every day what is happening--from > the oil spill to everywhere any town usa--
>
> often the thing in front of one is the lesson to be learned from
>
> thank you again--
> onwo/ards!!
> david-bc
>
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3
>
> &

↑ Index

255. Wanda Phipps

Fwd: A Scorched Page by Liliana Almendarez

Thu 22 Jul 2010

Just passing this along regarding my friend Lily's beautiful book:

My publisher is promoting my book with a great discount of 15%. If you or anyone you know is interested in purchasing a new book of poetry, the promotion code is attached below. Please note, this book is downloadable for e-readers as well. It would mean a lot to me if you'd spread the word to your circle of friends.

Best,

Lily

Liliana Almendarez

[image: Lulu.com]<http://luluagency.bm23.com/public/?q=ulink&fn=Link&ssid=13620&id=iq13i4pwdtnv702npy32ju2i9lz9e&id2=ekxyzp6j7soe86qdp5p4lav3dapaf&subscriber_id=ayzpkejawdfutixvrgdjljrocfsebei&delivery_id=bzxjqiebazpgwyqnjxpaaxyowvvobkj&tid=1.aic.C7kD6w~CiZB.1glwb..C7kD7g~LfyP.C7kD6~E6soe.l.C7kD7~3B1.nRwaqw> Publish<http://luluagency.bm23.com/public/?q=ulink&fn=Link&ssid=13620&id=iq13i4pwdtnv702npy32ju2i9lz9e&id2=ckev87066nr5rit4gy7be2pvcxiq7&subscriber_id=ayzpkejawdfutixvrgdjljrocfsebei&delivery_id=bzxjqiebazpgwyqnjxpaaxyowvvobkj&tid=1.aic.C7kD6w~CiZB.1glwb..C7kD7g~LfyP.C7kD6~E6soe.l.C7kD7~3B1.nRwaqw> |Buy<http://luluagency.bm23.com/public/?q=ulink&fn=Link&ssid=13620&id=iq13i4pwdtnv702npy32ju2i9lz9e&id2=7570s6e8as1ezrst312ct9qismkag&subscriber_id=ayzpkejawdfutixvrgdjljrocfsebei&delivery_id=bzxjqiebazpgwyqnjxpaaxyowvvobkj&tid=1.aic.C7kD6w~CiZB.1glwb..C7kD7g~LfyP.C7kD6~E6soe.l.C7kD7~3B1.nRwaqw> |Sell<http://luluagency.bm23.com/public/?q=ulink&fn=Link&ssid=13620&id=iq13i4pwdtnv702npy32ju2i9lz9e&id2=5w7qw5jr5g16o56jo6gpvkrvcg3j3&subscriber_id=ayzpkejawdfutixvrgdjljrocfsebei&delivery_id=bzxjqiebazpgwyqnjxpaaxyowvvobkj&tid=1.aic.C7kD6w~CiZB.1glwb..C7kD7g~LfyP.C7kD6~E6soe.l.C7kD7~3B1.nRwaqw> |Services<http://luluagency.bm23.com/public/?q=ulink&fn=Link&ssid=13620&id=iq13i4pwdtnv702npy32ju2i9lz9e&id2=2bu0x1l5mh9ocrpva32nlu8a65fd7&subscriber_id=ayzpkejawdfutixvrgdjljrocfsebei&delivery_id=bzxjqiebazpgwyqnjxpaaxyowvvobkj&tid=1.aic.C7kD6w~CiZB.1glwb..C7kD7g~LfyP.C7kD6~E6soe.l.C7kD7~3B1.nRwaqw> [image: 15% off A Scorched Page]<http://www.lulu.com/product/10798320?cid=071810_en_email_BEACHREAD305>[image: Offer ends August 15, 2010] [image: A Scorched Page]<http://www.lulu.com/product/10798320?cid=071810_en_email_BEACHREAD305>

[image: Get it]<http://www.lulu.com/product/10798320?cid=071810_en_email_BEACHREAD305> A Scorched Page Purchase A Scorched Page with 15% off with coupon code BEACHREAD305

Disclaimer: Use coupon code BEACHREAD305 at checkout and receive 15% off A Scorched Page. Maximum savings with this promotion is $10. You can only use the code once per account, and you can't use this coupon in combination with other coupon codes. This great offer ends on August 15, 2010 at 11:59 PM so try not to procrastinate! While very unlikely we do reserve the right to change or revoke this offer at anytime, and of course we cannot offer this coupon where it is against the law to do so.

--
Wanda Phipps

Check out my websites: http://www.mindhoney.com and http://www.myspace.com/wandaphippsband

My latest book of poetry Field of Wanting: Poems of Desire available at: http://www.blazevox.org/bk-wp.htm

And my 1st full-length book of poems Wake-Up Calls: 66 Morning Poems available at:http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/193236031X/ref=rm_item

↑ Index

256. Ed Friedman
Re: Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles
Thu 22 Jul 2010

Dear Jennifer,

I noted, with great interest, your Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles posting. The 8-hour writing experiments of 1972-73, as documented in Unnatural Acts magazine, were terrific, exhausting, wondrous, and horrifying. I love that you¹re going to do a new version of them.

Please feel free to mention me when you credit Unnatural Acts as your inspiration. You credit ³Bernadette Mayer and others.² I don¹t begrudge Bernadette getting star billing; she is one of the great poets and teachers of our time. What could (and perhaps should) be said is that Bernadette and I were coeditors of Unnatural Acts, and that we were _both_ fundamentally involved in the formulation, execution, and publication of those 1972-73 experiments.

Thanks,

Ed Friedman

P.S. I look forward to reading what you and your collaborators come up with.

On 7/22/10 12:02 AM, "POETICS automatic digest system" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Date: Wed, 21 Jul 2010 14:14:07 -0700
> From: Jennifer Karmin <[redacted]>

Subject: Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles

A series of text pro=

NOT CONTENT=0Ahttp://www.notcontent.lesfigues.com=0A=0AA series of text pro= jects curated by Les Figues Press =0Aas part of Los Angeles Contemporary Ex= hibitions=0Ayear-long initiative Public Interest=0A=0AUNNATURAL ACTS=0AJuly= 21-August 11=0ALos Angeles, California=0A=0ATaking its name from the histo= ric collaborative writing marathons led by Bernadette Mayer and others in N= YC during 1972-73, Unnatural Acts will explore the themes of hunger, war, a= nd desire through public acts of collaboration. =0A=0ABeginning with two d= ays of installation and performance by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin, a gr= oup of eleven writers/artists will gather on the third day to write togethe= r over the course of eight hours. In a daily ritual inaugurated on the fou= rth day, the outline of a new person=E2=80=99s body will be traced onto the= bodies of text until the exhibit closes on August 11th.=0A=0AALL EVENTS OP= EN TO THE PUBLIC - 6522 Hollywood Blvd=0Ahttp://www.welcometolace.org/event= s/view/unnatural-acts=0A=0AJuly 21: Amina Cain =0AInstallation (12-5)=0AHun= ger Texts Read in the Dark performance (5-5:30pm) =0A=0AJuly 22: Jennifer K= armin=0AInstallation (12-5)=0A4000 Words 4000 Dead street performance (5-6p=
m) =0A=0AJuly 23: Unnatural Acts=0A8 hours of collaborative writing (12-8pm=
)=0ACollaborators include: Harold Abramowitz, Tisa Bryant, Amina Cain, Tere= sa Carmody, Saehee Cho, Kate Durbin, K. Lorraine Graham, Jennifer Karmin, L= aida Lertxundi, India Radfar, and Mark Wallace.=0A=0AJuly 24: Presentations= =0AArtists=E2=80=99 Talk (2-3pm)=0ACollaborative Reading (4-6pm)=0AReaders = include: Harold Abramowitz, Tisa Bryant, Amina Cain, Teresa Carmody, Kate D= urbin, K. Lorraine Graham, Jennifer Karmin, India Radfar, and Mark Wallace.= =0A=0AAMINA CAIN is the author of the short story collection I Go To Some H= ollow (Les Figues Press, 2009), and a forthcoming chapbook, Tramps Everywhe= re (Insert Press/PARROT SERIES). A recording of her story =E2=80=9CAttache= d to a Self=E2=80=9D was included in the group show A Diamond in the Mud at= Literaturhaus Basel in Switzerland in 2008; other work has appeared in pub= lications such as 3rd Bed, Action Yes, Denver Quarterly, onedit, Sidebrow, = and Wreckage of Reason: Xxperimental Prose by Women Writers. She lives in = Los Angeles.=0Ahttp://aminacain.com=0A=0AJENNIFER KARMIN's text-sound epic,= Aaaaaaaaaaalice, was published by Flim Forum Press in 2010. She curates th= e Red Rover Series and is co-founder of the public art group Anti Gravity S= urprise. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented across the U.S=
., Japan, and Kenya. A proud member of the Dusie Kollektiv, she is the auth= or of the Dusie chapbook Evacuated: Disembodying Katrina. Walking Poem, a c= ollaborative street project, is featured online at How2. In Chicago, Jennif= er teaches creative writing to immigrants at Truman College and works as a = Poet-in-Residence for the public schools. http://aaaaaaaaaaalice.blogspot.=

com=0A=0ACOLLABORATORS:=0A=0AHarold Abramowitz's recent publications includ= e Not Blessed (Les Figues Press) and A House on a Hill {A House on a Hill, = Part One} (Insert Press). Harold writes collaboratively as part of SAM OR S= AMANTHA YAMS and UNFO, and co-edits the short-form literary press eohippus = labs. http://www.eohippuslabs.com=0A=0ATisa Bryant is author of Unexplaine= d Presence (Leon Works, 2007), co-editor, with Ernest Hardy, of the antholo= gy War Diaries (AIDS Project Los Angeles, 2010), co-editor of The Encyclope= dia Project's Encyclopedia Vol. 2 F-K, due out Fall 2010, and has work fort= hcoming in Animal Shelter 2 and Mixed Blood. Her creative process demands = she write longhand, one of her favorite words is 'autochthonous,' and she t= eaches in the MFA Writing Program at CalArts. http://www.encyclopediaproje= ct.org=0A=0ATeresa Carmody is the author of Requiem (Les Figues Press, 2005= ), and two chapbooks: Eye Hole Adore (PS Books, 2008), and Your Spiritual = Suit of Armor by Katherine Anne (Woodland Editions, 2009). She lives in Los= Angeles and is co-director of Les Figues Press. http://www.lesfigues.com/= lfp/24/requiem=0A=0ASaehee Cho holds a BA in Literature/Writing from The Un= iversity of California, San Diego and an MFA in Writing from Calarts. She = has just completed her first collection of short stories tentatively titled= Form, Composite. Her work has been featured in Shrapnel and Ex Nihilo. ht= tp://www.thesproutandthebean.com=0A=0AKate Durbin is a writer & fashion art= ist. Her full-length collection of poetry, The Ravenous Audience, is availa= ble from Akashic Books. http://www.katedurbin.blogspot.com=0A=0AK. Lorrai= ne Graham is the author of Terminal Humming (Edge Books). Visual work appea= red in the 2008 Zaoem International Poetry Exhibition at the Minardschouwbu= rg, Gent, Belgium and the Infusoria visual poetry exhibition in Brussels an= d Ghent, 2009. http://www.spooksbyme.org=0A =0ALaida Lertxundi, (Bilbao, S= pain) works on film making non-stories with non-actors that play with diege= tic space and a particular sound and image syntax to create moments of down= time, of a time between events. Her work has been shown at MoMa, Lacma, Vie= nnale and the New York Film Festival views of the Avant Garde among other p= laces. http://www.laidalertxundi.net=0A=0AIndia Radfar is the author of fo= ur books of poetry: India Poem (Pir Press), the desire to meet with the bea= utiful (Tender Buttons Press), Breathe (Shivastan Publications) and most re= cently, Position & Relation (Station Hill/Barrytown Books) and one chapbook=
, 12 Poems That Were Never Written (Mind Made Books). She has lived in Los = Angeles for the past 6 years. http://www.stationhill.org/authors/profile/2= 30-India_Hixon_Radfar=0A =0AMark Wallace is the author and editor of more t= han fifteen books and chapbooks of poetry, fiction, and essays. Most recent= ly he has published a collection of tales, Walking Dreams, and a book of po= ems, Felonies of Illusion. http://wallacethinksagain.blogspot.com=0A=0A=0A= =0A=0A=0A=0A=0A=0A

↑ Index

257. Vernon Frazer
New Post on Vernon Frazer's BELLICOSE WARBLING Blog
Thu 22 Jul 2010

---

http://bellicosewarbling.blogspot.com/2010/07/new-publications-and-recordings.html

↑ Index

258. Adam Fieled
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Thu 22 Jul 2010

Sounds interesting. Please do p
Murat,

Sounds interesting. Please do post to the list when it is released.
Best,
Adam [redacted]

_____
From: Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Thu, July 22, 2010 11:19:54 AM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Hi, Adam,

My new book of poetry The Spiritual Life of Replicants, to be published by Talisman Books this fall, deals exactly with the themes you mention.

Ciao,

Murat

On Wed, Jul 21, 2010 at 6:34 PM, Adam Fieled <[redacted]> wrote:

> I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti
> David,
>
> I'll admit I haven't read Marx's entire oeuvre, but the intermingling of spirituality & materialism is fascinating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari as well.
> Think of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being guttered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed to; our spirits are bound to different levels of materialism.

The spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions;
realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit," like the Whitmanic.
But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't work. What about a new spirituality that holds up a mirror and catches the darkness of our current fetishism?
And then takes it someplace else.
Many Thanks,
Adam [redacted]

From: David-Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Wed, July 21, 2010 12:36:33 AM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Adam-many thanks for your sharing the essay--

a thought: historically, the USA is a nation based on spirtiuality & materialism being intimately interrelated ("In God We Trust" on the money--)

also my sense of Marxist readings by poets in the US has been it is not very well thought through, not well enough read in the original writings of both the
"Early/Romantic" Marx and the later "Scientific" Marx--
as well as the "Traditions of Modern Leftism" including Situationism-- Marx is an excellent writer--i wish i read German much better!!--many passages of poetry in his works even in the French and English editions i have read--
i have been corresponding with a fellow Russian Sound/Visual/Asemic poet who is a fanatic abt the place of philosphy in the face of the hells of the current world--
like many he has taken the route laid out--there are many--by Gilles Deleuze-- a problem facing language used in the USA today is that of "Torture: Cancer of Democracy" as a great book on France-Algeria 1944-62 by Pierre Vidal-Naquet > calls it-- > and the Orwellian demands of language used in order to accommodate support for > Apartheid --

>
> with the Taoist Chung Tzu ("Look under your feet!")-- and my ancestors here
> tens of thousands of years in the Americas i wd say we have lost the sense of > the ground beneath our feet--of the Earth--
> when we begin to lose the Mother--we see it every day what is happening--from
> the oil spill to everywhere any town usa--
>
> often the thing in front of one is the lesson to be learned from
>
> thank you again--
> onwo/ards!!
> david-bc
>
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_33
>
> &

↑ Index

259. Little Red Leaves

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Thu 22 Jul 2010

Rich--I love you and I tend to trust your assessment here, but seriously:

"ANY press that shakes young poets down for a reading fee FORECLOSES on its own relevance. they are to be ignored. NO exceptions. NO compromise."

Walk it back, man. No Salt? No Kelsey St. (I think they had a fee recently, though this might be wrong)? No Ahsahta? No Omnidawn? No Nightboat? This is a major erasure. I don't think I need to list individual titles here to make that point. Probably missing a few in my list, but my sense is that there are presses out there doing seriously fucking viable work on that model (or in spite of it).

No way for a more complicated take on this? I wonder if we might hear from any of the folks associated w/any of the presses above on their choice to run contests and/or charge reading fees.

CJ Martin

On Thu, Jul 22, 2010 at 8:13 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:

> *NOTA: tho i have deep reservations re flarf as effective practice (i've addressed this elsewhere), i have the deepest admiration for flarf as a wildly frustrated, cavalier & incredibly productive riposte to usurous po industry practices. flarf first announces itself _thru_ the figure of poetry contests.*
>
> Cf. Sullivan on the emergence of flarf:
>
> "A couple of years ago, if you'll remember, on the Women's Poetry list,
> a number of people began posting in horror at finding their names, with > poems they hadn't written, on poetry.com. I remember going to the site > and realizing immediately it was one of those "poetry contest"
> scams. A year or so before that I had spoken on the phone with my grandfather, > not many days before he died, and he had told me then how proud he was
> that he had won some sort of poetry contest, and that he had ordered the > book, etc. I had always felt bad about that, and once I was on the poetry.com
> site, I wrote what I thought would be the most offensive poem I could > manage, and submitted it to the "contest":
>
> Mm-hmm
>
> Yeah, mm-hmm, it's true
>
> big birds make
>
> big doo! I got fire inside
>
> my "huppa"-chimp(TM)

gonna be agreessive, greasy aw yeah god

wanna DOOT! DOOT!

Pfffffffffffffffffffffffffffffft! hey!

oooh yeah baby gonna shake & bake then take

AWWWWWL your monee, honee (tee hee)

uggah duggah buggah biggah buggah muggah

hey! hey! you stoopid Mick! get

off the paddy field and git

me some chocolate Quik

put a Q-tip in it and stir it up sick

pocka-mocka-chocka-locka-DING DONG

fuck! shit! piss! oh it's so sad that

syndrome what's it called tourette's

make me HAI-EE! shout out loud

Cuz I love thee. Thank you God, for listening!

To my amazement, I received, about three weeks later, a letter from poetry.com,
with my poem fully visible through the cellophane window of the envelope.
The letter, in part, read:

"Gary, over the past year, we have conducted an exhaustive examination of over 1.2 million poems that have been submitted to us. Only a small percentage of individuals whose poems we have reviewed were selected to be part of this distinguished project. "'Mm-hmm' was selected

for publication because it sparks the imagination and provides the reader with a fresh, unique perspective on life. We believe it will add to the importance and appeal of this special edition. _Of course, Gary, as always,
you are under no obligation whatsoever to submit any entry fee or subsidy payment, or to make a purchase of any kind_. Your poem will be presented in the most elegant way possible. This coffee-table quality book will feature an 'Arristock leather' cover stamped in gold and a satin bookmarker
..."

And it went on like that. I can't remember if I said anything about this on the Women's Poetry list (I might have unsubscribed by then), but I was on the subpoetics list at the time, and posted something about it, and encouraged others to submit poems to poetry.com. There were a few takers, including Kasey Mohammad and maybe Drew Gardner. Meanwhile, Nada, Mitch Highfill and I began writing more of these awful poems, and submitting them to the site under a variety of different names.

Somewhere in all of this, the word "flarf" materialized-it may have been Mitch's word, or Drew's, or Nada's, I'm not sure. But somehow,
"flarf" began to take on a meaning: "having the quality of flarfiness." We now began to look at other things and to see them as "flarfy." I was never 100% sure what it meant-something akin to "campy," but with somewhat different resonances. More awkward,
stumbling, "wrong" than camp. The flarf "voice" in my head was that of my father, a transplanted southerner, who likes to pontificate, and who has a lot of opinions that kind of horrify > me."

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

260. Nana Zabic
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

Mark,

Ouch. :-) But still, I'm proud of you. I dunno, I think it's also great that there is some funding for artists or wannabe artists, even if it's in a grad school format, whether it's for (wannabe) poets, film makers, visual artists, etc.

Nana Zabic

On Wed, Jul 21, 2010 at 8:01 PM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
> It always costs somebody something to get an MFA, whether it's a foundation > or a university endowment, all funds that can't be used other ways.
>
> And there are other ways to get an education. Here's mine: be a psychiatric > social worker for 15 years and raise a child, while reading everything you > can get your hands on and communicating with poets you respect who don't > expect to get paid to talk to you.
>
> At 03:14 PM 7/21/2010, you wrote:
>>
>> Wait, I need to correct something here. Sorry. (Note to self, >> always proofread meticulously.)
>>
>> Corrected version:
>>
>> I think there is no need for pitting established poets vs.
>> unestablished poets, pre-MFA/AWP generation vs. MFA/AWP generation.
>> First of all, the latter learn everything they know from the former,
>> and the former may learn new things from the latter. Second, in a >> slightly larger picture, we are all pretty insignificant and >> powerless. That fact might be the underlying reason why there is so >> much frustration, and why it seems we're fighting over crumbs on the >> table.

>>
>> But when you look at who celebrities and powerful people are nowadays,
>> being so deep in the shadow must mean we're doing something right.
>> Think about it. On the one hand, we are left alone by the powers that >> be. On the other hand, there are resources available to keep writing, >> reading, publishing, and sharing work. These resources may be mere >> crumbs on the table, but they do. (James Franco, stay away from our >> crumbs! Actually, no, throw us a loaf of bread! ;-))
>>
>> Nana Zabic
>>
>> P.S. I can write about how we (grad students who founded and run the >> journal) raise money for Packingtown Review, and how we spend it, and >> how our university affiliation works, if anyone is interested. Long >> story short, it takes a lot of time and effort to raise the money; no >> silver spoons in sight. As far as other policies, we do use the word
>> "submission," we read year-round, we have a system to prevent nepotism
>> (I can provide details about that too), we ran one contest in the >> past, which didn't charge fees, but offered no cash prize either, we >> might have fee+prize contest in the future...
>>
>> P.P.S. Sometimes it costs almost nothing to get an MFA and a Ph.D. You >> get a tuition waiver, a TA-ship, live very modestly, and scramble for >> a summer job. There are all kinds of scenarios, though, it's hard to >> generalize.
>>
>
>
>
> New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
> $16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm
>
>
> "What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of > particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through > every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss’ > fragments are like Chekhov’s short storiesthe more that gets left out, the > more they seem to contain… One can hear echoes from all the various > ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss.

> His use of the fragment is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure musical > threnody...[it] opens a window, not only into a mind, but a person, a > personality, this human figure at the emotional center of the poem."
>
> M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
> http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml
>
>

↑ Index

261. michael farrell
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

—

↑ Index

262. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

CHRIS:

i'm sorry man, no compromise re contests. none. there really is no room for it -- at least not in my own sense of the landscape. as i say, i think models need to be offered that _completely_ disavow these practices.

not sure if you've followed recent conversations re Salt, but, man -- well, take another look. i know at last half a dozen younger poets that published w/ Chris & will never do so again for what seem incredibly compelling reasons connected to the Salt business model.Â

hugs ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Thu, 7/22/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, July 22, 2010, 5:07 PM

Rich--I love you and I tend to trust your assessment here, but seriously:

"ANY press that shakes young poets down for a reading fee FORECLOSES on its own relevance. they are to be ignored. NO exceptions. NO compromise."

Walk it back, man. No Salt? No Kelsey St. (I think they had a fee recently, though this might be wrong)? No Ahsahta? No Omnidawn? No Nightboat? This is a major erasure. I don't think I need to list individual titles here to make that point. Probably missing a few in my list, but my sense is that there are presses out there doing seriously fucking viable work on that model (or in spite of it).

No way for a more complicated take on this? I wonder if we might hear from any of the folks associated w/any of the presses above on their choice to run contests and/or charge reading fees.

CJ Martin

On Thu, Jul 22, 2010 at 8:13 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:

> *NOTA: tho i have deep reservations re flarf as effective practice (i've addressed this elsewhere), i have the deepest admiration for flarf as a wildly frustrated, cavalier & incredibly productive riposte to usurous po industry practices. flarf first announces itself _thru_ the figure of poetry contests.*
>
> Cf. Sullivan on the emergence of flarf:
>
> "A couple of years ago, if you'll remember, on the Women's Poetry list,
> Â Â Â Â a number of people began posting in horror at finding their names, with > Â Â Â Â poems they hadn't written, on poetry.com. I remember going to the site
> Â Â Â Â and realizing immediately it was one of those "poetry contest"
> Â Â Â Â scams. A year or so before that I had spoken on the phone with my grandfather,
> Â Â Â Â not many days before he died, and he had told me then how proud he was
> Â Â Â Â that he had won some sort of poetry contest, and that he had ordered the > Â Â Â Â book, etc. I had always felt bad about that, and once I was on the poetry.com
> Â Â Â Â site, I wrote what I thought would be the most offensive poem I could
> Â Â Â Â manage, and submitted it to the "contest":

Â Â Â Â Mm-hmm

Â Â Â Â Yeah, mm-hmm, it's true

Â Â Â Â big birds make

Â Â Â Â big doo! I got fire inside

Â Â Â Â my "huppa"-chimp(TM)

Â Â Â Â gonna be agreessive, greasy aw yeah god

Â Â Â Â wanna DOOT! DOOT!

Â Â Â Â Pfffffffffffffffffffffffft! hey!

Â Â Â Â oooh yeah baby gonna shake & bake then take

Â Â Â Â AWWWWWL your monee, honee (tee hee)

Â Â Â Â uggah duggah buggah biggah buggah muggah

Â Â Â Â hey! hey! you stoopid Mick! get

Â Â Â Â off the paddy field and git

Â Â Â Â me some chocolate Quik

Â Â Â Â put a Q-tip in it and stir it up sick

Â Â Â Â pocka-mocka-chocka-locka-DING DONG

Â Â Â Â fuck! shit! piss! oh it's so sad that

Â Â Â Â syndrome what's it called tourette's

Â Â Â Â make me HAI-EE! shout out loud

Â Â Â Â Cuz I love thee. Thank you God, for listening!

Â Â Â Â To my amazement, I received, about three weeks later, a letter from poetry.com,
Â Â Â Â with my poem fully visible through the cellophane window of the envelope.
Â Â Â Â The letter, in part, read:

> Â Â Â Â "Gary, over the past year, we have conducted an exhaustive examination
> Â Â Â Â of over 1.2 million poems that have been submitted to us. Only a Â small
> Â Â Â Â percentage of individuals whose poems we have reviewed were selected to > Â Â Â Â be part of this distinguished project. "'Mm-hmm' was selected for > Â Â Â Â publication because it sparks the imagination and provides the reader
> Â Â Â Â with a fresh, unique perspective on life. We believe it will add Â to the > Â Â Â Â importance and appeal of this special edition. _Of course, Gary, Â as always,
> Â Â Â Â you are under no obligation whatsoever to submit any entry fee or subsidy
> Â Â Â Â payment, or to make a purchase of any kind_. Your poem will be presented > Â Â Â Â in the most elegant way possible. This coffee-table quality book Â will > Â Â Â Â feature an 'Arristock leather' cover stamped in gold and a satin Â bookmarker
> Â Â Â Â â€¦"
>
> Â Â Â Â And it went on like that. I can't remember if I said anything about this
> Â Â Â Â on the Women's Poetry list (I might have unsubscribed by then), but I
> Â Â Â Â was on the subpoetics list at the time, and posted something about it,
> Â Â Â Â and encouraged others to submit poems to poetry.com. There were a Â few
> Â Â Â Â takers, including Kasey Mohammad and maybe Drew Gardner. Meanwhile, Nada,
> Â Â Â Â Mitch Highfill and I began writing more of these awful poems, and submitting
> Â Â Â Â them to the site under a variety of different names.
>
> Â Â Â Â Somewhere in all of this, the word "flarf" materialized-it may > Â Â Â Â have been Mitch's word, or Drew's, or Nada's, I'm not sure. But somehow,
> Â Â Â Â "flarf" began to take on a meaning: "having the quality

> Â Â Â Â of flarfiness." We now began to look at other things and to see them
> Â Â Â Â as "flarfy." I was never 100% sure what it meant-something akin > Â Â Â Â to "campy," but with somewhat different resonances. More awkward,
> Â Â Â Â stumbling, "wrong" than camp. The flarf "voice" in > Â Â Â Â my head was that of my father, a transplanted southerner, who likes to > Â Â Â Â pontificate, and who has a lot of opinions that kind of horrify me."

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

263. Nana Zabic
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

Steve,

I hear you. Major OUCH. But I can't stop, that's what I feel, though I think you totally misunderstood me. I'm gladly as far away from Christ as possible, if we're talking about the guy who claimed to be the son of god and a virgin, and around whom a major religion was created etc.

Nana Zabic

On Thu, Jul 22, 2010 at 3:02 AM, steve dalachinsky <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> STOP WITH THIS STUFF "IF WE ARE DEEP IN THE SHADOWS WE MUST BE DOING > SOMETHING RIGHT" > THAT IS MERE CHRIST COMPLEX POESIE CRAP - IF WE ARE AT ALL WORTHY SOME > WILL RISE THO MOSTLY ONLY
> THE SHT FLOATS - AND IF WE ARE LUCKY ENOUGH TO STEP OUT OF THE SHADOWS
> OUR WORK CAN BE SEEN BY A LARGER AUDIENCE (THO STILL QUITE SMALL) PERHAPS

> APPRECIATED AND MAYBE WE CAN HELP EVEN EVER SO SLIGHTLY (THO I AM A > SKEPTIC IN SUCH MATTERS) TO MOVE PEOPLE AND MAKE MINOR POSITIVE > ALTERATIONS IN THE CRACKS--- i'm sure everyone on this list knows of or > knows personally someone of wot=rth who has risen ever so slightly out of > the shadows even if only to receive the acknowledgement they deserve by > our small rather fragmented community
>
> i also agree with mark on some points and pierre tho not on all points > we can't get notoriety etc just on the services we perform tho i can > name many wo's work (which is medicre) > have climbed up the proverbial ladder on that and then the work gets > focusded on after > same with teacher/student relationships - wow hot gonna take a dip > and cash a check for a poet's job well done
>
>
> On Wed, 21 Jul 2010 14:10:18 -0500 Nana Zabic <[redacted]>
> writes:
>> I think there is no need for pitting established poets vs.
>> unestablished poets, MFA/AWP generation vs. pre-MFA/AWP generation.
>> First of all, the latter learn everything they know from the >> former,
>> and the former may learn new things from the latter. Second, in a >> slightly larger picture, we are all pretty insignificant and >> powerless. That fact might be the underlying reason why there is so >> much frustration, and why it seems we're fighting over crumbs on
>> the
>> table.
>>
>> But when you look at who celebrities and powerful people are
>> nowadays,
>> being so deep in the shadow must mean we're doing something right.
>> Think about it. On the one hand, we are left alone by the powers
>> that
>> be. On the other hand, there are resources available to keep >> writing,
>> reading, publishing, and sharing work. These resources may be mere >> crumbs on the table, but they do. (James Franco, stay away from our >> crumbs! Actually, no, throw us a loaf of bread! ;-))
>>

>> Nana Zabic
>>
>> P.S. I can write about how we (grad students who founded and run
>> the >> journal) raise money for Packingtown Review, and how we spend it,
>> and
>> how our university affiliation works, if anyone is interested. Long >> story short, it takes a lot of time and effort to raise the money;
>> no >> silver spoons in sight. As far as other policies, we do use the >> word
>> "submission," we read year-round, we have a system to prevent
>> nepotism
>> (I can provide details about that too), we ran one contest in the >> past, which didn't charge fees, but offered no cash prize either,
>> we >> might have fee+prize contest in the future...
>>
>> P.P.S. Sometimes it costs almost nothing to get an MFA and a Ph.D.
>> You
>> get a tuition waiver, a TA-ship, live very modestly, and scramble
>> for >> a summer job. There are all kinds of scenarios, though, it's hard
>> to >> generalize.
>>
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

264. Mary Kasimor
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

I think that reading and reading poetry is very important in learning how to write poetry. I also think that learning how to write poetry by simply writing it is the way to becoming a poet.

I did not have the chance to get an MFA for several different reasons. Now I am glad that I didn't have that chance. I do have an MA in English, and I teach freshman composition. I would not want to teach creative writing; that I know.

I feel very ambivalent about the poetry community, maybe because I am physically removed from it.I don't hang out with other poets. I do think that I will continue writing, even though I often have moments when I wonder why I put so much of my energy into my writing. I also have these moments of clarity when I wonder why I write. I suppose that I continue to write poetry because find it an interesting way to understand myself.I also understand that sometimes I need affirmation--I need to get published so that I feel that my poetry has some merit--but maybe it really doesn't. I don't know.

The bottom line is that poetry can be a profound way of expression, and we do play lots of silly games that have nothing to do with the real importance of poetry.

--- On Wed, 7/21/10, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Wednesday, July 21, 2010, 8:01 PM

It always costs somebody something to get an MFA, whether it's a foundation or a university endowment, all funds that can't be used other ways.

And there are other ways to get an education.
Here's mine: be a psychiatric social worker for 15 years and raise a child, while reading
everything you can get your hands on and communicating with poets you respect who don't expect to get paid to talk to you.

At 03:14 PM 7/21/2010, you wrote:
>Wait, I need to correct something here. Sorry. (Note to self, >always proofread meticulously.)
>
>Corrected version:
>
>I think there is no need for pitting established poets vs.
>unestablished poets, pre-MFA/AWP generation vs. MFA/AWP generation.
>First of all, the latter learn everything they know from the former,
>and the former may learn new things from the latter. Second, in a >slightly larger picture, we are all pretty insignificant and >powerless. That fact might be the underlying reason why there is so >much frustration, and why it seems we're fighting over crumbs on the >table.
>

>But when you look at who celebrities and powerful people are nowadays,
>being so deep in the shadow must mean we're doing something right.
>Think about it. On the one hand, we are left alone by the powers that >be. On the other hand, there are resources available to keep writing, >reading, publishing, and sharing work. These resources may be mere >crumbs on the table, but they do. (James Franco, stay away from our >crumbs! Actually, no, throw us a loaf of bread! ;-))
>
>Nana Zabic
>
>P.S. I can write about how we (grad students who founded and run the >journal) raise money for Packingtown Review, and how we spend it, and >how our university affiliation works, if anyone is interested. Long >story short, it takes a lot of time and effort to raise the money; no >silver spoons in sight. As far as other policies, we do use the word
>"submission," we read year-round, we have a system to prevent nepotism
>(I can provide details about that too), we ran one contest in the >past, which didn't charge fees, but offered no cash prize either, we >might have fee+prize contest in the future...
>
>P.P.S. Sometimes it costs almost nothing to get an MFA and a Ph.D. You >get a tuition waiver, a TA-ship, live very modestly, and scramble for >a summer job. There are all kinds of scenarios, though, it's hard to >generalize.
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16.Â Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weissâ€™ fragments are like Chekhovâ€™s short storiesÂthe more that gets left out, the more they seem to containâ€¦ One can hear echoes from all the various
ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment
is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure musical threnodyâ€¦[it] opens a window, not only
into a mind, but a person, a personality, this
human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

265. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

CHRIS:

the last missive i launched went to the list but was intended as a private msg.

but to consider yr comment in a more public -- & more measured -- way, Chris, i'd say if we are to insist on the relevance of presses that participate in questionable practices, if we are not to ignore them, then we need to put pressure on them to develop different models for generating dough, locating new (younger) poets, etc -- viz. call these presses out on requests for reading fees, critique the deep logic that makes contests appear inviting & desirable. man, contests really are a filthy way to generate cash. both you & i, along with any number of others on this list, well recognize how far a nice chunk of change can go re making bks, but there are ways of generating that kind of cash without creating an environment that motivates young poets to produce work _toward_ an idea of winning (which always presupposes losers), or _toward_ an idea of success, or _toward_ an idea of "breaking onto" a Free-Mason-like poetry scene as tho it were Hollywood.Â Â Â Â

man, i have the deepest respect for yr work -- LRL, Dos Press, etc -- & this is work that, i think like my own, doesn't participate in the practices i'm taking issue with here. & i see yr point re bracketing out important writing by good presses that happen also to organize contests, etc. but i remain convinced that the contest model (and, with it, the language of submission) cannot be modified, reformulated or recuperated -- it has to be tossed.Â

hugs ... rich ...Â Â

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Thu, 7/22/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

To: [redacted]
Date: Thursday, July 22, 2010, 5:07 PM

Rich--I love you and I tend to trust your assessment here, but seriously:

"ANY press that shakes young poets down for a reading fee FORECLOSES on its own relevance. they are to be ignored. NO exceptions. NO compromise."

Walk it back, man. No Salt? No Kelsey St. (I think they had a fee recently, though this might be wrong)? No Ahsahta? No Omnidawn? No Nightboat? This is a major erasure. I don't think I need to list individual titles here to make that point. Probably missing a few in my list, but my sense is that there are presses out there doing seriously fucking viable work on that model (or in spite of it).

No way for a more complicated take on this? I wonder if we might hear from any of the folks associated w/any of the presses above on their choice to run contests and/or charge reading fees.

CJ Martin

On Thu, Jul 22, 2010 at 8:13 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:

> *NOTA: tho i have deep reservations re flarf as effective practice (i've addressed this elsewhere), i have the deepest admiration for flarf as a wildly frustrated, cavalier & incredibly productive riposte to usurous po industry practices. flarf first announces itself _thru_ the figure of poetry contests.*
>
> Cf. Sullivan on the emergence of flarf:
>
> "A couple of years ago, if you'll remember, on the Women's Poetry list,
> Â Â Â Â a number of people began posting in horror at finding their names, with > Â Â Â Â poems they hadn't written, on poetry.com. I remember going to the site
> Â Â Â Â and realizing immediately it was one of those "poetry contest"
> Â Â Â Â scams. A year or so before that I had spoken on the phone with my grandfather,
> Â Â Â Â not many days before he died, and he had told me then how proud he was
> Â Â Â Â that he had won some sort of poetry contest, and that he had ordered the > Â Â Â Â book, etc. I had always felt bad about that, and once I was on the poetry.com
> Â Â Â Â site, I wrote what I thought would be the most offensive poem I could
> Â Â Â Â manage, and submitted it to the "contest":

Â Â Â Â Mm-hmm

Â Â Â Â Yeah, mm-hmm, it's true

Â Â Â Â big birds make

Â Â Â Â big doo! I got fire inside

Â Â Â Â my "huppa"-chimp(TM)

Â Â Â Â gonna be agreessive, greasy aw yeah god

Â Â Â Â wanna DOOT! DOOT!

