Re: No One Misses the Poets -- Adrienne Rich

Thu 29 Mar 2012

I don't find "Women and Honor" amazing.
I think that it is clear and logical and beautifully written

"This is why the effort to speak honestly is so important. Lies are usually attempts to make everything simpler – for the liar – than it really is, or ought to be."

I find that very clear and cannot think of a better way to say it.

Experiment #53: Men Undressed with Gina Frangello, Cris Mazza, Susan Solomon, Charles Blackstone, A D Jameson & Davis Schneiderman

A celebration for the new anthology Men Undressed: Women Writers and the Male Sexual Experience published by Other Voices Books. In this collection, women writers imagine all things sexual from the point of view of male characters.

GINA FRANGELLO is the author of three books of fiction: A Life in Men (Algonquin Books, 2013), Slut Lullabies (Emergency Press 2010) and My Sister's Continent (Chiasmus 2006). The longtime editor of the literary magazine, Other Voices, she co-founded its book press, Other Voices Books, in 2004 and has served as Executive Editor ever since. She is also the Fiction Editor on the popular literary collective The Nervous Breakdown, and the Sunday Editor on the online cultural site, The Rumpus.

CRIS MAZZA has authored sixteen books, most recently Various Men Who Knew Us as Girls, a novel. Her other fiction titles include Waterbaby, Trickle-Down Timeline, and Is It Sexual Harassment Yet? In 1995 & 1996, Mazza was co-editor for the original Chick-Lit anthologies: Chick-Lit: Postfeminist Fiction, and Chick-Lit 2: No Chick Vics. In 2006, her essay â€œWhoâ€™s Laughing Now: Chick Lit and the Perversion of a Genre,â€ explaining the co-opting and corrosion of the title, appeared in Poets & Writers Magazine. In addition to fiction, Mazza also has published a collection of personal essays, Indigenous: Growing Up Californian, and has a hybrid memoir, Something Wrong With Her, forthcoming from Jadid Ibis Press. A native of Southern California, Mazza grew up in San Diego County. She currently lives 50 miles west of Chicago and is a professor in the Program for Writers at the University of Illinois at Chicago. She can be found online at www.cris-mazza.com.

SUSAN SOLOMON is a writer and lawyer living in Chicago. Her fiction is upcoming or has appeared in a number of online and print publications including Valparaiso Fiction Review, Polluto, Wilderness House Literary Review, and Pebble Lake Review. Her story, "Smile Catchers," placed "Commended" (top ten) in Writelink's 2004 Weekender Challenge (United Kingdom), and her story, "Medici, For Beginners," was selected as an Editor's Choice story for 2005 by Pulse Magazine.

CHARLES BLACKSTONE is the author of The Week You Weren't Here, a novel, and co-editor of The Art of Friction, an anthology of genre-defying fiction and creative nonfiction, and managing editor of the acclaimed book review site Bookslut. His prose has appeared in The Journal of Experimental Fiction, The Evergreen Review, Modern Luxury, Wall Street Journal.com, Esquire.com, and, most recently, on Twitter. He lives in Chicago.

A D JAMESON is the author of the prose collection Amazing Adult Fantasy and the novel Giant Slugs (both 2011). His work has appeared in Conjunctions, Denver Quarterly, Fiction International, The Brooklyn Rail, and dozens of other journals. He also contributes regularly to the group blogs Big Other and HTMLGiant. Last fall, he entered the PhD program in Creative Writing at UIC.

DAVIS SCHNEIDERMAN's recent novels include Drain (TriQuarterly/Northwestern), which did not win the National Book Award, and Blank: a novel (Jaded Ibis), with audio from Dj Spooky, which was not a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize. His creative work has never appeared in The New Yorker, Harperâ€™s, The Paris Review and Granta. He has not been the recipient of three Pushcart Prizes for his short fiction, and has never been a fellow at Breadloaf or Yaddo. Recently, he was passed over for a MacArthur â€œGeniusâ€ Grant, despite being Chair of the English Department at Lake Forest College, and also Director of Lake Forest College Press/&NOW Books, where he co-edits The &NOW AWARDS: The Best Innovative Writing.

MAY 5th @ 7pm
Experiment #54: The Rhythm is Gonna Getcha with H. V. Cramond, Heather Momyer & Matias Viegener

The possibility that if all writers and readers are formed by situations of chance, then control, even in terms of authorship and readership, is an illusion. What if choice is an illusion? Bring your dancinâ€™ shoes.

H. V. CRAMOND is a Writing Instructor at Loyola University Chicago and is the Poetry Editor for Requited Journal for Innovative Art. She holds an MFA in Writing from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and has received grants from the Illinois Arts Council and Community Arts Assistance Program grant from the City of Chicago Department of Cultural Affairs. She currently reads for XYZ Festival of New Works at About Face Theatre and for Pegasus Players' Young Playwrights Festival. Some recent work can be found in Soundless Poetry, Keep Going, Wunderkammer, and Ignavia and forthcoming in death hums.

HEATHER MOMYER lives in Chicago and teaches at Columbia College and Loyola University; however, as of this summer, she will begin the Medill journalism program at Northwestern University. Her writing appears in journals such as Bluestem, Popular Culture Review, Exquisite Corpse, Ekleksographia, and Dark Sky Magazine. New work is forthcoming in Puerto del Sol.

MATIAS VIEGENER is an artist, author and critic who teaches at CalArts. He's a founder of the art collective Fallen Fruit, which has exhibited internationally in Mexico, Colombia, Denmark, Austria (Ars Electronica), LACMA, the Yerba Buena Center for the Arts, and ARCO 2010 in Madrid. He writes regularly on art for X-tra, has published fiction, nonfiction and criticism in Cabinet, Journal of Aesthetics & Protest, Radical History Review, and Black Clock, and co-edited The Noulipian Analects and SÃ©ance in Experimental Writing. His book of experimental fiction, 2500 Random Things About Me, Too is just out from Les Figues Press.

RED ROVER SERIES is curated by Laura Goldstein and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national, and international writers, artists, and performers. The series was founded in 2005 by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin.

ssue IX IS OUT NOW
We have the fantastic problem of too many submissions, and the current issue is now busting the 50 page mark - and that is with material being held forward for Issue X.
We thank our readers and submitters for bearing with us while we got this issue together, held up by a combination of late submissions, a family berevement (another!!!), and work, tempered with a little bit of lazyness on my part!!!

Sun 1 Apr 2012

Marjorie Welish will read from her latest poetry collection In the Futurity Lounge / Asylum for Indeterminacy at NYU on Friday April 6th, 3pm at 19 University Place. This event is free and open to the public. Wine and cheese provided. * * The book will be released by Coffee House Press in May 2012 – but the NYU Bookstore has a number of copies available for purchase now! * * Visit http://nyumodernworkinggroup.wordpress.com/ for more info. * * * In her new collection, Marjorie Welish presents two books in one. “In the Futurity Lounge” may be read as that de-centered laboratory of the modern futurity lounge where experimental works are in a constant state of being constructed. Her poems are written across, through, and at the expense of urban sites, themselves part architecture, part language, including Roebling’s Aqueduct, Wright’s Fallingwater, Diller Scofidio + Renfro’s High Line, and Rem Koolhaas’s student center at Illinois Tech. “Asylum for Indeterminacy” is an extended zone of research devoted to translation constructed freely from a few given words from prior translations. Baudelaire’s “Correspondences” is the provocation.*

National Poetry Month Blogging
Sun 1 Apr 2012

Hi all. For National Poetry Month, I'll be blogging daily about why the commons matter to poetry:http://zappedpoetry.wordpress.com/ Here's an excerpt:I do believe that poetry is vital to everyone, but not in this trickle-down manner reminiscent of Reagan economics.* Poetry, I argue, is of the commons and for the commons and cannot be usurped by the myth of an aristocratic literati. I'd be happy to have you join my discussion, and I'd love to hear what other people will be blogging about.

Second Life

A Poem by Stephen Bunch

Stephen Bunch lives and writes in Lawrence, Kansas, where he received the 2008 Langston Hughes Award for Poetry from the Lawrence Arts Center and Raven Books. His poems can be found in Autumn Sky Poetry, The Externalist, The Literary Bohemian, Fickle Muses, and Umbrella.

From 1978 to 1988, he edited and published Tellus, a little magazine that featured work by Victor Contoski, Edward Dorn, Jane Hirshfield, Donald Levering, Denise Low, Paul Metcalf, Edward Sanders, and many others.

After a fifteen-year hibernation, he awoke in 2005 and resumed writing. Preparing to Leave, his first gathering of poems, was published in 2011.

TODAY Edric Mesmer & Donna Wyszomierski for Small Press in the Archive

Mon 2 Apr 2012

Small Press in the Archive Lecture Series presents

Monday April 2 @ 10:00 am "Top Stories: survey of a decade's long prose periodical" Edric Mesmer, with poet Donna Wyszomierski reading from her work 420 Capen, The Poetry Collection

Edric Mesmer is a graduate of the State University of New York at Geneseo and the Centre for the Study of Sexuality & Culture at the University of Manchester; currently he is working toward the completion of a Master's of Library Science at the University at Buffalo. During his tenure as a library graduate student he has served as the Mary Barnard Research Assistant to the Poetry Collection. Poems and reviews have appeared or are forthcoming in *Aufgabe, BlazeVOX, Cordite, EOAGH, Galatea Resurrects, *the*Poetry Project Newsletter, *and Vanitas; also, Edric collates Yellow Field, an international, Anglophone journal of the emergent, the established, and the undersung. A chapbook, Intaking Water, appeared in 2011 from sea pressed/ meta in the Orkneys.

*Small Press in the Archive Lecture Series dedicates itself to the study of poetry outside the traditional literary historical plot. The lectures inthis series draw on materials in The Poetry Collection, at SUNY Buffalo in order to explore community/discourse formations, the status of ephemera and the making of genre, the conditions of literary production, transatlantic cross-pollinations in and between specific magazines, the careers of poets, the role of book art, and how the little magazine functions in the making of the avant-garde.

April is the cruelest month to be involuntarily celibate

Tue 3 Apr 2012

Greetings, readers! This is April, known in the United States as National Poetry Month. That means the worst of our nation's poetry is on display, leading underground poets to whine about how no one loves them and academic poets to pretend to hate their readership, which they probably would if it wasn't imaginary. Clearly, the only way out of such literary despair is to embrace sociopolitical despair, so come check out the new issue of UnlikelyStories.org, with:

Starhawk starts a "green entrepreneurship program" of education in Bayview Hunters Point, an impoverished neighborhood of San Francisco "At the Crossroads of Climate and Food" by Seattle Councilman Richard Conlin Jerel C. Wilmore films a peaceful protest at Virginia's Capitol Square and police response Rev. John Helmiere describes being beaten by Oakland police Phil Rockstroh on police repression, official mendacity and why OWS has already overcome "The Spa Owner's Family," a novella by Dirk van Nouhuys Short Fiction by Tom Bonfiglio, George Sparling, and Bruce Memblatt and New Poetry, involving the visual, the experimental, the offbeat and the aggressive by Lawrence Welsh, B. Z. Niditch, Wendy Taylor Carlisle, Felino A. Soriano, Ric Carfagna, Jacob A. Bennett, Lizzy Swane, Nicholas Komodore, Alia Vancrown and Marc Thompson

We'll have a new multimedia issue up mid-month, and then a mini-issue for early May -- I'll be working on the next issue of BigBridge.org in the latter half of this month. Our regular publication schedule will resume with another multimedia issue in mid-May.

Love and ennui,

COURSE LIST / CYCLE 2

ADVANCED MACARONICS: NEOLOGY, SUBJECTIVITY AND THE PROBLEM OF PERSUASION
Big words, complicated word, a little Latin here and there… All of these can be used to advantage in business, public and personal life. This course covers linguistically informed neologism that can be utilized as rhetorical devices for everyday life. Students are expected to research word origins to form a personal patois for use in conversation, critical and creative writing
Digressor: Angela Genusa
CATABOLIC POIESIS
In biology the term catabolic refers to the breaking down of complex substance into simpler ones, with a release of energy. In rhetoric and poetics we can use this term to indicate the breaking down of epic works, long poems, and analects into a simpler, unified form through reductive prosody. In this class we will explore methods for constructing post or anti literary tables rather than texts and terse-verse that may or may not be embodied as a single image (after all, a picture is worth a thousand words)

Digressor: Talan Memmott

COMMUNICATIONS 101: FROM SOOTHSAYING TO TELEPHONY

Building upon the idea of descrying messages, meanings, and patterns, this course will survey the communication landscape, from prophecy, communication with other versions of reality (ex., as surrealism does), to communication mediated by digital telephony.

Digressor: Catherine Daly

CONFISUON: LOST IN LANGUAGE, A TAUTOLOGY

The Letterist (& later Situationist) International made an art of dérive, which might be understood [practiced] as [by] intentionally getting lost in the urban landscape. Today, the Web helps us remain lost at all times: Dérive is ever a click away. But we are always already confused the moment we approach the world (&/or the WWW) with language, which finds traction in its own slippage (cf. Lacan’s notion of point de capiton). The Web is language-based tautological space [which describes itself], just as a jpeg is made of [unread?] language-in-relation. What happens when we [take/make a] dérive [w/in] language itself, confusing a confusion [of signs]? Is it possible to get lost on a dérive, to drift from the drift? #confisuon confisuon.tumblr.com

Digressor: Jeff T. Johnson

THE CONGRUENCY OF POETICS AND POP CULTURE: DISCOURSE OF THE PUBLIC SPHERE, SOPHIA COPPOLA, AND AL PACINO

The idea of congruency, and for that matter, incongruence of all things quotidian, poetic, pop culture, Sophia Coppola, is at a particular schism and asymmetry, and it is a conundrum that must be solved. With the assistance of the following, I hope that we can bring a controlled chaos to said congruency and incongruence, wild scrum. Here are some aids that we will be using: film: Mary Antoinette, Godfather III, The Virgin Suicides, Lost in Translation, Somewhere, et al; text: Roland Barthes’ Mourning Diary, Maggie Nelson’s Bluets, Glassner’s The Culure of Fear, Breckenridge’s A Young Girl in Passing, Powell’s Cocktail and Chronic, Creely; music: NWA, The Cockney Rejects, Ramones, Partisans, Public Enemy, et al. In addition to these aid, we will be focusing on much photography: Sherman, Friedlander, Weegee, et al.

Digressor: Ray DeJesús

DISKINETICS: INNER YOGA, MENTAL GYMNASTICS, AND METAPHYSICAL EDUCATION

Fulfill your metaphys-ed requirement and flex your soul by studying mental gymnastics and inner yoga with certified yoga instructor Claire

Donato. Students will watch and respond to workout videos, participate in acrobatic visualization exercises, and look into the brain’s locomotives. This course emphasizes relaxation and mental energy over muscular strength. The most limber-minded students will win a Provisional Meta-Fitness Award.

Digressor: Claire Donato
EDIBLE AVATARS, ANOREXIA, AND FALSE ACCUSATION: THE THEORETICAL BASES OF HOLOGRAPHIC FUTURES AND MELANCHOLIA
Edible avatars succumb to anorexia; prims have little or no body of course, although avatars might be accused of just about anything, including. Holographic objects have no weight and that makes them sad; if you’re a tree in a forest you can’t hear an avatar crying in any case.
Digressor: Alan Sondheim
HAPTIC TELEPATHIES AND DIVINATION
Course description will be posted soon
Digressor: Linus Lancaster
INTERROGATING JUTE: ADVENTURES IN MACRAME
CANCELED due to severe global jute shortage
JUICY TIMELINESS AND SUBLIME ANTI-TECHNICS
To balance the downward drive of “Underwater Procrastination and Advanced Desublimation Techniques,” I will be giving several creative prompts in the direction of “Juicy Timeliness and Beginning Sublime Anti-technics.” As timeliness is also timelessness, beginning is a perpetual state of mind ardently to be desired, and anti-technics is simply a form of technics, we should continue to have a lot of fun and blow each others’ minds with gooey, bouncy and gushy cultural artifacts the likes of which have never been seen before.
Digressor: Maria Damon
NŌ CODE (DEPROGRAMMING 101)
Week 1: View page source. Stare at page source. Line after line. Your eyes, the code. Paper cranes, undulating glass.
Week 2: “A code will be shown without the picture.” Load code, turn off screen. Rediscover uncodifiable mystery of the black box, its illuminations.
Week 3: Travel path of the Nō coder, blind monk of a digital age, deprogrammer of restless interactivity. Record results. Codify. Compile.
Week 4: GOTO Week 1
Digressor: Eric Snodgrass
“OH, LOOK, A HYPNOTIZED CHICKEN!”: COMPOSITION AND DISTRACTION
This course will examine ways of composing poetry and prose through embracing (“try to look a chicken in the eye with great intensity”) what it means to be a distracted (Japanese Fart Scrolls—Alien Conspiracy?) writer as well as (the recalled brands of dog) developing an awareness (hallucinated the lady in the radiator) of one’s consciousness. We will also explore using PostFlarfian Oulipian techniques (four 7-eleven microwaves, presets blinking) so there will be elements of that factored (craving a cold anubis sandwich—yum!!!) into the course (Online Pharmacy No Prescription Haloperidol 5 Mg). Those registering for this course may even learn to hypnotize a chicken (Longmont Potion Castle+rorschach trampstamps).

 Digressor: Angela Genusa
  SPACE, PLACE AND DIGITAL BITS: WHERE THE HELL ARE WE ANYWAY?
 Ground control to Major Tom, put your spacesuit on. In Space, Place and Digital Bits we will explore the idea of location in the digital age by becoming modern day urban/suburban/rural archeologists of our digi-embodied sites. This un-course will guide students in exploring the space and place around them with readings, films, web stuff and directive actions that require the un-student to move, listen, revel in their digital and ephemeral bodies. The physical/un-physical embodied self will play an active role in the formation of figuring out where the hell we are. And most importantly of all time- we will make things that are here, there, everywhere, nowhere and just are!
 Digressor: Belinda Haikes
  UNDERWATER PROCRASTINATION AND ADVANCED DESUBLIMATION TECHNIQUES

Dimitrius Christoulas - A Tribute in Poetry - Global and Irish Solidarity with Greece

Fri 6 Apr 2012

All of you know my adherance to rhyming poetry, but every so often a topic comes along where the rhyme does not fit, it jarrs too much with the topic, and one such issue is the Greek pensioner Dimitrius Christoulas who shot himself dead on an Athens square this week, his pension cut to such a dregree foraging in bins is his only option.

My latest poem on YouTube is a tribute to this man, the first verse of which I publish below.

We watch from afar, we hear a name

Christoulas may as well be a football player to most

But its ironic before Easter

Another Christ lies dead - this one wont rise

After three days, this temple torn down

Will stay forever as rubble...

The death of Dimitirs Christaupolos shows the callous effect that finance has on ordinary decent people. This man refused to be reduced to scavenging from bins, at a time when his own government begged and achieved bailouts and writedowns, no benefit was shown to their own people, this one of whom we know by the public nature of his death.

A student in Prague immolated himself in 1968, inspired a generation to stand up to Soviet oppression. Today, a 77 year old pensioner kills himself to inspire his nation to save itself from the greed of the bankers who care only for profits and bonuses as their nation is destroyed.

This poem is non rhyming, one of the few Ive written, the tragedy of it made it beyond rhyme for me.

It is a suggestion that every poet to this listserve should write a tribute poem to this man, and the thousands of others, many in my own land, unknown because they took their lives in private due to the financial pressures brought about by the banks.

FW: LAND DIAGRAMS & poetry
Sat 7 Apr 2012

Dear all, with apologies for cross-posting,

This is announcing the launch of a new ongoing series, Land Diagrams - http://landdiagrams.wordpress.com/ . This pairs poets, writers and thinkers from different disciplinary backgrounds in writing responses to the same topographical image. So far it includes new pieces by the poets Mark Dickinson, Peter Larkin and Giles Goodland, paired respectively with cartographic historian Mark Monmonier (Coastlines: How Mapmakers Frame the World and Chart Environmental Change), environmental researcher Owain Jones (Tree Cultures: The Place of Trees and Trees in Their Place) and spatiality theorist Martin Dodge (The Atlas of Cyberspace). Future contributors will include Lisa Robertson paired with a meteorologist and James Wilkes paired with a geologist.

It aims to find a new way for specialist discourses about topography, and tacit knowledge about the different systems in the landscape, to intersect through ekphrasis. The found images (charts, schemes, scores, computer codes) prompt two simultaneous articles - but the writers don't communicate or consult each other. The aim is to focus on a divergence of thought, practice and resources, rather than the potential middle-grounding of a collaboration.

New items will be added regularly to the series - do let me know at [redacted] if you'd like to contribute, suggest an image, or suggest a writer - or if you have any feedback. It'd be appreciated if you could disseminate LAND DIAGRAMS to other disciplines / interested parties too.

many thanks,Amy

The Claudius App III

Sun 8 Apr 2012

The Claudius App, an online journal of negative reviews and poems, is now accepting submissions for its third issue, deadline June 5th. The second issue, an avant-post-Fordist labor product digitally congealed at www.theclaudiusapp.com, included work by or attributed to: Sara Deniz Akant, Brian Ang, Jerimee Bloemeke, Feng Sun Chen, Patrick James Dunagan, Pierre Klossowski, Purdey Kreiden, Ben Lerner, Mark Levine, Anthony Madrid, Jessica O Marsh, Chris Martin, Jeff Nagy, Tim Shaner, Josh Stanley, Jonty Tiplady, Cathy Wagner, Elisabeth Workman, and your dreams, with a splash by Ian Hatcher. Send fast poems, negative reviews, and letters with a self-addressed stamped brick for your manuscript's eternal return, or query [redacted] for more information.

Private lives are just that and your private eyes are something else, but as long as the private's on tour there is no private art. In the land of the blind, the man with one eye is not lacking for employment opportunities. And we all know the workers don't need any lessons from the students any less than the lessons themselves. What estate are we at anyway?

Reader, do I make you litigious? You're already no longer young forever, so gas the giant up and philosophize with your hummer. "How stupid are you? Don't you know these people are rich?" Well, I came for the credential and stayed for the canapes, totally over paying my lap service for a limp sum. A desire a bargain basement thou shalt have it sort of thing.

I always knew that licorice tasted like assholes even before I'd tasted an asshole so imagine my total lack of surprise when I turned out to be right. The primary mortal deficiency remains art in all its forms. The secondary vice we'll negotiate at the convention. Strap on your EZ-Pass and meet us on the bridge.

Mon 9 Apr 2012

BENEFIT READING BY MARILYN NELSON AND WALLY LAMB FOR THE CONNECTICUT YOUNG WRITERS TRUST

Come meet two of our finest living writers, Marilyn Nelson and Wally Lamb, at an exclusive cocktail hour at the Hartford Club [http://www.hartfordclub.com/] at 46 Prospect Street , Hartford , CT 06103 on Friday, April 13th from 6 PM to 7 PM, prior to a public performance and conversation with the writers at 7 PM (suggested donation $10).

If you are interested in having an intimate reception with the two writers, please consider a $100 tax-deductible donation to the CT Young Writers Trust, the state's longest running writing competition for young people in its 15th year of existence and having given away over $200,000 to affirm youth literacy and creative expression to thousands of high school students around the state.

Marilyn Nelson is fresh off receiving the Frost Medal, presented annually by the Poetry Society of America for "distinguished lifetime achievement in poetry" [http://www.poetrysociety.org/psa/poetry/blog/announcing_the_2011_frost_medali/]. And Wally Lamb was just featured on American Masters on PBS discussing Harper Lee's "To Kill a Mockingbird." [http://www.pbs.org/wnet/americanmasters/tag/wally-lamb/].

Seats for the reception are a $100 tax-deductible contribution to the Connecticut Young Writers Trust, the state's longest literary competition for teens, now in its 15th year and having given away over $200,000 in prize money to affirm young writers. Seating is VERY limited so RSVP now to [[redacted]] for the chance to get books signed, photos taken, and have conversation with Wally and Marilyn in an intimate setting, and stay to hear them perform their work and talk about their craft. Thanks for your support. We look forward to seeing you on Friday, April 13th.

The winner of the Trust’s annual young writers contest will be among the young writers reading at Hill-Stead Museum ’s Sunken Garden 20th Anniversary Kickoff Weekend, June 1-3.

Tue 10 Apr 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “From Outside” by A C Evans

Description:

“From Outside” (a selection of poems from 2006 to 2011) takes place at “the borders of the future”, where a solitary cyborg with metal arms stands waiting for another client. The dramatis personae are a cast of mad performers, misfits, hick comediennes, mutants, celebs, ghosts, undercover agents and the Eternal Bride from the Large Glass. The tutelary deity is pale-faced Hypnos: guardian of desperate poets and “you” (the invisible companion) or, perhaps, even “you” (the reader) relaxing on an old park bench, watched over by hunched black birds…

Available as a free ebook here:

(the first section of the program)

The CBC program Writers and Company from the website

"Now in its 21st season, Writers & Company offers an opportunity to explore in depth the lives, thoughts and works of remarkable writers from around the world."

I listen whenever I can to the program and what I appreciate about the interviewer, Eleanor Wachtel is that she does read and has read the work of those she interviews, no commercials. For those who feel they don't have enough exposure to writers outside their own county, the archives for this show are a gold mine -- writers from all over the world.

Do take a listen -- here is a list of other interviews

SEGUE: Simon Morris and the Freud Explosion This Saturday April 14
Tue 10 Apr 2012

$6 to enter

The Freud Explosion is a group of artists who do short performances based on the work of Freud.

Simon Morris is the author of Re-Writing Freud, and co-editor, with Craig Dworkin, of the press Information As Material. He has been called a literary pervert, philosophically irresponsible and an inspired lunatic. He would like to politely remind the audience that the ears have no lids.

Out from Otoliths — Sheila E. Murphy's "American Ghazals"

Wed 11 Apr 2012

Now out from Otoliths.

American Ghazals

Sheila E. Murphy

68 pages

Otoliths, 2012

ISBN: 978-0-9872010-2-7

$14.45 + p&h

URL: http://www.lulu.com/product/paperback/american-ghazals/18929550

The ghazal is a time-honored literary form dating from 6th century Arabic verse. Successive versions of the form attest to its appeal across numerous cultures and periods of time. Focal themes associated with the form have encompassed divine and earthly love to those of loss, longing, and isolation. Ghazals are voiced and sung in many languages, including Persian, Turkish, and Urdu.

Despite highly specific rules governing the form in its early centuries, more contemporary versions have relaxed such practices. In contemporary English, the self-containment of each couplet offers an appealing potential for discovering subtle relationships among the (minimum of five) different couplets within a single piece. Subliminal echoes of perception and emergent contextual linkages provide a renewal of sensibility for readers of the ghazal.

The pieces in this collection represent a selection of works written as ‘American Ghazals,’ based upon the distinctly American idiom in which the pieces have been developed. The more I read the form in translation and in English, the more apparent the fit of pivotal shifts in language, thought, and content. The American ghazal offers rich practice, replete with political, social, psychological, and meditative states that redefine perceptions in a new century.

New Black Radish Books: Jared Hayes & Marci Nelligan

Sat 14 Apr 2012

The Dead Love: Hands and More Hands Together
*Jared Hayes *

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9780982573198/the-dead-love-hands-and-more-hands-together.aspx * * * "I understand Jared Hayes is conducting here a deep spelunking into connected caverns of other texts. What I don't yet quite grasp is how he's articulated all the ropes, quickdraws, carabiners, hexes, cams, and sundry poetical devices to work in such syntactically spectacular ways. 'I root up (I have brought them) landinwards, hither (I will make them resound here.)' And that's just at the first drop, barely in, still fathoms to go.... Well, some people have the ambition and guts and others just watch. I could say 'tour de force' from my spectator chair, but that wouldn't really do. So I'll say, as a first handle on it, that THE DEAD LOVE joins the masterpieces of John Cage, Jackson Mac Low, Susan Howe, and Ronald Johnson as one of the most exhilarating 'citational' explorations ever made in American poetry."—Kent Johnson

Jared Hayes lives in Portland, Oregon. He believes collectivity and community are important and so is a member of Dusie Kollectiv, Black Radish Books, and Livestock Editions. Jared's poems can be found.

AND:

Infinite Variations
Marci Nelligan
*
*

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9780982573181/infinite-variations.aspx

Composed from source text randomly selected from On the Origin of the Species and the Old Testament, INFINITE VARIATIONS seeks to puncture the political in exploring and re-imagining these seminal texts. Splicing cell structure with the numinous, it careens, stutters, and reinvents.

"Using phrasing and vocabulary from the Old Testament and Darwin's *On the Origin of the Species*as her raw material, Nelligan creates startlingly fresh structures, contemporary in their vigorous parataxis and suspension of normative logic, timeless in their explorations of origin and, ultimately, of being. But above all, there's a marvelous mix of delight and gravity in the way she wields these words, letting sound and association create bridges across epochs and disciplines. An extremely promising first book, at once intimate and immense, luminous and lively."—Cole Swensen

"INFINITE VARIATIONS takes two loaded and locked works—On the Origin of the Species and the Old Testament—and uses them in allegiance to an exploration of desire. Each word is, thus, resonant, full of debate. It is a defense of evolution's role in love and about a love of evolution's variations. Throughout it is provocative in its simplicity, luminous in its word play."—Juliana Spahr

Marci Nelligan's publications include chapbooks Dispatch (with Nicole Mauro), Infinite Variations, and The Book of Knowledge, all from Dusie Press. In addition, she was the co-editor of an interdisciplinary book on Jane Jacobs, INTERSECTION, from Chain Links Press. Her work has appeared in Jacket, DENVER QUARTERLY, The New Orleans Review, How2, and other journals. She was the 1999 recipient of Poets & Writers "Writers-on-Site" grant and has an MFA from Mills College in poetry. She teaches creative writing at Franklin & Marshall College and lives in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, with her husband and two daughters.

Wednesday, April 25th, 8:00 PM at the Poetry Project, 131 E. 10th Street, New York. Pamela Lu and Mónica de la Torre. See http://poetryproject.org/program-calendar/pamela-lu-monica-de-la-torre.html for details.

Friday, April 27, 7:00 PM at the Asian American Writers' Workshop, 112 West 27th Street, Suite 600, Between 6th and 7th Avenues in Manhattan, Buzzer 600. $5.00 suggested donation. Subterranean Technologies: The Ambient Poetics of Tan Lin, Pamela Lu, and Sueyeun Juliette Lee. Moderated by Dorothy Wang and live-tweeted by Lucy Ives. See http://www.aaww.org/#27apr12 for more details.

Pamela Lu is the author of the books /Ambient Parking Lot/ (Kenning Editions, 2011) and /Pamela: A Novel/ (Atelos, 1999), as well as the chapbook /The Private Listener/ (Corollary Press, 2006). Her writing also appears in the anthologies /Bay Poetics/ and /Biting the Error/, and has been published in periodicals such as /1913/, /Antennae/, /Call/, /Chain/, /Chicago Review/, /Fascicle/, /Harper's/, /Mirage/, /Poetics Journal,/ and /Tinfish/. She grew up in Southern California, and now lives and works in the San Francisco Bay Area.

/Ambient Parking Lot/ is a 187-page book about one band's quest to capture the world's most perfect ambient noise in a parking lot. Wait, don't go away! It's great ... I swear. It's dizzying, really, and hilarious. ---Cooper Berkmoyer, /San Francisco Bay Guardian / Lu's book looks at the cerebral struggle of artmaking and of ambient music: as struggle between the problems of the language of the individual and the language of the collective. ---Devin King, /Make Magazine / The Ambient Parkers' yen for recognition seems to be a residual effect of their desire to create something that matters, but what their message or the content of that matter might be is always skirted over or slides into something new. In this way, Lu captures---and mocks as well, perhaps, but lovingly---the existential pretenses of artistic endeavors. In the end, Lu suggests that despite the absurdities and shifting metamorphoses inherent in human effort, the greatest grace and sense of humanity comes from attending, from recognizing that the deathly silence we fear is in fact fully populated and alive once we quiet ourselves. By the novel's end, ambience takes on new meaning, and doesn't require our torturously theorized amplifications but graces us when we quietly acknowledge it. ---Sueyeun Juliette Lee, /The Constant Critic/

What I love about Lu's work is her sharp wit, subtle delivery and deadpan hilarity, which you have to slow down and listen for in order to fully appreciate. Thus, parked, I listened. ---Jai Arun Ravine, /Lantern Reviews/

The Factory Reading Series pre-small press book fair, June 29: Saikaley, Dunn, Wigmore + Lithgow

span-o (the small press action network - ottawa) presents:

The Factory Reading Series
pre-small press book fair reading

with readings/launches by:

Sonia Saikaley (Ottawa)
Victoria Dunn (Ottawa)
Gillian Wigmore (Prince George)
+ Michael Lithgow (Ottawa)

lovingly hosted by rob mclennan
Friday, June 29, 2012;
doors 7pm; reading 7:30pm
The Carleton Tavern,
223 Armstrong Street (at Parkdale; upstairs)

Sonia Saikaley was born and raised in Ottawa. She grew up in a traditional Lebanese household and much of her writing is influenced by her rich Middle Eastern heritage. She has taught English in Japan. Her fiction and poetry have appeared in Still Point Arts Quarterly, Things Japanese: A Collection of Short Stories, Maple Tree Literary Supplement, and the anthology Lavander¡a - A Mixed Load of Women, Wash, and Word. She is a graduate of the Humber School for Writers and the University of Ottawa. Her first book, The Lebanese Dishwasher (Quattro Books, 2012), was co-winner of the 2012 Ken Klonsky Novella Contest. Her poetry collection Turkish Delight, Montreal Winter (TSAR Publications) will be published in the fall 2012.

When Victoria Dunn, author of Alice Hearts Welsh Zombies, is not busy writing, she's the ultimate Bond girl, intelligent, accomplished and stunningly beautiful. Men of action fall helpless at her feet every day. She doesn't just blow smoke off her pistolshe blows smoke rings. In a parallel universe, Victoria Dunn is the evil hive mind of Victoria Higgins and Meghan Dunn. Victoria has waged a life-long battle against depression and is a recovering perfectionist who performs with Stand Up for Mental Health (www.standupformentalhealth.com/). She currently works at the local independent bookstore, because what else can you do with a degree in Religion, Sociology and Anthropology? Meghan spent several years with the Canadian Army Reserve before putting down her rifle to study Classical History. She hated selling frozen yogurt, loved working at a comic book store, and has never met a handcraft she doesn't adore. Meghan is happily married, and the mother of two teenagers who are very impressed by her expertise in zombiology.

Dirt of Ages is Gillian Wigmores second book. Her first, soft geography, won the 2008 Relit award. Her work has been published in magazines, short listed for prizes, and anthologized. She lives in Prince George, BC.

Michael Lithgow is a PhD candidate in the School of Journalism and Communication. His poetry has appeared in Arc Magazine, The New Quarterly and Fiddlehead. Selections of his work have been included in Rutting Season (Buffalo Runs Press, 2009) and Undercurrents: New Voices in Canadian Poetry (Cormorant Books, 2010). His first solo collection, Waking in the Tree House, was published in Spring 2012 by Cormorant Books. He is currently a contributing editor at ArtThreat.net, research associate with the Canadian Alternative Media Archive project, and director of OpenMedia.ca. His doctoral research explores aesthetics, truth and dissent in digital and performance cultures.

Drunken Boat and WNPR Host "Beyond the Extremes: Contemporary Narratives of Exploration", May 3rd in Hartford

Mon 16 Apr 2012

Beyond the Extremes: Contemporary Narratives of Exploration moderated by WNPR's John Dankosky @ University of Hartford's Wilde Auditorium, 5/3, 2 PM

The Hartford Consortium for Higher Education in collaboration with WNPR and Drunken Boat [drunkenboat.com], international online journal of the arts, invites you to a panel on "Beyond the Extremes: Contemporary Narratives of Exploration" moderated by radio personality John Dankosky for "Where We Live," introduced by CCSU poet-in-residence and Drunken Boat Executive Director Ravi Shankar, and featuring snow leopard conservator and Himalayan anthropologist Shafqat Hussain, visual artist and expeditioner Adriane Colburn, University of Hartford historian Michael Robinson, Director of Trinity's InterArts Program and poet, Clare Rossini, and Coordinator of Maritime Studies at UConn-Avery Point, Helen Rozwadowski.

Come learn about the history of exploration, see tools of the trade, and discuss what new frontiers exist for us to discover in the new millennium.

Where: University of Hartford's Wilde Auditorium, Harry Jack Gray Center, 200 Bloomfield Avenue (Route 189), West Hartford, CT 06117

When: Thursday, May 3rd from 2:00 PM to 4:00 PM

Contact: Michael Robinson, [[redacted]], [redacted]

Refreshments will be served. Free and open to the public.

PARTICIPANT BIOS

San Francisco based artist, Adriane Colburn has spent the past several years traveling on expeditions with scientists who study climate change in remote terrains, such as the Arctic and the Amazon. Adriane’s recent work consists of large-scale installations (comprised of layers of hand cut paper, digital prints, video and projected light) that investigate the complex relationships between human infrastructure, earth systems, technology and the natural world. These works, derived from scientific data, images and video, look at how mapping is used to investigate fragile and inaccessible ecosystems along the edges of the Earth’s last vestiges of wilderness. More information: www.adrianecolburn.com

John Dankosky has been working in radio - mostly public radio - for 21 years. Since coming to Connecticut in 1994, he's helped to build WNPR's award-winning newsroom - cultivating one of the most talented news staffs in public radio. He has reported for National Public Radio on presidential elections, crime, education, drug abuse, immigration and more. He's edited award-winning documentaries on Connecticut history, 9/11, and the mental health of children, and has been involved in editorial planning for Public Radio News Directors, Inc., The Public Radio Exchange, and NPR's Local News Initiative. He's won awards for reporting, hosting Where We Live, and "overall station excellence" from the AP.

Shafqat Hussain is an Assistant Professor of Anthropology at Trinity College, Hartford, CT. Shafqat obtained a Ph.D. from the School of Forestry & Environmental Studies and the Department of Anthropology at Yale University, USA. He is from Pakistan and has worked in the Gilgit-Baltistan region of northern Pakistan. His PhD research was a historical ethnography of Hunza region in northern Pakistani, focusing on Victorian explorers’ encounters with local people during the era of the Great Game in the 19th c. Shafqat has also designed and initiated an innovative project for snow leopard conservation in northern Pakistan. In 2009, Shafqat won the National Geographic Emerging Explorer award for his work in the region.

Michael Robinson is an assistant professor of history. His teaching and research fields include the history of exploration, history of American culture and science, and the history of globalization. He received his Ph.D. in the history of science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 2002. His book The Coldest Crucible: Arctic Exploration and American Culture (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2006), winner of the 2008 Book Prize from the Forum of the History of Science in America, examines American fascination with Arctic exploration in the 19th and 20th centuries. Robinson serves as an advisory editor of the journal Isis and sits on the executive steering committee of the Maury Workshop for the History of Oceanography. He currently serves as guest-curator for an exhibition on Arctic exploration at the Portland Museum of Art (Maine) to commemorate the International Polar Year of 2007-2009. He writes a blog about science, history, and exploration called Time to Eat the Dogs. He is currently working on a book about the cultural history of exploration in America.

Clare Rossini is the author of three collections of poetry: Lingo (The University of Akron Press, 2006); Winter Morning with Crow (University of Akron Press 1997), chosen by Donald Justice for the Akron Poetry Prize and one of two finalists for PEN's first Joyce Osterweil Award; and Selections from the Claudia Poems (Minnesota Center for the Book Arts, 1996), an art book edition. Her poems and essays have appeared in a range of journals and anthologies, including Poetry, The Paris Review, Ploughshares, The Kenyon Review, Poets for a New Century, and the Best American Poetry. At Trinity, she serves as Director of Trinity's InterArts Program teaches creative writing courses for the Department of English. Her scholarly interests include English, American, and world poetry; the imagination of place and eco-criticism; the history of science; folklore and folktales; the community cultural development movement; and community-based learning. She is currently working on a fourth book of poetry whose subjects include late-medieval science and global warming.

Helen Rozwadowski is currently the Coordinator of Maritime Studies at the University of Connecticut, Avery Point campus. She has worked in the past both as a public historian, including writing for Discovery On-line, and also in academia. She won the Ida and Henry Schuman Prize from the History of Science Society, was awarded the William E. & Mary B. Ritter Fellowship of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, and has received grants and fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities, National Science Foundation, and the Smithsonian Institution. Her award-winning book, Fathoming the Ocean: The Discovery and Exploration of the Deep Sea is a scientific and cultural history of interest in the ocean, manifested in maritime novels, in the popular hobby of marine zoology, in the youthful sport of yachting, and in the laying of a trans-Atlantic telegraph cable.

Ravi Shankar is the founding editor and Executive Director of Drunken Boat [http://www.drunkenboat.com], one of the world's oldest online journal of the arts, and chairman of the Connecticut Young Writers Trust. He has published or edited seven books or chapbooks of poems, including the National Poetry Review prize winning "Deepening Groove," and W.W. Norton's "Language for a New Century: Contemporary Poetry from Asia, the Middle East & Beyond," called "a beautiful achievement for world literature," by Nobel Laureate Nadine Gordimer. He has won a Puschart Prize, appeared on the BBC and NPR, been featured in The New York Times and The Chronicle of Higher Education, and has performed his work around the world. He is currently an Associate Professor of English at CCSU and on the faculty of the first international MFA Program at City University of Hong Kong.

Mon 16 Apr 2012

Here's a new generative net art piece by Vancouver's Kate Armstrong and Michael Tippett. It's called Space Video:
http://turbulence.org/Works/spacevideo/

This is a wife/husband team. Kate is an artist and writer; Michael is an artist-programmer.

"Space Video addresses ideas of exploration in relation to inner and outer space. Having noticed that there are shared aesthetic qualities of video imagery that accompany disparate cultural and scientific phenomena including guided meditation, hypnosis, undersea and space exploration by NASA, motivational speaking, powerpoint backgrounds, science fiction, psychedelic drug culture, electronic music, popular spirituality, and computer effects, we have built a generative system that mixes an original non-linear narrative with YouTube videos on these subjects as they are uploaded in real time. These videos often attempt to portray what are ultimately non-visual spaces, producing images that are at once placeholders, images of the transcendental, trippy intergalactic stereotypes, and fields for persuasion."

Kate wrote the text. Of it, she says:

"The narrative is inspired by technical manuals and science fiction novels, and references diverse sources including 1960s American adventure books for boys (such as the adventures of Tom Swift by Victor Appleton II) and the Victorian flapper ethic of the 1920's British literary compendium for girls called Blackie's Girls' Annual. Themes include adventure, exploration, recreation, infinity, technology, action, and decorum."

Kate and Michael did a somewhat related earlier piece called Graphik Dynamo at http://www.turbulence.org/Works/dynamo/ . It's related in that, again, Kate wrote the text and Michael did the programming. But, moreover, again it's a generative piece where the visuals are retrieved via a feed from the net and the visuals are different each time you play the piece, as is the sequencing of the texts.

April 19: M. Byrne / J. Karmin / V. Manuscript in Providence

Tue 17 Apr 2012

Mairéad Byrne
Jennifer Karmin
V Manuscript

Thursday, April 19th @ 8 pm at the AS220 Project Space
95 Matthewson Street
Providence, RI
http://www.as220.org

Mairéad Byrne immigrated to the United States from Ireland in 1994, for poetry. She earned a PhD in Theory & Cultural Studies (Purdue University 2001), writing a dissertation on contemporary theories of metaphor. Publications include poetry collections The Best of (What's Left of) Heaven (Publishing Genius 2010), Talk Poetry (Miami University Press 2007), SOS Poetry (/ubu Editions 2007) and Nelson & The Huruburu Bird (Wild Honey Press 2003), and the recent chapbook Lucky (Little Red Leaves 2011). She is the inventor of couscous, a movable feast of poetry, music and performance with participants from the community, colleges / institutions, and out-of-town, wherever that town may be. Currently (for her) it's Providence, where she is an Associate Professor of Poetry + Poetics at Rhode Island School of Design.

Jennifer Karmin has published, performed, exhibited, taught, and experimented with language across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, and on city streets. She is the author of the text-sound epic Aaaaaaaaaaalice (Flim Forum Press, 2010) and her writing is included in the anthology I'll Drown My Book: Conceptual Writing by Women (Les Figues Press, 2012). Jennifer teaches in the Creative Writing program at Columbia College Chicago and at Truman College, where she works with immigrants as a community educator.

The performances of artist V Manuscript combine text and music which underscore ornate corporeal and poetically virulent practices of endurance, tension, release, and concentration. The writings of V Manuscript are constructed in an autotelic method using a combination of journaling and auto-fiction while applying evolutionary algorithms to regenerate a syntax that is cracked, fractured and utterly familiar. The text is then edited, re-poeticized and re-inserted back into a master narrative. V Manuscript's materials include bondage and restraint and a variety of ritual objects and occult materials; rope, candle, needles, knives are employed and often amplified in the performance. V Manuscript composes with noise, which has no interface, which is transgressive, which must be free to encourage the random, the hybrid, the dissonant, the impure; the awful must remain awful. The many V Manuscripts focus on the absence of absolutes and the margins of masochism, eroticism and androgyny. Since 1996, V Manuscript has appeared with partner Maralie as the performance art/band Humanbeast. She is currently working on a novel.

M1 Manifesto
Tue 17 Apr 2012

From manifestos in an emergency to emergent manifestos. From articulating de Mans to the demand for articulation and back again, lest the closed community eddy into an ant mill <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Ant_mill> circling its own affinities (return of the same of the same of the same return). The incrementalism of the broken window policy<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Broken_windows_theory> that supposedly keeps contradictions controllable within a localized feedback window fails when it's Windows that gets broken, broken into, hunting for Ether Eggs. That was the world you saw just now. Its contradictions are our own, our currency, actualité, à la une.

As n-1=M+1, we're cloudspeaking a manifesto for May Day. What do you dream of Gen-Y? Thread your needle into the Haymarket here<http://bit.ly/m1manifesto>. Articulate your multitudes, contradict them, wipe-out or re-up. Alter, delete, add, share. Cut, paste, link, strike, troll, flame, scroll. Stigmathaumaturgy. Versal is turning 10

VERSAL IS TURNING TEN
http://www.versaljournal.org

In 2002, one Australian and two Americans walked into a bar. They came out with Amsterdam's first international literary & arts journal.

This year marks the 10th anniversary of Versal. Boom.

Publishing an incredible range of the world's literary and art talent, and widely acclaimed for its strong and wide-reaching aesthetic and innovative design, Versal is now celebrating the arrival of its 10th edition. The drumroll towards this exciting milestone started in March when Versal was awarded first place in the 26th annual New York Book Show. And the editors of Versal are in the mood to celebrate.

Versal was started as part of a volunteer effort to build a vibrant and inclusive, international literary community in Amsterdam, the Netherlands. Since 2002, the team behind Versal has organized readings and events, festivals, workshops and writing groups, including, most recently, the Amsterdam shows of the world-famous Literary Death Match. Today, thanks to years of dedication on the part of Versal's local editorial team, Amsterdam is now home to a healthy literary scene, with many groups, organizations, writers, and even publishers. Versal's 10-issue milestone, therefore, also marks 10 years of this growing, successful community.

Join us in toasting to 10 years of our literary community and its flagship Versal: Wednesday, May 23 at BoCinq. Free entry, but RSVP only. Doors open at 7pm. The dress code is "gold tie". Full details and RSVP info:
http://www.versaljournal.org

Leading up to the launch, Versal's founder and editor Megan M. Garr is writing a series about being its editor for the last ten years. Follow her here: http://versaljournal.blogspot.com

A Very Personal Message To The Poetry Community On Behalf Of Diane Di Prima.

Tue 17 Apr 2012

Michael McClure wrote: Diane is suffering with several painful and even life-threatening illnesses, including removal of all teeth, arthritis from her earlier back operation, extreme problems with glaucoma and a needed operation; but thatâ€™s just the top of the list. Despite all, she is in unexpectedly fine spirits. If you know of any way to help her, she would appreciate it and I would also. Poetry Off the Page Schedule

Friday, May 18, 2012

3:00–5:30 p.m. Welcome/Registration
Location: Poetry Center Breezeway
Check in, pick up your badge and program, and browse through the exhibits in the Poetry Center.

5:30–7:00 p.m. Reception and Screening of Claudia Rankine’s The Situation Series Location: Poetry Center Join us for wine and hors d’oeuvres and walk through four rooms in the Poetry Center to view Claudia Rankine’s The Situation series. These video essays speak to national and international moments in contemporary culture and address our visually saturated culture by bringing language to the images we consume. The series attempts to juxtapose temporal memory alongside historical critique through the layering of sound and image. Each film runs close to five minutes.

Situation One is in dialogue with Zinedine Zidane.
Situation Two is in dialogue with 9/11.
Situation Three is in dialogue with Katrina.
Situation Five is in dialogue with Michelle Alexander's “The New Jim Crow.”
Undocumented and Here is a Situation in process that enters the continuing dialogue regarding what it means to be unauthorized and here.

7:00–9:30 p.m. Sonic Lens
Location: Poetry Center Rubel Room

7:00–7:15 p.m. Introduction delivered by Annie Guthrie, and curator of the Poetry Off the Page symposium.

7:15–7:45 p.m. “Speech Talks Back”: Audio Show by Christine Hume An audio show that plays the revoicings, manipulations, arrangements, and displacements of recorded nonpoetic, nonliterary speech, in a performance of audio documentary poetics that refigures poetry's classic oral qualities. As the pieces play, Hume will offer a voiceover of playful theoretical riffs and expanded contexts for understanding.

7:45–8:15 p.m. Improvisatory Oral Performance: Cecilia Vicuña Cecilia Vicuña presents an improvisatory oral performance in response to place and time

8:15–8:30 p.m. Intermission

8:30–9:00 p.m. Films: Claudia Rankine/John Lucas

9:00–9:30 p.m. Q & A: Christine Hume, Claudia Rankine, and Cecilia Vicuña

Saturday, May 19

9:00–4:30 p.m. Welcome/Registration
Location: Poetry Center Breezeway
Registration will be open Saturday for most of the day. Check in and pick up your badge and program.

9:00–10:15 a.m. “Off the Pageness”: Dan Waber
Location: Poetry Center Rubel Room
A macro and a micro view of contemporary poetic production:

- Macro: Pecha Kucha Tucson (60 different ways of making poetry off the page today). A way to focus wide-ranging enthusiasms for unusual contemporary poetic practices.

- Micro: A look at the very fat line between the visual and the textual, in 31 examples. If you see the difference between no fair princess and

princess

you understand that text has a signifying visual component. A poem on a page in a book is possibly purely textual. A painting of a figure is possibly purely visual. And between these two extremes lives a very wide expanse of exploration which blends the two. The examples we'll see and discuss were selected specifically for how difficult they are to pigeon-hole as either textual or visual.

10:15–10:30 a.m. Break

10:30–11:45 a.m. Tiny Gallery Talks
Location: Poetry Center Library
Cecilia Vicuña will continue her weaving of the Poetry Center by taking her weft across the warp before and after talks by Wendy Burk, Danielle Vogel, and Amaranth Borsuk.

Cecilia Vicuña will weave us through site-specific installation, specially created for the UA Poetry Center.
Wendy Burk, Senior Library Supervisor at the Poetry Center, will discuss the exhibit “Artistexts” by Johanna Drucker.
Danielle Vogel will discuss her exhibit, "A Compendium of Intentional Inversions."
Amaranth Borsuk will discuss her exhibit, "Between Page and Screen," produced in collaboration with programmer Brad Bouse.
11:45 a.m.–1:00 p.m. Lunch Break

1:00–2:00 p.m. “Into the Labyrinth: Guerrilla Writing”: Workshop with Ander Monson Location: Poetry Center Rubel Room Monson guides writers in creating projects networked across multiple websites. Why do our poems have to be so self-contained? With the plethora of spaces that the web offers for users to post text or image or something in between (as in Amazon reviews, Craigslist ads, comment boards, personal websites, Facebook walls, eBay listings, okcupid.com ads, etc.) why not, like the hackers or graffiti artists we are all at heart, make work that asks the reader to bounce from one site to another, even not neglecting the physical codex page that we still love deep inside. We will start projects that require— nay, invite and compel—our readers to interact with the architecture of the web, essentially a labyrinth. Monson presents some of his own labyrinthine work in this direction and direct writers in writing and remaking these connections.

2:00–2:15 p.m. Break

2:15–3:15 p.m. “Your Avatar & You”: Panel with Ander Monson, Brent Cunningham, and Dan Waber
Location: Poetry Center Rubel Room
Topics covered in this panel on virtual writerhood include:

How ebooks are changing or might change poetry publishing, how the internet has altered the traditional publication and distribution models for printed poetry books, what changes to print culture could mean for poets already allied with a long history of interrupting fixed ideas and identities. How the website presents one avatar for the self, in the way that books present another avatar for the self. Considering how self-publishing means self-publishing the self's work, ideas about how we constantly publish the self …and how the whole authorial persona/avatar/self is self-publishing, a series of decisions (and accidents) in the self and how it is made public. What it means to be "published" today. What it means to be "well-published,” how what all of us really want is to be read, how most people don't even necessarily want to be widely read, but want to be well-read… opportunities created by digital outlets have all but solved the problem of how to be published, even how to be well-published (good design imparts credibility), but it has not solved the problem of how to be read, and well-read. The problem of distribution. How do I get my work read by the people who can most connect with it? Publishers that use digital technology to help make possible some analog things that current models of publishing don't really support and the problems of digital archiving and archiving the digital. 3:15-3:30 p.m. Break

3:30–4:30 p.m. “Embodying Poetics”: Workshop with Julie Carr and K.J. Holmes
Location: Poetry Center Rubel Room Words are a map to the body’s landscape. Movement writes us back to language. In this class we will play with tone, horizon, scale and transition through writing and movement patterns that will support and open up our senses and perceptions, finding a kinetic base for an embodied poetics.

4:30–6:30 p.m. Dinner Break

6:30–9:30 p.m. Poets Theater at The Rogue
Location: The Rogue Theatre at 300 East University Boulevard, Tucson

6:30–7:15 p.m. Poets Theater: Plays by Brent Cunningham Brent Cunningham presents three short plays: “The Event,” “Time's Machinery,” and “The Gunfight." These works tend to create strict limits and strict tasks for themselves, in one case blacking out a key piece of dramatic information, in another restricting itself to a common aphorism. In addition, each play utilizes a different formal strategy for selecting and training its non- professional actors, frequently taking them directly from the audience. Audience members, get ready for your closeup...

7:15–7:45 p.m. "See Here": Presentation by Julie Patton

8:00–8:45 p.m. "Betraying Blackness": Black Took Collective Black Took Collective presents a multi-media performance exploring interrogations of a black unconscious. Using written and aural language, sound, video, and images, the members of the collective enact poetries of inquiry that engage (and challenge) the psyche's making of racial consciousness by conceptualizing unconsciousness. In so doing, the members of BTC expose their poetic processes and poetries-in-the-making, moving through poetries predicated on the conditions of blackness into meditations on the multiple factors that inspire our imaginations.

Exhibitions

Location: Poetry Center Library
The following exhibitions will be on display throughout the entire symposium weekend. Be sure to check them out!