Â Â Â Â Pfffffffffffffffffffffffft! hey!

Â Â Â Â oooh yeah baby gonna shake & bake then take

Â Â Â Â AWWWWWL your monee, honee (tee hee)

Â Â Â Â uggah duggah buggah biggah buggah muggah

Â Â Â Â hey! hey! you stoopid Mick! get

Â Â Â Â off the paddy field and git

Â Â Â Â me some chocolate Quik

Â Â Â Â put a Q-tip in it and stir it up sick

Â Â Â Â pocka-mocka-chocka-locka-DING DONG

Â Â Â Â fuck! shit! piss! oh it's so sad that

Â Â Â Â syndrome what's it called tourette's

Â Â Â Â make me HAI-EE! shout out loud

Â Â Â Â Cuz I love thee. Thank you God, for listening!

Â Â Â Â To my amazement, I received, about three weeks later, a letter from poetry.com,
Â Â Â Â with my poem fully visible through the cellophane window of the envelope.
Â Â Â Â The letter, in part, read:

> Â Â Â Â "Gary, over the past year, we have conducted an exhaustive examination
> Â Â Â Â of over 1.2 million poems that have been submitted to us. Only a Â small
> Â Â Â Â percentage of individuals whose poems we have reviewed were selected to > Â Â Â Â be part of this distinguished project. "'Mm-hmm' was selected for
> Â Â Â Â publication because it sparks the imagination and provides the reader
> Â Â Â Â with a fresh, unique perspective on life. We believe it will add Â to the > Â Â Â Â importance and appeal of this special edition. _Of course, Gary, Â as always,
> Â Â Â Â you are under no obligation whatsoever to submit any entry fee or subsidy
> Â Â Â Â payment, or to make a purchase of any kind_. Your poem will be presented > Â Â Â Â in the most elegant way possible. This coffee-table quality book Â will > Â Â Â Â feature an 'Arristock leather' cover stamped in gold and a satin Â bookmarker
> Â Â Â Â â€¦"
>
> Â Â Â Â And it went on like that. I can't remember if I said anything about this
> Â Â Â Â on the Women's Poetry list (I might have unsubscribed by then), but I
> Â Â Â Â was on the subpoetics list at the time, and posted something about it,
> Â Â Â Â and encouraged others to submit poems to poetry.com. There were a Â few
> Â Â Â Â takers, including Kasey Mohammad and maybe Drew Gardner. Meanwhile, Nada,
> Â Â Â Â Mitch Highfill and I began writing more of these awful poems, and submitting
> Â Â Â Â them to the site under a variety of different names.
>
> Â Â Â Â Somewhere in all of this, the word "flarf" materialized-it may > Â Â Â Â have been Mitch's word, or Drew's, or Nada's, I'm not sure. But somehow,
> Â Â Â Â "flarf" began to take on a meaning: "having the quality

> Â Â Â Â of flarfiness." We now began to look at other things and to see them
> Â Â Â Â as "flarfy." I was never 100% sure what it meant-something akin > Â Â Â Â to "campy," but with somewhat different resonances. More awkward,
> Â Â Â Â stumbling, "wrong" than camp. The flarf "voice" in > Â Â Â Â my head was that of my father, a transplanted southerner, who likes to > Â Â Â Â pontificate, and who has a lot of opinions that kind of horrify me."

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

266. Catherine Daly
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Thu 22 Jul 2010

To try another tactic: why write if not to do everything possible to increase one's knowledge, to make shiny poems, and to communicate? Isn't education a catalyst as much as experience?

How else to seek a wider audience through publication than to find publishers with similar opinions about poetry? How better to engage with the community of writers than to curate reading series, publish others, teach, review, be an example in some way to younger writers? [I just saw the Telephone Press chap by Patti Smith at the Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame!]

What are these opinions about poetry? How are they changing 1) because it is easier and cheaper to reach an audience, 2) because we all, to a certain extent, survived the poetry wars more recently than we received our inheritance from the Beats, the art-poets, the langpos?

Is it so stupid to want to teach? To be a good teacher AND critic AND writer? To not spend an extended period in "post-college living at its finest"? I like what Lisa said about working from within the academic community, where somehow peer review has morphed into winning prizes, but only in the arts, because spirituality knows, there's no peer review in the arts : 0 Aren't the more experimental poets who teach pretty rockin'? Teaching's pretty easy and fun compared to making widgets for boneheads. Plus, the job involves mentoring other writers, which is hard to do in a peer-to-peer community model of poetry.

Oh, and we were all teaching about poetry.com, including entering bad poems and discussing what's "bad" to show about it, looong before flarf. Out here in the boonies.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

267. Mark Melnicove
Bern Porter film
Thu 22 Jul 2010

JOY GLOWS WHERE CONFUSION WAS: a film about, with, and without Bern Porter by Mark Melnicove can now be seen in its entirety at:

bernporter.com

↑ Index

268. Jennifer Karmin
Re: Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles
Fri 23 Jul 2010

---

hi ed...good to hear from you.Â thank you so much for the clarification and historical notes.Â all is very helpful for our project.

amina and i are definitely interested in hearing more about your experiences with unnatural acts.Â we believe it to be a landmark example of the power of collaboration.Â please be in touch.

hey poetics list friends -- any other unnatural acts collaborators out there?Â anyone else have more info?Â we'd love to hear more.

onwards,
jen karmin

-- On Thu, 7/22/10, Ed Friedman <[redacted]> wrote:

Subject: Re: Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles
Date: Thursday, July 22, 2010, 12:05 PM

> Dear Jennifer,

> I noted, with great interest, your Unnatural Acts in Los Angeles posting. The 8-hour writing experiments of 1972-73, as documented in Unnatural Acts magazine, were terrific, exhausting, wondrous, and horrifying. I love that youâ€™re going to do a new version of them.
>
> Please feel free to mention me when you credit Unnatural Acts as your inspiration. You credit â€œBernadette Mayer and others.â€ I donâ€™t begrudge Bernadette getting star billing; she is one of the great poets and teachers of our time. What could (and perhaps should) be said is that Bernadette and I were coeditors of Unnatural Acts, and that we were _both_ fundamentally involved in the formulation, execution, and publication of those 1972-73 experiments.

>>Thanks,
Ed Friedman

> P.S. I look forward to reading what you and your collaborators come up with.

↑ Index

269. steve dalachinsky
bill dixon memorial
Fri 23 Jul 2010

---

please spread to your lists that memorial for the great composer /trumpeter bill dixon will be july 31 at st marks church 5 pm

On Fri, 23 Jul 2010 10:15:40 -0400 Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
writes:
> The difference, Catherine, is that a viable and > useful path for a few has become a set of expectations for the > many.
>
> And by the way, re: "the job involves mentoring > other writers, which is hard to do in a > peer-to-peer community model of poetry"--it's in > fact not so hard, was the norm in most places for > millennia. Though "peer-to-peer" may not be the > point. It may in any event have become harder now > that people expect to get paid for it.
>
> Best,
>
> Mark
>
> At 07:34 PM 7/22/2010, you wrote:
> >To try another tactic: why write if not to do everything possible

> to > >increase one's knowledge, to make shiny poems, and to communicate?
> Isn't
> >education a catalyst as much as experience?
> >
> >How else to seek a wider audience through publication than to find > >publishers with similar opinions about poetry? How better to > engage with > >the community of writers than to curate reading series, publish > others, > >teach, review, be an example in some way to younger writers? [I > just saw > >the Telephone Press chap by Patti Smith at the Rock 'n Roll Hall of > Fame!]
> >
> >What are these opinions about poetry? How are they changing 1) > because it > >is easier and cheaper to reach an audience, 2) because we all, to a > certain > >extent, survived the poetry wars more recently than we received
> our > >inheritance from the Beats, the art-poets, the langpos?
> >
> >Is it so stupid to want to teach? To be a good teacher AND critic > >writer? To not spend an extended period in "post-college living at > its > >finest"? I like what Lisa said about working from within the > academic > >community, where somehow peer review has morphed into winning > prizes, but > >only in the arts, because spirituality knows, there's no peer > review in the > >arts : 0 Aren't the more experimental poets who teach pretty > rockin'?
> AND
> Teaching's pretty easy and fun compared to making widgets for > boneheads.
> > Plus, the job involves mentoring other writers, which is hard to > do in a > >peer-to-peer community model of poetry.
> >
> >Oh, and we were all teaching about poetry.com, including entering > bad poems

> >and discussing what's "bad" to show about it, looong before flarf.
> Out here
> >in the boonies.
> >
> >--
> >All best,
> >Catherine Daly
> >[redacted]
> >
>
>
>
> New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
> $16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm
>
>
> "What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a > lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the > poet alive in every sense of the word, and > through every one of his senses. Instead of > missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are
> like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets
> left out, the more they seem to contain… One can > hear echoes from all the various > ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its > core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment
> is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure
> musical threnody…[it] opens a window, not only
> into a mind, but a person, a personality, this
> human figure at the emotional center of the poem."
>
> M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
> http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml
>
>
>

↑ Index

270. David Chirot

2 Poetics/spidertanglers-in a -long excellent review in current Rain Taxi

Fri 23 Jul 2010

The current issue of Rain Taxi has a long two full page review of a book to which two Poetics/spidertanglers contributed

--especially Maria Damon, co-editor of what is in many ways the first anthology of its kind (in the usa--at least--if not anywhere--))-- Poetry and Cultural Studies--A Reader edited by Maria and Ira Livingston
Urbana &Chicago: University of Illinois Press, 2009 (appeared end of that year--)
Maria contributed a wonderful essay--"Tell Them about Us: Some Poems from Southie (South Boston, of course!!--)
Maria invited me to contribute a Visual Poetry piece she had chosen for the cover--
"Be Poem/Poem Being"-- for which i deeply thank her and also the great work on the overall cover design by Cope Copenhavera great pleasure and honor to work with Maria and Cope both and my deepest thanks
--david-bc

↑ Index

271. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Pesticide Drift” by F. A. Nettelbeck.

Fri 23 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œPesticide Driftâ€ by F. A. Nettelbeck.

Description:

A thirty-six-page sequence from F. A. Nettelbeck's blog, â€œSewing Memoryâ€, written between 2007 and 2010, â€œPesticide Driftâ€ presents Nettelbeck as both perpetrator and victim in the death of poetry and scandalizing myth.

Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/content/e-book/pesticide-drift/9128215

↑ Index

272. tyrone williams
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Fri 23 Jul 2010

Rich, Chris,

Like others I have found this conversation rather interesting but like a few here, Chris especially, I'd like YOU to offer what you might see as a politically responsible publishing model. To be blunt--what is the source of funding for damn the caesars? I know lots of people who use their own funds and state grants to support their presses but those models--siphoning capital--presuppose participation in a labor market and government subsidy model that has its own, shall we say, political problems...I concur completely with the winners/losers model re contests though I can't imagine many participants think of it that way (I won! I lost!). Don't they, as I do, see it simply as a way to support small presses and, as one commentator suggested, don't come way with a "loser" noose hung around their necks (or minds)? And, here's my real point, if they Do participate in the psychological game of winners and losers, not participating in contests will in no way affect that mindset. I understand your critique of the business model that facilitates such thinking but you seem to be critiquing the end result of such thinking--what about such thinking per se?

Tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: richard owens <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jul 22, 2010 6:35 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>
>CHRIS:
>
>the last missive i launched went to the list but was intended as a private msg.
>
>but to consider yr comment in a more public -- & more measured -- way, Chris, i'd say if we are to insist on the relevance of presses that participate in questionable practices, if we are not to ignore them, then we need to put pressure on them to develop different models for generating dough, locating new (younger) poets, etc -- viz. call these presses out on requests for reading fees, critique the deep logic that makes contests appear inviting & desirable. man, contests really are a filthy way to generate cash. both you & i, along with any number of others on this list, well recognize how far a nice chunk of change can go re making bks, but there are ways of generating that kind of cash without creating an environment that motivates young poets to produce work toward an idea of winning (which always presupposes losers), or _toward_ an idea of success, or _toward_ an idea of "breaking onto" a Free-Mason-like poetry scene as tho it were Hollywood.Â Â

> Â Â
>
>man, i have the deepest respect for yr work -- LRL, Dos Press, etc -- & this is work that, i think like my own, doesn't participate in the practices i'm taking issue with here. & i see yr point re bracketing out important writing by good presses that happen also to organize contests, etc. but i remain convinced that the contest model (and, with it, the language of submission) cannot be modified, reformulated or recuperated -- it has to be tossed.Â
>
>hugs ... rich ...Â Â
>
>.....richard owens
>810 richmond ave
>buffalo NY 14222-1167
>
>damn the caesars, the journal
>damn the caesars, the blog
>
>--- On Thu, 7/22/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>To: [redacted]
>Date: Thursday, July 22, 2010, 5:07 PM
>
>Rich--I love you and I tend to trust your assessment here, but seriously:
>
>"ANY press that shakes young poets down for a reading fee FORECLOSES on its >own relevance. they are to be ignored. NO exceptions. NO compromise."
>
>Walk it back, man. No Salt? No Kelsey St. (I think they had a fee recently, >though this might be wrong)? No Ahsahta? No Omnidawn? No Nightboat? This is >a major erasure. I don't think I need to list individual titles here to make >that point. Probably missing a few in my list, but my sense is that there >are presses out there doing seriously fucking viable work on that model (or >in spite of it).
>

>No way for a more complicated take on this? I wonder if we might hear from >any of the folks associated w/any of the presses above on their choice to >run contests and/or charge reading fees.
>
>CJ Martin
>
>On Thu, Jul 22, 2010 at 8:13 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:
>
>> NOTA: tho i have deep reservations re flarf as effective practice (i've >> addressed this elsewhere), i have the deepest admiration for flarf as a >> wildly frustrated, cavalier & incredibly productive riposte to usurous po >> industry practices. flarf first announces itself _thru_ the figure of poetry >> contests.
>>
>> Cf. Sullivan on the emergence of flarf:
>>
>> "A couple of years ago, if you'll remember, on the Women's Poetry list, >>Â Â Â Â a number of people began posting in horror at finding their >> names, with >>Â Â Â Â poems they hadn't written, on poetry.com. I remember going to >> the site
>>Â Â Â Â and realizing immediately it was one of those "poetry contest"
>>Â Â Â Â scams. A year or so before that I had spoken on the phone with
>> my grandfather,
>>Â Â Â Â not many days before he died, and he had told me then how proud
>> he was >>Â Â Â Â that he had won some sort of poetry contest, and that he had >> ordered the >>Â Â Â Â book, etc. I had always felt bad about that, and once I was on >> the poetry.com
>>Â Â Â Â site, I wrote what I thought would be the most offensive poem I
>> could
>>Â Â Â Â manage, and submitted it to the "contest":
>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Mm-hmm
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Yeah, mm-hmm, it's true
>>
>>Â Â Â Â big birds make
>>

>>Â Â Â Â big doo! I got fire inside
>>
>>Â Â Â Â my "huppa"-chimp(TM)
>>
>>Â Â Â Â gonna be agreessive, greasy aw yeah god
>>
>>Â Â Â Â wanna DOOT! DOOT!
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Pfffffffffffffffffffffffft! hey!
>>
>>Â Â Â Â oooh yeah baby gonna shake & bake then take
>>
>>Â Â Â Â AWWWWWL your monee, honee (tee hee)
>>
>>Â Â Â Â uggah duggah buggah biggah buggah muggah
>>
>>Â Â Â Â hey! hey! you stoopid Mick! get
>>
>>Â Â Â Â off the paddy field and git
>>
>>Â Â Â Â me some chocolate Quik
>>
>>Â Â Â Â put a Q-tip in it and stir it up sick
>>
>>Â Â Â Â pocka-mocka-chocka-locka-DING DONG
>>
>>Â Â Â Â fuck! shit! piss! oh it's so sad that
>>
>>Â Â Â Â syndrome what's it called tourette's
>>
>>Â Â Â Â make me HAI-EE! shout out loud
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Cuz I love thee. Thank you God, for listening!
>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â To my amazement, I received, about three weeks later, a letter
>> from poetry.com,
>>Â Â Â Â with my poem fully visible through the cellophane window of the >> envelope.
>>Â Â Â Â The letter, in part, read:
>>

>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â "Gary, over the past year, we have conducted an exhaustive
>> examination
>>Â Â Â Â of over 1.2 million poems that have been submitted to us. Only a >>Â small
>>Â Â Â Â percentage of individuals whose poems we have reviewed were >> selected to >>Â Â Â Â be part of this distinguished project. "'Mm-hmm' was selected
>> for >>Â Â Â Â publication because it sparks the imagination and provides the >> reader
>>Â Â Â Â with a fresh, unique perspective on life. We believe it will add
>>Â to the
>>Â Â Â Â importance and appeal of this special edition. _Of course, Gary,
>>Â as always,
>>Â Â Â Â you are under no obligation whatsoever to submit any entry fee
>> or subsidy
>>Â Â Â Â payment, or to make a purchase of any kind_. Your poem will be >> presented
>>Â Â Â Â in the most elegant way possible. This coffee-table quality book
>>Â will
>>Â Â Â Â feature an 'Arristock leather' cover stamped in gold and a satin
>>Â bookmarker
>>Â Â Â Â â€¦"
>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â And it went on like that. I can't remember if I said anything >> about this
>>Â Â Â Â on the Women's Poetry list (I might have unsubscribed by then),
>> but I
>>Â Â Â Â was on the subpoetics list at the time, and posted something >> about it,
>>Â Â Â Â and encouraged others to submit poems to poetry.com. There were a >>Â few
>>Â Â Â Â takers, including Kasey Mohammad and maybe Drew Gardner.
>> Meanwhile, Nada,
>>Â Â Â Â Mitch Highfill and I began writing more of these awful poems,
>> and submitting
>>Â Â Â Â them to the site under a variety of different names.

>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Somewhere in all of this, the word "flarf" materialized-it may >>Â Â Â Â have been Mitch's word, or Drew's, or Nada's, I'm not sure. But >> somehow,
>>Â Â Â Â "flarf" began to take on a meaning: "having the quality >>Â Â Â Â of flarfiness." We now began to look at other things and to see >> them
>>Â Â Â Â as "flarfy." I was never 100% sure what it meant-something akin >>Â Â Â Â to "campy," but with somewhat different resonances. More >> awkward,
>>Â Â Â Â stumbling, "wrong" than camp. The flarf "voice" in >>Â Â Â Â my head was that of my father, a transplanted southerner, who >> likes to >>Â Â Â Â pontificate, and who has a lot of opinions that kind of horrify >> me."
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>
>
>--
>www.littleredleaves.com
>www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com
>
>
>
>
>
>

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

273. Adam Katz
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Fri 23 Jul 2010

In regard to Fieled's posting, below: In Joyce's letters to Grant Richards, when he's trying to get Dubliners published and fighting against the censorship of certain common though blasphemous words, he says something like "I seriously believe you will retard the course of Irish civilization by preventing them from having a look at itself in my nicely polished looking glass." Something like that. a

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti
David,

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's entire oeuvre, but the intermingling of spirituality & materialism is fascinating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari as well. Think of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being guttered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed to; our spirits are bound to different levels of materialism. The spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions; realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit," like the Whitmanic. But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't work. What about a new spirituality that holds up a mirror and catches the darkness of our current fetishism?

↑ Index

274. Mark Weiss
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Fri 23 Jul 2010

The difference, Catherine, is that a viable and useful path for a few has become a set of expectations for the many.

And by the way, re: "the job involves mentoring
other writers, which is hard to do in a peer-to-peer community model of poetry"--it's in fact not so hard, was the norm in most places for millennia. Though "peer-to-peer" may not be the point. It may in any event have become harder now that people expect to get paid for it.

Best,

Mark

At 07:34 PM 7/22/2010, you wrote:
>To try another tactic: why write if not to do everything possible to >increase one's knowledge, to make shiny poems, and to communicate? Isn't >education a catalyst as much as experience?

>
>How else to seek a wider audience through publication than to find >publishers with similar opinions about poetry? How better to engage with >the community of writers than to curate reading series, publish others, >teach, review, be an example in some way to younger writers? [I just saw >the Telephone Press chap by Patti Smith at the Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame!]
>
>What are these opinions about poetry? How are they changing 1) because it >is easier and cheaper to reach an audience, 2) because we all, to a certain >extent, survived the poetry wars more recently than we received our >inheritance from the Beats, the art-poets, the langpos?
>
>Is it so stupid to want to teach? To be a good teacher AND critic AND >writer? To not spend an extended period in "post-college living at its >finest"? I like what Lisa said about working from within the academic >community, where somehow peer review has morphed into winning prizes,
but >only in the arts, because spirituality knows, there's no peer review in the >arts : 0 Aren't the more experimental poets who teach pretty rockin'?
> Teaching's pretty easy and fun compared to making widgets for boneheads.
> Plus, the job involves mentoring other writers, which is hard to do in a >peer-to-peer community model of poetry.
>
>Oh, and we were all teaching about poetry.com, including entering bad poems >and discussing what's "bad" to show about it, looong before flarf. Out here >in the boonies.
>
>--
>All best,
>Catherine Daly
>[redacted]
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are

like Chekhov’s short storiesthe more that gets
left out, the more they seem to contain… One can hear echoes from all the various
ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment
is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure
musical threnody…[it] opens a window, not only
into a mind, but a person, a personality, this
human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

275. Obododimma Oha
Call for articles
Fri 23 Jul 2010

Call for articles

CONTEXT: Journal of Social & Cultural Studies (ISSN 1119 – 9229) http://contextjournal.wordpress.com/ hereby calls for submissions to its December 2010 edition. The journal publishes peer-reviewed essays, creative works, and book reviews in all aspects of culture and society. It is particularly looking out for contributions that try to make interesting and unusual connections, for instance creative works that could as well be viewed as critical reflections. For more information on submission guidelines, visit: http://contextjournal.wordpress.com/submission-of-articles/ All submissions are to be made electronically to [redacted] or to Obododimma Oha (editor): [redacted] . Deadline for submissions: October 5, 2010.

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

276. Michael
Meltzer, Rothenberg, Carrion, Coolidge Benefit for Petaluma Poetry Walk
Fri 23 Jul 2010

Fundraiser for The Petaluma Poetry Walk

"Rockpile with The Rabbles"

David Meltzer, Michael Rothenberg, Terri Carrion and special guest Clark Coolidge are joined by Bay Area art rock band, The Rabbles, jazz group Free Rein and Petaluma's own High Class for a celebration of poetry and music to raise funds for The Petaluma Poetry Walk.

Friday, July 30, 2010

7-10pm

The Phoenix Theater

201 Washington St.

Petaluma, CA 94952

Admission $5-$15

All proceeds from this benefit performance go to The Petaluma Poetry Walk

↑ Index

277. Catherine Daly
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Fri 23 Jul 2010

---

so, typically for this list, we've moved from questioning the culture of prizes -- which in most cases are a sort of poetry raffle, but have become a trophy to brandish at hiring and tenure committees -- to saying that 1) people shouldn't work for money to subsidize their practice, 2) teachers shouldn't get paid, 3) creative writing shouldn't be taught and this is communicated in the actual work?

--
All best,

Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

278. Adam Fieled
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Fri 23 Jul 2010

Right. But the big question is what we want to do with our mirro Adam,

Right. But the big question is what we want to do with our mirrors.

Not everyone's good with polish.

Adam

From: Adam Katz <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Sent: Fri, July 23, 2010 10:15:02 AM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

In regard to Fieled's posting, below: In Joyce's letters to Grant Richards, when he's trying to get Dubliners published and fighting against the censorship of certain common though blasphemous words, he says something like "I seriously believe you will retard the course of Irish civilization by preventing them from having a look at itself in my nicely polished looking glass." Something like that. a

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti=

=A0=A0=A0=A0 David,=0A=0A=A0=A0=A0=A0 I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti= re oeuvre, but the intermingling of =0Aspirituality & materialism is fascin= ating, and I have=A0perused Deleuze/Guattari =0Aas well.=0A=A0=A0=A0=A0 Thi= nk of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being =0Agut= tered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed to; our= =0Aspirits are bound to different levels of materialism.=0A=A0=A0=A0=A0 Th= e spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions; =0A= realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit," lik= e the =0AWhitmanic.=0A=A0=A0=A0=A0 But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't work= . What about a new spirituality =0Athat holds up a mirror and catches the d= arkness of our current fetishism?

↑ Index

279. Halvard Johnson
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Fri 23 Jul 2010

Go figure: I keep wanting to change this subject line to "The Poetry of the Spirituality of Decay."

As you were.

Hal Serving the tri-state area.

Halvard Johnson
==========

[redacted]
http://sites.google.com/site/halvardjohnson/Home
http://entropyandme.blogspot.com
http://imageswithoutwords.blogspot.com
http://www.hamiltonstone.org
<http://www.hamiltonstone.org>
<http://www.hamiltonstone.org>The Perfection of Mozart's Third Eye and Other Sonnets
http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets

Tango Bouquet
<http://www.scribd.com/doc/27039868/Halvard-Johnson-THE-PERFECTION-OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets>
https://docs.google.com/Doc?docid=0ATDp6rzKkBkhZGZwand2cHdfOWc1Mnh3Zw&hl=en

<https://docs.google.com/Doc?docid=0ATDp6rzKkBkhZGZwand2cHdfOWc1Mnh3Zw&hl=en>
Theory of Harmony
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/fall04/theory1.pdf
*
Rapsodie espagnole
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/rapsodi.pdf
*
*
*
*<https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/

rapsodi.pdf>The Sonnet Project*
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/
hsonnet.pdf
*
*
*
*<https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/hsonnet.pdf>
G(e)nome*
*http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/fall03/genome.pdf
*

↑ Index

280. Gloria Frym
Kathy Acker query
Fri 23 Jul 2010

If someone were to play Kathy Acker in a stage production or (very) indie film, who would you nominate? Poets included.

gfrym

↑ Index

281. Jim Andrews
con tests
Fri 23 Jul 2010

---

literary con tests. they affirm what they would deny and deny what they would affirm.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

282. Little Red Leaves
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Fri 23 Jul 2010

Dear Rich, (& Tyrone, Noah et al)--I think the reason I chimed in here was that I don't see the absence of contests or reading fees as inherently more responsible than otherwise. I think Noah spoke to this (& much else) pretty candidly above, as did Tyrone, as have others.

Specifically, I think it'd be worth addressing how presses that build their lists primarily through solicitation & publish out of pocket (or through grant money or some other institutional funding source) can easily replicate the basic economy of the version of the contest model that deserves critique, where resumes and connections are eventually a bottom line. Can replicate that economy even when they want to push against it. Publishing might generally move towards establishing a standard of legitimacy, even if only as a result of the thinking Tyrone's pointing out that precedes the contest model or has a life outside of that model.

For my own part (and I imagine for many other folks in this conversation), the publishing I value takes upon itself the effort to resist that movement--to open up alternatives, to add possibilities for prosody rather than foreclosing on them, to politicize publication in that way--but we might admit that it never fully escapes a relation to that economy. Especially if it has a strong aesthetic affiliation, even just a clear idea of where things need to be opened up. That is, a press encourages this "writing toward" by virtue of its own activity, it seems to me--contest or no. I know there's a difference between a well received intervention in a discourse & a well received entry in a contest, but it just seems like stopping short of really examining this thing to say that it's all the fault of how the funds are gathered or that the former doesn't involve endorsing a measure for success.

I think Tyrone's totally right to point out that funding sources can be an ugly game even in the public/institutional sphere. For that matter, even in the pass-the-plate sphere, even in the publishing collective sphere. My sense, Rich, is that your call is (in part) for a rigidly activist publishing--which I admire greatly. I guess I just don't see how or why that activism should adopt a "no compromise" stance in relation to other presses' efforts, especially if it's meant as a gesture towards collectivist work. "No compromise" in the interest of what, exactly? I mean, if the question here is how to do ethical publishing (and in the end I'm not entirely certain that's the question you seem to be posing--or at least there's a demand for "legit" publishing or some as-yet-unnamed x-factor that's seriously competing w/the ethical demand), then "no compromise" is a pretty dangerous misstep.

Hugs (more hugs after all!--it always cracks me up that you close this way & I wanted to return the sentiment, sincerely),
Chris

On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 9:15 AM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> The difference, Catherine, is that a viable and useful path for a few has become a set of expectations for the many.

And by the way, re: "the job involves mentoring other writers, which is hard to do in a peer-to-peer community model of poetry"--it's in fact not so hard, was the norm in most places for millennia. Though "peer-to-peer" may not be the point. It may in any event have become harder now that people expect to get paid for it.

Best,

Mark

At 07:34 PM 7/22/2010, you wrote:

To try another tactic: why write if not to do everything possible to increase one's knowledge, to make shiny poems, and to communicate? Isn't education a catalyst as much as experience?

How else to seek a wider audience through publication than to find publishers with similar opinions about poetry? How better to engage with the community of writers than to curate reading series, publish others, teach, review, be an example in some way to younger writers? [I just saw the Telephone Press chap by Patti Smith at the Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame!]

What are these opinions about poetry? How are they changing 1) because it is easier and cheaper to reach an audience, 2) because we all, to a certain extent, survived the poetry wars more recently than we received our inheritance from the Beats, the art-poets, the langpos?

Is it so stupid to want to teach? To be a good teacher AND critic AND writer? To not spend an extended period in "post-college living at its finest"? I like what Lisa said about working from within the academic community, where somehow peer review has morphed into winning prizes, but only in the arts, because spirituality knows, there's no peer review in the arts : 0 Aren't the more experimental poets who teach pretty rockin'? Teaching's pretty easy and fun compared to making widgets for boneheads. Plus, the job involves mentoring other writers, which is hard to do in a peer-to-peer community model of poetry.

Oh, and we were all teaching about poetry.com, including entering bad poems and discussing what's "bad" to show about it, looong before flarf. Out here in the boonies.

--

> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
> New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
> $16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm
>
> "What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets left out, the more they seem to contain... One can hear echoes from all the various ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure musical threnody...[it] opens a window, not only into a mind, but a person, a personality, this human figure at the emotional center of the poem."
>
> M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
> http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

283. Chris Chapman
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Fri 23 Jul 2010

You sound like Ezra Pound.

On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 10:15 AM, Adam Katz <[redacted]>wrote:

> In regard to Fieled's posting, below: In Joyce's letters to Grant Richards, when he's trying to get Dubliners published and fighting against the censorship of certain common though blasphemous words, he says something like "I seriously believe you will retard the course of Irish civilization by preventing them from having a look at itself in my nicely polished looking glass." Something like that.
> a

> I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti>
> David,

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's
> enti> re oeuvre, but the intermingling of spirituality & materialism is > fascin> ating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari
as well.

> Thi> nk of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being
>
gut> tered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed to;
> our>
spirits are bound to different levels of materialism.

> Th> e spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions;
>
> realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit," > lik> e the
Whitmanic.
But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't > work> . What about a new spirituality that holds up a mirror and catches the > d> arkness of our current fetishism?
>
>

↑ Index

284. carol dorf
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Fri 23 Jul 2010

I'm not sure about this idea of America and spirituality -- we certainly are far more religious (i.e. participating in traditional religion) than people in other developed countries; though perhaps our religiosity interferes with the development of other spiritual perspectives.

On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 6:15 AM, Adam Katz <[redacted]> wrote:

> In regard to Fieled's posting, below: In Joyce's letters to Grant Richards, when he's trying to get Dubliners published and fighting against the censorship of certain common though blasphemous words, he says something like "I seriously believe you will retard the course of Irish civilization by preventing them from having a look at itself in my nicely polished > looking glass." Something like that.

> a
>
>
>

> ha cute flarf an extract in a way of cutup methods
>
> should be noted however most flarfers were / are fairly established > already as poets
> so silly experimenting isn't too risky for them at this point in > history
> - where qlmost anything goes
>
> On Thu, 22 Jul 2010 06:13:42 -0700 richard owens
> <[redacted]> writes:
> > NOTA: tho i have deep reservations re flarf as effective > practice
> > (i've addressed this elsewhere), i have the deepest admiration
> for
> > flarf as a wildly frustrated, cavalier & incredibly productive
> > riposte to usurous po industry practices. flarf first announces > > itself _thru_ the figure of poetry contests.
> >
> > Cf. Sullivan on the emergence of flarf:
> >
> > "A couple of years ago, if you'll remember, on the Women's Poetry
> > list,
> > a number of people began posting in horror at finding > their
> > names, with > > poems they hadn't written, on poetry.com. I remember going
>
> > to > > the site
> > and realizing immediately it was one of those "poetry
> > contest"
> > scams. A year or so before that I had spoken on the phone
> > with
> > my grandfather,
> > not many days before he died, and he had told me then how > > proud
> > he was > > that he had won some sort of poetry contest, and that he > had
> >
> > ordered the > > book, etc. I had always felt bad about that, and once I > was > > on

> > the poetry.com
> > site, I wrote what I thought would be the most offensive > > poem I
> > could > > manage, and submitted it to the "contest":
> >
> >
> >
> > Mm-hmm
> >
> > Yeah, mm-hmm, it's true
> >
> > big birds make
> >
> > big doo! I got fire inside
> >
> > my "huppa"-chimp(TM)
> >
> > gonna be agreessive, greasy aw yeah god
> >
> > wanna DOOT! DOOT!
> >
> > Pfffffff

> > fuck! shit! piss! oh it's so sad that
> >
> > syndrome what's it called tourette's
> >
> > make me HAI-EE! shout out loud
> >
> > Cuz I love thee. Thank you God, for listening!
> >
> >
> >
> > To my amazement, I received, about three weeks later, a > > letter
> > from poetry.com,
> > with my poem fully visible through the cellophane window
> of
> > the
> > envelope.
> > The letter, in part, read:
> >
> >
> >
> > "Gary, over the past year, we have conducted an exhaustive
>
> > examination
> > of over 1.2 million poems that have been submitted to us.
> > Only a > > small > > percentage of individuals whose poems we have reviewed > were > > selected to > > be part of this distinguished project. "'Mm-hmm' was > > selected
> > for > > publication because it sparks the imagination and provides
>
> > the > > reader
> > with a fresh, unique perspective on life. We believe it > will > > add
> > to the > > importance and appeal of this special edition. _Of course,

>
> > Gary,
> > as always,
> > you are under no obligation whatsoever to submit any entry
>
> > fee
> > or subsidy > > payment, or to make a purchase of any kind_. Your poem > will > > be > > presented > > in the most elegant way possible. This coffee-table > quality
> > book
> > will > > feature an 'Arristock leather' cover stamped in gold and a
>
> > satin
> > bookmarker
> > ?"
> >
> >
> >
> > And it went on like that. I can't remember if I said > > anything
> > about this
> > on the Women's Poetry list (I might have unsubscribed by > > then),
> > but I > > was on the subpoetics list at the time, and posted > something
> >
> > about it,
> > and encouraged others to submit poems to poetry.com. There
>
> > were a > > few
> > takers, including Kasey Mohammad and maybe Drew Gardner.
> > Meanwhile, Nada,
> > Mitch Highfill and I began writing more of these awful
> > poems,
> > and submitting

> > them to the site under a variety of different names.
> >
> >
> >
> > Somewhere in all of this, the word "flarf" materialized-it
>
> > may > > have been Mitch's word, or Drew's, or Nada's, I'm not > sure.
> > But
> > somehow,
> > "flarf" began to take on a meaning: "having the quality > > of flarfiness." We now began to look at other things and
> to > > see > > them
> > as "flarfy." I was never 100% sure what it meant-something
>
> > akin > > to "campy," but with somewhat different resonances. More > > awkward,
> > stumbling, "wrong" than camp. The flarf "voice" in > > my head was that of my father, a transplanted southerner,
> > who
> > likes to > > pontificate, and who has a lot of opinions that kind of > > horrify
> > me."
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

286. Obododimma Oha

Re: USA Africa Dialogue Series - Call for articles

Sat 24 Jul 2010

Please, the email address of the journal is: <[redacted]> NOT <[redacted]> . The error is regretted.
-- Obododimma.

On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 8:04 AM, Obododimma Oha <[redacted]> wrote:

> Call for articles
>
> CONTEXT: Journal of Social & Cultural Studies (ISSN 1119 – 9229) http://contextjournal.wordpress.com/ hereby calls for submissions to its December 2010 edition. The journal publishes peer-reviewed essays, creative works, and book reviews in all aspects of culture and society. It is particularly looking out for contributions that try to make interesting and unusual connections, for instance creative works that could as well be viewed as critical reflections. For more information on submission guidelines, visit: http://contextjournal.wordpress.com/submission-of-articles/ All submissions are to be made electronically to [redacted] or to Obododimma Oha (editor): [redacted] . Deadline for submissions: October 5, 2010.
>
> --
> Obododimma Oha
> http://udude.wordpress.com/
>
> Dept. of English
> University of Ibadan
> Nigeria
>
> &
>
> Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
> University of Ibadan
>
> Phone: [redacted];
> [redacted];
> [redacted].
>
> --
> You received this message because you are subscribed to the "USA-Africa Dialogue Series" moderated by Toyin Falola, University of Texas at Austin.
> For current archives, visit
> http://groups.google.com/group/USAAfricaDialogue
> For previous archives, visit

> http://www.utexas.edu/conferences/africa/ads/index.html
> To post to this group, send an email to > [redacted]

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

287. Adam Fieled
Goss 183 Chap: "Returns"
Sat 24 Jul 2010

---

http://www.magclo
I've got a new chap, "Returns," out from Goss 183:

http://www.magcloud.com/browse/issue/100536

it can be read via the "Preview" button or purchased.

Gracias to Didi Menendez....

Cheers!!
Adam

↑ Index

288. Gary Sullivan
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sat 24 Jul 2010

Dear Richard Owens,

I started writing poetry when I was in grammar school, I don't remember what age exactly.

I had read Lewis Carroll's Hunting of the Snark, which had scared the holy living crap out of me.

I was so terrified, I didn't know what to do with myself. So I sat down and wrote a poem, trying to write something even more terrifying than Hunting of the Snark.

I am not sure what my motivations were. I'm sure a good child psychologist would have a theory or two.

This has been, more or less, my relationship to writing for the last 40 years or so.

I'm not entirely unsympathetic to what you're saying. A piece I wrote in the 90s and published in How To Proceed in the Arts, "First Draft Imaginary Writer Survey," ends with the questions:

"Why do we call it 'submission'? What are we collectively 'accepting'? What do we write about when we write about writing?"

That said, I didn't post a bad poem to poetry.com to prove that such contests are bad, as it appears Catherine, who beat me to the punch, did.

Nor to prove that people who know nothing about poetry can't judge it, as it appears Jennifer might believe. (I couldn't agree less with that sentiment.)

I certainly did not do it to show up anyone's "usurious" practices. I do not like that word nor how it has been used to target a certain population.

I did it because I was pissed off about what had happened to my grandfather. Less so his having been duped by poetry.com--I had mixed feelings about that, as it had actually given him some mild pleasure while he was on his deathbed. He was in great pain and dying, after all. As consolation, poetry.com made him feel as though he was a "real" poet. (Whatever that is.) He recited his winning poem to me over the phone from memory while he was in the hospital.

I was really pissed off because he had died, coughing up blood in a hospital with my grandmother at his side.

I don't care whether or not poetry magazines or presses or universities or individuals hold contests and charge entry fees. I have never entered one, not one with a fee. But not because I am morally opposed to them. The simple truth is that I am a cheapskate. If I felt more than 75% sure that my manuscript stood a chance, I might pay the money and send it.

I like Noah Eli Gordon. I met him once in Denver. He was sweet and funny and talked a lot about poetry. Which he clearly loves. More than I do, certainly. I have no interest in poetry beyond that which directly feeds, inspires, terrifies, surprises me. That which engages me. That's probably true for him, too, though I would imagine that he's engaged in far more being written today than I am.

I have no opinion one way or the other about any contest that he might be promoting or managing or dreaming up or whathaveyou. That's his business.

I do know that, when you are spotted doing anything beyond appearing to be a humble poet dutifully hunched over a desk in the corner crafting your some-day important earth-shattering poems, that some poets sometimes like to trash talk you, call you a capitalist, usurer, careerist, fraud, whatever. Poetry is a religion for the people who do this. They are welcome to it. I am a third or fourth generation atheist, and I have no interest in magical or ritualized thinking about anything, least of all poetry.

I admire many of the people who have chimed in against poetry contests. But no more or less so than I admire Noah. Or anyone, for that matter, who might submit their work to the contest he announced.

After all, my grandfather, who I loved very dearly, was a contest-submitter. Indeed: a contest winner! And his poem actually made me cry when he recited it to me, which is more than I can say for almost everything currently in print, however it might have wound up there.

This is not all to say that you are wrong to feel how you do about contests. That's your business and you are of course as qualified as anyone else to think about such things. Just that, though I appreciate the call-out, I thought I should be open about the situation of having written that poetry.com poem and what my own honest feelings about contests are. To me, they are, like those words "submission" and "acceptance," part of the landscape, and do define us to some extent. Just like everything else.

Gary

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

289. Vernon Frazer

* by Vernon Frazer now online

Sat 24 Jul 2010

Andrew Topel has just published *, a longpoem long in waiting for publication. I want to thank Andrew and Avantacular Press for supporting my work.

http://www.scribd.com/doc/34761363/

↑ Index

290. David Chirot
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Sat 24 Jul 2010

Dear Adam:

Thank you for your kind and thoughtful responses to all the posts-- in the last year i read a great deal of Mallarme's work-- and opening a book of his last night it struck me very much if you haven't already read his "poemes critiques"--poetic essays--there are several which might interest you-- just a few years ago an excellent english language edition of the poet's DIVIGATIONS appeared from Harvard Press's Belknap Prss, translated by Barbara Johnson-- and it has among its quite wide range of peieces chosen by thepoet himself the famous essays "Crisis in Verse," "The Book as Spiritual Instrument," "Restricted Action," as well as Mallarme's piece on Wagner, among the music essays included.

Mallarme thought of and wrote poetry and prose as the spiritual experience itself, following a long "dark night of the soul, " periodically undergone again to a greater or lesser degree, which series of spiritual crises brought him to poetry itself as being the site of the spiritual, as well as poetry alone having any use or meaning, a quite radical development

The interest in Wagner led to Mallarme's expansion of the idea of the poem itself to include al the elements and more of Wagner's "Total Work of Art." Out of this conception of poetry as including music and dance, gesture and setting-- Mallarme created what is often considered the first "Modern" work of Visual Poetry, "Un Coup de des n'abolira jamais le hasard"--(A Throw of the Dice will Never Abolish Chance') --the layout, spacing and uses of vast "silences," "blank areas"--functioning as the Visual Score for the sound/silence interplay in the composition, heard and felt as a poetry-music spiritual experience.

Here is a quote which may be of interest/use in taking a look/listening/performing of Poetry, Mallarme's and others':

"Poetry is the expression, by means of human language brought back to its essential rhythm, of the mysterious sense of existence: thus it endows our stay on earth with authenticity and constitutes the spiritual task."

An excellent source for the biographical frame/background of the development of Mallarmé's ideas is Gordon Millar's A THROW OF THE DICE The Life of Stephane Mallarme (New York: Farrar, Strauss & Giroux, 1994).

(I shd note also that as far as politics is concerned, Mallarme numbered as friends many of the then famous, fashionable Anarchists of the 1890's, including among them especially his close friend and attendee of Mallarmé's famous Salon--Felix Feneon--at whose trial for being among the (non-existent) "Conpiracy of Thirty," Mallarme testified as character witness for the embattled Anarchist, Editor, Translator--

↑ Index

291. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sat 24 Jul 2010

TYRONE:

i fully recognize how easy it is to critique current practices _without_ offering any sort of alternate model -- which is what i think you're point out. i also think there are multiple forms of complicity and there are no hands grounded in cultural production that ain't been sullied or compromised -- which, if i'm not misreading yr comment, also seems to be what yr saying. aiming to respond here, so plz bear w/ the hasty, disjunctive notes.

this thread has split (or can be split) into a number of directions, two in particular: 1. politically responsible publishing models; 2. pedagogical approaches to teaching writing and the relation of the MFA industry to publishing.

i'm not sure i can offer approaches to publishing that might be satisfying to others, in large part because this is contingent on how others understand poetries, what they expect from the production of poems, etc. if the pursuit is formal recognition or landing a book deal with a known, "respectable," career-friendly publisher, then i'm not sure anything i might have to suggest here works toward these goals. but if the aim is to enter into a conversation or to support (or generate) a community of people with articulated interests, then maybe some of the approaches i've taken in the past might be of use -- but anything i've done myself has been modeled for me by others -- and so i think the question of pedagogy, of modeling, is incredibly important here.

damn the caesars has always been a journal of contemporary poetry and poetics, but it emerges, like any number of other poetry mags, out of 90s zine culture -- Tim Yohanan's Maximum Rock-n-Roll, Chris Boarts' Slug and Lettuce (ABC-No-Rio), the Minneapolis mag Profane Existence (at once mag, record label, community). these semi-autonomous communities were, thru the late 80s & early 90s, articulated with one another, in conversation with one another. most were by and large anarcho-squatter operations -- newsprint pubs distributed for free or sold only to cover the cost of production. i adopted this model in 2005 for the first 2 #s of DTC -- both of which i brought out in NJ. covers were printed offset and guts run thru a laser jet printer in my wife's living room. those first 2 #s included work by people i had been in correspondence with for several years (Dale Smith, Roger Snell, Kent Johnson) and people i admired and tracked down (Amiri Baraka, Attila the Stockbroker, Clayton Eshleman). but both #s (in runs of 150) were paid for completely out of pocket, on the $10 an hour i earned working as an advocate for migrant farm workers (i recall here James Purdy's insistence that he consistently spent far more on postage than he ever did on food).

in the spring of 2005 i moved to Buffalo to do graduate work in the Poetics Program (a critical rather than creative program -- and the only program i applied to). after soliciting the program for funding, Susan Howe, Steve McCaffery and Dennis Tedlock each generously supported the journal -- which then allowed me to distribute it for far _less_ than the cost of production. postage continued to come completely out of pocket (and, as an MA student then, i drew these moneys from student loans i find myself still paying off). the last volume of DTC, which i just announced earlier this month, will be the last funded by the Poetics Program and now i find myself struggling again for a way to sustain the journal.Â

but something worth pointing out here is that, while funding from the department _can_ be viewed as a compromised source that inadvertently extends or sustains the university _industry_, it's also crucial to recognize a few things: 1) as editor/curator, i wasn't seeking to publish my own work (viz. the journal wasn't a solipsistic venture wherein i place my own private interests or my own writing before others); 2) the Poetics Program has, since its inception, generously supported an impressively catholic range of publishing ventures proposed within the program; 3) university funding comes from a range of sources (however questionable), but filtered as these moneys are through an incredibly complex bureaucratic system, editors and artists that apply for these funds (or, i think, arts funding in general) are not exactly performing in the same way as those publishers that introduce contest schemes at the ground level. naturally i recognize there's far more that needs considering here, but this last difference between institutional funding and ground-level contest schemes cannot, i think, be overstated.

in terms of less-compromised publishing models, there are a few that come to mind. the most immediate simply involves purchasing a laser jet printer; the web is an invaluable resource -- purchase a domain and construct an online journal (Shampoo, May Day, Jacket, a few others come to mind). altho _many_ wld disagree with me, i take blogs (Word Press, Blogspot, etc) as a stunningly viable source of publication (both Thom Donovan and Sean Bonney, two poets i deeply admire, publish _most_ of their work first on their blogs, without shame and without apology & both are poets that many of us take very seriously).

Boog City editor David A Kirschenbaum once told me a print run of 1500 newsprint copies costs him less than $400 -- and most of this is, i believe, paid for thru advertising (perhaps a compromised practice, but these ads are largely for small presses and magazines). this is a model i'm seriously considering for future #s of DTC.

Print on demand (POD) offers a range of wonderful possibilities. BlazeVOX editor Geoff Gatza, who, comes out of a string of virtually uncharted state colleges and from a modest working class background, has in 10 years time situated himself as a poor folk's James Laughlin -- and his view of publishing is particularly exciting in its rigidly democratic, iconoclastic and lateralizing approach: Geoff believes EVERYONE shld have a bk, no exceptions -- and this view, in its sheer beauty and within the frame of the MFA or AWP industry, utterly devalues the single-author book as species of cultural currency that can be thrown up on the market in service of careers, etc. Geoff's view, that is, angles toward the total collapse of privilege, genius, etc.

other publishers that have gone the POD route: Shearsman, Salt, a range of university presses bring out POD publications, the magazine ON: Contemporary Practice (edited by Michael Cross, Thom Donovan, Kyle Schlesinger) is run thru Lulu.

so: Newsprint (with or without ads costs are still modest); POD (which doesn't require a publisher to hold, say, 400 copies of a title and minimizes waste -- no remaindered copies); the web (overhead for an online journal is low) --- a few others i'd like to note, but ...

on the terrain of pedagogy, these models are, again, iconoclastic -- they offer possibilities for lateralizing, for challenging the authority certain journals, presses and publishers have, for whatever reasons, been invested with. rather than "submit" (kow-tow) or tailor your work to match the sensibilities of magazines and publishers with cultural power (i.e. New Directions, City Lights, Coffee House, any number of university presses, any number of established small presses, etc), students can be encouraged to carve out site and community specific spaces that meet their needs -- and they can be encouraged to articulate their communities with others through conversation and correspondence. there's a lot more to say here and i'd be grateful to hear from others with publishing (and outreach) models we haven't yet considered.

the last publishing model i'm working with in an effort to simply cover the cost of production is advanced subscription -- the approach Five Seasons Press used when bringing out Alan Halsey's Lives of the Poets, and one used by Bill Griffiths' Pirate Press when he brought out a mimeo edition of Beowulf in the mid 1970s. Jed Birmingham uploaded some images from the mimeo ed to his blog:

http://mimeomimeo.blogspot.com/2009/11/pirated-beowulf.html

(click on the image of the subscription page) here _advanced_ subscribers who provide a press with the funding needed to bring out a publication are acknowledged _by name_ in that pub -- a practice which is, among other things, very useful to scholars for considering community formation or tracking down multiple copies of a particular publication. rather than asking young poets for reading fees and rather than throwing them into competition with one another (NB: here i'm not so sure poets entering contests regard the reading fee they pay as support for a press; i think most probably -- and sadly -- regard it as a monetary contribution that guarantees their work will be read with some measure of care), advanced subscription acknowledges _everyone_ that subscribed and it doesn't do so not by pitting people against one another or fostering a competitive situation. if a potential subscriber has no interest in a work, then they don't subscribe. it's that simple. with this model a sliding scale can be introduced to accommodate those with little means that nonetheless seek to participate. my first stab at the model:

http://damnthecaesars.org/kentjohnson.html

anyhow -- with those first few issues of DTC (which i am, as ever, not sure can be recognized as "successful"), i mailed dozens, if not hundreds, of copies out to poets i admired -- poets whose mailing addresses i painstakingly track down (tho many were generously provided to me by a friend, but he was a friend i'd already been in correspondence with for over _5_ years). & there's a difference to be noted here between poets one admires and those that might be appealed to for name recognition (like, my mag published Ashbery or something). when poets i took interest in had kind things to say about the journal or useful insights, i didn't pimp out their comments -- i didn't reduce their generosity to the figure of a blurb.

but the view of publishing offered here is a _very_ particular view and it's one immediately articulated with a _very_ particular view of what poetry and, more broadly, cultural production is and can be. i recognize this. but the core question here is the question of "success" -- what it is, what it means and, if we can establish this (and this is something i persistently fail to do, no matter how much consideration i lend the question), then perhaps addressing how to move _toward_ achieving it an equitable, efficacious and non-destructive way is the question that shld follow. in any case, these are questions i take as central to any consideration of writing, within or without the classroom. Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â
Â Â Â Â Â
&, Tyrone -- & Chris &c -- i don't take this as an "answer" to any of the questions you posed so much as an invitation to consider these issues further. i mean, tho others might disagree, i got a clear & unswerving sense of how i feel abt prize culture, poetry contests and reading fees -- but in terms of efficacious publishing models, pedagogical approaches to writing in (or outside) the classroom, etc -- i really wld like to hear more.

hugs ... rich ...
Â Â Â Â Â

Â

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Fri, 7/23/10, tyrone williams <[redacted]> wrote:

From: tyrone williams <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, July 23, 2010, 8:17 AM

Rich, Chris,

Like others I have found this conversation rather interesting but like a few here, Chris especially, I'd like YOU to offer what you might see as a politically responsible publishing model. To be blunt--what is the source of funding for damn the caesars? I know lots of people who use their own funds and state grants to support their presses but those models--siphoning capital--presuppose participation in a labor market and government subsidy model that has its own, shall we say, political problems...I concur completely with the winners/losers model re contests though I can't imagine many participants think of it that way (I won! I lost!). Don't they, as I do, see it simply as a way to support small presses and, as one commentator suggested, don't come way with a "loser" noose hung around their necks (or minds)? And, here's my real point, if they Do participate in the psychological game of winners and losers, not participating in contests will in no way affect that mindset. I understand your critique of the business model that facilitates such thinking but you seem to be critiquing the end result of such thinking--what about such thinking per se?

Tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: richard owens <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jul 22, 2010 6:35 PM
>To: [redacted]

>Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>
>CHRIS:
>
>the last missive i launched went to the list but was intended as a private msg.
>
>but to consider yr comment in a more public -- & more measured -- way, Chris, i'd say if we are to insist on the relevance of presses that participate in questionable practices, if we are not to ignore them, then we need to put pressure on them to develop different models for generating dough, locating new (younger) poets, etc -- viz. call these presses out on requests for reading fees, critique the deep logic that makes contests appear inviting & desirable. man, contests really are a filthy way to generate cash. both you & i, along with any number of others on this list, well recognize how far a nice chunk of change can go re making bks, but there are ways of generating that kind of cash without creating an environment that motivates young poets to produce work _toward_ an idea of winning (which always presupposes losers), or _toward_ an idea of success, or _toward_ an idea of "breaking onto" a Free-Mason-like poetry scene as tho it were Hollywood.Â
 Â
> Â Â
>
>man, i have the deepest respect for yr work -- LRL, Dos Press, etc -- & this is work that, i think like my own, doesn't participate in the practices i'm taking issue with here. & i see yr point re bracketing out important writing by good presses that happen also to organize contests, etc. but i remain convinced that the contest model (and, with it, the language of submission) cannot be modified, reformulated or recuperated -- it has to be tossed.Â
>
>hugs ... rich ...Â Â
>
>.....richard owens
>810 richmond ave
>buffalo NY 14222-1167
>
>damn the caesars, the journal
>damn the caesars, the blog
>
>--- On Thu, 7/22/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

>To: [redacted]
>Date: Thursday, July 22, 2010, 5:07 PM
>
>Rich--I love you and I tend to trust your assessment here, but seriously:
>
>"ANY press that shakes young poets down for a reading fee FORECLOSES on its >own relevance. they are to be ignored. NO exceptions. NO compromise."
>
>Walk it back, man. No Salt? No Kelsey St. (I think they had a fee recently, >though this might be wrong)? No Ahsahta? No Omnidawn? No Nightboat? This is >a major erasure. I don't think I need to list individual titles here to make >that point. Probably missing a few in my list, but my sense is that there >are presses out there doing seriously fucking viable work on that model (or >in spite of it).
>
>No way for a more complicated take on this? I wonder if we might hear from >any of the folks associated w/any of the presses above on their choice to >run contests and/or charge reading fees.
>
>CJ Martin
>
>On Thu, Jul 22, 2010 at 8:13 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:
>
>> NOTA: tho i have deep reservations re flarf as effective practice (i've >> addressed this elsewhere), i have the deepest admiration for flarf as a >> wildly frustrated, cavalier & incredibly productive riposte to usurous po >> industry practices. flarf first announces itself _thru_ the figure of poetry >> contests.
>>
>> Cf. Sullivan on the emergence of flarf:
>>
>> "A couple of years ago, if you'll remember, on the Women's Poetry list, >>Â Â Â Â a number of people began posting in horror at finding their >> names, with >>Â Â Â Â poems they hadn't written, on poetry.com. I remember going to >> the site
>>Â Â Â Â and realizing immediately it was one of those "poetry contest"
>>Â Â Â Â scams. A year or so before that I had spoken on the phone with
>> my grandfather,
>>Â Â Â Â not many days before he died, and he had told me then how proud

>> he was >>Â Â Â Â that he had won some sort of poetry contest, and that he had >> ordered the >>Â Â Â Â book, etc. I had always felt bad about that, and once I was on >> the poetry.com
>>Â Â Â Â site, I wrote what I thought would be the most offensive poem I
>> could
>>Â Â Â Â manage, and submitted it to the "contest":
>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Mm-hmm
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Yeah, mm-hmm, it's true
>>
>>Â Â Â Â big birds make
>>
>>Â Â Â Â big doo! I got fire inside
>>
>>Â Â Â Â my "huppa"-chimp(TM)
>>
>>Â Â Â Â gonna be agreessive, greasy aw yeah god
>>
>>Â Â Â Â wanna DOOT! DOOT!
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Pfffffff

>>
>>Â Â Â Â fuck! shit! piss! oh it's so sad that
>>
>>Â Â Â Â syndrome what's it called tourette's
>>
>>Â Â Â Â make me HAI-EE! shout out loud
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Cuz I love thee. Thank you God, for listening!
>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â To my amazement, I received, about three weeks later, a letter
>> from poetry.com,
>>Â Â Â Â with my poem fully visible through the cellophane window of the >> envelope.
>>Â Â Â Â The letter, in part, read:
>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â "Gary, over the past year, we have conducted an exhaustive
>> examination
>>Â Â Â Â of over 1.2 million poems that have been submitted to us. Only a >>Â small
>>Â Â Â Â percentage of individuals whose poems we have reviewed were >> selected to >>Â Â Â Â be part of this distinguished project. "'Mm-hmm' was selected
>> for >>Â Â Â Â publication because it sparks the imagination and provides the >> reader
>>Â Â Â Â with a fresh, unique perspective on life. We believe it will add
>>Â to the
>>Â Â Â Â importance and appeal of this special edition. _Of course, Gary,
>>Â as always,
>>Â Â Â Â you are under no obligation whatsoever to submit any entry fee
>> or subsidy
>>Â Â Â Â payment, or to make a purchase of any kind_. Your poem will be >> presented
>>Â Â Â Â in the most elegant way possible. This coffee-table quality book
>>Â will
>>Â Â Â Â feature an 'Arristock leather' cover stamped in gold and a satin
>>Â bookmarker
>>Â Â Â Â â€¦"

>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â And it went on like that. I can't remember if I said anything >> about this
>>Â Â Â Â on the Women's Poetry list (I might have unsubscribed by then),
>> but I
>>Â Â Â Â was on the subpoetics list at the time, and posted something >> about it,
>>Â Â Â Â and encouraged others to submit poems to poetry.com. There were a >>Â few
>>Â Â Â Â takers, including Kasey Mohammad and maybe Drew Gardner.
>> Meanwhile, Nada,
>>Â Â Â Â Mitch Highfill and I began writing more of these awful poems,
>> and submitting
>>Â Â Â Â them to the site under a variety of different names.
>>
>>
>>
>>Â Â Â Â Somewhere in all of this, the word "flarf" materialized-it may >>Â Â Â Â have been Mitch's word, or Drew's, or Nada's, I'm not sure. But >> somehow,
>>Â Â Â Â "flarf" began to take on a meaning: "having the quality >>Â Â Â Â of flarfiness." We now began to look at other things and to see >> them
>>Â Â Â Â as "flarfy." I was never 100% sure what it meant-something akin >>Â Â Â Â to "campy," but with somewhat different resonances. More >> awkward,
>>Â Â Â Â stumbling, "wrong" than camp. The flarf "voice" in >>Â Â Â Â my head was that of my father, a transplanted southerner, who >> likes to >>Â Â Â Â pontificate, and who has a lot of opinions that kind of horrify >> me."
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>
>

>
>--
>www.littleredleaves.com
>www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com
>
>
>
>
>
>

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

292. Mark Weiss
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sat 24 Jul 2010

That's quite a leap, Catherine. Who's saying these things?

At 12:08 PM 7/23/2010, you wrote:
>so, typically for this list, we've moved from questioning the culture of >prizes -- which in most cases are a sort of poetry raffle, but have become a >trophy to brandish at hiring and tenure committees -- to saying that 1) >people shouldn't work for money to subsidize their practice, 2) teachers >shouldn't get paid, 3) creative writing shouldn't be taught
>
>and this is communicated in the actual work?
>
>--
>All best,
>Catherine Daly
>[redacted]
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are
like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets
left out, the more they seem to contain… One can

hear echoes from all the various
ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment
is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure
musical threnody...[it] opens a window, not only
into a mind, but a person, a personality, this
human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

293. richard owens

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Sun 25 Jul 2010

CHRIS:

disclaimer: i love you, BUT: man, we all recognize in advance & at all times that THE most contingent force _at_ the present moment is capital -- which is to say, capital has always masterfully denied absolute statements. this denial is _precisely_Â what guarantees the survival of capital: its ability to please & adapt. but appeals to the absolute, even as a tactical strategy, are sometimes necessary and here i'm saying point blank: no contests. that simple. they're utterly indefensible. no compromise. & we can say this is fascist, its rigid, its unswerving, it denies contingency, etc. but at the present moment i feel gestures of complete disavowal have never been more necessary. & contests which require reading fees are one, among any number of things, that have to be refused. we can unravel the logic of this refusal, but in the end opening a space for small press publishers to introduce or participate in contests that shake poets down for "reading" fees is a destructive gesture.

hugs (w/out irony) ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Fri, 7/23/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

To: [redacted]
Date: Friday, July 23, 2010, 5:15 PM

Dear Rich, (& Tyrone, Noah et al)--I think the reason I chimed in here was that I don't see the absence of contests or reading fees as inherently more responsible than otherwise. I think Noah spoke to this (& much else) pretty candidly above, as did Tyrone, as have others.

Specifically, I think it'd be worth addressing how presses that build their lists primarily through solicitation & publish out of pocket (or through grant money or some other institutional funding source) can easily replicate the basic economy of the version of the contest model that deserves critique, where resumes and connections are eventually a bottom line. Can replicate that economy even when they want to push against it. Publishing might generally move towards establishing a standard of legitimacy, even if only as a result of the thinking Tyrone's pointing out that precedes the contest model or has a life outside of that model.

For my own part (and I imagine for many other folks in this conversation), the publishing I value takes upon itself the effort to resist that movement--to open up alternatives, to add possibilities for prosody rather than foreclosing on them, to politicize publication in that way--but we might admit that it never fully escapes a relation to that economy. Especially if it has a strong aesthetic affiliation, even just a clear idea of where things need to be opened up. That is, a press encourages this "writing toward" by virtue of its own activity, it seems to me--contest or no. I know there's a difference between a well received intervention in a discourse & a well received entry in a contest, but it just seems like stopping short of really examining this thing to say that it's all the fault of how the funds are gathered or that the former doesn't involve endorsing a measure for success.

I think Tyrone's totally right to point out that funding sources can be an ugly game even in the public/institutional sphere. For that matter, even in the pass-the-plate sphere, even in the publishing collective sphere. My sense, Rich, is that your call is (in part) for a rigidly activist publishing--which I admire greatly. I guess I just don't see how or why that activism should adopt a "no compromise" stance in relation to other presses' efforts, especially if it's meant as a gesture towards collectivist work. "No compromise" in the interest of what, exactly? I mean, if the question here is how to do ethical publishing (and in the end I'm not entirely certain that's the question you seem to be posing--or at least there's a demand for "legit" publishing or some as-yet-unnamed x-factor that's seriously competing w/the ethical demand), then "no compromise" is a pretty dangerous misstep.

Hugs (more hugs after all!--it always cracks me up that you close this way & I wanted to return the sentiment, sincerely),
Chris

On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 9:15 AM, Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:

> The difference, Catherine, is that a viable and useful path for a few has become a set of expectations for the many.
>
> And by the way, re: "the job involves mentoring other writers, which is hard to do in a > peer-to-peer community model of poetry"--it's in fact not so hard, was the norm in most places for millennia. Though "peer-to-peer" may not be the point. It may in any event have become harder now that people expect to get paid for it.
>
> Best,
>
> Mark
>
> At 07:34 PM 7/22/2010, you wrote:
>
> To try another tactic:Â why write if not to do everything possible to increase one's knowledge, to make shiny poems, and to communicate?Â Isn't education a catalyst as much as experience?
>
> How else to seek a wider audience through publication than to find publishers with similar opinions about poetry?Â How better to engage with the community of writers than to curate reading series, publish others, teach, review, be an example in some way to younger writers?Â [I just saw the Telephone Press chap by Patti Smith at the Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame!]
>
> What are these opinions about poetry?Â How are they changing 1) because it is easier and cheaper to reach an audience, 2) because we all, to a certain > extent, survived the poetry wars more recently than we received our inheritance from the Beats, the art-poets, the langpos?
>
> Is it so stupid to want to teach?Â To be a good teacher AND critic AND writer?Â To not spend an extended period in "post-college living at its finest"? I like what Lisa said about working from within the academic community, where somehow peer review has morphed into winning prizes, but only in the arts, because spirituality knows, there's no peer review in the > arts : 0Â Aren't the more experimental poets who teach pretty rockin'?
> Â Teaching's pretty easy and fun compared to making widgets for boneheads.
> Â Plus, the job involves mentoring other writers, which is hard to do in a peer-to-peer community model of poetry.

> Oh, and we were all teaching about poetry.com, including entering bad poems > and discussing what's "bad" to show about it, looong before flarf.Â Out here > in the boonies.
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
> New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
> $16.Â Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm
>
> "What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weissâ€™ fragments are like Chekhovâ€™s short storiesÂthe more that gets left out, the more they seem to containâ€¦ One can hear echoes from all the various ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure musical threnodyâ€¦[it] opens a window, not only into a mind, but a person, a personality, this human figure at the emotional center of the poem."
>
> M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
> http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

294. Jason Quackenbush
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Sun 25 Jul 2010

Hi Adam,
This essay really got me thinking, but as I wrote a response I realized I had too much to say to want to spill the whole thing onto the list, so I wrote it up as a blog post here:

http://www.wetasphalt.com/content/mind-body-spirit-whatever-new-poetics-metaphysical

I'd very much like to here what you (or anybody else for that matter) think.

Regards,
JF Quackenbush
[redacted]

On Jul 18, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Adam Fieled wrote:

> This is an essay of mine newly published in Word for Word, "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry":
>
> http://www.wordforword.info/vol17/Fieled.htm
>
> Many thanks to Jonathan Minton.
>
> Enjoy.
>
> Adam

↑ Index

295. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Noise Difficulty Flower" by J. D. Nelson

Sun 25 Jul 2010

Description:

Scratch-n-sniff the strange fragrance of J. D. Nelson's Noise Difficulty Flower. These 25 science fiction-scented surrealities were written between 2007 and 2010.

Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/content/e-book/noise-difficulty-flower/9135845

↑ Index

296. E. J. McAdams
Tues. 7/27, NYC: James Sherry on Climate Change and Poetry
Sun 25 Jul 2010

SEA Poetry Series, No. 4, featuring James Sherry

Tuesday, July 27, 2009

7:00-9:00pm

EXIT ART, 475 10th Ave., NYC

James Sherry will read the essay, "Climate Change and Poetry" and the poem "Passive Voice: Forcing Amaryllis." Following the reading, The Canary Project, photographer Susannah Sayler and Edward Morris, whose work is featured in ECOAESTHETIC, will respond to the reading.

James Sherry is the author of 10 books of poetry and criticism. His work on Environmental Poetics, both prose and poetry, is widely published in magazines and websites. He is the editor of Roof Books and founder of the Segue Foundation. He lives in New York City.

The Canary Project produces visual media, events, and artwork that build public understanding of human-induced climate change and energize commitment to solutions. For more information visit: http://canary-project.org/old/html/

All readings are $5 suggested donation and take place at Exit Art, 475 10 th Avenue, between 36th and 37th Street. Following each reading there will Q&A and a cash bar reception. The SEA Poetry Series is curated by E.J. McAdams.
*
*
UPCOMING: SEA Poetry Series, No. 5, featuring Julie Patton

Tuesday, August 24th, 7-9pm

Visit: www.seapoetryseries.blogspot.com for more info.

*
*

↑ Index

297. Halvard Johnson
Sol: new online literary magazine
Sun 25 Jul 2010

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: James Cervantes <[redacted]>

Date: Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 6:55 AM
Subject: [New-Poetry] Sol: new online literary magazine
To: new-poetry <[redacted]>

A new on-line literary magazine, Sol: English Writing in Mexico, edited by writers Bill Pearlman and Eva Hunter, is available to you at no cost. If you're a writer, you should check it out. If you're a reader, you should check it out. The first issue has writings from C.M. Mayo, Tony Cohan, Halvard Johnson, Wim and Pat Perrin, James Cervantes and others. SOL is meant to be a literary vehicle for both veteran writers like those mentioned above, and new writers like this issue's Margaret Tallis, Jan Harvey, and Carolyn Hernandez. The magazine will come out three times yearly. The on-line version is available without cost by subscribing; a yearly hard-copy anthology will be available at each year's end. We hope you'll enjoy the fine writing in this first issue.

http://solliterarymagazine.com

--

~~~
~~~

OF-MOZART-S-THIRD-EYE-Other-Sonnets>
https://docs.google.com/Doc?
docid=0ATDp6rzKkBkhZGZwand2cHdfOWc1Mnh3Zw&hl=en

<https://docs.google.com/Doc?
docid=0ATDp6rzKkBkhZGZwand2cHdfOWc1Mnh3Zw&hl=en>
Theory of Harmony
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/fall04/theory1.pdf
*
Rapsodie espagnole
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/
rapsodi.pdf
*
*
*
*<https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/
rapsodi.pdf>The Sonnet Project*
*
https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/
hsonnet.pdf
*
*
*
*<https://docs.google.com/viewer?url=http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/hsonnet.pdf>
G(e)nome*
*http://xpressed.wippiespace.com/fall03/genome.pdf
*
*
*

↑ Index

298. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sun 25 Jul 2010

GARY &c:

thanks for this clarification. like you, i too believe everyone's aright. but, man, if youse catch me participating in hypersketchy practices that i might not see as sketchy -- if you see a blindspot that i somehow missed, then call it friendo. i'll prolly be grateful.

re contests & funding: saying institutional sources of funding are no less compromised than those funds pulled in from contest reading fees is like saying: man, the guy next door sells weed so don't climb on that one over there for peddling smack & crack. the logic is stunningly conservative -- like the smooth way around to saying: don't make waves coz don't nobody care &, besides, poet worker bees never minded being exploited by contests in the first place (wot is it Emma Goldman sz, those treated most poorly by a nation -- or, in this case, any other institution or practice -- are it's fiercest defenders? i mean, just because we got rodents in the living room don't mean we shld ignore the rats in the kitchen or the mites in the flour. (vermin = sketchy practices not people.)

hugs ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sat, 7/24/10, Gary Sullivan <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, July 24, 2010, 10:51 AM

Dear Richard Owens,

I started writing poetry when I was in grammar school, I don't remember what age exactly.

I had read Lewis Carroll's Hunting of the Snark, which had scared the holy living crap out of me.

I was so terrified, I didn't know what to do with myself. So I sat down and wrote a poem, trying to write something even more terrifying than Hunting of the Snark.

I am not sure what my motivations were. I'm sure a good child psychologist would have a theory or two.

This has been, more or less, my relationship to writing for the last 40 years or so.

I'm not entirely unsympathetic to what you're saying. A piece I wrote in the 90s and published in How To Proceed in the Arts, "First Draft Imaginary Writer Survey," ends with the questions:

"Why do we call it 'submission'? What are we collectively 'accepting'? What do we write about when we write about writing?"

That said, I didn't post a bad poem to poetry.com to prove that such contests are bad, as it appears Catherine, who beat me to the punch, did.

Nor to prove that people who know nothing about poetry can't judge it, as it appears Jennifer might believe. (I couldn't agree less with that sentiment.)

I certainly did not do it to show up anyone's "usurious" practices. I do not like that word nor how it has been used to target a certain population.

I did it because I was pissed off about what had happened to my grandfather. Less so his having been duped by poetry.com--I had mixed feelings about that, as it had actually given him some mild pleasure while he was on his deathbed. He was in great pain and dying, after all. As consolation, poetry.com made him feel as though he was a "real" poet. (Whatever that is.) He recited his winning poem to me over the phone from memory while he was in the hospital.

I was really pissed off because he had died, coughing up blood in a hospital with my grandmother at his side.

I don't care whether or not poetry magazines or presses or universities or individuals hold contests and charge entry fees. I have never entered one, not one with a fee. But not because I am morally opposed to them. The simple truth is that I am a cheapskate. If I felt more than 75% sure that my manuscript stood a chance, I might pay the money and send it.

I like Noah Eli Gordon. I met him once in Denver. He was sweet and funny and talked a lot about poetry. Which he clearly loves. More than I do, certainly. I have no interest in poetry beyond that which directly feeds, inspires, terrifies, surprises me. That which engages me. That's probably true for him, too, though I would imagine that he's engaged in far more being written today than I am.

I have no opinion one way or the other about any contest that he might be promoting or managing or dreaming up or whathaveyou. That's his business.

I do know that, when you are spotted doing anything beyond appearing to be a humble poet dutifully hunched over a desk in the corner crafting your some-day important earth-shattering poems, that some poets sometimes like to trash talk you, call you a capitalist, usurer, careerist, fraud, whatever. Poetry is a religion for the people who do this. They are welcome to it. I am a third or fourth generation atheist, and I have no interest in magical or ritualized thinking about anything, least of all poetry.

I admire many of the people who have chimed in against poetry contests. But no more or less so than I admire Noah. Or anyone, for that matter, who might submit their work to the contest he announced.

After all, my grandfather, who I loved very dearly, was a contest-submitter. Indeed: a contest winner! And his poem actually made me cry when he recited it to me, which is more than I can say for almost everything currently in print, however it might have wound up there.

This is not all to say that you are wrong to feel how you do about contests. That's your business and you are of course as qualified as anyone else to think about such things. Just that, though I appreciate the call-out, I thought I should be open about the situation of having written that poetry.com poem and what my own honest feelings about contests are. To me, they are, like those words "submission" and "acceptance," part of the landscape, and do define us to some extent. Just like everything else.

Gary

_____ The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

↑ Index

299. J. Michael Mollohan

Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Sun 25 Jul 2010

I've often said that the USofA is more religious and less spiritual than any other country. In the part of the country I live (i.e., Bible Beltish) there seems to be a church on every corner. Truly, it's not that bad, but it's a lot less far off the mark than you might imagine. The town I'm from now has a population of around 900 souls. There are AT LEAST 10 churches. In the city where I now live there are literally hundreds of churches for a population barely above 50,000. I've noticed that in small cities where there are a lot of churches, the religious life tends to be cliquish. Additionally, other aspects of life are equally fragmented and closed to outsiders, often aligned along the lines of where people go to church. Since I belong to no church and profess Taoism, or on occasion, Zen Buddhism, I don't fall into any of the "Christian" or "Jewish" or "Muslum" cliques. I most closely resemble the Unitarian or Unity groups, but even still since I don't "belong" I'm always not quite on the inside. I'm outside looking in through stained glass windows.