Artistexts Internationally renowned author, book artist, and visual theorist Johanna Drucker has selected more than 20 artist books created in a deliberate dialogue between design and writing. These artistexts explore how poetics and production change across the spaces of a distributed textual system, emerging as palimpsests, recombinations, excisions, swarms, unfoldings, and turnings. The University of Arizona Poetry Center Library is proud to present works by legendary artists such as Tom Phillips, Walter Hamady, Emmett Williams, Dick Higgins, Madeline Gins, Johanna Drucker, John Crombie, and many others.

Between Page and Screen Produced by Amaranth Borsuk in collaboration with programmer Brad Bouse, “Between Page and Screen” draws on the traditions of the artist's book and concrete and digital poetry to explore the place of books as objects in an era of increasingly screen-based reading. The pages of the book contain no text, only black and white geometric shapes and a web address leading to betweenpageandscreen.com, where the reader follows instructions to display the book in front of his or her webcam. Doing so releases the text, which leaps off the page and into three-dimensional space. The poems, a series of cryptic letters between two lovers struggling to define their relationship, only appear in this augmented space where paper meets pixel, a between-space opened up by the reader.

Christine Hume’s Listening Stations Audience members will be invited to lie their heads on pillows imbedded with speakers playing original sonic versions of the work from Hume's book of poems Shot, an investigation of night, insomnia, and its inextricable dialogue with a selfhood that cannot settle down. From this position, poetry and music enters the mind of the listener, inviting revery, embodiment, terror, and that relies on our capacities to "hear things" at night.

Cecilia Vicuña’s site-specific installation Vicuña’s multidimensional works begin as a poem, an image or a line that morphs into a film, a song, a sculpture or a collective performance. She calls this impermanent, participatory work “lo precario” (the precarious), transformative acts or “metaphors in space” which bridge the gap between art and life, the ancestral and the avant-garde. The precarios began in the 60s in Chile, as unannounced works that disappeared without a trace.

Jeff Clark's "Ruins"

Danielle Vogel's "A Compendium of Intentional Inversions" Danielle Vogel's textile scroll-works and ceramic book artifacts, which explore the ceremonial gestation of a manuscript as it is written, have been exhibited in galleries across the country. Her most recent collection, A Compendium of Intentional Inversions, will be exhibited at Abecedarian Gallery in Denver, Colorado, January 2012. The exhibit will be composed of ceramic swallow nests, pods, and hives in which "failed" excerpts from her manuscripts-in- progress will be homaged.

Poet as Radio: Dennis Phillips on April 21

Tue 17 Apr 2012

This Saturday on Poet as Radio

This Saturday on Poet as Radio we begin part one of our interview series with Dennis Phillips, whoâ€™ll read from his recent collection Navigation (Otis Books). Tune in on 4/21, 9am-10am (PST), at savekusf.org or listen to part one next week on our blog at poetasradio.blogspot.com.

Â

Dennis
Phillips is the author of twelve books of poetry, including Arena, Credence, Sand, and most recently Study for the Possibility of Hope (Pie in the Sky Press) and Navigation: Selected Poems, 1985 â€“ 2010 (Otis Books/Seismicity Editions).Â His work, both poetry and commentary, regularly appears in various national and local poetry journals. In 1998 he edited and wrote the introduction for a book on some of the early essays of James Joyce, Joyce On Ibsen. His novel, Hope, came out in 2007.

Â

Phillips was a founding editor of Littoral Books, which published works by authors such as Amiri Baraka, Norma Cole, Ray DiPalma, and Stephen Ratcliffe. Besides his work with Littoral, over the years Phillips has contributed in various ways to other literary endeavors, including as the Book Review Editor of Sulfur, as Poetry Editor of the L.A. Weekly, as an enthusiastic staff member of the College of Neglected Science, and as the Director of the Beyond Baroque literary foundation.

Â

Phillips is a professor in the department of Histories, Theory and Practices at Art Center College of Design, where he has been teaching literature and writing since 1979. Additionally, he is on the faculty of the Graduate Writing Program at Otis College of Art and Design.

Futurepoem books
http://www.futurepoem.com

Futurepoem books is an ongoing experiment in the poetics of publishing. Now in its 10th year, they've published 16 books of innovative writing to date through their Futurepoem books series. Their blog Futurepost, curated by Chris Martin, publishes responses by noted writers to individual Futurepoem books. Futurepoem Presents, their events series, invites artists from other genres to respond to Futurepoem books by creating original works of their own. For more information, please visit the above url.

Ted Dodson

Ted Dodson is co-founder and editor of the filmed journal On the Escape, a curator for the Triptych Reading Series, and an editor and the special projects coordinator for Futurepoem. Select work can be found in Tim, SET, la fovea, The Image Project, Onesies, and Interrobang. He is from Middleburg, Va. and resides in Brooklyn.

Serena Jost
http://www.serenamusic.com

Serena Jost is a singer-songerwriter and cellist. Her debut album, Closer Than Far, was produced by Brad Albetta (Martha Wainwright, Teddy Thompson). Her upcoming album, A Bird Will Sing, was produced by Anton Fier (Golden Palominos) and features her on vocals and cello, her band, and many outstanding guest musicians. For more info visit the above url.

Rachel Levitsky
http://www.esquemag.org/

Rachel Levitsky is a poet hard at work finishing a work of prose, which she calls "a novella," which Christian Hawkey calls "an epic," Renee Gladman calls "a conceptual novel," and Gail Scott calls "a novel." To make matters more complicated still, this book will soon be published by Futurepoem. It is called The Story of My Accident is Ours. Early pieces of it can be read online at Web Conjunctions. Very recent pieces can be read at the above url. She is a professor and teacher of writing and humanities courses at Pratt Institute and at- large. She is the founder of Belladonna Series and is a member of the Belladonna Collaborative. She is involved in creating with C. Hawkey, The Office of Recuperative Strategies. More forthcoming on that.

Dan Machlin
http://writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Machlin.php

Dan Machlin is the author of several books of poems including Dear Body: (Ugly Duckling Presse). He is finishing up a new collection of poems. His work was most recently featured in the book Figuring Color published by the ICA Boston. He is the founder and executive editor of Futurepoem books.

Frances Richard
http://www.lesfigues.com/lfp/282/the-phonemes

Frances Richard’s second volume of poems, The Phonemes, is new from Les Figues Press. Later this year Futurepoem will release a third book, Anarch. She is the author of See Through (Four Way Books) and the chapbooks Anarch. (Woodland Editions) and Shaved Code (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs). With Jeffrey Kastner and Sina Najafi she is co- author of Odd Lots: Revisiting Gordon Matta-Clark’s “Fake Estates” (Cabinet Books). She has been a member of the editorial teams at Fence and Cabinet magazines, writes frequently about contemporary art, and teaches at Barnard College and the Rhode Island School of Design. She lives in Brooklyn.

Jennifer Tamayo
http://www.jennifertamayo.com/

A writer, artist, and performer, Jennifer Tamayo is interested in the human body. Her manuscript, Red Missed Aches Read Missed Aches Red Mistakes Read Mistakes, was selected by Cathy Park Hong as the 2010 winner of Switchback Book's Gatewood Prize. It was selected by Coldfront Magazine as one of the top 30 poetry books of 2011. She serves as the managing editor at Futurepoem and teaches art and poetry in Harlem where she lives. Very recent work can be found in Smoking Glue Gun, The Poetry Project Newsletter, and Delirious Hem. More on Tamayo can be found at the above url.

Shanxing Wang
http://www.futurepoem.com/bookpages/madscience.html

Shanxing Wang is the author of Mad Science in Imperial City (Futurepoem), which won the 2006 Asian American Literary Award for Poetry.

Boog City
http://www.boogcity.com/

Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 21st year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women's writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates two regular performance series —d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Chelsea's ACA Galleries; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, Cake Shop, CBGB's, The Knitting Factory, and The Sidewalk Café. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

The link for di Prima again -

From: Marilyn Hacker

I made a donation for Diane di Prima, and will see if any of the American poetry organizations can do something more substantial. It seems pertinent, though, to note that in a country with universal single-payer health insurance (that is to say, all of Western Europe and I believe much of Latin America) no one would have to pass the hat for urgent medical care for a distinguished writer in her 70s -- or for a supermarket cashier in her 40s, for that matter -- and that would not depend on how much money that person had in the bank, or what insurance s/he had been able to purchase.

César Vallejo's "Lost" Interview, translated by Kent Johnson, now up on The Claudius App
Wed 18 Apr 2012

The Claudius App <http://theclaudiusapp.com/> is proud to announce the publication of César Vallejo's "Lost" Interview<http://theclaudiusapp.com/2-vallejo.html>, published in the *Heraldo de Madrid *in January 1931, recovered, translated, and generously annotated by Kent Johnson. Over coffee with the * Heraldo*'s interviewer (Q: César Vallejo, why have you come here? CV: Well, to drink coffee.), Vallejo discusses precision,Trilce in relation to its predecessors and contemporaries, and a non-extant then-forthcoming volume of poems, The Central Institute of Labor. This is the sole record of the great poet's conversation, and the first appearance of it, unabridged, in English.

Yours,

Poetry & Globalization at NYU & Idra Novey's new poetry book launch.
Thu 19 Apr 2012

Dear Friends: I am excited to announce two events happening this week

Dear Friends: I am excited to announce two events happening this week.

Later today, I am participating on a panel: POETRY AND GLOBILIZATION at NYU, 19 University Place, Great Room (first floor), NYC. April 19, 2012 from 5-7pm. FREE.

The discussion will be moderated by Eugene Ostashevsky of the Liberal Studies Program at NYU. RAM DEVINENI is the published and founder of Rattapallax magazine. Other participants are Elizabeth Hodges is the founder and publisher of Saint-Petersburg Review, Dmitry Kuzmin, the founder of vavilon.ru, Uche Nduka, Nigerian writer and musician, Murat Nemet-Nejat is a prominent American translator of Turkish poetry, and Elizabeth Zuba is an American poet.

Also this Saturday come celebrate the release of Idra Novey's new collection of poetry, EXIT, CIVILIAN. The book is 2011 National Poetry Series Winner and published by University of Georgia Press

Saturday, April 21stÂ 6:30-10pm @ A Public Space, 323 Dean Street (between 3rd and 4th Avenue), Brooklyn, NY 11217

â€œThe prisons, courthouses, and hideaways featured in Noveyâ€™s National Poetry Series winner are very real, but we donâ€™t encounter so much bars, barbs, and barbed wire as metaphysical shrinkage and change: â€œWhisper at the door/ of the little prison/ and your voice will become a coin.â€ Startling.â€Â â€“Library Journal

â€œThe book reveals superb acts of attention, by a writer whose reliable moral sense matches her first-rate ear.â€ â€“Publishers Weekly

Eigner questions

Thu 19 Apr 2012

Hi everyone,

If anyone knows... I'm trying to reach Robert Wilson (of the Phoenix bookshop) does anyone have a contact for him?
Also, does anyone know who Vance Morgan is and whether he is alive? He is a person who Eigner corresponded with in the 80's and I can't figure out who he is.
Also, if anyone wants to publish an excerpt of a Larry Eigner biography- please backchannel me.
(I'm telling you, it's pretty engaging!)

Love, Jennifer

April 22: Aaaaaaaaaaalice @ the Mass Poetry Fest

Fri 20 Apr 2012

SUNDAY, APRIL 22 @ 1pm
at the Peabody Essex Museum
East India Square, 161 Essex Street
Salem, MA

Jennifer Karmin presents
Aaaaaaaaaaalice: Text-Sound Performance
sponsored by the Massachusetts Poetry Festival

Jennifer Karmin has published, performed, exhibited, taught, and experimented withÂ language across the U.S., Japan, and Kenya. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, and on city streets. She is the author of theÂ text-sound epic Aaaaaaaaaaalice (Flim Forum Press, 2010) and her writing is included in the anthology I'll Drown My Book: Conceptual Writing by Women (Les Figues Press, 2012). Jennifer teaches in the Creative Writing program at Columbia College Chicago and at Truman College, where she works with immigrants as a community educator.

The fourth Massachusetts Poetry Festival will be held Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, April 20â€“22, in historic Salem. The three-day event, which will bring 1,500 poets and poetry lovers to the city, will showcase a variety of extraordinary local and regional poets, and engage the public through poetry readings, interactive workshops, panel discussions, music, film and visual arts, and performances geared toward a diverse statewide audience.

Dear friends of the Writers House:

After seven fabulously effective years as our Program Coordinator, Erin Gautsche will be moving on - to a new job (at the International Sculpture Center). We are sad about this, but realize that Erin is certainly ready to do a big job on ISC's big stage. We wish her the best and will miss her.

So we are now taking applications for the full-time position of Program Coordinator at the Kelly Writers House. If you wish to apply, please submit applications through Penn's jobs site here:

http://jobs.hr.upenn.edu/applicants/Central?quickFind=195440

Or go to https://jobs.hr.upenn.edu/ and enter this reference number: 120432537

A brief description of the job is below. Applicants are urged to take a long look at the KWH web site (http://writing.upenn.edu/wh/) to get a sense of the programs, projects, and events hosted.

- Al Filreis

Kelly Professor, Univ. of Pennsylvania
Faculty Director, Kelly Writers House
Director, Center for Programs in Contemporary Writing
Director, PennSound
Publisher, Jacket2

http://writing.upenn.edu/~afilreis

Reporting to the Director, the Program Coordinator of the Kelly Writers House has primary responsibility for coordinating the complex series of 300+ events, meetings, projects, and classes at the Writers House and supervising a work-study staff of 16-20 students. This work includes, but not limited to, managing event details and special project needs, such as reception planning and digital recording requirements; hiring, training, and scheduling work-study staff and supervising their daily work; scheduling room usage in the Writers House; communicating with visiting authors, agents, Penn community members, alumni, and others about event and project details; serving as KWH liaison to various departments, organizations, and hubs at Penn and in Philadelphia; and working closely with the Director and Writers House community members to plan the annual schedule of programs. The Program Coordinator is also responsible for directing at least two ongoing programming series at Writers House, including a monthly radio show.

The Volta reviews

Dear folks, Just spreading the word here about The Volta, a multimedia project of poetry, criticism, poetics, video, conversation (audio), and interview (text). Find it here: http://www.thevolta.org/ Our Friday Feature this week is poet & critic Peter O'Leary's review of Kintsugi by Thomas Meyer. We're always looking for well-crafted, engaged, and thoughtful reviews, as well as recent reviews that were previously published in print only journals. Feel free to drop me a line if you're interested in writing one for us. For any other correspondence, please check with the appropriate editor here:http://www.thevolta.org/thevolta-about.html

Best,Noah

Exhibit at Boog Fest's 9th Annual Small, Small Press Fair
Mon 23 Apr 2012

Hi all,

Boog City would like to invite you to exhibit at our 9th annual small, small press fair (with indie records and crafts, too).

The fair will once again span two days, Sat. Aug. 4-Sun. Aug. 5, and be held at Brooklyn’s Unnameable Books (600 Vanderbilt Ave.) in their spacious backyard.

The fair will take place during the 6th annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival.

The fair will open on Saturday with performances by authors from each of the tabling presses.

Tables are $30 for the fair, $20 dollars if you bring your own bridge table (up to 3’ x 3’). Paypal [redacted] on or by May 15 and it's $25 or $15.

Please email me to reserve your table and schedule your reader. We look forward to the fair once again being a warm gathering with wonderful books, poetry, music, and other items from around our creative community.

This year’s fair will feature readings, musical performances, a lively panel, political speakers, our new BoogWork poetry workshop and reading series, and a non-nyc press kicking off season 10 of our levy lives: celebrating the renegade press series.

as ever,
David

P.S. Apologies if you received more than one copy of this email.

Boulder, CO, Thurs 4/26 @7pm: Chris Pusateri and Michelle Naka Pierce Book Launch

Mon 23 Apr 2012

Hello all,

For those of you in the Denver/Boulder area, please come celebrate the publication of 'Continuous Frieze Bordering Red' by Michelle Naka Pierce and 'Common Time' by Chris Pusateri.

Thursday, April 26, 2012 at 7:00 pm
Innisfree Poetry Bookstore and Cafe
1203 13th Street Suite A, Boulder, CO 80302

Book signing following the readings.

Born in Japan, Michelle Naka Pierce is the author of seven titles, including She, A Blueprint (2011), Beloved Integer (2007), and TRI/VIA (2003). Awarded the Poets Out Loud Editor’s Prize, Continuous Frieze Bordering Red (Fordham, 2012) documents the migratory patterns of the hybrid as she travels the floating borders in Rothko’s Seagram murals. She is associate professor and director of the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa University in Boulder, CO.

Chris Pusateri is the author of several books of poetry, most recently Common Time (Steerage Press, 2012), and Molecularity (Dusie, 2011). His poetry and critical prose appear in many periodicals, including American Letters & Commentary, Boston Review, Chicago Review, Denver Quarterly, Fence, Jacket, Verse and others. A librarian by trade, he works in Denver, where he reviews new poetry and fiction titles for Library Journal and curates the Belmar Film Series, a free public program showcasing independent cinema.

T(exto-) V(isual) Poetry by Vernon Frazer
Tue 24 Apr 2012

T(exto-) V(isual) Poetry, Vernon Frazer's latest collection, is now available in hard copy as well as online. Frazer's latest fusion of textual and visual elements has received the following praise from his colleagues:

retina sizzler
scrambles your voice box with the airwaves

no matter how much you adjust the rabbit ears the gravity field shifts obliterating any normal mode of reading

---Andrew Topel

With stimulating collocations of text/angled text, symbols/aural explosions, Vernon Frazer intuitively combines various bouts of momentum to create a neoteric deliverance of force, finesse, and indeed “an elusive gratification”. However, what eludes here resounds when found, in that the brilliance of T V Poetry simultaneously composes Frazer’s musically innate circumference of rhythm with a language varied and diverse, architecting a collection of abstract representation, aggregating movement and desire to outline this gifted writer’s energetic approach.

Fwd: Benefit for Kevin Opstedal--- apologies for cross listings
Tue 24 Apr 2012

This just in from out Colorado Springs from poet Noel Black whose recent book Uselysses came out from Ugly Duckling....

Dear Friends, the great West Coast poet and publisher Kevin Opstedal (Gas Magazine, Surf Zombie, Blue Press, etc.) is in a pretty major financial pickle right now and needs our help. Please go to www.bluepressbooks.com, buy as many of the amazing chapbooks (everyone from Jim Carroll to Joanne Kyger, Bill Berkson, et. al.) that you can, and consider making an additional donation by clicking the DONATE link at the top of the page. You can also mail any unwanted books to him that he can sell online to 126 Washburn Avenue, Santa Cruz CA, 95060. We'd like to help him raise $4,000 to keep himself and the press afloat after a really grueling stint of unemployment during which he burned through his entire savings, retirement and many emergency grants. Kevin has published many of the greats, but he also gave many young poets, myself included, their starts. PLEASE SHARE THIS EVENT WIDELY. Thanks! Noel Black

To add a bit to Noel's PUSH:

Opstedal pretty much jump started things and showed much support for a number of younger poets and artists round San Francisco such as Noel, but also the likes of: Cedar Sigo, Will Yackulic, Eddie Berrigan, Micah Ballard, along with myself, and his avid support of the work of poet Lewis MacAdams is ongoing (he recently edited MacAdams's Selected Poems DEAR OXYGEN now out from UNO press. Kevin also wrote a terrific historical record of BOLINAS and the poets who have lived and worked there that is up on a recent issue of BIG BRIDGE. And although unemployed for the last several years Kevin has continued to publish the work of other poets. Any interest/assistance would be awesome.

Subject:* FW: KICKSTARTER FUNDRAISING for the 100 Thousand Poets for Change Headquarters Event bb1

Thinking Locally and Acting Globally…

That’s what my friends Michael Rothenberg and Terri Carrion of Sonoma County are doing. Last September their work supported hundreds of poetic-social justice grass root events all over the globe.

This year over 500 events in 100 countries are scheduled for September 29th , 2012.

I don’t usually approach friends and colleagues for support, but I believe in their project and will be working on securing grants for them to continue this truly amazing project.

Right now, we are hoping to “kickstart” that funding and establish a demonstrable groundswell of support to show potential funders.

As you can see from the attachment from Michael and Terri, founders and the workhorses of 100,000 Poets for Change, feel the same way and would appreciate ANY support you could throw

Our way. The number of contributors as well reaching their goal of $2,500 in less than six weeks counts! They are already at $1500 pledged after only 15 days. If we don't hit our goal, all of

The money stays with those who pledged funds.

This is an act of poetry changing the world, one community group at a time.. and yet, all at once! However, the work behind the scenes goes on all year.

If you have blogs, e-mail groupings or e-newsletters to folks who might also give a few bucks and be counted, please pass it on.

Please check it out! The website is amazing and impressive. Please see what you can do and…count me on your indebted forever list.

With Kind Regards,

Cecelia Belle

Fundraising Campaign

Dear Friends of 100 Thousand Poets for Change,

I am writing to let you know that Terri and I have set up a 100 TPC KICKSTARTER PAGE <http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event> in an effort to raise funds to help us to continue organizing 100 Thousand Poets for Change 2012, and more specifically to help us plan and set up our "100 TPC Headquarters Event" from where we will manage all the September 29th global events!

As you know, we have no funding or sponsors thus far and so we have funded the past year's work on our own. We have recently applied for our non-profit status and hope to be able to get funding from foundations and sponsors soon, but until our non-profit status is approved we are asking for support from our friends, and soon-to-be friends, too!

For those of you unfamiliar with Kickstarter <http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event>, the basic approach is that you state your fundraising goal for your project and then set the time in which you think you can achieve (or surpass) that goal. If at the end of your fundraising period you do not reach your goal you don’t receive any of the donations. So, if we do not reach our goal of $2500, all the money will be refunded to the donors accordingly.

Kickstarter <http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event> explains it like this…

/"Why is Kickstarter funding all-or-nothing? On Kickstarter, a project must reach its funding goal before time runs out or no money changes hands. Why? It protects everyone involved. This way, no one is expected to develop a project with an insufficient budget, which sucks. Remember you set your own funding goal, so aim to raise the minimum amount you'll need to create your vision. Projects can always raise more than their goal, and often do"/

Terri and I have set our goal for $2,500 and we have 60 days to raise these funds. I am sure you will agree this is not much money for running the website, archiving for Stanford University, sending out ten thousand press releases, general outreach, and overall management of all the activity on the day of the event which will include monitoring and sharing livestreams, skype sessions and much more!

The 100 TPC KICKSTARTER PAGE <http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event> explains everything in more detail. Check it out. There are a whole bunch of unique gifts offered for donors as well. You might see something you like!

Please understand that we are actually very uncomfortable asking for funding, we know you all work really hard and poetry is not a high paying job. But, I think we all agree that 100 Thousand Poets for Change is worth doing on a long-term basis.

So far we have over 500 events in 100 countries confirmed for September 29, 2012. With your help we hope there will be 1000 events!

We thank you for all your friendship and amazing moral support!

Please help us by donating any amount of money, really. $1, $5, $10, $20, $50 or more. Every little bit helps! You can go online to the 100 TPC KICKSTARTER PAGE <http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event> and make your donations. Your support will be greatly appreciated and will enable us to keep organizing 100 TPC 2012.

Thank you for all you do!

The 100 TPC KICKSTARTER PAGE
<http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event> has just been launched!

We now have 60 days to reach our goal of 2,500 dollars.

Please help us reach our funding goal.

And please tell all your friends and loved ones about the 100 TPC Kickstarter Page, share the link, 100 TPC KICKSTARTER <http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event> and encourage them to donate to our fundraising campaign!

Peace and Love,

AT THE CROSSROADS

Waving her pamphlets with the zeal of a sergeant, a Watchtower woman in the Times Square station roars above the break dancersâ€™ din at the troops geared for rush-hour battle.

â€œFighting and killing among all nationalities!â€ â€œRight here in the U. S.,â€ she warns.
But the ear-plugged army in its mad dash to the front lines heeds only the call of an oncoming train.

POETRONIX: Reading and Writing Electronic Text Final Performance

Tue 24 Apr 2012

Hi everyone! I teach a class at NYU's Interactive Telecommunications Project about conceptual and generative writing. We're holding our final performance soon, and I'd love for you all to come! Here's the info:

POETRONIX

An evening of poetry, performance, and experimental text design from NYU/ITP’s Reading and Writing Electronic Text

Friday, May 4th, 2012
7pm
721 Broadway, New York, NY
Ground floor (Common room)
FREE

More information online: http://bit.ly/I6j8Vq

Over the course of Spring semester, eighteen NYU students have engaged in intense electro-textual experiments: composing, mangling, generating and remixing electronic text using the Python programming language. For one night only, these students will gather to present and perform their experiments to the general public.

What to expect: innovative poetic forms, bizarre textual interfaces, generative satire, advanced natural language processing techniques, and more!

Here's a round-up of last year's performances: http://bit.ly/v0m0HE

Reading and Writing Electronic Text is a course offered at NYU’s Interactive Telecommunication Program. (http://itp.nyu.edu/itp/). The course is an introduction to both the Python programming language and contemporary techniques in electronic literature. See the syllabus and examples of student work here: http://rwet.decontextualize.com/

In White Writing by Alan Halsey

In White Writing

by Alan Halsey

In White Writing is a narrative visual poem or graphic novella or both. A record in either case of a life lived on paper, the writing-dust of 2007-10 retrieved, collaged and drawn over, drawn back on itself in a wholesale reversal or revaluation of print values, white text and images showing up and out of a solid and dreamless black ground.

"If there is no point of rest, if everything is loose but nothing is torn, if there is no monochromy of image-category, romantic nonsense is transformed into a multiverse, a comic heterotopia. Deliciously so in Alan Halsey's graphic series In White Writing. Where there is the history of culture – of relativizing cultures – there is no order. Gradually, everything descends, or is freed, into 'demockery'."

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Aloha Mele” by Katherine Hastings

Wed 25 Apr 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œAloha Meleâ€ by Katherine Hastings

Description:

â€˜In this remarkable new book Katherine Hastings, as the title suggests, says hello to song: song of â€œA ceiling of starsâ€, â€œslow lava flowâ€, and a sensual iridescence that beautifully expresses Hawaiian love. Hastings does much more: the reader who begins to read these radiant words may start out â€œin the quenched hive of solitudeâ€ but soon finds her or himself â€œAfloat in naked beautyâ€, â€œTurned tenderly/toward/togetherâ€! Hastings is a poet of such skill and grace that the earth itself (in the spectacular form of Hawaii) achieves a lyric, singing voice in her workâ€™. (Lee Slonimsky)

Mondo Bummer
http://mondobummer.blogspot.com
Mondo Bummer is a chapbook press that publishes poetry and fiction in a disappointing way. Founded in Ann Arbor, Mich. in 2009, it currently operates out of San Francisco.

Jedidiah Clarke http://mondobummer.blogspot.com/2012/02/jedidiah-clarkes-time-i-busted-my-ear.html Jedidiah Clarke is a writer from Hell's Kitchen, New York City. Right now Clarke is in the process of adapting several of his short plays to film, and is also working hard to compile a database of his humorous short movie reviews, approximately 300 of which can be seen on his website. His goal is to reach 500 by year-end. On June 15 and 16, he will premiere some new plays at Space on White.

Thom Donovan http://whof.blogspot.com Thom Donovan edits the weblog Wild Horses Of Fire, now in its 7th year. His book, The Hole (Displaced Press), can be purchased through Small Press Distribution. He is currently revising and editing a book of essays and statements, provisionally titled "Sovereignty and Us."

Brenda Iijima http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/iijima/iijima.htm Brenda Iijima is the author of Around Sea, Animate, Inanimate Aims, revv. you'll —ution, and If Not Metamorphic. Her forthcoming book, Early Linoleum, will be published by Say it with Stones Press this year. She runs Portable Press @ Yo-Yo Labs from Brooklyn.

Lauren Ireland http://www.oui-ja-yes.blogspot.com Lauren Ireland grew up in southern Maryland and coastal Virginia. She is the author of two chapbooks: Sorry It's So Small (Factory Hollow Press) and Olga & Fritz (Mondo Bummer Press). Her favorite album is Willie Nelson's Stardust. She lives on Alabama Street in San Francisco.

La Défense http://ladefense.bandcamp.com/ La Défense is Hillary (guitar, vocals) and Lydia (drums). They began developing their accessibly off-kilter girl punk sound in weekly bedroom jam sessions in October 2009, and have since performed at Brooklyn's Northside Festival, as well as venues including Death by Audio, Public Assembly, and Zebulon in Williamsburg, and Pianos and Cakeshop in Manhattan. Their songs are fast and fun. Distorted guitar chords, pop punk beats, and simple melodies. Kind of like the Ramones meets your mom's cherry pie.

Lily Ladewig
http://www.lilyladewig.wordpress.com
Lily Ladewig is the author of The Silhouettes (SpringGun Press).
Recent poems have been published in aesthetix, Bone Bouquet, Horse Less Review, Sixth Finch, and Spinning Jenny. She lives in Brooklyn.

Nate Logan
http://www.nathanglogan.tumblr.com
Nathan Logan's latest chapbook is Arby's Combo Roundup (Mondo Bummer).
He edits Spooky Girlfriend Press and is a Ph.D. candidate in creative writing at the University of North Texas.

Kendra Grant Malone http://www.kendralovely.blogspot.com Kendra Grant Malone was born in 1984. Her first book of poetry, Everything is Quiet, was published by Scrambler Books. Her second book of poetry, Morocco, co-written with Matthew Savoca, was published by Dark Sky Books. She lives in Brooklyn.

Thurston Moore http://www.flowersandcreampress.com/about Thurston Moore is founder of Sonic Youth and other bands (dim stars, northampton wools, chelsea light moving). Moore edits Ecstatic Peace Poetry Journal and publishes new poetry from his Flowers and Cream press. Recent poetry published by Angry Dog, Salt, and Water Row Books. He is on this year's (and last's) faculty at the Summer Writing Workshop at Naropa University and drives a beat up Infiniti.

Matthew Savoca http://www.matthewsavoca.com Matthew Savoca was born in 1982 in Pennsylvania. He wrote the book long love poem with descriptive title (Scrambler Books) and co-wrote the book Morocco with Kendra Grant Malone (Dark Sky Books). His newest book "I don't know," I said will be released by Publishing Genius Press later this year.

Sparrow http://www.groundreport.com/sparrow Sparrow lives in the hamlet of Phoenicia, N.Y. Every day he practices the recorder. Three of his books have been published by Soft Skull Press, incuding America: A Prophecy, A Sparrow Reader. Sparrow is in the antinomian pop band, Foamola. He often writes for GroundReport.

Leigh Stein http://www.leighstein.com Leigh Stein is the author of four chapbooks of poetry and a novel, The Fallback Plan (Melville House Press). Her first full-length poetry collection, Dispatch from the Future, is forthcoming from Melville House in July.

Adam Tobin http://www.adamtobin.blogspot.com Adam Tobin owns and operates Unnameable Books, a new and used bookstore in Brooklyn. He has written chapbooks and pamphlets which have been published by for words press, horse less press, Mondo Bummer, and The Weekly Weakling. Poems have appeared in Eoagh, Fence, and Foxy, among others.

Zack Tuck http://www.timelessinfinitelight.com/?tag=zachary-darr-tuck Z. Tuck has only ever lived places that were once part of Mexico. Z. Tuck has been published in Come Hither, The Seven Strangest Stories about the Seven Saddest Seas, Try!, and the forthcoming Eoagh Trans and Genderqueer Anthology. Z. Tuck co-curated the successful Condensery Reading series in Oakland. Z. Tuck is currently working on a manuscript titled "Renata Descartes Dreamed of Attending High School."

Anna Vitale http://www.onepausepoetry.org/explore/poets/profile/anna_vitale Some of Anna Vitale's writing can be found in Abraham Lincoln, Model Homes, P-Queue, and The Brooklyn Rail. Her first two books are Breaststa and Anna Vitale's Pop Poems. She's working on two longer books, Dreams and Anna Vitale's Autobiography. She's an editor of textsound.org with Laura Wetherington.

Boog City http://www.boogcity.com/ Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 21st year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women’s writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates two regular performance series—d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Chelsea's ACA Galleries; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, Cake Shop, CBGB's, The Knitting Factory, and The Sidewalk Café. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

Directions:
C/E to 23rd St., 1/9 to 18th St.
Venue is bet. 10th and 11th avenues

Next event:

Tues. June 26
BoogWork
Greg Fuchs-reading and workshop and music from Clear Plastic Masks

The last Tuesdays series will now feature the new BoogWork series alternating with the 10th season of the levy lives series.
BoogWork will feature a single poet reading, followed by a musical performance, and then that same poet giving the gathered a poetry workshop.

This is the kickoff at our new location:
Sidewalk Café
94 Ave. A (at East 6th Street), NYC

Still last Tuesdays, now from 6:30 p.m.-8:30 p.m.

"The Lost Way of Stones" 36-40
Wed 25 Apr 2012

Dear Friends and Colleagues;

These five panels of "The Lost Way of Stones" conclude a project begun 10 months ago: http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Lost/Lost-8/8-1.htm

I'm aware that reading these texts, and images, take time out of busy schedules, so I want to thank everyone who has undertaken this journey, and those who will in the future.

If you haven't been following its progress, "The Lost Way of Stones" begins at:
http://www.cddc.vt.edu/host/weishaus/Lost/Intro.htm
After the introduction there are links to the panels in sequences of five, now clearly marked.

Best Regards,
Joel

Denis Mahoney memorial service

Thu 26 Apr 2012

Poet and performer Denis Mahoney (52, lived in Boston) passed away last week. (http://www.blackpigliberationfront.com) Many knew him by his adopted persona which I first learned about on his Facebook page: Tariq Zayid. Since I haven't seen mention of his passing other than on that page I thought I'd better mention it. It seems Denis had a serious fall in the dark a while back causing serious injuries from which apparently he did not recover, although he seemed to recovering. The autopsy will tell more. Denis was an extraordinary person, and this news is very sad.

Here's what showed up on that FB page:

Dear Facebook Friends of Tariq Zayid (a.k.a Denis Mahoney),

By now many of you have heard the sad news of Tariq's passing. He died peacefully at home on Tuesday, April 17, 2012 at the age of 52.

A memorial service for Denis will be held at "La Grua Center" in Stonington, CT on Friday, April 27, 2012 at 12:30pm. Everyone is also invited to a reception at "Skippers Dock" immediately following the memorial service. The La Grua Center, and Skippers Dock are located very close to each other so you may park in either lot. Please allow a little extra driving time because Stonington Borough can be difficult to navigate.

In lieu of flowers, the family humbly requests that any donations be made to Say Yes Like a Tree - Education Fund in memory of Denis Mahoney (his legal birth name). FACEBOOK PAGE NAME: Say Yes Like a Tree - Education Fund in memory of Denis Mahoney.

NYC: Critical Writing as Creative Practice with Frances Richard: May 5 & 6

Thu 26 Apr 2012

Critical Writing as Creative Practice with Frances Richard May 5 & 6 It's tempting to think of the artist and the critic as adversaries, or at least as oppositesâ€”one creating and the other evaluating the work. But â€œto criticizeâ€ comes from the Greek word meaning â€œto decide,â€ and to write critically means, fundamentally, to decide what you thinkâ€”to explore your options, consider your questions, and survey the lay of your land. Knowing how to accurately and incisively describe and contextualize oneâ€™s own work is, of course, a survival skill required for any working artist. More fundamentally, however, the ability to analyze, illuminate and comment on artifacts and concepts that please, provoke, and infuriate youâ€”or to address issues in the culture at large to which an artist can bring unique perspectiveâ€”is to take ideas themselves as creative materials. Starting from our own current projects, verbal or visual, and dipping into artistsâ€™ writings and critical prose from the notes of Marcel Duchamp and the essays of Lyn Hejinian to Cabinet Magazine, this workshop will introduce writing as a technique for alert and generative analysis in and beyond the studio. Develop a vocabulary for descriptive and speculative discussion of specific media or works-in-progress; learn to use free-writing and other exercises to clarify goals and articulate ongoing (or secret) interests; break writerâ€™s block; and experiment with finding your own ways to move between words and forms, and between words in their many forms. Frances Richard's second volume of poems, The Phonemes, was recently released from Les Figues Press; later this year Futurepoem will release a third book titled Anarch. She is the author of See Through (Four Way Books, 2003) and the chapbooks Anarch. (Woodland Editions, 2008) and Shaved Code (Portable Press at YoYo Labs, 2008). With Jeffrey Kastner and Sina Najafi she is co-author of Odd Lots: Revisiting Gordon Matta-Clark's 'Fake Estates' (Cabinet Books, 2005). She has been a member of the editorial teams at Fence and Cabinet magazines, writes frequently about contemporary art, and teaches at Barnard College and the Rhode Island School of Design. She lives in Brooklyn.

This is a Millay Colony for the Arts Weekend Workshop at the Trisha Brown Studios in Soho, NYC. These two-day/eight-hour workshops offer intensive sessions with some of the most exciting teaching artists around. Lunch and coffee included both days. Conference paper/presentation

Dear friends at POETICS-BUFFALO,

I have been invited to do a paper and presentation on "The New Wave of Innovative Writers in Ireland" at a Conference in July on the campus of the University of California in Berkeley.

I would like to be inclusive and participatory with any possible writers for my report.

And I will have a section in my report for "The Irish Diaspora" and want to include a few Irish-Americans, Irish-Australians, Irish-Argentinians ... as long as they are INNOVATIVE writers.

So, if you fit this description ...

Please send me, as soon as possible (I do have a deadline next week) ...

1.) two or three sentences describing your philosophy of writing, and your sense of method(s) in writing;

2.) a list of titles of your publications and/or performances. Please include the name of publisher, place of publication, and date of publication for each title;

3.) two or three URLs where your work(s) can be purchased.

Thank you.

I suspect that this effort will bring a lot of attention to INNOVATIVE writers in Ireland!

Please circulate this message to any other writer you know in Ireland or the Irish Diaspora you think should be included and ask them to e-mail me directly as soon as possible with the answers to 1 : 2 : 3 : above!

Best regards,

Séamas Cain

May 2012 was a quiet, retrospective month that found the room defending a great modernist against a fresh charge, and looking back, more generally, at decades it could still name as its own. One hundred and fifty-two messages moved through the list, and its currents ran to the past: a scholarly fight over Gertrude Stein's wartime conduct, a call for papers on the poetry of the nineteen-eighties, an anniversary or two. The month was the list in its custodial mode, tending reputations and marking time.

The largest thread reopened an old wound in a modern key. A book had accused Gertrude Stein of collaboration with the Vichy regime, and the room took up the defense — one member working through "Charles Bernstein's defense of Gertrude Stein against Barbara Will", weighing whether the mother of experimental prose had been a fascist sympathizer or was being convicted on thin evidence. It was the monstrous-artist problem the list had chewed on for Pound and would never quite put down: whether a writer's politics can poison the work, and whether the accusation itself must be scrupulous before it sticks.

The quarrel's quieter half was retrospection. A call for papers on the poetry of the eighties invited the room to historicize a decade many of its members had lived through as adults — the strange sensation of watching one's own era become a scholarly period — while anniversaries of a webzine and a journal marked how much time the enterprise had already accumulated. The room was old enough now to be its own archive, its recent past already material for the conference.

Around it the ordinary keeping went on — a new chapbook announced, a survey of small Canadian publishers, the standing notices of a literary life. The infrastructure hummed beneath the scholarship, the small presses still issuing, the list still relaying, the whole apparatus older and thinner but intact. There is a particular melancholy in a community that has begun to attend more to its own history than to its future, cataloguing its decades even as it thins — the melancholy, precisely, of an institution that has started to suspect its best work is behind it.

I have set May down exactly as the archive delivered it — the defense of Stein against the charge of collaboration, the poetry of the eighties turned into a subject for papers, and the anniversaries piling up — because it was the month the list worked mostly as a keeper of the past: guarding a modernist's name, historicizing a decade it remembered firsthand, counting the years the enterprise had run. A room that will scrupulously weigh whether Gertrude Stein was a collaborator and, in the same breath, watch its own recent decades harden into scholarship is a room grown reflective with age, aware that it has become, without quite meaning to, one of the things that gets studied rather than one of the things still happening.

POL May Day OWS Poetry events
Fri 27 Apr 2012

The Occupy Wall Street Poetry Collective (Occupy Poetry) will be sponsoring two events (and possibly a third) on May Day as part of the city-wide celebration of a "Day Without the 99%" in NYC.

* 11:00 am to 1:00 pm in Bryant Park--POETS' CORNER The format for this will be a bit different from our usual "Poetry Assembly." The idea is to have a continuous reading if possible during this time, with poets taken in the order they arrive and sign up. Look for the sign in the park for our location.

* 3:30 pm in Union Square--POETRY ASSEMBLY This will be the traditional PA, with folks putting their names in a hat and reading for three minutes when their names are called. We are holding it immediately preceding the unity rally at Union Square which is scheduled to start at 4:00.

* 7:30 pm (tentative)--PARTICIPATORY POETRY PROJECTION

Hello,

If youâ€™re interested, I just finished something called The $20 Drawing Project. I agreed to draw anything ANYTHING for $20. People mailed me a 20 and told me what to draw. I drew their request and mailed them the 8x10 drawing. People often requested text (poetry sometimes) in the drawings, and I often added text that I liked to the drawings. I did 50 drawings, and kept a blog of the drawings and the details about each request. You can see it here:

New Anthology "In The Spirit of T'ao Ch'ien"

Mon 30 Apr 2012

JUST RELEASED--A new anthology of poems “In the Spirit of T’ao Ch’ien” hand-stitched paperback, 84 pp, $16

FootHills is offering free shipping on orders placed by May 3.

“One of the poets in this book speaks of ‘First Breath’ and ‘Last Breath.’ Here are American poets who have “breathed in” the breath of such Chinese poets as T’ao Ch’ien, Han Shan, and Wang Wei. And here they breathe it back out again where it mingles with the breath of America.” Jonathan Chaves, Translator and professor of Chinese --- T’ao Ch’ien (365-427 C.E.) is a major figure in the Chinese poetic tradition whose influence on subsequent generations cannot be overstated. Like T’ao Ch’ien’s poems, those collected here reflect a viewpoint on life and society from outside the mainstream. The five contributors poems are plain spoken, clear, generally short, and readily understandable, yet deeply philosophical. They explore the poets’ states of consciousness and relationship with the natural world as they seek a self-understanding, as well as a connectedness with the wider world that surrounds them. When these poets address political issues, they see through the smoke and mirrors of officialdom and are critical of social injustice.

David Abel & Mark Weiss
Wednesday, May 23, 2012
St. Marks Poetry Project
131 E. 10th Street, New York, NY 10003
8:00 pm

David Abel is a poet, editor, and teacher, and the proprietor of Passages Bookshop (passagesbookshop.com). His recent publications include the chapbooks Commonly (Airfoil) and Black Valentine (Chax), and the collaborative artistâ€™s books While You Were In and Let Us Repair (disposable books, with Leo & Anna Daedalus); Float, a collection of collage texts, is forthcoming in spring 2012 from Chax, and new chapbooks of poems and visual work are due around the same time from Barebone books and c_L. With Sam Lohmann, he publishes the Airfoil chapbook series (airfoilchapbooks.blogspot.com), and since 2002 he has published the free broadside series Envelope, with 22 issues to date. As an interdisciplinary artist, he has devised numerous performance, film, theater, and intermedia projects, both solo and with a wide range of collaborators. A founding member of the Spare Room reading series, now in its tenth year (flim.com/spareroom), he also teaches writing, most recently at the Multnomah Arts Center, where he has since 2009 been the coordinator of the Literary Arts program. A Research Fellow of the Center for Art + Environment of the Nevada Museum of Art in Reno (nevadaart.org/ae/center), he recently curated the exhibition Object Poems for 23 Sandy Gallery (23sandy.com/objectpoems/catalog.html), and is co-administering 13 Hats, an ongoing platform for collaborative work by a dozen visual artists and writers. He lives in Portland, Oregon.

Mark Weiss has published seven collections of poetry, most recently As Landscape (Chax Press, 2010). Least Weasel published his chapbook Dark Season in 2011. Different Birds appeared as an ebook in 2004 (www.shearsman.com). He edited, with Harry Polkinhorn, Across the Line / Al otro lado: The Poetry of Baja California (Junction, 2002), and, with Marc Kaminsky, Stories as Equipment for Living: Last Talks and Tales of Barbara Myerhoff (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2007). Among his translations are Stet: Selected Poems of JosÃ© Kozer (Junction, 2006) Cuaderno de San Antonio / The San Antonio Notebook, by Javier ManrÃquez (Editorial Praxis, 2004), Notas del paÃs de Z, by Gaspar Orozco (Universidad AutÃ³noma de Chihuahua, 2009), and the ebook La isla en peso/ The Whole Island, by Virgilio PiZera (www.shearsman.com 2010,). His bilingual anthology The Whole Island: Six Decades of Cuban Poetry was published in 2009 by the University of California Press. He lives at the edge of Manhattanâ€™s only forest.

MAY DAY Whiskey & Fox Parks and Occ No. 3

Tue 1 May 2012

Friends:

1. After a long winter the Fox is rustling the leaves. Just in time for MAY DAY afternoon, Whiskey & Fox Parks and Occupation No. 3 it out, being distributed by hand amongst May Day actions in NYC, and available for download from http://whiskeyandfox.org.

No. 3 features work from Robin Clarke, Chris Miller, Christine Remein, Gracie Leavitt and RJ Maitland, Jeff T. Johnson, Joshua Zelesnick, Daniel C. Remein, and Gerry Loose. To return again to Jack Spicer: "The music/ Is right though. The lemon tree/ Could branch off into real magic. Each flower in place. We/ Were sickened by the old lemon."

2. Whiskey & Fox still has some more work we are hoping to publish in yet another Parks and Occ. issue. Just because the insurgency of democracy and anarcho-pacifism and public assembly and occupation has hibernated and may or may not proceed with the inertia we would want does not mean that we should not continue to faithfully decorate the parks of the new democracy to come, or, alternately, by contiguously affixing poesis to spaces and places, making/occupying more and more space as parkspace. More issues will be contingent on enough work (read, MORE work) coming our way of sufficient intensity and commitment; work that can invent a new sincerity and sustain a new endurance in order that we can continue this work beyond the initial burst of last autumn.

Strike!

The Carol Novack Tribute Issue

This newest issue of Mad Hatters' Review is dedicated to the memory of our tempestuous founder, Carol Novack, and features over 100 writers, poets, film-makers, artists, musicians and genre-benders.

As you've come to expect from us, styles and approaches vary wildly, from the agnostically eclectic to the godly lyrical. Our creators are emergent, emerged or imminent, yet they all hold the one thing in common: they are constantly reinventing themselves in their pursuit of a deeper unknown.

This issue's special section is Carol Novak's Traveling Circus, which aside from a medley of performing creatures from Carol's mythical memoirs, Giraffes in Hiding, also showcases a great number of pieces written for Carol by her friends and fellow artists. There's also a potpourri of Carol's newer works that only just now get to see the light of day.

MHR 13 features the work of:

Carol Novack ~ Wilton Azevedo ~ BacBacLove ~ CamillE Bacos ~ Manoj Baviskar ~ James Belflower ~ Stefanie Bennett ~ Ann Bogle ~ Doug Bond ~ Tom Bradley ~ Lee Ann Brown ~ Amy Marie Bucciferro ~ Orin Buck ~ Andrei Codrescu ~ CAConrad ~ Robert Calabrese ~ Robin Carstensen ~ David Chirot ~ Walter Cummins ~ Greg Dember ~ Jean Detheux ~ Dewanatron ~ Kim Farleigh ~ Raymond Farr ~ Nancy Flynn ~ Hugh Fox ~ Vernon Frazer ~ Kirk Glaser ~ Daniel Grandbois ~ Rich Haber ~ Ernst Halter ~ Jefferson Hansen ~ Daniel Harris ~ Shirley Harshenin ~ j/j hastain ~ Martin Heavisides ~ Leigh Herrick ~ Laura Hinton ~ Webber Holley ~ Lori Horvitz ~ Jason Irwin ~ Rich Ives ~ Kirsten Kaschock ~ Mary Kasimor ~ Jukka-Pekka Kervinen ~ Hansoo

Kim ~ Zachary Kluckman ~ Annette Labedzki ~ Dolly Lemke ~ Gregory Lenczycki ~ Bobbi Lurie ~ Michael Main ~ Steve Mass ~ Laura McCullough ~ Scott McFarland ~ Don C Meyer ~ Ben Rush Miller ~ M V Montgomery ~ Raphael Moser ~ Robert Mueller ~ Sierra Nelson ~ Cedar Lorca Nordbye ~ Traci O'Connor ~ Abel Ortiz-Acosta ~ Luca Penne ~ Austin Publicover ~ Dan Raphael ~ Lori Romero ~ Alison Ross ~ Hilary Schaper ~ Susan Scutti ~ Larissa Shmailo ~ Jeffrey Side ~ Lysette Simmons ~ Jürgen Smit ~ Katherine Soniat ~ Marcus Speh ~ Melissa Stern ~ Terese Svoboda ~ George Szirtes ~ Gene Tanta ~ Lynne Thompson ~ Paul Toth ~ Hugh Tribbey ~ Steve Tune ~ Robin Vaughn-Williams ~ Marc Vincenz ~ Allegra Wakest ~ Margaret Walther ~ Sarah Walker ~ Christine Wilks ~ John Moore Williams ~ Renee Witherwax ~ Michael Wolman ~ Bill Yarrow ~ Paul Yates ~ Changming Yuan

New in AHP Essay Series: Dan Waber's "Regular Expressions as a System of Poetic Notation"

Wed 2 May 2012

Please take a look at the latest essay in our series "Regular Expressions as a System of Poetic Notation" by Dan Waber. The piece previously appeared in P-Queue in 2008. In the essay, Waber shows how patterns and syntax from the fields of mathematics & computing might open up interesting fields of possibility for expression in poetry.

If you'd like to read Dan Waber's essay plus other essays, rants, interviews & reviews, please visit www.angelhousepress.com and click on essays. & if you have a word or two to say about poetry, fiction, arts, creative non fiction, alternative culture, please send your piece to me for consideration in the series. i'm always looking for work that continues the conversation of creativity...

Papers for the Border #13 ~ THE POETRY EPISODE ~ is now live

Thu 3 May 2012

Hi all,

Papers for the Border is a podcast series that showcases seldom heard and experimental music, with the occasional spoken word piece thrown in (past episodes have included recordings by Jaap Blonk, Charles Bernstein, and Susan Howe & David Grubbs). But this episode is all poetry (albeit often set to music). It includes a rare performance by Steve Lacy with Anne Waldman, and recordings exclusively made for PFTB by Susana Gardner and Aaron Belz.

Here's the link to the blog which has the program list and the link to the podcast itself:
http://pftbpodcast.wordpress.com/2012/05/04/papers-for-the-border-13-the-poetry-episode/

Andrew Suknaski: July 30, 1942-May 3, 2012

Thu 3 May 2012

We are sad to report that Chaudiere author Andrew Suknaski, from our perpetually-forthcoming selected poems, has died in Moose Jaw of natural causes. From Sarah Simison:

We are very sorry to report the death of Andy Suknaski in Moose Jaw on May 3, 2012. While Andy was most famous for WOOD MOUNTAIN POEMS, he first came to fame in Al Purdy's anthology of new writers, STORM WARNING. Andy was a strong believer in the small press movement, and early published such writers as Gary Hyland, Sid Marty and Glen Sorestad; he also influenced a whole generation of prairie writers with his own books of gritty, realistic poetry. Many writers owe a debt to him.

Nomados is proud to announce Actualities by Norma Cole Poetry 24 pp ISBN

978-0-9810952-8-8 @ $10.00 + $3.00 p&p

The best way to glimpse the hurtling world may be out of the corner of one's eye, when the lucidity of wonder reasserts itself. In Norma Cole's radiant new work, Actualities, a poet's intelligence courts hazard, misprision and the incisions of the archaic to draw the ear and the eye toward complex, thrilling delight-and a quickening journey through the natural history of perception. Who knew time could be banished and the senses tempted so? I predict that you'll want to return to Actualities often-even the title is richly layered-and that it will be with growing urgency and admiration.

Andrew Suknaski memorial/wake reading;

Fri 4 May 2012

A memorial/wake reading for the late prairie poet Andrew Suknaski (July 30, 1942 - May 3, 2012), the poet of Wood Mountain, Saskatchewan, will be held upstairs at The Carleton Tavern, 233 Armstrong Street (at Parkdale), Ottawa on Friday, June 1, 2012 at 7:30pm.

Hosted by rob mclennan, this informal gathering of friends, admirers, fans and otherwise well-wishers will feature readings of Suknaski's own words as tribute by some of his friends

If you would like to say a few words about/for Suknaski, or have the opportunity to read a short selection from one of his works, email rob mclennan at rob_mclennan (at) hotmail.com.

For those inquiring about There Is No Mountain: The Selected Poems of Andrew Suknaski, edited by rob mclennan, it will be appearing later this year (thanks to a generous offer made to help offset production costs).

Compline Press / Eleni Stecopoulos's Daphnephoria

Mon 7 May 2012

From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Compline presents: Eleni Stecopoulos's Daphnephoria
Date: Mon, 7 May 2012 00:51:55 -0700

Dear Friends:

I'm super excited to announce the release of a new Compline chapbook, Eleni Stecopoulos's Daphnephoria. Over the course of the year, I hope to print completely letterpress micro-run chapbooks as a way to highlight brand new work by some of my favorite poets, while also raising money for more expensive full-length projects. My plan is to treat these books as press fundraisers: to make them using mostly recyclable material completely by hand, while selling them for a ludicrously cheap price to inspire interest and support from local poetry communities.

Eleni Stecopoulos is the author of the totally wonderful Palm Press long-player Armies of Compassion, and the world's foremost expert of the Poetics of Healing (according to me!). By purchasing this book, you'll get a glimpse at what Eleni's currently working on (like, right now!) while directly helping to support the next two Compline projects; the long-awaited edition of Leslie Scalapino and Kiki Smith's The Animal is in the World like Water in Water and David Brazil's first full-length collection, Economy. And to make it even more appealing, I've decided to try a two-price model: if you live in the Bay Area and you can get the book from me personally, it will only cost you $5 (I know!! Nuts, right?! This is the price of a coffee drink these days!). If you'd like the book shipped (even if you're local), it will cost you $8. This is not, of course, to punish friends and colleagues living out of state, but to try to keep the price down for folks I might see in person around town. It is also to inspire us to actually say hello to each other and share a moment of camaraderie in an otherwise completely inhospitable world!

I'd also like to make it easy to give these books as gifts to friends (and they're worth it, I'm telling you!), so buy one for a friend and I'll include a little personal note from you! This might be the perfect time to remind someone you're thinking about them by sending them a badass chapbook in the mail!

Also, it's a super short run, so get it while you can!

So, if you'd like to get the book from me in person (at a reading, or at my house, or at some clandestine location), and you'd like to spend $5 to get something rad while supporting the work I do with the press:

CLICK HERE!

If you'd like me to send the book to you, and you're willing to spend $8 of your hard-earned money to support often-not-super-commercially-viable poetries (!!), click the button below:

CLICK HERE!

You can also pick up the book by visiting our website here!

Spread the word, please, to friends and family! We appreciate the support!

All best,

Michael

WELCOME TO THE CONVERSATION: VIDA LAUNCHES "HER KIND"
Mon 7 May 2012

VIDA: Women in Literary Arts has launched HER KIND, a blog and online community-building forum for individuals interested in the discussion and perception of womenâ€™s writing. HER KIND, inspired by the Anne Sexton poem of the same name, will highlight a wide range of writers, themes, and feature categories.

Founded in 2009, VIDA is a national literary organization seeking â€œto explore critical and cultural perceptions of writing by women through meaningful conversation and the exchange of ideas among existing and emerging literary communities.â€ Starting now, HER KIND, under the leadership of co-editors Rosebud Ben-Oni and Arisa White, will serve as an active demonstration of VIDAâ€™s mission by promoting and curating conversations about writing by women that are often overlooked by other media outlets.

In short, we at VIDA know women writers are smart. And weâ€™ve had to be more than capable to make writing central in our busy lives. Just imagine the positive influence weâ€™re bound to create when we come together as a community.

HER KIND seeks to be as inclusive and as intersectional as possible. Please join the conversation at www.herkind.org.

Also, dive into "21 Love Poems for Adrienne Rich," including work by Adrienne Su, Amy King, Ada Limon, Becca Klaver, Camille Dungy, Carmen Gimenez-Smith, Cate Marvin, Erin Belieu, Erica Moya, Erika Meitner, Katharine Varnes, Martha Silano, Margaret Ronda, Melinda Wilson, Metta Sama, Patricia Spears Jones, Rachel Eliza Griffiths, Rachel Zucker, Tamiko Beyer, Tonya Foster and Wendy Walters.

Thank you,

the canadian prose poem; query,
Mon 7 May 2012

For the sake of my own interest, and to perhaps answer my own questions on the subject, Im working on an essay on the Canadian prose poem (as opposed to the American prose poem, which appears to have a well-known tradition and trajectory). Im wondering if anyone out there is aware of essays, reviews, interview and/or other works that might help me track this elusive Canadian beast? How did we get to where we are now?

Im thinking of contemporary writers working with the prose-poem and/or prose-line such as Meredith Quartermain, Sina Queyras, Sylvia Legris, Lisa Robertson, Daphne Marlatt and Rob Budde. Is this a matter of 1960s-era French-Canadian influence, translations of Nicole Brossard, for example?

Any suggestions would be appreciated. A big subject, I know.

Thanks

spd spelling bee! may 14!
Mon 7 May 2012

Dear Poet and/or Friend of Poets and/or others,

I've probably written to you about this before. But I'm on the board of a great organization called Small Press Distribution (the only non-profit distributor of literary books left in the entire country). It basically keeps US literatures alive in this bad time.

SPD is doing a celebrity spelling bee--called the "Bee-In, A Spelling Bee to Benefit SPD--on May 14th at the Crown Point Gallery in San Francisco to raise a little money.

If you are in the Bay Area, it would be great if you would join me there.

This year Sedge Thomson will be the emcee again and thriller writer Cara Black returns to spell and then there will be all new spellers including Dennis J. Bernstein, longtime front line reporter specializing in Human Rights (and newly minted poet!), Cy Musiker, a reporter familiar to radio audiences in the Bay Area and beyond; novelist Joshua Mohr; Carolina De Robertis whose novel Perla is just out to rave reviews; treasured Bay Area poet D.A. Powell; and John Jay Osborn, Jr., author of recently reprinted and perennial bestselling Paper Chase, among many others.

There will be tasty treats from ThirstyBear, Semifreddis and "Terroir" gin (inspired by Mt. Tam) from St. George Spirits for genuine Bee's Knees cocktails, along with wine from Kermit Lynch. There's also a Silent Action with fancy restaurant certificates, theater and music tickets, art, books, hotel stays and much more.

The bee is Monday, May 14th. The Crown Point Gallery is at 20 Hawthorne Street in San Francisco. Doors open at 6:30. The Bee starts at 7:30 and goes for about an hour.

Get tickets & more info about our infamous spellers here:

http://www.spdbooks.org/pages/events/default.aspx <http://www.spdbooks.org/pages/events/default.aspx>

If you are not in the Bay Area, please consider donating or becoming a member. Information on how to donate is here: http://www.spdbooks.org/Members/Members.aspx

"Steve Kulash & other autopsies" a chapbook by Catherine Owen

In "Steve Kulash & other autopsies" Catherine Owen offers poems which portray leaps, misfits & the wild. Yet these poems are rooted in ordinary moments or finding beauty & ecstasy in the ordinary. Owen populates her poems with both desolate and lush landscapes, graffiti, fire & grief. She uses language that appeals to all the senses. She is sensitive to sound as demonstrated by the exquisite musicality and rhythm of the lines. She is a close observer. It is as if Owen holds a magnifying glass to life and is reporting on its intricate details, translating them into poignant imagery and metaphor. These poems are in part empathetic explorations of the nature of grief and an attempt at solace, an attempt at joy, at persevering. Side by side with images of emptiness & incompletion are joyous contortions of language, Whack-A-Mole, buttons popped open, Beaujolais and Betty Boop. When I first heard these poems, I was struck by how imaginative and intense they were, and how I responded to them with understanding, with a feeling of relief at not being alone.

rob mclennan, Stephen Brockwell and Laura Mattingly read at Gold Mine, New Orleans!

17 Poets! Literary and Performance Series,
May 10, 2012, 8PM
Gold Mine Saloon, 701 Dauphine St.
New Orleans (French Quarter)
www.17poets.com

Laura Mattingly saw the underside of many large bridges during her float from Kansas City to New Orleans. She wrote for the Metro Santa Cruz Newspaper for a while in CA. There were no notable bridges in this town except for the wharf, which she considers to be a one sided bridge. She now lives in New Orleans and pours booze for a living, helping bridge the gap between sobriety and intoxication. She used to edit the magazine Artvoices.

Stephen Brockwell is the author of The Wire in Fences (Balmuir, 1988), Cometology (ECW Press, 2001), which Harold Bloom described as having rare and authentic promise, Fruitfly Geographic (ECW, 2004), winner of the 2004 Archibald Lampman Award, and The Real Made Up (ECW, 2007). He edited Rogue Stimulus: the Stephen Harper Anthology for a Prorogued Parliament (Mansfield, 2010) with Stuart Ross. He is currently completing the Impossible Books project which has been excerpted in The Puritan (http://puritan-magazine.com/issue13.php), Experimento (http://experiment-0.com) and chap-books from the Olive Reading Series and above/ground press. Stephen is also the insanely busy owner of the small IT consulting firm http://www.brockwellit.com.

Born in Ottawa, Canadas glorious capital city, rob mclennan currently lives in Ottawa. The author of more than twenty trade books of poetry, fiction and non-fiction, his most recent titles are the poetry collections A (short) history of l. (BuschekBooks, 2011), grief notes: (BlazeVOX [books], 2011), Glengarry (Talonbooks, 2011), kate street (Moira, 2011) and 52 flowers (or, a perth edge) (Obvious Epiphanies, 2010), and a second novel, missing persons (2009). An editor and publisher, he runs above/ground press, Chaudiere Books (with Jennifer Mulligan), The Garneau Review, seventeen seconds: a journal of poetry and poetics and the Ottawa poetry pdf annual ottawater. He spent the 2007-8 academic year in Edmonton as writer-in-residence at the University of Alberta, and regularly posts reviews, essays, interviews and other notices at www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

Exhibitors Wanted for Boog Fest's 9th Annual Small, Small Press Fair
Wed 9 May 2012

Hey everyone,

Boog City would like to once again extend an invite to each of you to exhibit at our 9th annual small, small press fair (with indie records and crafts, too).

The fair will once again span two days, Sat. Aug. 4-Sun. Aug. 5, and be held at Brooklyn’s Unnameable Books (600 Vanderbilt Ave.) in their beautiful backyard.

The fair will take place during the 6th annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival.

The fair will open on Saturday with performances by authors from each of the tabling presses.

Tables are $30 for the fair, $20 dollars if you bring your own bridge table (up to 3’ x 3’).

DISCOUNT OFFER: Paypal [redacted] on or by May 15 and it's $25 or $15.

Please email me to reserve your table and schedule your reader. We look forward to the fair once again being a warm gathering with wonderful books, poetry, music, and other items from around our creative community.

This year’s fair will feature readings, musical performances, a lively panel, political speakers, our new BoogWork poetry workshop and reading series, and a non-nyc press kicking off season 10 of our levy lives: celebrating the renegade press series.

as ever,
David

P.S. Apologies if you received more than one copy of this email.

Water From Oar
A nurse comes to my bedside, >>pushes my shoulder

>>gently, rousing me at 3:00 a.m.
>>Itâ€™s when they like to do the CT scans, >>she tells me, and suddenly all the world >>comes rushing back.
>>I canâ€™t feel my head; itâ€™s still numb.
>>My companion this night, >>is sleeping, one arm crossed >>over her eyes as if she is shielding >>herself from a light
>>she doesn't want to see.
>>Her hair falls in a thick knot >>around her shoulders >>and I remember how it felt >>in my hands after she broke her back >>and I leaned over the tub >>to wash out the tangles, her arms too weak >>to lift the curled heft. As I washed >>her hair, I could smell wood smoke, >>juniper, slickrock, perfumes >>swept down with the riverâ€™s >>big water and the kayaks. As they wheel >>me to radiology, I think >>about how Iâ€™d sit for hours >>on the banks of the Colorado, just to watch >>her graceful rolls, >>the way she separated >>water from oar. Her laughter >>as she plummeted under >>and then sprung back upward, >>split through solemn canyon walls.
>>I am lucky; though I have awoken >>once again into tumultuousness >>of illness, I feel her pushing, >>pushing me to a riverâ€™s >>eddies, to safety.

Barbara Ellen Sorensen is a poet, writer, and editor. She has lived with Parkinsonâ€™s Disease for over 10 years. In summer 2010, she underwent deep brain stimulation (DBS), for which she is eternally grateful. Her son, Bryon Michael Sorensen, died in fall 2011 from complications of an alteriovenous malformation (AVM). These poems reflect the ongoing process of reconciling both circumstances, however, she continues to believe in the beauty and elegance of life.

Tomatoes
She wanted a tomato sandwich >>>not just bread and tomato, but buttered,Â >>>and no crusts, and just so; the tomato, peeled, sliced >>>the proper way, everything in its place, >>>and buttermilk on the sideâ€“
>>>
>>>That day I came in she wanted to goÂ >>>and buy some fresh tomatoes at the farmerâ€™s market. So, >>>I loaded Mary and her walker up into my jeep >>>and we took off â€“ an unlikely duo->>>23 and 92.
>>>I rolled down the windows, >>>hoping she wouldnâ€™t overheat.
>>>
>>>Once there she rolled her walker up and then -Â >>>was too tired, so I picked out the tomatoes >>>while she sat, chatted up the other customers >>>then I got her back in the jeep >>>and we drove to the nursing home >>>and I rolled her in on her walker, >>>short, spare, emaciated, pale, >>>she crawled back into bed while I >>>made her a sandwich...
>>>
>>>That may have been her last tomato stand.
>>>It wasnâ€™t so long afterwards that sheÂ >>>was lying in bed, delirious, demanding pill after pill >>>for pain, and a shake, >>>the mean nurse said â€œshe canâ€™t eat, sheâ€™ll aspirate.â€
>>>I wanted to scream â€œyouâ€™re letting her die!â€
>>>
>>>but really it was just meÂ >>>not letting go.

Fifth Grade Poetry Workshop
by Elizabeth Thomas

He says, â€œWould you write me a poem?â€ â€œAbout what?â€ I ask.
â€œThe desert. I miss the desert.â€

His skin, the color of sand.â€¨
Behind a shy smile, the sunâ€¨ that is his face, eyes deep wellsâ€¨ where wishes wait. I look around this classroomâ€¨ of unruly fifth graders, â€¨ their teacherâ€¦ someplace elseâ€¨ and I just want to go home â€“
â€œWould you write me a poem?â€â€¨
And for a moment, it is just us,â€¨ this boy and this poet, unsureâ€¨ of most things, yet knowing poetry can open worlds for himâ€¨ beyond this classroom â€“â€¨ these scattered desks, damaged â€¨ whiteboards and outdated books, the ceiling coming apart above us.â€¨

He is one fifth grader, waiting.â€¨ â€œThe desert,â€ he says. â€œI miss â€¨ the desert." His voice an echo of past civilizations hoping â€¨ someone is listening.

quarter after on Issuu / quarter after press

Sun 13 May 2012

Hi all -

quarter after - A Place for Art and its Reasons - has just recently released its issuu page, which can be viewed here http://issuu.com/quarterafter Our first issue up and is also on our site http://quarterafter.org/. Issue no. 1 features a stellar lineup featuring:

*Adam Fieled * Chad Scheel * David Berridge * Michael Farrell * Jane Joritz-Nakagawa * Tiffany Monroe * Felino A. Soriano * Vernon Frazer * rob mclennan * Donna Kuhn * Merlin Flower * Christina Baker-Jones * David Harrison Horton * Lawrence Upton * Ric Carfagna * Roger Sedarat * Seekers of Lice * James Sanders * Linda Neiswender * be sure to check it out

Also, quarter after is starting an artist interview/dialogue series which will presented in the same way as the journal - on the site, on line and in print - all published by quarter after press. If any of you are interested please let me know. I have a couple of poets and visual artists already lined up and one of the interviews will be up on the site shortly. I say "dialogue" because I don't have set questions, but would rather us have a conversation.

And the last note, quarter after press has officially launched (http://quarterafter.org/quarter-after-press/). If you have something you are looking to publish, send it over.

All the best in creating, announcing a new issue of ECCOLINGUISTICS [2.0]

Mon 14 May 2012

Dear All,

A new issue (2.0) of eccolinguistics will be mailed by the end of this week. You can check the announcement (and call for work) here:

eccolinguistics.blogspot.com

In contrast to previous issues, this is a single-author work from someone I've never met nor been able to contact. The circumstance of my receiving the raw material for this issue must remain a secret for reasons that will be clear after reading it. Perhaps, anyway. If you'd like a copy, let me know, as eccolinguistics is distributed on paper for free.

Happy reading-

Dear Big Bridge Friends,

We are pleased to announce the BIG BRIDGE 15 YEAR ANNIVERSARY ISSUE! For 15 years Big Bridge has worked hard to present our readers with a wide and varied selection of poetry, fiction, art, essays, and more. And through this work we hope we have conveyed our respect and love for all the great creative efforts of poets and artists we have known. Below is an abbreviated summary of what you will find in this new, big, 15thAnniversary Edition. We hope you will like what we have put together and will continue reading and enjoying Big Bridge. Thank you for your many years of support!

Love and peace,

Michael and Terri

Mingus Awareness Project Concert

to benefit the Les Turner ALS Foundation

Thursday, May 17, 2012 (8 p.m.)

FitzGerald's

6615 Roosevelt Road

Berwyn, IL 60402-1010

[redacted]

http://www.fitzgeraldsnightclub.com

On May 17, a group of musicians will gather at FitzGerald's to celebrate the life and music of Charles Mingus, and to benefit the Les Turner ALS Foundation. Mingus, an American musical hero who died of ALS, is one of the greatest figures in jazz history. His bass playing, compositions and philosophy have transcended his genre and left indelible marks on music history. MAPtet will perform music by Charles Mingus, Ellington, Jon Hey and Alex Wing.

Admission: $20 / $15 for students.

Interview on Philip Guston and Gustonbook in the new Big Bridge

Wed 16 May 2012

Neeli Cherkovski generously asked to interview me last year when my book *There Are People Who Think That Painters Shouldn't Talk: A GustonBook *was published by Post Apollo.

It's now up in the new issue of Big Bridge http://www.bigbridge.org/BB16/toc.htm which is chock full of terrific things.

If anybody's interested. Here is a direct link to the interview: http://www.bigbridge.org/BB16/prose/prosencherkovski.htm

Bernstein on Stein

Wed 16 May 2012

At

http://theartpart.jonathanmorse.net/2012/05/push-and-shove-hook-and-crook-bernstein/

I attempt to read a paragraph of Charles Bernstein's defense of Gertrude Stein against Barbara Will. If I'm reading it right, this paragraph may be claiming that poetry and history are written in different kinds of language, with different ethical demands to make on us readers.

These Peripheries

James Maughn

Cover image by Susan Harlan

100 pages

Otoliths, 2012

$14.95 + p&h

ISBN: 978-0-9872010-3-4

In a kaleidoscope of shifting voices, James Maughn embraces world poetry in his immensely creative new collection. Maughn's poems unlock new ways for us to think about voice, poetic interactions, and the structures of free verse. Each poem is written 'following' the work of another poet, either a contemporary writer or a recent translation from earlier literature. "These Peripheries" tenderly and with great skill, create a formal and nuanced conversation on contemporary poetics. Maughn's poems, traversing geographies and cultural locations, unsettle the concept of translation as a concrete, fixed mirror and opens it up, like the door of a bird cage, to immense possibilities, infinitely expanding the journey of both the new poems and the source poems. It is a stunning collection which takes a new shape every time I come to read it. — Judy Halebsky

Dear Big Bridge Friends,

We are pleased to announce the BIG BRIDGE 15 YEAR ANNIVERSARY ISSUE! For 15 years Big Bridge has worked hard to present our readers with a wide and varied selection of poetry, fiction, art, essays, and more. And through this work we hope we have conveyed our respect and love for all the great creative efforts of poets and artists we have known. Below is an abbreviated summary of what you will find in this new, big, 15th Anniversary Edition. We hope you will like what we have put together and will continue reading and enjoying Big Bridge. Thank you for your many years of support!

Love and peace,

Michael and Terri

Anthology of Posthuman Poetry CFW

/Call for Submissions:/

Beasts, Monsters, Creatures, and Cyborgs:
An Anthology of Post-Human Poetry

In the twenty-first century poetry interfaces with animal-machine. The "human" is not a given concept, but rather is one that is made in an ongoing technological and anthropological process. We hope to publish an anthology of poetry that participates in technological, biological, representational, sexual, political and theoretical post-humanisms. We're looking for poetry that engages with or is written by animals, beasts, monsters, immigrants, creatures, aliens, cyborgs, queers such that it challenges western, enlightenment figurations of the "self" and "human."

Any contemporary work in English (domestic or translated) that addresses the post-human is welcome. Please send up to 20 pages of poetry, in standard format (*.doc, *.docx, *.rtf, *.pdf) to Aaron Apps & Feng Sun Chen via [submishmash <http://posthumanpoetry.submishmash.com/submit>].

Previously published work is welcome; please include acknowledgements (if any) and a brief bio with your submission. If you have any questions please contact us at posthumanpoetry[at]gmail.com new multimedia issue of Unlikeliness!

Sat 19 May 2012

Greetings, fellow mayflies! Or barflies, or whatever the hell we all are. There's new work at /Unlikely Stories: Episode IV/, namely:

Seven Digital Montages by Diana Magallôn "Planetary Climate:" a series of Ten Paintings by Leonard Kogan "La beauté est dans la rue:" a short poetry film by Mayakov+sky and Don Eli "We Love You -- Iran & Israel:" a video call to peace by Ronny Edry and four songs by Gert Fröbe, the lo-fi project from Steve Caratzas, with a review by Margret Crist

And hey, have you checked out the new Unlikely Books site at http://www.unlikelystories.org/unlikely_books ? We've got a new double-chapbook out by Steve Dalachinsky, and we've got e-books on the way!

Making divine mistakes,

Re: Bernstein on Stein
Sat 19 May 2012

Hi Jonathan,

I'm glad you posted this, if only because it calls further attention to the Jacket2 feature on the relatively recent (to my knowledge) charge that Gertrude Stein was a Vichy collaborator. For those interested, note that links appear in the Jacket2 feature both to defenses of Stein as well as to the attacks which the authors of said defenses are responding to. In other words, readers who are willing have all the resources necessary to make up their own minds by going to the Jacket2 page, which you link to.

Your response to Bernstein is, of course, only to his introduction to the "dossier" featured in that journal (which consists of essays by Burns, Burns & Dydo, Retallack, Perloff. and Bernstein, as well as to additional materials).

While your point is well taken on Bernstein's use of clichés— at least two, in that brief introduction— that point is a stylistic one, and ignores his main claim that "[m]ost of these [recent] articles [attacking Stein] are written by authors who are hostile to Stein's literary works and who admit to their inability (and unwillingness) to read her work, including the works by Stein that directly address the issue at hand. In this Stein dossier, key documents are provided that refute the sensational tabloid accounts of Stein's activities, views, and affiliations during the war years."

While Bernstein here is arguably being slightly heavy handed in his loaded reference to "sensational tabloid accounts," your analysis hardly comes off better, I'm afraid. For instance, you write— presumably referring to the lack of "reference" in CB's poetry— that "[a]s a career move, that has been a winner for Bernstein." But the text you're responding to isn't one of his poems at all, so what do the signature moves of his poetry, much less his career, really have to do with a dossier on Stein's war years? Or are you arguing that his essay— and, by extension, all of the essays in the dossier— are similarly nonreferential, or somehow guilty by association? I note also that you mention at least two Bernstein poems specifically, while avoiding discussion of any of the other essays in the dossier, nor of any of the claims made in response to the recent attacks on Stein.

While your response to Bernstein seems ultimately rooted in some of his above-mentioned signature "moves," containing as it does a punchline (c.f. his poem "Of Time and the Line," which you mention), the subject of the dossier is hardly a laughing matter. The issue is not Bernstein, but Stein— and collaboration is a serious charge. If there is equally serious evidence that this great writer, who was at once an elderly Jewish lesbian and a fairly wealthy patron of the arts, was indeed a collaborator, then let it be brought forward and examined fairly. Apart from a cryptic reference to "a powerful Nazi crook named Bernard Faÿ," you decline to bring forward or refer to any such damning evidence yourself, much less to turn the focus of your discussion from messenger to message.

While the questions raised about Gertrude Stein's role in Vichy France call for, and deserve, serious response, I'm sorry to say that I find your post to be distracted by issues which strike me as extraneous, at best.

Yours in dialogue,

Mark DuCharme

Re: Bernstein on Stein
Sat 19 May 2012

Johnathan, Charles is right. The Steins did survive World War II in France; but this survival did not mean surviving the concentration camp or living in a barn in some body's farm. If I remember correctly they spent those years in a house with a garden about which Gertrude Stein herself writes some place outside Paris. You are write, they obtained the house through some German "friends (is that the guy Fey?). If I also remember correctly, in the same text, Stein underplays the threat the Germans occupying France represent though she doesn't outright deny it.

I don't think the issue here is denying the value of Stein's writing. Her crucial place in literature is obvious, and it is equally obvious her stunning originality was not appreciated by publishers of her time. In that strict sense she is like Emily Dickinson. On the other hand, in most other ways, she lived the life of a privileged, rich person, running a salon, admired by artists, writers and poets who later turned out to be central historical figures and also protected, it seems, by at least one "enlightened" Nazi collaborator.

Ciao,

Murat

May 20: The Human Micropoem @ NATO Rally (Chicago)
Sat 19 May 2012

You are invited to participate in
THE HUMAN MICROPOEM

SUNDAY, MAY 20th
from 11am-12pm
at the corner of Jackson & Columbus in Chicago, Illinois

Bring one poem 5 minutes in length to be read aloud or just come & be part of the chorus -- all welcome!

The Human Micropoem is a call and response choral form utilizing the human microphone at the occupy movements to amplify the speaker's words by those listening. The speaker says a line and then everyone who can hear repeats it.

This event is part of the March and Rally to Protest NATO
http://cang8.wordpress.com

Join in a legal, permitted, family-friendly march and rally! Starting at noon at Petrillo Bandshell, the Iraq Veteran's Against the War (IVAW) will be marching with us in solidarity. At the end of the march, within sight and sound of McCormick Place, members of IVAW will conduct the closing ceremony where they will return their medals to NATO. It will be a moving event, and not to be missed.

MY LORENZO
translated from the French by Andrew Zawacki
Poetry, 120 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN 978-1-936194-08-7 original paperback $14

MY LORENZO is an elegant, funny, often sad meditation on the fifteenth-century Italian statesman, art patron, and poet Lorenzo de Medici. Obliquely and eccentrically narrated, it is as concerned with physical arrangement as it is with linguistic ambiguity and matters philosophical, political, and sentimental. MY LORENZO is striking visually for its justified stanzas and tableau-like shape. Reading the book is akin to touring the Uffizi, its Renaissance paintings hung meticulously on the walls. MY LORENZO combines traditional form with an unapologetically modern idiom that draws on pop culture and shuttles vertiginously between theoryspeak and speakeasy slang. (This work, published as part of a program providing publication assistance, received financial support from the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Cultural Services of the French Embassy in the United States and FACE [French American Cultural Exchange]).

SÉBASTIEN SMIROU was born in 1972 in Niort. After earning a degree in journalism, he studied at the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales, where he enrolled in Roubaud's course in formal poetics. He founded the press "éditions rup & rud," coedits the magazine LIGNE 13, and has translated a number of American poets into French. Smirou is the author of three volumes of poetry, all published by P.O.L.: UN TEMPS POUR S'ÉTREINDRE UN TEMPS POUR SE SÉPARER (2011), BEAU VOIR (2008), and our present volume, MON LAURENT (2003). Smirou is a psychoanalyst, with a specialization in working with troubled children. He lives in Montrouge, on the outskirts of Paris.

ANDREW ZAWACKI is the author of three poetry books—PETALS OF ZERO PETALS OF ONE (Talisman House), ANABRANCH (Wesleyan), and BY REASON OF BREAKINGS (Georgia). Coeditor of VERSE and of THE VERSE BOOK OF INTERVIEWS, he has published criticism in the TLS, BOSTON REVIEW, HOW2, edited AFTERWARDS: SLOVENIAN WRITING 1945-1995 (White Pine) and co-translated Aleš Debeljak's WITHOUT ANESTHESIA (forthcoming from Persea). He teaches at the University of Georgia.

Bernstein on Stein
Mon 21 May 2012

Thanks very much for your helpful comments, Mark and Murat. Let me dispose of a few technicalities at the beginning and then try to make my original point more clearly.

The technicalities:

-- Murat writes, ["Stein's] stunning originality was not appreciated by publishers of her time. In that strict sense she is like Emily Dickinson." Actually, at least one influential editor (Thomas Niles of Roberts Brothers, later Little, Brown) begged Dickinson for a manuscript, and she ignored his repeated pleas. Likewise, her childhood friend Helen Hunt Jackson, one of America's best known women of letters during the second half of the nineteenth century, wrote her a letter that said,

"You are a great poet -- and it is a wrong to the day you live in, that you will not sing aloud. When you are what men call dead, you will be sorry you were so stingy." (Dickinson, _Letters_, ed. Thomas H. Johnson, no. 444a)

Dickinson ignored that one too.

-- Bernard Faÿ wasn't a German but a Frenchman, and altogether an amazing person. France's leading expert on American literature, he wrote a very good brand of English indeed in the pages of Eugène Jolas's _transition_ before Jolas broke with Stein, and yes it is literally true that he saved Stein's life during World War II. In gratitude to him, Alice Toklas converted to Catholicism after Stein's death. At the same time, it's also true that he didn't need the house in which he sheltered Alice and Gertrude because he was otherwise occupied with sending Masons to concentration camps. You'll encounter him toward the end of his glory days in Céline's _Castle to Castle_, holed up like a rat with Céline, Pierre Laval, and the rest of the last of Vichy's bitter-enders.

And a footnote I learned from Barbara Will: after the war, among his nest of Nazis in Fribourg, Faÿ took under his patronage Marcel Lefebvre, later to go on to Vatican-defying, Holocaust-denying fame with the Société St. Pius X. No Gertrude Stein, no Mel Gibson!

As to my own biographical take on Stein, I hardly have one. She was hardly the only American author of German Jewish descent to feel embarrassed or distressed or even pained by her genealogy. Nathanael West had that problem and dealt with it interestingly, by hiding behind a mask until it killed him. (Nobody expects a man named Nathan Weinstein to be a reckless driver, so when Nathan Weinstein changed his name he also started driving so recklessly that his friends refused to get into his car. Not long afterward, as these things go, he drove through a stop sign, and that was that for Nathanael West. He was 37.) By contrast, Walter Lippmann, the father of modern media punditry, was less interesting. He attempted to pass like Anatole Broyard, and to even hint to him that you knew he was Jewish was to break off all communication with him, forever. Stein may have had a similar problem, but of course her language brings out all the complications and ambiguities.

Which is to say that she was a great poet. But surely (this is a modest enough idea, isn't it?) none of us is going to claim that being a good (i.e., competent) artist is the same as being a good (i.e., virtuous) person.

And surely the example of Bernstein's language means that we aren't warranted in reading Bernstein or Will or Stein or anybody else as if they were journalists, uttering clichés but asking us not to listen to them. Oh, if only the sign that Nathanael West drove through had said not "Stop" but "Aporia."

Berstein on Stein

Mon 21 May 2012

Hi,

I love Charles project. I read nearly every article. What I did gather from all of it is that it is truth that Stein was friends with Bernard Fay, she translated text, and she and Alice moved during the war were they were protected by villagers who they knew and were loved by. No one has provided any information (but I'm a dense reader) as to whether Stein knew Fay's status, supported Hitler, or why she did the translatation or if doing a translation makes her a sympathizer (has anyone read Chronicles of the Guaki Indians/Auster is not a cannibal to my knowledge). To me, and again, I might be silly. To say that the infamous quote means that she was pro-Hilter, grammatically would mean that she was utterly anti-Left and anti-democratic, was she? I know she was republican, but anti-democratic?

There are a few things that fascinate me.

1. That when the show was in San Francisco there was relatively no hoopla. I did find a few articles. But in New York is become a huge controversy and was in the Daily News and CBS. It really infiltrated into popular culture. It alarmed me tho that people all over were making a judgement of someone whose work and life they knew nothing about.

2. I do have to say that Stein's self-preservation make me think. Could I act the same? Could fear or self-importance lead me to sit in my house while Jewish children and gays and disabled people and their Catholic sympathizers where being burned in ovens?

3. Yesterday, Jeff & I went to the show to see what was up. The MET did change the sign in the show. They folded to their benefactors. However, the sign merely said something to the effect of Stein was friends with Fay who helped her during the war. In the Met's defense, they kept the issue both brief and factual. I also have to say that I was the BEST collection I've ever seen, and made me cry. I was not prepared for it to be so great. It closes in 2 weeks (I think) and everyone who can, should.

4. After seeing the companion show in San Fransisco, I formed the opinion (which I am still forming) that despite her writing and the great Mother of Us All. I cannot consider Stein a feminist. Here marriage was a patriarchy of the worst kind, she kept the company of largely men, and other than the Mother Of Us All, I can't see how her work advanced the plight of woman at all. Instead, to me, she was a strong brilliant woman (a genius really) who functioned within and perhaps even lauded the patriarchy. A super-great writer, yes. A feminist or kind person, not necessarily.

Robert Hogg was born in Edmonton, Alberta on March 26, 1942. When the child was nine, his father bought a ranch in the Cariboo region in the interior of British Columbia, where the family spent three years; from there they moved to Burnaby, and later Abbotsford and Langley in the Fraser Valley where Hogg finished high school in 1960. He spent the next four years in the English and Creative Writing program at the University of British Columbia where he came into contact with the Black Mountain poets and their poetics and participated in the Tish poetry movement. After graduating in the spring of 1964 Hogg hitch-hiked to Toronto, visited the poet, Charles Olson, in Buffalo, and applied to study under him in the graduate program of the English Department of the State University of New York. Hogg later wrote his doctoral dissertation on Olson under the supervision of Robert Creeley. He completed the course work for the PhD in the spring of 1968 and accepted a position at Carleton University in Ottawa where he taught Modern and Post-Modern American and Canadian Poetry and Poetic Theory until his retirement in 2005.

While at Buffalo Hogg met and married Leslie Flaig, then a music major at the University, who has since become an accomplished artist and photographer. During the next two decades they raised three children on their farm in Mountain Township, about 50 kilometres south of Ottawa, where they grow organic crops and operate a commercial flour mill and natural food distribution company called Mountain Path Inc. At present, Hogg is working on a sixth book of poetry, and editing an extensive anthology of Canadian poetic theory.

Dear Poetics Listers,

I just want to announce that I've created a Facebook page for my participatory, multidisciplinary poetry project in progress, "what most vividly (a choral work)." The project has or soon will take the form of collage poetry, performance, sound pieces, and public text art installation. It's based on participants' responses to an evolving set of questions (including my own responses), which I adapt and collage together.

For more information, to see some of the original responses, and to answer any or all of the questions yourself, please see the website, http://whatmostvividly.com. Please also like/share the Facebook page: www.facebook.com/whatmostvividly. Thanks much!

Cheers,

Mondo Bummer
http://mondobummer.blogspot.com
Mondo Bummer is a chapbook press that publishes poetry and fiction in a disappointing way. Founded in Ann Arbor, Mich. in 2009, it currently operates out of San Francisco.

Jedidiah Clarke http://mondobummer.blogspot.com/2012/02/jedidiah-clarkes-time-i-busted-my-ear.html Jedidiah Clarke is a writer from Hell's Kitchen, New York City. Right now Clarke is in the process of adapting several of his short plays to film, and is also working hard to compile a database of his humorous short movie reviews, approximately 300 of which can be seen on his website. His goal is to reach 500 by year-end. On June 15 and 16, he will premiere some new plays at Space on White.

Thom Donovan http://whof.blogspot.com Thom Donovan edits the weblog Wild Horses Of Fire, now in its 7th year. His book, The Hole (Displaced Press), can be purchased through Small Press Distribution. He is currently revising and editing a book of essays and statements, provisionally titled "Sovereignty and Us."

Brenda Iijima http://ahsahtapress.boisestate.edu/books/iijima/iijima.htm Brenda Iijima is the author of Around Sea, Animate, Inanimate Aims, revv. you'll —ution, and If Not Metamorphic. Her forthcoming book, Early Linoleum, will be published by Say it with Stones Press this year. She runs Portable Press @ Yo-Yo Labs from Brooklyn.

Lauren Ireland http://www.oui-ja-yes.blogspot.com Lauren Ireland grew up in southern Maryland and coastal Virginia. She is the author of two chapbooks: Sorry It's So Small (Factory Hollow Press) and Olga & Fritz (Mondo Bummer Press). Her favorite album is Willie Nelson's Stardust. She lives on Alabama Street in San Francisco.

La Défense http://ladefense.bandcamp.com/ La Défense is Hillary (guitar, vocals) and Lydia (drums). They began developing their accessibly off-kilter girl punk sound in weekly bedroom jam sessions in October 2009, and have since performed at Brooklyn's Northside Festival, as well as venues including Death by Audio, Public Assembly, and Zebulon in Williamsburg, and Pianos and Cakeshop in Manhattan. Their songs are fast and fun. Distorted guitar chords, pop punk beats, and simple melodies. Kind of like the Ramones meets your mom's cherry pie.

Lily Ladewig
http://www.lilyladewig.wordpress.com
Lily Ladewig is the author of The Silhouettes (SpringGun Press).
Recent poems have been published in aesthetix, Bone Bouquet, Horse Less Review, Sixth Finch, and Spinning Jenny. She lives in Brooklyn.

Nate Logan
http://www.nathanglogan.tumblr.com
Nathan Logan's latest chapbook is Arby's Combo Roundup (Mondo Bummer).

Robert Manery studied with Bob Hogg at Carleton University in the 1980s. In response to Robs complaint about contemporary poetry, Bob suggested that he should read the language poets. This suggestion led to Robs continuing interest in the possibilities and limits of meaning-making. It also led to his collaborations with Louis Cabri, hosting literary events, including Bob Hoggs seminar on Charles Olsons The Special View of History, and then publishing hole magazine and hole books. Rob has published one book of poems, Its Not As If It Hasnt Been Said Before (Tsunami Editions). He currently teaches academic writing at Simon Fraser University where he is pursuing a doctorate in education.

Wed 23 May 2012

Big Bridge, Call for Work:

Poetry, Prose, Hybrid Text, Photographs, Artwork, Other

* ***

Phenomenology of Giving: a Use Me Capitalism

* *

Giving was not meant to be the antonym of taking; we're talking a developing act that creates agency and beneficiaries on both sides of the equation, bringing forth what matters, like some Higgs intelligence emanating mass. Both source and filters are necessary.

Through abstractions, perspectives, mediation and other cognitive tasks, explore the vagaries of giving as you bypass mediocrities and socio-political norms; implore episodes that deliver it, the experience that challenges it. Plead for thrills and chills that land you at the shores of its aesthetic and narrative, historically, culturally or privately. Imitate, improvise or survey to open up to the attention, intention and cost an act of giving calls for. How do emotions play into the act, how does love? Address the entanglements it purports and feeds, the overlaps, the boundaries.

To be part of this Big Bridge project, please send a brief bio pasted into the body of your e-mail to guest editor, Arpine Konyalian Grenier, [redacted] Use the words, "Big Bridge", followed by your full name in the subject line of the e-mail. Attach your work to the email as a Word.doc (for text) and as JPEG (for artwork and photos). Deadline is September 30, 2012.

"Anti-Radical Opera" by Arturas Bumsteinas and Jesse Glass up at Ubu Web

under sound works. This Internet project dates from 2001--2003. I wrote the libretto based on the writings of Joseph Shaw (1829--1865) who was murdered in Westminster, Maryland because of his involvement with the Know Nothing gang of Baltimore from 1855--1859. What ultimately brought Shaw to his untimely end was a badly timed editorial that appeared on the eve of Lincoln's assassination in April of 1865. Shaw hinted that perhaps Lincoln would make a better president below instead of above ground. When news arrived at Westminster, Maryland his presses were broken, his office set on fire, etc. Shaw left and returned one week later to be stabbed to death at the Anchor Hotel by members of the old Know Nothings that he had tangled with before. The six men who did Shaw in were brought to trial in the Westminster Court House and found not guilty. The State prosecutor was one Charles Webster, a former Know Nothing and Shaw's enemy. All of these circumstances were reflected in the old newspapers of Carroll County, Maryland, and Baltimore, from which I developed the narrative and the songs--found poems in fact.

The story is compelling and true, and Bumsteinas' experimental music and use of the burgeoning Internet of the early part of this century is highly innovative.

Please do give this sound work a listen:

ANNOUNCING THE BIG BRIDGE 15 YEAR ANNIVERSARY ISSUE

www.bigbridge.org<http://www.bigbridge.org>

Dear Big Bridge Friends,

We are pleased to announce the BIG BRIDGE 15 YEAR ANNIVERSARY ISSUE! For 15 years Big Bridge has worked hard to present our readers with a wide and varied selection of poetry, fiction, art, essays, and more. And through this work we hope we have conveyed our respect and love for all the great creative efforts of poets and artists we have known. Below is an abbreviated summary of what you will find in this new, big, 15th Anniversary Edition. We hope you will like what we have put together and will continue reading and enjoying Big Bridge. Thank you for your many years of support!

Love and peace,

Michael and Terri

Versal is ten!
Thu 24 May 2012

VERSAL IS TEN
Fall in love with the literary journal all over again
http://www.versaljournal.org/versalten

In the first edition of Versal, published in 2002, founder and editor Megan M. Garr wrote, "This could be the first and last Versal you ever read."

But on May 23, 2012, the dazzling tenth Versal, the international literary and arts annual, was revealed to a full house at Bo Cinq in the heart of Amsterdam, the Netherlands. This edition is a gold-plated wonder, with "Versal Ten" embossed on the front in the familiar Versal typeface. The evening marked the journal's milestone with anecdotes from its oldest and newest editors and with readings from contributors Ruth Danon and Laurence Levey, both of whom traveled from the USA for the event.

Among the 168 pages of this anniversary edition are four riddles from Ish Klein, a conversation between Michael Martone and Matthew Baker, and a series of "photodrawings" from Irish artist Garrett Phelan. Versal 10 also includes new works from Cody-Rose Clevidence, Erin Costello, Tamar de Kemp, Roxane Gay, James Grinwis, Dora Malech, Ben Merriman, Rusty Morrison, Brandon Shimoda, and many others.

For the first time in the journal's history -- perhaps for the first time in literary journal history -- no two copies of the offset-printed, full-color Versal 10 are alike. "750 Circles" is a handmade project by Versal's editorial team to honor the many people around the world who have made Versal possible.

Both journal and art gallery, this beautiful gold edition of Versal spans the range of some of today's best writing and art. It is now available at select bookshops and online at www.versaljournal.org/versalten.

About Versal

Versal is published in Amsterdam each May. Its editors hail from Canada, Russia, the UK, the USA and the Netherlands, and are led by American poet Megan M. Garr.

A publication celebrating translocal intersections and cross-cultural dialogue, Versal is internationally renowned for the quality of work published by up-and-coming as well as established writers, and for its strong attention to design and production values.

Clear Plastic Masks http://www.facebook.com/Clearplasticmasks The members of Clear Plastic Masks, formed in 2011, had been buddies and neighbors for years, relentlessly and enthusiastically supporting each others' artistic endeavors before coalescing into the definite unit they now are. Blessed to be part of an extended family of musicians, the band's sound owes much to the collective experience of playing with so many friends. Having this past month recorded their first LP with Mr. Andrija Tokic at The Bomb Shelter in Nashville (Alabama Shakes; Jay Reatard) the boys are looking forward to its eventual release. Clear Plastic Masks are Charlie Garmendia on drums, Eddy DuQuesne bass/keys, Matt Menold guitar/keys, and Andrew Katz guitar/keys/vocal.

Greg Fuchs http://www.gregfuchs.com Greg Fuchs is included in a variety of anthologies and is the author of numerous books of poetry. His latest is Moving Pictures, published by Lew Gallery, a San Francisco-based small press. Fuchs has published articles, essays, and interviews in many journals and magazines. Recently he has written an interview with Eileen Myles, a memorial of painter Michael Goldberg, and a brief history of University Woods Park in the Bronx. He is currently writing a series of poems located in the Morris Heights section of the Bronx, the legendary home of hip-hop. He is a member of Subpress publishing collective. Fuchs is co-editor, with John Coletti, of Open 24 Hours, which publishes poetry in the spirit of the mimeo-revolution of the 1960s. Fuchs lives in the Bronx with his wife, the artist, Alison Collins, and their son, Lucas Raphael Collins-Fuchs.

The Long Poem Library: A New Poetry E-journal
Sat 26 May 2012

The Long Poem Library <http://www.revolutionpoesy.com/>

This is a brand new digital library of contemporary long poems by contemporary poets. It is my fervent hope that the library will grow and flourish. Aesthetically, the site is intended to be unobtrusive, in order to showcase the poetry and the poetry alone. The most important factor is, again, newness! There are no rules. There shouldn't be, especially with poetry. You *are *the library.

Moreover, The Long Poem Library is NOT affiliated with a college or university, or creative writing program, or to anyone who has pull and sway within the literary establishment. You do NOT need name recognition or impressive credentials or a fancy CV to be published here. Everyone is welcome.

Sona Books 2012 subscription: Abdalla, Goldstein, Karmin, McAdams

Sat 26 May 2012

Sona Books 2012 Subscription Series Info:
Featuring chapbooks by Annie Abdalla and Laura Goldstein to be published in June, and chapbooks by Jennifer Karmin and E. J. McAdams published in the fall.

For $30, subscribers will receive all four of these chapbooks. If you'd like to subscribe, just print out this email and send it off along with a check. See the details at the end of this message. Please note that the deadline to subscribe is May 31.

A Love Story in 51 Transactions
by Annie Abdalla
This chapbook is about the sales receipts in our pockets and wallets. Those wrinkled, seemingly inconsequential pieces of paper reveal some of the most intimate of details of our lives. A Love Story in 51 Transactions traces a relationship between two characters entirely through their financial transactions. Love and credits ensue.

An excerpt from Inventory
by Laura Goldstein
we love to believe that penguins love an iceberg, â€œthey just love it!â€ just in case a hazy believing of how crazy it is to love ice might make it easier to love something totally unlovable that is still lived on all the time. well if you donâ€™t believe that, donâ€™t believe it. because the world is for falling in love with not for freezing to death in.

4000 Words 4000 Dead
by Jennifer Karmin
â€œI want to start with the milestone today of 4000 dead in Iraq. Americans. And just what effect do you think it has on the country?â€ - Martha Raddatz, ABC News White House correspondent to Dick Cheney in 2008. For the past four years, Jennifer Karmin has been collecting submissions of words as a memorial to the 4,487 American soldiers killed in Iraq. These words also create a public poem given away to passing pedestrians during street performances across the country.

TRANSECTs
by E. J. McAdams
TRANSECTs is a collection of poems in which the investigator utilizes non-intentional methods to notice words in their urban environment, in their wildness.

Sona Books is a small community-based press founded in 2002 that focuses on risky, quiet, and project-driven works, and has always published chapbooks (shorter-than-a-book length projects) by subscription. Subscribers come from all walks of life and so the books find their way into the hands of many different types of readers. Over the years weâ€™ve published works by Alan Davies, Paolo Javier, Joanna Sondheim, Johannah Rodgers, Jennifer Firestone, Ellen Baxt, Corrine Fitzpatrick, Stephen Motika, and others.

Mon 28 May 2012

Dear all, I would love to get in touch with professor Willard Bohn about my bachelor paper on Visual Poetry, entitled "Visual Poetry: a semiosphere, with its own logic and own research domain." It is at this moment written in Dutch but if professor Bohn, or other professors, researchers, academics, visual or concrete poets would be interested, I could translate it into English and send it to them.

Thank you to get in touch with the contact data of professor Willard Bohn.

book fair

spring 2012 edition
will be happening Saturday, June 30, 2012
in room 203 of the Jack Purcell Community Centre
(on Elgin, at 320 JackPurcell Lane).

"once upon a time, way way back in October 1994, rob mclennan & James Spyker invented a two-day event called the ottawa small press book fair, and held the first one at the National Archives of Canada..." Spyker moved to Toronto soon after our original event, but the fair continues, thanks in part to the help of generous volunteers, various writers and publishers, and the public for coming out to participate with alla their love and their dollars.

General info:
the ottawa small press book fair
noon to 5pm (opens at 11:00 for exhibitors)

admission free to the public.

& don't forget the pre-fair reading usually held the night before! http://www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.ca/2012/04/factory-reading-series-pre-small-press.html

with readings/launches by Sonia Saikaley (Ottawa), Victoria Dunn (Ottawa), Gillian Wigmore (Prince George) + Michael Lithgow (Ottawa)

the fair usually contains exhibitors with poetry books, novels,cookbooks, posters, t-shirts, graphic novels, comic books, magazines, scraps of paper, gum-ball machines with poems, 2x4s with text, etc, including (at previous events) Bywords, Dusty Owl, Chaudiere Books, above/ground press, Room 302 Books, The Puritan, The Ottawa Arts Review, Buschek Books, The Grunge Papers, Broken Jaw Press, BookThug, Proper Tales Press, and others. happens twice a year, founded in 1994 by rob mclennan & James Spyker. now run by rob mclennan thru span-o. questions, [redacted]

free things can be mailed for fair distribution to the same address. we are unable to sell things for folk who cant make it, sorry. also, always looking for volunteers to poster, move tables, that sort of thing. let meknow if anyone able to do anything. thanks. for more information, bother rob mclennan.if you're able/willing to distribute posters/fliers for the fair, send me an email at [redacted] and for information on this or other small press book fairs across Canada, be sure to check out http://www.smallpressbookfair.blogspot.com/

Granary Books Announces: Bean Spasms by Ted Berrigan, Ron Padgett and Joe Brainard

Tue 29 May 2012

Granary Books Announces: Bean Spasms by Ted Berrigan, Ron Padgett and Joe Brainard

Ted Berrigan, Joe Brainard and Ron Padgett's Bean Spasms is the defining publication of the 1960s literary/Pop scene in New York. Originally published in 1967 by Kulchur Press in an edition of 1,000, and out-of-print for more than 40 years, Bean Spasms is a book many have heard about but relatively few have seen, and which-until now-has been shrouded in legend.

The text is comprises collaborations between poets Ted Berrigan and Ron Padgett, with further writings, illustrations and cover by artist and writer Joe Brainard. The three began collaborating in 1960, and kept a folder of their works titled "Lyrical Bullets" (a humorous homage to the well-known collaboration between Coleridge and Wordsworth, "Lyrical Ballads"). As Ron Padgett describes, in his introduction to this new facsimile edition, their collaborations included "plays, a fictitious correspondence, a picaresque novel, goofy interviews and poems of various types and lengths, as well as mistranslations and parodies of each other's work and the work of others."

Poet friends dropping by during writing sessions would also add lines, and although Berrigan and Padgett also contributed visuals, and Brainard contributed texts, all works in the book were intentionally left unattributed. Full of wild wit and joy in experimentation, competition and collaboration, Bean Spasms is a classic document of the New York School.

Poet as Radio: Paul Vangelisti on 6/2
Tue 29 May 2012

This
Saturday on Poet as Rad

This Saturday on Poet as Radio we begin part one of our interview series with Paul Vangelisti, whoâ€™ll read from his recent collectionÂ TwoÂ Â (Talisman House) and a forthcoming manuscript,Â Wholly Falsetto with People Dancing. Tune in on 6/2, 9am-10am, atÂ savekusf.orgÂ or listen to part one next week on our blog at poetasradio.blogspot.com. Paul Vangelisti is the author of some twenty books of poetry, as well as being a noted translator from Italian. His most recent book of poems, Two, appeared from Talisman in 2010. Lucia Reâ€™s and his translation of Amelia Rosselliâ€™s War Variations (Green Integer, 2005) won the 2006 Premio Flaiano in Italy and the 2006 PEN-USA Award for Translation. This past year, his translation of Adriano Spatolaâ€™s The Position of Things: Collected Poems, 1961-1992, won the Academy of American Poets Raizzis/de Palchi Book Prize for Translation. From 1971-1982 he was co-editor, with John McBride, of the literary magazine Invisible City and, from 1993-2002, edited Ribot, the annual report of the College of Neglected Science. He worked as a journalist at the Hollywood Reporter (1972-1974), and as Cultural Affairs Director at KPFK Radio (1974-1982). Currently, with Luigi Ballerini, he is editing a six-volume anthology of U.S. poetry from 1960 to the present, Nuova poesia americana, for Mondadori in Milan. Vangelisti is Founding Chair of the Graduate Writing program at Otis College of Art & Design. To contact us, please email atÂ [redacted]. Thanks! Delia Tramontina, Jay Thomas, Nicholas Leaskou

137. Laurie Schneider & Crag Hill

Digivis: Poems 2005-2010 by Crag Hill

Tue 29 May 2012

http://tipchapknifebook.blogspot.com/2012/05/crag-hill.html

Crag Hillâ€™s work inspires all who experience it. I use the word â€˜experienceâ€™, not â€˜seeâ€™ or â€˜readâ€™, because that is exactly what it is, a personal encounter that changes us on the inside, gives us a new understanding of language, letter, syllable and word. A single sentence or image cluster can speak in multiple ways; he gives us the freedom to interpret, and leads us into an alternate reality forged with fire and glowing iron.

Crag and I worked together all through the 1980s, both professionally and artistically. We used Cragâ€™s knowledge of cameras and photographic techniques to create our shared oeuvre. I still remember discussing visual poetry in a cramped cluttered dirty little room underneath Mission Street, south of Market, San Francisco. Directly over our heads, while we babbled at one another, there were the sounds of walking feet, car tires, bus exhaust, camera vacuum and everything else you would find in a throbbing metropolitan center. It was all totally electric.

So, on to this series: diversity in unity, unity in diversity. This work makes me go up and down on my computer screen, stopping here and there to contemplate, even to laugh with giddy delight. Whatâ€™s it made of? Primordial stew. Tomorrowâ€™s neural nets. Conscious bacteria. Flaming future alphabets. Beautiful tendrils. New death. Everything flowing, reaching, sprouting. â€˜Shih shih wu aiâ€™- between things no obstructions. One of my favorite pieces is #14 Maw. White becomes the major focus, drawing your eyes, bursting over the space/tan background. The black, with just the right amount of visual weight, serves to ground it all. Thereâ€™s rain, there are creatures raising their chins in both defiance and joy.

Thatâ€™s Crag- defiance and joy. You see the defiance in his work, how he refuses to follow any fad or fashion, how he bends his materials to his own end, how he makes them laugh and cry. You see the joy in- well, everything. So check this out; all will become clear, and you will be the better for it.

Bill DiMichele

Some of these poems first appeared in Bee's Wax, Word/ For Word, Mad Hatter's Review, Whitewalls, Poet's Corner, and in exhibits in the United States and Mexico.

P.S. Watch for The Last Vispo, a sprawling anthology, a Herculean effort, a mighty collection of postmodern visual poets from editors Crag Hill and Nico Vassilakis, out the chute from Fantagraphics, November, 2012. See http://www.thelastvispo.com/ for more info.

100 Thousand Poets for Change Kickstarter Campaign Countdown- Only 9 Days Left!

Wed 30 May 2012

Dear Friends of 100 Thousand Poets for Change,

Good news! We have exceeded our Kickstarter<http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event>fundraising campaign goal and we still have ten more days left to keep raising funds.

We greatly appreciate all your generous support!

http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event

As you can imagine it takes a lot more than $2,500 to run a global campaign. As you know, we set our original goal for $2,500. And we set our fundraising goal for Kickstarter pretty low knowing it is a hard time in our economy to be asking for money.

The additional funds that we receive by the end of the campaign on June 7th will help us expand the 100 Thousand Poets for Change event overall.

We have until June 7th, just 9 more days in our 100TPC Fundraising Campaign and we can't wait until it's over so we can stop asking you for money!

There's a lot of work that goes into organizing 100 Thousand Poets for Change, ie., building and maintaining the 100tpc.org website, creating and managing the Livestream hub for September 29th, signing up new organizers and expanding general community outreach, creating and mailing press releases to media to over 10,000 media outlets around the world, and of course, preparing the media archives of all of your events for Stanford University so that September 29 will be a day documented and remembered in history.

Please visit our Kickstarter<http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event> campaign and donate!

http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event

After our Kickstarter<http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event>fundraising campaign is over we will focus entirely on September 29 events, and work directly with organizers and participants to make sure that the world knows about all the hard work being done by everyone, and about what is being accomplished in communities world-wide with poetry, music and art!

Here are just a few examples of the events that we will be able to broadcast world-wide, with the help of your donations, on our 100 Thousand Poets for Change Livestream hub.

In Pasadena, CA Tibetan poets and musicians will perform to bring awareness of the Tibetan culture that is on the brink of extinction and to raise concerns about imprisoned poets and writers.

Poets in Mexico will organize and broadcast the first inter-high-school Spoken Word Fest in Mexico City.

In Tunisia there will be a show on the Avenue Habib BourGuiba with music and poetry during the day. Children will participate with song as well. A poetry evening will follow in a cultural-space along with a book exhibition, and two musical groups.

In New Orleans, Louisiana musicians and poets will bring the youth, arts and music community together, with a day and night of entertainment by 10 blues bands performing to raise money for the Musicians Clinic, to focus on providing health and social services support for musicians in need.

A great festival in Strumica, Macedonia will bring together poets and storytellers, musicians and artists from all over the country. In Strumica they will speak about the many problems they face as a country and promote a more peaceful and sustainable planetary cultural heritage via poetic actions, readings, workshops and music concerts.