Someone should do a study. I don't have the discipline.

----- Original Message -----
From: "carol dorf" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, July 23, 2010 11:26 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

> I'm not sure about this idea of America and spirituality -- we certainly are > far more religious (i.e. participating in traditional religion) than people
> in other developed countries; though perhaps our religiosity interferes with > the development of other spiritual perspectives.
>
> On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 6:15 AM, Adam Katz <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> In regard to Fieled's posting, below: In Joyce's letters to Grant Richards, > when he's trying to get Dubliners published and fighting against the > censorship of certain common though blasphemous words, he says something > like "I seriously believe you will retard the course of Irish civilization
> by preventing them from having a look at itself in my nicely polished > looking glass." Something like that.
> a
>
> I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti>>
> David,

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's
>> enti>> re oeuvre, but the intermingling of spirituality & materialism is >> fascin>> ating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari
as well.

>> Thi>> nk of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being
>>
gut>> tered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed to;
>> our>>
spirits are bound to different levels of materialism.

>> Th>> e spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions;
>>
>> realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit,"
>> lik>> e the
Whitmanic.
But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't >> work>> . What about a new spirituality
that holds up a mirror and catches the
>> d>> arkness of our current fetishism?
>>
>> guidelines
>>
>

↑ Index

300. Cara Benson
Leslie Scalapino tribute
Sun 25 Jul 2010

LESLIE SCALAPINO

We honorÂ her passing and celebrate her not

LESLIE SCALAPINO

We honorÂ her passing and celebrate her not ever passing. Â "In making a connection, I'm not proposing that one's language, sounds, conceptual shapes alter events outside. Rather, writing can note that one's/their sounds and conceptual shapes are eventsÂ -- that are also along with events in the outside. A poem may place these together. As such one's conceptions alter oneself and being, and alter their and one being outside. The individual (and any individual instance) occurs as reading. As: while, alongside, and being (reading is an act)."Â Â Â -- LS, "Eco-logic in Writing" inÂ EcoLanguage Reader (Brenda Iijima, ed) Â â€œâ€¦ â€˜horizontalâ€™ is a way of seeing everything flowing, existing at different times in parallel simultaneous spacesâ€“not permanent, but not ever passing either.â€ -LS in conversation w/Elizabeth Bryant, Dusie #8

Â Leslie Scalapino's writing placed inside/outsideÂ events together with/in spacetime. Reading Leslie Scalapino is/as an altering act/event. We honorÂ her passing and celebrate her not ever passing. We invite you to write alongside/simultaneously to/of/onÂ her work for a special issue of Delirious Hem, http://delirioushem.blogspot.com/.

We are especially interested in critical appreciations and analyses (in any style or format) of passages from Leslie Scalapino's work. The Barbara Guest Memory Bank, http://www.asu.edu/pipercwcenter/how2journal//bg_memorybank/bg_memory.html, edited by Lauren Shufran for the Summer 2007 issue of How2, might serve as a model, as might the Alice Notley Constellation (http://www.bbk.ac.uk/cprcevents/alicenotley.html) edited by Carol Watts. Poems, images, personal memorials, and short essays are also welcome.

Since 2006, Delirious Hem has been devoted to writing by and about experimental women poets. Topics have included features on Kundiman, Lucille Clifton, kari edwards, the Dusie kollektiv adventskalender, Gurlesque, and the "Numbers Trouble" controversy. Contributors have included Anne Boyer, Bernadette Mayer, Amy King, Alison Roh Park, Evie Shockley, Lee Ann Brown, Hoa Nguyen, Gloria Anzaldua, Jennifer Bartlett, Vanessa Place, Tara Betts, T.A. Noonan, Sharon Mesmer, Naomi Shihab Nye, Sarah Vap, Rachel Levitsky, Mairead Byrne, Marcella Durand, Myung Mi Kim, and many others.

Deadline: Aug 1

Very best,

Cara Benson (cbenson67Â [at] yahooÂ [dot] com)
Elizabeth Bryant (miss.elizabeth.bryant [at] gmail [dot] com)
Cathy WagnerÂ (cathwagner [at] gmail [dot] com)
Â
Â Â
Â
Â
_____Â
http://www.necessetics.comÂ {homepage}Â
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.htmlÂ {journal}

↑ Index

301. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Sun 25 Jul 2010

Jason,

Thank you for your very interesting blog entry. I have a few questions relating to it.

a) You mention "Wittgenstein's thoroughgoing linguistic mysticism that remained present in all of his works from the Tractatus Logic-Philosophicus onward." Could you elaborate on this more? While I agree with you that the inner logic of Wittgenstein's own thought led him to a wall against which beat (fly in a box), I am not sure how he transcended it. In fact, he himself would have objected to any idea of transcendence? His followers definitely rejected any hint or use of the concept of mysticism while applying his thought on language games to poetics. Isn't "mysticism" a dirty word among poets or poetry thinkers who refer to Wittgenstein most?

b) I am glad you point to the importance of Emerson and transcendentalism in American poetry (and 19th century prose; but in your list of poets sustaining the "spiritual" tradition you ignore a crucial figure, Jack Spicer.

c) One generally assumes the "irrelevance" of Romanticism, at least English Romanticism (German Romanticism is very different) to our present pursuit. What about the most recent, extremely interesting Millennium Anthology which attempts to re-cast Romanticism in a new light, as a precursor to modernism. Do you buy that? I think the 19th century German Romanticism (a figure like Novalis as much as Blake) has a lot to say to us in a pursuit of the metaphysical /spiritual in poetry.

d) "It's there in Robert Grenier's famous written proclamation "I hate speech" as well as in the opposite and too often unanalyzed Deconstructionist skepticism towards writing. As such both in the Language poets and the late post-structuralism, there is already present a fair amount of suspicion of the materiality of language..."

This would be true if you really consider Robert Grenier a language poet; to me, the very opposite is true. Grenier's statement is much nearer to the Turkish poet Orhan Veli's statement: "We wish it were possible to dump even language itself." (Eda Anthology). As you say, believing in the immateriality of language, he uses visual and constructive/serial means to show it. I do not think most language school poets would admit to any "suspicion of the materiality of language..." though you are trying to get them to your side.

e) "To my way of thinking, poetry at its best serves as a sort of javelin to be launched at the veil of language beyond which lies the mystical which can only be indicated or pointed to but not directly talked about. Poetry should always be pushing at the limits of language..."

Wait until The Spiritual Life of Replicants comes out by Talisman Books this fall. SL is part VI of a longer poem The Structure of Escape: .A Comic Essay On Poetry.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 2:13 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi Adam,
> This essay really got me thinking, but as I wrote a response I realized I had too much to say to want to spill the whole thing onto the list, so I wrote it up as a blog post here:
>
> http://www.wetasphalt.com/content/mind-body-spirit-whatever-new-poetics-metaphysical
>
> I'd very much like to here what you (or anybody else for that matter) think.
>
> Regards,
> JF Quackenbush
> [redacted]
>
> On Jul 18, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Adam Fieled wrote:
>
> This is an essay of mine newly published in Word for Word, "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry":
>
> http://www.wordforword.info/vol17/Fieled.htm
>
> Many thanks to Jonathan Minton.
>
> Enjoy.
>
> Adam

↑ Index

302. Jason Quackenbush
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Sun 25 Jul 2010

isn't that inevitable though given the fact that we are both a nation of immigrants as well as a nation where non-conformists played a significant role in how religion and public life intermingled. I genuinely dislike the religious/spiritual dichotomy because it smacks of new age theological nonsense that I have very little patience for, but if the discussion is going to be had in those terms, I think the opposite is true. People are very much involved in their religious lives and religious questions in a very loose and impermanent way in the united states. to my way of thinking, that's more about being spiritual than it is about being religious.

but then, it's also strange that for a christian nation like we are, most americans are completely unfamiliar with christian theology of any kind, and as a result much of the theology that gets bandied about is the most ignorant and stupid available. I have no problem with this except that I think it contributes to a strange orientalism that in fact looks a lot more like christian mysticism than it does the vedic or chinese ideas that it is purporting to be. which is not to say that I don't think there's a lot of value in eastern wisdom. i just don't understand the preference for one set of faith traditions over another when fundamentally there doesn't seem to be that much of a difference in the epistemological criteria that are being applied.

On Jul 25, 2010, at 8:54 AM, J. Michael Mollohan wrote:

> I've often said that the USofA is more religious and less spiritual than any other country. In the part of the country I live (i.e., Bible Beltish) there seems to be a church on every corner. Truly, it's not that bad, but it's a lot less far off the mark than you might imagine. The town I'm from now has a population of around 900 souls. There are AT LEAST 10 churches. In the city where I now live there are literally hundreds of churches for a population barely above 50,000. I've noticed that in small cities where there are a lot of churches, the religious life tends to be cliquish. Additionally, other aspects of life are equally fragmented and closed to outsiders, often aligned along the lines of where people go to church. Since I belong to no church and profess Taoism, or on occasion, Zen Buddhism, I don't fall into any of the "Christian" or "Jewish" or "Muslum" cliques. I most closely resemble the Unitarian or Unity groups, but even still since I don't "belong" I'm always not quite on the inside. I'm outside looking in through stained glass windows.
>
> Someone should do a study. I don't have the discipline.
>
> ----- Original Message ----- From: "carol dorf" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Friday, July 23, 2010 11:26 PM
> Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
>
> I'm not sure about this idea of America and spirituality -- we certainly are > far more religious (i.e. participating in traditional religion)

> than people
> in other developed countries; though perhaps our religiosity > interferes with
> the development of other spiritual perspectives.
>
> On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 6:15 AM, Adam Katz > <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> In regard to Fieled's posting, below: In Joyce's letters to Grant > Richards,
> when he's trying to get Dubliners published and fighting against the > censorship of certain common though blasphemous words, he says
> something > like "I seriously believe you will retard the course of Irish > civilization
> by preventing them from having a look at itself in my nicely > polished
> looking glass." Something like that.
> a
>
> I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti>>>
> David,

I'll admit I haven't read >>> Marx's
>>> enti>>> re oeuvre, but the intermingling of spirituality & materialism is >>> fascin>>> ating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari
as >>> well.

>>> Thi>>> nk of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being
>>>
gut>>> tered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're >>> accustomed to;
>>> our>>> spirits are bound to different levels of >>> materialism.

>>> Th>>> e spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical >>> dimensions;
>>>
>>> realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and

>>> "spirit,"
>>> lik>>> e the
Whitmanic.
But rehashing the Whitmanic >>> doesn't >>> work>>> . What about a new spirituality that holds up a mirror and >>> catches the
>>> d>>> arkness of our current fetishism?
>>>
>>> guidelines
>>>
>>
>

↑ Index

303. Little Red Leaves
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sun 25 Jul 2010

Dear Rich,

First, the Allen Fisher piece in the new DTC is amazing... Is there more out there from this project? & I like your history a few notes back--much appreciated.

Just a rejoinder or two--the folks in this thread are not the voice of capital, or not trying to be, many in fact trying not to be. I'd also say at this point that universities have fleeced more unsuspecting citizens than poetry contests, hands down--I really don't think there's a case there. & I work for one. I definitely think there's more work to do on that front & that contests might just be a symptom. But is it really so simple? Somehow giving your money to lulu.com is more ethical than running a contest? Or paying a web hosting service? (I do these, too.) I like your call to unflinching action (or am seduced by it, when it's action) but if it's just unflinching rhetoric we need, then fuck it. It's a sermon. (I've been seduced by those, too. Am still, in all honesty.)

I like your thing about how capital advances by denying absolute statements. Yep, agreed (see the contemporary university). Plenty of models, too, (old & new, including sermons) where capital advances by way of the absolute. But I don't think you're a capitalist--didn't & wouldn't call your absolute statement fascist--we can leave this behavior to the pundits (who get rich off it). I just think we could do some work to pry apart the demand for legitimacy from these other demands, since legitimacy works too well as a kind of coin, even in the absence of cashflow.

...Institutions as pot dealers & contests as rock slingers? Sheesh, analogies might be something to avoid here. I honestly thought it was a bad cut-and-paste! It's funny, but it's just wrong. We're not doing god's work in the university & the funds aren't just not clean, much of the product isn't the healthy alternative (it's debt, in part, & it's massive). Or we're doing the bank's work as much as anyone else's. & yet many of us still feel compelled to live/work here--to talk here (here)--would it not be better to address this without indulging in a dressing down of each other (or dressing up of ourselves) according to whose wire rims are the least Palin-esque, whose window the least Overton?

Again, the thing that prompted me to chime in here was the thought that we could/should be involved in measuring the relevance of our colleagues' press work--that the use of contests/reading fees for funding could possibly serve as a litmus test in that regard--that we should walk away from those colleagues' press work who participate in these things as irrelevant. Too much debris in that path. It's not a conservative position to want to avoid lending a hand in piling it up.

More shortly--C

On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 10:40 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:

> GARY &c:
>
> thanks for this clarification. like you, i too believe everyone's aright.
> but, man, if youse catch me participating in hypersketchy practices that i > might not see as sketchy -- if you see a blindspot that i somehow missed, > then call it friendo. i'll prolly be grateful.
>
> re contests & funding: saying institutional sources of funding are no less > compromised than those funds pulled in from contest reading fees is like > saying:
> man, the guy next door sells weed so don't climb on that one over there for
> peddling
> smack & crack. the logic is stunningly conservative -- like the smooth way
> around to
> saying: don't make waves coz don't nobody care &,
> besides, poet worker bees never minded being exploited by contests in > the first place (wot is it Emma Goldman sz, those treated most poorly by > a nation -- or, in this case, any other institution or practice -- are
> it's > fiercest defenders? i mean, just because we got rodents in the living room
> don't mean we shld ignore the rats in the kitchen or the mites in the > flour. (vermin = sketchy practices not people.)

hugs ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sat, 7/24/10, Gary Sullivan <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, July 24, 2010, 10:51 AM

Dear Richard Owens,

I started writing poetry when I was in grammar school, I don't remember what age exactly.

I had read Lewis Carroll's Hunting of the Snark, which had scared the holy living crap out of me.

I was so terrified, I didn't know what to do with myself. So I sat down and wrote a poem, trying to write something even more terrifying than Hunting of the Snark.

I am not sure what my motivations were. I'm sure a good child psychologist would have a theory or two.

This has been, more or less, my relationship to writing for the last 40 years or so.

I'm not entirely unsympathetic to what you're saying. A piece I wrote in the 90s and published in How To Proceed in the Arts, "First Draft Imaginary Writer Survey," ends with the questions:

"Why do we call it 'submission'? What are we collectively 'accepting'? What do we write about when we write about writing?"

That said, I didn't post a bad poem to poetry.com to prove that such contests are bad, as it appears Catherine, who beat me to the punch, did.

Nor to prove that people who know nothing about poetry can't judge it, as it appears Jennifer might believe. (I couldn't agree less with that sentiment.)

I certainly did not do it to show up anyone's "usurious" practices. I do not like that word nor how it has been used to target a certain population.

I did it because I was pissed off about what had happened to my grandfather. Less so his having been duped by poetry.com--I had mixed feelings about that, as it had actually given him some mild pleasure while he was on his deathbed. He was in great pain and dying, after all. As consolation, poetry.com made him feel as though he was a "real" poet. (Whatever that is.) He recited his winning poem to me over the phone from memory while he was in the hospital.

I was really pissed off because he had died, coughing up blood in a hospital with my grandmother at his side.

I don't care whether or not poetry magazines or presses or universities or individuals hold contests and charge entry fees. I have never entered one, not one with a fee. But not because I am morally opposed to them. The simple truth is that I am a cheapskate. If I felt more than 75% sure that my manuscript stood a chance, I might pay the money and send it.

I like Noah Eli Gordon. I met him once in Denver. He was sweet and funny and talked a lot about poetry. Which he clearly loves. More than I do, certainly. I have no interest in poetry beyond that which directly feeds, inspires, terrifies, surprises me. That which engages me. That's probably true for him, too, though I would imagine that he's engaged in far more being written today than I am.

I have no opinion one way or the other about any contest that he might be promoting or managing or dreaming up or whathaveyou. That's his business.

I do know that, when you are spotted doing anything beyond appearing to be a humble poet dutifully hunched over a desk in the corner crafting your some-day important earth-shattering poems, that some poets sometimes like to trash talk you, call you a capitalist, usurer, careerist, fraud, whatever. Poetry is a religion for the people who do this. They are welcome to it. I am a third or fourth generation atheist, and I have no interest in magical or ritualized thinking about anything, least of all poetry.

I admire many of the people who have chimed in against poetry contests. But no more or less so than I admire Noah. Or anyone, for that matter, who might submit their work to the contest he announced.

After all, my grandfather, who I loved very dearly, was a contest-submitter. Indeed: a contest winner! And his poem actually made me cry when he recited it to me, which is more than I can say for almost > everything currently in print, however it might have wound up there.

>
> This is not all to say that you are wrong to feel how you do about contests. That's your business and you are of course as qualified as anyone else to think about such things. Just that, though I appreciate the call-out, I thought I should be open about the situation of having written that poetry.com poem and what my own honest feelings about contests are. To me, they are, like those words "submission" and "acceptance," part of the landscape, and do define us to some extent. Just like everything else.
>
> Gary
>
> _____
> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
>
> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

304. Roy Exley
Re: "The Decay of Poetry in Spirituality"
Sun 25 Jul 2010

Michael, I suggest you read 'Sufism and Taoism: A Comparative Study of Philosophical Concepts' by Toshihiko Izutsu, University of California Press, Berkeley, 1984, or 'Sufi Literature and the Journey to Immortality' by A.E. I. Falconar, Motilal Banarsidass, Patna, India, 1991. Sufism, the mystical stream of Islam, has much in common with Zen and Taoism and proves, likewise that spirituality is far more important than 'religion', and goes to prove that much contemporary poetry would be instantly melted down beyond its constituent parts by the white hot heat at the heart of spirituality - read Ibn Al'Arabi or Jalaluddin Rumi to begin to get a sense of that heat. There are Christian mystics as well, of course, such as Julian of Norwich, Thomas Traherne, Hildegard of Bingen or the Flemish mystic Jan van Ruysbroek, many riches outside the confines of the 'established' churches. Once you start, you won't stop, discipline or not. Enjoy the research, take care.

On 25/7/10 16:54, "J. Michael Mollohan" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I've often said that the USofA is more religious and less spiritual than any other country. In the part of the country I live (i.e., Bible Beltish) there seems to be a church on every corner. Truly, it's not that bad, but it's a lot less far off the mark than you might imagine. The town I'm from now has a population of around 900 souls. There are AT LEAST 10 churches. In the city where I now live there are literally hundreds of churches for a population barely above 50,000. I've noticed that in small cities where there are a lot of churches, the religious life tends to be cliquish. Additionally, other aspects of life are equally fragmented and closed to outsiders, often aligned along the lines of where people go to church. Since I belong to no church and profess Taoism, or on occasion, Zen Buddhism, I don't fall into any of the "Christian" or "Jewish" or "Muslum" cliques. I most closely resemble the Unitarian or Unity groups, but even still since I don't "belong" I'm always not quite on the inside. I'm outside looking in through stained glass windows.
>
> Someone should do a study. I don't have the discipline.
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: "carol dorf" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Friday, July 23, 2010 11:26 PM
> Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
>
> I'm not sure about this idea of America and spirituality -- we certainly are > far more religious (i.e. participating in traditional religion) than people
> in other developed countries; though perhaps our religiosity interferes with
> the development of other spiritual perspectives.
>
> On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 6:15 AM, Adam Katz <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> In regard to Fieled's posting, below: In Joyce's letters to Grant Richards,
> when he's trying to get Dubliners published and fighting against the censorship of certain common though blasphemous words, he says something like "I seriously believe you will retard the course of Irish civilization
> by preventing them from having a look at itself in my nicely polished looking glass." Something like that.

> a
>
> I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti>>>
> David,

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's
>>> enti>>> re oeuvre, but the intermingling of spirituality & materialism is >>> fascin>>> ating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari
as well.

>>> Thi>>> nk of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being
>>>
gut>>> tered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed to;
>>> our>>>
spirits are bound to different levels of materialism.

>>> Th>>> e spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions;
>>>
>>> realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit,"
>>> lik>>> e the
Whitmanic.

But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't >>> work>>> . What about a new spirituality
that holds up a mirror and catches the
>>> d>>> arkness of our current fetishism?
>>>
>>> guidelines
>>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

305. Jason Quackenbush
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Sun 25 Jul 2010

Hi Murat,
Excellent feedback, thanks!

On the first point, it's notable I think that wittgenstein never denied that there might be a beetle in the box, but just that there was a meaningful way to talk about it. And yet he's clearly sympathetic to impulses in that regard. In his lecture on ethics, while denying that there can be "the ultimate good" as a meaningful object of discourse, he also says that he understands the impulse to try to talk about it nevertheless and he would never suggest that anyone should not try to talk about it because the attempt is in itself valuable. There are further two remarks that I think are telling. First there's the comment that there are two books in the Tractatus, first everything he wrote, and second everything he didn't write (because he couldn't), and of the two the latter is far more important. Second the section from the tractatus which I've never found him repudiating that I think speaks to this is 6.4 (all propositions are of equal value) and the comments to it. I'll quote here at length:

"6.41 The sense of the world must lie outside the world. In the world everything is as it is and happens as it does happen. In it there is no value -- and if there were, it would be of no value.

If there is a value which is of value, it must lie outside all happening and being-so. For all happening and being-so is accidental. What makes it non-accidental cannot lie in the world, for otherwise this would again be accidental.

It must lie outside the world.

6.42 Hence also there can be no ethical propositions.

Propositions cannot express anything higher.

6.43 If good or bad willing changes the world, it can only change the limits of the world, not the facts; not the things that can be expressed in language.

In brief, the world must thereby become quite another, it must so to speak wax or wane as a whole.

The world of the happy is quite another than that of the unhappy.

6.44 Not how the world is, is the mystical, but that it is.

6.45 The contemplation of the world sub specie aeterni is its contemplation as a limited whole.

The feeling that the world is a limited whole is the mystical feeling."

Those are the sort of remarks, which he continually made whenever he returned to notions of value and judgement, that I mean when I refer to Wittgenstein's mysticism. One of the things that I think a large number of casual wittgenstein readers misunderstand is the idea that "the limits of the language form the limits of my world" is not a expression of a sort of nominalism, that is, it's not a statement about the world, it's a statement about language. the huge aspect of reality about which we are incapable of having meaningful discourse because we can't say anything meaningful about it, that for Wittgenstein is the most important part, and in that part of human life lies all of the traditional notions of occultism, spirituality, faith, and religion.

B RE: Spicer. He does, I think, form a touchstone. as does

C. I'm going to plead ignorance on this point because I haven't read the anthology yet, but if I understand the idea then I think I might agree. I tend to think of modernism as having more tension present in it tho at least in its attitudes, and I also think it starts much earlier, given my opinion that not a lot of people agree with me about that Moby Dick is the first postmodern novel and therefore the modernist postmodernist tension dates to the nineteenth century at least. As for the german romantics, i'm less well versded. I have been reading Goethe lately and it's very much resonating with me in a way that I haven't fully integrated in my thinking yet, but I think i can see what you're getting at there.

D. You're right that Grenier is a special case, and I'll admit i was maybe being a little propagandistic in my cooption of Language poetry. I have a hard time seeing them all as a unified group in any case, but they're a little too important to me personally to allow for the outright materialism that I felt Adam painted them with in his piece, although I think he's largely right. The appeal to Grenier, I will confess, could be just some sleight of hand to try to rescue a larger movement from a specific criticism, and I think it's fair to call me on that. That said, I don't much care if any of the big Language folks agree that their work is suspicious of the materiality of language, i think i see it there anyway as a sort of irony that has to counterbalance the extreme focus on the textuality of writing. To me, reading something like the Chinese Notebook, for example, I feel like there's a certain amount of whistling at the dark that's going on, at least as it strikes me.

E. I am very much looking forward to it!

Regards,
Jason

On Jul 25, 2010, at 10:54 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

> Jason,
>
> Thank you for your very interesting blog entry. I have a few questions relating to it.
>
> a) You mention "Wittgenstein's thoroughgoing linguistic mysticism that remained present in all of his works from the Tractatus Logic-Philosophicus > onward." Could you elaborate on this more? While I agree with you that the inner logic of Wittgenstein's own thought led him to a wall against which beat (fly in a box), I am not sure how he transcended it. In fact, he himself would have objected to any idea of transcendence? His followers definitely rejected any hint or use of the concept of mysticism while applying his thought on language games to poetics. Isn't "mysticism" a dirty word among poets or poetry thinkers who refer to Wittgenstein most?

b) I am glad you point to the importance of Emerson and transcendentalism in American poetry (and 19th century prose; but in your list of poets sustaining the "spiritual" tradition you ignore a crucial figure, Jack Spicer.

*c) One generally assumes the "irrelevance" of Romanticism, at least English Romanticism (German Romanticism is very different) to our present pursuit.
What about the most recent, extremely interesting Millennium Anthology which attempts to re-cast Romanticism in a new light, as a precursor to modernism.
Do you buy that? I think the 19th century German Romanticism (a figure like Novalis as much as Blake) has a lot to say to us in a pursuit of the metaphysical /spiritual in poetry.*

d) "It's there in Robert Grenier's famous written proclamation "I hate speech" as well as in the opposite and too often unanalyzed Deconstructionist skepticism towards writing. As such both in the Language poets and the late post-structuralism, there is already present a fair amount of suspicion of the materiality of language..."

*This would be true if you really consider Robert Grenier a language poet; to me, the very opposite is true. Grenier's statement is much nearer to the Turkish poet Orhan Veli's statement: "We wish it were possible to dump even language itself." (Eda Anthology). As you say, believing in the immateriality of language, he uses visual and constructive/serial means to show it. I do not think most language school poets would admit to any "suspicion of the materiality of language..." though you are trying* to get them to your side.

e) "To my way of thinking, poetry at its best serves as a sort of javelin to be launched at the veil of language beyond which lies the mystical which can only be indicated or pointed to but not directly talked about. Poetry should always be pushing at the limits of language..."

*Wait until The Spiritual Life of Replicants comes out by Talisman Books*
*this fall. SL is part VI of a longer poem The Structure of Escape: .A* Comic Essay On Poetry.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 2:13 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

Hi Adam,
This essay really got me thinking, but as I wrote a response I realized I had too much to say to want to spill the whole thing onto the list, so I wrote it up as a blog post here:

http://www.wetasphalt.com/content/mind-body-spirit-whatever-new-poetics-metaphysical

I'd very much like to here what you (or anybody else for that matter) think.

Regards,
JF Quackenbush
[redacted]

On Jul 18, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Adam Fieled wrote:

This is an essay of mine newly published in Word for Word, "The Decay of > Spirituality in Poetry":

>
> http://www.wordforword.info/vol17/Fieled.htm
>
> Many thanks to Jonathan Minton.
>
> Enjoy.
>
> Adam
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

306. David A. Kirschenbaum
Small Press Needed for Oct. 26 in Boog NYC Series
Sun 25 Jul 2010

Greetings,

I'm looking for a small press Boog City's never hosted before for our "d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press" series here in nyc to fill our final open slot this fall for season eight (2010-2011). The event will be held on Tues. Oct. 26, 2010 at 6:00 p.m.

Below this note is our invite letter, which spells everything out.

Please backchannel any inquiries or suggestions, be they for your own or other presses.

Thanks,
David

[redacted]
212-842-BOOG (2664)

Hi,

David Kirschenbaum here. I'm the editor and publisher of Boog City, a New York City-based small press and community newspaper now in its 19th year. I'd like to invite you to take part in season eight of our “d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press” series.

The series is held at Chelsea’s ACA Galleries (http:// acagalleries.com/), which is owned by the son-in-law and daughter of the poet Simon Perchik. It’s a nice space, and we fit 100 people, including a nine-piece jazz flash orchestra, in it for Chax Press’s event, with plenty of room to spare. The gallery provides wine and other beverages, and cheese and crackers and hummus and chips.

Once a month I have a different non-NYC press host and feature three or more of their authors to read (we’ve had as many as 10 for one press and usually have 3-6) for 60 minutes total. We also have a musical act perform two 15-20 minute sets. If the visiting press is able to book the musical act that’s preferred, so it’s truly their night, if not I can book one that I think will work well with the night. (Also, once a year we play host to our NYC brethren.)

As of this writing, Season 8, our 2010-2011 season will feature:

Coconut Books
1913 Press
No Press
No Tell Books
Satellite Telephone
Saturnalia Books

The series is held on the last Tuesday of each month (except December) at 6:00 p.m. The following date is available:

2010

Tues. Oct. 26

We started the series in August 2003. In our first seven seasons we’ve hosted (or are about to host):

(locations are at the time of the event)

Non-NYC levy lives presses, 2003 to present a+bend press (Davis, Calif.), Jill Stengel, ed.

above/ground press (Ottawa, Canada), Rob McLennan, ed.
Aerial Magazine/Edge Books (Washington, D.C.), Rod Smith, ed.
Ahadada Books (Burlington, Canada), Jesse Glass and Daniel Sendecki, eds.
Ahsahta Press (Boise, Idaho), Janet Holmes, ed.
Alice James Books (Farmington, Maine), Peter Waldor, board president
Ambit/Furniture Press (Baltimore), Christophe Casamassima, ed.
Anchorite Editions (Albany, N.Y.), Chris Rizzo, ed.
Antennae (Chicago and Berlin), Jesse Seldess, ed.

Atelos Publishing Project (Berkeley, Calif.), Lyn Hejinian and Travis Ortiz, eds.
Atticus Finch Chapbooks (Seattle), Michael Cross, ed.
Big Game Books (Washington, D.C.), Maureen Thorson, ed.
Bird Dog (Seattle), Sarah Mangold, ed.
BlazeVOX Books (Kenmore, N.Y.), Geoffrey Gatza, ed.
BookThug (Toronto, Canada), Jay Millar, ed.
Braincase Press (Northampton, Mass.), Noah Eli Gordon.
Brave Men Press (Northampton, Mass.), E. B. Goodale, proprietor/art director and Brian Foley, poetry editor
Burning Deck Press (Providence, R.I.), 45th anniversary party, Rosmarie and Keith Waldrop, eds.
The Canary (Kemah, Texas), Joshua Edwards, Anthony Robinson, and Nick Twemlow, eds.
Cannibal Books (Fayetteville, Ark.), Matt Henriksen, ed.
Carve (Cambridge, Mass.), Aaron Tieger, ed.
Chax Press (Tucson, Ariz.), 20th anniversary party, Charles Alexander, ed.
Combo (Providence, R.I.), Michael Magee, ed.
Conundrum (Chicago), Kerri Sonnenberg, ed.
Corollary Press (Philadelphia), Juliette Lee, ed.
Critical Documents/Plantarchy (Oxford, Ohio), Justin Katko, ed.
Cy Press (Cincinnati), Dana Ward, ed.
Dos Press (Maxwell, Texas), C.J. Martin and Julia Drescher, eds.
Ducky (Philadelphia), Scott Edward Anderson, Dennis DiClaudio, Tom Hartman, and Jason Toogood, eds.
Duration Press (San Rafael, Calif.), Jerrold Shiroma, ed.
Dusie Press (Switzerland), Susana Gardner, ed.
Ecopoetics (Lewiston, Maine), Jonathan Skinner, ed.
Effing Press (Austin, Texas), Scott Pierce, ed.
Eleven Eleven (San Francisco), Hugh Behm-Steinberg, faculty ed.
Fewer & Further Press (Wendell, Mass.), Jess Mynes, ed.
Firewheel Editions/Sentence, a magazine (Danbury, Conn.), Brian Clements, ed.
Forklift, Ohio (Cincinnati), Matt Hart, editor-in-chief Habenicht Press (San Francisco), David Hadbawnik, ed.
House Press (Chicago, Buffalo, New York City), Eric Gelsinger, founder.
Instance Press (Boulder, Colo.; New York City; Oakland, Calif.), Stacy Szymaszek, co-ed.
Interbirth Books (Dallas), Micah Robbins, ed.

Ixnay Press (Philadelphia), Chris and Jenn McCreary, eds.
Katalanché Press (Cambridge, Mass.), Michael Carr and Dorothea Lasky, eds.
Kelsey Street Press (Berkeley, Calif.), 30th anniversary party, Patricia Dienstfrey and Rena Rosenwasser, eds.
Kenning Editions (Berkeley, Calif.), Patrick Durgin, ed.
Lana Turner: A Journal of Poetry and Opinion (Santa Monica, Calif.), Calvin Bedient and David Lau, eds.
Meritage Press (San Francisco/St. Helena, Calif.), Eileen Tabios, ed.
Minor/American (Durham, N.C.), Elise Ficarra and Kathryn Pringle, eds.
Mooncalf Press (Philadelphia), CAConrad, ed.
Narrow House Recordings (Gwyn Oak, Md.), Justin Sirois, ed.
New American Writing (Mill Valley, Calif.),
Maxine Chernoff and Paul Hoover, eds.,
O Books (Oakland, Calif.), Leslie Scalapino, ed.
One Less Magazine (Williamsburg, Mass.),
Nikki Widner and David Gardner, eds.
Outside Voices (Brooklyn, N.Y.), Jessica Smith, ed.
The Owl Press (Woodacre, Calif.), Albert Flynn DeSilver, ed.
P-QUEUE (Buffalo, N.Y.), Andre Rippeon, ed.
Palm Press (Long Beach, Calif.), Jane Sprague, ed.
Paper Kite Press (Kingston, Penn.),
Jennifer Hill-Kaucher and Dan Waber, eds.
Pavement Saw Press (Columbus, Ohio), David Baratier, ed.
Peaches and Bats (Portland, Ore.), Sam Lohmann, founder and editor
The Poker (Cambridge, Mass.), Dan Bouchard, ed.
Punch Press/damn the caesars (Buffalo, N.Y.), Richard Owens, ed.
Rope-A-Dope Press (South Boston), Robert daVies and Mary Walker Graham, publishers/editors Skanky Possum (Austin, Texas), Hoa Nguyen and Dale Smith, eds.
subpress collective, Greg Fuchs, co-ed.
Talisman House Press (Jersey City, N.J.), Edward Foster, ed.
Talonbooks (Vancouver, Canada).
The Tangent (Walla Walla, Wash.), Kaia Sand and Jules Boykoff, eds.
3rd Bed (Lincoln, R.I.), Vincent Standley, ed.
Tougher Disguises (Oakland, Calif.), James Meetze, ed.
Tripwire (San Francisco), David Buuck, ed.
The Wandering Hermit Review (Buffalo, N.Y.), Steve Potter, ed.
Wave Books (Seattle), Joshua Beckman, ed.

NYC levy lives presses, 2003 to present

A Rest Press, Ryan Murphy and Patrick Masterson, eds.
Beet/Pink Pages, Joe Maynard, ed.
Belladonna Books, Erica Kaufman and Rachel Levitsky, eds.
Cuneiform Press, Kyle Schlesinger, ed.
Cy Gist Press, Mark Lamoureux, ed.
Detour Press, Gary Sullivan, ed.
Explosive magazine/Spectacular Books, Katy Lederer, ed.
Farfalla Press, Gary Parrish, ed.
Fence, Charles Valle, co-ed, and Max Winter, poetry ed.
Flying Guillotine Press, Sommer Browning and Tony Mancus, eds.
Fungo Monographs, Ryan Murphy ed.
Futurepoem books, Dan Machlin, ed.
Granary Press, Steve Clay, ed.
Hanging Loose Press, Bob Hershon, ed.
The Hat, Jordan Davis, co-ed.
Kitchen Press, editor Justin Marks, ed.
Litmus Press/Aufgabe, E. Tracy Grinnell, ed.
Lungfull, Brendan Lorber, ed.
Mal-o-mar Editions, Ariana Reines, ed.
Mermaid Tenement Press, Laura Hinton, ed.
Open 24 Hours, John Coletti and Greg Fuchs, ed.
Pompom, Allison Cobb, Jennifer Coleman, Ethan Fugate, and Susan Landers, eds.
Portable Press at YoYo Labs, Brenda Iijima, ed.
Sona Books, Jill Magi, ed.
Stay Free! magazine, Carrie McLaren, ed.
Tender Buttons, Lee Ann Brown, ed.
The North Beach Yacht Club, Ryan Murphy, ed.
:::the press gang:::, cristiana baik and sara wintz, eds.
3 Sad Tigers Press, Mariana Ruiz Firmat, ed.
Ugly Duckling Presse, Anna Moschovakis and Matvei Yankelevich, collective members.
United Artists, Lewis Warsh, ed.
Urban Folk zine, Dave Cuomo, ed.
X-ing Books, Amy Mees and Mark Wagner, eds.

Hope this finds you well.

as ever,
David

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City

330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

307. Charlie Rossiter

Merwin Interview on poetrypoetry.com

Sun 25 Jul 2010

Poets & Poetry Lovers,

We have just posted an interview with W.S. Merwin on www.poetrypoetry.com. The interview took place at the Dodge Festival some years ago. His laureate appointment prompted me to rummage through my poetic archives and find the tape.

In the interview, Merwin talks about poetry coming from the "right place," comments on his teacher Richard Blackburn, tells a bit about his early influence by Milton, and offers advice for those who would better appreciate poetry. He is such a good interviewee I barely needed to talk at all, asking 5-6 questions in entire the 9-minute interview.

Please pass this on to interested others and if you are so inclined, browse the other features on poetrypoetry. We've been posting audio poetry since 2000 (don't believe the counter on the homepage, a technical glitch recently reset it.)