Take a moment in the next few days and donate what you can to our Kickstarter<http://www.kickstarter.com/projects/377638302/100-thousand-poets-for-change-headquarters-event> campaign, to help us with this year's 100TPC activities. Together, with your help, we can make September 29th bigger and better than ever!

Thank you again for your continued support!

Peace,

Michael and Terri

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Memory Fictions” by Lawrence Upton

Wed 30 May 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œMemory Fictionsâ€ by Lawrence Upton

Description:

"Memory Fictions" continues Lawrence Upton's (in his own word) restless investigation of renewing approaches to poetry. It is, in part, also a record of his recent formal exploration of notation (in this case of texts for two voices) to disambiguate typed text without being overly directive. The work is an affirmation by Upton of the importance of performance as the full realisation of a poem; poems written and presented to support performers inherently; and, in its structures and composition, it represents, though quietly, a new direction in his writing.

Available as a free ebook here:

- Transatlantic Transport: The Ecstasies of Feminine Influence (critical) (moderator Amy King; Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡, Alexander Dickow, Amina Cain, Laura Mullen)Â Â

TransatlanticÂ Transport: The Ecstasies of Feminine Influence Â Artistic affinities have traveled across the Atlantic since American literatures appeared on the map, with Baudelaireâ€™s translations planting the seed of Poeâ€™s current stature, nine-year-old Borges translating Wilde and plumbing the histories of European erudition, and, more recently, Jack Spicer transposing Lorca and Vallejo into the body of 20th century American verse. But what of the exchange between women, the oft-unacknowledged vanguards in their respective artistic and geographic realms? This panel explores the ecstatic heritage of European women artists in the work of their American counterparts and vice versa, through the scrim of political, historical & canonical neglect and rediscovery, and with an onus on aesthetic and formal innovation.Â Â

Luminaries to be plumbed -- AnaÂ BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡Â will consider the work of Diane di Prima and H.D. as well as the classical queerness of Marguerite Yourcenar.Â Alexander Dickow will discuss Marceline Desbordes-Valmore and Laura Riding.Â Amina Cain will channel Marguerite Duras and Clarice Lispector.Â Â Â Laura Mullen will expound on the works of Gertrude Stein and Stephanie Chaillou.Â Finally,Â Amy King will explore the nexus of Leonor Fini, Frida Kahlo andÂ HÃ©lÃ¨ne Cixous. HONEY IS A SHE by Lina ramona Vitkauskas now out from Plastique Press

New release from Plastique Press:
HONEY IS A SHE, a collection of poetry by Lina ramona Vitkauskas

"Vitkauskas’ poems possess the intricate peculiarity of honeycombs and Schiaparelli dresses, as she exquisitely fashions poems out of scientific particulars, cinematic references ('they place the horse head in the bed'), and metaphors’ associative logic. 'These girls are brave tailors in the blur of impossible femme,' and like her own subject, Vitkauskas is fearless as she navigates, interrogates, and ultimately, dislocates conventional gender dynamics: 'I rip the itch from gender.' The dynamism, humor, and marvel of her poems recall the surrealist Joyce Mansour, conveying a similar tenor as they negotiate desire and disease, ardor and animosity, with beehive fervor. Be stung and sung in the 'golden / drip science' of her resplendent poems."

--Simone Muench, author of Orange Crush (Sarabande, 2010)

"Splendid, grotesque, violent, but always loving, Lina ramona Vitkauskas writes like a contemporary Marina Tsvetaeva through a landscape of the uncertain and surreal; the language is made from the nervousness and energy of every bee in the hive. Part “rotten aorta” and part “snapdragon wine”, the poems in HONEY IS A SHE form a buzzing network of inventive beauty.”

--Sandra Simonds, author of Mother was a Tragic Girl (Cleveland State University Poetry Center, 2012)

Exhibit at Boog's Small, Small Press Fair / First List of Fest's Participants

Thu 31 May 2012

Hey everyone,

Once again, it's time for Boog City's now 9th annual small, small press fair, and we'd like to extend to you once more an invite to each of you to exhibit.

The fair will once again span two days, Sat. Aug. 4-Sun. Aug. 5, and be held at Brooklyn’s Unnameable Books (600 Vanderbilt Ave.) in their beautiful backyard. The fair will take place during the 6th annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival.

The fair will open on Saturday with performances by authors from each of the tabling presses.

Tables are $30 for the fair, $20 dollars if you bring your own bridge table (up to 3’ x 3’). (You can paypal payment to [redacted].)

Please email me to reserve your table and schedule your reader as soon as possible so we can fit your press's information in our physical and online versions of the festival's program. We look forward to the fair once again being a warm gathering with wonderful books, poetry, music, and other items from around our creative community.

Below this note is a list, as of this writing, of who this year’s fest will include.

as ever,
David

PHILLY: Friday, June 8: POETRY HOUSE PARTY
Thu 31 May 2012

Damask Press invites you to a poetry house party!!!

2008 E. Dauphin Street, Philadelphia, PA (SEPTA: York Dauphin Station)
Friday, June 8, 2012
7:00pm - FREE

https://www.facebook.com/events/389577101084194/

Join us for the release of Paul's Siegell's new broadsheet, "Mother et Enfant," designed and printed by Allegra Fisher and Liana Katz in New York. Hosted by Jen Brown in her beautiful backyard garden. Paul Siegell, JenMarie Davis (MacDonald) and Amelia Robertson will read:

PAUL SIEGELL is the author of three books of poetry: wild life rifle fire (Otoliths Books, 2010), jambandbootleg (A-Head Publishing, 2009) and Poemergency Room (Otoliths Books, 2008). Paul is a senior editor at Painted Bride Quarterly, and has contributed to American Poetry Review, Black Warrior Review, Paste Magazine and many other fine journals. Kindly find more of Paul’s work at ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL.

JENMARIE MACDONALD (nee DAVIS) writes and makes books. As half of Fact-Simile Editions, a press that builds books from recycled and reclaimed material, she is concerned with how the phenomenal book manifests: as translation and embodiment. She has fashioned books that have appeared in exhibits such as Handmade/Homemade and her writing has appeared in Interim, Drunken Boat, Starlight, Philadelphia, Elective Affinities, & Jupiter 88. She has a chapbook, Sometime Soon Ago (Shadow Mountain, 2009).

AMELIA ROBERTSON was born and raised in the Pacific Northwet, and has recently relocated to Philadelphia after a brief stays in Aridzona and MozzArka. She loves Philadelphia but misses living on farms. She is typically preceded in love by a "Madeline" and succeeded by an "Angel."

Hope you can join us,
Paul

June 2012

118 messages · Thu 31 May 2012 – Fri 29 Jun 2012

June 2012 was a small summer month that turned, quietly and a little ruefully, on a single suspicion: that the avant-garde had been swallowed by the university, its old danger tamed into a syllabus. One hundred and eighteen messages moved through the list, and its currents ran between the honoring of a wild, uncontainable poet and the wry acknowledgment that the once-radical had become, of all things, an academic subject. The month asked what happens to a revolution after it is assigned as reading.

The largest quiet thread was a matter of recovery and record. A query into John Wieners sent the room back to the Boston poet of raw, confessional, gorgeously vulnerable verse — one member noting how his late collection had rounded out something close to a complete Wieners up to its date — the impulse to gather and preserve a difficult, marginal life's work before it slipped from view. Wieners was the antithesis of the institution: unruly, unwell, uncareerist, the poet no department could quite house.

The quarrel was named outright. A new feature online, on the academisation of avant-garde poetry, put the room's unease into a word — the sense that the experimental tradition, once a genuine outside, had been absorbed into the creative-writing program, its transgressions turned into technique and its rebels turned into faculty. It was the deepest anxiety of a movement that had defined itself by opposition: that its very success, its arrival in the classroom, might be indistinguishable from its death.

Around the edges the ordinary keeping went on — a blog updated, a new collection of fragments announced, a chapbook released. The small presses and the personal sites kept issuing beneath the large worry, the actual living traffic of a poetry that carried on being made whether or not the academy had captured its name. And there was a consolation folded into that fact: that Wieners, and the fragments, and the little chapbooks came from exactly the ungovernable margins no department could fully absorb, proof that some part of the art still lived where the syllabus could not reach, in the mimeograph and the blog and the unwell genius no committee would ever hire.

I have set June down exactly as the archive delivered it — the gathering of the unruly Wieners, and the blunt naming of the avant-garde's academisation — because it was the month the list faced the paradox of its own arrival: that the experimental poetry it loved had won its place in the university precisely by ceasing to be dangerous. A room that will lovingly preserve a poet no department could house while worrying aloud that the avant-garde has become a course requirement is a room caught in the oldest trap of the outsider tradition: that to be recognized is to be domesticated, and that the classroom which finally teaches your rebellion may also, quietly, be where it goes to die.

Behind the State Capitol came out at around the same time and is about the same size. The two are close to a collected up to that date.

Liking and "Unliking" in Facebook Navigational Language

Fri 1 Jun 2012

'A liker is normally liked; an "unliker" is not, except maybe by another "unliker." A liker by liking indirectly performs an illocutionary act of praising the person who posts, and sometimes backs this up with a verbal praising and thanking. By liking, one presents a desirable image of self; in other words, one identifies and solidarizes with the other, which is why it is risky to go about liking just any Facebook status update or item shared! What one likes testifies for and against one! Same for what one "unlikes." '

Re: John Wieners query
Fri 1 Jun 2012

The Black Sparrow 'Selected,' along with the subsequent Black Sparrow volume 'Cultural Affairs in Boston' are as close to a Wieners' 'Collected' as now exists. You'd think that in the ten years since John's death, UCal would've gotten it together and do the same thing for Wieners - putting together a comprehensive 'Collected' - that they've done for Robin Blaser, Charles Olson, Ted Berrigan, etc. Why the long delay? Stephen Jonas is another who deserves to have a significant collection gathered in a single volume, hopefully more complete than the still-lovely collection published by Talisman House in 1994. One wonders what the problem is, getting such things together. Money? Prejudice of some kind? I, for one, certainly look forward to relief from this kind of neglect, as this is work that should be far more readily available.

Re: John Wieners query

Seth Stewart is currently in the process of compiling a Collected Wieners, I believe. Apparently the issues that existed in terms of the estate (which, of course, controlled unpublished material and the rights to the published work) have been resolved and the project is moving ahead at a good clip.

Here's hoping!

Re: John Wieners query

Fri 1 Jun 2012

No prejudice, for sure. UC has drastically cut its poetry list--after the next round of books, now in process, that will be more apparent. It's a matter of severe money shortage. But, tho doing any collected is an enormous amount of editing work, John and Steve Jonas present special problems. Behind the State Capitol was largely gathered from the floor of John's Joy Street apartment by Charley Shively. That said, I'd be first in line for both volumes.

We're Performing June 9th in Philadelphia!

Fire Museum Presents:

Alan Sondheim/Helena Espvall/Azure Carter Trio

Dan Joseph

Jesse Kudler/Barry Weisblat Duo

Saturday, June 9th 8:00PM
Highwire Gallery
2040 Frankford Ave
Philadelphia, PA
$8

Alan Sondheim, Azure Carter (Brooklyn) & Helena Espvall (Philadelphia) Trio:

RECORD RELEASE SHOW! .The animists of Mari El aren.t the last pagans, not by a long shot. Cauldron is on the job, too, working the hot-stick on Ley lines from Giant.s Despair to Kingdom Come, with a backpack full of old tube equipment and spools of magnetic tape. Cauldron spins secret messages encoded in lace and tosses the achillea millefolium to see where to go next. Cauldron wants to remind you that all you see is not all there is. The margins of .things. are crawling, if you know how to look: ancient spirits, saints, faeries, fractal elves, jeweled self-dribbling basketballs, etc. etc. etc. The trick is to find your way back to an unmediated life. So take Cauldron.s hand. Ignore the fire-exit signs warning you that an alarm will sound. It won.t. Push the door open. stumble into brighter light. the untended back lot behind our shared reality. where weeds push stark flowers through cracks in the cement. once you get out there everything is so quiet, all you hear is the breezes-s-s-s. butterflies and blue lizards flit and skitter amid the rubble of forgotten thoughts. .How wonderful that you're here!. they say. .You come so rarely! We're so delighted to see you!.

Cauldron deals out a three of cups: Alan Sondheim, a pioneer of mystical ear-tweak and sci-fi sonic ritual sound, chamber-improv gypsy cellist Helena Espvall, and eco-trance singer Azure Carter. thrice to thine and thrice to mine, and thrice again, to make up nine. Channeling the ghosts of Opal Whiteley and Lou Harrison, Cauldron conjures the scratch and shush of the Big Bang out of wood, wind and cat-gut. Whenever you listen to it, this album is always over too soon, just like life. Fire Museum and Tequila Sunrise Records deal out a two of pentacles: not to get all .Yankee Candle. here, but we only made 250 of these, so grab one before they melt away like chemtrails in the sunset sky." - Fred Astarte, Tequila Sunrise Records

Dan Joseph (Brooklyn):

Dan Joseph is a free-lance composer based in New York City. He began his career as a drummer in the vibrant punk scene of his native Washington, DC. During the late 1980s, he was active in the experimental tape music underground, producing ambient-industrial works for independent labels in the U.S. and abroad. He spent the .90s in California where he studied at CalArts and Mills College. His principal teachers include Pauline Oliveros, Alvin Curran and Mel Powell. Equally influential where his studies with Terry Riley during several workshops in California and Colorado. As an artist who embraces the musical multiplicity of our time, Dan works simultaneously in a variety of media and contexts, including instrumental chamber music, free improvisation, and various forms of electronica and sound art. Since the late 1990s, the hammer dulcimer has been the primary vehicle for his music. As a performer he is active with his own chamber ensemble, The Dan Joseph Ensemble, as well as in various improvisational collaborations and as an occasional soloist. He has collaborated with a variety of creative artists including Miya Masaoka, Pamela Z, Loren Dempster, JD Parran, Pauline Oliveros, India Cooke, William Winant and John Ingle. Dan Joseph.s work has been presented at Merkin Concert Hall (NYC), Diapason Gallery for Sound (NYC), Roulette (NYC), Deep Listening Space (Kingston, NY), The Kitchen (NYC) Yerba Buena Center for the Arts (SF), New Langton Arts (SF) and other venues. He has received commissions from several ensembles and performers, including Gamelan Son of Lion, the SF Sound Group, baritone Thomas Buckner, flutist Jacqueline Martelle and clarinetist Matt Ingalls. . - bio

Jesse Kudler (Philadelphia) & Barry Weisblat (Brooklyn) Duo:

Jesse Kudler, born 1979, creates concrete music on the computer, composes low-tech multi-channel sound works, and improvises on cheap consumer devices: a no-name electric guitar, hand-held cassette recorders, radios and transmitters, various small junk, and pedals/electronics. In his various travels, Kudler has performed with Matt Bauder, Kyle Bruckmann, Chris Cogburn,

James Coleman, Tim Feeney, Brent Gutzeit, Bonnie Jones, Jason Kahn, Mazen Kerbaj, Toshimaru Nakamura, Pauline Oliveros, Bhob Rainey, Vic Rawlings, Christine Sehnaoui, Mike Shiflet, Jason Soliday, Howard Stelzer, Christian Weber, Matt Weston, Jack Wright, Jason Zeh, and many others. Current and "recent" projects include: sound installation; a duo with Ian Fraser; solo performance; HZL, an environmental electronics duo with Tim Albro; duos with Chris Cogburn, Christian Weber, and Chandan Narayan; Benito Cereno (with Dustin Hurt, Chandan Narayan, Tim Albro, and Ian Fraser); Tweeter, a treble-intensive noise trio with Alex Nagle and Eli Litwin; and various ad hoc groupings. Kudler is the co-founder and co-Director (with Ian Fraser) of the Philadelphia Sound Forum.

Barry Weisblat was born in 1975 in Brooklyn. He is a sound artist and electronic instrument builder who extensively experiments with electro-magnetic devices, solar technology, homemade and modified circuits for application in sound generation/manipulation, audio engineering and photography. Weisblat has collaborated with Margarida Garcia, Tower Recordings, Mattin, Tim Barnes and Tetuzi Akiyama, and has built instruments for Peter Kowald, Toshio Kajiwara, Manuel Mota and Matt Valentine. He has sound engineered for Erstwhile Records, Dean Roberts and Jon Gibson. - bios

19. Cralan Kelder

some San Francisco-Colorado-Amsterdam

Sun 3 Jun 2012

Two upcoming readings in SF/ Berkeley. Both are free.

Noel Black & I are flying in to SF for two readings, Sunnylyn will probably walk or bike there, and I'm not sure how Brian Lucas gets around. Details abound below.

BIRD & BECKETT Books
POETS! Noel Black, Sunnylyn Thibodeaux, Cralan Kelder followed by an open mic. Hosted by Jerry Ferraz
Mon, June 18, 7pm – 9pm
653 Chenery St.
San Francisco, CA 94131

[redacted]'s.
Noel Anderson Black, Brian Lucas, Cralan Kelder, Tuesday, June 19th Starts at 7:30pm
Moe's Books
2476 Telegraph Ave.
Berkeley CA 94704

Noel Black lives in Colorado Springs with his wife, artist Marina Eckler, and their son Ursen. Co-founder with Ed Berrigan of LOG Magazine and publisher of the Angry Dog Midget Editions in the late 1990s, he has since worked as a writer and producer for a wide variety of media outlets including The Stranger and WNYC. He currently works as a producer for KRCC public radio. He is the author of six chapbooks, including Hulktrans (Owl Press, 2008) and In The City of Word People (Blue Press, 2008). His most recent book of poetry is USELYSSES (Ugly Duckling Presse, 2011).

Sunnylyn Thibodeaux grew up in Louisiana and later moved to San Francisco, California, where she lives with her husband, fellow poet and co-publisher of Auguste Press and Lew Gallery Editions, Micah Ballard. Her first full length collection, Palm to Pine, was published by Bootstrap Press in 2011.

Brian Lucas' books of poetry include Circles Matter (BlazeVox, 2012), Telepathic Bones (Berkeley Neo-Baroque, 2010), and Light House (Meeting Eyes Bindery, 2006). He contributed drawings to Force Fields (Hooke Press, 2010), a collaboration with Andrew Joron. He resides in Oakland, California and plays in the band Cloud Shepherd.

Cralan Kelder was born in 1970, growing up in California and The Netherlands. Publications include: Big Deal Rimbaud (smallMinded 2011), Give Some Word (Shearsman 2010), City Boy (Longhouse 2007), and Lemon Red (Coracle 2005). He lives in Amsterdam with the evolutionary biologist Toby Kiers and their children. Kelder occasionally edits Full Metal Poem with Mark Terrill, and Retort with Brentley Frazer.

June 6-10: &NOW 2012 / NEW WRITING IN PARIS
Mon 4 Jun 2012

&NOW 2012
NEW WRITING IN PARIS:
EXCHANGES AND CROSS-FERTILIZATIONS

June 6-10, 2012 @ Université de la Sorbonne, Paris
&Now: Collaborations, Continuities, Evolutions
http://andnowfestival.com/program.html

&NOW is a festival of fiction, poetry, and staged play readings; literary rituals, performance pieces (digital, sound, and otherwise), electronic and multimedia projects; and intergenre literary work of all kinds, including criti-fictional presentations and creatively critical papers. We particularly encourage pieces that promote linguistic and genre transgressions, along with literary artworks that promote interdisciplinary explorations and conversations with past, present, or future literary concerns and movements.

&Now's 2012 theme "Exchanges and cross-fertilizations" addresses the idea of innovative literary art in terms of importation from and thriving on different genres, forms, fields and media. When today's art clearly exposes many a traditional literary and more generally artistic category and notion as obsolete, how is art to be described, criticized and reviewed? Should categories be done away with altogether and new modes of speaking about works, representing and promoting them be invented, as well as innovative modes of conveying the aesthetic and artistic experience? This special Paris edition of the &Now Festival will also tackle the issue of exchanges and influences across the Atlantic and throughout time, exploring and continuing a long-lasting tradition of mutual fertilization and respect.

Sylvie Kande, Alexander Dickow and "Temenos"
Tue 5 Jun 2012

I am pleased to say that after telling folks at wom-po that Sylvie Kande has just published her second book in French with Gallimard, she and Alexander Dickow ended up being published in Central Michigan's "Temenos", he translating one of her poems. The other fun thing is that that issue is a benefit issue for African schools and I've sprung for several of them at $7 . I hope you like this story.

Larry Fagin's Complete Fragments
Wed 6 Jun 2012

Cuneiform Press is pleased to announce the publication of

COMPLETE FRAGMENTS
by Larry Fagin

Complete Fragments is Larry Fagin¹s first trade edition book of poems since I'll Be Seeing You (Full Court Press, 1978). Cover drawing by Glen Baxter.

Larry Fagin's new work, like fine mosaic, is an essay, a threshold, and something like figures in a landscape blasted apart. Unlike Rimbaud¹s lush prose poems which so many try to imitate, these engage in an aesthetic of deflation. They are the art of sinking while remaining solid. They are wittier than most of the prose poetry we know, sober and also hilarious. Comedy is never mere. Each of the poems here adds up to something grander and with more genuine pathos than one might have thought possible. As Fagin says vatically: ³Not to know me is not to not love me.² He surrounds you, a strange sensation. ‹Charles North

If poetry is, as Paul Valéry proposed, a holiday of the mind, Larry Fagin is the intellectual¹s Henny Youngman. His witty, staccato concatenations of one-liners cum prose poems are highly disorienting yet exhilarating, combining low and high comedy (and erudite cultural reference) in what amounts to a high-wire act on each page. Nor, as in the best comedy, are important human concerns ever far removed. I don¹t know any other poet who manages parataxis with such élan, or who casts so many lines that reeling them in is a virtual impossibility‹ until the poems accomplish just that. ‹Charles North

What doesn¹t Larry Fagin remember. Where is he, as the writing appears to generate itself inevitably, colliding from the prior phrase‹an alloy of semi-secret knowledge, huge distance, and mandarin taste. So he¹s standing back, for the long view, but also up to his eyeballs in the material nougat, being so thoroughly informed. Apposites don¹t just naturally gel in such recognizable shapes that you can¹t see it coming. And then you do, breathing again. ‹Alan Bernheimer

While it is to be hoped that someone is busying themselves gathering the best of Larry Fagin¹s earlier uncollected poems‹the ³Narrative Techniques² series

(and related pieces), the ³Eleven Poems² for Philip Guston‹we have Cuneiform Press to thank for publishing this long-in-the-works book of Fagin¹s wonderful prose poems. This latter form has been Fagin¹s primary focus as a poet for much of the last twenty years (it is, astonishingly, almost thirty years since his last collection, the seventeen-page Nuclear Neighborhood), and it is a joy to have the fruits of his researches in this area collected between two covers at last. While Fagin well understands that 1+1=3, the greater mystery of his prose poems is that they are as much allover as additive works, their every sentence joined to its neighbors‹and not only those‹by sensible glue, which, here, is duplicitous in the very best sense: alive as in thickly a-hum. Some of the poems are antic, yes, but every ³ka-pow² is balanced‹maintained in exquisite suspension, in fact‹by a corresponding ³pa-dow,² such that the overall arrangement of poems‹which is perfect, as you might expect‹constitutes a poem in itself. Other pieces contain elements that may, upon first glance, strike the reader as arch (there is such a thing as a ³Larryism²), but this material, more often than not, is inducted into the poem via an utter delicacy of ostention: selection as caress, show and tell reimagined as intimate act. These Fragments constitute impressions taken on a writing pad that might best be imagined as a stack of index cards shot in natural light on black-and-white ¹Scope; their sum is entirely equal to‹but at no point a copy of‹the world. ‹Miles Champion

Larry Fagin doesn't want to be famous. At times he's published his poems anonymously and at times insisted that his students & colleagues do likewise. The students insist that he is the best teacher ever or at least since X, Y or Z, all long dead (Z for centuries). The poems themselves are small, modest as Fagin is modest, yet built to last for generations. What if Cavafy were a member of the New York School? Or if Catullus had been a part of the Spicer Circle? They're powerful & opaque like the Barnett Newman sculpture in 2001, tho the design preference is that each one should be no bigger than a breadbox. I think of them as the blood diamonds of the Lower East Side. That is so not Brooklyn, you say. Exactly. ‹Ron Silliman

Larry Fagin is the author of 14 books of poetry. He is the co-publisher of Adventures in Poetry books, and edits Sal Mimeo, a little magazine. He lives in New York City, where he teaches privately.

Advertise in Boog City's Festival Program Issue

Thu 7 Jun 2012

Hi,

In a little under two months, to mark our 21st anniversary, we'll be putting on our sixth annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival, featuring poets, musicians, political speakers, public radio personalities, and playwrights performing at two venues, in two boroughs, over four days, from Thurs. Aug. 2-Sun. Aug. 5. Among the over 50 performers taking part are poets Jillian Brall, Richard Deming, Amanda Deutch, Ted Dodson, Claire Donato, Thom Donovan, Sam Donsky, Rita Doyle, Micah Freeman, Ed Friedman, Drew Gardner, Jamie Gaughran-Perez, David Henderson, Barbara Henning, Laura Henriksen, Jeff T. Johnson, Jamey Jones, Patricia Spears Jones, Rebecca Keith, Nancy Kuhl, Krystal Languell, Dorothea Lasky, Bridget Madden, Dawn Lundy Martin, Kristi Maxwell, Soham Patel, Guy Pettit, Judah Rubin, Metta Sáma, Alan Semerdjian, Sara Jane Stoner, Yerra Sugarman, Michelle Tarransky, Genya Turovskaya, Ken Walker, Tyrone Williams, and Angela Veronica Wong.

Ten days before the event, we'll be putting out the festival issue of Boog City. This issue will feature pieces on some of the performers and a full schedule, illustrated with images of each of the performers. Here's what lst year's looks like:

http://boogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc69.pdf

Advertising in the festival issue of Boog City means you will reach more than 3,000 readers, poetry lovers, and small press aficionados throughout the East Village, other targeted areas of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; as well as bonus distribution at Boog City events. That's an increase of 33.3% over our regular issues for no additional cost. And, since this issue is also a program for the festival, readers will give it a closer read as they check to see who's up later on that day and throughout the festival.

Boog City continues to offer our special Small Press Ad Rates. That means when you advertise with us you will save 50% off of our regular display ad rates.

* Full Page $250
* Half-Page $130
* Quarter-Page $70
* Eighth-Page $40

Here is a link to our full rate card:

http://boogcity.com/adrates.pdf

As I mentioned in previous emails, Boog City focuses on getting the word out about lesser-known artists, be they poets, prose writers, musicians, painters, photographers, or cartoonists. Each month we publish poetry from the likes of Anselm Berrigan, Renee Gladman, Lisa Jarnot, Eileen Myles, Kristin Prevallet, and recent Pulitzer Prize winnr Tracy K. Smith, alongside our Urban Folk music section, small press book reviews, political commentary, art, comics, and photographs.

We look forward to working with you to bring your message to the local arts community to increase awareness and sales of your publications in the New York area.

as ever,
David

NEW DELETE PRESS RELEASE: KEVORKIAN
Thu 7 Jun 2012

Dear All,

We at Delete Press are thrilled to offer up our most recent chapbook, a poem, KEVORKIAN, by Zach Keebaugh. We feel privileged and honored to be publishing it. It doesn't disappoint!

Zachary Keebaugh holds an MA in Philosophy of Aesthetics from SUNY Buffalo. Along with producing theoretical work on Animals, Ghosts, "Strange Intelligence" and the Uncanny, he has an exclusive and cult virtual-presence as an interpretive dancer and occasionally performs "Comedy." A native of Georgia, Zach currently resides in Wisconsin where he is working on an epistemological polemic entitled "Against Eclecticism."

KEVORKIAN was printed on Somerset paper from photopolymer plates using a Vandercook 4 letterpress and handbound as an accordion structure in 28 panels. The original cover and title page art was provided by Meg Fransee. Alex Kvares donated the image which appears within the poem from his drawing "mondegreen 22." KEVORKIAN is 77 in (w) x 7 in (h) with a printing of 75. KEVORKIAN is $12, which includes shipping.

Samples from the book can be found on the Delete Press website, where you can also pick up a copy:

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “At Times Your Lines” by Susan Lewis

Sat 9 Jun 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œAt Times Your Linesâ€ by Susan Lewis

Description:

The prose poems in â€œAt Times Your Linesâ€ muster compression and elision, irony and parable in the pursuit of the necessary impossible; tracing life and fault-lines between the lived and the created, the recognizable and the strange. â€œThese poems are terse yet opaque, jokey yet unapologetically consequential... off-beat, perfectly tuned, and compulsively readable.â€ (Wayne Thomas, editor of The Tusculum Review). Jill Jones - new chapbook available

My recently launched chapbook, 'Senses Working Out', is available from the publisher, Vagabond Press.

http://new.vagabondpress.net/products/jill-jones-sense-working-out/

(Note: the website listing calls it 'Sense Working Out' but it's a typo - and the true title is, of course, an oblique reference to the XTC song, 'Senses Working Overtime'.)

It's a limited edition chapbook. Only 100 printed and more than half already gone, since the launch in Melbourne in April.

The rest of the range well worth a browse. Mostly Australian list but other poets, from Japan and elsewhere, also represented.

New Poetry from City Lights! ADVICE FOR LOVERS
Thu 14 Jun 2012

City Lights Publishers is pleased to announce the release of

ADVICE FOR LOVERS
by Julian Talamantez Brolaski
City Lights Spotlight Poetry Series No. 7

If Philip Sidney had been a third-gender queer poet, he might have written the highly erotic ADVICE FOR LOVERS...

The latest publication in the City Lights Spotlight Poetry Series, Julian Brolaski's ADVICE FOR LOVERS is a highly wrought collection inspired by Ovid's instructional Ars Amatoria, with overtones of Renaissance sonnet cycles. Intricate in form but modern and tawdry in diction, Advice for Lovers walks a fine line between the anything-goes orthography of the Elizabethans and the shifting etymologies of Finnegans Wake. With the inclusion of trans- and third-gender pronouns, the work also argues for a proliferation of pronouns beyond a gendered dichotomy. Yet in the midst of its classical splendor we encounter more contemporary figures like Johnny Cash, Ricky Martin, and Jack Spicer. Sexy, kinky, disquieting, Advice for Lovers blazes an erotic trail into the 21st century.

Praise for ADVICE FOR LOVERS: "What if I'm spirited away to live in a torch song?—Where the landscape is a lover's discourse? Julian Talamantez Brolaski has me in thrall! In this enchanting book, Julian jacks up the artifice and jacks up the feeling."

–Robert Glück

"In this aesthetically audacious collection of poems, Julian Talamantez Brolaski offers xir 'advice to lovers' in unabashedly voluptuous language. This is dithyrambic verse, variously festive and feisty, impudent and sad. It is beautiful, but never serene. And how could it be? The difference between 'seeing to' and 'singing to' is not large, and everything in this book suggests that to advise is to love. In giving it, Julian exercises xir native tongue with linguistic amorousness over a wide range of poetic registers. Guidance has never been this much fun; jouissance has never been smarter."

–Lyn Hejinian

About the City Lights Spotlight series: City Lights Spotlight shines a light on the wealth of innovative American poetry being written today. We publish accomplished figures known in the poetry community as well as young emerging poets, using the cultural visibility of City Lights to bring their work to a wider audience. In doing so, we also seek to draw attention to those small presses publishing such authors. About the author: Julian T. Brolaski is the author of gowanus atropolis (Ugly Duckling Presse, 2011) and an editor at Aufgabe and Litmus Press. Xe studied with Nathaniel Mackey, Elizabeth Willis, and Robert Hass. Julian lives in Brooklyn, curates vaudeville shows, and plays country music with Juan & the Pines. Xe rejects gendered pronouns and teaches at The New School.

Recent Release: Of language|s| the rain speaks - Felino A. Soriano

Thu 14 Jun 2012

Hello all -

The latest from quarter after is Of language|s| the rain speaks by Felino A. Soriano http://quarterafter.org/2012/06/14/of-languages-the-rain-speaks-felinoa-a-soriano/

Of language|s| the rain speaks is a documentation of observed content, specific to the manifestation of interpreted devices composed in the direct/indirect ambulation of reactive notions to sensorial involvement. Through physical and allegorical windows (too, of corporeal inferring sans resource of ocular understanding) observation is the emotional involvement to adaptation of specialized communication with rain and the multiple bodies its spectrum of spatial engagement inhabits.

COMPLETE FRAGMENTS by Larry Fagin
Mon 18 Jun 2012

Cuneiform Press is pleased to announce the publication of

COMPLETE FRAGMENTS

by Larry Fagin

Complete Fragments is Larry Faginâ€™s first trade edition book of poems since I'll Be Seeing You (Full Court Press, 1978). Cover drawing by Glen Baxter.

Larry Fagin's new work, like fine mosaic, is an essay, a threshold, and something like figures in a landscape blasted apart. Unlike Rimbaudâ€™s lush prose poems which so many try to imitate, these engage in an aesthetic of deflation. They are the art of sinking while remaining solid. They are wittier than most of the prose poetry we know, sober and also hilarious. Comedy is never mere. Each of the poems here adds up to something grander and with more genuine pathos than one might have thought possible. As Fagin says vatically: â€œNot to know me is not to not love me.â€ He surrounds you, a strange sensation.

â€”David Shapiro

If poetry is, as Paul ValÃ©ry proposed, a holiday of the mind, Larry Fagin is the intellectualâ€™s Henny Youngman. His witty, staccato concatenations of one-liners cum prose poems are highly disorienting yet exhilarating, combining low and high comedy (and erudite cultural reference) in what amounts to a high-wire act on each page. Nor, as in the best comedy, are important human concerns ever far removed. I donâ€™t know any other poet who manages parataxis with such Ã©lan, or who casts so many lines that reeling them in is a virtual impossibilityâ€” until the poems accomplish just that.

â€”Charles North

What doesnâ€™t Larry Fagin remember. Where is he, as the writing appears to generate itself inevitably, colliding from the prior phraseâ€”an alloy of semi-secret knowledge, huge distance, and mandarin taste. So heâ€™s standing back, for the long view, but also up to his eyeballs in the material nougat, being so thoroughly informed. Apposites donâ€™t just naturally gel in such recognizable shapes that you canâ€™t see it coming. And then you do, breathing again.

â€”Alan Bernheimer

While it is to be hoped that someone is busying themselves gathering the best of Larry Faginâ€™s earlier uncollected poemsâ€”the â€œNarrative Techniquesâ€ series (and related pieces), the â€œEleven Poemsâ€ for Philip Gustonâ€”we have Cuneiform Press to thank for publishing this long-in-the-works book of Faginâ€™s wonderful prose poems. This latter form has been Faginâ€™s primary focus as a poet for much of the last twenty years (it is, astonishingly, almost thirty years since his last collection, the seventeen-page Nuclear Neighborhood), and it is a joy to have the fruits of his researches in this area collected between two covers at last. While Fagin well understands that 1+1=3, the greater mystery of his prose poems is that they are as much allover as additive works, their every sentence joined to its neighborsâ€”and not only thoseâ€”by sensible glue, which, here, is duplicitous in the very best sense: alive as in thickly a-hum. Some of the poems are antic, yes, but every â€œka-powâ€ is balancedâ€”maintained in exquisite suspension, in factâ€”by a corresponding â€œpa-dow,â€ such that the overall arrangement of poemsâ€”which is perfect, as you might expectâ€”constitutes a poem in itself. Other pieces contain elements that may, upon first glance, strike the reader as arch (there is such a thing as a â€œLarryismâ€), but this material, more often than not, is inducted into the poem via an utter delicacy of ostention: selection as caress, show and tell reimagined as intimate act. These Fragments constitute impressions taken on a writing pad that might best be imagined as a stack of index cards shot in natural light on black-and-white â€™Scope; their sum is entirely equal toâ€”but at no point a copy ofâ€”the world.

â€”Miles Champion

Larry Fagin doesn't want to be famous. At times he's published his poems anonymously and at times insisted that his students & colleagues do likewise. The students insist that he is the best teacher ever or at least since X, Y or Z, all long dead (Z for centuries). The poems themselves are small, modest as Fagin is modest, yet built to last for generations. What if Cavafy were a member of the New York School? Or if Catullus had been a part of the Spicer Circle? They're powerful & opaque like the Barnett Newman sculpture in 2001, tho the design preference is that each one should be no bigger than a breadbox. I think of them as the blood diamonds of the Lower East Side. That is so not Brooklyn, you say. Exactly.

â€”Ron Silliman

Larry Fagin is the author of 14 books of poetry. He is the co-publisher of Adventures in Poetry books, and edits Sal Mimeo, a little magazine. He lives in New York City, where he teaches privately.

"The Acadamisation of Avant-Garde Poetry" New Feature now online at The Argotist Online

Mon 18 Jun 2012

"The Acadamisation of Avant-Garde Poetry" New Feature now online at The Argotist Online: http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/The%20Acadamisation%20of%20Avant-Garde%20Poetry.htm

Details: Jake Berryâ€™s essay, "Poetry Wide Open: The Otherstream (Fragments In Motion" deals with the issue of certain types of avant-garde poetry (and, indeed, some mainstream poetry) as not yet having found favour within the Academy, or with poetry publishers of academically â€œsanctionedâ€ avant-garde poetry. The damaging aspects of this exclusion, and the concept of an â€œapprovedâ€ versus an â€œunapprovedâ€ avant-garde poetry, are also examined in the essay. And these things could well be described as â€œthe acadamisation of avant-garde poetryâ€. One could say that the term "avant-garde" has now, essentially, been appropriated by the Academy, and, as such, has become associated with the sort of poetic writing practices that could be fairly said to represent â€œestablishmentâ€ poetry, to the extent that the historical resonances of the term â€œavant-gardeâ€ have become meaningless. In contrast, Bob Grummanâ€™s term, â€œotherstreamâ€, which Berry uses in his essay to describe poetry that is marginalised by the Academy, can be seen as a more apt replacement for the term â€œavant-gardeâ€, which has now become obsolete as an appropriate description for poetry that isnâ€™t anecdotal, descriptive or prose-like. This Argotist Online feature presents Berryâ€™s essay, the responses to it from poets and academics it was first shown to, and an interview with Berry where he addresses some of the criticisms voiced in these responses. Many poets and academics (including those most famously associated with Language Poetry) were approached for their responses but declined. Other poets and academics that had initially agreed to respond ultimately declined. I mention this not as criticism but merely to explain the absence of people who one would normally expect to have responded and taken part in such a discussion.

BIO:

Of her most recent book from Litmus Press, I Want to Make You Safe, John Ashbery described it as bringing â€œabstractions to brilliant, jagged life, emerging into rather than out of the busyness of living.â€ Â It was one of the Boston Globeâ€™s Best Poetry Books of 2011, and it was reviewed, among others, by the Poetry Foundation, the Cambridge Review and the Colorado Review. Â King was also honored by The Feminist Press as one of the â€œ40 Under 40: The Future of Feminismâ€ awardees, and she received the 2012 SUNY Chancellorâ€™s Award for Excellence in Scholarship and Creative Activities.

I Want to Make You SafeÂ was recently published by Litmus Press, 2011. Â Amy King is also the author ofÂ Slaves to do These Things, Iâ€™m the Man Who Loves YouÂ andÂ Antidotes for an Alibi, all from Blazevox Books, as well asÂ The People InstrumentsÂ (Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Award 2002) andÂ Kiss Me With the Mouth of Your CountryÂ (Dusie Press).

King conducts interviews for VIDA: Woman in Literary Arts,Â co-editsÂ Esque MagazineÂ and theÂ PEN Poetry SeriesÂ with Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡,Â co-edits Barefoot Review, edits the Poetics List, sponsored by The Electronic Poetry Center (SUNY-Buffalo/University of Pennsylvania), moderates the Womenâ€™s Poetry Listserv (WOMPO) and the Goodreads Poetry! Group, and teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. Â She has also conducted workshops at such places as the San Francisco State University Poetry Center, Summer Writing Program @ Naropa University, Slippery Rock University and Rhode Island School of Design.

Her poems have been nominated for numerous Pushcart Prizes, she was a Lambda Literary Award finalist, and she was the recipient of a MacArthur Scholarship for Poetry. Amy founded and curated, from 2006 until 2010, the Brooklyn-based reading series, The Stain of Poetry. Â Amy King was also the 2007 Poet Laureate of the Blogosphere.

Clear Plastic Masks http://www.facebook.com/Clearplasticmasks The members of Clear Plastic Masks, formed in 2011, had been buddies and neighbors for years, relentlessly and enthusiastically supporting each others' artistic endeavors before coalescing into the definite unit they now are. Blessed to be part of an extended family of musicians, the band's sound owes much to the collective experience of playing with so many friends. Having this past month recorded their first LP with Mr. Andrija Tokic at The Bomb Shelter in Nashville (Alabama Shakes; Jay Reatard) the boys are looking forward to its eventual release. Clear Plastic Masks are Charlie Garmendia on drums, Eddy DuQuesne bass/keys, Matt Menold guitar/keys, and Andrew Katz guitar/keys/vocal.

Greg Fuchs http://www.gregfuchs.com Greg Fuchs is included in a variety of anthologies and is the author of numerous books of poetry. His latest is Moving Pictures, published by Lew Gallery, a San Francisco-based small press. Fuchs has published articles, essays, and interviews in many journals and magazines. Recently he has written an interview with Eileen Myles, a memorial of painter Michael Goldberg, and a brief history of University Woods Park in the Bronx. He is currently writing a series of poems located in the Morris Heights section of the Bronx, the legendary home of hip-hop. He is a member of Subpress publishing collective. Fuchs is co-editor, with John Coletti, of Open 24 Hours, which publishes poetry in the spirit of the mimeo-revolution of the 1960s. Fuchs lives in the Bronx with his wife, the artist, Alison Collins, and their son, Lucas Raphael Collins-Fuchs.

Boog City http://www.boogcity.com/ Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 21st year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women’s writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates three regular performance series—d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Sidewalk Cafe; the new BoogWork series, which will feature a single poet reading, followed by a musical performance, and then that same poet giving the gathered a poetry workshop, also at Sidewalk; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, Cake Shop, CBGB’s, The Knitting Factory, and Sidewalk Cafe. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

Complete 6th Welcome to Boog City Sked, Aug. 2-Aug. 5

---

please forward

Hi,

Six weeks from now, from Thurs., Aug. 2 through Sun. Aug. 5, we'll be celebrating Boog's 21st anniversary by putting on the sixth annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival. It will feature 51 poets, 12 musical acts, 6 political and radio talks, 6 poets theater plays, 1 workshop, and 1 panel over the four days.

A hearty thanks to all the poets and our music editor Jonathan Berger who suggested many of the poets and musicians who are taking part, and Sean Cole, Eliot Katz, and Ian Wilder for connecting us with the political and radio speakers who we were fortunate enough to get to take part in the festival. And Brenda Iijima for organizing this year's panel and Roxanne Hoffman the latest incarnation of The Boog Poets Theater.

Among the festival highlights are:

—our d.a. levy lives series kicks off its 10th season devoting a night to Philadelphia's Turtleneck Press;

—The Prose Pros Corpse is Exquisite! has Elinor Nauen and Martha King's Prose Pros series joining the festival for the first time with a special edition event featuring mystery readers from the first five years of the series;

—Our 39th Classic Album Live show has Sleater-Kinney's, Dig Me Out, performed live by five local musical acts for its 15th anniversary;

—Our 9th annual small, small press fair, with exhibits from a host of small presses, and readings by their authors;

—Never-ending Participation: Activism and Occupy Wall Street, a panel curated and moderated by Brenda Iijima

—Our BoogWork series, featuring poet Tyrone Williams reading and then giving the gathered a poetry workshop;

—and our Third Poets' Theater night, featuring a host of short plays.

The full schedule for the event is below this note, followed by performer bios and websites.

If you need any additional information or with to advertise in the festival program issue of Boog City you can reach me at 212-842-BOOG (2664) or [redacted].

as ever,
David

Welcome to Boog City 6 Bios and Websites

Jillian Brall http://www.zoewo.blogspot.com Jillian Brall received her B.A. and M.F.A. in creative writing from The New School. She is co-editor of the online poetry and art journal, Lyre Lyre and co-curates the Earshot reading series. Poems have appeared in such places as Connotation Press, Esque, Ping Pong Magazine, Praxilla Journal, Ragazine, 6S, The Best American Poetry Blog, The Portable Boog Reader, The Tower Journal, Unshod Quills, and others. She is also a saxophonist and visual artist.

Todd Carlstrom http://www.reverbnation.com/toddcarlstromandtheclamour Todd Carlstrom assembled this band after recording his first solo LP, Gold on the Map, at Olive Juice Studios. They're planning on a new release (as) soon (as we get off our asses). We love Boog. For the first time, at this show the lovely Becky Elmquist will be augmenting them on vocals, and that's pretty exciting.

Christine Murray and friends. Christine "Sharky" Murray is a former musician (Bionic Finger, Pantsuit) turned teacher who couldn't turn down the opportunity to play some Sleater-Kinney songs! Alan Blattberg is a composer, producer, connoisseur, attorney [ahem], polymath and autodidactic multitasker based in NYC. Under the name Chow Chow Music, Peter Hanlon writes and records music including original soundtrack music for independent films, television pilots, live-action and animated comedy shorts, PSAs, student films, independent recordings and live theater.

When not molding the pliant young minds of undergrads, slowly reading up for her dissertation, or taking tap dance lessons, Pam Weis rocks out with the Trouble Dolls and sometimes with Sharky.

Colia Clark http://www.DemocracyforNYC.org Colia Clark is a producer for the Manhattan Neighborhood Network. A humanist, Pan Africanist, U.S.A. coordinator International Commission of Inquiry on Haiti, U.S. Senate candidate Green Party, U.S.A. coordinator Guadeloupe Haiti Tour U.S.A., and former special Assistant to martyred civil rights leader Medgar W. Evers. Clark is cofounder of the SNCC Black Belt Alabama Voting Rights Campaign; 1963-1965, member of SNCC Mississippi field staff, founder of Mother on the Move Chicago, and coordinator Poor Women Against Vietnam War. She is a conflict resolution trainer and folklorist. In 2011, Clark was presented with the Freedom Flame Award and inducted into Voter Rights Hall of Fame.

Richard Deming http://www.phylumpress.com/richarddeming Richard Deming is a poet and a theorist who works on the philosophy of literature. His poems have appeared in such places as Field, Indiana Review, The Nation, and Sulfur, as well as Great American Prose Poems: From Poe to the Present. He is the author of Let's Not Call It Consequence (Shearsman Books), winner of the 2009 Norma Farber First Book Award from the Poetry Society of America. In 2012 he was named John P. Birkelund Fellow at the American Academy in Berlin. Jean-Jacques Poucel photo.

Amanda Deutch http://www.esquemag.org/2012/02/01/amanda-deutch/ Amanda Deutch is the author of three chapbooks. Her poetry has been nominated for a Pushcart Prize and published in Boog City, Denver Quarterly, EOAGH, Esque, Full Metal Poem, Shampoo, 6x6, among others. Deutch was the 2007 recipient of a Footpaths to Creativity Fellowship in the Azores. She teaches with the Alzheimer’s Poetry Project and is the artistic director of Parachute: the Coney Island Performance Festival.

Ted Dodson http://nightdeposits.tumblr.com/ Ted Dodson is the co-founder and editor of the filmed journal On the Escape, a curator for the Triptych Reading Series, and an editor and the special projects coordinator for Futurepoem. Select publications can be found in la fovea, SET, and Tim. He is from Middleburg, Va. and resides in Brooklyn.

Sandra Liu, Ugly Duckling Presse
http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org
Sandra Liu bio: Sandra Liu's work can be found in Hoboeye, 1913, and The Beloit Poetry Journal. She provides guidance for science and arts grantees at the poles and in New York City.

In her Ugly Duckling Presse collection of observational poems, On Poems On, Liu considers the world around her, wherever she may be or between, and wherever her thoughts of her environment and her position in it take her. She uses language directly, sometimes broken, to reflect the inherent conflicts and harshness in nature, modernity, and man, but also their beauty and mysticism, and, at times, with a wry humor.

Ugly Duckling Presse is a nonprofit art and publishing organization whose mission is to produce artisanal and trade editions of new poetry, translation, experimental nonfiction, performance texts, and books by artists. With a volunteer editorial collective of artists and writers at its heart, UDP grew out of a 1990s zine into a Brooklyn- based small press that has published more than 200 titles to date, with an editorial office and letterpress workshop in the Old American Can Factory in Gowanus. UDP favors emerging, international, and "forgotten" writers, and its books, chapbooks, artists' books, broadsides, and periodicals often contain handmade elements, calling attention to the labor and history of bookmaking.

Bridget Madden http://www.bridgetscommonplacebook.blogspot.com Bridget Madden lives in Boston, where she grew up. She did a 10-year stint in the State of Maine, first at the University of Maine, then as a teacher at horror author Stephen King's old high school and finally at the Stonecoast M.F.A. program through University of Southern Maine. She teaches poetry, among many other subjects, at an elementary school on a military base near Boston. Third graders are some of her most favorite poets. She also works at a college library in the Boston area. She has a garden, which she prefers to tend to at night, like Emily Dickinson.

Magnetic Island http://www.magneticislandband.com Magnetic Island's self-titled debut album pairs the band's familiar grandiose structures with a newly baroque focus on layered arrangements. Sheila Maldonado, A Gathering of the Tribes/Fly by Night Press http://www.sheilamaldonado.com http://www.tribes.org Sheila Maldonado is the author of one-bedroom solo (Fly by Night Press), her debut poetry collection. She grew up in Coney Island, across the street from the Atlantic Ocean. Her family hails from Honduras. Her poems have appeared in Rattapallax, Callaloo and Me No Habla with Acento: Contemporary Latino Poetry. She teaches creative writing for The City University of New York and Teachers & Writers Collaborative. She holds degrees in English from Brown University and poetry from The City College of New York. She lives in a one-bedroom in uptown Manhattan, where she is working on her next project about a lifelong obsession with the ancient Maya.

Tribes was conceived as a venue for underexposed artists, as well as a networking center and locus for the development of new talent.

The formation of Tribes was motivated by the thriving artistic community in and around the Lower East Side: poetry at The Nuyorican Poets Café, performances and plays at The Living Theater, activist art at Bullet Space, as well as hundreds of artists trying to find and develop a voice in their medium and a place in which their work might be appreciated.

Housed in a historic federal house built by Hamilton Fish, the founder of The Nation magazine, Tribes is located on East 3rd Street between Avenues C and D.

The space houses administrative offices, a gallery, and a salon where artists of all kinds can drop in and connect with each other and the organization.

Danforth Prince, Blood Moon Productions http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6EnDQbIifQ4 http://www.bloodmoonproductions.com Danforth Prince, president and founder of Blood Moon Productions, has a knack for salvaging the previously unpublished oral histories of America’s Entertainment industry. In 2011, a respected consortium of literary critics and book marketers, the J.M. Northern Media Group, defined him as “Publisher of the Year.” He is also a distinguished travel journalist, providing, for many years, the research and creative contents for regular updates of at least 50 titles within The Frommer Guides, shaping and guiding coverage that included most of Western Europe, the Caribbean, Bermuda, The Bahamas, and parts of the Americas.

In collaboration with the National Book Network, he has documented some of the controversies associated with his work in more than 30 videotaped documentaries and book trailers. Each of them can be watched, without charge, either on his company’s above website or by performing a search for his name on YouTube.com.

Blood Moon Productions is a privately owned New York City-based publishing enterprise dedicated to researching, salvaging, and indexing the previously unrecorded oral histories of America’s entertainment industry. Reorganized with its present name in 2004, Blood Moon originated in 1997 as The Georgia Literary Association, a vehicle for the promotion of obscure writers from America’s Deep South.

Blood Moon maintains almost 30 titles in print, mostly show-biz biographies, guidebooks to current films, and scandal guides to Hollywood. Meticulously researched, each has generated acclaim and controversy for their inclusion of information about events and relationships which, when they occurred, might have been considered either indecent or libelous, but which are now highly pertinent to America’s understanding of its origins, values, and cultural roots.

Their books have generated literary awards, lots of blog and tabloid commentary, and a growing list of devoted fans.

Genan Zilkha and J. Swagger http://www.facebook.com/jswaggerbk Genan Zilkha is a full-time lawyer and sometime singer. During her "heyday" she specialized in songs about food poisoning and love, as well as covers of offensive hip-hop songs. Her greatest accomplishment was performing chapters 1-5 of the R.Kelly masterpiece, "Trapped in the Closet."

The first thing you'll notice about J. Swagger (better known to civilians as Julie Burzynski-Sager) is that she is, in the words of one New Yorker, "clearly not from around here." Growing up in rural Maryland, she began her music career as a semi-respectable classical cellist. But all that changed one day when her dad brought home a Jazz bass knockoff and said, "I'm starting a rock & roll band and we don't have a bass player. You wanna learn?" Jay was 13 and never looked back, learning everything she knows in hilariously multicultural hillbilly jam circles and the many, many bands that spun off from there. At age 15, her parents sent her off to art camp and sent her dad's 1974 Guild dreadnought with her, and y'all can guess what happened next. She's spent the last 15 years in nearly every genre of band imaginable: classic rock, jazz, big band, blues, ska, punk, trad, folk, and then some.

By day, J. is a finance historian who lives in East Flatbush, Brooklyn. Her other hobbies include writing, swing and blues dancing, getting into Angry Birds battles with small children on the subway, and forcing total strangers to look at pictures of her dog.

"The Acadamisation of Avant-Garde Poetry" New Feature now online at The Argotist Online:
Wed 20 Jun 2012

"The Acadamisation of Avant-Garde Poetry" New Feature now online at The Argotist Online:

http://www.argotistonline.co.uk/The%20Acadamisation%20of%20Avant-Garde%20Poetry.htm

Details:

Jake Berry's essay, "Poetry Wide Open: The Otherstream (Fragments In Motion" deals with the issue of certain types of avant-garde poetry (and, indeed, some mainstream poetry) as not yet having found favour within the Academy, or with poetry publishers of academically "sanctioned" avant-garde poetry. The damaging aspects of this exclusion, and the concept of an "approved" versus an "unapproved" avant-garde poetry, are also examined in the essay. And these things could well be described as "the acadamisation of avant-garde poetry".

One could say that the term "avant-garde" has now, essentially, been appropriated by the Academy, and, as such, has become associated with the sort of poetic writing practices that could be fairly said to represent "establishment" poetry, to the extent that the historical resonances of the term "avant-garde" have become meaningless.

In contrast, Bob Grumman's term, "otherstream", which Berry uses in his essay to describe poetry that is marginalised by the Academy, can be seen as a more apt replacement for the term "avant-garde", which has now become obsolete as an appropriate description for poetry that isn't anecdotal, descriptive or prose-like.

This Argotist Online feature presents Berry's essay, the responses to it from poets and academics it was first shown to, and an interview with Berry where he addresses some of the criticisms voiced in these responses.

Many poets and academics (including those most famously associated with Language Poetry) were approached for their responses but declined. Other poets and academics that had initially agreed to respond ultimately declined. I mention this not as criticism but merely to explain the absence of people who one would normally expect to have responded and taken part in such a discussion.

Re: relocating to atlanta: would love to meet poets / go to readings /

Wed 20 Jun 2012

Hi, Rebecca. What you have here is the Atlanta Poets Group (APG). been around 17 years. If you want to get an idea of the stuff we write, check out the blog, (http://atlantapoetsgroup.blogspot.com/ which doesn't give a representative sampling but will do to start out with. There is an anthology (link on blog) a bit more representative. We meet to read our poetry Wednesday nights, do performances, though no workshops, did a meeting at UCSanta Cruz where we performed a paper, etc. If you write the kind of poetry (loosely speaking) that we do, or would like to share with us, send us some mss and we'll get back to you. influences: Stein, L-A-N-G-U-A-G-E poets We'd be delighted to meet you even if you're not interested in joining the group erika

Hi all,

I'm relocating to Atlanta to become a Brittian Fellow at Georgia Tech, and I would love to know about poetry events, readings, poets in town!

Feel free to backchannel if you have the time and are inclined.

I hope you're all having a lovely summer!

Call for Work - Fogged Clarity
Fri 22 Jun 2012

Arts reviewÂ Fogged ClarityÂ is inviting gifted poets, authors, artists and musicians to write and perhaps share their work in our new, expanded "blog."Â Over the past three and a half years our journal has received more than a half-million visitors, and been cited onÂ NPR,Â Pitchfork,Â The New York Times,Â The Chicago TribuneÂ andÂ The Huffington Post, while debuting work by Pulitzer Prize finalists, Guggenheim fellows, and other fine artists. Â Our acclaimed interview series has featured discussions with Jeffrey Eugenides, Carl Phillips, TC Boyle, Bela Fleck, Bonnie "Prince" Billy, and Jeff Daniels among many others.Â Anyhow, we are looking for artists to join our community and share work, promote events, write about craft, or anything else they see fit. You can write as little or as often as you like, about whatever you like.Â Our goal is to provide a forum for creative voices and generate a dialogue between artists.Â With the traffic we receive, we can assure you your work will be read, and for the next two months, until we resume monthly issues, every post will appear on our front page.Â If you are interested in contributing, just email [redacted]Â and he will set you up with an account.Â

OT: LSU Visiting Poet
Sat 23 Jun 2012

The MFA program at LSU is looking to hire a one-year Visiting Assistant Professor with specializations in poetry writing and African-American lit. The poet would be responsible for teaching grads and undergrads in a dynamic, thriving CW program. Laura Mullen and I are the poets on faculty, and there's a real chance this visiting spot could roll over into a TT job. The deadline is June 28th.

Clear Plastic Masks http://www.facebook.com/Clearplasticmasks The members of Clear Plastic Masks, formed in 2011, had been buddies and neighbors for years, relentlessly and enthusiastically supporting each others' artistic endeavors before coalescing into the definite unit they now are. Blessed to be part of an extended family of musicians, the band's sound owes much to the collective experience of playing with so many friends. Having this past month recorded their first LP with Mr. Andrija Tokic at The Bomb Shelter in Nashville (Alabama Shakes; Jay Reatard) the boys are looking forward to its eventual release. Clear Plastic Masks are Charlie Garmendia on drums, Eddy DuQuesne bass/keys, Matt Menold guitar/keys, and Andrew Katz guitar/keys/vocal.

Formerly of San Francisco and Los Angeles, Jill Stengel now lives in Davis, Calif. with her three children and her husband.

She has run a poetry reading series; edited and published numerous chapbooks and a journal,mem, under her a+bend press imprint; participated in several poetry collectives; formed a women's salon for post-graduate poetic study; taught poetry and book arts; and she actively participates in the poet-moms listserv community.

Stengel has nearly a dozen chapbooks of her own in print, several of which are also available to view online. They include ladies with babies, published by the fabulous David Kirschenbaum, late may, only this, and I would open, and her newest, equinox; her full-length dear jack is due out this summer from Black Radish Books.

Boog City http://www.boogcity.com/ Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 21st year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women’s writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates three regular performance series—d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Sidewalk Cafe; the new BoogWork series, which will feature a single poet reading, followed by a musical performance, and then that same poet giving the gathered a poetry workshop, also at Sidewalk; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, Cake Shop, CBGB’s, The Knitting Factory, and Sidewalk Cafe. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

*Maged Zaher, */The Revolution Happened and You Didn't Call Me,///2012, 67 pp., $15, designed by Allison Hanabusa

Maged Zaher is an Egyptian engineer who lives and writes English-language poetry in Seattle, Washington; his previous chapbook with Tinfish Press was co-authored with Pam Brown and titled /farout library software /(2007)/. /Zaher writes with haiku-like brevity and precision about his return to Egypt shortly after the 2011 revolution. Already foreseeing the counter-revolution, his eye gravitates toward the absurd paradoxes of global capitalism and local revolution, as he moves from coffee shop to public square and then back. Anthony McCann writes of the book: "I find it hard to read this book without looking up and wondering who and what and where I am. It returns me again and again to wondering what a person is, what speaking is, and what we mean by 'the world'. Deterritorialization is one of its main concerns and main activities, something that I think can be said about Zaher's work in general, whether he is undermining the reality effects of nation states and their borders, or of corporate spectral omnipresence, or unpeeling his own personal multiply-deterritorialized lyric self. It is vital, lucid, and uncompromising work that leaves this reader feeling more alive and open to 'our moment,' and less secure than ever about what that might mean. Despite its often slashing irony, I find it a very tender book as well. The gentleness and the slightness of the form cradles a reader (this one anyway) preventing panic and interpretative foreclosure.

Sun 24 Jun 2012

Here's a different version of my talk about Joe Keenan's digital poem MOMENT: http://vispo.com/keenan/2

This is the next version.

One thing I didn't mention is that the DNA motif in the poem is mainly a matter of reference to code. Joe was involved with Ted Warnell and the other 'code poets'. The DNA motif in MOMENT refers to code (DNA is code) but, also, the visual poetry in MOMENT is often quite sinusoidal, helixical, spiral.

I've been looking at the source code today. Joe is a super duper JavaScript programmer.

This isn't a recording of anything except my carrying cameras; a few people; hiking around Cooper's Rock; walking around Morgan- town; the 123 club where I've played a few times; some buildings of interest including a few the conference was held in; a true bug (hemiptera) I need to identify; young rattlesnake; etc. The talks were great - our panels were terrific, and I met some good people and saw some friends, Tim and Helen and Frances and Rachel and Frank, wonderful!

Quake Notes by Scott Watson

64 pgs. Paperback. $10.

On March 11, 2011 at 9.0 magnitude earthquake followed by a giant tsunami devastated parts of Japan's Tohoku and Kanto regions. Quake Notes is a journal of poet Scott Watson's experience in Sendai. Originally appearing as emails to friends/relatives around the world, these notes helped to sooth and focus Watson while surviving with no electricity and water, scarce food and supplies, and frequent after shocks. He writes: "We sleep, but it is a very light sleep and we are startled throughout by more rumbling and shaking. We have socks on too and are ready to run out of our house should the shaking get too violent. How does one tell? How does one know when to ride it out or when to get out?"

And then there is the looming situation in Fukushima, along with Watson's wife's radiation treatments. "I'm planning our escape. The roads North are clear. Winter snows are melting. Morie's radiation sessions: ten days more. Will Fukushima's nukes hold off until then, or will the danger zone expand?" Not just a survival diary, Quake Notes is a cultural critique and a poetic meditation that culminates into a political song against the worst nuclear disaster since Chernobyl.

From the forword by John Martone:

"Watson's Quake Notes would translate well into Japanese. The diary, from Sei Shonagon's Pillow Book, through Basho and Issa to Kenzaburo Oe's Hiroshima Notes, has been a prized Japanese art form, and readers familiar with those writers will see how clearly Watson's work stands in their light. Watson is never explicit about this heritage; there is nothing self-consciously literary about this little book, but like its antecedents, Quake Notes is all poetry, the language of survival, life."

You can purchase copies at the new Country Valley Press blog,

Invitation to Contribute to Anthology of TV Poems

Invitation to Contribute to Anthology of TV Poems

Â

De

Invitation to Contribute to Anthology of TV Poems

Â

Dear Poet Colleagues:

Â

Iâ€™d like to invite you to contribute work to an anthology of television poems that Iâ€™m editing. Poets Wear Prada, a NJ-based press, is the publisher. Weâ€™re projecting release in 2013.

Â

There are anthologies of movie poems and music poems. As far as Iâ€™ve been able to determine, there are no anthologies of poetry about a medium that has affected our language, our perceptions of the world, our politics, our economy, our opinions, and our tastes and interests.

Â

Iâ€™m seeking poems, prose poems, list poems and catalogues, hybrid forms, etc. about television in all its aspects: network and cable, the sit-coms, the news, the crime and medical dramas, The Sopranos and The Borgias, made-for-TV movies, actors and actresses, personalities, characters, theme songs, advertisements, and, of course, the mediumâ€™s history. By â€œpersonalities,â€ I mean people like Johnny Carson, Dan Rather, Ellen DeGeneres and Bill Oâ€™Reilly.

Â

A Common Strangeness: Contemporary Poetry, Cross-Cultural Encounter, Comparative Literature

Mon 25 Jun 2012

My book A Common Strangeness: Contemporary Poetry, Cross-Cultural Encounter, Comparative Literature has just been released from Fordham University Press.

"A Common Strangeness is unique among studies of contemporary poetics in being genuinely global in its perspective and its reach. At home in Russian and Chinese as well as American poetry and that of his native New Zealand, Jacob Edmond pinpoints the crucial relationships that exist between what are seemingly disparate poetic cultures. The Chinese poet Yang Lian, who lived in exile in Auckland, is read under the sign of Benjamin and Baudelaire. The American Language poet Lyn Hejinian's important dialogue with the Russian avant-gardist Arkadii Dragomoshchenko is studied carefully, and Bei Dao, Dmitri Prigov, and Charles Bernstein are treated as representative figures of cross-cultural thinking in the age of globalism. Edmond's is a provocative, exciting, and genuinely original study of the new poetics; we will all be learning from it!" --Marjorie Perloff

"This bold triangulation of six Chinese, Russian, and American poets advances lively current debates about global literature by exploring encounters that challenge the old binarisms and chart possibilities of literary singularities for a future poetics. Edmond's shrewd account of literary crossings in post-Cold War history helps us imagine how we can experience the challenge of new literary configurations." --Jonathan Culler

The book is available for purchase (around $20 for the paperback edition) from Amazon: http://www.amazon.com/Common-Strangeness-Contemporary-Cross-Cultural-Comparative/dp/0823242609/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&qid=1339531580&sr=8-1&keywords=a+common+strangeness

Extracts from the book can be read on Google Books: http://books.google.com/books?id=Kq3M4yE0MI4C&printsec=frontcover&dq=a+common+strangeness&hl=en&sa=X&ei=pVzVT-PBA6zsmAWM3PHxAg&ved=0CDUQuwUwAA

Ray Brown http://www.raybrown.bandcamp.com Ray Brown is from South Salem, N.Y. and has been writing songs and performing since 2010. His debut album, Canyon, was released in April. The East Village arts publication Boog City describes his songs as "funny and tragic at the same time" and The New Yorker dubbed him "a solid songwriter." Ray's latest album, Orchids, was released on June 23.

Jill Stengel
http://www.durationpress.com/abend
http://www.dusie.org

Formerly of San Francisco and Los Angeles, Jill Stengel now lives in Davis, Calif. with her three children and her husband.

She has run a poetry reading series; edited and published numerous chapbooks and a journal,mem, under her a+bend press imprint; participated in several poetry collectives; formed a women's salon for post-graduate poetic study; taught poetry and book arts; and she actively participates in the poet-moms listserv community.

Stengel has nearly a dozen chapbooks of her own in print, several of which are also available to view online. They include ladies with babies, published by the fabulous David Kirschenbaum, late may, only this, and I would open, and her newest, equinox; her full-length dear jack is due out this summer from Black Radish Books.

Boog City http://www.boogcity.com/ Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 21st year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has also published 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women’s writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates three regular performance series—d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, where each month a non-NYC small press and its writers and a musical act of their choosing is hosted at Sidewalk Cafe; the new BoogWork series, which will feature a single poet reading, followed by a musical performance, and then that same poet giving the gathered a poetry workshop, also at Sidewalk; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live at venues including The Bowery Poetry Club, Cake Shop, CBGB’s, The Knitting Factory, and Sidewalk Cafe. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville.

Directions:
Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave., L to 1st Ave.

Re: Dove, Vendler, Beauty is a Verb

Tue 26 Jun 2012

We read some of the poets in your breakthrough anthology in my contemporary Am poetry course this spring, and we found it deeply affecting & we learned a great deal about the non-normative body & the perceptions of these fine poets. It's an essential book now.

On 12/5/11 9:51 AM, "reJennifer Bartlett" <[redacted]> wrote:

> Hi All,

> I have been following the news on Vendler/Dove with a personal dismay. What is nagging at me is that a relatively mainstream anthology is causing such a stir. A few months ago Sheila Black, Michael Northen, and I published Beauty is a Verb: The New Disability Poets & although we got great reviews from some of my favorite poets, the controversy of the book has been very nonexistent. My argument isn't that there are real racial and gender problems that need to be solved. My point is that the arguments about race and gender are so loud that the civil rights of people with disabilities are consistently ignored. And the problems of this minority remain so severe in comparison to other groups.
>
> *First, looking at the Dove anthology itself what interests me is the still glaring lack of attention paid to poets/people with disabilities as a multicultural group. In what appears to be the ultimate inclusive collection Larry Eigner, Vassar Miller, Josephine Miles, Jim Ferris, Paul Guest are all absent and there is no mention of Crip Poetics The only poet in the collection who might identify as 'disabled" is Duncan, and I'm guessing the Duncan poems don't address his vision/vision which was arguably central to his work.*
>
> I do think that an anthology, such as ours, which for starters is an entirely new phenonemen calls for a little attention. Beauty is a Verb discusses how aphasia is a link to experimental language (Cole), addresses 'crip poetics" which most people have never heard of (Kuppers), speaks to the linguistically complexity of translating English to ASL (Clark), and most of all addresses the disabled body as something that is okay, even sexy and a worthwhile experience.
>
> I wonder if speaking about disability is still a thing that makes people nervous, and they feel afraid of having a voice. Although there is plenty of discussion regarding race from white people, and unlike skin color, most of the able-bodied will have some disability in their lifetime. More importantly, it seems that people still dismiss disability as a category/identity and one that is privileged to the most simple rights like getting into the store or having a job, for gosh sake - not to mention > being in the Penguin anthology.

>
> It also seems true that in the poetry world you have to insult someone directly or indirectly to get attention - which I did a few years ago when I called out Paul Guest for allowing John Ashbery to call him an invalid in his blurb. All hell broke lose & evidently the right to call a person an invalid is something people of which are very attached to.
>
> But that was the old Jennifer & the new Jennifer wants to be heard without causing too much anger. & Bob Grenier told me 'fighting is for young people." Perhaps Rita & Helen need Bobly's phone number!

2013 Furniture Press Poetry Prize for a Full-Length Collection of Poetry and its Derivatives

Wed 27 Jun 2012

2013 Furniture Press Poetry Prize for a Full-Length Collection of Poetry and its Derivatives

Deadline: Postmark by September 1, 2012

Judge: Thomas Devaney

Thomas Devaney is the author of two poetry collections, A Series of Small Boxes (Fish Drum) and The American Pragmatist Fell in Love (Banshee Press), and a nonfiction book, Letters to Ernesto Neto (Germ Folios). Recent poems have been published in The Brooklyn Rail, Zoland Poetry, The Awl, and BOMB Magazine. His essays on art have been published by Tibor de Nagy Gallery, the Institute of Contemporary Art, and the artblog. His poetry reviews have been featured in The Philadelphia Inquirer, Jacket, Double Change, and The Poetry Project Newsletter. He teaches at Haverford College and is the editor of ONandOnScreen (poems + videos). Devaney's book The Picture that Remains, with photographer Will Brown, is forthcoming from The Print Center of Philadelphia.

The 2013 Furniture Press Poetry Prize will be awarded to the writer that best exemplifies the poetics and particularities of Furniture Press Books’ aesthetics. This year, Thomas Devaney graciously accepted the role of judge.

The judge will read anonymous, unidentifiable texts. Only the editors of Furniture Press Books will know the identity of the applicants and his/her work. Each text will be assigned a number and distributed to the judge.

After the initial round of readings the judge will assign one finalist. The winner of the Prize will receive a publishing contract in which the winning manuscript will be published as a full length collection in 2013. The poet will also receive 20 copies of the book. A subsequent round of readings will also take place to examine the “highest tier” of applicants. In the past, some writers who had submitted to the prize but lost were ultimately considered for publication because of their outstanding work. Submitting to the contest is also a good way to alert the editors of Furniture Press Books to greater possibilities for publication.

1. Send one unpublished manuscript per entry. Include a cover letter with your name, address, eMail and short bio. Do not put your name nor the title of your submission on the pages of the manuscript. Multiple submissions per writer are accepted, but please send a separate submission/fee for each individual manuscript.

2. Submit a $10 fee per manuscript at furniturepressbooks.com/furniture-press-poetry-prize. Be sure to also give us your name and the title of your manuscript in the PayPal notes field. 100% of the cash goes to the pressing and publishing of the winning book. Editors and judges do not get kickbacks. Please send checks or money orders only, made out to Furniture Press Books, if you are submitting a physical copy or choose not to use PayPal.

3. There are two ways to submit your manuscript:

Postal. Send manuscripts and checks to Furniture Press Books care of FPPP2013, 2026 Druid Park Drive, Baltimore, MD 21211.

Electronic Submission. Send manuscripts to [redacted] in DOC, RTF or PDF format. Write “FPPP2013 / [name] / [title]” in the subject heading.

We strongly encourage you to send us work. It’s also a very good way to catch the attention of the editors who may want to publish your work in the future, despite whether or not you win the prize.

Thank you,
Christophe Casamassima

Jim, if you ask me, I wouldn't use our video with MOMENT to lure people to digital poetry. Your interface has to do with clicking and seeing what happens - after a little not much. There are much more interesting examples requiring a much fuller involvement from the participant.

RICH OWENS : BALLADS

Wed 27 Jun 2012

Habenicht Press is pleased to announce the publication of Richard Owens' Ballads <http://habenichtpress.com/?p=860>.

Comments on Owens' poetry:

Keston Sutherland on "No Class," Hi Zero! 6 (Summer 2011): "'No Class' is absolutely stupendous. The best new poem I've read in too long. A serious shining intense and shattering object."

John Latta on various ballads: "Balladeering as a form of community-making, or communally-made lament for community: Owens's seem a matter of reassembling pieces, somber, sobering, post-glorioso warnings to the polis."

Alan Halsey: “It strikes me that Owens does a rare thing, rare anyway in contemporary poetry, never allowing disjunctiveness to cloud his sense of the tough intractability of things (politically and perceptually)…”

120pp, letterpress cover, perfect bound. $12 (domestic) plus $3 shipping.

FIRST 50 ORDERS receive a limited-edition broadside of an early ballad, “Cindy Has Gone for a Broker.”

ALSO: special offer for Owens' Ballads plus kadar koli 7 at habenichtpress.com

112. ART ELECTRONICS
THE BOOK OF OPIUM, by Caterina Davinio
Thu 28 Jun 2012

* please, circulate * Title: IL LIBRO DELL'OPPIO (THE BOOK OF OPIUM)Author: CATERINA DAVINIOPublisher: Puntoacapo, Novi Ligure (I)Year: 2012 - Genre: Poetry 168 pages - Price: 16 Euro Purchase: * Orders from the publisher:[redacted] * Free copies:journalists, critics, cultural centers and libraries that can makethe book available to public consultation, can request a free copy bywriting to the cultural association ART ELECTRONICS: [redacted] (please, write your address, the name of your journal/review and website address) Il libro dell'oppio (The Book of Opium), namely: the cursed years of a protagonist of the internationalelectronic art and poetry. Opium and opiates, literary vice par excellence - with a history and personalities in the literary scene, from Baudelaire to De Quincey, from Coleridge to Burroughs - find in this work a space unencumberedby victimism or prejudice, with a delirious perspective, but free from censorship and taboos. The author writes in the introductory note:"These are sick (and hellish) paradis artificiels... It is better not to talk about certain diseases of body and soul, it is better to conceal them, not to upset the sensibility of those who, in the world, can so surelyseparate good and evil, health and affliction, heaven and hell. In fact, this book remained unpublished, and I would say secret, for more than twenty years". We can define The Book of Opium a work by a young poet: it contains, in fact, lyrics created byDavinio when she was from seventeen to thirty years old. Mauro Ferrari points out in the afterword: "This is poetry which brings together in one bundle a life experience which is anyway full and painfullyjoyous - I too suggest an oxymoron- that in Italy this poetry has very few equals, and that it takes refuge neither in a more or less cursed attitude, nor in moralism. [...]The poetry of Caterina Davinio drips vitality, corporeality and physicality, which, I think, makes us love life beyond measure, because it sinks its nails into abjection, into hazard and death - into a challenge to death, even, without rhetoric, neither in theconstruction of the verses nor in the narrative dimension of this lucid and hallucinated diary. [â€¦] History? Yes, the dates (between 1975 and 1990) tell us about the years of terrorism and heroin; but the single texts, however, tell us a story - rather they offer to us fragmented instants, a heap of broken images,that do not aspire to total organicity - where the pursuit of pleasure (momentary and fleeting, as always pleasure is, according to the poet Leopardi) merges with the immersion in pain like systole and diastole. The desperate search for drugs is wandering, delay and waiting ("the waiting is everything"); the resurrection to life after a night of drugs, or the lucidity that shines between two chasms, is then the terrible confirmation of the value of "that life which is missing", confirmation of how life should be wooed, to feel alive one more day, drunk on the edge of the abyss." Caterina Davinio, writer, poet and artist, is known for her work in new media, which has brought her, since 1990, in contact with the international avant-garde circuits, in publications, festivals, exhibitions and meetings of global significance, such as the Venice Biennial, the Biennale of Sydney, of Lyon, of Liverpool, of Athens, of Merida,E-Poetry festival (Barcelona and Buffalo, NY), Manifesta and many others, with over three hundred appearances in meaningful exhibition contexts. This book gives us an opportunity to know a dark periodpreceding 1990, in the Seventies and the Eighties, offering a gallery of situations, characters and atmosphere from the world of drug addiction, with moments of hedonism, nihilism, but also playful, or dramatic, such as in "Overdose","Anorexia", "Flash (Poem of Heroin)". "The Book of Opium" presents one hundred and fourteen selected poems from the collection "Fatti deprecabili"(Deplorable Facts), almost entirely unpublished, whichcontains texts written from Davinio's early adolescence. Davinio began writing poetry at the age of fourteen years, composing, from 1971 until 1997, over four hundred poems and performance texts; some of them were included in anthologies, readings and theater performances in the late Eighties and Nineties. The poems included in this book, never printed or presented before, are a first attempt toorganize and arrange part of those manuscripts for publication. The themes of drugs and marginality are not new in Davinio's literary production, already present in her novel Color Color, in various poems, and in her book SerialPhenomenologies (2010). The Book of Opium, with its language directed, up from its origins, to experimentation, with a vocation for breaking the syntactical structures, the verses, and, sometime, the words, with the unpredictability of some unexpected passages and variations, provides, in a not merelyneo-realistic way, an unprecedented insight into life and the youthculture of the Seventies and the Eighties, perhaps the generationmost affected by what has been called the drug culture.  Born in Foggia in 1957, Caterina Davinio grew up in Rome, where, after a degree in Italian Literature at Sapienza University, she dealt with contemporary art and new media, as a writer, as a curator and a theorist. Featured in international anthologies and journals, she has published the poetry collection SerialPhenomenologies, Campanotto, 2010, special mention in Nabokov Prize 2011 and in Lorenzo Montano Prize 2012, withparallel English text, afterword by Francesco Muzzioli and a criticalnote by David W. Seaman; the novel Color Color, 1998; the essays: Techno-Poetry and Virtual Realities, 2002, with preface by Eugenio Miccini, and Virtual Mercury House. Planetary & Interplanetary Events, book with dvd, 2012, about net-poetry. She gained recognitions as a finalist in the awards: Lorenzo Montano,Franco Fortini, 2011, Scriveredonna 2010 (Pescara), for unpublished poetry. Among the pioneers of digital poetry and art in 1990, she has exhibited in more than three hundred expos in many countries of Europe, Asia, America, Australia. Since 1997 she participated and has created poetry and multimedia art events in seven editions of the Venice Biennale and collateral events.

Hi All,

I have been following the news on Vendler/Dove with a personal dismay. What is nagging at me is that a relatively mainstream anthology is causing such a stir. A few months ago Sheila Black, Michael Northen, and I published Beauty is a Verb: The New Disability Poets & although we got great reviews from some of my favorite poets, the controversy of the book has been very nonexistent. My argument isn't that there are real racial and gender problems that need to be solved. My point is that the arguments about race and gender are so loud that the civil rights of people with disabilities are consistently ignored. And the problems of this minority remain so severe in comparison to other groups.

*First, looking at the Dove anthology itself what interests me is the still glaring lack of attention paid to poets/people with disabilities as a multicultural group. In what appears to be the ultimate inclusive collection Larry Eigner, Vassar Miller, Josephine Miles, Jim Ferris, Paul Guest are all absent and there is no mention of Crip Poetics The only poet in the collection who might identify as 'disabled" is Duncan, and I'm guessing the Duncan poems don't address his vision/vision which was arguably central to his work.*

I do think that an anthology, such as ours, which for starters is an entirely new phenonemen calls for a little attention. Beauty is a Verb discusses how aphasia is a link to experimental language (Cole), addresses 'crip poetics" which most people have never heard of (Kuppers), speaks to the linguistically complexity of translating English to ASL (Clark), and most of all addresses the disabled body as something that is okay, even sexy and a worthwhile experience.

I wonder if speaking about disability is still a thing that makes people nervous, and they feel afraid of having a voice. Although there is plenty of discussion regarding race from white people, and unlike skin color,

First Poetry Book Announcement

Thu 28 Jun 2012

My first book of poetry, Lunatic Speaks, is now available if you're interested in taking a look:Â

http://www.amazon.com/Lunatic-Speaks-Caroline-Hagood/dp/0983998582/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&qid=1338952301&sr=8-1

In this slim volume of poems, Caroline Hagood offers a surreal journey through the fever dream of creativity, exploring what it means to grow up as a woman and poet sensitive to the point of being skinless, walking the line between inspiration and madness daily. Starting from early childhood and moving forward, these poems address gender and trauma, sex and bathroom humor, the misbehaving mind, relationships, and more. A poetâ€™s attempt to transcend suffering through writing, Lunatic Speaks is by turns funny, sad, and, joyous.

Caroline Hagood is an English PhD candidate with a focus in 20th century American poetry at Fordham University, where she works for Poets Out Loud and CURA literary magazine. Her poetry has appeared in Shooting the Rat (Hanging Loose Press), the Huffington Post, and kill author, among others. She has also written on film and literature for The Guardian, The Economist, Salon, and the Huffington Post. Lunatic Speaks is her first full-length poetry collection.

116. Halvard Johnson
Re: Leap second festival
Thu 28 Jun 2012

[Forwarding appreciated]

Leap second festival

Festival program

The leap second is approaching... The coming Saturday at midnight, 30th June 23:59:60 (UTC), the first Leap second festival will take place. It will last until the 1st of July 00:00:00 (UTC). Within this leap second all the works of the festival are exhibited and performed. There are thirty-seven participants exhibiting and performing works of different types - video, audio, text, poem, visual, visual text, animation, conceptual, instructional, narration, dedication, musical score, polemic (if we want to categorize them as such).

The participants are A. Andreas (Andreas Maria Jacobs), Cristina Andries, Sissel Berntsen, Brian Blaney, Ana Buigues, Yiorgos Chouliaras, Elisabeth S. Clark, Simon Coates, Roger Cummiskey, Chris Funkhouser, Peter Grass, Mathias

Hauan Arbo, Martin Howse, INTERLICHTSPIELHAUS, Karl Heinz Jeron, Halvard Johnson, Irena Kalodera, Daniel Kelley, Jyrki Kirjalainen, Bonnie MacAllister, BjÃ¸rn MagnhildÃ¸en, Nick Mattan, albert negredo, Pasha Radetzki, Stefan Riebel, Jesse Scott, Alan Sondheim, Anthony Stephenson, Otto Tall, andrew topel, jurgen trautwein aka jtwine, Nico Vassilakis, Visuel Sound : Blaise Merino & IrÃ¨ne Strubbe, Paul Wiegerinck, Jan Windle, Margo Wolf.

Most works are shown in digital format and using the net as their venue, though their content might as well refer to other formats, venues and domains - whether online, offline, outline, site, on-site, non-site (or how we prefer). The festival is a distributed event coordinated on the net.

Most works last one second. Though some are time-independent (in format), the basic idea of a miniature work that can be exhibited/performed within one second is followed.

Since the festival only lasts one second, everything has to be shown simultaneously. So, Saturday at midnight, 30th June 23:59:60 (UTC), people going to the Leap second festival site will be able to see all the works executed, exhibited, and performed (or what it takes).

In reality, the festival is an event that happens in a particular time, and not in any particular place. And since we all share the same time living on this free oscillating ball, disregarding relativity theory for the moment, the festival will actually take place everywhere and at the same time. We earthball-people operate with timezones, so take care to check when 30th of June 23:59:60 (UTC) is likely to happen in your temporary zone (autonomous or not), because the leap second does not occur on June 30 everywhere. Have a look at what UTC time is and compare to your clock to know when it's due.

With this in mind, we proceed to the festival program, and have a look at what will happen during the leap second.

All @ 23:59:60

A number of video and visual works will be shown. A mini movie with and without media by Paul Wiegerinck investigates the minimal requirements of the movie media. Bending Time and Space 1 Second for 10 Times by Jyrki Kirjalainen explores the perceptional illusion of time contraction through a repetition of a one-second sequence of the earth exploding. Change Brief Abridged by Anthony Stephenson is a series of motion studies based on the multi-paneled painting titled "Change - 3 Coins 64 Times". Martin Howse describes in container//mpeginmpeg a set of content-free, protocol-driven code objects which are embedded Russian-doll-style within themselves, in this instance one single video frame, and further explains, "The code for each object (commandline, Python or C code) is self-consciously literal, describing the process as algorithm without shortcuts. The container project embraces the use of the quine with any compiler considered as an embedding device. Future container examples will extend to include film-in-film and pornography-in-pornography. The container project raises the question of where any protocol boundaries for embeddings can be established". Irena Kalodera's film suite I-II can be considered, in the festival's opinion, self-referencial 'motion pictures' and meta-framing. millisecond(s) by Jesse Scott is an executable/applet of generative, random programming. shut@#%$^$up by Cristina AndrieÈ™ is described as "The necessary solution to an unnecessary situation" and might be said to be a short and brutal political statement. INTERLICHTSPIELHAUS is showing six approximate seconds, based on 3D-model animations (as far as we know). The stitch by Ana Buigues demonstrates in the textile arts the extra stitch at the end of every round that one has to do, and without which the next round gets too tight. Whatever by Jan Windle is a 0.8 second polemic on the relationship of the present to the future (leaving some time for reflection before the festival ends). Bonnie MacAllister will be showing What the Water Wore filmed on location in Solomon's Island, MD. Also on the program are Caveat 1.1 by Simon Coates, Geschenke by Visuel Sound : Blaise Merino & IrÃ¨ne Strubbe, Mumble Sign by Otto Tall, Jump/cut//Impossible continuous action by BjÃ¸rn MagnhildÃ¸en, and Phony Lounge by Pasha Radetzki.

Event/intervention. During the light intervention En un clin d'Å“il by Elisabeth S. Clark, 218 street lampposts in Bad Ems, Germany, will simultaneously be switched off as a split-second negation of light. This single second non-(street)light orchestration is ephemeral but will nevertheless signal and question the very measurement and distribution of time. At the leap second, Elisabeth S. Clark proposes that Bad Ems encounter a glimpse of non-time.

Music, sound, and audio related work embrace many different types of work. With Leap Second Split the sculptor Sissel Berntsen will in an action record the sound of a 13100 kg piece of black diabase stone splitting in the moment of the leap second. This action will take place in Johansen Monumenthuggeri, Skjeberg , Norway. Frenchmebeer by Jurgen Trautwein AKA jtwine is ordering a draft beer in french. Jaa Nee - Yes No by Karl Heinz Jeron, a computer voice, a possible reference to Joseph Beuys, the bible, the digital, or all... . Daniel Kelley is for this 25th leap second presenting the musical score L25, A Free Oscillation of Earth During the Leap Second of 30 June 2012. In the informal notes, L25 for dummies he says about the work, "Using the Earth as a model of a couple of large bells, which can be excited by a Great earthquake, such as the 2004 Sumatra-Andaman, one of the bells represents the uniform ringing of the atomic time scale, the other bell beats slightly out of phase based on the prediction of change the Earth rotation rate between 29 and 30 June." Another poignant sound work for the festival, concerning global instability and precarity (whether political or physical), is The sound of money by A. Andreas (Andreas Maria Jacobs). This is the sound of 5 years Germany daily electricity prices from 2008 - 2013, squeezed to 1 second and compressed to the audible frequency range.

To continue pigeonholing and hair-counting the works, we've come to textual based ones. Chris Funkhouser's three work that are to be shown - Ascend Pole, Oceans Pled, Placed Scaled Planes Spaced Places - are digital poetry text animations, dealing with anagrams for/of the leap second (which itself can be considered an anagrammatic operation on time). Buffering... by BjÃ¸rn MagnhildÃ¸en is an instruction piece about the stopping of time and mind. Classic Outlines (part of the Fast Food Classics) by Yiorgos Chouliaras is a poem which can be read in less than 1 second (by an epically fast narrator/reader). Dedication Pieces by Stefan Riebel is a performative textual piece, dedicating to the leap second. The Four videos by Nico Vassilakis are visual poetry pieces exploring narratives between text, image, and motion. k!: cal 1752 by Alan Sondheim presents a textual command that outputs the singular calendar of 1752 when it went from Julian to Gregorian. Halvard Johnson's word-poem deals with an aspect of spacetime. Andrew Topel's [untitled #1], [untitled #2] are instruction pieces for anybody to perform during the leap second. The sun is bright by Mathias Hauan Arbo is a 1 second video of rewriting a text. Also to be exhibited are Nick Mattan's text animation [untitled], John Connor is Peter Parker by Margo Wolf, Messi by Roger Cummiskey, One Second Om by Peter Grass, and Records by Albert Negredo.

In addition there's also a small text section of the festival that consists of: Dead moments in time - The micromanaging moments of a cave man - By Ana Buigues. L25 for dummies - Notes on the musical score L25 by Daniel Kelley - A correspondence between Daniel Kelley and BjÃ¸rn MagnhildÃ¸en. Leap second perspectives - Poem - By Brian Blaney. mafestOmarch (doc) - An art-social initiative - an art march rather than an art movement - by Pasha Radetzki. One should produce that thought which is nowhere supported - A commentary on a sentence from the platform sutra (teachings of Hui-neng) - By BjÃ¸rn MagnhildÃ¸en. VR Improvised - A improvised meditation on the virtual and the real - By Alan Sondheim.

Re: Joe Keenan's MOMENT 1.1
Fri 29 Jun 2012

What's with "our video" and "Your interface", Murat? The piece under discussion is Joe Keenan's MOMENT; it isn't a work of mine. But the video about it is mine, not "ours".

Here is the final version of the video I made about MOMENT: http://vispo.com/keenan/4

If, as you say, you're simply clicking to see what happens, then you're not getting it, Murat. Seek out the metaphors. Then explore how they are developed. That way, you will stand a better chance of enjoying the piece as a work of writerly visual, kinetic and interactive poetry by exploring the texts, visuals, animation, and programming. Via clicking, reading, viewing, and getting under the neath text.

July 2012

134 messages · Fri 29 Jun 2012 – Mon 30 Jul 2012

July 2012 kept June's quarrel about the academy running, and gave it a sharper, more personal edge: not the abstract absorption of the avant-garde, but the hard question of what, exactly, the creative-writing professor is doing to the young. One hundred and thirty-four messages moved through the list, thinned by summer, and its largest thread circulated a document about teaching poetry that struck at least one reader as a wound. The month worried the ethics of instruction, the strange power of the person who grades a poem.

The largest thread passed around a provocation for the profession. Something billed as useful for professors of creative writing went round the room — a text about the teaching of poetry pointed enough that one member recoiled, murmuring that it was "What a hard letter to read if it is addressed to you" — the discomfort of the teacher shown, in cold print, the effect of the red pen on a young writer's confidence. It reopened the question the academisation debate had raised: whether the workshop nurtures poets or merely processes them, whether the professor is a gardener or a machine.

The quarrel, underneath, was about power and the poem. To teach poetry is to stand in judgment of the most vulnerable thing a person makes, and the room, full of teachers, knew both sides of the desk — the authority that can encourage a voice into being or crush it, the grade that means nothing to the art and everything to the student. It was the creative-writing enterprise examining its own conscience in the quiet of July.

Around it ran the small keeping — a college's small-press collection seeking donations, a new book announced, readings posted around New York and Los Angeles. The infrastructure of the teaching-and-publishing life carried on beneath the unease, the summer readings and the archive drives and the self-announced titles, the ordinary machinery of a poetry now lived largely inside the institution it distrusted. That the same poets who feared the workshop also staffed it, graded within it, and drew their livings from it was the quiet contradiction the month could not resolve and did not pretend to.

I have set July down exactly as the archive delivered it — the hard letter to the professors, the discomfort of the teacher shown his own effect, and the small business of the academic summer — because it was the month the list turned the academisation question inward and made it personal: not what the university does to the avant-garde, but what the teacher does to the student. A room full of poets who are also professors, pausing over a document hard to read if it is addressed to you, is a room examining the strangest power its members hold: the authority to judge the most fragile thing a young writer will ever hand across a desk, and the knowledge that a poem, unlike a revolution, can be killed by a single careless reader with a grade to give.

Old Romanian Fairy Tales: Salmagundi Art Club, Friday, June 29, 2012 at 7PM

Fri 29 Jun 2012

Old Romanian Fairy Tales
Salon, June 29, 2012

Interpretive Reading, Friday, 7pm.

Fairy Tales originated in myth and have been integrated in different cultures from time immemorial. Over the years, Fairy Tales have lost their important role as a vehicle for idealistic values and morality in the development of culture. The earliest European Fairy Tales have always dealt with good and evil in the heroes and characters, with goodness triumphing in the end. Derived from ancient civilizations of the Celtic and Greco-Roman traditions, the present book of English translations, entitled Old Romanian Fairy Tales, captures and conveys indigenous Romanian folklore.

You are invited to join us for a fabulous evening where you can meet Prince Charming and have a drink with the fairies, witness battles with dragons, betrayal, competition, love, and observe ultimate success in the interpretive readings of four four Romanian Fairy Tales.

More comment on "The Academisation of Avant-Garde Poetry"
Sun 1 Jul 2012

From Bob Grumman's blog.

Quote:

"The existence [of The Argotist Online Feature "The Academisation of Avant-Garde Poetry"] has been fairly widely announced on the Internet. Jeff Side says they’ve drawn a lot of visitors to The Argotist Online, “ 23,000 visitors, 18,000 of which have viewed it for more than an hour.” What puzzles both him and me is that so far as we know, almost no one has responded to either the article or the responses to the article. There's also a post-article interview of Jake that no one's said anything about that I know of. Why?

[...] no academic I know of has so much as noted the existence of article and responses. I find this a fascinating example of the way the universities prevent the status quo from significantly changing in the arts, as for some fifty years they've prevented the American status quo in poetry from significantly changing."

Philly Aughts Artifacts Pt. 1

Sun 1 Jul 2012

The Aughts in Philly: it was a time period which meant a whole lot of different things to different artists, working with disparate aims in disparate contexts. I've begun the work of preserving the artifacts of this time period which meant the most to me. Like:

A portrait, by Mary Harju, of myself and Mary. It was painted in '07-'08 and shown at PAFA in '08:

http://archive.org/details/portraitAdamAndMaryByMaryHarju

This flier, designed by Jeremy Tenenbaum, for a reading I did in Olde City in '06, with Nick Moudry and Christian TeBordo:

http://archive.org/details/FlierForReadingJeremyTenenbaum

These images created their own context in which different poetries could flourish. I'll continue to share them as they emerge.

Thanks and happy summer!

UnlikelyStories.org presents the return of Michelle Greenblatt (and lots of other cool stuff)

Sun 1 Jul 2012

Greetings, daytimers and desk-slaves! We at /Unlikely Stories: Episode IV/ are thrilled to present new poems by Michelle Greenblatt. Back in the 'aughts, Michelle was a rising poetry star in the small press, before she took a six-year break from publishing. She's back, now, with three great poems, slated to appear in her forthcoming book /Ashes and Seeds/, and presented at www.UnlikelyStories.org now. Right now. It is there, along with:

Andy Bichlbaum and the Yes Labs offering free McDonald's to "Stop and Frisk" victims Jay Driskell examining the activist debate over the Wisconsin recall Marti Hiken and Luke Hiken considering U.S. troops as victim, victimizers, or both David Cobb on the Tea Party, Green Party, and righteous anger Dominique Desjardins on the student strikes in Quebec Arturo Desimone on his visit to the Auschwitz-Birkenau center "Dreams In Time:" a full-length novella by Eric van Hall More Fiction by Rudolfo Carrillo, George Sparling, and J. Edward Vanno More Poetry by Dan Raphael, Louise Landes Levi, j/j hastain, Billy Cancel, Jay Passer, Kim Vodicka, Joh Grochalski, and William Aaron Tanner

There's more great stuff coming up mid-month, so enjoy this now, before like, you forget, I guess. Do you forget things? It's OK. Everyone does. You should not feel bad about it.

See you in the comment stream,

Save Our National Scools Campaign Video (Ireland)

Sun 1 Jul 2012

==========
www.SONS.IE

The Save Our National Schools campaign have launched a new video with a new take on the Pink Floyd hit "Another Brick in the Wall", which they have tongue in cheek retitled "Another Kick from the Dáil", with altered lyrics.

Featuring footage of and a chant from students of two Westmeath schools, the video is launched to highlight the march outside Dail Eireann this coming July 4th, 2012 to oppose the pending cuts and amalgamations of small schools in rural areas.

The video is at http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WIdm98Zb6oQ - if you can comment, tweet, share on facebook, post on your blog, or better still turn up to the protest, that would be fantastic.

Philly Aughts Artifacts Pt. 2

Mon 2 Jul 2012

From 2001-2004, a periodical called "The Philadelphia Independent" was in circulation around Philadelphia. Run by Swarthmore grad Matt Schwartz, the Independent was a quirky mixture of arts (including poetry in each issue), politics, "urban particulars" of various kinds, and idiosyncratic takes on Philly life. Now, many of the best Independent issues are available to be read on Issuu:

Philly Independent Vol. 1 Number 10

Coolidge and de Kooning Article

Tue 3 Jul 2012

[apologies for cross-posting]

Dear All,

For those interested in Clark Coolidge, or in Willem de Kooning, I'm v. pleased my article on both has appeared:

"Glancing paintings and poems: figuration and abstraction in Clark Coolidge's Polaroid and Willem de Kooning's Excavation"
Textual Practice
Volume 26, Issue 3, 2012
http://www.tandfonline.com/doi/abs/10.1080/0950236X.2012.658434

If anyone wants it but can't reach it drop me a note.

Yours truly,

This article reads, in parallel, Clark Coolidge's Polaroid (1975) and Willem de Kooning's Excavation (1950). It argues that both are exemplary meditations on the tension between abstraction and representation, and display that tension as an affective struggle that ultimately refuses any easy conceptualization of ‘abstraction’ or ‘representation’. The argument bears on their reception. As ‘New York School’ artist or ‘Abstract Expressionist’, de Kooning worked at the biting point between figuration and abstraction. Coolidge's reception in the discourse of Language writing imputes a lack of referentiality, which this article critiques. Polaroid presents the qualifiers, pronouns, spatial prepositions, and deictic pointers that typically determine the coherence of the representational scene in the mind's eye. Here, however, the parts of language that facilitate meaning become the parts that resist recognition. The tension between our wish for context and the reticence of the artwork to fulfil that craving is compared to the context reticence of Excavation. The term deixis is given to describe the reception of both paintings and poems, and foregrounds the corporeality of the viewing subject, thereby refusing the possibility of a final abstraction (or lack of referentiality). The force of the comparison is paradigmatic of strategies of interdisciplinary reading generally.

Pusateri and Pierce in Philadelphia, Sun 7/8 @7pmþ

Tue 3 Jul 2012

Hello all,

For those of you in the Philadelphia area, Michelle Naka Pierce and I will read with Kari Larsen and Jaime Fountaine this Sunday at the Jubilant Thicket Literary Series. If you can make it, we'd love to see you there. All the whats and wherefores are below.

Sunday, July 8th @7pm
The Walking Fish Theatre
2509 Frankford Ave
Philadelphia PA
More info at: http://jubilantthicket.blogspot.com/

Born in Japan, Michelle Naka Pierce is the author of seven titles, including She, A Blueprint (2011), Beloved Integer (2007), and TRI/VIA (2003). Awarded the Poets Out Loud Editor’s Prize, Continuous Frieze Bordering Red (Fordham, 2012) documents the migratory patterns of the hybrid as she travels the floating borders in Rothko’s Seagram murals. She is associate professor and director of the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa University in Boulder, CO.

Chris Pusateri is the author of several books of poetry, most recently Common Time (Steerage Press, 2012), and Molecularity (Dusie, 2011). His poetry and critical prose appear in many periodicals, including American Letters & Commentary, Boston Review, Chicago Review, Denver Quarterly, Fence, Jacket, Verse and others. A librarian by trade, he works in Denver, where he reviews new poetry and fiction titles for Library Journal and curates the Belmar Film Series, a free public program showcasing independent cinema.

Bad Press Annuncio: LIFE OF RILEY by Samuel Solomon

Tue 3 Jul 2012

FWD on behalf of Bad Press. Â

Dear Friends of Bad Press,

The Annuncio branch of the Bad Press Hyperquarters is very pleased to announce the arrival of:

LIFE OF RILEY, by Samuel Solomon

A beautifully argumentative collection of part lyrics and part personae.Â Musical, exacting, funny, and strangely loving amid deadly seriousness.

24pp.Â ISBN978-0-9567743-4-7. Cover image by Lee Triming. Suggested donation Â£4 / $8.

a killing gesture shapes its own world

"In this series of red shouts, misremembered lyrics and culture skimmings, Samuel Solomon offers a poetics of conviction: language bumped and rigorous, tampered by gavels but still boisterous in â€˜the shadow of our rightâ€™.Â â€˜These are not tactics raised to principles. /

Every good poem is a transitional demandâ€™.Â Taken as a set of analects â€˜in the interest of positions sometimes happyâ€™, Solomonâ€™s Life of Riley offers both a serious engagement with the ludicrous what-is and a flicker of its opposite: resisting eviction from public space, the territorialism of capital, and the plunge out of affect into the trap of concepts, these are poems to lean on." - Andrea Brady

You can see Samuel reading from this and other poems at his reading at the Sussex Poetry Festival here: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pBp4vN4qDLM&feature=player_embedded

The chap is available from our website: http://badpress.tumblr.com, or you can Paypal us at [redacted].

Special offer for UK readers: the first chapbook you order is Â£4 including p&p.Â You can add any of the following to your order for Â£2 each: When I Say I Believe Women (Emily Critchley)Untitled Colossal Parlour Odes (Morris, Roberts, Robinson, Stanley)Yr Guilt Is A Miracle (Ryan Dobran)Finite Love (The Two Brothers)US readers, the first chapbook is $8, please add $4 for further titles.

Homo Sentimentalis: A Guide In Verse To Modern Emotional Intimacy

Nicholas Manning

116 pages

Otoliths, 2012

ISBN: 978-0-9872010-4-1

$15.95 + p&h

URL: http://www.lulu.com/shop/nicholas-manning/homo-sentimentalis/paperback/product-20166234.html

"In a civilization of hysteria, the sentimental man is king. Troubadoured constructions have laced our European balconies with a string of rotting roses. Emotion's event horizon is the condensation of cliché. Love is both an autonomous quality of the world and a conditional quality of our language. Extend a convention far enough and one arrives at life. Shall we explore love then as rhetorical device? The flowers among your hair are mere metaphors. Upper limit hyperbole, lower limit litotes. Kitsch and the commonplace set up the steps of the dance. To then trip over tropes is to attain a glittering singularity among stars: a stasis amidst the movement. Rhetoric and sincerity do not cease to be distinguishable; rather, their distinction no longer matters. Beyond the baroque and the rococo lie the limits of this spectrum, where all passion is at once passion and its show, all pathos at once ethos and its mask of Venetian glitter. The aesthetic posture and persona of our over-the-top Romeo takes then to moving while still sobbing in a comical cabriole. Let the tropes dance then, the ones amidst the others, and interchange forever their silken, saddened arms." —Nicholas Manning

Homo Sentimentalis: A Guide In Verse To Modern Emotional Intimacy is probably the greatest single-poet book of love poems in the field of "avant" poetry since For Love, by Robert Creeley. – Kent Johnson

Workshop: Creating Collaborative Multimedia Poetry (Saturday, August 4 at Big Blue Marble Bookstore)

Wed 4 Jul 2012

Certain Circuits Workshop: Creating Collaborative Multimedia Poetry (Saturday, August 4 at Big Blue Marble Bookstore)

Founded by artists, Certain Circuits Magazine publishes poetry, experimental prose, art, and new media. We are especially interested in documenting multimedia collaborative work between artists. Our two print issues feature work from artists in Australia, Brazil, France, Mexico, India, Japan, Korea, Uruguay, the United Kingdom, and the United States. Our collaborative work in text, print, and exhibitions has been documented by Arcadia University Bulletin, Apiary, City Paper, Duotrope, Et Al Projects, Fifth Wednesday Journal, Moonstone Arts, New Pages, New Purlieu Review, the Philadelphia Inquirer, Philly Side Arts, Philadelphia Weekly, Spew Jersey, Tyler Fiber, and Urban Arts Projects, among others.

Editors Lora Bloom and Bonnie MacAllister will guide you through the steps to create and score your own multimedia poetry .gifs and videos. The workshop will consist of creating new work through a series of multimedia poetry prompts and composing to the original music of Bloom. Participants will perform their texts in the workshop setting, and they will learn free and easy animation techniques. Final products to be eligible for submission to the magazine.

Lora Bloom writes poetry, fiction, creative non-fiction and abstract rants, and is a musician and performance artist. Currently she is the lead vocalist of the experimental rock band Radio Eris and she helps run Eris Temple Arts, an art gallery and music space in West Philadelphia. She has been recently published by 13 Myna Birds, received a prize for her writing by the Beat Museum, was featured at the 25th Anniversary of the Shubin Theatre, and has performed and curated music and poetry widely in Europe and the United States.

Bonnie MacAllister renders moments through a variety of media. Often pieces are multi-genre, fusing painting, photography, slide installations, spoken word, video, and performance. She is a Pushcart Prize nominee, poetry slam champion in the United States and France, and Fulbright-Hays awardee to Ethiopia. Her poetry has been published in Esque, 10,000 Poets for Change/Fieralingue, Grasp (Czech Republic), nth position (UK), and Paper Tiger Media (Australia). She has performed her original writing and plays at New York Foundation for the Arts, the Philadelphia Fringe Festival, Raandesk Gallery in Chelsea, Adrienne Theater in Philadelphia, and Cat Cat Club in Paris. She is currently showing work at the Sandy Spring Museum in MD.

Take an Amy King workshop Â ~ at 20% off!Â

Workshops that work.Â

Â

Dear Amy,

As the mercury rises, chill out inside with a super-cool online poetry workshop: Amy King'sÂ Apostrophe, Odes, Ekphrasis, Oh My!Â Â No cars, no trains, no wheels required. Take part from wherever there's an internet connection and a device to receive it.

In celebration of Independence Day,Â take 20% off this workshopÂ from July 4-8!

King says:

The Surrealist painter Leonora Carrington once said, "We learn about the soul, and we have to listen to the soul." Just as some poets use music for inspiration, ekphrasis is not simply a description of an art work, but influenced by the art work and, sometimes, the artist's life.King's poetry class will focus on artists associated with the Surrealists, including Carrington, Leonor Fini, Frida Kahlo, Remedios Varo, and more.

Â Read more about this workshop inÂ The Boston Globe,Â San Francisco Gate, andÂ The Houston Chronicle, andÂ reserve your seatÂ today!

Philly Aughts Artifacts Pt. 3

Wed 4 Jul 2012

One thing that thrived in Philly in the Aughts was the idea of "multi-media": cross-generic work, ekphrastic poetry, paintings and portraits of poets by visual artists, etc. I have some artifacts I feel are worth sharing on this level:

This is a portrait of me painted by Philly painter Mary Harju in her studio on Spring Garden Street, '06-'07:

http://archive.org/details/portraitAdamFieledByMaryHarju

This is a "created" portrait, using a digital camera and photoshop, done by Matt Stevenson of me in 2005:

http://archive.org/details/portraitAdamFieledByMattStevenson

This is another "created" portrait, out of a photo taken at the Eris Temple, 52nd and Cedar, in 2010:

http://archive.org/details/portraitAdamFieledByMattStevenson_797

That, to me, is what distinguished Philly in the Aughts as an art locale: a heightened awareness of the possibility of hybridity and hybrids. I hope these are to your liking.

Happy 4th,
Adam Fieled [redacted]

VENUE CHANGE: Pusateri & Pierce in Philadelphia, Sun 7/8 @7pm

Wed 4 Jul 2012

Hello all,

Please note a new venue for this Sunday's Philly reading featuring myself, Michelle Naka Pierce, Jamime Fountaine and Kari Larsen. The new digs are as follows. We hope to see you there.

The Moonstone Arts Center
110A South 13th Street
Philadelphia, PA
More info at: http://jubilantthicket.blogspot.com/

Jamie Fountaine lives and writes in Philadelphia, where she is often found politely discussing her age and valid state-issued identification with the clerks at the liquor store.

Kari Larsen is the author of Say you're a fiction (Dancing Girl), the Black Telephone (Unthinkable Creatures), and Come as Your Madness (Birds of Lace). More information on these and other projects can be found at www.cold-rubies.com.

Michelle Naka Pierce was born in Japan. She is the author of seven titles, including She, A Blueprint (BlazeVOX, 2011) with art by Sue Hammond West and Symptom of Color (Dusie, 2011). Awarded the Poets Out Loud Editor's Prize, Continuous Frieze Bordering Red (Fordham UP, forthcoming 2012) documents the migratory patterns of the hybrid as she travels the floating borders in Rothko's Seagram murals. Pierce is associate professor and director of the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa University in Boulder, CO.

Chris Pusateri is the author of several books of poetry, including Common Time (Steerage Press, 2012), Molecularity (Dusie, 2011), Anon (BlazeVox, 2008) and North of There (Dusie, 2007). His poetry and critical prose has appeared in many periodicals, including American Letters & Commentary, Boston Review, Chicago Review, Denver Quarterly, Fence, Jacket, Verse and many others. A librarian by trade, he works in Denver, where he reviews new poetry and fiction titles for Library Journal and curates the Belmar Film Series, a free film program that showcases independent and foreign-language cinema.