Yours in Peace & Poetry,

Charlie Rossiter

--
there's no point in poetry
if you withhold the truth
once you've come by it
Alden Nowlan
----
www.charlierossiter.com
my personal website

www.poetrypoetry.com
where you hear poems read by poets who wrote them

↑ Index

308. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Sun 25 Jul 2010

CHRIS:

man, in a lot ways i think our sense of the landscape is in alignment, but 2 things: 1. the DTC narrative a couple msgs back was aimed at a question rasied by Tyrone, who asked how DTC is funded and whether or not i (we) cld provide alternate models for subsidizing print (and digital) projects; 2. i do think that soliciting reading fees from poets is worse than _Paypalling_ cash to _Lulu_ (both of which are _wildly_ problematic), but i think this for a range of reasons i'm not sure can be adequately addressed here.

you're right to point out the distance between unflinching action & unflinching rhetoric -- and i think this extends to another difference: the distinction between tactical strategy (i.e. the call to refuse contests; and the gesture of publicly refusing them in real time) and analysis (i.e. the suggestion that contests are themselves symptomatic of deeper tendencies that are no less corrupt and more firmly entrenched and thus less visible, more permissible, etc). i agree with you (and with Tyrone) the whole way here -- and i don't think i've suggested anyone involved in this conversation functions as the handmaiden of capital (tho i think we all, in odd ways, are, myself included).

here i need to return to that longer msg i sent out re DTC, because there was an essential point i fear was missed: the question of pedagogy. many of us teach _in_ university systems &, as you say, far more of us have been stretched across the rack by universities than taken in by poetry contests. but here there's an incredible difference: again, universities, however corrupt (i'm thinking here of Cary Nelson's and Marc Bousquet's amazing investigations into the university industry; and of course the student loan scandal that was splayed open by mainstream media a couple years back), are deeply entrenched institutions that produce and reproduce forms of exploitation that are often difficult to name and difficult to resist -- & here the distance between praxis and analysis narrows, but at the same time the extent to which we can intervene is also limited (i mean, you can fight city hall, but can you fight city hall?). this to say, when we talk abt funding sources derived from institutions, we're talking abt, as i sd before, an incredibly complex matrix of relations that reside far beyond the immediate, the local, the ground. BUT (and this is the clearest point i want to make), when a _small_ press (a press _at_ the ground level; a press which _is not_ New Directions or City Lights or a major university press) introduces a contest which solicits reading fees from poets, the gesture is clearly not a good faith gesture but one that exploits the desire so many poets have simply to be read with care -- and it's precisely this which i find so incredibly saddening. and since we see these practices _at the ground level_ i do believe we are responsible for calling them into question (analysis) and, in this case, refusing them completely (tactic).

it's far more difficult to challenge power at an institutional level -- and to identify how power exerts itself through our own behaviors (viz. i meant it when i asked folks to point out my own blindspots) -- but when we identify destructive practices at the ground level we have a responsibility to name them, refuse them and (again, thanks Tyrone) offer other possibilities. in this particular case --- the case of contest culture -- we might just be treating a symptom that discloses a far broader, systemic crisis, but i think, at the very least, the gesture is essential. as ever, that distance between institutional power and local community (and i take _this_ list as an instantiation of the "local") is crucial here.

&, Chris, when you say contests are symptomatic of deeper tendencies, as i say, i agree & it's precisely here that the question of pedagogy is indispensable b/c i think the appeal to contests with reading fees as a funding model emerges out of a very particular view of what poetry is, what a "good" poem is and what a successful poet is -- and it's precisely this view of poetry, and cultural production in general, that has to be troubled, splayed open and radically reimagined. as Pierre pointed out a couple days back, when a poet asks "how do we get a foot in the door?", this question rests on a range of very troubling assumptions about what culture is, how it comes to us, how we respond to it and how we participate in its production.

hugs ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sun, 7/25/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Sunday, July 25, 2010, 2:54 PM

Dear Rich,

First, the Allen Fisher piece in the new DTC is amazing... Is there more out there from this project? & I like your history a few notes back--much appreciated.

Just a rejoinder or two--the folks in this thread are not the voice of capital, or not trying to be, many in fact trying not to be. I'd also say at this point that universities have fleeced more unsuspecting citizens than poetry contests, hands down--I really don't think there's a case there. & I work for one. I definitely think there's more work to do on that front & that contests might just be a symptom. But is it really so simple? Somehow giving your money to lulu.com is more ethical than running a contest? Or paying a web hosting service? (I do these, too.) I like your call to unflinching action (or am seduced by it, when it's action) but if it's just unflinching rhetoric we need, then fuck it. It's a sermon. (I've been seduced by those, too. Am still, in all honesty.)

I like your thing about how capital advances by denying absolute statements. Yep, agreed (see the contemporary university). Plenty of models, too, (old & new, including sermons) where capital advances by way of the absolute. But I don't think you're a capitalist--didn't & wouldn't call your absolute statement fascist--we can leave this behavior to the pundits (who get rich off it). I just think we could do some work to pry apart the demand for legitimacy from these other demands, since legitimacy works too well as a kind of coin, even in the absence of cashflow.

...Institutions as pot dealers & contests as rock slingers? Sheesh, analogies might be something to avoid here. I honestly thought it was a bad cut-and-paste! It's funny, but it's just wrong. We're not doing god's work in the university & the funds aren't just not clean, much of the product isn't the healthy alternative (it's debt, in part, & it's massive). Or we're doing the bank's work as much as anyone else's. & yet many of us still feel compelled to live/work here--to talk here (here)--would it not be better to address this without indulging in a dressing down of each other (or dressing up of ourselves) according to whose wire rims are the least Palin-esque, whose window the least Overton?

Again, the thing that prompted me to chime in here was the thought that we could/should be involved in measuring the relevance of our colleagues' press work--that the use of contests/reading fees for funding could possibly serve as a litmus test in that regard--that we should walk away from those colleagues' press work who participate in these things as irrelevant. Too much debris in that path. It's not a conservative position to want to avoid lending a hand in piling it up.

More shortly--C

On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 10:40 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:

GARY &c:

thanks for this clarification. like you, i too believe everyone's aright.
but, man, if youse catch me participating in hypersketchy practices that i might not see as sketchy -- if you see a blindspot that i somehow missed,
then call it friendo. i'll prolly be grateful.

re contests & funding: saying institutional sources of funding are no less compromised than those funds pulled in from contest reading fees is like saying:
man, the guy next door sells weed so don't climb on that one over there for peddling
smack & crack. the logic is stunningly conservative -- like the smooth way
around to
saying: don't make waves coz don't nobody care &, besides, poet worker bees never minded being exploited by contests in the first place (wot is it Emma Goldman sz, those treated most poorly by a nation -- or, in this case, any other institution or practice -- are
it's fiercest defenders? i mean, just because we got rodents in the living room
don't mean we shld ignore the rats in the kitchen or the mites in the flour. (vermin = sketchy practices not people.)

hugs ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Sat, 7/24/10, Gary Sullivan <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Saturday, July 24, 2010, 10:51 AM

Dear Richard Owens,

I started writing poetry when I was in grammar school, I don't remember what age exactly.

I had read Lewis Carroll's Hunting of the Snark, which had scared the holy living crap out of me.

I was so terrified, I didn't know what to do with myself. So I sat down and wrote a poem, trying to write something even more terrifying than Hunting of the Snark.

I am not sure what my motivations were. I'm sure a good child psychologist would have a theory or two.

This has been, more or less, my relationship to writing for the last 40 years or so.

I'm not entirely unsympathetic to what you're saying. A piece I wrote in the 90s and published in How To Proceed in the Arts, "First Draft Imaginary Writer Survey," ends with the questions:

"Why do we call it 'submission'? What are we collectively 'accepting'? What do we write about when we write about writing?"

That said, I didn't post a bad poem to poetry.com to prove that such contests are bad, as it appears Catherine, who beat me to the punch, did.

Nor to prove that people who know nothing about poetry can't judge it, as it appears Jennifer might believe. (I couldn't agree less with that sentiment.)

I certainly did not do it to show up anyone's "usurious" practices. I do not like that word nor how it has been used to target a certain population.

I did it because I was pissed off about what had happened to my grandfather. Less so his having been duped by poetry.com--I had mixed feelings about that, as it had actually given him some mild pleasure while he was on his deathbed. He was in great pain and dying, after all. As consolation, poetry.com made him feel as though he was a "real" poet. (Whatever that is.) He recited his winning poem to me over the phone from memory while he was in the hospital.

I was really pissed off because he had died, coughing up blood in a hospital with my grandmother at his side.

I don't care whether or not poetry magazines or presses or universities or individuals hold contests and charge entry fees. I have never entered one, not one with a fee. But not because I am morally opposed to them. The simple truth is that I am a cheapskate. If I felt more than 75% sure that my manuscript stood a chance, I might pay the money and send it.

I like Noah Eli Gordon. I met him once in Denver. He was sweet and funny and talked a lot about poetry. Which he clearly loves. More than I do, certainly. I have no interest in poetry beyond that which directly feeds, inspires, terrifies, surprises me. That which engages me. That's probably true for him, too, though I would imagine that he's engaged in far more being written today than I am.

I have no opinion one way or the other about any contest that he might be promoting or managing or dreaming up or whathaveyou. That's his business.

I do know that, when you are spotted doing anything beyond appearing to be a humble poet dutifully hunched over a desk in the corner crafting your some-day important earth-shattering poems, that some poets sometimes like to trash talk you, call you a capitalist, usurer, careerist, fraud, whatever. Poetry is a religion for the people who do this. They are welcome to it. I am a third or fourth generation atheist, and I have no interest in magical or ritualized thinking about anything, least of all poetry.

I admire many of the people who have chimed in against poetry contests. But no more or less so than I admire Noah. Or anyone, for that matter, who might submit their work to the contest he announced.

After all, my grandfather, who I loved very dearly, was a contest-submitter. Indeed: a contest winner! And his poem actually made me cry when he recited it to me, which is more than I can say for almost everything currently in print, however it might have wound up there.

This is not all to say that you are wrong to feel how you do about contests. That's your business and you are of course as qualified as anyone else to think about such things. Just that, though I appreciate the call-out, I thought I should be open about the situation of having written that poetry.com poem and what my own honest feelings about contests are. To me, they are, like those words "submission" and "acceptance," part of the landscape, and do define us to some extent. Just like everything else.

Gary

The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.

http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

309. David Kirschenbaum
This Weekend/A Boston Poet Tea Party
Sun 25 Jul 2010

please forward

This Weekend â€¦

A Boston Poet Tea Party

A Summer Poetry Marathon
featuring 108 local and visiting poets
reading for 8 minutes apiece

Fri. 7/30, 7:00 p.m.-10:00 p.m.

Pierre Menard Gallery
10 Arrow St., Harvard Square, Cambridge

Harvard Square stop on the Red Line

Sat. 7/31, 12 noon-10:00 p.m.
Sun. 8/1, 12 noon-5:00 p.m.

OUTPOST 186
186 1/2 Hampshire St., Inman Square, Cambridge

Central Square stop on the Red Line

Organized by Jim Behrle, Michael Carr,
David Kirschenbaum, John Mulrooney, and Aaron Tieger

For more info contact: [redacted]

Friday 7/30

7:00 Joe Torra
7:08 Jack Kimball
7:16 Minal Shekhawat
7:24 January O'Neil
7:32 Geoffrey Olsen
7:40 Kari Adelaide
7:48 Elisa Gabbert

break

8:04 Thom Donovan
8:12 Joan Houlihan
8:20 John Cotter
8:28 Dorothea Lasky
8:36 Tanya Larkin
8:44 Jibade-Khalil Huffman
8:52 David Rivard

break

9:08 Greg Fuchs
9:16 Pierre Joris
9:24 Buck Downs
9:32 Eileen Myles
9:40 Martha Oatis
9:48 Lori Lubeski
9:56 Nicole Peyrafitte

Saturday 7/31

12:00 Lauren Russell
12:08 Suzanne Mercury
12:16 Bridget Madden
12:24 Seth Abramson
12:32 Steve Roberts
12:40 Cate Peebles

break

12:56 Nathaniel Siegel
1:04 Nathaniel Otting
1:12 Dana Ward
1:20 Doug Holder
1:28 Mark Lamoureux
1:36 Debrah Morkun

break

1:52 Chris Rizzo
2:00 Ellen Kennedy
2:08 Kate Colby
2:16 Douglas Manson
2:24 Valerie Duff
2:32 Kimberly Ann Southwick

break

2:48 Mike County
2:56 Andrew Hughes
3:04 Amanda Cook
3:12 Lauren Ireland
3:20 Joel Sloman
3:28 James Cook

break

3:44 Filip Marinovich
3:56 Alan Semerdijian
4:04 Urayoan Noel
4:12 Jim Dunn
4:28 Kythe Heller
4:36 Lynn Behrendt

break

4:52 Derek Fenner
5:00 Joe Elliot
5:08 Boni Joi
5:16 Amanda Nadelberg
5:24 Brenda Iijima
5:32 Chad Parenteau

break

7:00 Jess Mynes
7:08 Elizabeth Willis
7:16 Mitch Highfill
7:24 Peter Gizzi
7:32 Jacqueline Waters
7:40 Fanny Howe
7:48 TBD

break

8:04 Chris Martin
8:12 Jon Woodward
8:20 Rebecca Wolff
8:28 Brendan Lorber
8:36 Gillian McCain
8:44 Oni Buchanan
8:52 Geof Huth

break

9:08 Dustin Williamson
9:16 Macgregor Card
9:24 Elizabeth Marie Young
9:32 Kish Song Bear
9:40 Aaron Kiely
9:48 Carlos Soto Roman
9:56 Douglas N. Rothschild

Sunday 8/1

12:08 N. F. Huth
12:16 Jessica Bozek
12:24 Fred Marchant
12:32 Angela Veronica Wong
12:40 Ruth Lepson

break

12:56 John Mulrooney
1:04 David Kirschenbaum
1:12 John Coletti
1:20 Gerrit Lansing
1:28 Aaron Tieger
1:36 Anna Moschovakis

break

1:52 Michael Carr
2:00 Ben Mazer
2:08 Ottessa Moshfegh
2:16 Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡
2:24 Chuck Stebelton
2:32 Mairead Byrne

break

2:48 Kate Schapira
2:56 Amy King
3:04 Amy De'Ath
3:12 Janaka Stucky
3:20 Gillian Devereux
3:26 Cheryl Clark Vermeulen

break

3:42 Mike Roberts
3:50 Sarah Heller

3:58 Andi Pinto
4:06 Chris Jackson
4:14 Dena Barisano
4:20 Molly Saccardo

break

4:36 Gilmore Tamny
4:44 Jim Behrle

As the festival nears, any potential schedule updates will be available at http://www.bostonpoetteaparty.blogspot.com/

--
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
Boog City
330 W. 28th St., Suite 6H
NY, NY 10001-4754
For event and publication information:
http://welcometoboogcity.com/
T: (212) 842-BOOG (2664)
http://itunes.apple.com/WebObjects/MZStore.woa/wa/viewPodcast?id=343169880
For music from Gilmore boys:
http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic

↑ Index

310. Murat Nemet-Nejat
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Hi, Jason,

" On the first point, it's notable I think that wittgenstein never denied that there might be a beetle in the box, but just that there was a meaningful way to talk about it. And yet he's clearly sympathetic to impulses in that regard. In his lecture on ethics, while denying that there can be "the ultimate good" as a meaningful object of discourse, he also says that he understands the impulse to try to talk about it nevertheless and he would never suggest that anyone should not try to talk about it because the attempt is in itself valuable. There are further two remarks that I think are telling. First there's the comment that there are two books in the Tractatus, first everything he wrote, and second everything he didn't write (because he couldn't), and of the two the latter is far more important. Second the section from the tractatus which I've never found him repudiating that I think speaks to this is 6.4 (all propositions are of equal value) and the comments to it. I'll quote here at length:

"6.41 The sense of the world must lie outside the world. In the world everything is as it is and happens as it does happen. In it there is no value -- and if there were, it would be of no value."

Do you not see the circularity of Wittgenstein's argument? While he pays lip service to by being "sympathetic" to ethical impulses, he condescends to it and relegates it to subservient category. If he can not talk "meaningfully" about something, then he does not talk about it. Therefore, that thing becomes invisible: "he didn't write about it because he couldn't." On a grand scale, is this argument any different from the drunkard who looks for the key under the light because that's where the light is, not necessarily where the key is?

Wittgenstein never explores or goes after that "outside" world ("the sense of the world"). His thinking concerns itself only with what "as it is and happens as it does happen."

Here I think an analysis of syntax is important -specifically the English syntax, composed of subject and predicate- is important. That is the syntax for an empirical view of the world -where things either happen (are true) or don't happen (are not true). Wittgeinstein accepts this implicitly as the paradigm, as far as I can tell, with defending why.

Now, instead, consider a syntactical structure replete with conjunctive forms (a syntax of possibilities, of potential thought) -as the agglutinative Turkish syntax is, which records thought in the process of emerging (once again, see Eda Anthology), not as true or false but as process, then a philosophical view of such a world would be totally different -pre-analytic, much more inclusive, in which a "subject-predicate" construction is only a part.

"If there is a value which is of value, it must lie outside all happening and being-so. For all happening and being-so is accidental. What makes it non-accidental cannot lie in the world, for otherwise this would again be accidental.

It must lie outside the world."

Here Wittgenstein is practicing, is following Hume's radical skepticism about the "innate logic" of reality to which the continental philosophy (from Spinoza to Kant, etc.) is a counterpoint.

"6.42 Hence also there can be no ethical propositions."

Here one can see W's circular thinking in practice.

"Propositions cannot express anything higher."

Yes, this is true if the only possible or valid linguistic structure having any hold to reality consisted of the propositions, that is to say, subject-predicate structure. This is a priori assumption on W's part having to do, as far as I can see, very little connection to reality, the state state in which language function. Subject=predicate is a mere abstraction from it.

"6.43 If good or bad willing changes the world, it can only change the limits of the world, not the facts; not the things that can be expressed in language."

It seems to me wrong. If you change the limits of language (more specifically of a language, that's why the importance of translation), you are changing what can be said in it. As I said, here lies the crucial importance of translation and Benjamin's thought about it -on disintegration, fragmentation, etc.

"In brief, the world must thereby become quite another, it must so to speak wax or wane as a whole.

The world of the happy is quite another than that of the unhappy."

W. ignores the consequences of what he is saying here.

"6.44 Not how the world is, is the mystical, but that it is."

This sentence remind me of Einstein's "God does not play dice with the universe." Cute, what it does not enter Einstein's thoughts in physics (unless I misunderstand him).

"6.45 The contemplation of the world sub specie aeterni is its contemplation as a limited whole.

The feeling that the world is a limited whole is the mystical feeling."

That's where the great divide between W. and Benjamin comes. Benjamin is all for breaking down these "wholes" in the realm of "ideal language. He points us to an outline of "a structure of escape."

"Those are the sort of remarks, which he continually made whenever he returned to notions of value and judgement, that I mean when I refer to Wittgenstein's mysticism. One of the things that I think a large number of casual wittgenstein readers misunderstand is the idea that "the limits of the language form the limits of my world" is not a expression of a sort of nominalism, that is, it's not a statement about the world, it's a statement about language. the huge aspect of reality about which we are incapable of having meaningful discourse because we can't say anything meaningful about it, that for Wittgenstein is the most important part, and in that part of human life lies all of the traditional notions of occultism, spirituality, faith, and religion."

That's where Benjamin goes beyond Wittgeinstein, essentially in my opinion rebuts him.

"B RE: Spicer. He does, I think, form a touchstone. as does"

Yes.

"C. I'm going to plead ignorance on this point because I haven't read the anthology yet, but if I understand the idea then I think I might agree. I tend to think of modernism as having more tension present in it tho at least in its attitudes, and I also think it starts much earlier, given my opinion that not a lot of people agree with me about that Moby Dick is the first postmodern novel and therefore the modernist postmodernist tension dates to the nineteenth century at least. As for the german romantics, i'm less well versded. I have been reading Goethe lately and it's very much resonating with me in a way that I haven't fully integrated in my thinking yet, but I think i can see what you're getting at there."

I think you will find the Eda anthology very interesting. A hundred twenty page selection from it (with a few additional essays) has appeared in a special section in Jacket (http://jacketmagazine.com/34/eda-essays.sh)

I agree with you completely about Moby Dick.

"D. You're right that Grenier is a special case, and I'll admit i was maybe being a little propagandistic in my cooption of Language poetry. I have a hard time seeing them all as a unified group in any case, but they're a little too important to me personally to allow for the outright materialism that I felt Adam painted them with in his piece, although I think he's largely right. The appeal to Grenier, I will confess, could be just some sleight of hand to try to rescue a larger movement from a specific criticism, and I think it's fair to call me on that. That said, I don't much care if any of the big Language folks agree that their work is suspicious of the materiality of language, i think i see it there anyway as a sort of irony that has to counterbalance the extreme focus on the textuality of writing. To me, reading something like the Chinese Notebook, for example, I feel like there's a certain amount of whistling at the dark that's going on, at least as it strikes me."

I sympathize with your divided loyalty about Language School poets, but I think one should call a spade a spade.

E. I am very much looking forward to it!

I'll announce it the moment it is out.

Thank you again for your very thoughtful remarks.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 4:13 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi Murat,
> Excellent feedback, thanks!
>
> On the first point, it's notable I think that wittgenstein never denied that there might be a beetle in the box, but just that there was a meaningful way to talk about it. And yet he's clearly sympathetic to impulses in that regard. In his lecture on ethics, while denying that there can be "the ultimate good" as a meaningful object of discourse, he also says that he understands the impulse to try to talk about it nevertheless and he would never suggest that anyone should not try to talk about it because the attempt is in itself valuable. There are further two remarks that I think are telling. First there's the comment that there are two books in the Tractatus, first everything he wrote, and second everything he didn't write (because he couldn't), and of the two the latter is far more important. Second the section from the tractatus which I've never found him repudiating that I think speaks to this is 6.4 (all propositions are of equal value) and the comments to it. I'll quote here at length:
>
> "6.41 The sense of the world must lie outside the world. In the world everything is as it is and happens as it does happen. In it there is no value -- and if there were, it would be of no value.
>
> If there is a value which is of value, it must lie outside all happening and being-so. For all happening and being-so is accidental.
> What makes it non-accidental cannot lie in the world, for otherwise this would again be accidental.
>
> It must lie outside the world.
>
> 6.42 Hence also there can be no ethical propositions.
>
> Propositions cannot express anything higher.
>
> 6.43 If good or bad willing changes the world, it can only change the limits of the world, not the facts; not the things that can be expressed in language.
>
> In brief, the world must thereby become quite another, it must so to speak wax or wane as a whole.
>
> The world of the happy is quite another than that of the unhappy.
>
> 6.44 Not how the world is, is the mystical, but that it is.
>
> 6.45 The contemplation of the world sub specie aeterni is its contemplation as a limited whole.
>
> The feeling that the world is a limited whole is the mystical feeling."

Those are the sort of remarks, which he continually made whenever he returned to notions of value and judgement, that I mean when I refer to Wittgenstein's mysticism. One of the things that I think a large number of casual wittgenstein readers misunderstand is the idea that "the limits of the language form the limits of my world" is not a expression of a sort of nominalism, that is, it's not a statement about the world, it's a statement about language. the huge aspect of reality about which we are incapable of having meaningful discourse because we can't say anything meaningful about it, that for Wittgenstein is the most important part, and in that part of human life lies all of the traditional notions of occultism, spirituality, faith, and religion.

B RE: Spicer. He does, I think, form a touchstone. as does

C. I'm going to plead ignorance on this point because I haven't read the anthology yet, but if I understand the idea then I think I might agree. I tend to think of modernism as having more tension present in it tho at least in its attitudes, and I also think it starts much earlier, given my opinion that not a lot of people agree with me about that Moby Dick is the first postmodern novel and therefore the modernist postmodernist tension dates to the nineteenth century at least. As for the german romantics, i'm less well versded. I have been reading Goethe lately and it's very much resonating with me in a way that I haven't fully integrated in my thinking yet, but I think i can see what you're getting at there.

D. You're right that Grenier is a special case, and I'll admit i was maybe being a little propagandistic in my cooption of Language poetry. I have a hard time seeing them all as a unified group in any case, but they're a little too important to me personally to allow for the outright materialism that I felt Adam painted them with in his piece, although I think he's largely right. The appeal to Grenier, I will confess, could be just some sleight of hand to try to rescue a larger movement from a specific criticism, and I think it's fair to call me on that. That said, I don't much care if any of the big Language folks agree that their work is suspicious of the materiality of language, i think i see it there anyway as a sort of irony that has to counterbalance the extreme focus on the textuality of writing. To me, reading something like the Chinese Notebook, for example, I feel like there's a certain amount of whistling at the dark that's going on, at least as it strikes me.

E. I am very much looking forward to it!

Regards,
Jason

On Jul 25, 2010, at 10:54 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

Jason,

Thank you for your very interesting blog entry. I have a few questions relating to it.

a) You mention "Wittgenstein's thoroughgoing linguistic mysticism that remained present in all of his works from the Tractatus Logic-Philosophicus onward." Could you elaborate on this more? While I agree with you that the inner logic of Wittgenstein's own thought led him to a wall against which beat (fly in a box), I am not sure how he transcended it. In fact, he himself would have objected to any idea of transcendence? His followers definitely rejected any hint or use of the concept of mysticism while applying his thought on language games to poetics. Isn't "mysticism" a dirty word among poets or poetry thinkers who refer to Wittgenstein most?

b) I am glad you point to the importance of Emerson and transcendentalism in American poetry (and 19th century prose; but in your list of poets sustaining the "spiritual" tradition you ignore a crucial figure, Jack Spicer.

c) One generally assumes the "irrelevance" of Romanticism, at least English Romanticism (German Romanticism is very different) to our present pursuit. What about the most recent, extremely interesting Millennium Anthology which attempts to re-cast Romanticism in a new light, as a precursor to modernism. Do you buy that? I think the 19th century German Romanticism (a figure like Novalis as much as Blake) has a lot to say to us in a pursuit of the metaphysical /spiritual in poetry.

d) "It's there in Robert Grenier's famous written proclamation "I hate speech" as well as in the opposite and too often unanalyzed Deconstructionist skepticism towards writing. As such both in the Language poets and the late post-structuralism, there is already present a fair amount of suspicion of the materiality of language..."

This would be true if you really consider Robert Grenier a language poet;

*to me, the very opposite is true. Grenier's statement is much nearer to the Turkish poet Orhan Veli's statement: "We wish it were possible to dump even language itself." (Eda Anthology). As you say, believing in the immateriality of language, he uses visual and constructive/serial means to show it. I do not think most language school poets would admit to any "suspicion of the materiality of language..." though you are trying to get them to your side.*

e) "To my way of thinking, poetry at its best serves as a sort of javelin to be launched at the veil of language beyond which lies the mystical which can only be indicated or pointed to but not directly talked about. Poetry should always be pushing at the limits of language..."

*Wait until The Spiritual Life of Replicants comes out by Talisman Books this fall. SL is part VI of a longer poem The Structure of Escape: .A Comic Essay On Poetry.*

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 2:13 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

*Hi Adam,
This essay really got me thinking, but as I wrote a response I realized I had too much to say to want to spill the whole thing onto the list, so I wrote it up as a blog post here:*

http://www.wetasphalt.com/content/mind-body-spirit-whatever-new-poetics-metaphysical

I'd very much like to here what you (or anybody else for that matter) think.

Regards, JF Quackenbush
[redacted]

> On Jul 18, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Adam Fieled wrote:
>
> This is an essay of mine newly published in Word for Word, "The Decay of
>
> Spirituality in Poetry":
>
> http://www.wordforword.info/vol17/Fieled.htm
>
> Many thanks to Jonathan Minton.
>
> Enjoy.
>
> Adam
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

311. Jim Andrews

Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Mon 26 Jul 2010

Some 2009 writing I did on 'spiritual materialism':
http://netpoetic.com/2009/07/spiritual-materialism
http://netpoetic.com/2009/07/re-spiritual-materialism

Am enjoying the posts on 'the decay of spirituality in poetry'. And doing a lot of swimming, running, and biking. Perfect weather over here for a while, great zephyr song.

ja
http://vispo.com
July 26/2010

↑ Index

312. Jonathan Penton
Unlikely Stories of the Third Kind
Mon 26 Jul 2010

We now have a final list of contributors for our forthcoming anthology, /Unlikely Stories of the Third Kind/! The anthology will include 50 Cent Haircut, Shane Allison, David Amram, Jim Andrews, Grace Andreacchi, Ron Androla, Michael Aro, David Aronson, Cassandra L. Atherton, Joe Balaz, Hugh Behm-Steinberg, Orna Ben Shoshan, Luis Cuauhtemoc Berriozabal, Bill Berry, Kristy Bowen, Tom Bradley, Alan Britt, Ray Brown, John Bryan, Luke Buckham, Ric Carfagna, Wendy Taylor Carlisle, Justin Carmickle, Bob Castle, Jim Chaffee, Cecelia Chapman, Robert Ciesla, The Clockwork Dolls, K. R. Copeland, Ginnetta Correlli, Leslie Council, D. B. Cox, Guy Cranswick, Will Crawford, Jeff Crouch, Michael Cuglietta, Steve Dalachinsky, Leon De la Rósa, Martha L. Deed, Richard Denner, Mary Ellen Derwis, DEVI, The Dirty Skirts, Doug Draime, Arthur Durkee, Paul Dutton, Amanda Earl, R. C. Edrington, Deidre Elizabeth, Brad M. Elliot, Leah Erickson, Michael Estabrook, Kane X. Faucher, Jack Feldstein, Cecilia Ferreira, The Folding Chairs, Michael C. Ford, Skip Fox, Vernon Frazer, Gloria Frym, Kirpal Gordon, John Grey, Danielle Grilli, gui.ra.ga7, Ira Joel Haber, Michael Haeflinger, Micah Harold, Michael Harold, Stephen Harrison, Sydney Harth, Jonathan Hayes, Kyle Hemmings, Leigh Herrick, Lily Hoang, Martin Hoeldtke, Justin Hyde, Liesl Jobson, Tyke Johnson, Joja, Aryan Kaganof, Adeena Karasick, John Keaton, Gene Keller, Tsipi Keller, Karl Kempton, Olivia Kennett, Adrien Kenyon, Amy King, Debbie Kirk, Amy Kohut, Kurtice Kucheman, Donna Kuhn, John Kuligowski, David LaBounty, Delphine LeCompte, Linda A. Lavid, Jim Leftwich, Louise Landes Levi, Robert Levin, Anthony Liccione, Lyn Lifshin, Richard Lighthouse, James Lineberger, Rick Lupert, MC Frontalot, Sean McCluskey, David McLean, Anne McMillen, Dennis Mahagin, Anna Maly, Diana Magallón, Peter Magliocco, Michael Medaglia, Tim Millas, The Molotov, Nicholas R. Morgan, David Nakabayashi, NeBa, Jason Neese, J. D. Nelson, Paul Nelson, Millie Niss, Carol Novack, Dean Omori, Joe Pachinko, John-Ivan Palmer, Claudio Parentela, Brent M. Parker, Jonathan Penton, Utah Phillips, Randel Plowman, Elisha Porat, Kerryn Potgieter, Bob Powell, Brent Powers, Don Pyle, Misti Rainwater-Lites, Dan Raphael, Ray Ramos, Gabriel Ricard, Charles P. Ries, Luis Rivas, Phil Rockstroh, Randall K. Rogers, T. S. Ross, Brenton Rossow, David Rovics, Miriam Sagan, Salvage My Dream, Iftekhar Sayeed, Eric Schwartz, Peter Schwartz, Rion Amilcar Scott, Matt Sesow, Paul E. Sexton III, Jen Shugert, Sidewalk Beggar, Sigerson, Eric Smiarowski, Willie Smith, Janet Snell, Donna Snyder, Felino A. Soriano, Sounds Like Fall, Jeffrey Spahr-Summers, George Sparling, Constance Stadler, Belinda Subraman, Dee Sunshine, John Sweet, Violetta Tarpinian, Gay Tastee, Chuck Taylor, Randy Thurman, Ryan Undeen, Gabriela Anyana Valdepeña, Sam Vaknin, C. Derick Varn, Joel Van Noord, Monina Verano, Derek Von Essen, Dan Waber, George Wallace, Alex Walsh, Alek Wasilweski, Lawrence Welsh, Derek White, Earnst Williamson III, A. D. Winans, Jasiri X, and Thea Zimmer!

Thanks to the many, many people who sent in submissions, and to the many excellent artists who suffered rejection this time around. Space in a physical project is inherently limited, and we made some extraordinary painful cuts this month. If you sent in work, and we failed to notify you and thank you, please accept our apologies. If we've /accepted/ your work and you aren't on the above list, please contact us immediately.

The anthology will be about 400 pages of text and visual art and have both a CD and DVD enclosed. It was edited by Gabriel Ricard, Donna Snyder, Belinda Subraman, C. Derick Varn and myself. It's available for pre-order from http://shop.makeitnewmedia.com/ , where you'll also find other Unlikely Books and new titles from Virgogray Press. /Unlikely Stories of the Third Kind/ will be released at Burning Man, in the first week of September, so if you're going there, come find us!

And hey! Going to be in or around El Paso this weekend? This Friday, July 30th, we'll be having:

An Unlikely B.Y.O.C. Happening
featuring videos by Leon De la Rosa discussion from Dr. Deb Hoag poetry by Lawrence Welsh, Donna Snyder, Ray Ramos, and Jen Shugert VideoRemixing by Rene Lopez and Tipo with DJ Kidmonks spinning also: WINE. Bring Your Own Cheeze

July 30th, 8pm
Glasbox Art Gallery
1500 Texas at Cotton (entrance on Langtry), El Paso, Texas
$5 suggested donation

If you've never before seen poetry performed over live video mixing, it is truly something to check out. We're expecting an exceptional evening, so drop by if you can!

--
Jonathan Penton
http://www.unlikelystories.org/

↑ Index

313. David Hadbawnik
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Catherine, CJ, RICH, et al.:

I agree -- some of the discussion has veered dangerously close to the sentiment Pound identified 100 yrs ago, sealing poetry off in its own pleasure dome beyond any whiff of money, which becomes nothing more than an excuse not to pay anyone anything in the realm of the arts. The question isn't whether capital itself is a compromise -- it definitely is. BUT paper, ink, postage, binding, all these things cost money, and they have to be paid for somehow. To get back to Rich's original point, we can't control THAT, but we can decide how and where the money comes from. We can and should offer alternatives to the current system, which the contest set-up, Rich asserts and I agree, merely replicates on a small scale. I've written more and exhaustively about this on my blog

http://habenichtpress.com/

and i'd gladly invite folks to read and comment...

David

On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 12:08 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]>wrote:

> so, typically for this list, we've moved from questioning the culture of prizes -- which in most cases are a sort of poetry raffle, but have become a > trophy to brandish at hiring and tenure committees -- to saying that 1) people shouldn't work for money to subsidize their practice, 2) teachers shouldn't get paid, 3) creative writing shouldn't be taught
>
> and this is communicated in the actual work?
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

↑ Index

314. J. Michael Mollohan
Re: "The Decay of Poetry in Spirituality"
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Ron, I've read a little of Sufi literature. Rumi is a favorite. I have "Tales of the Reed Pipe" too, and love it. I've read some of the Christian Mystics but can't say

I really care for many of them beyond St. John of the Cross. I do occasionally read something new in those areas, but I feel more of an affinity to the Taoists and Zen Buddhists. Funny you should mention Motilal Barnasidass. I've ordered several books from them. One,in particular on Jnana Yoga that I've read several times. I also have their Buddhist Sanskrit Grammar & Dictionary, which proved invaluable in my study of Stcherbatsky.

Thanks for the note.

----- Original Message -----
From: "Roy Exley" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, July 25, 2010 3:56 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Poetry in Spirituality"

> Michael, I suggest you read 'Sufism and Taoism: A Comparative Study of Philosophical Concepts' by Toshihiko Izutsu, University of California Press,
> Berkeley, 1984, or 'Sufi Literature and the Journey to Immortality' by A.E.
> I. Falconar, Motilal Banarsidass, Patna, India, 1991. Sufism, the mystical > stream of Islam, has much in common with Zen and Taoism and proves, likewise > that spirituality is far more important than 'religion', and goes to prove > that much contemporary poetry would be instantly melted down beyond its > constituent parts by the white hot heat at the heart of spirituality - read > Ibn Al'Arabi or Jalaluddin Rumi to begin to get a sense of that heat. There > are Christian mystics as well, of course, such as Julian of Norwich, Thomas > Traherne, Hildegard of Bingen or the Flemish mystic Jan van Ruysbroek, many > riches outside the confines of the 'established' churches. Once you start, > you won't stop, discipline or not. Enjoy the research, take care.
>
> On 25/7/10 16:54, "J. Michael Mollohan" <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> I've often said that the USofA is more religious and less spiritual than any > other country. In the part of the country I live (i.e., Bible Beltish) > there seems to be a church on every corner. Truly, it's not that bad, but > it's a lot less far off the mark than you might imagine. The town I'm from > now has a population of around 900 souls. There are AT LEAST 10 churches.
> In the city where I now live there are literally hundreds of churches for

a population barely above 50,000. I've noticed that in small cities where there are a lot of churches, the religious life tends to be cliquish. Additionally, other aspects of life are equally fragmented and closed to outsiders, often aligned along the lines of where people go to church. Since I belong to no church and profess Taoism, or on occasion, Zen Buddhism, I don't fall into any of the "Christian" or "Jewish" or "Muslum" cliques. I most closely resemble the Unitarian or Unity groups, but even still since I don't "belong" I'm always not quite on the inside. I'm outside looking in through stained glass windows.