Last Chance to Advertise in Boog City's Festival Program Issue
Thu 5 Jul 2012

Hi,

In just under a month, to mark our 21st anniversary, we'll be putting on our sixth annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival, featuring poets, musicians, political speakers, public radio personalities, and playwrights performing at two venues, in two boroughs, over four days, from Thurs. Aug. 2-Sun. Aug. 5.

For details on the over 70 poets, musical acts, political and radio talks; the seven poets theater plays; workshop; and panel, visit the facebook event link:

http://www.facebook.com/events/415332255184488/?ref=ts

About a week before the event, we'll be putting out the festival issue of Boog City. This issue will feature pieces on some of the performers and a full schedule, illustrated with images of each of the performers. Here's what lst year's looks like:

http://boogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc69.pdf

Advertising in the festival issue of Boog City means you will reach via our electronic and physical issues more than 5,500 readers, poetry lovers, and small press aficionados throughout the East Village, other targeted areas of lower Manhattan; Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn; and throughout the United States; as well as bonus distribution at Boog City events. That's an increase of 33.3% over our regular issues for no additional cost. And, since this issue is also a program for the festival, readers will give it a closer read as they check to see who's up later on that day and throughout the festival.

Boog City continues to offer our special Small Press Ad Rates. That means when you advertise with us you will save 50% off of our regular display ad rates.

* Half-Page $130
* Eighth-Page $40

Here is a link to our full rate card:

http://boogcity.com/adrates.pdf

As I mentioned in previous emails, Boog City focuses on getting the word out about lesser-known artists, be they poets, prose writers, musicians, painters, photographers, or cartoonists. Each month we publish poetry from the likes of Anselm Berrigan, Renee Gladman, Lisa Jarnot, Eileen Myles, Kristin Prevallet, and recent Pulitzer Prize winnr Tracy K. Smith, alongside our music section, small press book reviews, political commentary, art, comics, and photographs.

We look forward to working with you to bring your message to the local arts community to increase awareness and sales of your publications in the New York area and beyond.

as ever,
David

â€œPeople look at me and expect big things from my writing. They see a black gay guy with immigrant parents and think, Hereâ€™s someone with something to say. For a long time, before I discovered Beattie, I thought so, too. I tried to write about gay hospital visitation and the Eritrean-Ethiopian warâ€”admittedly, in the right hands, possibly great things to read about, but in my hands they were wrong. The characters fell flatâ€”oh, they fell real hardâ€”because they were merely vehicles for an agenda that wasnâ€™t mine. Still, I knew I had something to say, but whenever I tried to locate that inner voice, I heard only silence.â€ [5]Read more â€º Links: 5. http://www.theparisreview.org/blog/2012/06/21/the-difference-between-me-and-ann-beattie/?utm_source=newsletter0712&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=Beattie â€œBradbury wouldnâ€™t have made it today as a writer in New York; he was too rough, too raw, too tender. (He attributed to New York critics a â€˜terrible creative negativism.â€™) But Ray Bradbury, who never went to college and was entirely library educated, had what so many of the sophisticated, MFA-carrying writers today lack: passion, vitality, emotional awareness. And, maybe most admirably, he found a way to carry his imagination past the boundaries of childhood, where so many of us so often discard it.â€ [7]Read more â€º Links: 7. http://www.theparisreview.org/blog/2012/06/06/fact-checking-ray-bradbury/?utm_source=newsletter0712&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=BradburyFact â€œThe correct answer is probably that your friend should be secure in his tastes, find someone who loves him for who he is, and not worry about impressing anyone. The Claudius App 3

Thu 5 Jul 2012

The third issue of The Claudius App: a journal of fast poetry is now online at www.theclaudiusapp.com.

Contributors in the new issue include Nikki-Lee Birdsey, Brice Bogher, Macgregor Card, Lisa Cattrone, Corina Copp, Brandon Downing, Craig Dworkin, Judith Goldman, Diana Hamilton, Uyen Hua, Kent Johnson, Josef Kaplan, Joyelle McSweeney, Nour Mobarak, Jeff Nagy, Geoffrey G. O'Brien, Ariana Reines, Robert Sheppard, Daniel Tiffany, Alex Walton, Tomas Weber, and Simone White, with a splash by Emily Dorman and Ian Hatcher.

AMERICAN HANGOVER EDITION // Drive your great big Cadillac, gangsta whitewalls, with a diamond in the back to the editors at [redacted].

Save your life. Last night in the kingdom of ends and it IS ALL A HOT BECOMING medium anthemic hoping for it, love. Recollection’s yellow diamonds in the light is the only happy one, yellow DIAMONDS REPEATING, your recollecting that and loving it and willing to love it. Pill sex clockwork montage montage. Or at least, standing side by side the possible kind of love-repeater that is semiautomatic trigger shift and back from tragedy to farce, all new unhappy cases, hopeless in being not like some primary-hapax love loop infinity pool with piped-in chorus as your shadow crosses mine. What it takes to love is not disturbed by hope, but is it disturbed by love even. NO EXPRESS NO EXPRESS NO EXPRESS what it takes to come alive disturbed by hope is impossible, so how can we hope for the love it holds for us on a priori file in amber ice

SHOULD A SUITABLE position become available, returning all the bad stuff don't recoup it. When we find love in a hopeless place, do we find it there ALL HALF-UNWILLINGLY like Childe Roland who didn't sleep long enough for content to rearm an eponymous repetition or in spite of the going. Is there something in the ontological terroir or the Terror of the love that we find in a hopeless place that renders even it ineluctably hopeless. And then do we know when we find the love that we are in have gone to a hopeless place or is finding the love there that sign, lasciate is the love portable, can we take it with us is the question repeating it above THE CHORUS, NOW SCREAMING it but no one can hear. What hope is there for a love so found when commitment in contingency is the sawbuck where we love to work our hope, where hopefully thinking as far as possible to what extent I can from the impossible position one-step removed from my own life which is hopeless is love which is hopeless my heart leaping out of its chest

Readings around NYC this July?

Fri 6 Jul 2012

Hi Amy,

I wonder if you'
Any worthwhile / fitting listings?

Hi Amy,

I wonder if you'd mind me emailing about a different topic from our work? I'm teaching "Critical Reading and Writing (Poetry)" this summer, and the class meets for this month of July. My students are reading poetry and theoretical works critically and also writing about them--it's sort of a hybrid class between Intro to Lit Theory and Intro to Poetry...

One of the assignments is that they attend a poetry-related event around town this month. Would you know of any others by chance? I know there's some lunchtime events at the MoMA and so forth, but can't find any listings. My students are smart, but like many students, they need a bit of help navigating around city events!

AN EVENING OF POETRY AND STORYTELLING WITH BURT KIMMELMAN & DIANE SIMMONS

22 July, Sunday - 7:30 PM

DIANE SIMMONS' short story collection, Little America, won the 2010 Ohio State University prize for fiction. Her story, Yukon River, was a runner-up for the 2010 Missouri Review Editor's Prize. Her novel, Dreams Like Thunder, won the Oregon Book Award for Fiction. Along with another novel, she has published critical books on Maxine Hong Kingston, Jamaica Kincaid, and popular British Imperial writing. She grew up on the high desert country of Eastern Oregon. After a career in journalism in the West, she moved to New York City, where she teaches at the City University of New York. Other short fiction has appeared in journals such as Beloit Fiction Review, Blood Orange Review and Northwest Review. Read more about Simmons at DianeSimmons.net<http://www.dianesimmons.net/>.

BURT KIMMELMAN's seventh collection of poems is The Way We Live (Dos Madres Press, 2011). He has also published five books of literary criticism, including The "Winter Mind": William Bronk and American Letters (1998) and scores of essays on medieval, modern and contemporary poetry. "Taking Dinner to My Mother," a poem from his collection As If Free (Talisman House, 2009), was featured on NPR's The Writer's Almanac. Recent interviews of Kimmelman are available online: with Tom Fink in Jacket2 (text) and with George Spencer at Poetry Thin Air (video). More on Kimmelman can be found, most recently, at "Burt Kimmelman: A Survey" (critical commentary and poetry samples selected by Karl Young, a part of his Light & Dust Poetry Anthology), and at BurtKimmelman.com<http://www.burtkimmelman.com/>. He teaches at New Jersey Institute of Technology.

Arpeggio

When I reach my cabin fifteen minutes later, a rust-coloured deer is standing right in fron of it as if waiting for me. When she sees that I see her, she runs into the woods. I resent her all month for appearing at such a clumsily symbolic moment, on that is unusable in writing, as if to taunt me, she doesnt show herself again. Sarah Manguso

1.

Le Chantecleur or coq, au vin. Dipping my feet at the edge of the lake. Pascale tells me the hotel poisons the lake, pours liquid in. Im indignant in orange lifejacket. Wet curls. We found no evidence.

I lose my contacts in the lake. The fish mumble. Wake from water blur faced and metal.

To next fleur, chanson or chocolaterie. A cake my family ate in square portions, Cadix. The baker moves away and wont teach the new owners how to make it. We adjust our palette. Settle for butterflies on chocolate crisp. Le Papillion.

Not simply some acres of snow.

Lake swans, lake boats, only thats not here thats there. Thats a ride at some park. Here there are paddleboats. My feet get hit if Im not paying attention. I pretend swans.

I have never been on a train.

Late songs on the deck. Leaves, the yard spreads. A table of water.

Bare back to wood.

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Light on the Lion's Face” by Tim Van Dyke

Wed 11 Jul 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œLight on the Lion's Faceâ€ by Tim Van Dyke
Description:
The poems in Tim Van Dyke's â€œLight on the Lion's Faceâ€ are composed in conjunction with Jean Baudrillard's book, â€œSeductionâ€, often using fragments from the text as architecture for the poems. The other two architectural concepts are the Shivite myth of KÄ«rttimukha (or "Face of Glory"), a story about a ravenous lion eating its own body, and the stylistic renderings and fragments of Aime Cesaire. Tim Van Dyke uses these three points of departure to fashion a new sensibility about the body, love, seduction, society, and the continued relevance of myth and ritual.

Drunken Boat Position Openings

Wed 11 Jul 2012

Drunken Boat, international online journal of the arts [http://www.drunkenboat.com], is looking for a Director of Development, an Assistant Managing Editor, and a Blogger. The magazine is in production of its 16th issue now in the process of moving to a triquartely format. All three positions, save the first, are unpaid and done on an in kind basis, though there is ample opportunity to contribute editorially to the magazine's vision and to Drunken Boat Media which will be publishing its second book, Lisa Russ Spaar's "The Hide-and-Seek Muse," taken from a year's worth of her columns for the Chronicle of Higher Education in Spring 2013. If you are interested in any of the positions described below, please email [[redacted]] with the requisite materials.

Director of Development - Drunken Boat is a 501(c)(3) non-profit arts organization that seeks someone with the expertise to help with capacity building, foundation support, promotional campaigns and grant writing. We have a new and eminent Advisory Board, listed at http://www.drunkenboat.com/db15/board, and part of the position would be to coordinate with them on editorial projects in development. This position will be renumerated with a modest stipend and a percentage of the support received. Previous successful grant writing accomplishment will be seriously considered. Please email a copy of your CV and cover letter to [[redacted]].

Assistant Managing Editor - work closely with the Managing Editor on the day-to-day operations of the magazine, including arts outreach, dialogue with contributors, project solicitation and staff collaboration. 5-10 hours a week time commitment (depending on proximity to production). Ample opportunity to move within the organization and to workly closely with the Managing Editor on a variety of disparate tasks related to online and print publishing, performance production and editorial management. Please email a CV and cover letter to [[redacted]].

Blogger - contribute to Drunken Boat's blog on a weekly or monthly level, writing on a subjects ranging from new media to poetics. Chance to promote articles of interest to our readership. Those who are comfortable with Word Press and who regularly use mixed media as part of their social media life are a plus. Please email a cover letter and a writing sample, that can be a link to a blog or something pithy or piquant that you have written to [[redacted]].

Thanks for helping support the arts online.

The Last Collaboration - Martha Deed

Wed 11 Jul 2012

The Last Collaboration by Martha Deed with Millie Niss, originally published online by Furtherfield.org/friendsofspork is now available in book form through Amazon in the US and the UK.

Amazon has activated the "Look Inside" feature so you can have a peak.

Call it â€œa demonstration/ project,â€ as the opening to this collaboration suggests, by two authors, Martha Deed, a mother accompanying Millie Niss, her daughter, to doctors and hospitals, which is to say from one medical disaster to the next, till the daughter is dead and the mother is left with the heart-breaking task of burying the daughter and completing the project. The result is a back and forth from present to past, through diaries, emails, drawings, poems, medical reports, and handwritten notes, sorting to find out and be clobbered with the errors that led relentlessly to the death. Those who have been there will appreciate Deedâ€™s conveying the words and images in the chaotic way they come at us and we sort them. Those who have not been there will be convinced. All of us will learn, thanks to Nissâ€™s courage to keep writing and to Deedâ€™s clear-headedness in meaningfully finishing what must have been a painful, mind-boggling task.

âˆ’ Diane Kendig, author of The Places We Find Ourselves

If anyone would like to review this mixed-media book, please contact me backchannel.

Thanks,
Martha

reminder: rob's new editing service: poetry manuscript reading, editing, evaluation

Fri 13 Jul 2012

For a few years now, I've offered a one-on-one poetry editing/evaluation service, and have decided to expand.

I'm STILL offering, to anyone interested, evaluation, editing and otherwise help with shaping a poetry manuscript for potential publication. I'd be thinking a series of back-and-forths, including notes, questions and revisions. $200 for a manuscript up to 100 pages, or $250 for up to 150 pages.

If you are interested, send me an email at [redacted].

It has been a while since I've run poetry workshops at Collected Works Bookstore and Coffeebar, but I've run nearly a dozen poetry workshops at the store over the past decade, and run other workshops and manuscript evaluations through my Writer-in-Residence position at the University of Alberta (2007-8), through Encounters with Canada, and as part of the (late, lamented) Ottawa Valley Book Festival, as well as editing numerous books over the years for Broken Jaw Press, Vehicule Press, Insomniac Press and Black Moss Press, and my own Chaudiere Books and above/ground press.

There's always a possibility that I might offer another poetry workshop. Keep an eye either on this space or http://www.bywords.ca/ for future announcements.

"Inspired by the principles of the traditional Japanese tea ceremony, MKMT is a direct response to Pop art and its aftershocks, in that the separation between the art work and the viewer, is non-existent. People become the art that they are witnessing. Dividing lines disappear. The viewer is an essential component, rather than a passive consumer of the work."

Hi All,

Im interested in picking up one or two freshman comp classes for fall. If anyone's department needs someone last minute, will you let me know? I am interested in some place within an hour commute of Greenpoint Brooklyn. I have six years high experience and three years freshman comp experience, two books, awards and all that jazz. I would actually prefer to teach a disabilities studies class, but I know those are hard to come by.

-- Pavement Saw Press Transcontinental Award 2012 Submission Guidelines ----

You can submit directly to the website at:
http://www.pavementsaw.org/pages/transaward.htm

--This award is for first or second full length books--

All contributors receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Please mention this to your friends and all others who might be interested!

Electronic and mailed entries must meet these requirements: 1. The manuscript should be at least 48 pages of poetry and no more than 70 pages of poetry in length. Separations between sections are NOT a part of the page count. 2. A one page cover letter. Include a brief biography, the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. This should be followed by a page which lists publication acknowledgments for the book. For each acknowledgement mention the publisher (journal, anthology, chapbook etc.) and the poem published. 3. The manuscript should be bound with a single clip and begin with a title page including the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. 4. The second page should have only the title of the manuscript. There are to be no acknowledgments or mention of the author's name from this page forward. Submissions to the contest are blind judged. 5. There should be no more than one poem on each page. The manuscript can contain pieces longer than one page. 6. The manuscript should be paginated, beginning with the first page of poetry.

Each year Pavement Saw Press will publish at least one book of poetry and/or prose poems from manuscripts received during this competition. Selections are chosen through a blind judging process. The competition is open to anyone who has not previously published one, or more than one, volume of poetry or prose poetry. The author receives $1000 and five percent of the 1000 copy press run. Previous judges have included Judith Vollmer, David Bromige, Bin Ramke and Howard McCord. This year David Baratier will be the judge; past students, Pavement Saw Press interns and employees are not allowed to submit. All poems must be original, all prose must be original, fiction or translations are not acceptable. All writers without a full length book or those who have published only one full length book are eligible. Writers who have had a second volume of poetry and/or prose poetry under 40 pages printed or printed in limited editions of no more than 500 copies are also eligible. Submissions are accepted during the months of June, July, and until August 15th. All submissions must have a Monday, August 15th, 2012, or earlier, postmark. This is an award for first or second books only.

If you wish to send via regular mail your manuscript should be accompanied by a check in the amount of $20.00 made payable to Pavement Saw Press. All US contributors to the contest will receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Add $3 (US) for other countries to cover the extra postal charge. Do not include an SASE for notification of results, this information will be sent with the free book. Do not send the only copy of your work. All manuscripts are recycled and individual comments on the manuscripts cannot be made. Entry Fee: $20 for mailed US and Canadian entries, $23 for mailed overseas entries, $27 to submit electronically (all entries, world wide).

If you wish to submit electronically, you should send $27.00 via paypal to [redacted]. We will then send you an e-mail confirmation as well as where to e-mail the manuscript. Electronic submissions need to be sent as PDF files or as word (.doc) files. Other formats are not accepted. The extra cost is to cover the paypal fees as well as the time, labor, ink, and so on, to print out your manuscript. In addition to the prize winner, sometimes another anonymous manuscript is chosen, if enough entries arrive. This â€œeditors choiceâ€ manuscript will be published under a standard royalty contract. A decision will be reached in December or January. Entries should be sent to:

Port Townsend Writers' Conference, Washington Events

Sat 14 Jul 2012

Friends, I'll be in Port Townsend, Washington as afternoon faculty this coming week (July 15th through the 22nd).

I'm teaching the following workshops Monday through Saturday (descriptions below): Hybrid Forms/Mongrel Selves; Art as a Point of Departure; Contrapuntal Collaboration; Writing with Scientific Thought; & The Sensual Infrastructure Between the Abstract and Concrete.

Check out the schedule, and please pass along to friends, colleagues, and students that you think might be interested. It looks to be a very full week at Centrum.

http://centrum.org/writers-conference-schedule-afternoon-workshop-faculty/

Best, Deborah Poe
www.deborahpoe.com

* The Sensual Infrastructure: Between the Abstract and Concrete* As prose and poetry writers, we will reflect on how one can improve writing by way of deftly balancing abstract and concrete language. By weaving abstract and concrete language through spatial description and sensory details, readers are able to connect to stories and poems more deeply. We'll consider how bridging the abstract and tangible does not merely provide a descriptive function. Such bridging engages readers more directly intellectually, psychologically and emotionally with the importance of your work. This year's focus will be on fiction.

Writing with Scientific Thought We will reflect on how one can use science to inspire creative writing. By looking at writing samples from such writers as Arthur Sze, Czeslaw Milosz, Primo Levi, Italo Calvino, Andrea Barrett, Bernadette Mayer, and Rikki Ducornet, we'll consider how established writers use scientific ideas in their own work. Though our focus is not an introduction of scientific terms per se, we will use scientific thought as launching pads for creative writing, generating work during the workshop. The workshop is designed to provide new channels to access new work. This year's focus will be on fiction.

Contrapuntal Collaboration

There are three major definitions of contrapuntal. It's the melody added as accompaniment to a given melody or 'plain-song'. Contrapuntal refers also to the art of adding one or more melodies as accompaniment to a given melody or 'plain-song' according to certain fixed rules (the style of composition in which melodies are thus combined). Contrapuntal can also mean a combination of two types of rhythm in a line of verse. Palestinian-American critical theorist Edward Said, himself a pianist and music critic, wrote extensively about how literature can be contrapuntal. We will talk a little bit about how literature might be contrapuntal. We will focus on writing pieces that possess a keen attentiveness to prose rhythms, poetry's musicality, and the contrapuntal. We will focus on ways in which thinking about the contrapuntal during our creative process might impact the meaningfulness of our work.

Art as a Point of Departure

What is the difference between using art as a point of departure versus ekphrastic writing—writing that describes artwork? What is ekphrastic poetry? What is not? If you use different mediums—film, other books, sound art—how does that change the use of art as a point of departure? In this workshop, we will reflect on the use of art as an instigator for new work. But we will contemplate how the joining of ideas, research, ideas of the artist, and a focus on various mediums can produce different kinds of pieces than straight ekphrastic poetry.

Hybrid Forms/Mongrel Selves

In this workshop we'll use the words hybridity to think about creating pieces that embrace multiple genres at once: prose poems, flash fiction, narrative that looks like poetry, etc. Some examples from which we might discuss excerpts include: Maggie Nelson's Bluets, Natasha Tretheway's Beyond Katrina, Akilah Oliver's A Toast in the House of Friends, Rebecca Brown's Excerpts from a Family Medical Dictionary, and Anne Carson's * Plainwater*.

Memorial reading for James Harvey
Mon 16 Jul 2012

Veer Books / Xing the Line / Writers Forum Workshop (New Series) and The Blue Bus have come together to celebrate the life and poetry of James Harvey, who died last month. This memorial reading will take place in London, UK at Birkbeck College on Thursday 19th July, from 18.00-21.00. The address is Keynes Library, Birkbeck Centre for Poetics, School of Arts, 43 Gordon Square, London WC1H 0PD. (When you come in to the foyer, ask the person on the front desk who will give directions – it’s a room on the first floor overlooking the square.) Readers/performers will include Carol Watts, Will Rowe, James Wilkes, matt martin, Jeff Hilson, Holly Pester, Michael Zand, Stephen Emmerson, Juliet Troy, John Gibbens, Keith Jebb, David Miller, Antony John, Edward Carey, Peter Philpott, S J Fowler, Elizabeth Guthrie, and The Children (Armorel Weston and John Gibbens).

Please note that this is a free event.

James Harvey James Harvey (1966–2012) studied biology at UCL before becoming a full-time poet in the thriving experimental and innovative poetry community in London . His interest in science, especially biology, extended into his poetry. James took part in a forum discussion with Rae Armantrout, Amy Catanzano, John Cayley, Tina Darragh, Marcella Durand, Allen Fisher, Peter Middleton, Evelyn Reilly and Joan Retallack on the interaction of poetry and science, hosted by Jacket 2. He was fascinated by the potential of 'science in poetry to dismantle existing structures, and then put them back together again, build them up "mechanically" while at the same time each level of complexity is acted upon equally through "the forces of nature," questioning the integrity of the structure.' The importance of ecology in his work is evident in one of his best poems, 'Mackerelling'. This was published in Veer Away (Veer 2007) and subsequently became his first book (Intercapillary Editions 2009). The poem 'is a movement through water ... an exercise in naming as pattern'. As James explained: 'Marguerite White sent me cardboard cuttings out in the shapes of sea birds she had used for one of her installations, I had been watching David Attenborough's The Blue Planet and the idea for the poem came shortly after. At the back of my mind was also Bob Cobbing's poem "alphabet of californian fishes" ... one of my favourite poems.' James was a regular at Writers Forum Workshop and many of his poems have a strong visual element, showing Cobbing's influence. Part of his poem 'Living Rock Ode' (in Freaklung 2010) included a diagram of a marine plankton that he sounded when reading the poem. James read in honour of Jennifer Pike-Cobbing in 2010 with his work featuring in AND13 (Writers Forum 2010) produced to mark the event. Later he was part of Writers Forum Workshop (New Series), his work appearing in its first publication (Writers Forearm 2011). Veer published a chapbook Temporary Structures in 2009 and included his work in Veer Off (2008) and Veer About (2011) in addition to Veer Away. He was published in the Openned magazine (2006) and Openned Issues 2006-07 (2008). In 2009, Openned brought out an e-pamphlet, Parts Composers, and Kater Murr's press published a broadsheet From Marx's Capital. James was featured in the anthology In the Company of Poets (Hearing Eye 2003). James's readings in London included the Blue Bus in 2008 with Nina Zivancevic and Vahni Capildeo and in 2010 with Harriet Tarlo, David Miller and Ken White. He read at Crossing the Line in 2009 with James Wilkes, Jon Clay, Antony John and Out to Lunch. James was also part of a group of poets who travelled to Newcastle upon Tyne to celebrate Barry MacSweeney in a reading at Morden Tower in 2010. James read from his Japheth series, written in collaboration with Edinburgh-based poet Jow Lindsay. Other work appeared in Herbarium (2011), also with an associated reading, or were published online in Greatworks and Jacket, with work also appearing in Brittle Star magazine, Poetry Salzburg Review and the Morning Star.

NYC/ Boog City Distribution Help Needed

Tue 17 Jul 2012

Hi,

I'm looking for someone who has access to a vehicle and might be game to distribute our forthcoming issue of Boog City. The paper would need to be distributed next week, either Thurs. July 26, Fri. July 27, or Sat. July 28, preferably Thursday, though any of the days are doable.

The papers would be picked up at our printed in Long Island City and distributed along our route in Williamsburg and Greenpoint, Brooklyn (with one stop in Prospect Heights), as well as the East Village and other points in lower Manhattan.

For more details and payment information please email me at [redacted] or call 212-842-BOOG (2664).

Thanks,
David

Tons of new awesomeness at Unlikely Stories: Episode IV and Unlikely Books!

Tue 17 Jul 2012

Happy mid-July, vipers, roosters, and others! It strikes me that this week marks 14 years of publication of /Unlikely Stories/, in one form or another. Don't let it happen to you.

Thanks to the particular efforts of new Art Director Jeremy Hight, we've got a great new multimedia issue up for you at /Unlikely Stories, Episode IV/! But first check out the latest release from Unlikely Books: /guttural silk make new gong/, a chapbook by j/j hastain. This hot little tome is available from Unlikely Books for just $5, or as a free downloadable .pdf! Check it out at http://www.UnlikelyStories.org/unlikely_books/ !

And at http://www.UnlikelyStories.org/ , we've got:
Sweet Visual Art by Jeffrey Vallance, Aimee Jones, and Joy Garnett
"The Human Mystery," a movie-story-game by Alan Bigelow /Terrible Bonnett/, an EP from musician-slash-sound artist Philippe André Landry
"Love Has Been Liquidated" by John Bryan, a 66-section choose-your-own-adventure /A Bride Stripped Bare by Her Bachelors, even/ role-playing prose poem, in which you can play the near-helpless mute in a completely fucked epistolary romance. and Jonathan Penton (that's me) interviews the aforementioned Bryan

It is enjoyable, so go enjoy!

(And don't worry, my fowl friends. Those snakes are only after your eggs.)

A short video about Aleph Null
Wed 18 Jul 2012

About Aleph Null: http://vispo.com/aleph/video

This is a short video I put together about Aleph Null. Aleph Null is color music. No audio. It's an online, generative, interactive, open source visual work written in JavaScript using the HTML5 canvas tag. No plugin required.

I showed Aleph Null recently in Paris at the Sorbonne at their And Now conference on "innovative writing". There was a panel of three scholars who presented papers on Aleph Null. And myself; I presented Aleph Null.

Aleph Null was also presented recently at the Electronic Literature Organization conference in West Virginia. Again, three scholars--Leo Flores, Giovanna Di Rosario, and Mark Marino--presented papers on Aleph Null and I presented the piece--only this time I couldn't be there so they played this video which I made about Aleph Null.

Aleph Null will also be presented in Boston at the 2013 MLA in an exhibition of electronic literature curated by Dene Grigar and Kathi Inman Berens.

You might ask yourself why Aleph Null, which is primarily a visual piece, not a 'literary' piece, has attracted such attention within specifically literary communities. The 'And Now' conference is concerned with "innovative writing" and the two other venues I mentioned are concerned with electronic literature. Whatever your answer, the interest in Aleph Null in these writerly venues has triggered interesting discussion about the relation of such a piece to poetry and the writerly.

The Philly Free School was a multi-media artists co-op which operated from 2004 to 2006. It involved a range of artists involved in a range of endeavors, from photography to painting to serious literature to rock music. It was geographically based in Center City Philadelphia, and operated out of the Highwire Gallery in the Gilbert Building on the PAFA campus, among other venues. These photos were taken by and of Free School participants, though the dates range from years before and after the precise tenure of the existence of the Free School as a cohesive entity:

The Ludington Building
1104 South Wabash Avenue

The Harriet Reading Series presents Will Alexander and Andrew Joron, two poets whose writing explores the dominion of surrealism projected through the lens of science fiction. Radically experimental, rapturous, and estranging, Joron and Alexander find ways of sounding the impossible through language warped in its lyrical turnings. Two short films by video artist Adam Shecter that venture into pixelated zones on the hither side of the real will also be presented.

This event is one of many that are part of the 2012 Printersâ€™ Ball.
6-11pm! Free and open to everyone!
Full schedule at http://www.printersball.org

Join thousands of readers, writers, and artists from around the planet for the greatest literary party in the galaxyâ€”a one-night supernova of books, magazines, and otherworldly ink on paper, distributed freely; live music, readings, and other performances; letterpress, papermaking, and bookbinding demonstrations; plus even more.

85. Kimmelman, Burt
Sunday in LA -- Simmons & Kimmelman at Beyond Baroque, 7:30
Fri 20 Jul 2012

An Evening of Poetry and Storytelling with Burt Kimmelman & Diane Simmons

22 July, Sunday - 7:30 PM

DIANE SIMMONS' short story collection, Little America, won the 2010 Ohio State University prize for fiction. Her story, Yukon River, was a runner-up for the 2010 Missouri Review Editor's Prize. Her novel, Dreams Like Thunder, won the Oregon Book Award for Fiction. Along with another novel, she has published critical books on Maxine Hong Kingston, Jamaica Kincaid, and popular British Imperial writing. She grew up on the high desert country of Eastern Oregon. After a career in journalism in the West, she moved to New York City, where she teaches at the City University of New York. Other short fiction has appeared in journals such as Beloit Fiction Review, Blood Orange Review and Northwest Review. Read more about Simmons at DianeSimmons.net<http://www.dianesimmons.net/>.

BURT KIMMELMAN's seventh collection of poems is The Way We Live (Dos Madres Press, 2011). He has also published five books of literary criticism, including The "Winter Mind": William Bronk and American Letters (1998) and scores of essays on medieval, modern and contemporary poetry. "Taking Dinner to My Mother," a poem from his collection As If Free (Talisman House, 2009), was featured on NPR's The Writer's Almanac. Recent interviews of Kimmelman are available online: with Tom Fink in Jacket2 (text) and with George Spencer at Poetry Thin Air (video). More on Kimmelman can be found, most recently, at

"Burt Kimmelman: A Survey" (critical commentary and poetry samples selected by Karl Young, a part of his Light & Dust Poetry Anthology), and at BurtKimmelman.com<http://www.burtkimmelman.com/>. He teaches at New Jersey Institute of Technology.

Come by to say hello!

87. David Baratier
Pavement Saw Press Transcontinental Award 2012 Guides
Fri 20 Jul 2012

-- Pavement Saw
Here's a re-send, the last came out as a text blob

-- Pavement Saw Press Transcontinental Award 2012 Submission Guidelines ----

You can submit directly to the website at:
http://www.pavementsaw.org/pages/transaward.htm

--This award is for first or second full length books--

All contributors receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Please mention this to your friends and all others who might be interested!

Electronic and mailed entries must meet these requirements: 1. The manuscript should be at least 48 pages of poetry and no more than 70 pages of poetry in length. Separations between sections are NOT a part of the page count. 2. A one page cover letter. Include a brief biography, the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address.

This should be followed by a page which lists publication acknowledgments for the book. For each acknowledgement mention the publisher (journal, anthology, chapbook etc.) and the poem published. 3. The manuscript should be bound with a single clip and begin with a title page including the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. 4. The second page should have only the title of the manuscript. There are to be no acknowledgments or mention of the author's name from this page forward. Submissions to the contest are blind judged. 5. There should be no more than one poem on each page. The manuscript can contain pieces longer than one page. 6. The manuscript should be paginated, beginning with the first page of poetry.

Each year Pavement Saw Press will publish at least one book of poetry and/or prose poems from manuscripts received during this competition. Selections are chosen through a blind judging process. The competition is open to anyone who has not previously published one, or more than one, volume of poetry or prose poetry. The author receives $1000 and five percent of the 1000 copy press run. Previous judges have included Judith Vollmer, David Bromige, Bin Ramke and Howard McCord. This year David Baratier will be the judge; past students, Pavement Saw Press interns and employees are not allowed to submit. All poems must be original, all prose must be original, fiction or translations are not acceptable. All writers without a full length book or those who have published only one full length book are eligible. Writers who have had a second volume of poetry and/or prose poetry under 40 pages printed or printed in limited editions of no more than 500 copies are also eligible. Submissions are accepted during the months of June, July, and until August 15th. All submissions must have a Monday, August 15th, 2012, or earlier, postmark. This is an award for first or second books only.

If you wish to send via regular mail your manuscript should be accompanied by a check in the amount of $20.00 made payable to Pavement Saw Press. All US contributors to the contest will receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Add $3 (US) for other countries to cover the extra postal charge. Do not include an SASE for notification of results, this information will be sent with the free book. Do not send the only copy of your work. All manuscripts are recycled and individual comments on the manuscripts cannot be made. Entry Fee: $20 for mailed US and Canadian entries, $23 for mailed overseas entries, $27 to submit electronically (all entries, world wide).

If you wish to submit electronically, you should send $27.00 via paypal to [redacted]. We will then send you an e-mail confirmation as well as where to e-mail the manuscript. Electronic submissions need to be sent as PDF files or as word (.doc) files. Other formats are not accepted. The extra cost is to cover the paypal fees as well as the time, labor, ink, and so on, to print out your manuscript. In addition to the prize winner, sometimes another anonymous manuscript is chosen, if enough entries arrive. This â€œeditors choiceâ€ manuscript will be published under a standard royalty contract. A decision will be reached in December or January. Entries should be sent to:

88. Paul Nelson
Poetry Postcard Project
Fri 20 Jul 2012

---

for those of you familiar with the August Poetry
From Brendan McBreen:

for those of you familiar with the August Poetry Postcard series (http://poetrypostcards.blogspot.com/) you may know that it was started by Paul Nelson then passed to Lana Ayers but this year Lana is busy with school work (fiction writing) and other projects

so I have been asked to compile the mailing lists this year for those not familiar the August Poetry Postcard fest works as such: each participant receives a list of 31 names and addresses of other poets and each day in August you write a poem on a postcard and send it to the person that follows your name on the list so if you are number 4 on the list you start by mailing a postcard poem to number 5, and when you get to 31 you loop back to 1, 2, and 3 the idea is to respond to a postcard and poem you receive but send the response to the next person on the list and the others on the list will do the same in past years we have had participants from all over the globe, so be sure to be aware of international postage if it applies to your list you can collect the postcards you send from anywhere, drug stores are good, Goodwill is a good place to find postcards, some people create their own postcards too, nice postcards are nice but the poetry is the purpose also it is usually a good idea to begin sending postcards on the last few days of July just to be sure that people receive their cards by August finally!

for those who wish to participate:
please email your name and mailing address and email address at [redacted] include August Postcard Poetry in the subject line (deadline 7.25.12, fest starts 7.27.12)

please note that I will not use any addresses for any reason other than this year's Poetry Postcard fest and I urge everyone else to do likewise

Thank you!

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Symphony No. 7" by Ric Carfagna.

Fri 20 Jul 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œSymphony No. 7â€ by Ric Carfagna.
Description:
â€œSymphony No.7â€ is a poetic meditation on the passage of time. Each of its eighty-eight numbered sections begins by isolating and framing an image of a moment resonating through an empirically based terrestrial reality. Here it is known that each moment is subject to the quantum flux of an observing mindâ€™s cognitive awareness, and thus, each moment presented evolves according to the indeterminate and mutable potentialities inherent in the nature of its existence moving through an experientially perceived corporeal realm.

"Philly Free School" on Flickr

Sun 22 Jul 2012

Between 2004 and 2006, me and several other artists ran the Philly Free School, a multi-media artists co-op which staged large art gatherings and performances in Philadelphia and New York, in venues like the Highwire Gallery and the Khyber (Philly) and the Bowery Poetry Club (NYC).

This Flickr set includes paintings, photographs, portraits, and landmarks associated with the Free School group. Participants include myself, Mary Harju, Abby Heller-Burnham, Mike Land, Nick Gruberg, Jeremy Eric Tenenbaum, the Nooses, Golden Ball, Lucky Dragons, ElektroWorx, John Van Zandt, Loren Hunt, and others.

How nice to see "claptrap:, a word not enough used nowadays (we sure need it). The condescension in that piece of claptrap is indeed mind boggling; for better advice, see Jonathan Williams's sundry pieces to various aspirants -- advice which actually IS useful, clear and well-written, as well as genuinely friendly.

SMALL PRESS COLLECTION AT ENDICOTT COLLEGE

BEVERLY, MASS.

Doug Holder, Adjunct Instructor of English and head of the office of the Ibbetson Street Press at Endicott College (Beverly, Mass.) has started a small press book collection with the help of Brian Courtemanche Director of Endicott's Halle Library, and his staff: Audrey Koke and Kristyl Roderiques. Holder, a widely published poet, and arts editor of The Somerville News, has long run his own lauded independent small press and literary magazine "Ibbetson Street" from his home in Somerville, Mass. Holder has long admired the great small press collections at the University of Buffalo and Brown University, and has always wanted to bring books of poetry, novels, etc..from the vast and eclectic sea of independent presses from this country and abroad to Endicott College. The Library's website now has a link to the collection: http://www.endicott.edu/Academics/AcadResources/~/media/LibraryMediaLibrary/PDFs/Ibbetson.ashx and it will be updated twice a year. The books listed so far are only a small portion of the books received.

We hope to have an extensive collection and we would love for you to be part of it. Send your donations to :

In my assessment, in the letter to the young writer who has sent him a manuscript F. Scott Fitzgerald is stating eloquently the painful process by which he believes a young writer of fiction can produce a work of value. How is this "paternalistic claptrap"? I believe you need to state your own arguments about this eloquently, or even reassess your reaction. But you now going to call ME "paternalistic" [sigh]

Re: Norma Cole / C.J. Martin broadside from Further Other Book Works

Sun 22 Jul 2012

Hi everyone,

I wanted to let people know about the broadside Norma Cole & I have just completed that is now available. I asked for artwork, Norma sent a collage (named for a book by another wonderful poet/collagist, Tom Raworth), and I responded w/a July poem. You can view the broadside & find purchasing info here: http://martin-cj.tumblr.com/post/27626272991/this-is-the-first-in-a-series-of-broadsides .

Julia Drescher & I are launching a new fine press imprint called Further Other Book Works, and this broadside is part of a series that I'm hoping will allow us to raise some funds for the books we have lined up. More on future titles later, but if you can purchase a broadside, it would be a big help. They're ink jet prints (17"x22"). The edition size is 25, so there aren't that many to go around. We're asking $40 + $8 shipping (if you're outside of the continental US, shipping will be more). If you're interested and would rather not use the paypal link on the page above, feel free to mail a check (made out to me) to 200 W 55 1/2 St., Austin, TX, 78751. Please feel free to contact me w/any questions.

Yours,
C.J. Martin

Subject: Re: Useful for professors of creative writing?

In my assessment, in the letter to the young writer who has sent him a manuscript F. Scott Fitzgerald is stating eloquently the painful process by which he believes a young writer of fiction can produce a work of value. How is this "paternalistic claptrap"? I believe you need to state your own arguments about this eloquently, or even reassess your reaction. But you now going to call ME "paternalistic" [sigh]

Red Rover Series
{readings that play with reading}

Experiment #55:
Reading Is (Not) Performance

SATURDAY, JULY 28th
7pm / doors lock 7:30pm

Featuring:
Meg Duguid
Carron Little Carole McCurdy
s.g. murthy

at Outer Space Studio
1474 N. Milwaukee Ave
Chicago, Illinois
suggested donation $4 logistics -- near CTA Damen blue line third floor walk up not wheelchair accessible

MEG DUGUID believes that documentation is paramount to her art making and is invested in the ways documentation and art can be integrated in a single practice. She has performed/exhibited at the Museum of Contemporary Art, the Hyde Park Art Center, Macyâ€™s on State Street in Chicago, the DUMBO Arts Festival in Brooklyn, and 667 Shotwell in San Francisco. Duguid has screened work at Synthetic Zero in New York, Spiderbug in Chicago, and at the Last Supper Festival in Brooklyn. From 2009-2011, she ran Clutch Gallery, a 25 square-inch white cube located in the heart of her purse, since then she lends her purse to others to curate and carry.

CARRON LITTLE is an inter-disciplinary artist working in performance and installation. Little devises interactive pieces with costume, sculpture and spoken word. Little received a First Class BA (hons) from Goldsmiths' College, London University, U.K. in 1996 and her MFA from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago in 1999. In 2000 she became artist in resident for the British Arts Council. From 2003 to 2009 Carron worked with the artist collective Art Not War and Red Velvet Curtain Club devising site-specific performances and exhibitions. Carron coordinates Out of Site, Chicago which is a public performance series in Wicker Park and Bucktown. See http://www.carronlittle.org.

CAROLE MCCURDY has performed at spaces including the Chicago Cultural Center, Defibrillator Gallery, Epiphany Dance, Hamlin Park, High Concept Laboratories, Links Hall, and the Museum of Contemporary Art. She has created solo performance pieces and work for ensemble, danced in butoh pieces with Nicole Legetteâ€™s Blushing Poppy, and worked with a talented array of Chicago improvisers and devisers.

S.G. MURTHY lives life interweaving desires for systemic positive change with devotion to family as an international arts educator traveling the world with her jazz musician partner, teen-aged daughter and two cats. Fluctuating between situations of austere focus and a carnivalesque multiplicity, murthyâ€™s work employs an interdisciplinary approach of critical pedagogy, sustained research, and keen observations of the cinematic within everyday surroundings. Winning numerous awards: Franklin Furnace Fund for Performance, Rockefeller nominee, Illinois Arts Fellowship etc. murthy has exhibited nationally and internationally: Beyond Borders Performance Festival, Myanmar; Sapphos, Taiwan; The Kitchen, NYC; The Substation, Singapore; SXSW Festival; etc.

UPCOMING
Saturday, August 25th @ 7pm
Featuring: Amy Babinec, Michael Babinec, Andrew Cantrell, Scott Foley, Julia Gibbs, Jennifer Karmin, Dan Paz, Casey Smallwood, Danny Volk, Marilyn Volkman & Scott Waitukaitis

Experiment #56:
Pedestrian Speech Acts
guest curated by Andrew Cantrell

Pedestrian Speech Acts will document and continue an ongoing project of walking concrete poems on the surface of Chicago. The project began in November 2011 with a group of Chicago artists, writers, academics, and filmmakers jointly walking the one-word poem "Local" on the streets of several Chicago neighborhoods. On August 25th, members of the group will walk a new poem in the Wicker Park neighborhood concurrently with a reading/discussion and installation at Outer Space Studio. The event will conclude with a shared meal in Wicker Park.

RED ROVER SERIES is curated by Laura Goldstein and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national, and international writers, artists, and performers. The series was founded in 2005 by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin.

It's also a tired cliche: pour your guts out. Why can't writing build? Why must it always be an ejaculate?

Clinical Trials http://www.clinicaltrialsmusic.com/ http://www.clinicaltrials.bandcamp.com Clinical Trials is the electro-grunge/punk rock/riotous project founded by Somer Bingham, its main producer, writer, singer, and multi- instrumentalist. With influences ranging from Patti Smith and Nirvana to Metric and Depeche Mode, the songs of Clinical Trials often breed in a world of intoxicating dysphoria, edged with honesty and angst— without hesitating to embrace melodic catchiness. Autostraddle calls their latest EP Bleed Me "a panther"; "it’s a little dark and dangerous, it stalks and menaces and makes my heart thump that tiny bit faster. This is not glossy music. Bleed Me serves up six tracks ranging from gritty grunge to seductive melodic rock, each radiating raw heat and energy that edges near NSFW."

Sean Cole http://www.radiolab.org/people/sean-cole/ Sean Cole is the author of One Train (Dusie), Itty City (Pressed Wafer), and By the author. and The December Project (both from Boog Literature). His poems have appeared in magazines including Black Clock, Boog City, Carve, Court Green, Pavement Saw, and Torch. In the anthology "Starting Today: Poems for Obama's First 100 Days," his was day 95. He is also a public radio reporter and producer, who works at the NPR show Radiolab.

David Kirschenbaum http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic http://boogcity.blogspot.com/ David Kirschenbaum’s work has appeared in the Brooklyn Review Online, Can We Have Our Ball Back, Chain, Unpleasant Event Schedule, and The Village Voice, among others. He is the editor and publisher of Boog City, a New York City-based small press and community newspaper now in its 22nd year. His poems form the lyrics of Casey Holford and Preston Spurlock's band Gilmore boys.

115. Vallum Magazine
Request for announcement for Call for Submissions
Thu 26 Jul 2012

Hello,

I am writing to you on behalf of Vallum: contemporary poetry, to request an announcement for our next call for submissions: Vallum 10:1. Below are the Submission Guidelines, the theme (Magic!) as well as Vallum's contact information.

If you are willing to post this we would appreciate it so much,

Best,

Alisha Mascarenhas
Vallum: contemporary poetry

PO Box 598, Victoria Stn.
Montreal, QC H3Z 2Y6
Canada
www.vallummag.com

Submission Guidelines

a.. Poetry : 4-7 poems (No unsolicited chapbook manuscripts. Please submit by snail mail only.) b.. Essay : 5-6 pages
c.. Interview : 3-5 pages
d.. Review : 1-3 pages
e.. Letter to the editor : up to 1 page
f.. Art : B&W or colour (art work must be available in high-resolution printout or electronic format.)

Vallum is interested in original and previously unpublished work. Ideal submissions are well-crafted, fresh and edgy. Open to most styles, whether experimental or traditional - though issues are usually put together with an underlying theme in mind, so not all poetry can be accepted, even if it is genius! No unsolicited chapbook manuscripts are accepted. No simultaneous submissions. Poets may also send books for review consideration. Essay and review submissions must follow North American, MLA Style guidelines. Artwork can be colour and/or black and white. Colour is preferred for covers while black and white is preferred for art featured inside the magazine, though colour may be considered. Vallum acquires First North American Serial Rights.

If you are interested in writing an article, essay, review, conducting an interview for Vallum or submitting artwork or a letter to the editor, please send us a query letter by mail or through the Online Submission page and we will get back to you as soon as possible.

If you require a written reply, please include a SASE with sufficient Canadian postage or an International Reply Coupon. Alternatively, we would be happy to respond by e-mail, and strongly urge you to consider this option. Poems are accepted by regular mail only.

Interviews, reviews, essays, letters to the editor and visual art are accepted year-round. Poetry is accepted only during the reading period for each issue (check the themes page).

MY MOTHER, MYSELF

Once again my mother sticks her nose in what I write.

Donâ€™t forget a part for me, she says, tugging at the script.

Get off the stage, I yell.
This is a one-woman show.

But, even as she exits,
I can smell her perfume on the page.

Those last three months of pickles dripping brine and aromatic spices
fresh from the barrel, potatoes fried to a golden turn in the fish marketâ€™s bubbling oil, ice cream covered with walnuts and frozen chocolate sauce,
I watched your father put on weight.
Now, as your wife feeds her cravings, andÂ itâ€™s you whoâ€™s growing baby fat, Iâ€™m swelling up with joy.Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â Â

Brian Warfield, editor
http://www.turtleneckpress.com
Turtleneck Press makes small chapbooks of new writing. They are excited by innovation, weird feelings, and strange ideas. It has to scintillate on a primary reading level. They believe that writing is changing, adapting to new contexts. They like physical books and small books that you can hold in your palm. And that's what they make. They hope to represent new places and spaces in which writers can go and experiment. They are looking for poetry, prose, no-genre. They want everything from whispers to a scream.

Poems have appeared in such places as Connotation Press, Esque, Ping Pong Magazine, Praxilla Journal, Ragazine, 6S, The Best American Poetry Blog, The Portable Boog Reader, The Tower Journal, Unshod Quills, and others. She is also a saxophonist and visual artist.

Ray Brown http://www.raybrown.bandcamp.com Ray Brown is from South Salem, N.Y. and has been writing songs and performing since 2010. His debut album, Canyon, was released in April. The East Village arts publication Boog City describes his songs as "funny and tragic at the same time" and The New Yorker dubbed him "a solid songwriter." Ray's latest album, Orchids, was released on June 23.

Todd Carlstrom http://www.reverbnation.com/toddcarlstromandtheclamour Todd Carlstrom assembled this band after recording his first solo LP, Gold on the Map, at Olive Juice Studios. They're planning on a new release (as) soon (as we get off our asses). We love Boog. For the first time, at this show the lovely Becky Elmquist will be augmenting them on vocals, and that's pretty exciting.

Alana I. Capria http://www.alanaicapria.com Alana I. Capria (born 1985) has an M.F.A. in creative writing from Fairleigh Dickinson University. She resides in Northern New Jersey with her fiancé and rabbit. Her writing and publication links can be found at the above url.

Christine Murray and friends. Christine "Sharky" Murray is a musician (Bionic Finger, Pantsuit) turned elementary school teacher who couldn't turn down the opportunity to play some Sleater-Kinney songs! Alan Blattberg is a composer, producer, connoisseur, attorney [ahem], polymath and autodidactic multitasker based in NYC. Under the name Chow Chow Music, Peter Hanlon writes and records music including original soundtrack music for independent films, television pilots, live-action and animated comedy shorts, PSAs, student films, independent recordings and live theater.

When not molding the pliant young minds of undergrads, slowly reading up for her dissertation, or taking tap dance lessons, Pam Weis rocks out with the Trouble Dolls and sometimes with Sharky.

Davidson Garrett
http://www.adventpurplepress.com
King Lear of the Taxi:
A Poetic Monologue
King Lear of the Taxi: A Poetic Monologue is the philosophical journey of a struggling actor who must earn a grueling living as a taxi driver while striving to attain artistic success.

Davidson Garrett is a native of Louisiana. He trained for the theater at The American Academy of Dramatic Arts and is a graduate of The City College of New York. Garrett is a member of Actors' Equity Association and the Screen Actors Guild—American Federation of Television and Radio Artists. He has worked as an actor since 1973. A Pushcart Prize nominee, his poetry and fiction have appeared in literary journals and newspapers. Garrett's poetry collection, also called King Lear of the Taxi, was published in 2006 by Advent Purple Press. He has been an NYC taxi driver for over 30 years to help subsidize his art.

Jamie Gaughran-Perez http://www.verymostgood.com Jamie Gaughran-Perez is an editor at Narrow House, a literary small press in Baltimore. During the day he's a creative director in Washington, D.C. His writing has appeared in a variety of places in print and online, and he's really easy to Google. He plays bass in Coach Taylor.

Genan Zilkha and J. Swagger http://www.facebook.com/jswaggerbk Genan Zilkha is a full-time lawyer and sometime singer. During her "heyday" she specialized in songs about food poisoning and love, as well as covers of offensive hip-hop songs. Her greatest accomplishment was performing chapters 1-5 of the R.Kelly masterpiece, "Trapped in the Closet."

The first thing you'll notice about J. Swagger (better known to civilians as Julie Burzynski-Sager) is that she is, in the words of one New Yorker, "clearly not from around here." Growing up in rural Maryland, she began her music career as a semi-respectable classical cellist. But all that changed one day when her dad brought home a Jazz bass knockoff and said, "I'm starting a rock & roll band and we don't have a bass player. You wanna learn?" Jay was 13 and never looked back, learning everything she knows in hilariously multicultural hillbilly jam circles and the many, many bands that spun off from there. At age 15, her parents sent her off to art camp and sent her dad’s 1974 Guild dreadnought with her, and y'all can guess what happened next. She’s spent the last 15 years in nearly every genre of band imaginable: classic rock, jazz, big band, blues, ska, punk, trad, folk, and then some.

By day, J. is a finance historian who lives in East Flatbush, Brooklyn. Her other hobbies include writing, swing and blues dancing, getting into Angry Birds battles with small children on the subway, and forcing total strangers to look at pictures of her dog.

David Henderson http://www.radiofreeamsterdam.com/bob-kaufman-poet-part-1-with-david-henderson/ David Henderson’s books of poetry include De Mayor of Harlem and Neo- California. His biography, 'Scuse Me While I Kiss the Sky: Jimi Hendrix Voodoo Child, is available in a new, revised, 30-year anniversary edition. His radio documentary on the Black Beat, “Bob Kaufman, Poet” is available through the Pacifica Archive. He is one of the founding members of the Society of Umbra, that seminal Black Arts Movement group. Christine Meilicke photo.

Barbara Henning http://barbarahenning.blogspot.com Barbara Henning’s most recent books are a collection of poetry and prose, Cities & Memory (Chax Press); a novel, Thirty Miles from Rosebud (BlazeVox [books]); a collection of object-sonnets, My Autobiography (United Artists); and a book of interviews, Looking Up Harryette Mullen (Belladonna). Poems and stories have been published in many magazines, including Fiction International, Jacket Magazine, The Paris Review, and Poetry International. Barbara grew up in Detroit. She has lived in New York City since 1983. She teaches for Naropa University and Long Island University in Brooklyn, where she is professor emerita.

Laura Henriksen http://www.brooklynrail.org/2012/02/poetry/two-hendriksen-feb2012 Laura Henriksen lives in Brooklyn, where she works to promote urban sustainability. She represents the East Coast-based half of the literary zine Water Science’s editorial team. Her work has previously appeared in Trainwreck and The Brooklyn Rail.

Brenda Iijima http://www.yoyolabs.com Brenda Iijima is the author of If Not Metamorphic (Ahsahta Press) and other books of poetry. She edited the eco language reader, a book of essays by poets weighing in on climate change. She received a New York Foundation for the Arts fellowship this year. Her work combines language, movement, visual arts, and activism. From Brooklyn she runs Portable Press @ Yo-Yo Labs which is celebrating its 10th anniversary.

Jeff T. Johnson http://www.jefftjohnson.wordpress.com Jeff T. Johnson's poetry is forthcoming or has appeared in 1913 a journal of forms; Boston Review; Forklift, Ohio; and Slope, among other publications. He lives in Brooklyn, is editor in chief at LIT and edits Dewclaw. With Claire Donato, he collaborates on Special America, a multimedia intervention. For more information, visit the above url.

Jamey Jones http://www.brooklynrail.org/2011/11/poetry/evel-knievel Jamey Jones is the author of several chapbooks, including the notebook troubled the sleepdoor and Twelve Windows, both from brown boke press. Farfalla, McMillan and Parrish published his first full-length collection, Blue Rain Morning, last year. From 2008 to 2010 he lived in Brooklyn, where he earned an M.F.A. in creative writing from Long Island University. He teaches literature and poetry in Pensacola, Fla. His poems have recently appeared in Big Bridge, Brooklyn Paramount, Fell Swoop, The Brooklyn Rail, The Tsatsawassins, With + Stand, and Zen Monster.

Patricia Spears Jones http://www.psjones.com African-American poet and playwright Patricia Spears Jones is the author of three poetry collections, most recently Painkiller (Tia Chucha Press), and three chapbooks, two from Brooklyn-based publishers Belladonna and Red Glass Books. Her plays Mother and What Women Do When Men Sit Knitting were commissioned and produced by Mabou Mines. Work can be found in The Rumpus Anthology, broken land: Poems of Brooklyn, Black Nature: 400 Years of African American Nature Poetry, and Angles of Ascent (forthcoming from W.W. Norton). She is the editor of Think: Poems for Aretha Franklin's Inauguration Day Hat and the ground breaking anthology Ordinary Women: An Anthology of New York City Women Poets with an introduction by Adrienne Rich.

Dennis Leroy Kangalee http://www.nomadjunkie.com My Dying City My Dying City is a radio drama about the death of New York City, a protest against gentrification that inspired the later solo version Gentrified Minds. Whereas Gentrified Minds is a monologue, My Dying City is a cubistic tone poem that doubles as a dramatic play for various voices and is specifically intended to be recorded, listened to, and read. It is an elegy for the New York spirit as well as a remembrance and celebration of a culture that no longer exists. Funny, sad, and strange, it is ultimately a play that extends itself to the rest of the world as all corners of the globe continue to fold in on themselves, lose culture, and become victimized by new wave colonialism, corporate conformity, and rampant globalization … all in the name of “progress.”

Dennis Leroy Kangalee is an outlaw poet/dramatist known as the Nomad Junkie. A native New Yorker, he has independently created and produced his own works for the past 20 years and is best known as the performer of Gentrified Minds. Kangalee directed the cult film As an Act of Protest, a dramatic response to the murder of Amadou Diallo, and is the author of Lying Meat, a collection of poems. He is producing a film, Beyond the Ashes, to be directed by Nina Fleck. He hopes to record My Dying City as originally intended and make it available as a special CD or download through his website.

Rebecca Keith http://www.theawl.com/2011/08/two-poems-by-rebecca-keith http://www.facebook.com/theroulettes Rebecca Keith’s poems and other writing have appeared in Best New Poets, BOMBlog, Dossier, The Awl, The Laurel Review, The Millions, The Rumpus, and elsewhere. A native of downtown New York, Rebecca is a founder, curator, and host of Mixer Reading and Music series. She also sings and plays guitar and keyboards in Butchers & Bakers and the Roulettes.

Judith Le Blanc http://www.peace-action.org In her capacity as the field director for Peace Action, Judith Le Blanc works with 35 affiliates representing 100,000 members for a demilitarized U.S. foreign policy. Peace Action's primary focus is the Move the Money Campaign, an effort to organize grass roots coalitions of community, labor, and peace groups to change national spending priorities through local resolutions, legislative pressure, and electoral activities. Le Blanc is helping to coordinate the activities of the New Priorities Network, a national network of community, labor, and faith groups who are working to end the militarization of the federal budget to fund human needs. She has worked on a national level for the last 30 years on campaigns ranging from organizing labor marches, legislative lobbying to peace, disarmament, and solidarity activities. Le Blanc began her national political activity in 1973, working with the legal defense committee for the Wounded Knee occupation on Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota. She is also an award-winning, independent video and print journalist. Le Blanc has traveled extensively in the Middle East. In 2006, she participated in a peace delegation to the Middle East meeting with Iraqi parliamentarians in Amman, Jordan. She and others from the delegation went to Lebanon and spent the last week of the 2006 war meeting with non-governmental organizations, displaced families in South Beirut, and labor and community leaders on the humanitarian efforts to respond to the crisis. Le Blanc is a member of the Caddo Tribe of Oklahoma. She lives in Harlem.

Francis Levy is the author of the novels Erotomania: A Romance and Seven Days in Rio (both from Two Dollar Radio). He blogs at the above url.

Sandra Liu, Ugly Duckling Presse
http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org
Sandra Liu bio: Sandra Liu's work can be found in Hoboeye, 1913, and The Beloit Poetry Journal. She provides guidance for science and arts grantees at the poles and in New York City.

In her Ugly Duckling Presse collection of observational poems, On Poems On, Liu considers the world around her, wherever she may be or between, and wherever her thoughts of her environment and her position in it take her. She uses language directly, sometimes broken, to reflect the inherent conflicts and harshness in nature, modernity, and man, but also their beauty and mysticism, and, at times, with a wry humor.

Ugly Duckling Presse is a nonprofit art and publishing organization whose mission is to produce artisanal and trade editions of new poetry, translation, experimental nonfiction, performance texts, and books by artists. With a volunteer editorial collective of artists and writers at its heart, UDP grew out of a 1990s zine into a Brooklyn- based small press that has published more than 200 titles to date, with an editorial office and letterpress workshop in the Old American Can Factory in Gowanus. UDP favors emerging, international, and "forgotten" writers, and its books, chapbooks, artists' books, broadsides, and periodicals often contain handmade elements, calling attention to the labor and history of bookmaking.

Big Mike Logan Joe Radic Actors: Mauren Nolan and Logan Two Bronx boys, (or a Bronx boy and a Jersey girl), since moved on with their lives, geographically, socially, one to college ("Big Mike," "Columbia"), the other to New Jersey, as a meat - cutter/ trimmer in a large food - chain, supermarket (Pitt, Lake Hopatcong, Bergen County), meet to discuss the death of their third friend, "Joe Radic," a kindred spirit, who had also moved on, only to die a horrifying, untimely death, that neither found out about 'til months later!

Big Fucking Mike is the author of two books of memoirs, 81 Pounds and Sibling Rivalry, and is anthologized in the volume One Millimeter, all published by Pretty Pollution Press. His works have been published in online zines such as Gathering of the Tribes, Smoke, Unpleasant Events, and Cafe' Mo, and in print zines Wormwood Press and Ass Magazine. He co-produces and hosts monthly poetry and performance shows, dedicated to spotlighting female artists: Manic Monday at Yippie Museum Café and D-Day at The Bowery Poetry Club. The Blood Will Murder Roses
Actors: Ian and Kimberly Wilder
A couple sits down at the dinner table to discuss divorce.

Radomir Vojtech Luza got his love of art and politics from his Czech parents, who escaped the communism of their beloved Czechoslovakia in 1948. Luza's father, Radomir Senior, was a resistance fighter in World War II working under Luza's grandfather Vojtech Luza, who led the Czech underground before he was murdered by the Nazis in 1944. Luza's mother, Libuse, was an actress at the Czech National Dramatic Conservatory until Adolf Hitler closed the school down in 1943. At one point she spit on the Nazi flag.

Luza has lived in Los Angeles since 2006 and is thrilled to have his play The Blood Will Murder Roses included as part of the 2012 Boog Poets Theater Festival.

His previous New York productions include Curious Tumor and Beneath the Blood Red Bridge at The Naturalistic Theater and The Strawberry One-Act Festival at The Riant Theatre, respectively.

Ian Wilder is a spoken word artist, who co-curates the politics and culture website On the Wilder Side. Kimberly Wilder, aka Duchess Susanna, co-curates the Peace Couple website. Her current obsession is Shirley by Charlotte Bronte.

Bridget Madden http://www.bridgetscommonplacebook.blogspot.com Bridget Madden lives in Boston, where she grew up. She did a 10-year stint in the State of Maine, first at the University of Maine, then as a teacher at horror author Stephen King's old high school and finally at the Stonecoast M.F.A. program through University of Southern Maine. She teaches poetry, among many other subjects, at an elementary school on a military base near Boston. Third graders are some of her most favorite poets. She also works at a college library in the Boston area. She has a garden, which she prefers to tend to at night, like Emily Dickinson.

Magnetic Island http://www.magneticislandband.com Magnetic Island's self-titled debut album pairs the band's familiar grandiose structures with a newly baroque focus on layered arrangements. The result is the same ambitious musical arc fans have come to expect from Magnetic Island, but with a newfound intimacy. Led by songwriter and guitarist Lisa Liu, the band also features SMV on keys, Justin Gonzales on guitar/keys, and Dominic Rubano on drums.

Sheila Maldonado, A Gathering of the Tribes/Fly by Night Press http://www.sheilamaldonado.com http://www.tribes.org Sheila Maldonado is the author of one-bedroom solo (Fly by Night Press), her debut poetry collection.

She grew up in Coney Island, across the street from the Atlantic Ocean. Her family hails from Honduras. Her poems have appeared in Rattapallax, Callaloo and Me No Habla with Acento: Contemporary Latino Poetry. She teaches creative writing for The City University of New York and Teachers & Writers Collaborative. She holds degrees in English from Brown University and poetry from The City College of New York. She lives in a one-bedroom in uptown Manhattan, where she is working on her next project about a lifelong obsession with the ancient Maya.

Tribes was conceived as a venue for underexposed artists, as well as a networking center and locus for the development of new talent.

The formation of Tribes was motivated by the thriving artistic community in and around the Lower East Side: poetry at The Nuyorican Poets Café, performances and plays at The Living Theater, activist art at Bullet Space, as well as hundreds of artists trying to find and develop a voice in their medium and a place in which their work might be appreciated.

Housed in a historic federal house built by Hamilton Fish, the founder of The Nation magazine, Tribes is located on East 3rd Street between Avenues C and D.

The space houses administrative offices, a gallery, and a salon where artists of all kinds can drop in and connect with each other and the organization.

Filip Marinovich http://www.eoagh.com/?gab_gallery=video-filip-marinovich-and-the-human-microphone-at-occupy-wall-street Filip Marinovich is the author of Zero Readership and And If You Don't Go Crazy I'll Meet You Here Tomorrow (both from Ugly Duckling Presse). Some of his poems have been published in Aufgabe, EOAGH, Esque, The Brooklyn Rail, and on the Poetry Society of America website. He is at work on a new epic, Wolfman Librarian.

Dawn Lundy Martin http://www.poets.org/poet.php/prmPID/2061 Dawn Lundy Martin is the author of A Gathering of Matter / A Matter of Gathering (University of Georgia Press); Discipline (Nightboat Books), which was a finalist for both The Los Angeles Times Book Prize and the Lambda Literary Award; and Candy, a limited edition letterpress chapbook (Albion Books). She is assistant professor of English at the University of Pittsburgh.

Adam Moorad
http://www.adamadamadamadamadam.blogspot.com
Adam Moorad is a writer, salesman, and mountaineer. He lives in Brooklyn. Visit him at the above url.

L J Murphy http://www.ljmurphy.com A modern-day beatnik, a vaudeville barker, a "New York noir" rocker, a blues growler, a barroom balladeer, a saloon philosopher, a subway cabaret monster, and an untraditional traditionalist? L J Murphy has been described as all of these. Murphy’s live shows are raucous affairs that highlight the wide array of genres that his songwriting encompasses, from blues and ballads to funk to country to soul to rockabilly to folk and back again.

Elinor Nauen http://www.ElinorNauen.com Elinor Nauen has most recently published My Marriage A to Z: A big- city romance (Cinco Puntos) and So Late into the Night (Rain Mountain), a book-length poem in ottava rima that Terence Winch on the Best American Poetry blog called “one of the most impressive and audacious long poems of our times.”

Uche Nduka, Overpass Books http://www.uchenduka.com http://www.overpassbooks.com Uche Nduka has achieved a cult-like following as one of the most innovative poets of his generation. Whether from the pulsing sidewalks of Lagos, on the cobbled streets of Bremen, the canal-matrixed Amsterdam, the cupola-tinged Bucharest, or frenetic New York City, this prolific poet has intrigued and solaced readers and listeners worldwide with his words and music. To a trouble-filled world he posits peace and creativity. His published poetry books include Ijele (Overpass Books) eel on reef (Akashic Books), Flower Child (Update Communications), Second Act (Journoblues), The Bremen Poems (Newleaf Press; English/German Bilingual Edition,Yeti Press), Nigerian Authors Poetry Prize winner Chiaroscuro, If Only The Night (Sojourner Press, Amsterdam), Heart's Field (Yeti Press), and the e-book Tracers.

Overpass Books is a small press based in Brooklyn. Established in 2011, OVRPS has been advocating a diverse artistic community of writing and art, while publishing the literary magazines By The Overpass and Infinity. Along with the magazines, Overpass Books publishes poetry and fiction and promotes readings in New York City. Recent publications include Ijele, the ninth collection of poetry from Uche Nduka, and On Equilibrium of Song, the first collection of poetry from John Casquarelli, with art from Lynn Hassan.

Tom Orange http://www.tmorange.bandcamp.com Tom Orange teaches literature and writing at Cleveland State University and Cuyahoga Community College, assists at the Brandt Gallery, and hosts "The Brewing Luminous," a weekly free improv and world music show on WCSB 89.3 FM Cleveland. He plays reeds, strings, and percussion with a number of Cleveland musical ensembles, including the Freedom Jazz Collective, Orange Luna Temple, Ribosomes, Smiley Orange Beveridge, and Vengeance Space Quartet.

Soham Patel http://www.anti-poetry.com/anti/patelso Soham Patel recently earned her M.F.A. from the University of Pittsburgh. She plays in a rock ’n’ roll band and her poems and essays have been included in Copper Nickel, The Cortland Review, Denver Quarterly, and elsewhere.

Guy Pettit
http://www.poetrysociety.org/psa/poetry/crossroads/interviews/page_4/ Guy Pettit is the director of Flying Object and an editor for Factory Hollow Press. His poems have appeared in Glitterpony, Skein, and Supermachine. His chapbook Love Me or Love Me NO1 was published by minutesBOOKS.

Danforth Prince, Blood Moon Productions http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=m7uZiemn_v0&feature=youtu.be http://www.bloodmoonproductions.com Danforth Prince, president and founder of Blood Moon Productions, has a knack for salvaging the previously unpublished oral histories of America's Entertainment industry. In 2011, a respected consortium of literary critics and book marketers, the J.M. Northern Media Group, defined him as "Publisher of the Year." He is also a distinguished travel journalist, providing, for many years, the research and creative contents for regular updates of at least 50 titles within The Frommer Guides, shaping and guiding coverage that included most of Western Europe, the Caribbean, Bermuda, The Bahamas, and parts of the Americas.

In collaboration with the National Book Network, he has documented some of the controversies associated with his work in more than 30 videotaped documentaries and book trailers. Each of them can be watched, without charge, either on his company's above website or by performing a search for his name on YouTube.com.

Blood Moon Productions is a privately owned New York City-based publishing enterprise dedicated to researching, salvaging, and indexing the previously unrecorded oral histories of America's entertainment industry. Reorganized with its present name in 2004, Blood Moon originated in 1997 as The Georgia Literary Association, a vehicle for the promotion of obscure writers from America's Deep South.

Blood Moon maintains almost 30 titles in print, mostly show-biz biographies, guidebooks to current films, and scandal guides to Hollywood. Meticulously researched, each has generated acclaim and controversy for their inclusion of information about events and relationships which, when they occurred, might have been considered either indecent or libelous, but which are now highly pertinent to America's understanding of its origins, values, and cultural roots.

Their books have generated literary awards, lots of blog and tabloid commentary, and a growing list of devoted fans.

Rayvon Browne http://www.rayvonbrowne.bandcamp.com Morgan Heringer is a "ukulele virtuoso" (The New York Times). Cal Folger Day has "stage presence and vocal control that command attention" (The New Yorker). Together these two songwriters present stirring original tunes as well as surprising interpretations of classix.

Rogue Beats http://www.roguebeats.bandcamp.com Rogue Beats is Melissa Menake and Alan Semerdjian, two NYC educators/ artists with a mutual love for great songs, ukuleles, and singing at the top of your lungs while cooking breakfast together. For information and totally free downloads, please visit the above url.

Judah Rubin
http://wellgreasedmagazine.tumblr.com/
Judah Rubin is put to sleep. Precious little of it has back. He edits Well Greased Magazine/Press; is the author, most recently, of The Ernest Hemingway Reader and The Book of Lamentations; and acts as the editor/coordinator of The Death and Life of Great American Cities, a periodical of pure nitrocellulose.

Shockley, recipient of the 2012 National Holmes Prize in Poetry, is associate professor of English at Rutgers University-New Brunswick.

Alan Semerdjian http://www.alansemerdjian.com Writer/musician Alan Semerdjian's poems and essays have appeared in several print and online publications and anthologies including Adbusters, Ararat, Arson, Chain, Diagram, and The Lyric Review. He released a chapbook of poems called An Improvised Device (Lock n Load Press) and his first full-length book In the Architecture of Bone (GenPop Books). His songs have appeared in television and film and charted on CMJ. He has performed and read all over North America. Semerdjian teaches English at Herricks High School in New Hyde Park, N.Y.; writes a monthly column, music reviews, and other kinds of prose for Long Island Pulse, and resides in New York City's East Village.

Evie Shockley http://www.redroom.com/member/evie-shockley Evie Shockley is the author of two books of poetry: the new black (Wesleyan University Press)—one of Library Journal's Best Books of 2011 in Poetry—and a half-red sea (Carolina Wren Press). She has also published a critical study, Renegade Poetics: Black Aesthetics and Formal Innovation in African American Poetry (University of Iowa Press). Shockley, recipient of the 2012 National Holmes Prize in Poetry, is associate professor of English at Rutgers University-New Brunswick.

Antonio Serna http://www.antonioserna.com Originally from southern Texas, Antonio Serna is a multi-disciplinary artist/activist living and working in New York City. To balance his studio practice, Serna enjoys researching the social anthropology of arts and culture. His work has exhibited in New York, Spain, Mexico, Amsterdam, Berlin, and Texas. He has also taught and lectured at Parsons School of Design, St. Johns University, and at Brooklyn College as a teaching fellow. He holds a B.F.A. from Parsons School of Design and an M.F.A. from Brooklyn College.

Anya Skidan
http://www.anyaskidan.com

Sara Jane Stoner http://www.esquemag.org/2012/02/05/sara-jane-stoner Sara Jane Stoner teaches writing and writing pedagogy at Brooklyn College and Cooper Union and is a Ph.D. student in English at CUNY Graduate Center. Her scholarly work focuses on unruly contemporary prose texts. She is working on a book of brief ekphrastic fictions based on the writings and paintings of Piet Mondrian, and an autocritical novella on the necessary pleasures of objecthood, theory, and myopia. Most recently her writing can be found in ESQUE, Sententia, Spinning Jenny, and The St. Mark's Poetry Project Newsletter.

Yerra Sugarman http://www.yerrasugarman.blogspot.com Yerra Sugarman is the author of two poetry collections, Forms of Gone and The Bag of Broken Glass (both The Sheep Meadow Press). She was awarded a 2011 National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship for Poetry, a Canada Council Grant for Creative Writers, the 2005 PEN/Joyce Osterweil Poetry Award, a “Discovery”/The Nation Poetry Prize, a Glenna Luschei Prairie Schooner Award, and The Poetry Society of America’s George Bogin Memorial Award and its Cecil Hemley Memorial Award. She is a Ph.D. candidate in literature and creative writing at the University of Houston.

Kiely Sweatt http://www.lyndenk.blogspot.com Kiely Sweatt just returned to NYC from Barcelona, where she started up Prostibulo Poetico and co directed Tri Lengua, a multilingual reading series, which will soon start up in NYC. She is the founding editor of Libro Rojo, and co-editor of The Translation book, Volume 1. Her work has appeared online and in print through such publications as Best American Poetry blog, Leveler, PaxAmericana, Sawbuck Review, Shampoo, and The Why and the Later by Carly Sachs, among others. Her first full- length collection, Origin of, is coming out with Patasola Press and she is finishing up work on a chapbook in translation for Knitting Guns Press.

The Roulettes http://www.theroulettesnyc.bandcamp.com http://www.facebook.com/theroulettes “The Roulettes killed it.” —Tavi Gevinson, Style Rookie Fronted by two native New Yorkers, The Roulettes grew up playing basement and living room parties in Oberlin, Ohio. After moving to Portland, OR, the band teamed up with label Lucky Madison to record the first ever LM release, their self-titled EP, at Portland's Jackpot! Studios, with engineer Larry Crane (Sleater-Kinney, Stephen Malkmus). Long ago and far away, the Roulettes graced the cover of the Willamette Week and played all over their beloved Portland. Now back in NYC, the band has played at venues such as Knitting Factory, Santos Party House, Union Pool, and Cake Shop. They spent late 2010 organizing a sold-out benefit at Knitting Factory for the Kathleen Hanna documentary produced by Sini Anderson. Currently recording new material without label support thus far, the ever-resourceful Roulettes recently tracked vocals in a public middle-school’s math classroom. Mmm mmm yeah.

The Royal Drag http://www.theroyaldrag.com The Royal Drag is the brainchild of singer/songwriter Josh Fox, who has played with, recorded, produced, managed, and hung out with countless musicians in New York City and abroad. Many of the songs center around themes of disaffection and isolation, with a draggy but cheery pop sound, influenced by artists such as Pavement, Elliot Smith, The Eels, The Smiths, and Wilco.

In a world comfortable enough to slip away, they play to the part of you that didn’t get where you really wanted to go, say what you really wanted to say. Also the part that really digs catchy tunes.

James Tressel http://www.my.opera.com/jetressel/blog In addition to inspiring owls, James Tressel spends his time reading weird fiction and making strange music by himself and with the bands Horsey and Science & Justice. He is currently at work on another batch of poems, some creepy short stories, and an experimental dark fantasy novel. His writing blog is at the above url.

Genya Turovskaya http://www.supermachinepoetry.com/dearjenny Genya Turovskaya is a poet, literary translator, and psychotherapist. She is the author of several chapbooks—Dear Jenny (Supermachine), New Year’s Day (Octopus Books), Calendar (Ugly Duckling Presse), and The Tides (Octopus Books). Her poetry and translations of contemporary Russian poets have appeared in A Public Space, Aufgabe, Chicago Review, Conjunctions, Fence, Gulf Coast, jubilat, Mad Hatters Review, Octopus, Saltgrass, Supermachine, and other publications. Ugly Duckling Presse published her translation of Aleksandr Skidan’s Red Shifting. She is also the co-translator of Elena Fanailova’s The Russian Version (UDP) which won the University of Rochester's Three Percent Prize for Best Translated Book of Poetry in 2010.

Ken L. Walker http://www.kenlwalker.tumblr.com Ken L. Walker still carries a Kentucky driver’s license in his wallet even though he has lived in Brooklyn and Queens for the past five years. He sadly completed leading a poetry workshop at the Riker’s Island Correctional Facility. He earned an M.F.A. from Brooklyn College and has published criticism and poetry in BOMB Magazine, Crab Orchard Review, La Fovea, Lumberyard, the Boxcar, The Brooklyn Rail, The New Yorker online, The Poetry Project Newsletter, The Wolf, and Washington Square. He was the features editor for Coldfront magazine from and curated the semi-annual Letter Home Reading Series. He is compiling a database of American independent poetry presses and has taught and created curriculum at Bard College, Brooklyn College CUNY, LIM College, Medgar Evers College CUNY, Pace University, at The Metropolitan College of New York, and York College CUNY. He has guest lectured at American University, San Francisco State University, and Vanderbilt University.

http://www.brianwarfield.weebly.com
Brian Warfield lives in Philadelphia and publishes chapbooks through Turtleneck Press.

Carl Watson, Unbearable Books/Autonomedia http://www.autonomedia.org http://www.unbearables.com Carl Watson was born in Indiana and lives in New York City. His previously published books include Anarcadium Pan, Bricolage ex Machina, and Beneath the Empire of the Birds. The Gallimard series Du Monde Enterier published his novel The Hotel of Irrevocable Acts in France, while Unbearable Books/Autonomedia put it out in New York. Sensitive Skin has just published his most recent novel, Backwards The Drowned Go Dreaming. He has work in all of the Unbearables’ anthologies. Starting in 1995 the Unbearables literary collective has published five anthologies (The Unbearables, Crimes of the Beats, Help Yourself!, The Worst Book I Ever Read, and The Unbearables Big Book of Sex) and seven “novels” (Spermatagonia: The Isle of Man, Bart Plantenga; Negativeland, Doug Nufer; Neo Phobe, Jim Feast and Ron Kolm; Shorts Are Wrong, Mike Topp; The Hotel of Irrevocable Acts, Carl Watson; and The Ass’s Tale, John Farris, and This Young Girl Passing by Donald Breckenridge). Their books are distributed by Autonomedia, Small Press Distribution, and Baker & Taylor, among others.

Laurie Wen http://www.pnhpnymetro.blogspot.com Laurie Wen is the executive director of Physicians for a National Health Program-New York Metro chapter. She joined the health justice movement through the AIDS activist group ACT UP. Since last fall Wen has been active with the Healthcare for the 99% working group of Occupy Wall Street. Before devoting all her time to advocating for universal health care, she worked as a documentary filmmaker.

Tyrone Williams http://home.earthlink.net/~suspend Tyrone Williams teaches literature and theory at Xavier University in Cincinnati. He is the author of five books of poetry, c.c. (Krupskaya Books), On Spec (Omnidawn Publishing), The Hero Project of the Century (The Backwaters Press), Adventures of Pi (Dos Madres Press), and Howell (Atelos Books). His poetry has appeared in The Vanderbilt Review, Stretching Panties, and The Brooklyn Rail, among others. He is an Adjunct Lecturer of English at Borough of Manhattan Community College.

Angela Veronica Wong
http://www.angelaveronicawong.com
Angela Veronica Wong is the author of several chapbooks of poetry and the full-length poetry collection, how to survive a hotel fire (Coconut Books). She lives in Manhattan.

Katie Yates, Stockport Flats http://www.stockportflats.org/house.htm http://www.stockportflats.org Katie Yates grew up mostly in French West Africa with stints in India and Turkey and now finds herself in New Haven, Connecticut, not a bad place to raise children. She has a D.A. from The University at Albany, an M.F.A. from Naropa University, and a B.A. from Carleton College, which simply implies she’s well qualified to converse with a two-year- old. She lives with her blended family in a brick house in the suburbs and looks for insight in Buddhist teachings as much as she can. She still considers the Pacific Northwest her home and is the author of Morning Stories, High Watermark Salo[o]n: Volume 3 Number 2.

In the muddy mop-up after Federal Disaster #1649, the worst of three 100-year floods, poet Lori Anderson Moseman and producer Tom Moseman created Stockport Flats to celebrate writers and artists whose creative buoyancy builds community. They feature experimental poetry (Meander Scar Series), a sustainability poetry (Witness Post Series), and cross-aesthetic mix of poetry (Confluence Series).

Call for submissions (deadline 8/1)
Sun 29 Jul 2012

Founded by artists, Certain Circuits Magazine publishes poetry, experimental prose, art, and new media. We are especially interested in documenting multimedia collaborative work between artists. Our two print issues feature work from artists in Australia, Brazil, France, Mexico, India, Japan, Korea, Uruguay, the United Kingdom, and the United States. We curate our print issues from our online multimedia issues.

Now celebrating two years in print, our collaborative work in text, print, and exhibitions has been well documented. We have staged exhibitions and film screenings of our contributors in conjunction with our print issue launches, and we recently nominated six poetics contributors for Best of the Net. We look forward to nominating our artists for future prizes and creating future exhibition and screening opportunities.

Please submit your best work in any genre (cross-genre and collaborative encouraged) to [redacted]: 5 pages of poetry, 1 page of prose, no more than 5 jpgs, link to audio and video files, or link to portfolio.

Deadline: 8/1

Re: SMALL PRESS COLLECTION AT ENDICOTT COLLEGE
Sun 29 Jul 2012

I second Doug's message.
As a special collections curator at a small college, I receive many donations of publications.
Most authors are incredibly honored to have their work included in a special collection, and few expect to be paid for their books. Of course, we do buy things, but there are so many works that we would never know about unless an author brought them to our attention and offered them to us. It doesn't demean the work to offer it to a library. Having our work preserved and cared for by an institution is a privilege that most writers never get.

*Certain Circuits: Creating Collaborative Multi-media Poetry Workshop with Bonnie MacAllister & Lora Bloom *

Saturday, August 4, 2:00 - 4:00pm

Founded by artists, Certain Circuits Magazine publishes poetry, experimental prose, art, and new media. We are especially interested in documenting multimedia collaborative work between artists. Our two print issues feature work from artists in Australia, Brazil, France, Mexico, India, Japan, Korea, Uruguay, the United Kingdom, and the United States. Our collaborative work in text, print, and exhibitions has been documented by Arcadia University Bulletin, Apiary, City Paper, Duotrope, Et Al Projects, Fifth Wednesday Journal, Moonstone Arts, New Pages, New Purlieu Review, the Philadelphia Inquirer, Philly Side Arts, Philadelphia Weekly, Spew Jersey, Tyler Fiber, and Urban Arts Projects, among others.

Editors Lora Bloom and Bonnie MacAllister will guide you through the steps to create and score your own multimedia poetry .gifs and videos. The workshop will consist of creating new work through a series of multimedia poetry prompts and composing to the original music of Bloom. Participants will perform their texts in the workshop setting, and they will learn free and easy animation techniques. Final products to be eligible for submission to the magazine.

Cost $35, payable in cash on the day of the event.

Email: [redacted] to register..

LoraBloom writes poetry, fiction, creative non-fiction and abstract rants, and is a musician and performance artist. Currently she is the lead vocalist of the experimental rock band Radio Eris and she helps run ErisTemple Arts, an art gallery and music space in West Philadelphia. She has been recently published by 13 Myna Birds, received a prize for her writing by the Beat Museum, was featured at the 25th Anniversary of the Shubin Theatre, and has performed and curated music and poetry widely inEurope and the United States.

BonnieMacAllister renders moments through a variety of media. Often pieces are multi-genre, fusing painting, photography, slide installations, spoken word, video, and performance. She is a Pushcart Prize nominee, poetry slam champion in the United States and France, and Fulbright-Haysawardee to Ethiopia. Her poetry has been published in Esque, 10,000 Poets for Change/Fieralingue, Grasp (Czech Republic), nth position (UK),and Paper Tiger Media (Australia). She has performed her original writing and plays at New York Foundation for the Arts, the Philadelphia Fringe Festival, Raandesk Gallery in Chelsea, Adrienne Theater in Philadelphia, and Cat Cat Club in Paris. She is currently showing work at the Sandy Spring Museum in MD.

August 2012 set two kinds of loss against each other — the institution killing a press that worked, and the mind losing itself to disease — and found in both the same terror: that the things which carry a culture forward can be shut down or dissolved without warning. One hundred and nineteen messages moved through the list, and its currents ran between an editor fired and a memory failing, the external threat and the internal one. The month was about how easily the vessels of a literature can be emptied.

The largest fight was over a press unjustly closed. The University of New Orleans had put its press on hiatus and dismissed its editor, and the room rose in protest, marshaling the facts — that "the Press was self-sustaining and cost-free", that it had published an international range of prize-winning writers, that the stated budget excuse was a fiction. It was the small-press crisis in its cruelest form: not a press failing on its own but a press killed by the institution that housed it, the university turning on the literature in its care.

The quieter loss was interior. A thread titled on writing dementia took up the hardest subject the art can face — the making of poetry inside, or against, the erosion of memory itself, the mind that holds the poems coming quietly apart. If the press was a vessel closed from without, dementia was the vessel dissolving from within, and the room approached it with the care such a subject demands, poetry set against the very failure of the faculty that poetry depends on.

Around the two losses the ordinary keeping persisted — a small-press collection seeking support, a reading announced, the standing notices. The infrastructure carried on beneath the double threat, the presses and archives doing their patient work of preservation even as one press was being shuttered and one kind of memory was being lost, the room insisting, as ever, that what can be kept should be, and that a press worth saving is worth making noise about even when the noise changes nothing.

I have set August down exactly as the archive delivered it — the self-sustaining press killed by its university, and the poetry written against the dissolving of the mind — because it was the month the list confronted, on two scales, how fragile the carriers of a literature are. A room that will fight for a press its host institution shut down for no good reason, and hold with tenderness the question of how one writes as memory fails, is a room that understands the deepest precariousness of its art: that the presses that print it can be closed by a stroke of a budget pen, and the minds that hold it can be emptied by disease, and that against both the only defense is the stubborn work of keeping, for as long as keeping is possible.

Re: SMALL PRESS COLLECTION AT ENDICOTT COLLEGE

Tue 31 Jul 2012

What I or the poets I publish do with our books (or what you do with yours, Doug) is another matter--beyond author copies they've been paid for. I wrote as a publisher. I can't publish if I don't sell books, and libraries are important customers. So I expect to be paid.

As an author I find the idea that I should be honored if someone accepts a freebie a bit strange. I do realize that in the world as it is poetry is a hard sell, and I make sure that poets I admire get copies of my books. But I don't write as a hobby. I also don't write for my books to be preserved as if mummified.

Try asking a baker how honored he is if you eat his bread without paying.

Cathleen, I appreciate your frustration. Library budgets aren't what they used to be. When I started out a small publisher could count on 500 library sales--it's what kept presses going. It's really a question of who pays for the changes we've all faced.

Doug, for the life of me I don't understand your anger. I wasn't trying to legislate anybody else's behavior, but apparently I struck a nerve. What nerve that was is mysterious to me.

One of my authors asked me to send books to Doug. So I will. If Doug had not posted a message here, that author would not have asked me to do that. That would be sad.

Tue 31 Jul 2012

Truck's new driver for August
Many thanks to Elizabeth Switaj for taking Truck through the splashy, water-slick roads of July.
*
*
Our driver starting tomorrow, and for the entire month of August is rob mclennan. The keys, rob, are . . . well, I guess they're wherever Elizabeth they hid them. Buen viaje.

rob curates TRUCK during the month of August,

Wed 1 Aug 2012

During the month of August, I'll be curating Halvard Johnston's blog, TRUCK, and daily posting new work by various Canadian writers.

This is the same site where Christine McNair and I first premiered our work-in-progress collaborative work (which has yet to figure out a title), a work that recently produced a small fragment as an above/ground press chapbook.

Given that TRUCK originates in the tri-state area, I wanted to find a wide array of Canadian writers to introduce to American audiences, to further previous sections I've edited on and by Canadians such as the three features I edited for Jacket ("Some Canadian poets," "George Bowering at 70" and "Douglas Barbour at 70"), or dusie 10: the Canadian issue.

http://robmclennan.blogspot.ca/2012/08/rob-curates-truck-during-month-of-august.html

Be sure to check the site every morning to see just who might be featured, each with a poem, a bio and an attractive photo. The first poet is Nikki Reimer, recently returned to Calgary from Vancouver.

halvard-johnson.blogspot.com/2012/08/southern-alberta-poems-by-nikki-reimer.html

Watch for new work over the coming days by Jake Kennedy and kevin mcpherson eckhoff, Camille Martin, Stan Rogal, Kathryn MacLeod, Natalee Caple, Gil McElroy, Monty Reid, Daphne Marlatt, Nathan Dueck, Amanda Earl, Sandra Ridley, Marilyn Irwin, Cameron Anstee and plenty of others. Enjoy!

â€œFitzgeraldâ€™s repeated mentions of Lake Forest in his work is not much commented on; it isnâ€™t associated with him the way Princeton University, Long Island, and the South of France tend to be. Indeed, the casual mention in Gatsby might lead one to believe that it was just a city heâ€™d read about or a place he saw on a map. But itâ€™s something more than that. The reason Lake Forest became such a significant place to one of Americaâ€™s great writers is simple: his first love was from there.â€ [3]Read more â€º â€œSometimes in life you get yelled at. No matter your moral fiber, it canâ€™t be avoided all the time. It happens in Marine Corps boot camp; it happens in rush-hour subway cars; it happens if your mother catches you reading Lady Chatterlyâ€™s Lover at an impressionable young age. But one place you donâ€™t expect to get harangued, one place where the lidâ€™s supposed to stay on the pot, is poetry.â€ [5]Read more â€º Links: 5. http://www.theparisreview.org/blog/2012/07/11/d-h-lawrence%E2%80%99s-%E2%80%9Cpomegranate%E2%80%9D/?utm_source=newsletterAug2012&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=LawrencePomegranate â€œThe physical space of 112 Greene Street was key to the work themselves. They were responses to that context. And I think it was Nonas who said that the most successful shows there were those that really used that space, that could have only been done in that space. Re: SMALL PRESS COLLECTION AT ENDICOTT COLLEGE

If one of my authors asked me to send books to Doug I'd ask him/her to pay for it at the usual author's discount. If he/she refused that would be sad.

I do initial runs of 300 (digital printing, yay!), of which 100 are hors commerce--author copies (10 percent of every run), review copies, friends of the press. I'm plenty generous. I also periodically have sales at ridiculous discounts. But the schnorers come out anyway--the "reviewers" who don't review, the libraries who think they're doing me a favor, the poets or publishers I have no interest in who want to trade books. I have my limits. You have yours too, but they're different from mine. That's ok with me. But don't think that yours correspond with some sort of self-evident rightness.

Tonight: Welcome to Boog City Fest Kicks Off (w/PDF Program)

Thu 2 Aug 2012

Hi,

Beginning tonight, Thurs., Aug. 2 through Sun., Aug. 5, we'll be celebrating Boog's 21st anniversary by putting on the sixth annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival. It will feature 51 poets, 13 musical acts, 8 short plays, 5 speakers, 1 workshop, and 1 panel over the four days.

And, just added to Sunday night's lineup, The Pre-Poetic, a play by Poets Theater luminary Kevin Killian, featuring Ish Klein, Greg Purcell, and Sara Jane Stoner.

You can view the web-only color pdf version of Boog City’s Welcome to Boog City program issue here:

http://www.boogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc72.pdf

and the up-to-the-minute lineup:

http://www.facebook.com/events/415332255184488/

the program issue is replete with:

* the full schedule illustrated with performer pics

*music editor Jonathan Berger on festival performers L J Murphy and The Royal Drag

*Gigantic Sequins editor Kimberly Ann Southwick interviews Brian Warfield, editor of d.a. levy lives visiting press, Philadelphia's Turtleneck Press

*our poetry editor Buck Downs brings us new work from fest performers Richard Deming, Drew Gardner, Jamey Jones, Nancy Kuhl, and Angela Veronica Wong

Thanks to Sommer Browning for the festival's logo; and for booking recommendations our music editor Mr. Berger; poets Jen Benka, Cara Benson, Ed Berrigan, John Coletti, Tom Devaney, Buck Downs Joanna Fuhrman, Amy King, Ish Klein, Bridget Madden, Carol Mirakove, Lauren Russell, Kyle Schlesinger, Kimberly Southwick, Jill Stengel, Michelle Taransky, Dana Ward, and Ian Wilder; and for the various speakers Sean Cole, Eliot Katz, and Mr. Wilder.

Among the festival highlights are:

—Our 39th Classic Album Live show has Sleater-Kinney's, Dig Me Out, performed live by five local musical acts for its 15th anniversary;

—Our d.a. levy lives series kicks off its 10th season with Philadelphia's Turtleneck Press;

—Our 9th annual small, small press fair, with exhibits from a host of small presses, and readings by their authors;

—Never-Ending Participation: Activism and Occupy Wall Street, a panel curated and moderated by Brenda Iijima;

—Our BoogWork series features Cincinnati's Tyrone Williams reading and leading a workshop;

—The Prose Pros Corpse is Exquisite! has Elinor Nauen and Martha King's Prose Pros series joining the festival for the first time with a special edition event featuring mystery readers from the first five years of the series;

—and our Third Poets Theater night, featuring a host of short plays.

The full schedule for the event is below this note, followed by performer bios and websites.

If you need any additional information you can reach me at 212-842- BOOG (2664) or [redacted].

as ever,
David

Turtleneck Press makes small chapbooks of new writing. They are excited by innovation, weird feelings, and strange ideas. It has to scintillate on a primary reading level. They believe that writing is changing, adapting to new contexts. They like physical books and small books that you can hold in your palm. And that's what they make. They hope to represent new places and spaces in which writers can go and experiment. They are looking for poetry, prose, no-genre. They want everything from whispers to a scream.

Cory Aaland
Scabs
Actress: Michelle Beth Herman
A person talks to his/her broom in a dark room.

Cory Aaland lives in Tucson, where he is working toward his M.F.A. in creative nonfiction at The University of Arizona. He is the blog editor and nonfiction editor for the Sonora Review.

Michelle Beth Herman is thrilled to be participating in The Boog Poets Theater Night! Herman is an Equity Membership Candidate who is studying to receive her B.F.A. in musical theatre at the Hartt School of Music, Dance, and Theatre. She has performed in venues across the N.Y. metro area, including Smithtown Center for the Performing Arts, Star Playhouse, Township Theatre Group, Shea Stadium, and The Metropolitan Room. Favorite roles: Berthe (Pippin), Marty (Grease), Ronnette (Little Shop of Horrors), and Dunyasha (The Cherry Orchard). ILYTTMATSATCF!

Joel Allegretti
http://www.joelallegretti.com
Restaurant
A young professional man arrives at an upscale restaurant to have a romantic dinner with the one who rocks his world.

Joel Allegretti is the author of four collections, most recently, Europa/Nippon/New York: Poems/Not-Poems (Poets Wear Prada). His second book, Father Silicon (The Poet's Press), was selected by The Kansas City Star as one of the 100 Noteworthy Books of 2006. His poetry has appeared in many national journals, including Smartish Pace, The New York Quarterly, and [PANK]. He wrote the texts for three song cycles by Frank Ezra Levy, whose work is released on Naxos American Classics. Allegretti is a member of The Academy of American Poets and The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Todd Pate is a writer, actor, and musician who lives in New York. Pate wrote two plays, Bird's Eye View and Brazil, with The Insight Project, a creative program through The Center for Alternative Sentencing and Employment Services. Through The Insight Project, he met with first- time felony offenders, talked with them about their life experiences, and constructed dramatic pieces around those experiences. He has acted on stage extensively in Chicago and New York, and he can be seen playing the lead role in the film Cold, Blue, Eternal.

Jillian Brall http://www.zoewo.blogspot.com Jillian Brall received her B.A. and M.F.A. in creative writing from The New School. She is co-editor of the online poetry and art journal, Lyre Lyre and co-curates the Earshot reading series.

Poems have appeared in such places as Connotation Press, Esque, Ping Pong Magazine, Praxilla Journal, Ragazine, 6S, The Best American Poetry Blog, The Portable Boog Reader, The Tower Journal, Unshod Quills, and others. She is also a saxophonist and visual artist.

Ray Brown http://www.raybrown.bandcamp.com Ray Brown is from South Salem, N.Y. and has been writing songs and performing since 2010. His debut album, Canyon, was released in April. The East Village arts publication Boog City describes his songs as "funny and tragic at the same time" and The New Yorker dubbed him "a solid songwriter." Ray's latest album, Orchids, was released on June 23.

Todd Carlstrom http://www.reverbnation.com/toddcarlstromandtheclamour Todd Carlstrom assembled this band after recording his first solo LP, Gold on the Map, at Olive Juice Studios. They're planning on a new release (as) soon (as we get off our asses). We love Boog. For the first time, at this show the lovely Becky Elmquist will be augmenting them on vocals, and that's pretty exciting.

Alana I. Capria http://www.alanaicapria.com Alana I. Capria (born 1985) has an M.F.A. in creative writing from Fairleigh Dickinson University. She resides in Northern New Jersey with her fiancé and rabbit. Her writing and publication links can be found at the above url.

Christine Murray and friends. Christine "Sharky" Murray is a musician (Bionic Finger, Pantsuit) turned elementary school teacher who couldn't turn down the opportunity to play some Sleater-Kinney songs! Alan Blattberg is a composer, producer, connoisseur, attorney [ahem], polymath and autodidactic multitasker based in NYC. Under the name Chow Chow Music, Peter Hanlon writes and records music including original soundtrack music for independent films, television pilots, live-action and animated comedy shorts, PSAs, student films, independent recordings and live theater.

When not molding the pliant young minds of undergrads, slowly reading up for her dissertation, or taking tap dance lessons, Pam Weis rocks out with the Trouble Dolls and sometimes with Sharky.

Colia Clark http://www.DemocracyforNYC.org Colia Clark is a producer for the Manhattan Neighborhood Network. A humanist, Pan Africanist, U.S.A. coordinator International Commission of Inquiry on Haiti, U.S. Senate candidate Green Party, U.S.A. coordinator Guadeloupe Haiti Tour U.S.A., and former special Assistant to martyred civil rights leader Medgar W. Dennis Leroy Kangalee http://www.nomadjunkie.com My Dying City My Dying City is a radio drama about the death of New York City, a protest against gentrification that inspired the later solo version Gentrified Minds. Whereas Gentrified Minds is a monologue, My Dying City is a cubistic tone poem that doubles as a dramatic play for various voices and is specifically intended to be recorded, listened to, and read. It is an elegy for the New York spirit as well as a remembrance and celebration of a culture that no longer exists. Funny, sad, and strange, it is ultimately a play that extends itself to the rest of the world as all corners of the globe continue to fold in on themselves, lose culture, and become victimized by new wave colonialism, corporate conformity, and rampant globalization … all in the name of "progress."

Dennis Leroy Kangalee is an outlaw poet/dramatist known as the Nomad Junkie. A native New Yorker, he has independently created and produced his own works for the past 20 years and is best known as the performer of Gentrified Minds. Kangalee directed the cult film As an Act of Protest, a dramatic response to the murder of Amadou Diallo, and is the author of Lying Meat, a collection of poems. He is producing a film, Beyond the Ashes, to be directed by Nina Fleck.

He hopes to record My Dying City as originally intended and make it available as a special CD or download through his website.

The Pre-Poetic
Actors: Ish Klein, Greg Purcell, and Sara Jane Stoner
One has to get rid of the poetic in order to arrive at the less ideologically freighted pre-poetic.

Kevin Killian has directed 40 plays for the San Francisco Poets Theater, an influential poetry, stage, and performance group based in San Francisco. My Vocabulary Did This to Me: The Collected Poetry of Jack Spicer, which he co-edited with Peter Gizzi, won the American Book Award for poetry in 2009. His novel, Impossible Princess, won the 2010 Lambda Literary Award as the best gay erotic fiction work of 2009.

Ish Klein is the author of the poetry books Moving Day and Union! and the video collection Success Window.

Sara Jane Stoner teaches writing and writing pedagogy at Brooklyn College and Cooper Union and is a Ph.D. student in English at CUNY Graduate Center. Her scholarly work focuses on unruly contemporary prose texts. She is working on a book of brief ekphrastic fictions based on the writings and paintings of Piet Mondrian, and an autocritical novella on the necessary pleasures of objecthood, theory, and myopia. Most recently her writing can be found in ESQUE, Sententia, Spinning Jenny, and The St. Mark's Poetry Project Newsletter.

Sandra Liu, Ugly Duckling Presse
http://www.uglyducklingpresse.org
Sandra Liu bio: Sandra Liu's work can be found in Hoboeye, 1913, and The Beloit Poetry Journal. She provides guidance for science and arts grantees at the poles and in New York City.

In her Ugly Duckling Presse collection of observational poems, On Poems On, Liu considers the world around her, wherever she may be or between, and wherever her thoughts of her environment and her position in it take her. She uses language directly, sometimes broken, to reflect the inherent conflicts and harshness in nature, modernity, and man, but also their beauty and mysticism, and, at times, with a wry humor.

Ugly Duckling Presse is a nonprofit art and publishing organization whose mission is to produce artisanal and trade editions of new poetry, translation, experimental nonfiction, performance texts, and books by artists. With a volunteer editorial collective of artists and writers at its heart, UDP grew out of a 1990s zine into a Brooklyn- based small press that has published more than 200 titles to date, with an editorial office and letterpress workshop in the Old American Can Factory in Gowanus. UDP favors emerging, international, and "forgotten" writers, and its books, chapbooks, artists' books, broadsides, and periodicals often contain handmade elements, calling attention to the labor and history of bookmaking.

Big Mike Logan Joe Radic Actors: Mauren Nolan and Logan Two Bronx boys, (or a Bronx boy and a Jersey girl), since moved on with their lives, geographically, socially, one to college ("Big Mike," "Columbia"), the other to New Jersey, as a meat - cutter/ trimmer in a large food - chain, supermarket (Pitt, Lake Hopatcong, Bergen County), meet to discuss the death of their third friend, "Joe Radic," a kindred spirit, who had also moved on, only to die a horrifying, untimely death, that neither found out about 'til months later!

Big Fucking Mike is the author of two books of memoirs, 81 Pounds and Sibling Rivalry, and is anthologized in the volume One Millimeter, all published by Pretty Pollution Press. His works have been published in online zines such as Gathering of the Tribes, Smoke, Unpleasant Events, and Cafe' Mo, and in print zines Wormwood Press and Ass Magazine. He co-produces and hosts monthly poetry and performance shows, dedicated to spotlighting female artists: Manic Monday at Yippie Museum Café and D-Day at The Bowery Poetry Club. He was crowned Best Neptune for his "Rape-Of-Europa Guy" costume in The 2004 Coney Island Annual Mermaid Parade.

http://www.onthewilderside.com
http://www.PeaceCouple.com
The Blood Will Murder Roses
Actors: Ian and Kimberly Wilder
A couple sits down at the dinner table to discuss divorce.

Radomir Vojtech Luza got his love of art and politics from his Czech parents, who escaped the communism of their beloved Czechoslovakia in 1948. Luza's father, Radomir Senior, was a resistance fighter in World War II working under Luza's grandfather Vojtech Luza, who led the Czech underground before he was murdered by the Nazis in 1944. Luza's mother, Libuse, was an actress at the Czech National Dramatic Conservatory until Adolf Hitler closed the school down in 1943. At one point she spit on the Nazi flag.

Luza has lived in Los Angeles since 2006 and is thrilled to have his play The Blood Will Murder Roses included as part of the 2012 Boog Poets Theater Festival.

His previous New York productions include Curious Tumor and Beneath the Blood Red Bridge at The Naturalistic Theater and The Strawberry One-Act Festival at The Riant Theatre, respectively.

Ian Wilder is a spoken word artist, who co-curates the politics and culture website On the Wilder Side. Kimberly Wilder, aka Duchess Susanna, co-curates the Peace Couple website. Her current obsession is Shirley by Charlotte Bronte.

Bridget Madden http://www.bridgetscommonplacebook.blogspot.com Bridget Madden lives in Boston, where she grew up. She did a 10-year stint in the State of Maine, first at the University of Maine, then as a teacher at horror author Stephen King's old high school and finally at the Stonecoast M.F.A. program through University of Southern Maine. She teaches poetry, among many other subjects, at an elementary school on a military base near Boston. Third graders are some of her most favorite poets. She also works at a college library in the Boston area. She has a garden, which she prefers to tend to at night, like Emily Dickinson.

Magnetic Island http://www.magneticislandband.com Magnetic Island's self-titled debut album pairs the band's familiar grandiose structures with a newly baroque focus on layered arrangements. Sheila Maldonado, A Gathering of the Tribes/Fly by Night Press http://www.sheilamaldonado.com http://www.tribes.org Sheila Maldonado is the author of one-bedroom solo (Fly by Night Press), her debut poetry collection. She grew up in Coney Island, across the street from the Atlantic Ocean. Her family hails from Honduras. Her poems have appeared in Rattapallax, Callaloo and Me No Habla with Acento: Contemporary Latino Poetry. She teaches creative writing for The City University of New York and Teachers & Writers Collaborative. She holds degrees in English from Brown University and poetry from The City College of New York. She lives in a one-bedroom in uptown Manhattan, where she is working on her next project about a lifelong obsession with the ancient Maya.

Tribes was conceived as a venue for underexposed artists, as well as a networking center and locus for the development of new talent.

The formation of Tribes was motivated by the thriving artistic community in and around the Lower East Side: poetry at The Nuyorican Poets Café, performances and plays at The Living Theater, activist art at Bullet Space, as well as hundreds of artists trying to find and develop a voice in their medium and a place in which their work might be appreciated.

Housed in a historic federal house built by Hamilton Fish, the founder of The Nation magazine, Tribes is located on East 3rd Street between Avenues C and D.

The space houses administrative offices, a gallery, and a salon where artists of all kinds can drop in and connect with each other and the organization.

Danforth Prince, Blood Moon Productions http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=m7uZiemn_v0&feature=youtu.be http://www.bloodmoonproductions.com Danforth Prince, president and founder of Blood Moon Productions, has a knack for salvaging the previously unpublished oral histories of America’s Entertainment industry. In 2011, a respected consortium of literary critics and book marketers, the J.M. Northern Media Group, defined him as “Publisher of the Year.” He is also a distinguished travel journalist, providing, for many years, the research and creative contents for regular updates of at least 50 titles within The Frommer Guides, shaping and guiding coverage that included most of Western Europe, the Caribbean, Bermuda, The Bahamas, and parts of the Americas.

In collaboration with the National Book Network, he has documented some of the controversies associated with his work in more than 30 videotaped documentaries and book trailers. Each of them can be watched, without charge, either on his company’s above website or by performing a search for his name on YouTube.com.

Blood Moon Productions is a privately owned New York City-based publishing enterprise dedicated to researching, salvaging, and indexing the previously unrecorded oral histories of America’s entertainment industry. Reorganized with its present name in 2004, Blood Moon originated in 1997 as The Georgia Literary Association, a vehicle for the promotion of obscure writers from America’s Deep South.

Blood Moon maintains almost 30 titles in print, mostly show-biz biographies, guidebooks to current films, and scandal guides to Hollywood. Meticulously researched, each has generated acclaim and controversy for their inclusion of information about events and relationships which, when they occurred, might have been considered either indecent or libelous, but which are now highly pertinent to America's understanding of its origins, values, and cultural roots.

Their books have generated literary awards, lots of blog and tabloid commentary, and a growing list of devoted fans.

Anya Skidan is a Brooklyn-based psychedelic folk-rock musician and a poet.

Sara Jane Stoner http://www.esquemag.org/2012/02/05/sara-jane-stoner Sara Jane Stoner teaches writing and writing pedagogy at Brooklyn College and Cooper Union and is a Ph.D. student in English at CUNY Graduate Center. Her scholarly work focuses on unruly contemporary prose texts. She is working on a book of brief ekphrastic fictions based on the writings and paintings of Piet Mondrian, and an autocritical novella on the necessary pleasures of objecthood, theory, and myopia. Most recently her writing can be found in ESQUE, Sententia, Spinning Jenny, and The St. Mark's Poetry Project Newsletter.

Yerra Sugarman http://www.yerrasugarman.blogspot.com Yerra Sugarman is the author of two poetry collections, Forms of Gone and The Bag of Broken Glass (both The Sheep Meadow Press). She was awarded a 2011 National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship for Poetry, a Canada Council Grant for Creative Writers, the 2005 PEN/Joyce Osterweil Poetry Award, a "Discovery"/The Nation Poetry Prize, a Glenna Luschei Prairie Schooner Award, and The Poetry Society of America's George Bogin Memorial Award and its Cecil Hemley Memorial Award. She is a Ph.D. candidate in literature and creative writing at the University of Houston.

Kiely Sweatt http://www.lyndenk.blogspot.com Kiely Sweatt just returned to NYC from Barcelona, where she started up Prostibulo Poetico and co directed Tri Lengua, a multilingual reading series, which will soon start up in NYC. She is the founding editor of Libro Rojo, and co-editor of The Translation book, Volume 1. Her work has appeared online and in print through such publications as Best American Poetry blog, Leveler, PaxAmericana, Sawbuck Review, Shampoo, and The Why and the Later by Carly Sachs, among others. Her first full- length collection, Origin of, is coming out with Patasola Press and she is finishing up work on a chapbook in translation for Knitting Guns Press.