Someone should do a study. I don't have the discipline.

----- Original Message -----
From: "carol dorf" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, July 23, 2010 11:26 PM
Subject: Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

I'm not sure about this idea of America and spirituality -- we certainly are far more religious (i.e. participating in traditional religion) than people
in other developed countries; though perhaps our religiosity interferes with the development of other spiritual perspectives.

On Fri, Jul 23, 2010 at 6:15 AM, Adam Katz <[redacted]>
wrote:

In regard to Fieled's posting, below: In Joyce's letters to Grant Richards,
when he's trying to get Dubliners published and fighting against the censorship of certain common though blasphemous words, he says something like "I seriously believe you will retard the course of Irish civilization by preventing them from having a look at itself in my nicely polished looking glass." Something like that.
a

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's enti>>>>
David,

I'll admit I haven't read Marx's
>>>> enti>>>> re oeuvre, but the intermingling of spirituality & materialism is >>>> fascin>>>> ating, and I have perused Deleuze/Guattari
as well.

>>>> Thi>>>> nk of what's happening in the US now; our collective spirit is being
>>>>
gut>>>> tered for dearth of the ability to consume the way we're accustomed
to;
>>>> our>>>> spirits are bound to different levels of >>>> materialism.

>>>> Th>>>> e spirituality I'd like to espouse encompasses metaphysical dimensions;
>>>>
>>>> realms that are based, somewhat idealistically, on "soul" and "spirit,"
>>>> lik>>>> e the
Whitmanic.
But rehashing the Whitmanic doesn't >>>> work>>>> . What about a new spirituality that holds up a mirror and catches
>>>> the
>>>> d>>>> arkness of our current fetishism?
>>>>
>>>> guidelines
>>>>
>>>
>>
>> guidelines &
>>
>

↑ Index

315. Al Filreis
PoemTalk 34: on Charles Olson
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Today we are pleased to release episode 34 of the PoemTalk series - a discussion of one of Charles Olson's Maximus poems with Charles Bernstein, Rachel Blau DuPlessis and Bob Perelman.

http://poemtalkatkwh.blogspot.com/
http://www.poetryfoundation.org/

- Al Filreis

Al Filreis
Kelly Professor
Faculty Dir., Kelly Writers House
Dir., Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
University of Pennsylvania

↑ Index

316. Cara Benson
AUG 12 Belladonna / Dusie Reading
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Yes, Brooklyn in August. You can do it...

Thursday, Augus
Hi All,

Yes, Brooklyn in August. You can do it...

Thursday, August 12, 2010; 7:30 pm
Belladonna* & Dusie present
Â
The Summer Reading
Please join us in celebrating these authors and their new books:
Â
Cara Benson: (made), BookThug
MairÃ©ad Byrne: The Best of (Whatâ€™s Left of) Heaven, Publishing Genius
Caroline Crumpacker: Recherche Theories, EtherDome Press
Susana Gardner: Herso, An Heirship in Waves, Black Radish Books
Eileen Myles: Importance of Being Iceland, Semiotext(e); Inferno, O/R
Kate Zambreno: O Fallen Angel, Chiasmus Press
Â
Location: Book Thug Nation: 100 N. 3rd St; Between Berry St & Wythe Ave; Williamsbug, Brooklyn
Admission: FREEÂ
Â
http://www.belladonnaseries.org/readingseries.html

_____Â
http://www.necessetics.comÂ {homepage}Â
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.htmlÂ {journal}

↑ Index

317. Cara Benson

AUG 12 Belladonna / Dusie Reading [TAKE TWO]

Mon 26 Jul 2010

Sorry for theÂ double up, BUT: reading isÂ at 8pm.
[TAKE TWO]

Sorry for theÂ double up, BUT: reading isÂ at 8pm.
Â
Thursday, August 12, 2010; 8:00 pm
Belladonna* & Dusie present
Â
The Summer Reading
Please join us in celebrating these authors and their new books:
Â
Cara Benson: (made), BookThug
MairÃ©ad Byrne: The Best of (Whatâ€™s Left of) Heaven, Publishing Genius
Caroline Crumpacker: Recherche Theories, EtherDome Press
Susana Gardner: Herso, An Heirship in Waves, Black Radish Books
Eileen Myles: Importance of Being Iceland, Semiotext(e); Inferno, O/R
Kate Zambreno: O Fallen Angel, Chiasmus Press
Â
Location: Book Thug Nation: 100 N. 3rd St; Between Berry St & Wythe Ave; Williamsbug, Brooklyn
Admission: FREEÂ
Â
http://www.belladonnaseries.org/readingseries.html

Â
Â
Â
Â
Â Â
Â
Â
_____Â
http://www.necessetics.comÂ {homepage}Â
http://www.necessetics.com/sousrature.htmlÂ {journal}

↑ Index

318. Eric Weinstein
Call for Submissions: PRICK OF THE SPINDLE
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Hi all,

*Prick of the Spindle <http://www.prickofthespindle.com/> *is currently seeking submissions for its fall 2010 issue (due out in September). here<http://www.prickofthespindle.com/pages/submit.htm>. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks & all best,

Eric

↑ Index

319. Catherine Daly
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Sad news, Beyond Baroque is currently throwing its first contest.

http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html

<http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html>So here we have an independent cultural institution of long standing that has $1 rent, a mostly volunteer staff, and trustees/board members who are not donors, not effectively fundraising and grant writing except from government -- although it is possible that they are refusing to apply for funds from Readers Digest or the Irvine Foundation, etc. etc. -- that also refuses to make money from workshops (they are famous for offering free showers and workshops both! -- but they could charge for some classes like the Poetry Project does), the bookstore (by doing things like not asking local presses for donations of remaindered books or local poets for donations of used books; by not selling books online; by not looking up the value of some of the rare first editions that linger on the shelves), the archive, the art gallery, the readings/performances themselves, relationships with other arts institutions, or the press (by not listing all of the books in print on Amazon; by having broken paypal links on the site -- they are at SPD).

Nope, they're having a contest.

--
All best,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

320. amy king

Bill Knott books ++ FRIDAY -- Amy De'Ath, Octavio R. Gonzalez, Gordon Massman, Tracy O Connor, Joanna Ruocco, Kate Schapira & Dustin Williamson!

Mon 26 Jul 2010

STAIN OF POETRY
A READING SERIES
JULY 30, FRIDAY ~ AMY DEâ€
.

STAIN OF POETRY
A READING SERIES
JULY 30, FRIDAY ~ AMY DEâ€™ATH, OCTAVIO R. GONZALEZ, GORDON MASSMAN, TRACY O
CONNOR, JOANNA RUOCCO, KATE SCHAPIRA & DUSTIN WILLIAMSON!

LISTENERS WILL RECEIVE ONE-OF-A-KIND HAND-PAINTED, HAND-MADE & SIGNED COPIES OF SYLLABIC VERSE BY BILL KNOTT.
FIRST TO COME, FIRST TO RECEIVE ONE OF THESE RARE BOOKS!

@ GOODBYE BLUE MONDAY â€“ BUSHWICK, BROOKLYN

WITH

AMY DEâ€™ATH studied American Literature with Creative Writing at the University of East Anglia and at Temple University in Philadelphia. Her poems have appeared in ONEDIT, QUID and others. Crater Press recently published her broadside, ANDROMEDA, THE WORLD WORKS FOR ME. She has two short books forthcoming in 2010. Her first collection will be published by Salt, and a chapbook will be coming out from Oystercatcher later in the year. Her poetry blog can be found atWWW.AMYDEATH.WORDPRESS.COM. â€œAmy Deâ€™Ath is the new fire for mortals. She peoples space. She plays tricks with the gods and with her readers. This is personal, and itâ€™s hot shit.â€ â€” Marcus Slease ~

OCTAVIO GONZALEZ is a Dominican-American poet from Santo Domingo and Brooklyn, N.Y. He teaches literature and composition at Rutgers University, where he is a doctoral student in English. Some of his work appears online and in print, in PUERTO DEL SOL, OCHO, MIPOESIAS, and other journals. His first chapbook, THE BOOK OF OURS, has just been published by Momotombo Press. ~

Attempting with the scientistâ€™s objectivity, GORDON MASSMAN has numbered over twenty-one hundred slices of his psyche in order to discover his most basic urges, motives, fears, addictions, and desires. He aspires to be the literary human genome project, and in doing so, unearth as fearlessly as possible aspects not only of his own, but those of the universal male psychology. Tarpaulin Sky Press recently published his collection, THE ESSENTIAL NUMBERS. This summer Spork Press will release a chapbook of this work. ~

TRACI O CONNORâ€™s first collection of fiction, RECIPES FOR ENDANGERED SPECIES, was recently released by Tarpaulin Sky Press, and she has published fictions and poems in various journals and magazines, including MID-AMERICAN REVIEW, GARGOYLE, DIAGRAM, LIT MAGAZINE, THE PINCH, H_NGM_N, FOURTEEN HILLS, MARGIE, GREEN MOUNTAINS REVIEW, SIDEBROW, BARROWSTREET, CV2 and POET LORE. Traciâ€™s currently at work on a collection of flash-memoirs about her Mormon childhood called SHELL-SHAPED PIECES OF BONE and a second collection of short stories. She teaches writing and literature at Guilford College in Greensboro, North Carolina where she lives with her spouseâ€”the writer, Jackson Connorâ€”their four children, one labradoodle, and a â€˜cat.â€™ ~

JOANNA RUOCCO lives in Denver, Colorado. She is the author of a novel,THE MOTHERING COVEN, published by Ellipsis Press, and a short story collection, MANâ€™S COMPANIONS, published by Tarpaulin Sky. She co-edits BIRKENSNAKE, a fiction journal, with Brian Conn. ~

KATE SCHAPIRA is the author of TOWN (Factory School, Heretical Texts, 2010) and several chapbooks from Flying Guillotine Press, Cy Gist Press, horse less press, Rope-A-Dope Press and Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs. She runs the Publicly Complex reading series in Providence, RI. ~

DUSTIN WILLIAMSON is the author of OBSTRUCTED VIEW (Salacious Banter), EXHAUSTED GRUNTS (Cannibal), and GORILLA DUST (Open 24 Hours). He publishes Rust Buckle Books, and is the current Monday night coordinator at the Poetry Project in NYC.

AT

GOODBYE BLUE MONDAY
1087 BROADWAY
(CORNER OF DODWORTH ST)
BROOKLYN, NY 11221-3013 [redacted]
J M Z TRAINS TO MYRTLE AVE
OR J TRAIN TO KOSCIUSKO ST
~

Hosted by Amy King and Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡

www.stainofpoetry.com

****
Poetry, Publishing, Women & the Internet
+
http://amyking.wordpress.com/2010/07/12/your-own-revolution-poetry-publishing-the-internet/

Poets for Living Waters
+ http://poetsgulfcoast.wordpress.com/
****

↑ Index

321. Willard Fox
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Trying to win prizes with poetry is like entering your mother in a wet t-shirt competition.

↑ Index

322. Mark Johnson
Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Wittgenstein believed that most (but by no means all) talk about the mystical or the transcendental or the spiritual amounted to a load of crap/delusion/self-delusion. And who can disagree? Step into a bookstore and peruse the relevant sections. This is why he particularly loved Samuel Johnson's prayers (a small volume of which he often carried with him) -because they eschew claptrap, that is, are ethical writings rather than mystical in nature.

It's an egregious mistake to caricature Wittgenstein as some sort of cold-hearted atheist materialist logician. Read anything about his life -the many memoirs left by his students (I like Norman Malcolm's best, a very moving small book), the biography by Ray Monk- and you find a man absolutely tortured by ethical considerations.

Mark

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 12:29 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]>wrote:

> Hi, Jason,
>
> " On the first point, it's notable I think that wittgenstein never denied that there might be a beetle in the box, but just that there was a meaningful way to talk about it. And yet he's clearly sympathetic to impulses in that regard. In his lecture on ethics, while denying that there can be "the ultimate good" as a meaningful object of discourse, he also says that he understands the impulse to try to talk about it nevertheless and he would never suggest that anyone should not try to talk about it because the attempt is in itself valuable. There are further two remarks that I think are telling. First there's the comment that there are two books in the Tractatus, first everything he wrote, and second everything he didn't write (because he couldn't), and of the two the latter is far more important. Second the section from the tractatus which I've never found him repudiating that I think speaks to this is 6.4 (all propositions are of equal value) and the comments to it. I'll quote here at length:

"6.41 The sense of the world must lie outside the world. In the world everything is as it is and happens as it does happen. In it there is no value -- and if there were, it would be of no value."

Do you not see the circularity of Wittgenstein's argument? While he pays lip service to by being "sympathetic" to ethical impulses, he condescends to it and relegates it to subservient category. If he can not talk "meaningfully" about something, then he does not talk about it. Therefore, that thing becomes invisible: "he didn't write about it because he couldn't." On a grand scale, is this argument any different from the drunkard who looks for the key under the light because that's where the light is, not necessarily where the key is?

Wittgenstein never explores or goes after that "outside" world ("the sense of the world"). His thinking concerns itself only with what "as it is and happens as it does happen."

Here I think an analysis of syntax is important -specifically the English syntax, composed of subject and predicate- is important. That is the syntax for an empirical view of the world -where things either happen (are true) or don't happen (are not true). Wittgeinstein accepts this implicitly as the paradigm, as far as I can tell, with defending why.

*Now, instead, consider a syntactical structure replete with conjunctive forms (a syntax of possibilities, of potential thought) -as the agglutinative Turkish syntax is, which records thought in the process of emerging (once again, see Eda Anthology), not as true or false but as process, then a philosophical view of such a world would be totally different -pre-analytic, much more inclusive, in which a "subject-predicate"*
construction is only a part.

"If there is a value which is of value, it must lie outside all happening and being-so. For all happening and being-so is accidental.
What makes it non-accidental cannot lie in the world, for otherwise this would again be accidental.

It must lie outside the world."

Here Wittgenstein is practicing, is following Hume's radical skepticism about the "innate logic" of reality to which the continental philosophy (from Spinoza to Kant, etc.) is a counterpoint.

"6.42 Hence also there can be no ethical propositions."

Here one can see W's circular thinking in practice.

"Propositions cannot express anything higher."

Yes, this is true if the only possible or valid linguistic structure having any hold to reality consisted of the propositions, that is to say, subject-predicate structure. This is a priori assumption on W's part having to do, as far as I can see, very little connection to reality, the state state in which language function. Subject=predicate is a mere abstraction from it.

"6.43 If good or bad willing changes the world, it can only change the limits of the world, not the facts; not the things that can be expressed in language."

*It seems to me wrong. If you change the limits of language (more specifically of a language, that's why the importance of translation), you* are changing what can be said in it. As I said, here lies the crucial importance of translation and Benjamin's thought about it -on disintegration, fragmentation, etc.

"In brief, the world must thereby become quite another, it must so to speak wax or wane as a whole.

The world of the happy is quite another than that of the unhappy."

W. ignores the consequences of what he is saying here.

"6.44 Not how the world is, is the mystical, but that it is."

This sentence remind me of Einstein's "God does not play dice with the universe." Cute, what it does not enter Einstein's thoughts in physics (unless I misunderstand him).

"6.45 The contemplation of the world sub specie aeterni is its contemplation as a limited whole.

The feeling that the world is a limited whole is the mystical feeling."

That's where the great divide between W. and Benjamin comes. Benjamin is all for breaking down these "wholes" in the realm of "ideal language. He points us to an outline of "a structure of escape."

"Those are the sort of remarks, which he continually made whenever he returned to notions of value and judgement, that I mean when I refer to Wittgenstein's mysticism. One of the things that I think a large number of casual wittgenstein readers misunderstand is the idea that "the limits of the language form the limits of my world" is not a expression of a sort of nominalism, that is, it's not a statement about the world, it's a statement about language. the huge aspect of reality about which we are incapable of having meaningful discourse because we can't say anything meaningful about it, that for Wittgenstein is the most important part, and in that part of human life lies all of the traditional notions of occultism, spirituality, faith, and religion."

That's where Benjamin goes beyond Wittgeinstein, essentially in my opinion rebuts him.

"B RE: Spicer. He does, I think, form a touchstone. as does"

Yes.

"C. I'm going to plead ignorance on this point because I haven't read the anthology yet, but if I understand the idea then I think I might agree. I tend to think of modernism as having more tension present in it tho at least in its attitudes, and I also think it starts much earlier, given my opinion that not a lot of people agree with me about that Moby Dick is the first postmodern novel and therefore the modernist postmodernist tension dates to the nineteenth century at least. As for the german romantics, i'm less well versded. I have been reading Goethe lately and it's very much resonating with me in a way that I haven't fully integrated in my thinking yet, but I think i can see what you're getting at there."

*I think you will find the Eda anthology very interesting. A hundred twenty page selection from it (with a few additional essays) has appeared in a special section in Jacket (http://jacketmagazine.com/34/eda-essays.sh)*

> *I agree with you completely about Moby Dick.*
>
> "D. You're right that Grenier is a special case, and I'll admit i was maybe being a little propagandistic in my cooption of Language poetry. I have a hard time seeing them all as a unified group in any case, but they're a little too important to me personally to allow for the outright materialism that I felt Adam painted them with in his piece, although I think he's largely right. The appeal to Grenier, I will confess, could be just some sleight of hand to try to rescue a larger movement from a specific criticism, and I think it's fair to call me on that. That said, I don't much care if any of the big Language folks agree that their work is suspicious of the materiality of language, i think i see it there anyway as a sort of irony that has to counterbalance the extreme focus on the textuality of writing. To me, reading something like the Chinese Notebook, for example, I feel like there's a certain amount of whistling at the dark that's going on, at least as it strikes me."
>
> I sympathize with your divided loyalty about Language School poets, but I think one should call a spade a spade.
>
> E. I am very much looking forward to it!
>
> I'll announce it the moment it is out.
>
> Thank you again for your very thoughtful remarks.
>
> Ciao,
>
> Murat
>
> On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 4:13 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Hi Murat,
> Excellent feedback, thanks!
>
> On the first point, it's notable I think that wittgenstein never denied that there might be a beetle in the box, but just that there was a meaningful way to talk about it. And yet he's clearly sympathetic to impulses in that regard. In his lecture on ethics, while denying that there can be "the ultimate good" as a meaningful object of discourse, he also says that he understands the impulse to try to talk about it nevertheless and he would never suggest that anyone should not try to talk about it because the attempt is in itself valuable. There are further two remarks that I think are telling. First there's the comment that there are two books in the Tractatus, first everything he wrote, and second everything he didn't write (because he couldn't), and of the two the latter is far more important.

Second the section from the tractatus which I've never found him repudiating
that I think speaks to this is 6.4 (all propositions are of equal value) and the comments to it. I'll quote here at length:

"6.41 The sense of the world must lie outside the world. In the world everything is as it is and happens as it does happen. In it there is no value -- and if there were, it would be of no value.

If there is a value which is of value, it must lie outside all happening and being-so. For all happening and being-so is accidental.
What makes it non-accidental cannot lie in the world, for otherwise this would again be accidental.

It must lie outside the world.

6.42 Hence also there can be no ethical propositions.

Propositions cannot express anything higher.

6.43 If good or bad willing changes the world, it can only change the limits of the world, not the facts; not the things that can be expressed in language.

In brief, the world must thereby become quite another, it must so to speak wax or wane as a whole.

The world of the happy is quite another than that of the unhappy.

6.44 Not how the world is, is the mystical, but that it is.

6.45 The contemplation of the world sub specie aeterni is its contemplation
as a limited whole.

The feeling that the world is a limited whole is the mystical feeling."

Those are the sort of remarks, which he continually made whenever he returned to notions of value and judgement, that I mean when I refer to Wittgenstein's mysticism. One of the things that I think a large number of casual wittgenstein readers misunderstand is the idea that "the limits of the language form the limits of my world" is not a expression of a sort of nominalism, that is, it's not a statement about the world, it's a statement about language. the huge aspect of reality about which we are incapable of having meaningful discourse because we can't say anything meaningful about it, that for Wittgenstein is the most important part, and in that part of human life lies all of the traditional notions of occultism, spirituality, faith, and religion.

B RE: Spicer. He does, I think, form a touchstone. as does

C. I'm going to plead ignorance on this point because I haven't read the anthology yet, but if I understand the idea then I think I might agree. I tend to think of modernism as having more tension present in it tho at least in its attitudes, and I also think it starts much earlier, given my opinion that not a lot of people agree with me about that Moby Dick is the first postmodern novel and therefore the modernist postmodernist tension dates to the nineteenth century at least. As for the german romantics, i'm less well versded. I have been reading Goethe lately and it's very much resonating with me in a way that I haven't fully integrated in my thinking yet, but I think i can see what you're getting at there.

D. You're right that Grenier is a special case, and I'll admit i was maybe being a little propagandistic in my cooption of Language poetry. I have a hard time seeing them all as a unified group in any case, but they're a little too important to me personally to allow for the outright materialism that I felt Adam painted them with in his piece, although I think he's largely right. The appeal to Grenier, I will confess, could be just some sleight of hand to try to rescue a larger movement from a specific criticism, and I think it's fair to call me on that. That said, I don't much care if any of the big Language folks agree that their work is suspicious of the materiality of language, i think i see it there anyway as a sort of irony that has to counterbalance the extreme focus on the textuality of writing. To me, reading something like the Chinese Notebook, for example, I feel like there's a certain amount of whistling at the dark that's going on, at least as it strikes me.

E. I am very much looking forward to it!

Regards,
Jason

On Jul 25, 2010, at 10:54 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

Jason,

Thank you for your very interesting blog entry. I have a few questions relating to it.

a) You mention "Wittgenstein's thoroughgoing linguistic mysticism that remained present in all of his works from the Tractatus Logic-Philosophicus onward." Could you elaborate on this more? While I agree with you that the inner logic of Wittgenstein's own thought led him to a wall against which beat (fly in a box), I am not sure how he transcended it. In fact, he himself would have objected to any idea of transcendence? His followers definitely rejected any hint or use of the concept of mysticism while applying his thought on language games to poetics. Isn't "mysticism" a dirty word among poets or poetry thinkers who refer to Wittgenstein most?

b) I am glad you point to the importance of Emerson and transcendentalism in American poetry (and 19th century prose; but in your list of poets sustaining the "spiritual" tradition you ignore a crucial figure, Jack Spicer.

c) One generally assumes the "irrelevance" of Romanticism, at least

*English
Romanticism (German Romanticism is very different) to our present pursuit.
What about the most recent, extremely interesting Millennium Anthology which attempts to re-cast Romanticism in a new light, as a precursor to modernism.
Do you buy that? I think the 19th century German Romanticism (a figure like Novalis as much as Blake) has a lot to say to us in a pursuit of the metaphysical /spiritual in poetry.*

d) "It's there in Robert Grenier's famous written proclamation "I hate speech" as well as in the opposite and too often unanalyzed Deconstructionist skepticism towards writing. As such both in the Language poets and the late post-structuralism, there is already present a fair amount of suspicion of the materiality of language..."

*This would be true if you really consider Robert Grenier a language poet;
to me, the very opposite is true. Grenier's statement is much nearer to the Turkish poet Orhan Veli's statement: "We wish it were possible to dump even language itself." (Eda Anthology). As you say, believing in the immateriality of language, he uses visual and constructive/serial means to show it. I do not think most language school poets would admit to any "suspicion of the materiality of language..." though you are trying to get them to your side.*

*e) "To my way of thinking, poetry at its best serves as a sort of javelin
to be launched at the veil of language beyond which lies the mystical which can only be indicated or pointed to but not directly talked about. Poetry should always be pushing at the limits of language..."*

*Wait until The Spiritual Life of Replicants comes out by Talisman Books
this fall. SL is part VI of a longer poem The Structure of Escape: .A Comic Essay On Poetry.*

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 2:13 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

Hi Adam,
This essay really got me thinking, but as I wrote a response I realized I had too much to say to want to spill the whole thing onto the list, so I wrote it up as a blog post here:

http://www.wetasphalt.com/content/mind-body-spirit-whatever-new-poetics-metaphysical

I'd very much like to here what you (or anybody else for that matter) think.

Regards,
JF Quackenbush
[redacted]

On Jul 18, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Adam Fieled wrote:

This is an essay of mine newly published in Word for Word, "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry":

http://www.wordforword.info/vol17/Fieled.htm

Many thanks to Jonathan Minton.

Enjoy.

Adam

> guidelines
>
> guidelines

↑ Index

323. Little Red Leaves
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Mon 26 Jul 2010

Dear Rich--At this distance, here's what I know of your public presence in the past week: a massive launch from DTC/Punch Press (a piece of mail for which I'm incredibly grateful--holy shit the Marianne Morris poem!) & your intervention here. The first of these (the launch) is a tactic that very successfully addresses the concerns you want to address & offers one of the alternative models that Tyrone asked you to speak to. The second, as tactic, is thus far just a random belligerence, as far as I can tell, even though I understand that you & some others here don't think so. At least in its basic spirit anyhow.

I actually need to duck out of this thread for awhile & get some work done before the semester starts back up. Desperately trying to get back to writing a longer thing on Myung Mi Kim & Rachel Blau Duplessis--two poets (among many) whose work would be virtually stranded by the action you call for, unless I've somehow misunderstood your call. If I have misunderstood it, then please clarify--are you asking us to walk away from any press who runs a contest or charges a reading fee (taking w/us our money, our work, our reviews, our venues, etc)? I mean, in addition to listserv drive-by's, what's to be done that isn't already being done? (I'm really asking, here. If I'm missing what the action is, I'd like someone to clarify.)

I also want to ask you (& David--hi David) to seriously revisit the question of whether this type of absolutism can really be practiced from within the funded halls of a PhD program, while collecting a paycheck for teaching undergraduate students who are largely going into hock to pay for their ticket for that ride. (I know it isn't making you rich, but come on.) I fully understand your "top-down" theory about contests (that institutional funding--in the form of a grant for a press (or even a fellowship, right?)--is less questionable than the contest model because it supposedly doesn't prey on vulnerable writers), but honestly: it's UB's listserv & UB's dime you're posting on. I'm being blunt (and maybe even a bit reductive) here NOT because I think you should be ashamed of yourselves for accepting that funding & using it in your small press activities--I think the oppositein fact--but your call to action (or the way you've chosen to articulate it? here & in David's blog post) starts to seem not a little evangelical & even insincere. Professionalization in the arts is exactly what you're wanting to confront, right (using a refusal of contest-model funding particularly for small presses as the staging ground)? Shit guys: analyze, then. & proceed w/caution before moving into your tactical phase.

As someone you & David have both published & as someone who's published both of you, I need you (both) to know I'm saying this out of affection, respect & concern. (I hope it's not necessary to say it, but in case it is--I wouldn't have joined in here if that weren't true.) There are a number of other things to resist or struggle to complicate, in addition to capital, that mingle with our thing: a model for community building that's based in haphazard antagonism (largely towards, I begin to fear, affiliation) comes to mind, for a start. That's not to say you don't have my support in doing the work of problematizing capital, but maybe we can multi-task?

Yours,
CJ Martin

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 2:23 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]>wrote:

> Sad news, Beyond Baroque is currently throwing its first contest.
>
> http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html
>
> <http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html>So here we have an independent cultural institution of long standing that has $1 rent, a mostly volunteer staff, and trustees/board members who are not donors, not effectively fundraising and grant writing except from government -- although it is possible that they are refusing to apply for funds from Readers Digest or the Irvine Foundation, etc. etc. -- that also refuses to make money from workshops (they are famous for offering free showers and workshops both! -- but they could charge for some classes like the Poetry Project does), the bookstore (by doing things like not asking local presses for donations of remaindered books or local poets for donations of used books; by not selling
> books online; by not looking up the value of some of the rare first editions > that linger on the shelves), the archive, the art gallery, the readings/performances themselves, relationships with other arts institutions, or the press (by not listing all of the books in print on Amazon; by having broken paypal links on the site -- they are at SPD).

> Nope, they're having a contest.
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

324. Jeff Hansen
item for inclusion
Mon 26 Jul 2010

I recently published a book with Blue Lion Press, which uses Lulu as its printer. The press is edited by Jukka-Pekka Kervinen and Peter Ganick. It is entitled "Jazz Forms" and is essentially my selected poems from 1988-2008. You can purchase a copy at Lulu for $9 or simply download the entire book for free. The link is

http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/jazz-forms/5652529

"Poets have long been mesmerized by jazz. And when they get together in the same room they tend to resemble each other. But Jefferson Hansen has done something different in Jazz Forms. The impulse might still be mimetic but he translates what he is listening to into a work that is full of ecosystems and associations, full of things like birds and fires and air and bears and babies. The jazz in "Jazz Forms" leads to trance, is transformative."

â€”Juliana Spahr

↑ Index

325. Obododimma Oha
On Being a Cybernomad
Tue 27 Jul 2010

"Inhabiting cyberspace is something that should suit wanderlust. Cyberspace provides a relatively free environment for one to migrate from one location to the other."

Read full text of "On Being a Cybernomad<http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Home/5599126-146/on_being_a_cybernomad__.csp>"

at:
http://234next.com/csp/cms/sites/Next/Home/5599126-146/on_being_a_cybernomad__.csp

--
Obododimma Oha
http://udude.wordpress.com/

Dept. of English
University of Ibadan
Nigeria

&

Fellow, Centre for Peace & Conflict Studies
University of Ibadan

Phone: [redacted];
[redacted];
[redacted].

↑ Index

326. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 27 Jul 2010

CHRIS:

at this juncture, yeah, we're sadly at a dead end. but i do find myself weirdly shocked that you see opposition to poetry contests that call for reading fees as a species of belligerence. viz. there's really no _meaningful_ comparison between, on one hand, a _small_ press that solicits poets for "reading fees" and, on the other hand, a poet getting paid to teach within an always already institutionally compromised environment (& here i _fully_ recognize what you're saying).

& when you say, Chris, you ain't so immaculate yrself so don't call out anyone else for being dirty (i.e. "while collecting a payecheck ... "), that logic just don't fly. i mean, the aim for a few folks here has at times been geared toward defending contests as ethical practice by way of a logic that suggests any source of funding is bad so, in turn, all sources of funding are good. & this just simply is not the case. & it's precisely here that the "bad cut and paste" you pointed out in one of my previous msgs is perfectly applicable, precisely in spite of the logic that denied it.

in the end my intervention here is an expression of concern, not belligerence. it's worth marking the difference. if yr comments below, a few of which i take as clearly belligerent, are intended to suggest i intervened in this issue at this moment to draw attention to DTC -- well, that's not it by a long shot. DTC & the pubs always sell reasonably well, w/ or w/out the circus.

deadlocked hugs ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Mon, 7/26/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, July 26, 2010, 10:37 PM

Dear Rich--At this distance, here's what I know of your public presence in the past week: a massive launch from DTC/Punch Press (a piece of mail for which I'm incredibly grateful--holy shit the Marianne Morris poem!) & your intervention here. The first of these (the launch) is a tactic that very successfully addresses the concerns you want to address & offers one of the alternative models that Tyrone asked you to speak to. The second, as tactic, is thus far just a random belligerence, as far as I can tell, even though I understand that you & some others here don't think so. At least in its basic spirit anyhow.

I actually need to duck out of this thread for awhile & get some work done before the semester starts back up. Desperately trying to get back to writing a longer thing on Myung Mi Kim & Rachel Blau Duplessis--two poets (among many) whose work would be virtually stranded by the action you call for, unless I've somehow misunderstood your call. If I have misunderstood it, then please clarify--are you asking us to walk away from any press who runs a contest or charges a reading fee (taking w/us our money, our work, our reviews, our venues, etc)? I mean, in addition to listserv drive-by's, what's to be done that isn't already being done? (I'm really asking, here. If I'm missing what the action is, I'd like someone to clarify.)

I also want to ask you (& David--hi David) to seriously revisit the question of whether this type of absolutism can really be practiced from within the funded halls of a PhD program, *while collecting a paycheck for teaching undergraduate students who are largely going into hock to pay for their ticket

for that ride*. (I know it isn't making you rich, but come on.) I fully understand your "top-down" theory about contests (that institutional funding--in the form of a grant for a press (or even a fellowship, right?)--is less questionable than the contest model because it supposedly doesn't prey on vulnerable writers), but honestly: it's UB's listserv & UB's dime you're posting on. I'm being blunt (and maybe even a bit reductive) here NOT because I think you should be ashamed of yourselves for accepting that funding & using it in your small press activities--I think the oppositein fact--but your call to action (or the way you've chosen to articulate it? here & in David's blog post) starts to seem not a little evangelical & even insincere. Professionalization in the arts is exactly what you're wanting to confront, right (using a refusal of contest-model funding particularly for small presses as the staging ground)? Shit guys: analyze, then. & proceed w/caution before moving into your tactical phase.

As someone you & David have both published & as someone who's published both of you, I need you (both) to know I'm saying this out of affection, respect & concern. (I hope it's not necessary to say it, but in case it is--I wouldn't have joined in here if that weren't true.) There are a number of other things to resist or struggle to complicate, in addition to capital, that mingle with our thing: a model for community building that's based in haphazard antagonism (largely towards, I begin to fear, affiliation) comes to mind, for a start. That's not to say you don't have my support in doing the work of problematizing capital, but maybe we can multi-task?

Yours,
CJ Martin

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 2:23 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]>wrote:

> Sad news, Beyond Baroque is currently throwing its first contest.
>
> http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html
>
> <http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html>So here we have an independent cultural institution of long standing that has $1 rent, a mostly volunteer staff, and trustees/board members who are not donors, not effectively fundraising and grant writing except from government -- although it is possible that they are refusing to apply for funds from Readers Digest or the Irvine Foundation, etc. etc. -- that also refuses to make money from workshops (they are famous for offering free showers and workshops both! -- but they could charge for some classes like the Poetry Project does), the bookstore (by doing things like not asking local presses for donations of remaindered books or local poets for donations of used books; by not selling
> books online; by not looking up the value of some of the rare first editions
> that linger on the shelves), the archive, the art gallery, the > readings/performances themselves, relationships with other arts institutions, or the press (by not listing all of the books in print on Amazon; by having broken paypal links on the site -- they are at SPD).

>
> Nope, they're having a contest.
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

--
www.littleredleaves.com
www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

327. tyrone williams
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 27 Jul 2010

Rich,

Like Chris I too have to beg off (the semester starts a month from today and I have a number of pressing projects to finish) but I will simply point out a couple of things. Since readings and contests (not necessarily the same thing) usually serve to defray the costs of publishing books, the question of journals is not as pertinent here (yes, I know there are some journal publication contests too). You speak of political responsibility at the "ground" level but, vis-a-vis the university system, this is a misleading and potentially politically irresponsible metaphor. The "complex matrix" of university financing and funding serves, here, as a form of mystification to the extent all public university financial records are public documents that can be accessed and analyzed (the same is largely true for many private universities). One can, if one wishes to, "follow the money" back to its sources, savory or not. This is how many universities were forced to divest--or at least acknowledge--their stocks in South African (and affiliated) companies, businesses, etc. during apartheid. Your argument thus sounds like a version of Laurence Fishburne's character in the neo-noirish "Deep Cover": "the money don't know where it comes from." Finally, you continue to portray poets as naive saps suckered by the po' biz--that may be true for many but certainly not all. It goes without saying that none of this is a defense of reading fees and contests per se (though I think it very much depends on the particular contest and fee--do you get the winner's book? a book from the press of ones choosing? is it clear that the funds are being used to defray the costs of expenses? etc.), but it is a reminder that we, those who trade our labor for salaries or wages from universities (however layered the degrees of labor, exploitation, and privilege), too reap the benefits of others' "ground" work...

Tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: richard owens <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jul 25, 2010 4:42 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>
>CHRIS:
>
>man, in a lot ways i think our sense of the landscape is in alignment, but 2 things: 1. the DTC narrative a couple msgs back was aimed at a question rasied by Tyrone, who asked how DTC is funded and whether or not i (we) cld provide alternate models for subsidizing print (and digital) projects; 2. i do think that soliciting reading fees from poets is worse than _Paypalling_ cash to _Lulu_ (both of which are _wildly_ problematic), but i think this for a range of reasons i'm not sure can be adequately addressed here.
>
>you're right to point out the distance between unflinching action & unflinching rhetoric -- and i think this extends to another difference: the distinction between tactical strategy (i.e. the call to refuse contests; and the gesture of publicly refusing them in real time) and analysis (i.e. the suggestion that contests are themselves symptomatic of deeper tendencies that are no less corrupt and more firmly entrenched and thus less visible, more permissible, etc). i agree with you (and with Tyrone) the whole way here -- and i don't think i've suggested anyone involved in this conversation functions as the handmaiden of capital (tho i think we all, in odd ways, are, myself included).
>
>here i need to return to that longer msg i sent out re DTC, because there was an essential point i fear was missed: the question of pedagogy. many of us teach _in_ university systems &, as you say, far more of us have been stretched across the rack by universities than taken in by poetry contests. but here there's an incredible difference: again, universities, however corrupt (i'm thinking here of Cary Nelson's and Marc Bousquet's amazing investigations into the university industry; and of course the student loan scandal that was splayed open by mainstream media a couple years back), are deeply entrenched institutions that produce and reproduce forms of exploitation that are often difficult to name and difficult to resist -- & here the distance between praxis and analysis narrows,

but at the same time the extent to which we can intervene is also limited (i mean, you can fight city hall, but can you fight city hall?). this to say, when we talk abt funding > sources derived from institutions, we're talking abt, as i sd before, an incredibly complex matrix of relations that reside far beyond the immediate, the local, the ground. BUT (and this is the clearest point i want to make), when a _small_ press (a press _at_ the ground level; a press which _is not_ New Directions or City Lights or a major university press) introduces a contest which solicits reading fees from poets, the gesture is clearly not a good faith gesture but one that exploits the desire so many poets have simply to be read with care -- and it's precisely this which i find so incredibly saddening. and since we see these practices _at the ground level_ i do believe we are responsible for calling them into question (analysis) and, in this case, refusing them completely (tactic).
>
>it's far more difficult to challenge power at an institutional level -- and to identify how power exerts itself through our own behaviors (viz. i meant it when i asked folks to point out my own blindspots) -- but when we identify destructive practices at the ground level we have a responsibility to name them, refuse them and (again, thanks Tyrone) offer other possibilities. in this particular case --- the case of contest culture -- we might just be treating a symptom that discloses a far broader, systemic crisis, but i think, at the very least, the gesture is essential. as ever, that distance between institutional power and local community (and i take _this_ list as an instantiation of the "local") is crucial here.
>
>&, Chris, when you say contests are symptomatic of deeper tendencies, as i say, i agree & it's precisely here that the question of pedagogy is indispensable b/c i think the appeal to contests with reading fees as a funding model emerges out of a very particular view of what poetry is, what a "good" poem is and what a successful poet is -- and it's precisely this view of poetry, and cultural production in general, that has to be troubled, splayed open and radically reimagined. as Pierre pointed out a couple days back, when a poet asks "how do we get a foot in the door?", this question rests on a range of very troubling assumptions about what culture is, how it comes to us, how we respond to it and how we participate in its production.Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â
>
>hugs ... rich ...
>
>.....richard owens
>810 richmond ave
>buffalo NY 14222-1167

>
>damn the caesars, the journal
>damn the caesars, the blog
>
>--- On Sun, 7/25/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>To: [redacted]
>Date: Sunday, July 25, 2010, 2:54 PM
>
>Dear Rich,
>
>First, the Allen Fisher piece in the new DTC is amazing... Is there more >out there from this project? & I like your history a few notes back--much >appreciated.
>
>Just a rejoinder or two--the folks in this thread are not the voice of >capital, or not trying to be, many in fact trying not to be. I'd also say >at this point that universities have fleeced more unsuspecting citizens than >poetry contests, hands down--I really don't think there's a case there. & I >work for one. I definitely think there's more work to do on that front & >that contests might just be a symptom. But is it really so simple? Somehow >giving your money to lulu.com is more ethical than running a contest? Or >paying a web hosting service? (I do these, too.) I like your call to >unflinching action (or am seduced by it, when it's action) but if it's just >unflinching rhetoric we need, then fuck it. It's a sermon. (I've been >seduced by those, too. Am still, in all honesty.)
>
>I like your thing about how capital advances by denying absolute statements.
>Yep, agreed (see the contemporary university). Plenty of models, too, (old & >new, including sermons) where capital advances by way of the absolute. But I >don't think you're a capitalist--didn't & wouldn't call your absolute >statement fascist--we can leave this behavior to the pundits (who get rich >off it). I just think we could do some work to pry apart the demand for >legitimacy from these other demands, since legitimacy works too well as a >kind of coin, even in the absence of cashflow.
>
>...Institutions as pot dealers & contests as rock slingers? Sheesh, >analogies might be something to avoid here. I honestly thought it was a bad >cut-and-paste! It's funny, but it's just wrong. We're not doing god's work >in the university & the funds aren't just not clean, much of the product >isn't the healthy alternative (it's debt, in part, & it's massive). Or we're >doing the bank's work as much as anyone else's. & yet many of us still feel >compelled to live/work here--to talk here (here)--would it not be better to >address this without indulging in a dressing down of each other (or dressing >up of ourselves) according to whose wire rims are the least Palin-esque, >whose window the least Overton?

>
>Again, the thing that prompted me to chime in here was the thought that we >could/should be involved in measuring the relevance of our colleagues' >press work--that the use of contests/reading fees for funding could >possibly serve as a litmus test in that regard--that we should walk away >from those colleagues' press work who participate in these things as >irrelevant. Too much debris in that path. It's not a conservative position >to want to avoid lending a hand in piling it up.
>
>More shortly--C
>
>On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 10:40 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:
>
>> GARY &c:
>>
>> thanks for this clarification. like you, i too believe everyone's aright.
>> but, man, if youse catch me participating in hypersketchy practices that i >> might not see as sketchy -- if you see a blindspot that i somehow missed, >> then call it friendo. i'll prolly be grateful.
>>
>> re contests & funding: saying institutional sources of funding are no less >> compromised than those funds pulled in from contest reading fees is like >> saying:
>> man, the guy next door sells weed so don't climb on that one over there for
>> peddling
>> smack & crack. the logic is stunningly conservative -- like the smooth way
>> around to
>> saying: don't make waves coz don't nobody care &,
>> besides, poet worker bees never minded being exploited by contests in
>> the first place (wot is it Emma Goldman sz, those treated most poorly by >>Â a nation -- or, in this case, any other institution or practice -- are
>> it's >> fiercest defenders? i mean, just because we got rodents in the living room
>> don't mean we shld ignore the rats in the kitchen or the mites in the >> flour. (vermin = sketchy practices not people.)
>>

>> hugs ... rich ...
>>
>>
>>
>> .....richard owens
>> 810 richmond ave
>> buffalo NY 14222-1167
>>
>> damn the caesars, the journal
>> damn the caesars, the blog
>>
>> --- On Sat, 7/24/10, Gary Sullivan <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>> From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Saturday, July 24, 2010, 10:51 AM
>>
>> Dear Richard Owens,
>>
>> I started writing poetry when I was in grammar school, I don't remember >> what age exactly.
>>
>> I had read Lewis Carroll's Hunting of the Snark, which had scared the holy >> living crap out of me.
>>
>> I was so terrified, I didn't know what to do with myself. So I sat down and >> wrote a poem, trying to write something even more terrifying than Hunting
of
>> the Snark.
>>
>> I am not sure what my motivations were. I'm sure a good child psychologist >> would have a theory or two.
>>
>> This has been, more or less, my relationship to writing for the last 40 >> years or so.
>>
>> I'm not entirely unsympathetic to what you're saying. A piece I wrote in >> the 90s and published in How To Proceed in the Arts, "First Draft Imaginary >> Writer Survey," ends with the questions:
>>
>> "Why do we call it 'submission'? What are we collectively 'accepting'? What >> do we write about when we write about writing?"

>>
>> That said, I didn't post a bad poem to poetry.com to prove that such >> contests are bad, as it appears Catherine, who beat me to the punch, did.
>>
>> Nor to prove that people who know nothing about poetry can't judge it, as >> it appears Jennifer might believe. (I couldn't agree less with that >> sentiment.)
>>
>> I certainly did not do it to show up anyone's "usurious" practices. I do >> not like that word nor how it has been used to target a certain population.
>>
>> I did it because I was pissed off about what had happened to my >> grandfather. Less so his having been duped by poetry.com--I had mixed >> feelings about that, as it had actually given him some mild pleasure while >> he was on his deathbed. He was in great pain and dying, after all. As >> consolation, poetry.com made him feel as though he was a "real" poet.
>> (Whatever that is.) He recited his winning poem to me over the phone from >> memory while he was in the hospital.
>>
>> I was really pissed off because he had died, coughing up blood in a >> hospital with my grandmother at his side.
>>
>> I don't care whether or not poetry magazines or presses or universities or >> individuals hold contests and charge entry fees. I have never entered one, >> not one with a fee. But not because I am morally opposed to them. The simple >> truth is that I am a cheapskate. If I felt more than 75% sure that my >> manuscript stood a chance, I might pay the money and send it.
>>
>> I like Noah Eli Gordon. I met him once in Denver. He was sweet and funny >> and talked a lot about poetry. Which he clearly loves. More than I do, >> certainly. I have no interest in poetry beyond that which directly feeds, >> inspires, terrifies, surprises me. That which engages me. That's probably >> true for him, too, though I would imagine that he's engaged in far more >> being written today than I am.
>>
>> I have no opinion one way or the other about any contest that he might be >> promoting or managing or dreaming up or whathaveyou. That's his business.
>>
>> I do know that, when you are spotted doing anything beyond appearing to

be >> a humble poet dutifully hunched over a desk in the corner crafting your >> some-day important earth-shattering poems, that some poets sometimes like to >> trash talk you, call you a capitalist, usurer, careerist, fraud, whatever.
>> Poetry is a religion for the people who do this. They are welcome to it. I >> am a third or fourth generation atheist, and I have no interest in magical >> or ritualized thinking about anything, least of all poetry.
>>
>> I admire many of the people who have chimed in against poetry contests. But >> no more or less so than I admire Noah. Or anyone, for that matter, who might >> submit their work to the contest he announced.
>>
>> After all, my grandfather, who I loved very dearly, was a >> contest-submitter. Indeed: a contest winner! And his poem actually made me >> cry when he recited it to me, which is more than I can say for almost >> everything currently in print, however it might have wound up there.
>>
>> This is not all to say that you are wrong to feel how you do about >> contests. That's your business and you are of course as qualified as anyone >> else to think about such things. Just that, though I appreciate the >> call-out, I thought I should be open about the situation of having written >> that poetry.com poem and what my own honest feelings about contests are.
>> To me, they are, like those words "submission" and "acceptance," part of the >> landscape, and do define us to some extent. Just like everything else.
>>
>> Gary
>>
>>
>> _____
>> The New Busy is not the old busy. Search, chat and e-mail from your inbox.
>>
>> http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_3
>>
>>
>>
>>

>>
>>
>
>
>
>--
>www.littleredleaves.com
>www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com
>
>
>
>
>
>

Tyrone Williams

↑ Index

328. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Tue 27 Jul 2010

Mark,

What we are (at least I am) discussing here has nothing to do with the New Wave religiosity you are referring here. It's completely different, related but different from ethical values. We all know about W's "tortured" spirit, but what does that have to do with his philosophical writings?

As for Norman Malcolm -his book Dreaming is one of the silliest books ever written applying W's ideas.

Ciao,

Murat

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 6:07 PM, Mark Johnson <[redacted]>wrote:

> Wittgenstein believed that most (but by no means all) talk about the mystical or the transcendental or the spiritual amounted to a load of crap/delusion/self-delusion. And who can disagree? Step into a bookstore and > peruse the relevant sections. This is why he particularly loved Samuel Johnson's prayers (a small volume of which he often carried with him) -because they eschew claptrap, that is, are ethical writings rather than mystical in nature.
>
> It's an egregious mistake to caricature Wittgenstein as some sort of cold-hearted atheist materialist logician. Read anything about his life -the many memoirs left by his students (I like Norman Malcolm's best, a very moving small book), the biography by Ray Monk- and you find a man absolutely tortured by ethical considerations.

Mark

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 12:29 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat <[redacted]
wrote:

Hi, Jason,

" On the first point, it's notable I think that wittgenstein never denied that there might be a beetle in the box, but just that there was a meaningful way to talk about it. And yet he's clearly sympathetic to impulses in that regard. In his lecture on ethics, while denying that there can be "the ultimate good" as a meaningful object of discourse, he also says that he understands the impulse to try to talk about it nevertheless and he would never suggest that anyone should not try to talk about it because the attempt is in itself valuable. There are further two remarks that I think are telling. First there's the comment that there are two books in the Tractatus, first everything he wrote, and second everything he didn't write (because he couldn't), and of the two the latter is far more important. Second the section from the tractatus which I've never found him repudiating that I think speaks to this is 6.4 (all propositions are of equal value) and the comments to it. I'll quote here at length:

"6.41 The sense of the world must lie outside the world. In the world everything is as it is and happens as it does happen. In it there is no value -- and if there were, it would be of no value."

Do you not see the circularity of Wittgenstein's argument? While he pays lip service to by being "sympathetic" to ethical impulses, he condescends to it and relegates it to subservient category. If he can not talk "meaningfully" about something, then he does not talk about it. Therefore, that thing becomes invisible: "he didn't write about it because he couldn't." On a grand scale, is this argument any different from the drunkard who looks for the key under the light because that's where the light is, not necessarily where the key is?

Wittgenstein never explores or goes after that "outside" world ("the sense of the world"). His thinking concerns itself only with what "as it is and happens as it does happen."

Here I think an analysis of syntax is important -specifically the English syntax, composed of subject and predicate- is important. That is the syntax for an empirical view of the world -where things either happen (are true) or don't happen (are not true). Wittgeinstein accepts this implicitly as the paradigm, as far as I can tell, with defending why.

*Now, instead, consider a syntactical structure replete with conjunctive forms (a syntax of possibilities, of potential thought) -as the agglutinative Turkish syntax is, which records thought in the process of emerging (once again, see Eda Anthology), not as true or false but as process, then a philosophical view of such a world would be totally different -pre-analytic, much more inclusive, in which a "subject-predicate"
construction is only a part.*

*"If there is a value which is of value, it must lie outside all happening and being-so. For all happening and being-so is accidental.
What makes it non-accidental cannot lie in the world, for otherwise this would again be accidental.*

It must lie outside the world."

Here Wittgenstein is practicing, is following Hume's radical skepticism about the "innate logic" of reality to which the continental philosophy (from Spinoza to Kant, etc.) is a counterpoint.

"6.42 Hence also there can be no ethical propositions."

Here one can see W's circular thinking in practice.

"Propositions cannot express anything higher."

Yes, this is true if the only possible or valid linguistic structure having any hold to reality consisted of the propositions, that is to say, subject-predicate structure. This is a priori assumption on W's part having to do, as far as I can see, very little connection to reality, the state state in which language function. Subject=predicate is a mere abstraction from it.

"6.43 If good or bad willing changes the world, it can only change the limits of the world, not the facts; not the things that can be expressed in language."

*It seems to me wrong. If you change the limits of language (more specifically of a language, that's why the importance of translation), you are changing what can be said in it. As I said, here lies the crucial importance of translation and Benjamin's thought about it -on disintegration, fragmentation, etc.*

*"In brief, the world must thereby become quite another, it must so to speak
wax or wane as a whole.*

The world of the happy is quite another than that of the unhappy."

W. ignores the consequences of what he is saying here.

"6.44 Not how the world is, is the mystical, but that it is."

This sentence remind me of Einstein's "God does not play dice with the universe." Cute, what it does not enter Einstein's thoughts in physics (unless I misunderstand him).

*"6.45 The contemplation of the world sub specie aeterni is its contemplation
as a limited whole.*

The feeling that the world is a limited whole is the mystical feeling."

That's where the great divide between W. and Benjamin comes. Benjamin is all for breaking down these "wholes" in the realm of "ideal language. He points > us to an outline of "a structure of escape."

>
> "Those are the sort of remarks, which he continually made whenever he returned to notions of value and judgement, that I mean when I refer to Wittgenstein's mysticism. One of the things that I think a large number of casual wittgenstein readers misunderstand is the idea that "the limits of the language form the limits of my world" is not a expression of a sort of nominalism, that is, it's not a statement about the world, it's a statement about language. the huge aspect of reality about which we are incapable of having meaningful discourse because we can't say anything meaningful about it, that for Wittgenstein is the most important part, and in that part of human life lies all of the traditional notions of occultism, spirituality, faith, and religion."
>
> That's where Benjamin goes beyond Wittgeinstein, essentially in my opinion rebuts him.
>
> "B RE: Spicer. He does, I think, form a touchstone. as does"
>
> Yes.
>
> "C. I'm going to plead ignorance on this point because I haven't read the anthology yet, but if I understand the idea then I think I might agree. I tend to think of modernism as having more tension present in it tho at least in its attitudes, and I also think it starts much earlier, given my opinion that not a lot of people agree with me about that Moby Dick is the first postmodern novel and therefore the modernist postmodernist tension dates to the nineteenth century at least. As for the german romantics, i'm less well versded. I have been reading Goethe lately and it's very much resonating with me in a way that I haven't fully integrated in my thinking yet, but I think i can see what you're getting at there."
>
> *I think you will find the Eda anthology very interesting. A hundred twenty page selection from it (with a few additional essays) has appeared in a special section in Jacket (http://jacketmagazine.com/34/eda-essays.sh)*

*I agree with you completely about Moby Dick.*

"D. You're right that Grenier is a special case, and I'll admit i was maybe being a little propagandistic in my cooption of Language poetry. I have a hard time seeing them all as a unified group in any case, but they're a little too important to me personally to allow for the outright materialism that I felt Adam painted them with in his piece, although I think he's largely right. The appeal to Grenier, I will confess, could be just some sleight of hand to try to rescue a larger movement from a specific criticism, and I think it's fair to call me on that. That said, I don't much care if any of the big Language folks agree that their work is suspicious of the materiality of language, i think i see it there anyway as a sort of irony that has to counterbalance the extreme focus on the textuality of writing. To me, reading something like the Chinese Notebook, for example, I feel like there's a certain amount of whistling at the dark that's going on, at least as it strikes me."

I sympathize with your divided loyalty about Language School poets, but I think one should call a spade a spade.

E. I am very much looking forward to it!

I'll announce it the moment it is out.

Thank you again for your very thoughtful remarks.

Ciao,

Murat

On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 4:13 PM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]> wrote:

Hi Murat,
Excellent feedback, thanks!

On the first point, it's notable I think that wittgenstein never denied that there might be a beetle in the box, but just that there was a meaningful way to talk about it. And yet he's clearly sympathetic to impulses in that regard. In his lecture on ethics, while denying that > there > can be "the ultimate good" as a meaningful object of discourse, he also says > that he understands the impulse to try to talk about it nevertheless and > he > would never suggest that anyone should not try to talk about it because the > attempt is in itself valuable. There are further two remarks that I think > are telling. First there's the comment that there are two books in the > Tractatus, first everything he wrote, and second everything he didn't write > (because he couldn't), and of the two the latter is far more important.

> Second the section from the tractatus which I've never found him repudiating > that I think speaks to this is 6.4 (all propositions are of equal value)
> and
> the comments to it. I'll quote here at length:
>
> "6.41 The sense of the world must lie outside the world. In the world
> everything is as it is and happens as it does happen. In it there is no > value -- and if there were, it would be of no value.
>
> If there is a value which is of value, it must lie outside all happening
> and being-so. For all happening and being-so is accidental.
> What makes it non-accidental cannot lie in the world, for otherwise this > would again be accidental.
>
> It must lie outside the world.
>
> 6.42 Hence also there can be no ethical propositions.
>
> Propositions cannot express anything higher.
>
> 6.43 If good or bad willing changes the world, it can only change the > limits of the world, not the facts; not the things that can be expressed
> in
> language.
>
> In brief, the world must thereby become quite another, it must so to speak
> wax or wane as a whole.

> The world of the happy is quite another than that of the unhappy.
>
> 6.44 Not how the world is, is the mystical, but that it is.
>
> 6.45 The contemplation of the world sub specie aeterni is its contemplation as a limited whole.
>
> The feeling that the world is a limited whole is the mystical feeling."
>
> Those are the sort of remarks, which he continually made whenever he returned to notions of value and judgement, that I mean when I refer to Wittgenstein's mysticism. One of the things that I think a large number of casual wittgenstein readers misunderstand is the idea that "the limits of the language form the limits of my world" is not a expression of a sort of nominalism, that is, it's not a statement about the world, it's a statement about language. the huge aspect of reality about which we are incapable of having meaningful discourse because we can't say anything meaningful about it, that for Wittgenstein is the most important part, and in that part of human life lies all of the traditional notions of occultism, spirituality, faith, and religion.
>
> B RE: Spicer. He does, I think, form a touchstone. as does
>
> C. I'm going to plead ignorance on this point because I haven't read the anthology yet, but if I understand the idea then I think I might agree. I tend to think of modernism as having more tension present in it tho at least in its attitudes, and I also think it starts much earlier, given my opinion that not a lot of people agree with me about that Moby Dick is the first postmodern novel and therefore the modernist postmodernist tension dates to the nineteenth century at least. As for the german romantics, i'm less well versded. I have been reading Goethe lately and it's very much

resonating with me in a way that I haven't fully integrated in my thinking yet, but I think i can see what you're getting at there.

D. You're right that Grenier is a special case, and I'll admit i was maybe being a little propagandistic in my cooption of Language poetry. I have a hard time seeing them all as a unified group in any case, but they're a little too important to me personally to allow for the outright materialism that I felt Adam painted them with in his piece, although I think he's largely right. The appeal to Grenier, I will confess, could be just some sleight of hand to try to rescue a larger movement from a specific criticism, and I think it's fair to call me on that. That said, I don't much care if any of the big Language folks agree that their work is suspicious
of the materiality of language, i think i see it there anyway as a sort of irony that has to counterbalance the extreme focus on the textuality of writing. To me, reading something like the Chinese Notebook, for example, feel like there's a certain amount of whistling at the dark that's going
I
on,
at least as it strikes me.

E. I am very much looking forward to it!

Regards,
Jason

On Jul 25, 2010, at 10:54 AM, Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

Jason,

Thank you for your very interesting blog entry. I have a few questions relating to it.

a) You mention "Wittgenstein's thoroughgoing linguistic mysticism that remained present in all of his works from the Tractatus Logic-Philosophicus onward." Could you elaborate on this more? While I agree with you that the inner logic of Wittgenstein's own thought led him to a wall against which beat (fly in a box), I am not sure how he transcended it. In fact, he himself would have objected to any idea of transcendence? His followers definitely rejected any hint or use of the concept of mysticism while applying his thought on language games to poetics. Isn't "mysticism" a dirty word among poets or poetry thinkers who refer to Wittgenstein most?

b) I am glad you point to the importance of Emerson and transcendentalism in American poetry (and 19th century prose; but in your list of poets sustaining the "spiritual" tradition you ignore a crucial figure, Jack Spicer.

c) One generally assumes the "irrelevance" of Romanticism, at least English Romanticism (German Romanticism is very different) to our present pursuit. What about the most recent, extremely interesting Millennium Anthology which attempts to re-cast Romanticism in a new light, as a precursor to modernism. Do you buy that? I think the 19th century German Romanticism (a figure like Novalis as much as Blake) has a lot to say to us in a pursuit of the metaphysical /spiritual in poetry.

d) "It's there in Robert Grenier's famous written proclamation "I hate speech" as well as in the opposite and too often unanalyzed Deconstructionist skepticism towards writing. As such both in the Language poets and the late post-structuralism, there is already present a fair amount of suspicion of the materiality of language..."

This would be true if you really consider Robert Grenier a language poet; to me, the very opposite is true. Grenier's statement is much nearer to

*the Turkish poet Orhan Veli's statement: "We wish it were possible to dump
even language itself." (Eda Anthology). As you say, believing in the immateriality of language, he uses visual and constructive/serial means
to show it. I do not think most language school poets would admit to any "suspicion of the materiality of language..." though you are trying to get them to your side.*

*e) "To my way of thinking, poetry at its best serves as a sort of javelin
to be launched at the veil of language beyond which lies the mystical which can only be indicated or pointed to but not directly talked about. Poetry should always be pushing at the limits of language..."*

*Wait until The Spiritual Life of Replicants comes out by Talisman Books
this fall. SL is part VI of a longer poem The Structure of Escape:
.A
Comic Essay On Poetry.*

Ciao,

Murat

*On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 2:13 AM, Jason Quackenbush <[redacted]>
wrote:*

*Hi Adam,
This essay really got me thinking, but as I wrote a response I realized
I
had too much to say to want to spill the whole thing onto the list, so
I
wrote it up as a blog post here:*

http://www.wetasphalt.com/content/mind-body-spirit-whatever-new-poetics-metaphysical

I'd very much like to here what you (or anybody else for that matter) think.

Regards,
JF Quackenbush
[redacted]

On Jul 18, 2010, at 3:14 PM, Adam Fieled wrote:

This is an essay of mine newly published in Word for Word, "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry":

http://www.wordforword.info/vol17/Fieled.htm

Many thanks to Jonathan Minton.

Enjoy.

Adam

guidelines

guidelines

guidelines

↑ Index

329. David Hadbawnik
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 27 Jul 2010

hello, cj!

extreme, yes. evangelical? god, i hope not. insincere? i see how it could seem so, but again, no.

i feel like something IS being misunderstood here, to a certain extent. perhaps on both sides, i dunno. my feeling is not that getting top-down funding of any sort -- be that institutional or sliding-scale subscription, or outright calls for donations from rich friends or relatives -- is pure as the driven snow. far from it. but if i am able to channel funds from a certain source and put that to the service of printing poems and b-sides and chaps, meanwhile throwing business to local printers and places like boxcar press, i do feel like that's categorically different than the contest model, which is based on growth (always got to build up and get more entries), and as has already been said, soliciting funds from hundreds of poets who do not have a chance at winning and are not going to get a full or fair read. i just do.

but as i state in my blog post, i started habenicht in 2000. at that time i worked various part-time jobs and everything came from my own dime. i created a budget and determined this is how much i can spend on that book, and i hustled to sell enough books to break even, more or less. now that i've cut my teeth doing that, the funding i receive to help with kadar koli allows me to do a SLIGHTLY larger journal, with a SLIGHTLY larger print run. i am about to take two boxes to the post office and this will go out entirely from my pocket. but here, i feel like, we're getting into gradations of purity, which was not the point at all.

to me, the point is simply to LOOK AROUND at the landscape and determine what is acceptable to you or not, as a poet, as a publisher, as a person involved with poetry at whatever level. the reason the intervention took place here (and on my blog) is that these are (virtual) spaces that such people frequent. it's not a drive-by just meant to stir things up. in the sense of spurring this discussion, which has already been both passionate and nuanced without devolving into mindless flaming, it's already been successful in my book. it has certainly made me rethink some of my heated rhetoric and extreme views -- though i doubt that for me personally those views will change, i understand better where folks are coming from -- and hopefully for others it's done the same. but again, look around and decide this is that i want from the poetry publishing world, this is what i don't want. and how can i change that? what could be done differently? the remarkable success of dos press in concert with LRL would certainly seem to be a model that i find admirable.

in that sense i feel like we are trying to multitask, though perhaps in a different sense than you mean -- as alongside these discussions are other discussions and i am constantly thinking about the next phase of what all this means in terms of action...

sincerely,

david

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 10:37 PM, Little Red Leaves <
[redacted]> wrote:

> *Dear Rich--At this distance, here's what I know of your public presence in the past week: a massive launch from DTC/Punch Press (a piece of mail for which I'm incredibly grateful--holy shit the Marianne Morris poem!) & your* > *intervention here. The first of these (the launch) is a tactic that very successfully addresses the concerns you want to address & offers one of the alternative models that Tyrone asked you to speak to. The second, as tactic,* > is thus far just a random belligerence, as far as I can tell, even though I understand that you & some others here don't think so. At least in its basic > spirit anyhow.
>
> *I actually need to duck out of this thread for awhile & get some work done before the semester starts back up. Desperately trying to get back to writing a longer thing on Myung Mi Kim & Rachel Blau Duplessis--two poets (among many) whose work would be virtually stranded by the action you call for, unless I've somehow misunderstood your call. If I have misunderstood it, then please clarify--are you asking us to walk away from any press who* > *runs a contest or charges a reading fee (taking w/us our money, our work, our reviews, our venues, etc)? I mean, in addition to listserv drive-by's, what's to be done that isn't already being done? (I'm really asking, here. If I'm missing what the action is, I'd like someone to clarify.)*
>
> I also want to ask you (& David--hi David) to seriously revisit the question > *of whether this type of absolutism can really be practiced from within the funded halls of a PhD program, while collecting a paycheck for teaching undergraduate students who are largely going into hock to pay for their ticket for that ride. (I know it isn't making you rich, but come on.) I fully understand your "top-down" theory about contests (that institutional funding--in the form of a grant for a press (or even a fellowship, right?)--is less questionable than the contest model because it supposedly doesn't prey on vulnerable writers), but honestly: it's UB's listserv & UB's* > dime you're posting on. I'm being blunt (and maybe even a bit reductive)

here NOT because I think you should be ashamed of yourselves for accepting that funding & using it in your small press activities--I think the oppositein fact--but your call to action (or the way you've chosen to articulate it?
*here & in David's blog post) starts to seem not a little evangelical & even insincere. Professionalization in the arts is exactly what you're wanting to confront, right (using a refusal of contest-model funding particularly for small presses as the staging ground)? Shit guys: analyze, then. & proceed w/caution before moving into your tactical phase.*

As someone you & David have both published & as someone who's published both of you, I need you (both) to know I'm saying this out of affection, respect & concern. (I hope it's not necessary to say it, but in case it is--I wouldn't have joined in here if that weren't true.) There are a number of other things to resist or struggle to complicate, in addition to capital, that mingle with our thing: a model for community building that's based in haphazard antagonism (largely towards, I begin to fear, affiliation) comes to mind, for a start. That's not to say you don't have my support in doing the work of problematizing capital, but maybe we can multi-task?

Yours,
CJ Martin

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 2:23 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]
wrote:

Sad news, Beyond Baroque is currently throwing its first contest.

http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html

<http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html>So here we have an independent cultural institution of long standing that has $1 rent, a mostly volunteer staff, and trustees/board members who are not donors, not effectively fundraising and grant writing except from government -- although it is possible that they are refusing to apply for funds from Readers Digest or the Irvine Foundation, etc. etc. -- that also refuses to make money from workshops (they are famous for offering free showers and workshops both! --
but they could charge for some classes like the Poetry Project does), the bookstore (by doing things like not asking local presses for donations of remaindered books or local poets for donations of used books; by not selling
books online; by not looking up the value of some of the rare first editions

> that linger on the shelves), the archive, the art gallery, the readings/performances themselves, relationships with other arts institutions, or the press (by not listing all of the books in print on Amazon; by having broken paypal links on the site -- they are at SPD).
>
> Nope, they're having a contest.
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> www.littleredleaves.com
> www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

330. Jeffrey Side

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Solzhenitsyn Jukebox" by Ann Bogle

Tue 27 Jul 2010

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œSolzhenitsyn Jukeboxâ€ by Ann Bogle

Description:

Ann Bogle's â€œSolzhenitsyn Jukeboxâ€ is a collection of stories where texts create themselves out of shreds of recollections, leaps of logic, and the constant self-adjustment of narrative imperatives; spinning themselves out in the process of going along under their own momentum. This is akin to what the critic and culturologist Mikhail Iampolsky referred to as the poetry of â€œcaresseâ€.

Available as a free ebook here:

http://www.lulu.com/content/e-book/solzhenitsyn-jukebox/9145301

↑ Index

331. Bobby Baird

News from DEpress: Poems and Fake Book Reviews by Joshua Baldwin

Tue 27 Jul 2010

---

depress <http://www.digitalemunction.com/press/> the print deployment of digital emunction <http://digitalemunction.com/>, is excited to present its inaugural publication: Poems and Fake Book Reviews, a chapbook by DE contributor Joshua Baldwin.

Taking readers on a wild romp across a deranged and timeless America of the imagination, *Poems and Fake Book Reviews *adds six exclusive fake book reviews to the nine that originally appeared at *digital emunction<http://digitalemunction.com/>
*.

The book also includes the poems “Red Hook Fragments,” “Los Angeles Series” (with striking ink illustrations by the author), and “Four Architecture Poems.” Hilarious and madcap, Baldwin's Poems and Fake Book Reviews bursts at the seams with absurdity and wild discovery, and is a true literary entertainment.

Poems and Fake Book Reviews was produced in a limited edition of 100, with teal endpapers and a beautiful letterpress cover printed by Seattle's Fernandez and Sons.

BUY A LIMITED EDITION
COPY OF POEMS AND FAKE BOOK REVIEWS
FOR JUST $10
(VIA PAYPAL + S&H
INCLUDED)<https://www.paypal.com/cgi-bin/webscr?cmd=_s-xclick&hosted_button_id=9NSHZV394259S>

Joshua Baldwin’s poems and real book reviews have appeared in Chicago Review, The Brooklyn Rail, Publishers Weekly, and other publications. His novella, The New York Sun: A Story of Los Angeles will be published by Turtle Point Press in the fall of 2011. He graduated from the college at the University of Chicago in 2006 and lives in Brooklyn.

Also: Check out the new *de*press page at http://www.digitalemunction.com/press/

++++++++

Robert P. Baird
robertpbaird.com
digitalemunction.com

↑ Index

332. Kyle Schlesinger

WINKFIELD, CHAMPION, CLAY, & BASINSKI AT POEMS & PICTURES | Center for Book Arts, NYC

Tue 27 Jul 2010

Artist Talk:
Poems and Pictures
A Renaissance
in the Art of the Book (1946-1981)

Wednesday, July 28, 6:30 pm

Featuring:
Trevor Winkfield
Miles Champion
Steve Clay

Moderated by Michael Basinski, Curator of the Poetry Collection at the University of Buffalo

Suggested donation:
$10 / $5 for members

Trevor Winkfield was born in Leeds, England and moved to New York in 1969. He is an acclaimed visual artist who has had twelve solo exhibitions and won numerous awards for his work. As a review of his work in The New Yorker said, "Winkfield's patented blend of Pop Art, Surrealism and Victoriana remains a dependable source of formal and poetic gratification."

Miles Champion is a poet. His books include Compositional Bonbons Placate, Sore Models, Three Bell Zero and How to Laugh (forthcoming from Adventures in Poetry). Providence, an artist's book in collaboration with Jane South, was published by Sienese Shredder Editions in 2008. His recent writing appears in American Book Review, Critical Quarterly, Mimeo Mimeo, PN Review and The Poetry Project Newsletter.

Steve Clay is an author and the publisher of Granary Books. For over twenty years, Granary Books has brought together writers, artists, and bookmakers to investigate verbal/visual relations in the time-honored spirit of independent publishing. Granary's mission-to produce, promote, document, and theorize new works exploring the intersection of word, image, and page-has earned the Press a reputation as one of the most unique and significant small publishers operating today. Steve Clay has authored or co-authored A Book of the Book with Jerome Rothenberg, A Secret Location on the Lower East Side with Rodney Phillips, and When Will The Book be Done?

Michael Basinski is the Assistant Curator of the Poetry/Rare Books Collection of the University Libraries, SUNY at Buffalo. His poems, articles and reviews have appeared in numerous publications including: Proliferation, Terrible Work, Deluxe Rubber Chicken, Boxkite, The Mill Hunk Herald, Yellow Silk, The Village Voice, Object, Oblek, Score, Generator, Juxta, Poetic Briefs, Another Chicago Magazine, Sure: A Charles Bukowski Newsletter, Moody Street Irregulars: A Jack Kerouac Newsletter, Kiosk, Earth's Daughters, Atticus Review, Mallife, Taproot, Transmog, B-City, House Organ, First Intensity, Mirage No.4/Period(ical), Lower Limit Speech, Texture, R/IFT, Chain, Antenym, Bullhead, Poetry New York, First Offence, and many others. For more than twenty years he has performed his choral voice collages and sound texts with his intermedia performance ensemble: The Ebma, which has released two Lps: SEA and Enjambment. His books include: Idyll (Juxta Press, 1996), Heebee-jeebies (Meow Press, 1996), SleVep (Tailspin Press, 1995), Vessels (Texture Press, 1993), Cnyttan (Meow Press, 1993), Mooon Bok(Leave Books, 1992), and Red Rain Too (1992) and Flight to the Moon (1993) from Run Away Spoon Press.

Poems and Pictures:
A Renaissance in the Art of the Book (1946-1981)
Organized by Kyle Schlesinger, Proprietor of Cuneiform Press.

Poems & Pictures examines relationships between visual and language art. The exhibit features over 60 books produced between 1946 and 1981, as well as paintings, collages, periodicals, and ephemera. Poets, artists and collaborators include Wallace Berman, Joe Brainard, Robert Creeley, Jim Dine, Johanna Drucker, Philip Guston, Joanne Kyger, Emily McVarish, Karen Randall, Larry Rivers, George Schneeman, and many more.

A comprehensive catalog accompanies this exhibition.

Center for Book Arts
28 West 27th Street, Third Floor
New York, New York 10001
[redacted]
www.centerforbookarts.org

↑ Index

333. David Hadbawnik
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 27 Jul 2010

---

p.s. -- with regards to the question of higher education

i came to the decision to apply to an MFA program while auditing tom clark's grad class at new college, frustrated by my inability to keep up with the work due to my two part-time gigs. i considered going to new college -- bullet dodged there! -- and wound up at texas state because they offered me the best deal. purely mercenary. no apologies. there were certain specific things i wanted to study and work on in my poetry, and the stubborn midwestern boy in me did not see the point of going into debt to do that. while there, there were things i was unhappy with and i spoke up about them, often to the chagrin of tom and other higher-ups.

the phd is a different beast, as you know. nevertheless, ub offered me a good deal, again, and i felt that the blue state public university system would be more congenial to my own sensibilities and beliefs and ability to impact things through action. so i am the union rep for the department and i'm pretty active in the various ways open to grad students. we are struggling with not only budget cuts and a devastated state revenue, but the administration's proposed response to that, which is to essentially REMOVE u.b. from the SUNY system -- privatize it, and with that a free hand in raising tuition for already strapped students.

and, as with others who come to the poetics program, i felt that here would be a vital place for my press and poetry to grow. what i'm saying is that this is an exchange. i have no illusions about that. i'm here to get certain things, i'm offering my energy and labor, i'm trying to make it a worthwhile encounter for my students. i look at rich owens and his BALLADS project, e.g., [not to mention punch press which has already been covered previously] and i see a valuable roadmap for how i want to do this. that is, already having certain poetic concerns, he's grounded those in careful study of theory and primary texts which has helped that project flower into something which, i'm not embarrassed nor hesitant to say, will prove to be some of the more interesting work being done at this time.

that's why I'M here and i wouldn't be here if i didn't believe that, flawed though it may be, the higher ed. system didn't have something of value to offer and i, through it, something of value to offer in return.

sincerely,

d

On Tue, Jul 27, 2010 at 11:21 AM, David Hadbawnik <[redacted]>wrote:

hello, cj!

extreme, yes. evangelical? god, i hope not. insincere? i see how it could seem so, but again, no.

i feel like something IS being misunderstood here, to a certain extent. perhaps on both sides, i dunno. my feeling is not that getting top-down funding of any sort -- be that institutional or sliding-scale subscription, or outright calls for donations from rich friends or relatives -- is pure as the driven snow. far from it. but if i am able to channel funds from a certain source and put that to the service of printing poems and b-sides and chaps, meanwhile throwing business to local printers and places like boxcar press, i do feel like that's categorically different than the contest model, which is based on growth (always got to build up and get more entries), and as has already been said, soliciting funds from hundreds of poets who do not have a chance at winning and are not going to get a full or fair read. i just do.

but as i state in my blog post, i started habenicht in 2000. at that time i worked various part-time jobs and everything came from my own dime. i created a budget and determined this is how much i can spend on that book, and i hustled to sell enough books to break even, more or less. now that i've cut my teeth doing that, the funding i receive to help with kadar koli allows me to do a SLIGHTLY larger journal, with a SLIGHTLY larger print run. i am about to take two boxes to the post office and this will go out entirely from my pocket. but here, i feel like, we're getting into gradations of purity, which was not the point at all.

to me, the point is simply to LOOK AROUND at the landscape and determine what is acceptable to you or not, as a poet, as a publisher, as a person involved with poetry at whatever level. the reason the intervention took place here (and on my blog) is that these are (virtual) spaces that such people frequent. it's not a drive-by just meant to stir things up. in the sense of spurring this discussion, which has already been both passionate and nuanced without devolving into mindless flaming, it's already been successful in my book. it has certainly made me rethink some of my heated rhetoric and extreme views -- though i doubt that for me personally those views will change, i understand better where folks are coming from -- and hopefully for others it's done the same. but again, look around and decide this is that i want from the poetry publishing world, this is what i don't want. and how can i change that? what could be done differently? the remarkable success of dos press in concert with LRL would certainly seem to be a model that i find admirable.

in that sense i feel like we are trying to multitask, though perhaps in a different sense than you mean -- as alongside these discussions are other discussions and i am constantly thinking about the next phase of what all this means in terms of action...

sincerely,

david

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 10:37 PM, Little Red Leaves <
[redacted]> wrote:

*Dear Rich--At this distance, here's what I know of your public presence in the past week: a massive launch from DTC/Punch Press (a piece of mail for which I'm incredibly grateful--holy shit the Marianne Morris poem!) & your intervention here. The first of these (the launch) is a tactic that very successfully addresses the concerns you want to address & offers one of the alternative models that Tyrone asked you to speak to. The second, as tactic, is thus far just a random belligerence, as far as I can tell, even though I understand that you & some others here don't think so. At least in its basic spirit anyhow.*

*I actually need to duck out of this thread for awhile & get some work done before the semester starts back up. Desperately trying to get back to writing a longer thing on Myung Mi Kim & Rachel Blau Duplessis--two poets (among many) whose work would be virtually stranded by the action you call for, unless I've somehow misunderstood your call. If I have misunderstood it, then please clarify--are you asking us to walk away from any press who runs a contest or charges a reading fee (taking w/us our money, our work, our reviews, our venues, etc)? I mean, in addition to listserv drive-by's, what's to be done that isn't already being done? (I'm really asking, here. If I'm missing what the action is, I'd like someone to clarify.)*

*I also want to ask you (& David--hi David) to seriously revisit the question of whether this type of absolutism can really be practiced from within the funded halls of a PhD program, while collecting a paycheck for teaching undergraduate students who are largely going into hock to pay for their ticket for that ride. (I know it isn't making you rich, but come on.) I fully understand your "top-down" theory about contests (that institutional funding--in the form of a grant for a press (or even a fellowship, right?)--is less questionable than the contest model because it supposedly doesn't prey on vulnerable writers), but honestly: it's UB's listserv &*

UB's
dime you're posting on. I'm being blunt (and maybe even a bit reductive) here NOT because I think you should be ashamed of yourselves for accepting that funding & using it in your small press activities--I think the oppositein fact--but your call to action (or the way you've chosen to articulate it?
here & in David's blog post) starts to seem not a little evangelical &
even *insincere. Professionalization in the arts is exactly what you're* wanting to confront, right (using a refusal of contest-model funding particularly *for small presses as the staging ground)? Shit guys: analyze, then. &* proceed w/caution before moving into your tactical phase.

As someone you & David have both published & as someone who's published both of you, I need you (both) to know I'm saying this out of affection, respect & concern. (I hope it's not necessary to say it, but in case it is--I wouldn't have joined in here if that weren't true.) There are a number of other things to resist or struggle to complicate, in addition to capital, that mingle with our thing: a model for community building that's based in haphazard antagonism (largely towards, I begin to fear, affiliation) comes to mind, for a start. That's not to say you don't have my support in doing the work of problematizing capital, but maybe we can multi-task?

Yours,
CJ Martin

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 2:23 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]
wrote:

Sad news, Beyond Baroque is currently throwing its first contest.

http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html

<http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html>So here we have an independent cultural institution of long standing that has $1 rent, a mostly volunteer
staff, and trustees/board members who are not donors, not effectively fundraising and grant writing except from government -- although it is possible that they are refusing to apply for funds from Readers Digest
or
the Irvine Foundation, etc. etc. -- that also refuses to make money from workshops (they are famous for offering free showers and workshops both!
--

> but they could charge for some classes like the Poetry Project does), the > bookstore (by doing things like not asking local presses for donations of > remaindered books or local poets for donations of used books; by not selling
> books online; by not looking up the value of some of the rare first editions
> that linger on the shelves), the archive, the art gallery, the > readings/performances themselves, relationships with other arts > institutions, or the press (by not listing all of the books in print on > Amazon; by having broken paypal links on the site -- they are at SPD).
>
> Nope, they're having a contest.
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> www.littleredleaves.com
> www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

334. Jim Andrews

Re: "The Decay of Spirituality in Poetry"

Tue 27 Jul 2010

Wittgenstein is of much more interest to artists and possibly philosophers than he is to logicians and mathematicians. He didn't even understand Godel's work, thought that the subject matter of Godel's work was not amenable to logic, thought that because it involved the self-referential that it was as inevitably flawed as much of the rest of the logic involving self-reference. He read the most significant work in mathematical logic of his day and dismissed it as nonsense.

It seems he didn't think we could say much of real value about most interersting things. So he didn't really go for it the way Godel did.

Yu gotta at least go for it.

Wittgenstein went for it as a writer, as a kind of philosophical poet. Not as a logician.

He was a rich guy who gave it all away. That's pretty cool. But he was insignificant and even regressive as a logician. He missed the big boat of his time, the boat that Godel 'started'. That grew into Turing's boat and has sailed into now as the entirety of computing and all that has meant in so many fields.

ja
http://vispo.com

↑ Index

335. Stephen Ellis
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 27 Jul 2010

I entered my mother in a wet panty contest, and she won. That was the year after I won. And the year before that, a pear from our backyard orchard won. What color would a "panty-colored orchard" be? Let's have a contest about that. The winner gets a brassiere full of extroverted weiner meat. What color would a panty-colored Oscar Mayer weenie truck be? Let's have a contest. Let's have a contest about nothing. About nothing in a panty-colored Oscar Mayer pear truck orchard. Would a pear truck orchard named Oscar eat a brassiere full of extroverted weiner meat? Let's have a contest. A pear will be the judge. Panty-colored pear meat will slide up a weiner into an Oscar Mayer bank raid getaway truck, with a panty-ful of wetness. Let's have a context. Contest. Let's have a context contest. Here is what is: Where are you in it? Can you find yourself?

> Date: Mon, 26 Jul 2010 16:45:43 -0500
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
> To: [redacted]
>
> Trying to win prizes with poetry is like entering your mother in a wet t-shirt competition.

_____ The New Busy is not the too busy. Combine all your e-mail accounts with Hotmail. http://www.windowslive.com/campaign/thenewbusy?

tile=multiaccount&ocid=PID28326::T:WLMTAGL:ON:WL:en-US:WM_HMP:042010_4

↑ Index

336. Ryan Daley
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 27 Jul 2010

There's oiling spilling in the effin' Gulf,
But no worries
POETRY is where I should devote my time.
I'll raise the issue of predatory lending practices in the Po-Biz arena.
Ruth Lilly is holding hands with a sea monkey covered in oil
But $15 reading fees are craptacular! My protest scope shall top kill the injustice of paying someone to read your crappy sludge when what you really want is my now-lonely drill baby drill.

-Ryan

On Tue, Jul 27, 2010 at 9:30 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:

> CHRIS:
>
> at this juncture, yeah, we're sadly at a dead end. but i do find myself weirdly shocked that you see opposition to poetry contests that call for reading fees as a species of belligerence. viz. there's really no _meaningful_ comparison between, on one hand, a _small_ press that solicits poets for "reading fees" and, on the other hand, a poet getting paid to teach within an always already institutionally compromised environment (& here i _fully_ recognize what you're saying).
>
> & when you say, Chris, you ain't so immaculate yrself so don't call out anyone else for being dirty (i.e. "while collecting a payecheck ... "), that logic just don't fly. i mean, the aim for a few folks here has at times been geared toward defending contests as ethical practice by way of a logic that suggests any source of funding is bad so, in turn, all sources of funding are good. & this just simply is not the case. & it's precisely here that the "bad cut and paste" you pointed out in one of my previous msgs is perfectly applicable, precisely in spite of the logic that denied it.
>
> in the end my intervention here is an expression of concern, not belligerence. it's worth marking the difference. if yr comments below, a few of which i take as clearly belligerent, are intended to suggest i intervened in this issue at this moment to draw attention to DTC -- well, that's not it by a long shot. DTC & the pubs always sell reasonably well, w/ or w/out the circus.

deadlocked hugs ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Mon, 7/26/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:

From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Monday, July 26, 2010, 10:37 PM

*Dear Rich--At this distance, here's what I know of your public presence in the past week: a massive launch from DTC/Punch Press (a piece of mail for which I'm incredibly grateful--holy shit the Marianne Morris poem!) & your* *intervention here. The first of these (the launch) is a tactic that very successfully addresses the concerns you want to address & offers one of the alternative models that Tyrone asked you to speak to. The second, as tactic,* is thus far just a random belligerence, as far as I can tell, even though I understand that you & some others here don't think so. At least in its basic spirit anyhow.

*I actually need to duck out of this thread for awhile & get some work done before the semester starts back up. Desperately trying to get back to writing a longer thing on Myung Mi Kim & Rachel Blau Duplessis--two poets (among many) whose work would be virtually stranded by the action you call for, unless I've somehow misunderstood your call. If I have misunderstood it, then please clarify--are you asking us to walk away from any press who* *runs a contest or charges a reading fee (taking w/us our money, our work, our reviews, our venues, etc)? I mean, in addition to listserv drive-by's, what's to be done that isn't already being done? (I'm really asking, here. If I'm missing what the action is, I'd like someone to clarify.)*

I also want to ask you (& David--hi David) to seriously revisit the question

*of whether this type of absolutism can really be practiced from within the funded halls of a PhD program, while collecting a paycheck for teaching undergraduate students who are largely going into hock to pay for their ticket for that ride. (I know it isn't making you rich, but come on.) I fully understand your "top-down" theory about contests (that institutional funding--in the form of a grant for a press (or even a fellowship, right?)--is less questionable than the contest model because it supposedly doesn't prey on vulnerable writers), but honestly: it's UB's listserv & UB's* dime you're posting on. I'm being blunt (and maybe even a bit reductive) here NOT because I think you should be ashamed of yourselves for accepting that funding & using it in your small press activities--I think the oppositein fact--but your call to action (or the way you've chosen to articulate it?
*here & in David's blog post) starts to seem not a little evangelical & even insincere. Professionalization in the arts is exactly what you're wanting to confront, right (using a refusal of contest-model funding particularly for small presses as the staging ground)? Shit guys: analyze, then. & proceed w/caution before moving into your tactical phase.*

As someone you & David have both published & as someone who's published both of you, I need you (both) to know I'm saying this out of affection, respect & concern. (I hope it's not necessary to say it, but in case it is--I wouldn't have joined in here if that weren't true.) There are a number of other things to resist or struggle to complicate, in addition to capital, that mingle with our thing: a model for community building that's based in haphazard antagonism (largely towards, I begin to fear, affiliation) comes to mind, for a start. That's not to say you don't have my support in doing the work of problematizing capital, but maybe we can multi-task?

Yours,
CJ Martin

On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 2:23 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]
wrote:

Sad news, Beyond Baroque is currently throwing its first contest.

http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html

<http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html>So here we have an independent cultural institution of long standing that has $1 rent, a mostly volunteer
staff, and trustees/board members who are not donors, not effectively fundraising and grant writing except from government -- although it is > possible that they are refusing to apply for funds from Readers Digest or the Irvine Foundation, etc. etc. -- that also refuses to make money from workshops (they are famous for offering free showers and workshops both!

> --
> but they could charge for some classes like the Poetry Project does), the bookstore (by doing things like not asking local presses for donations of remaindered books or local poets for donations of used books; by not selling
> books online; by not looking up the value of some of the rare first editions
> that linger on the shelves), the archive, the art gallery, the readings/performances themselves, relationships with other arts institutions, or the press (by not listing all of the books in print on Amazon; by having broken paypal links on the site -- they are at SPD).
>
> Nope, they're having a contest.
>
> --
> All best,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]
>
> guidelines
>
> --
> www.littleredleaves.com
> www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com

↑ Index

337. Mark Weiss

Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition

Tue 27 Jul 2010

Yup, and the space program gave us teflon.

The question isn't individual benefit, it's the impact on the environment, which for most of those of us old enough to remember the old regime is pretty apparently dire.

At 01:31 PM 7/27/2010, you wrote:
>p.s. -- with regards to the question of higher education
>
>i came to the decision to apply to an MFA program while auditing tom clark's >grad class at new college, frustrated by my inability to keep up with the >work due to my two part-time gigs. i considered going to new college -- >bullet dodged there! -- and wound up at texas state because they offered me >the best deal. purely mercenary. no apologies. there were certain specific >things i wanted to study and work on in my poetry, and the stubborn >midwestern boy in me did not see the point of going into debt to do that.
>while there, there were things i was unhappy with and i spoke up about them, >often to the chagrin of tom and other higher-ups.
>
>the phd is a different beast, as you know. nevertheless, ub offered me a >good deal, again, and i felt that the blue state public university system >would be more congenial to my own sensibilities and beliefs and ability to >impact things through action. so i am the union rep for the department and >i'm pretty active in the various ways open to grad students. we are >struggling with not only budget cuts and a devastated state revenue, but the >administration's proposed response to that, which is to essentially REMOVE >u.b. from the SUNY system -- privatize it, and with that a free hand in >raising tuition for already strapped students.
>
>and, as with others who come to the poetics program, i felt that here would >be a vital place for my press and poetry to grow. what i'm saying is that >this is an exchange. i have no illusions about that. i'm here to get certain >things, i'm offering my energy and labor, i'm trying to make it a worthwhile >encounter for my students. i look at rich owens and his BALLADS project, >e.g., [not to mention punch press which has already been covered previously] >and i see a valuable roadmap for how i want to do this. that is, already >having certain poetic concerns, he's grounded those in careful study of >theory and primary texts which has helped that project flower into something >which, i'm not embarrassed nor hesitant to say, will prove to be some of the >more interesting work being done at this time.
>
>that's why I'M here and i wouldn't be here if i didn't believe that, flawed >though it may be, the higher ed. system didn't have something of value to >offer and i, through it, something of value to offer in return.
>
>sincerely,
>
>d

>
>On Tue, Jul 27, 2010 at 11:21 AM, David Hadbawnik <[redacted]>wrote:
>
> > hello, cj!
> >
> > extreme, yes. evangelical? god, i hope not. insincere? i see how it could > > seem so, but again, no.
> >
> > i feel like something IS being misunderstood here, to a certain extent.
> > perhaps on both sides, i dunno. my feeling is not that getting top-down > > funding of any sort -- be that institutional or sliding-scale subscription, > > or outright calls for donations from rich > friends or relatives -- is pure as > > the driven snow. far from it. but if i am able to channel funds from a > > certain source and put that to the service of > printing poems and b-sides and > > chaps, meanwhile throwing business to local printers and places like boxcar
> > press, i do feel like that's categorically > different than the contest model, > > which is based on growth (always got to build up and get more entries),
and
> > as has already been said, soliciting funds > from hundreds of poets who do not > > have a chance at winning and are not going to get a full or fair read. i > > just do.
> >
> > but as i state in my blog post, i started habenicht in 2000. at that time i > > worked various part-time jobs and everything came from my own dime. i > > created a budget and determined this is how much i can spend on that book,
> > and i hustled to sell enough books to break even, more or less. now that > > i've cut my teeth doing that, the funding i receive to help with kadar koli > > allows me to do a SLIGHTLY larger journal, > with a SLIGHTLY larger print run.
> > i am about to take two boxes to the post office and this will go out > > entirely from my pocket. but here, i feel like, we're getting into > > gradations of purity, which was not the point at all.
> >
> > to me, the point is simply to LOOK AROUND at the landscape and determine > > what is acceptable to you or not, as a poet, as a publisher, as a person > > involved with poetry at whatever level. the reason the intervention took > > place here (and on my blog) is that these are (virtual) spaces that such > > people frequent. it's not a drive-by just meant to stir things up. in the > > sense of spurring this discussion, which has already been both passionate > > and nuanced without devolving into mindless flaming, it's already been > > successful in my book. it has certainly made me rethink some of my heated > > rhetoric and extreme views -- though i doubt that for me personally those > > views will change, i understand better where folks are coming from -- and > > hopefully for others it's done the same. but again, look around and decide > > this is that i want from the poetry publishing world, this is what i don't > > want. and how can i change that? what could be done differently? the > > remarkable success of dos press in concert with LRL would certainly seem

to > > be a model that i find admirable.
> >
> > in that sense i feel like we are trying to multitask, though perhaps in a > > different sense than you mean -- as alongside these discussions are other > > discussions and i am constantly thinking about the next phase of what all > > this means in terms of action...
> >
> > sincerely,
> >
> > david
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 10:37 PM, Little Red Leaves <
> > [redacted]> wrote:
> >
> >> Dear Rich--At this distance, here's what I know of your public presence in > >> the past week: a massive launch from DTC/Punch Press (a piece of mail
for > >> which I'm incredibly grateful--holy shit the Marianne Morris poem!) & > >> your > >> intervention here. The first of these (the launch) is a tactic that very > >> successfully addresses the concerns you want to address & offers one of
> >> the > >> alternative models that Tyrone asked you to speak to. The second, as > >> tactic, > >> is thus far just a random belligerence, as far as I can tell, even though
> >> I

> >> understand that you & some others here don't think so. At least in its > >> basic > >> spirit anyhow.
> >>
> >> I actually need to duck out of this thread for awhile & get some work done > >> before the semester starts back up. Desperately trying to get back to > >> writing a longer thing on Myung Mi Kim & Rachel Blau Duplessis--two poets
> >> (among many) whose work would be virtually stranded by the action you call > >> for, unless I've somehow misunderstood your call. If I have misunderstood
> >> it, then please clarify--are you asking us to walk away from any press
> >> who > >> runs a contest or charges a reading fee (taking w/us our money, our work,
> >> our reviews, our venues, etc)? I mean, in addition to listserv drive-by's, > >> what's to be done that isn't already being done? (I'm really asking, here.
> >> If I'm missing what the action is, I'd like someone to clarify.)
> >>
> >> I also want to ask you (& David--hi David) to seriously revisit the > >> question > >> of whether this type of absolutism can really be practiced from within the > >> funded halls of a PhD program, while collecting a paycheck for teaching > >> undergraduate students who are largely going into hock to pay for their > >> ticket for that ride. (I know it isn't making you rich, but come on.) I > >> fully understand your "top-down" theory about contests (that institutional > >> funding--in the form of a grant for a press (or even a fellowship, > >> right?)--is less questionable than the contest model because it supposedly > >> doesn't prey on vulnerable writers), but honestly: it's UB's listserv & > >> UB's
> >> dime you're posting on. I'm being blunt (and maybe even a bit reductive) > >> here NOT because I think you should be ashamed of yourselves for accepting > >> that funding & using it in your small press activities--I think the > >> oppositein fact--but your call to action (or the way you've chosen to > >> articulate it?
> >> here & in David's blog post) starts to seem not a little evangelical &
> >> even > >> insincere. Professionalization in the arts is exactly what you're > >> wanting

> >> to confront, right (using a refusal of contest-model funding particularly > >> for small presses as the staging ground)? Shit guys: analyze, then. & > >> proceed w/caution before moving into your tactical phase.
> >>
> >> As someone you & David have both published & as someone who's published
> >> both > >> of you, I need you (both) to know I'm saying this out of affection, > >> respect
> >> & concern. (I hope it's not necessary to say it, but in case it is--I > >> wouldn't have joined in here if that weren't true.) There are a number of > >> other things to resist or struggle to complicate, in addition to capital, > >> that mingle with our thing: a model for community building that's based in > >> haphazard antagonism (largely towards, I begin to fear, affiliation) comes > >> to mind, for a start. That's not to say you don't have my support in doing > >> the work of problematizing capital, but maybe we can multi-task?
> >>
> >> Yours,
> >> CJ Martin
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> On Mon, Jul 26, 2010 at 2:23 PM, Catherine Daly <[redacted]
> >> >wrote:
> >>
> >> > Sad news, Beyond Baroque is currently throwing its first contest.
> >> >
> >> > http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html
> >> >
> >> > <http://www.beyondbaroque.org/news.html>So here we have an independent > >> > cultural institution of long standing that has $1 rent, a mostly > >> volunteer
> >> > staff, and trustees/board members who are not donors, not effectively
> >> > fundraising and grant writing except from government -- although it is > >> > possible that they are refusing to apply for funds from Readers Digest
> >> or
> >> > the Irvine Foundation, etc. etc. -- that also refuses to make money from > >> > workshops (they are famous for offering free showers and workshops both!
> >> --

> >> > but they could charge for some classes like the Poetry Project does),
> >> the > >> > bookstore (by doing things like not asking local presses for donations
> >> of > >> > remaindered books or local poets for donations of used books; by not > >> > selling
> >> > books online; by not looking up the value of some of the rare first > >> > editions
> >> > that linger on the shelves), the archive, the art gallery, the > >> > readings/performances themselves, relationships with other arts > >> > institutions, or the press (by not listing all of the books in print on > >> > Amazon; by having broken paypal links on the site -- they are at SPD).
> >> >
> >> > Nope, they're having a contest.
> >> >
> >> > --
> >> > All best,
> >> > Catherine Daly
> >> > [redacted]
> >> >
> >> guidelines
> >> >
> >>
> >>
> >>
> >> --
> >> www.littleredleaves.com
> >> www.littleredleavesjournal.blogspot.com
> >>
> >>
> >
> >
>

New from Chax Press: Mark Weiss, As Landscape.
$16. Order from http://www.chax.org/poets/weiss.htm

"What a beautiful set of circumstances! What a lovely concatenation of particulars. Here is the poet alive in every sense of the word, and through every one of his senses. Instead of missing a beat or a part, Weiss' fragments are
like Chekhov's short storiesthe more that gets

left out, the more they seem to contain… One can hear echoes from all the various
ancestors...[but] the voice, at its center, its core, is pure Mark Weiss. His use of the fragment
is both elegant and bafflingly clear, a pure
musical threnody…[it] opens a window, not only
into a mind, but a person, a personality, this
human figure at the emotional center of the poem."

M.G. Stephens, in Jacket.
http://jacketmagazine.com/40/r-weiss-rb-stephens.shtml

↑ Index

338. richard owens
Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
Tue 27 Jul 2010

TYRONE:

what i find most incredibly frustrating at this stage in the conversation is that, as i sd in a previous msg directed at Chris & as i'll say here again, i do for the most part agree w/ what you're saying -- but, again & as ever, however we might choose to consider the relation of our publishing practices to the university structure and, through that, the relation of the university to capital, contests are contests & calls for reading fees (regardless of whether all entrants get the winner's bk or not) are corrupt in a clear & immediate way that i think is well worth responding to, however much a symptom the practice might be & however compromised other sources of funding might be.

re yr claim that i frame poets as saps: contests that solicit reading fees appear to target a _very_ particular demographic. i wld never frame these poets as saps, tho i sense these poets tend to be younger, eager to be read, eager to be published, without meaningful connections to other poetry communities and possibly less familiar with the landscape than those firmly embedded in existing poetry communities.

warmest ... rich ...

.....richard owens
810 richmond ave
buffalo NY 14222-1167

damn the caesars, the journal
damn the caesars, the blog

--- On Tue, 7/27/10, tyrone williams <[redacted]> wrote:

From: tyrone williams <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
To: [redacted]
Date: Tuesday, July 27, 2010, 10:22 AM

Rich,

Like Chris I too have to beg off (the semester starts a month from today and I have a number of pressing projects to finish) but I will simply point out a couple of things. Since readings and contests (not necessarily the same thing) usually serve to defray the costs of publishing books, the question of journals is not as pertinent here (yes, I know there are some journal publication contests too). You speak of political responsibility at the "ground" level but, vis-a-vis the university system, this is a misleading and potentially politically irresponsible metaphor. The "complex matrix" of university financing and funding serves, here, as a form of mystification to the extent all public university financial records are public documents that can be accessed and analyzed (the same is largely true for many private universities). One can, if one wishes to, "follow the money" back to its sources, savory or not. This is how many universities were forced to divest--or at least acknowledge--their stocks in South African (and affiliated) companies, businesses, etc. during apartheid. Your argument thus sounds like a version of Laurence Fishburne's character in the neo-noirish "Deep Cover": "the money don't know where it comes from." Finally, you continue to portray poets as naive saps suckered by the po' biz--that may be true for many but certainly not all. It goes without saying that none of this is a defense of reading fees and contests per se (though I think it very much depends on the particular contest and fee--do you get the winner's book? a book from the press of ones choosing? is it clear that the funds are being used to defray the costs of expenses? etc.), but it is a reminder that we, those who trade our labor for salaries or wages from universities (however layered the degrees of labor, exploitation, and privilege), too reap the benefits of others' "ground" work...

Tyrone

-----Original Message-----
>From: richard owens <[redacted]>
>Sent: Jul 25, 2010 4:42 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>
>CHRIS:
>
>man, in a lot ways i think our sense of the landscape is in alignment, but 2 things: 1. the DTC narrative a couple msgs back was aimed at a question rasied by Tyrone, who asked how DTC is funded and whether or not i (we) cld provide alternate models for subsidizing print (and digital) projects; 2. i do think that soliciting reading fees from poets is worse than _Paypalling_ cash to _Lulu_ (both of which are _wildly_ problematic), but i think this for a range of reasons i'm not sure can be adequately addressed here.

>
>you're right to point out the distance between unflinching action & unflinching rhetoric -- and i think this extends to another difference: the distinction between tactical strategy (i.e. the call to refuse contests; and the gesture of publicly refusing them in real time) and analysis (i.e. the suggestion that contests are themselves symptomatic of deeper tendencies that are no less corrupt and more firmly entrenched and thus less visible, more permissible, etc). i agree with you (and with Tyrone) the whole way here -- and i don't think i've suggested anyone involved in this conversation functions as the handmaiden of capital (tho i think we all, in odd ways, are, myself included).
>
>here i need to return to that longer msg i sent out re DTC, because there was an essential point i fear was missed: the question of pedagogy. many of us teach _in_ university systems &, as you say, far more of us have been stretched across the rack by universities than taken in by poetry contests. but here there's an incredible difference: again, universities, however corrupt (i'm thinking here of Cary Nelson's and Marc Bousquet's amazing investigations into the university industry; and of course the student loan scandal that was splayed open by mainstream media a couple years back), are deeply entrenched institutions that produce and reproduce forms of exploitation that are often difficult to name and difficult to resist -- & here the distance between praxis and analysis narrows, but at the same time the extent to which we can intervene is also limited (i mean, you can fight city hall, but can you fight city hall?). this to say, when we talk abt
 funding > sources derived from institutions, we're talking abt, as i sd before, an incredibly complex matrix of relations that reside far beyond the immediate, the local, the ground. BUT (and this is the clearest point i want to make), when a _small_ press (a press _at_ the ground level; a press which _is not_ New Directions or City Lights or a major university press) introduces a contest which solicits reading fees from poets, the gesture is clearly not a good faith gesture but one that exploits the desire so many poets have simply to be read with care -- and it's precisely this which i find so incredibly saddening. and since we see these practices _at the ground level_ i do believe we are responsible for calling them into question (analysis) and, in this case, refusing them completely (tactic).

>
>it's far more difficult to challenge power at an institutional level -- and to identify how power exerts itself through our own behaviors (viz. i meant it when i asked folks to point out my own blindspots) -- but when we identify destructive practices at the ground level we have a responsibility to name them, refuse them and (again, thanks Tyrone) offer other possibilities. in this particular case --- the case of contest culture -- we might just be treating a symptom that discloses a far broader, systemic crisis, but i think, at the very least, the gesture is essential. as ever, that distance between institutional power and local community (and i take _this_ list as an instantiation of the "local") is crucial here.
>
>&, Chris, when you say contests are symptomatic of deeper tendencies, as i say, i agree & it's precisely here that the question of pedagogy is indispensable b/c i think the appeal to contests with reading fees as a funding model emerges out of a very particular view of what poetry is, what a "good" poem is and what a successful poet is -- and it's precisely this view of poetry, and cultural production in general, that has to be troubled, splayed open and radically reimagined. as Pierre pointed out a couple days back, when a poet asks "how do we get a foot in the door?", this question rests on a range of very troubling assumptions about what culture is, how it comes to us, how we respond to it and how we participate in its production.
>
>hugs ... rich ...
>
>.....richard owens
>810 richmond ave
>buffalo NY 14222-1167
>
>damn the caesars, the journal
>damn the caesars, the blog
>
>--- On Sun, 7/25/10, Little Red Leaves <[redacted]> wrote:
>
>From: Little Red Leaves <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>To: [redacted]
>Date: Sunday, July 25, 2010, 2:54 PM
>
>Dear Rich,
>
>First, the Allen Fisher piece in the new DTC is amazing... Is there more >out there from this project? & I like your history a few notes back--much >appreciated.

>
>Just a rejoinder or two--the folks in this thread are not the voice of >capital, or not trying to be, many in fact trying not to be. I'd also say >at this point that universities have fleeced more unsuspecting citizens than >poetry contests, hands down--I really don't think there's a case there. & I >work for one. I definitely think there's more work to do on that front & >that contests might just be a symptom. But is it really so simple? Somehow >giving your money to lulu.com is more ethical than running a contest? Or >paying a web hosting service? (I do these, too.) I like your call to >unflinching action (or am seduced by it, when it's action) but if it's just >unflinching rhetoric we need, then fuck it. It's a sermon. (I've been >seduced by those, too. Am still, in all honesty.)
>
>I like your thing about how capital advances by denying absolute statements.
>Yep, agreed (see the contemporary university). Plenty of models, too, (old & >new, including sermons) where capital advances by way of the absolute. But I >don't think you're a capitalist--didn't & wouldn't call your absolute >statement fascist--we can leave this behavior to the pundits (who get rich >off it). I just think we could do some work to pry apart the demand for >legitimacy from these other demands, since legitimacy works too well as a >kind of coin, even in the absence of cashflow.
>
>...Institutions as pot dealers & contests as rock slingers? Sheesh, >analogies might be something to avoid here. I honestly thought it was a bad >cut-and-paste! It's funny, but it's just wrong. We're not doing god's work >in the university & the funds aren't just not clean, much of the product >isn't the healthy alternative (it's debt, in part, & it's massive). Or we're >doing the bank's work as much as anyone else's. & yet many of us still feel >compelled to live/work here--to talk here (here)--would it not be better to >address this without indulging in a dressing down of each other (or dressing >up of ourselves) according to whose wire rims are the least Palin-esque, >whose window the least Overton?
>
>Again, the thing that prompted me to chime in here was the thought that we >could/should be involved in measuring the relevance of our colleagues'
>press work--that the use of contests/reading fees for funding could >possibly serve as a litmus test in that regard--that we should walk away >from those colleagues' press work who participate in these things as >irrelevant. Too much debris in that path. It's not a conservative position >to want to avoid lending a hand in piling it up.

>
>More shortly--C
>
>On Sun, Jul 25, 2010 at 10:40 AM, richard owens <[redacted]>wrote:
>
>> GARY &c:
>>
>> thanks for this clarification. like you, i too believe everyone's aright.
>> but, man, if youse catch me participating in hypersketchy practices that i >> might not see as sketchy -- if you see a blindspot that i somehow missed, >> then call it friendo. i'll prolly be grateful.
>>
>> re contests & funding: saying institutional sources of funding are no less >> compromised than those funds pulled in from contest reading fees is like >> saying:
>> man, the guy next door sells weed so don't climb on that one over there for
>> peddling
>> smack & crack. the logic is stunningly conservative -- like the smooth way
>> around to
>> saying: don't make waves coz don't nobody care &,
>> besides, poet worker bees never minded being exploited by contests in >> the first place (wot is it Emma Goldman sz, those treated most poorly by >> a nation -- or, in this case, any other institution or practice -- are
>> it's >> fiercest defenders? i mean, just because we got rodents in the living room
>> don't mean we shld ignore the rats in the kitchen or the mites in the >> flour. (vermin = sketchy practices not people.)
>>
>> hugs ... rich ...
>>
>>
>>
>> .....richard owens
>> 810 richmond ave
>> buffalo NY 14222-1167
>>
>> damn the caesars, the journal
>> damn the caesars, the blog
>>
>> --- On Sat, 7/24/10, Gary Sullivan <[redacted]> wrote:
>>
>> From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>

>> Subject: Re: 2010 Subito Press Book Competition
>> To: [redacted]
>> Date: Saturday, July 24, 2010, 10:51 AM
>>
>> Dear Richard Owens,
>>
>> I started writing poetry when I was in grammar school, I don't remember >> what age exactly.
>>
>> I had read Lewis Carroll's Hunting of the Snark, which had scared the holy >> living crap out of me.
>>
>> I was so terrified, I didn't know what to do with myself. So I sat down and >> wrote a poem, trying to write something even more terrifying than Hunting
of
>> the Snark.
>>
>> I am not sure what my motivations were. I'm sure a good child psychologist >> would have a theory or two.
>>
>> This has been, more or less, my relationship to writing for the last 40
>> years or so.
>>
>> I'm not entirely unsympathetic to what you're saying. A piece I wrote in >> the 90s and published in How To Proceed in the Arts, "First Draft Imaginary >> Writer Survey," ends with the questions:
>>
>> "Why do we call it 'submission'? What are we collectively 'accepting'? What >> do we write about when we write about writing?"
>>
>> That said, I didn't post a bad poem to poetry.com to prove that such >> contests are bad, as it appears Catherine, who beat me to the punch, did.
>>
>> Nor to prove that people who know nothing about poetry can't judge it, as >> it appears Jennifer might believe. (I couldn't agree less with that >> sentiment.)
>>
>> I certainly did not do it to show up anyone's "usurious" practices. I do >> not like that word nor how it has been used to target a certain population.
>>
>> I did it because I was pissed off about what had happened to my >> grandfather. Less so his having been duped by poetry.com--I had mixed >> feelings about that, as it had actually given him some mild pleasure while >> he was on his deathbed. He was in great pain and dying, after all. As >> consolation, poetry.com made him feel as though he was a "real" poet.

>> (Whatever that is.) He recited his winning poem to me over the phone from >> memory while he was in the hospital.
>>
>> I was really pissed off because he had died, coughing up blood in a >> hospital with my grandmother at his side.
>>
>> I don't care whether or not poetry magazines or presses or universities or >> individuals hold contests and charge entry fees. I have never entered one, >> not one with a fee. But not because I am morally opposed to them. The simple >> truth is that I am a cheapskate. If I felt more than 75% sure that my >> manuscript stood a chance, I might pay the money and send it.
>>
>> I like Noah Eli Gordon. I met him once in Denver. He was sweet and funny >> and talked a lot about poetry. Which he clearly loves. More than I do, >> certainly. I have no interest in poetry beyond that which directly feeds, >> inspires, terrifies, surprises me. That which engages me. That's probably >> true for him, too, though I would imagine that he's engaged in far more >> being written today than I am.
>>
>> I have no opinion one way or the other about any contest that he might be >> promoting or managing or dreaming up or whathaveyou. That's his business.
>>
>> I do know that, when you are spotted doing anything beyond appearing to
be >> a humble poet dutifully hunched over a desk in the corner crafting your >> some-day important earth-shattering poems, that some poets sometimes like to >> trash talk you, call you a capitalist, usurer, careerist, fraud, whatever.
>> Poetry is a religion for the people who do this. They are welcome to it. I >> am a third or fourth generation atheist, and I have no interest in magical >> or ritualized thinking about anything, least of all poetry.
>>
>> I admire many of the people who have chimed in against poetry contests.
But
>> no more or less so than I admire Noah. Or anyone, for that matter, who might >> submit their work to the contest he announced.

>>
>> After all, my grandfather, who I loved very dearly, was a >> contest-submitter. Indeed: a contest winner! And his poem actually made
me
>> cry when he recited it to me, which is more than I can say for almost >> everything currently in print, however it might have wound up there.
>>
>> This is not all to say that you are wrong to feel how you do about >> contests. That's your business and you are of course as qualified as anyone >> else to think about such things. Just that, though I appreciate the >> call-out, I thought I should be open about the situation of having written >> that poetry.com poem and what my own honest feelings about contests are.
>> To me, they are, like those words "submission" and "acceptance," part of
the >> landscape, and do define us to some extent. Just like everything else.
>>
>> Gary
>>
>>
>> _____