The Roulettes http://www.theroulettesnyc.bandcamp.com http://www.facebook.com/theroulettes "The Roulettes killed it." —Tavi Gevinson, Style Rookie Fronted by two native New Yorkers, The Roulettes grew up playing basement and living room parties in Oberlin, Ohio. After moving to Portland, OR, the band teamed up with label Lucky Madison to record the first ever LM release, their self-titled EP, at Portland's Jackpot! Studios, with engineer Larry Crane (Sleater-Kinney, Stephen Malkmus). Long ago and far away, the Roulettes graced the cover of the Willamette Week and played all over their beloved Portland. Now back in NYC, the band has played at venues such as Knitting Factory, Santos Party House, Union Pool, and Cake Shop. They spent late 2010 organizing a sold-out benefit at Knitting Factory for the Kathleen Hanna documentary produced by Sini Anderson. Currently recording new material without label support thus far, the ever-resourceful Roulettes recently tracked vocals in a public middle-school's math classroom. Mmm mmm yeah.

The Royal Drag http://www.theroyaldrag.com The Royal Drag is the brainchild of singer/songwriter Josh Fox, who has played with, recorded, produced, managed, and hung out with countless musicians in New York City and abroad. Many of the songs center around themes of disaffection and isolation, with a draggy but cheery pop sound, influenced by artists such as Pavement, Elliot Smith, The Eels, The Smiths, and Wilco.

In a world comfortable enough to slip away, they play to the part of you that didn't get where you really wanted to go, say what you really wanted to say. Also the part that really digs catchy tunes.

James Tressel http://www.my.opera.com/jetressel/blog In addition to inspiring owls, James Tressel spends his time reading weird fiction and making strange music by himself and with the bands Horsey and Science & Justice. Genya Turovskaya http://www.supermachinepoetry.com/dearjenny Genya Turovskaya is a poet, literary translator, and psychotherapist. She is the author of several chapbooks—Dear Jenny (Supermachine), New Year's Day (Octopus Books), Calendar (Ugly Duckling Presse), and The Tides (Octopus Books). Her poetry and translations of contemporary Russian poets have appeared in A Public Space, Aufgabe, Chicago Review, Conjunctions, Fence, Gulf Coast, jubilat, Mad Hatters Review, Octopus, Saltgrass, Supermachine, and other publications. Ugly Duckling Presse published her translation of Aleksandr Skidan's Red Shifting. She is also the co-translator of Elena Fanailova's The Russian Version (UDP) which won the University of Rochester's Three Percent Prize for Best Translated Book of Poetry in 2010.

Ken L. Walker http://www.kenlwalker.tumblr.com Ken L. Walker still carries a Kentucky driver's license in his wallet even though he has lived in Brooklyn and Queens for the past five years. He sadly completed leading a poetry workshop at the Riker's Island Correctional Facility. He earned an M.F.A. from Brooklyn College and has published criticism and poetry in BOMB Magazine, Crab Orchard Review, La Fovea, Lumberyard, the Boxcar, The Brooklyn Rail, The New Yorker online, The Poetry Project Newsletter, The Wolf, and Washington Square. He was the features editor for Coldfront magazine from and curated the semi-annual Letter Home Reading Series. He is compiling a database of American independent poetry presses and has taught and created curriculum at Bard College, Brooklyn College CUNY, LIM College, Medgar Evers College CUNY, Pace University, at The Metropolitan College of New York, and York College CUNY. He has guest lectured at American University, San Francisco State University, and Vanderbilt University.

Katie Yates, Stockport Flats http://www.stockportflats.org/house.htm http://www.stockportflats.org Katie Yates grew up mostly in French West Africa with stints in India and Turkey and now finds herself in New Haven, Connecticut, not a bad place to raise children. She has a D.A. from The University at Albany, an M.F.A. from Naropa University, and a B.A. from Carleton College, which simply implies she's well qualified to converse with a two-year- old. She lives with her blended family in a brick house in the suburbs and looks for insight in Buddhist teachings as much as she can. She still considers the Pacific Northwest her home and is the author of Morning Stories, High Watermark Salo[o]n: Volume 3 Number 2.

In the muddy mop-up after Federal Disaster #1649, the worst of three 100-year floods, poet Lori Anderson Moseman and producer Tom Moseman created Stockport Flats to celebrate writers and artists whose creative buoyancy builds community. They feature experimental poetry (Meander Scar Series), a sustainability poetry (Witness Post Series), and cross-aesthetic mix of poetry (Confluence Series).

Hi. This is going to just a few people, mostly alums, who will have nothing to lose by posting this info. Some of the students have started a petition and I would really appreciate if you could post a link on facebook.

Some of you don't even know what I'm taking about; see below for that:

Here is the petition:
http://www.change.org/en-GB/petitions/president-of-the-university-of-new-orleans-louisiana-maintain-bill-lavender-as-the-director-of-uno-s-low-residency-mfa

Also, here is the FB page devoted to the issue:
http://www.facebook.com/SaveTheUnoLowResProgram

And for those of you who haven't heard, the story:

Below is an email I received from my Dean while I was in Edinburgh this summer. I then heard from my GA that they have changed the locks on my office. I'll leave it to you to judge the fairness of this action after my 15 years at UNO during which I created and developed one of the most unique and successful low res programs in the country.

Dear Bill—The news I have for you is not good, and I apologize for relaying it through e-mail, rather than face-to-face. But I completely understand your wish to know the disposition of your employment as soon as possible. Your position will be eliminated. We have put the Press on hiatus and are relocating the CWW Low-Res to an existing faculty member.

I would very much like you to work through the month of August, so that we can make the transition as smooth as possible. By working through August, you will also complete 15 years of employment at UNO. I encourage you toseek advice from HR as soon as you return from your trip to understand what benefits you are entitled to.

I am very sorry to bring you this news; although it does not make the news any easier to swallow, I want to assure you that you are not alone. During this period, 19 Liberal Arts employees—both faculty and staff—are losing their jobs. I am afraid that there will be more to come.

Please make an appointment to see me at your very earliest convenience when you get back.

Susan

Petition toprotect Bill Lavender as director of UNO Press

Fri 3 Aug 2012

The University of New Orleans Press has been put on "haitus" and its modivating editor fired. The presumptive reason was that of budget constraints, but in fact the Press was self-sustaining and cost-free. It also published an international range of writers, many of them prize winners or otherwise notable. Bill Lavender had, in fact, taken a rather lifeless creature in 2007 an enlivened it with over 100 publications, a remarkable achievement.

In support of the Press and in support of Bill Lavender and in support of fine literature and good reading, please visit UNO Press's site and then consider signing a petition indicating your support.

and see his dismissal blamed on "budget cuts." You, Barton and Krantz, know that his dismissal was plotted by you in advance; the "budget cuts" were merely a convenient screen to hide your true motives.

This is proven by several facts, the most damning of which is the fact the Barton was actually in San Miguel de Allende at the time Bill's dismissal was announced, planning to move the study-abroad program there. It is obvious, then, that Bill's dismissal was a pre-ordained fact, that Barton was assuming he would no longer be a part of the program at the time he bought his tickets. Rick Barton, would you like to produce the receipt that shows the date of purchase of your tickets?

The dishonesty of blaming this unconscionable take-over on budget cuts by the Jindal administration, while cast as a polite, white lie, perhaps even as a kind gesture to spare Bill's feelings and ease the enormous emotional loss that this must be for him, it is in fact the lowest form of capitulation. The Jindal administration, and the national cartel of corporations from which he draws his support and his policy, have set their sights on nothing less than the destruction of public education. When you lie and blame his dismissal on "budget cuts" you are in fact supporting this policy, acting as Jindal's emissaries on campus, plotting the destruction of the very thing you purport to save.

Everyone, of course, in privileged America and Europe, plays the role of assassin's assistant to one degree or another. We shop at Wal-Mart; we pay our bills to AT&T; our retirement funds are all invested in the very corporations which, through ALEC and the other conservative think tanks, are now writing education policy for conservative politicians. But today we ask you to give the devil his due, to pull down your masks and tell the truth.
So now, right now, you two, for the record, in front of all the writing students at UNO, CWW and low res alike, in front of these alumni, in front of all these faculty at UNO and all the visiting faculty who have taught online and in the abroad programs Bill led, faculty at universities all over the US and Europe, in front of your Provost, President, and Governor, in front of all the authors Bill published at UNO Press, writers and poets from America, Italy, Japan, Spain, Ecuador, Zimbabwe, Brazil, England, France, Algeria, Venezuela, in front, too, of posterity, those who will come after us seeking truth the way we did when we first came to the university, having faith that it would be found, in front of all those who will look back at you and know that you held the keys to knowledge, to truth, in your time, in front, in short, of the whole world, please tell us why, after fifteen years of service during which Bill Lavender created and gave to UNO a degree program of national prominence and high profitability, generating millions of dollars in tuition that would not have been there otherwise, and built a press of international distinction that is now in the unheard-of position of being self-supporting, he has been dismissed with less notice than is normally afforded to a janitor, and four

Sat 4 Aug 2012

Those not familiar with the "poetry is" project can check it out at http://www.quasha.com/art-is/poetry-is. General description below for the upcoming event live on radio and webcast, and there's an overall view at http://www.quasha.com/art-is .

Poets who will be in the Catskill, NY area Aug. 11th and would like to participate in the live broadcast and filming (for future volumes of "poetry is"), please contact me at [redacted].

Tune in to hear this show.

Tune into free103point9 Online Radio and WGXC 90.7-FM for a special radio iteration of George Quasha <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/George_Quasha>'s expansive /art is/Speaking Portraits/ project. This program will feature "radio portraits" in-process and broadcast live from the free103point9 Wave Farm Study Center and WGXC's Acra studio.

"art is ... what?" Quasha's ongoing video work of "speaking portraits" puts this impossible, but inevitable, question before artists themselves, who let us in on their private space of art definition. Since 2002, he has filmed around 1000 artists of all kinds (including sculptors, painters, filmmakers, video artists, poets, composers, performance artists, dancers, potters, etc.) in 11 countries (and 24 languages!). The result is an ongoing and constantly changing work called art is/music is/poetry is, which has been internationally exhibited in museums and galleries, primarily as installations, screened either as projections or on one or more monitors. You can see multiple volumes online at quasha.com/art-is. <http://quasha.com/art-is>

Now, for the first time, /art is/ will be created live and unedited for radio, where Quasha interacts with Hudson Valley artists of various kinds as he asks them to say what, in their view, art or music or poetry actually is. In his own view there is no "right" answer, but only the ideas artists themselves work from, either implicitly or explicitly. Many artist say that they don't know what art is, but in the process of discussing it they discover that, often to their own surprise, they know very well what it is. What if art is different for every person? In a culture that tries to define things in the abstract, this could spur us to think very differently about art and how it works in our lives and in society at large. In art is the question comes alive in the moment as if asked for the first time.

Re: Bill Lavender

Sorry for the personal note.
I would like to share an article that appeared on the Times Picayune this morning:

The entire saddest story:

Visionary director of UNO Press sacked amid budget cuts at the University of New Orleans

Chris Waddington
Posted: 08/03/2012 6:49 PM

The director of UNO Press, the University of New Orleans' ambitious, nationally regarded book publishing venture, will lose his job in the current round of state-mandated budget cuts for public universities in Louisiana.

Professor Bill Lavender, who also led UNO's Low Residency MFA and Creative Writing Program, confirmed on Friday that his position at the press has been eliminated. Lavender was the sole employee of the press, which he operated with a staff of four graduate assistants. News of his departure spread on the internet Thursday as authors and students began a petition drive in support of the ousted writer. Lavender also lost his position with the university's writing program for MFA students who did much of their work online and met with faculty during brief, intensive residencies.

UNO spokesman Adam Norris declined to comment on changes at the press and in the MFA program, noting that the school is still formulating its budget plans and expects to make formal announcements about cuts in the coming week.

The fate of the publishing venture remains unclear, Lavender said

"I've been asked to tell our authors that UNO is evaluating the press to determine what course of action the school will take with it in the future," Lavender said

Lavender transformed the publishing operation during his tenure. When he took the reins in 2007, it had two out-of-print books in its inventory, both by UNO faculty. Currently the press has about 80 titles in print. It specializes in works in translation, including fiction and poetry by some international figures who first appeared in English through UNO's program. Lavender also forged an alliance with the popular Neighborhood Story Project, published two oral histories about Hurricane Katrina, and championed books like "New Orleans: The Underground Guide," a quirky eccentric guide for tourists that sold especially well at local festivals.

Lavender attracted big names to the press, including the widely published New Orleans fiction writer Moira Crone. Crone, who won a prestigious Robert Penn Warren Award for Fiction, turned to UNO Press to publish her 2012 novel, "The Not Yet."

"As an author, I was delighted to work with a publisher that would take a chance on a book that was way outside my usual kind of writing," Crone said. "Bill encourages innovation in writers."

Crone also praised the innovative business model that Lavender created at UNO Press.

“I have never encountered a publisher — in New York or at other universities — that was so agile, so savvy and responsive about publicity, and so smart about using new technology and short print runs to keep costs down,” Crone said. “This wasn’t a place with tons of books sitting around in boxes. They know how to get books into the hands of readers. The press is a feather in the cap for New Orleans: a literary addition to the international profile we already have as a port, a music center and a culinary hub.”

Delirium Chapbook Contest Post for Poetics Listserv

Sat 4 Aug 2012

Dear Poetics Listserv Editors,
I am writing to inquire if the below contest submission information could be posted on behalf of Le Pink-Elephant Press'.

Thank you for your time and consideration,

Suzanne Savickas and Cheryl Townsend

Delirium Chapbook Contest

Le Pink-Elephant Press is currently open to the first Delirium Chapbook Poetry Contest. To be considered, please send a hard copy of original poetry, between 25-48 pages in length to Le Pink-Elephant Press, 4975 Comanche Trail, Stow, Ohio 44224. Include one copy of the poems without a title and author and page, and one copy of the manuscript with the title and author page. Manuscripts should be separated with clips. Poems should be paginated, with one poem per page. For each submission, we require a reading fee of $10.00. Please make checks payable to Le Pink-Elephant Press. Once read, manuscripts will be recycled. We do NOT read simultaneous submissions. Delirium Chapbook Poetry Contest searches for the innovative works from both new and experienced authors, who use words to dance across the page. After all, “the only war that matters is the war against the imagination.” Submission deadline is currently rolling. Winner will receive 20 copies of the chapbook.

About the Press

Le Pink Elephant Press was founded in 2003 in Kent, Ohio after the deconstruction of Hart's Compass. Le Pink Elephant Press' founder and editor in chief is Suzanne Savickas. The Press primarily publishes poetry and short-short fiction. Hybrid and Experimental work is encouraged. Translations will be considered.

Le Pink-Elephant Press also houses A Trunk of Delirium (a literary and arts journal):

Le Pink-Elephant Press is a press which publishes literary and artistic works seeking the finest available from both established and as yet known creators. Editors: Suzanne Savickas & Cheryl Townsend

MISSION STATEMENT Le Pink-Elephant Press and A Trunk of Delirium seeks to hold the diverse expressions of today’s most memorable creators, preserving such evoking delights for future consumption of the masses. By offering up its collectives in both web and print spaces, it is intended to make available more avenues to delight in the pulse of our present, yet ever changing, artistic scene of delirious exudence. Let creative liberty prevail!

TELL ME OFF AND GET A GIFT

Hello poets and readers,

As some of you know, Michelle Naka Pierce and I are traversing the country this year, bringing avant-goodness to any group of people who will sit still long enough to listen. I'm also making a solemn promise to anyone good enough to attend one of our readings: if you approach me and say, in your most menacing voice "Give me my fucking gift, poet!," I will give you a secret poetry gift.

Because we're all in the Olympic spirit, points will be awarded for maximizing the element of surprise and for the originality of your delivery; hence, the more points awarded, the greater the gift. And face it: it's been months since your last birthday, the heat is making you cranky, and there's nothing you'd like more than to tell someone off and be awarded a prize for it. So if you're in the Portland, OR area this Sunday, come on down and get your grouch on.

Chris Pusateri, Michelle Naka Pierce and Stephen Vincent read from new work
Sunday, August 12th @ 7:30pm
The Waypost
3120 N. William Ave
Portland, OR
Complete details and bios @ http://www.flim.com/spareroom/

Now, despite what Heisenberg says, you can't always be everywhere at once. So for those of you whose hearts are in Portland but whose corporeal forms are in Denver or Boulder, let me strongly recommend that you drop by Innisfree Poetry Bookstore to check out the inimitable Debrah Morkun, author of The Ida Pingala and Projection Machine, both by BlazeVox. She's appearing with j/j hastain.

When he took the reins in 2007, it had two out-of-print books in its inventory, both by UNO faculty. Currently the press has about 80 titles in print. It specializes in works in translation, including fiction and poetry by some international figures who first appeared in English through UNO's program. Lavender also forged an alliance with the popular Neighborhood Story Project, published two oral histories about Hurricane Katrina, and championed books like "New Orleans: The Underground Guide," a quirky eccentric guide for tourists that sold especially well at local festivals. Lavender attracted big names to the press, including the widely published New Orleans fiction writer Moira Crone. Crone, who won a prestigious Robert Penn Warren Award for Fiction, turned to UNO Press to publish her 2012 novel, "The Not Yet." "As an author, I was delighted to work with a publisher that would take a chance on a book that was way outside my usual kind of writing," Crone said. "Bill encourages innovation in writers." Crone also praised the innovative business model that Lavender created at UNO Press. "I have never encountered a publisher — in New York or at other universities — that was so agile, so savvy and responsive about publicity, and so smart about using new technology and short print runs to keep costs down," Crone said. "This wasn't a place with tons of books sitting around in boxes. They know how to get books into the hands of readers. The press is a feather in the cap for New Orleans: a literary addition to the international profile we already have as a port, a music center and a culinary hub." ••••••• Chris Waddington can be reached at [redacted] or [redacted] . The presumptive reason was that of budget constraints, but in fact the Press was self-sustaining and cost-free. It also published an international range of writers, many of them prize winners or otherwise notable. Bill Lavender had, in fact, taken a rather lifeless creature in 2007 an enlivened it with over 100 publications, a remarkable achievement.*

7 Poets Press Vinyl Poetry Anthology?
Tue 7 Aug 2012

Hi,

While doing some archival research recently, I came across correspondence relating to an LP anthology of poets reading their work, that was being planned by Carl Larsen's 7 Poets Press (sometimes written "Seven Poets Press") around August 1961. I am wondering if the project was ever seen through to publication. Does anybody know?

Thanks,
Robert Dewhurst

Basil's Arc in NYC September 22nd - All Are Welcome

Thu 9 Aug 2012

"Basil's Arc - The Paintings and Poetics of Basil King" will be presented at Anthology Film Archives (Maya Deren Theatre) on September 22, 2012 from noon to 6pm.

A celebration of the visual art of Basil King, now in his 77th year, the program includes conversations on King's art (illustrated with slides) by noted critics and poets, original music inspired by his images and his texts and will culminate in the debut screening of Basil King: Mirage, a film portrait created by Nicole Peyrafitte and Miles Joris-Peyrafitte, commissioned by the Friends of Basil King.

What does it mean when a small group of poets join together to create such an event? While a growing circle of readers recognize and cherish King's inventive literary output, exhibitions of his visual art have been confined to "literary" venues-Poets House, the Poetry Project, the Bowery Poetry Club, the old Gotham Bookmart.

The Friends - Mitch Highfill, Vincent Katz, Burt Kimmelman, Martha King, and Kimberly Lyons-are determined to introduce his visual art to a wider audience.

King's syncretic aesthetics have been shaped by his early childhood in WWII London, friendship with poets of the San Francisco Renaissance, Abstract Expressionist painters and poets in New York, and mentors and friends at Black Mountain College, including Robert Creeley, Charles Olson, and John Wieners. His past 40 years have been spent in studios in Brooklyn where King continues to live, paint, and write poetry. His most recent writing, complementing his prodigious output of paintings, is the book, Learning to Draw/A History (Skylight Press, 2012) and chapbooks from Cy Gist and fewer & further Press. He has also continued his history of providing art for small press poetry publications by friends and colleagues.

Participants in the program at Anthology include Edna Augusta, William Benton, Laurie Duggan, Tom Fink, Paolo Javier, Andrew Levy, Harry Lewis, Tom Patterson, George Quasha, Barry Schwabsky, and each of the Friends.

For more information about Basil King's work visit www.basilking.net<http://www.basilking.net/> and the blog, www blog.basilking.net<http://basilking.net/>.

100 Thousand Poets for Change in Lafayette, Louisiana 9/29/12

Sat 11 Aug 2012

Hello beautiful people,

/Unlikely Stories/ and Revolution Theory will be sponsoring the 2012 event for 100 Thousand Poets for Change in Lafayette, Louisiana!

There's a worldwide trend in 100TPC events to combine poetry and music, and we'll be going with that, featuring:
Cajun/zydeco by Papa Delta and The Zigzag Wanderers
R&B by Angie Joell
Spoken word by Revolution Theory, Project S.O.U.N.D. and the St. Martinville High School Dead Poets' Society Poetry by Darrell Bourque, Marthe Reed, Jerry McGuire, and /Unlikely/ regular Michael Harold and Delta Papa will retake the stage to participate alongside a spoken word open mic

All poets and spoken word artists in the area should feel free to contact me or Jessica Bordelon of Revolution Theory if they'd like to be involved.

The event will be held at:
Cité des Arts
109 Vine St.
in downtown Lafayette, Louisiana
Saturday, Sept. 29, 6pm
(note that there are some announcements floating around the Internet with an afternoon time. That has been changed. The correct time is 6pm, to wrap up by 10pm.)

Check out http://unlikelystories.org/blog/content/?p=606 or http://www.unlikelystories.org/pdfs/100tpc_2012_lafayette_6pm.pdf for the poster or https://www.facebook.com/events/338362036250654/ for the Facebook event.

Hope to see you there!

Useful for creative writing (at least in terms of poetry) that I've found particularly interesting and useful (students particularly like the first one) are:

The Art of Recklessness, by Dean Young -- "We are making birds, not birdcages."
and
Poets on teaching: a sourcebook, ed. by Joshua Marie Wilkinson

Reading in Hudson, NY: Bernadette Mayer, Jennifer Karmin, Philip Good, and Deborah Poe

Mon 13 Aug 2012

Friends in the area, please join us Friday night in Hudson, New York for a special summer event.

*

Poets Philip Good, Jennifer Karmin, Bernadette Mayer, and Deborah Poe read from their newest work as part of the Spontaneously Luminous Series, a roving reading series meant to provide space for writers to perform their poetry and prose from West to East Coast.

PHILIP GOOD is a graduate of The School of Visual Arts. He co-edited the last of the mimeo zines, Blue Smoke. His work can be found online with BigBridge, Exquisite Corpse, Tool and The Volta . His book UNTITLED WRITINGS FROM A MEMBER OF THE BL ANK GENERATION by Trembling Pillow Press has been praised by Lisa Jarnot and Michael Gizzi. He has read his poetry all across America and abroad. He now lives next to the Kinderhook and Tsatsawassa Creeks.

JENNIFER KARMIN has published, performed, exhibited, taught, and experimented with language across the U.S., Japan, Kenya, and Europe. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, and on city streets. These collaborative pieces include 4000 Words 4000 Dead, Revolutionary Optimism, Walking Poem, Unnatural Acts, and Utopic Monster Theory. In 2013, she will travel to Cuba for a new collaboration with the Omni Collective. Jennifer is the author of the text-sound epic Aaaaaaaaaaalice (Flim Forum Press, 2010) and her writing is published in the anthology I'll Drown My Book: Conceptual Writing by Women (Les Figues Press, 2012). She teaches in the Creative Writing program at Columbia College Chicago and at Truman College, where she works with immigrants as a community educator. Since 2005, she has curated the Red Rover Series.

BERNADETTE MAYER'S poetry has been praised by John Ashbery as “magnificent.” Brenda Coultas calls her a master of “devastating wit.” Mayer is the author of more than two dozen volumes of poetry, including Midwinter Day, Sonnets, The Desires of Mothers to Please Others in Letters, and Poetry State Forest. Recently published are her works, Studying Hunger Journals and Ethics of Sleep. A former director of the Poetry Project at St. Mark’s Church in the Bowery and co-editor of the conceptual magazine 0 to 9 with Vito Acconci, Mayer has been a key figure on the New York poetry scene for decades.

DEBORAH POE is author of the poetry collections the last will be stone, too, Elements, and Our Parenthetical Ontology, as well as a hybrid novella, Hélène. Deborah's poetry is forthcoming or has recently appeared in journals such as Handsome, 1913, Shampoo, Denver Quarterly, Otoliths, The Dictionary Project, Yew Journal, and PEEP/SHOW. Deborah Poe is assistant professor of English at Pace University, Westchester, and guest curator for Trickhouse. She has also taught as afternoon faculty at the Port Townsend Writer's Workshop in Washington and Casa Libre en La Solana in Tucson.

Final call, Transcontinental Award 2012, 8/15

Tue 14 Aug 2012

Here are the full guides--
-- Pavement Saw Press Transcontinental Award 2012 Submission Guidelines ----

You can submit directly to the website at:
http://www.pavementsaw.org/pages/transaward.htm

--This award is for first or second full length books--

All contributors receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Please mention this to your friends and all others who might be interested!

Electronic and mailed entries must meet these requirements: 1. The manuscript should be at least 48 pages of poetry and no more than 70 pages of poetry in length. Separations between sections are NOT a part of the page count. 2. A one page cover letter. Include a brief biography, the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. This should be followed by a page which lists publication acknowledgments for the book. For each acknowledgement mention the publisher (journal, anthology, chapbook etc.) and the poem published. 3. The manuscript should be bound with a single clip and begin with a title page including the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. 4. The second page should have only the title of the manuscript. There are to be no acknowledgments or mention of the author's name from this page forward. Submissions to the contest are blind judged. 5. There should be no more than one poem on each page. The manuscript can contain pieces longer than one page. 6. The manuscript should be paginated, beginning with the first page of poetry.

Each year Pavement Saw Press will publish at least one book of poetry and/or prose poems from manuscripts received during this competition. Selections are chosen through a blind judging process. The competition is open to anyone who has not previously published one, or more than one, volume of poetry or prose poetry. The author receives $1000 and five percent of the 1000 copy press run. Previous judges have included Judith Vollmer, David Bromige, Bin Ramke and Howard McCord. This year David Baratier will be the judge; past students, Pavement Saw Press interns and employees are not allowed to submit. All poems must be original, all prose must be original, fiction or translations are not acceptable. All writers without a full length book or those who have published only one full length book are eligible. Writers who have had a second volume of poetry and/or prose poetry under 40 pages printed or printed in limited editions of no more than 500 copies are also eligible. Submissions are accepted during the months of June, July, and until August 15th. All submissions must have an August 15th, 2012, or earlier, postmark. This is an award for first or second books only.

If you wish to send via regular mail your manuscript should be accompanied by a check in the amount of $20.00 made payable to Pavement Saw Press. All US contributors to the contest will receive books, chapbooks and journals equal to, or more than, the entry fee. Add $3 (US) for other countries to cover the extra postal charge. Do not include an SASE for notification of results, this information will be sent with the free book. Do not send the only copy of your work. All manuscripts are recycled and individual comments on the manuscripts cannot be made. Entry Fee: $20 for mailed US and Canadian entries, $23 for mailed overseas entries, $27 to submit electronically (all entries, world wide).

If you wish to submit electronically, you should send $27.00 via paypal to [redacted]. We will then send you an e-mail confirmation as well as where to e-mail the manuscript. Electronic submissions need to be sent as PDF files or as word (.doc) files. Other formats are not accepted. The extra cost is to cover the paypal fees as well as the time, labor, ink, and so on, to print out your manuscript. In addition to the prize winner, sometimes another anonymous manuscript is chosen, if enough entries arrive. This â€œeditors choiceâ€ manuscript will be published under a standard royalty contract. A decision will be reached in December or January. Entries should be sent to:

Ekleksographia Breathing Again
Tue 14 Aug 2012

After a long hiatus filled with earthquakes, radiation, rhymes, the crash of the dollar, the strengthening of the yen, two operations and a bio-mechanical arm, diminishing hair but a general strengthening of mind, willpower and all that jazz, Ekleksographia is returning from the vale of despond to a website near you. jwcurry's Messagio Galore, take x: a report,
Tue 14 Aug 2012

"On Saturday, August 10, 2012, Ottawa poet, performer and publisher jwcurry held the tenth edition of his ongoing Messagio Galore performances at the Rockcliffe Park Pavilion in Rockcliffe Park, featuring "a variety of sound poetry & similaria" performed by himself, Rachel Lindsey, Sheena Mordasiewiez, Brian Pirie and Zachary Robert, with additional fill-ins by former Messagio regular Alistair Larwill. I'm pretty sure that I've now witnessed all but three of his Messagio performances (the third was in Calgary and the previous was held in Toronto), and he has utilized a variety of voices over the years, including Christine McNair, Grant Wilkins, Sandra Ridley, Peter Norman, Lesley Marshall, Nicholas Power, Rob Read, Roland Prevost, John Lavery, ross priddle, Laurie Fuhr, Maria Erskine, Max Middle and Carmel Purkis.[...]"

Sponsored by the Spontaneously Luminous Series a roving reading series meant to provide space for writers to perform their poetry and prose from West to East Coast

PHILIP GOOD is a graduate of The School of Visual Arts. He co-edited the last of the mimeo zines, Blue Smoke. His work can be found online with BigBridge, Exquisite Corpse, Tool and The Volta . His book UNTITLED WRITINGS FROM A MEMBER OF THE BLANK GENERATION by Trembling Pillow Press has been praised by Lisa Jarnot and Michael Gizzi. He has read his poetry all across America and abroad. He now lives next to the Kinderhook and Tsatsawassa Creeks.

JENNIFER KARMIN has published, performed, exhibited, taught, and experimented with language across the U.S., Japan, Kenya, and Europe. Her multidisciplinary projects have been presented at festivals, artist-run spaces, and on city streets. She is the author of the text-sound epic Aaaaaaaaaaalice (Flim Forum Press, 2010) and her writing is published in the anthology I'll Drown My Book: Conceptual Writing by Women (Les Figues Press, 2012). Jennifer teaches in the Creative Writing program at Columbia College Chicago and at Truman College, where she works with immigrants as a community educator. Since 2005, she has curated the Red Rover Series.

BERNADETTE MAYER'S poetry has been praised by John Ashbery as â€œmagnificent.â€ Brenda Coultas calls her a master of â€œdevastating wit.â€ Mayer is the author of more than two dozen volumes of poetry, including Midwinter Day, Sonnets, The Desires of Mothers to Please Others in Letters, and Poetry State Forest. Recently published are her works, Studying Hunger Journals and Ethics of Sleep. A former director of the Poetry Project at St. Markâ€™s Church in the Bowery and co-editor of the conceptual magazine 0 to 9 with Vito Acconci, Mayer has been a key figure on the New York poetry scene for decades.

DEBORAH POE is author of the poetry collections the last will be stone, too, Elements, and Our Parenthetical Ontology, as well as a hybrid novella, HÃ©lÃ¨ne. Deborahâ€™s poetry is forthcoming or has recently appeared in journals such as Handsome, 1913, Shampoo, Denver Quarterly, Otoliths, The Dictionary Project, Yew Journal, and PEEP/SHOW. Deborah Poe is assistant professor of English at Pace University, Westchester, and guest curator for Trickhouse's "Experiment" door. She has also taught as afternoon faculty at the Port Townsend Writerâ€™s Workshop in Washington and Casa Libre en La Solana in Tucson. For more information, please visit http://www.deborahpoe.com.

the ottawa small press book fair, fall 2012 edition: Saturday, November 17, 2012

span-o (the small press action network - ottawa) presents:

the ottawa
small press book fair

fall 2012 edition
will be happening Saturday, November 17, 2012
in room 203 of the Jack Purcell Community Centre
(on Elgin, at 320 JackPurcell Lane).

contact rob at [redacted] to sign up for a table, etc.

"once upon a time, way way back in October 1994, rob mclennan & James Spyker invented a two-day event called the ottawa small press book fair, and held the first one at the National Archives of Canada..." Spyker moved to Toronto soon after our original event, but the fair continues, thanks in part to the help of generous volunteers, various writers and publishers, and the public for coming out to participate with alla their love and their dollars.

General info:
the ottawa small press book fair
noon to 5pm (opens at 11:00 for exhibitors)

admission free to the public.

$20 for exhibitors, full tables
$10 for half-tables (payable to rob mclennan, c/o 402 McLeod St #3, Ottawa ON K2P 1A6;

send by November 7 if you would like to appear in the exhibitor catalogue.

note: for the sake of increased demand, we are now offering half tables. for catalog, exhibitors should send name of press, address, email, web address, contact person, type of publications, list of publications (with price), if submissions are being considered & any other pertinent info, including upcoming ottawa-area events (if any).

& don't forget the pre-fair reading usually held the night before, info tba! also, due to the increased demand for table space, exhibitors are asked to confirm far earlier than usual. i.e. -- before, say, the day of the fair (there might be no space left!).

the fair usually contains exhibitors with poetry books, novels,cookbooks, posters, t-shirts, graphic novels, comic books, magazines, scraps of paper, gum-ball machines with poems, 2x4s with text, etc, including (at previous events) Bywords, Dusty Owl, Chaudiere Books, above/ground press, Room 302 Books, The Puritan, The Ottawa Arts Review, Buschek Books, The Grunge Papers, Broken Jaw Press, BookThug, Proper Tales Press, and others. happens twice a year, founded in 1994 by rob mclennan & James Spyker. now run by rob mclennan thru span-o. questions, [redacted]

free things can be mailed for fair distribution to the same address. we are unable to sell things for folk who can't make it, sorry. also, always looking for volunteers to poster, move tables, that sort of thing. let meknow if anyone able to do anything. thanks. for more information, bother rob mclennan.if you're able/willing to distribute posters/fliers for the fair, send me an email at [redacted] and for information on this or other small press book fairs across Canada, be sure to check out http://www.smallpressbookfair.blogspot.com/

Noel Black and the G8 Lollies
Wed 15 Aug 2012

Two new posts at Retort Magazine;
http://retortmagazine.com/live/

Four new poems by Noel Black:

from "Sky"-

Words are so stupid. I hate when writers say, â€œI love words.â€ What does that even mean?

and from Ozymandias-

â€œI am Ozymandias
king of this little fish castle.
Look upon my weird modern apartment novelty fish tank, ye mighty ,and despair!â€

http://retortmagazine.com/live/2012/08/four-by-noel-black/

And introducing the G8 Lollies by Siarhei Tserasiuk

You have to see them to believe them!
All-day suckers - 8 of them; Obama, Merkel, Putin, et. al.

http://retortmagazine.com/live/2012/08/g8-lollipops-by-siarhei-tserasiuk/

â€œG8 lollies: more color, more tasteâ€ is a series of lollipops. The seriesâ€¨ consists of small portraits 3D of the G8 leaders; 8 faces in total. All made of sugar. You can buy and eat them, lick them, suck them or throw them away â€“ itâ€™s up to you. â€œFor the love of money is the root of all kinds of evilâ€ I once read in one book. The idea of human supremacy in this world is an illusion, since none of us can continue his/her life forever or predict what is going to happen tomorrow. We are born naked and leave this earth the same way. But still many think they are very powerful, and can make decisions about lives of others, etc. Eight all-day suckers.

Global Event Embraces Local Issues Through Poetry, Music, Art and More

*Nearly 700 Events Planned in More Than 115 Countries for * 100 Thousand Poets for Change

* *

Santa Rosa, Calif. (August 14, 2012) – September 29, 2012 marks the second annual global event of 100 Thousand Poets for Change, a grassroots organization that brings poets, artists and musicians (new this year) together to call for environmental, social, and political change, within the framework of peace and sustainability. The local focus is key to this global event as communities around the world raise their voices through concerts, readings, workshops, flash mobs and demonstrations that speak to the heart of their specific area of concerns, such as homelessness, ecocide, racism and censorship.

* *

“Peace and sustainability is a major concern worldwide, and the guiding principle for this global event,” said Michael Rothenberg, Co-Founder of 100 Thousand Poets for Change. “We are in a world where it isn't just one issue that needs to be addressed. A common ground is built through this global compilation of local stories, which is how we create a true narrative for discourse to inform the future.”

* *

Organizers and participants are hoping through their actions and events to seize and redirect the political and social dialogue of the day and turn the narrative of civilization towards peace and sustainability. Those that want to get involved can visit www.100tpc.org to find an event near them or sign up to organize one in their area.

* *

There are nearly 700 events planned worldwide, including:

* *

• 25 different events in the San Francisco Bay Area, the birthplace of 100 Thousand Poets for Change, with live poetry readings by Beat Legend Michael McClure, former US Poet Laureate Robert Hass and other major poets

* *

• The Occupy Wall Street Poetry group kicks off a weekend of events in New York City with a poetry reading at the famous St. Mark’s Poetry Project

* *

• Peace On Streets, R.O.A.D., Tasker Elite and SHARP will host performance artists, poets, musicians, hip hop artists and various youth and parent groups who will perform and lead workshops throughout Philadelphia to bring awareness to the ongoing problem of street violence in their city

* *

• Wordstock, a 3 day festival at the Bamboo Arts and Celebration Center in De Leon Springs, FL, will include poetry slams, concerts, and an art exhibition focusing on images of war and peace

* *

• In New Orleans, a blues festival featuring ten bands will help raise funds for medical care for aging musicians

* *

• In Jamaica a week long Street Dub Vibe series called “Tell the Children the Truth” will include concerts, spoken word performances, art exhibits, lectures, and workshops to bring attention to the damaging culture of secrecy and denial surrounding the abuse, poverty and illiteracy impacting the nation’s children and destroying their future.

* *

*• Poetry and peace gatherings are planned in the strife-torn cities of Kabul and Jalalabad, Afghanistan *

* *

• In Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt, poets, musicians and mime artists, in response to the revolution in Egypt and the major changes taking place in the Arab World, will perform in public spaces and theaters and explore new ways to communicate their concerns, and their roles as artists, in influencing the future of their country

* *

• In Volos, Greece, there will be 5 days of poetry and music events, including an exhibition of photography looking at the new phenomenon of homelessness in Greece

* *

*• An event in Blackpool, England will celebrate activist poets and writers of past generations through a special performance of Bullets and Daffodils,a play about the life of peace poet Wilfred Owen *

* *

*100 Thousand Poets for Change began in Sonoma County, Calif. The official Headquarters’ Event<http://100tpcmedia.org/100TPC2012/2012/06/100tpc-headquarters-event-arlene-francis-center-santa-rosa-california/> will take place at the Arlene Francis Center in downtown Santa Rosa and will feature poetry readings, group meditations, workshops, and music and dance of various styles including hip hop, flamenco, African drums, reggae, salsa, folk and more. The HQ event will also live-stream other 100 Thousand Poets for Change events worldwide. This 3-day event is sponsored by the Peace & Justice Center of Sonoma County and the Sonoma County Arts Council. *

Immediately following September 29th, all documentation on the 100TPC.org website, which will include specific event pages with photos, video and other documentation compiled by each city coordinator, will be preserved by Stanford University in California. Stanford recognized 100 Thousand Poets for Change in 2011 as an historical event, the largest poetry reading in history. They will continue to archive the complete contents of 100TPC.org, as part of their digital archiving program LOCKSS.

NEW CONTEMPORARY U.S. POETRY / LYRIC PROSE / POETICS

"The formal inventiveness of Mary Burger's writing in part derives from her questioning of received ideas but also from the sheer pleasure she seems to take in following what the sentence can do within the "as-yet as-ever still-undetermined space between send and receive." The attempt in these poems-in-prose, which are also essays or essay-like poetic inventions, is critical (as in critique and crucial): to make more real what is covered over and abstracted, not by simplifying but activating the thinking writer's experience of those cultural, philosophical, scientific, and social logics that imagine their target audiences ("us") to be objects merely of affirmation and compliance." CARLA HARRYMAN

THEN GO ON BY MARY BURGER
July 2012 | 93 pp. | $15.00 | ISBN: 978-1-933959-14-6

Excerpt: Necessary
About Mary Burger
Mary Burger is a writer, visual artist, and environmental designer interested in cross-genre writing that merges aspects of poetry, essay, and fiction. Her books include Sonny (Leon Works, 2005), a novella on the Trinity bomb test and A Partial Handbook for Navigators (Interbirth Books, 2008), writings about geography and social space. At various times she has been the editor of the literary journal Proliferation, the online forum Narrativity and accompanying anthology Biting the Error, and the experimental narrative press Second Story Books. She lives in Oakland, California and practices landscape design under the name Seedbank.

NEW CONTEMPORARY U.S. POETRY / LGBT WRITING

"Vulnerability, fragility, and anxiety are all flushed out into the open here and addressed with such strong sound and rhythm that we recognize a resilient, defiant strength within them. King puts relentless pressure on forces seemingly beyond our reach and, in bringing them closer, exposes their own vulnerable centers. This is a poetry equally committed to language as a tool with social obligations and language as an art material obligated to reveal its own beauty. King's language does both magnificently." COLE SWENSEN

I WANT TO MAKE YOU SAFE BY AMY KING

November 2011 | 87 pp. | $15.00 | ISBN: 978-1-933959-23-8
Cover art by Deborah Grant

Excerpt: "Lidija Dimkovska Has Made A Bomb Of My Eyes"

Amy King's mostrecent books are Slaves to Do These Things and I'm the Man Who Loves You, both from Blazevox. She is currently preparing a book of interviews with the poet Ron Padgett, and co-edits Esque Magazine with Ana Bozicevic. Amy also works with VIDA: Women in the Literary Arts, and teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College, as well as conducting workshops at such places as the San Francisco State University Poetry Center, Summer Writing Program @ Naropa University, Slippery Rock University and Rhode Island School of Design. Her poems have been nominated for numerous Pushcart Prizes, she was a Lambda Literary finalist, and she was the recipient of a MacArthur Scholarship for Poetry. Amy founded and curated, from 2006, the Brooklyn-based reading series, The Stain of Poetry, until 2010.

NEW CONTEMPORARY U.S. POETRY / ASIAN-AMERICAN WRITING

"Brandon Shimoda is underground, in the realm of the dead...His world is a hushed world--his book, a silent prayer, not to a god, but to life, the life of survivors--that one can whisper, can join the dead --that whisper turns into a ritualistic text, a celebration of witnessing, of the minute manifestations of reality. Brandon Shimoda barely touches his own words: they come to him from afar, float, take a sigh, haunt us and disappear, reappear on the next page, follow their obscure journey--in that we become bound to hear them, we follow them--they make a poem we want to read, and reread with closed eyes. Insinuating itself in the memory of Hiroshima and the bomb--a disaster surpassing disasters--his work is the saying of the dead who return, is a Requiem." ETEL ADNAN

O BON BY BRANDON SHIMODA

November 2011 | 93 pp. | $15.00 | ISBN: 978-1-933959-13-9
Cover art by Manabu Ikeda

Excerpt from O Bon

Shimoda is the author of The Girl Without Arms (Black Ocean, 2011) and The Alps (Flim Forum, 2008), as well as numerous limited edition chapbooks, including The Grave on the Wall (DoubleCross, 2011), Lake M: Book One (Corollary Press, 2010), The Inland Sea (Tarpaulin Sky, 2008) and, with poet/artist Phil Cordelli, The Pines, Volumes 1-6. He is co-editing, with poet/critic Thom Donovan, a retrospective collection of Etel Adnan's poetry and prose, to be published by Nightboat Books in 2013. Shimoda was born in California, and has since lived in eleven states and six countries, most recently Maine, Taiwan and Arizona.

Litmus Press is a program of Ether Sea Projects, Inc., a 501(c)(3) non-profit literature and arts organization. Dedicated to supporting innovative, cross-genre writing, the press publishes the work of translators, poets, and other writers, and organizes public events in their support. We encourage interaction between poets and visual artists by featuring contemporary artworks on the covers of our full-length books and in the pages of Aufgabe, our annual literary journal. By actualizing the potential linguistic, cultural and political benefits of international literary exchange, we aim to ensure that our poetic communities remain open-minded and vital.

accepting works for review at Unlikely Stories: Episode IV
Thu 16 Aug 2012

We are very pleased to announce the new staff and review structure at http://www.UnlikelyStories.org/ . First, we'd like to welcome Frankie Metro to the tribe. Frankie is a well-published author of prose/ essays/ poems/ flash fiction/ haibuns/ senryus/ short stories and stuff. His latest chapbook, "The Anarchist's Blac Book of Poetry," is now available from Crisis Chronicles Press. He'll be working with Margret Crist on our music selections, as well as blogging and reviewing books.

With Frankie's help, we're now accepting books (primarily of creative writing), films, music, and theatre productions in the SF Bay area for review consideration. If you feel your work would be appropriate, please see http://www.unlikelystories.org/mission.shtml#criticism for specific instructions, or just start at the top of http://www.unlikelystories.org/mission.shtml to get a feel for who we are and what we do.

Looking forward to reading you,

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is “Splice Poems” by Dan Godston

Sat 18 Aug 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œSplice Poemsâ€ by Dan Godston
Description:
This poetry collection splices together found texts with the poetâ€™s lines, creating dynamic juxtapositions of images and language. The found texts include quotes by a biologist, writer, and musicians and composers, and these poems explore themes such as an artistâ€™s identity and audienceâ€™s presence, jazz and improvisation, and cognition and the creative process.

Available as a free ebook here:

Ana Verse by Ann Bogle (reply to Jeffrey Side)

Sat 18 Aug 2012

I am surprised that Jeffrey Side thought that the Buffalo Poetics Listserv might be interested in his diatribe(s) against me and his use of private correspondence to prove his single point, needlessly surfacing and resurfacing Bobbi Lurie.

I was not planning to send my updated links to Buffalo Poetics Listserv, but since Side seems to feel there might be interest in it, I'll post them. In my view, the most interesting of the posts is "American Candid."

The first link below was not and has not been censored on the Internet. The second link is a reply to Jeffrey Side's first diatribe against me at his blog and has not been censored. The third link is a partial transcript of a flaming thread against me started by Jeffrey Side at Otherstream group at Facebook that I read a week after it occurred on August 1, 2012 and determined its genre "live theater." The fourth link is a partly censored item (the original paragraph in English was censored twice; the machine-translated German version and its machine-retranslated English version were not censored), both at Facebook Mad about Mad Hatters' group by Marc Vincenz and due to his diligence at Fictionaut, where Carol Novack had asked me to administer a small group for Mad Hatters' Review in the spirit of cooperation and Marc Vincenz had later delegated to me the same duty. I got Marc his first job at Mad Hatters' Review, co-editor in poetry, in the first week of October 2010, though he never stated his job title that way. He stated on the Internet editor in poetry. Carol Novack who might know that best besides the two of us has died. In her will, she stated that her friend and caregiver, Douglas Querl, may stay at her house, deeded to Mad Hat, a non-profit she formed, as long as he likes and that her cats stay there as well and the house not be sold for 40 years. It was to operate as a writers' retreat, overseen by Douglas or subsequent caretaker, and meeting place for the Mad Hatters' Review staff past and present. The attorney in Asheville who wrote the will that Carol signed, Robert Karriker, later discovered that as a deceased person, Carol cannot decide what becomes of the endowment or properties within the non-profit. The board of four or five (names withheld) wrote Douglas an eviction letter, came to the house and removed the cats and brought them to an undisclosed location (though there was a picture of Clicquot on Facebook being nuzzled by the Asheville bank employee, friends with Karriker, whom Carol met late in life).

Celebrating "Silent Spring" at 50
Sat 18 Aug 2012

Rachel Carson's amazing Silent Spring, published in 1962, is considered by many to be an essential book that helped to spark the modern environmental movement. 2012 marks the 50th anniversary of Silent Spring's publication, and programs celebrating this anniversary have been happening in the U.S. and around the world.

"Celebrating Silent Spring at 50" includes creative responses to Silent Spring and celebrations of Rachel Carson's life and legacy -- with events, artistic contributions (writings, music, visual art, multidisciplinary works), and more. Contributors (so far) include Daniel Blochwitz, Steven Schroeder, Bernie Krause, Susan Deer Cloud, Robert Whitescarver, Guillamette Johnston, Rick Zimmerman, Janet Culbertson, Geraldine Green, Cheryl Parry, Lynne Conner, Attilio Flavorini, Joel Robbins, David Cohen, Sherri Woodley, Laurie Lawlor, Joe Ciardiello, Charles Chu, Sherrida Woodley, Dan Godston, Joe Stevens, Ken Hada, Barney Bush, Christopher Reiger, Donna Clovis & others.

A call for contributions to "Celebrating Silent Spring at 50" is open until December 15. Visit http://www.silentspringat50.org/ to find out more.

For those who remember - and for those who do not - the poems dictated to me by mom (Barbara Moore Vincent) while in her early nineties a few years back, seven of them appear in the new, all together rather astonishing issue of Eoagh:

â€œIf I didnâ€™t write it down, itâ€™s shhhhhâ€: On Writing Dementia. Edited by Susan M. Schultz. Who deserves a big congrats for shepherding for what many is a phobic &Â difficult subject (getting old,Â ignored and a nuisance) into forms of instructionÂ and 'literary delight'. And thanks to Tim Trace Peterson for making Eoagh a home for such a quest.Â

As to new poems, my mom is 96 and the voice has gone mostly inarticulate and mute these last couple of years. A kind of quiet, strange serenity prevails.Â Ah, the poem of hers you might remember, certainly took my breath, etc. away:

The Months
January will open the horrible threat.

February will break off a few of the wicked.

March the winds will blow and frighten everybody.

April will break my heart.

May will come whisking through.

June is hard to decipher.

July will never stop to say hello.

August is jolly and happy for people like me.

September is hard to take.

October is full of joy for very few.

Sean Cole

and music from Clinical Trials

Sidewalk Café
94 Ave. A
NYC

Clinical Trials http://www.clinicaltrialsmusic.com/ http://www.clinicaltrials.bandcamp.com Clinical Trials is the electro-grunge/punk rock/riotous project founded by Somer Bingham, its main producer, writer, singer, and multi- instrumentalist. With influences ranging from Patti Smith and Nirvana to Metric and Depeche Mode, the songs of Clinical Trials often breed in a world of intoxicating dysphoria, edged with honesty and angst— without hesitating to embrace melodic catchiness. Autostraddle calls their latest EP Bleed Me "a panther"; "it’s a little dark and dangerous, it stalks and menaces and makes my heart thump that tiny bit faster. This is not glossy music. Bleed Me serves up six tracks ranging from gritty grunge to seductive melodic rock, each radiating raw heat and energy that edges near NSFW."

Sean Cole http://www.radiolab.org/people/sean-cole/ Sean Cole is the author of One Train (Dusie), Itty City (Pressed Wafer), and By the author. and The December Project (both from Boog Literature). His poems have appeared in publications including Black Clock, Boog City, Carve, Court Green, Pavement Saw, and Torch. In the anthology "Starting Today: Poems for Obama's First 100 Days," his was day 95. He is also a public radio reporter and producer, who works at the NPR show Radiolab.

David Kirschenbaum http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic http://boogcity.blogspot.com/ David Kirschenbaum’s work has appeared in the Brooklyn Review Online, Can We Have Our Ball Back, Chain, Unpleasant Event Schedule, and The Village Voice, among others. He is the editor and publisher of Boog City, a New York City-based small press and community newspaper now in its 22nd year. His poems form the lyrics of Casey Holford and Preston Spurlock's band Gilmore boys.

Two New Books from Birds, LLC
Thu 23 Aug 2012

Friends,

We
From:Â Birds EditorÂ <[redacted]>

Friends,

Weâ€™re crazy excited to announce our next two titles,Â Rise in the Fall, by Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ (Fall 2012), andÂ TheÂ First Four Books of Sampson Starkweather, by Sampson Starkweather (Winter 2013). A few words about these amazing books, as well as videos ofÂ AnaÂ andÂ SampsonÂ reading from their work:

Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ is both a poet's poet and the people's poet.Â Rise in the Fall, her second full-length collection, is a revolutionary book and an ars poetica for the polis in which she excludes nothing. Navigating literary history, gender, sexuality, economics, family and friends, she is at ease employing both the universal political statement and the lyric "I". A Croatian Ã©migrÃ©, BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ approaches the English language with a playful objectivity, bouncing back and forth from the conversational to the grand: "This is the whitest shit / I've ever written" she notes in her half-myth "About Nietzsche." Her critique of our time and place is at once empathetic and crude, tender and grotesque. Lucky for us, "beauty [wins] in all its casual terror and pain."

Written over ten years,Â The First Four Books of Sampson StarkweatherÂ is surreal but always grounded in the life of the poet. Comprised of experimental translations, emails, dreams, spells, prose, advice, and mythologies (among other things), these poems transform and steal from literary history, current events, technology, and the world. Just as Starkweather questions what makes a poem, his first book completely questions and reinterprets what a first bookâ€”or any bookâ€”of poems can be.

Love,

the Editors

Recent Release: Red Power - Joel Chace

Sun 26 Aug 2012

Hello All -

The latest release from quarter after press is Joel Chace's Red Power: http://quarterafter.org/2012/08/17/red-power-joel-chace/

With a nod toward Tristan Tzara's instructions for making a Dadaist poem ("take some scissors...."), Joel Chace's new book also takes its place among a number of works that have put gravity in the service of chance. Like Hans Arp's compositions of abstract geometric cut-outs or Jackson Pollock's signature drips or Joan Retallack's paperclipped apertures in Afterrimages, the poems here illuminate the extraordinary accident by which the aleatory and precipitous are linked in both Latin and German. The chance [Zufall] disposition of the words across the page in these poems is a singular event [Fall] arising from the coincidences [from the Latin cadere: "to fall"] of falling [fallend] along clinaminatic paths. The poet's gestures, however often repeated, cannot account in advance for variables in atmospheric conditions and the discrepant surface-areas of cut paper. The results, happily, are frequently prophetic, describing their own circumstances with a poetic obliquity. None of which should be surprising for a poet whose name, as it happens, is just a letter drop away from chance.

When I look at Joel Chace's work, I see a series that speaks in tongues that spins out into eternity that hangs from Van Gogh's asylum like a starry night.

The elements of this series are deceptively simple: cut up words, punctuation, tape, and the background of the page. The beauty of this arrangement is how it all interacts; each word has multiple references, creating a nearly infinite number of combinations. Periods float, looking for sentences to close. The page speaks its essence, a grey haze that resembles dark matter that silently affects the overall mechanism. This quantum field, this gravitational attraction, aids in poem formation, pulling and tugging every word.

And then there's the tape; this is an aspect of cut up, of visual poetry, of illustrations that each creator attempts to cover up. Joel takes a bold leap here and intentionally incorporates his tape, creating an extra level of fog, words falling, sinking softly into a majestic black hole. If you enjoy checking out a visual poetry series, this is the one. Joel brings us all closer to the ultimate source of creativity. Any good visual poet should enlighten any good visual poet; Joel is and does both, and who could ask for more?

Thomas Meyer's Beowulf----now available
Mon 27 Aug 2012

Hello

I'm pleased to announce this new translation of Beowulf by the poet Thomas Meyer, just released by Punctum Books:

http://punctumbooks.com/titles/thomas-meyer-beowulf/

This is an open access publication, which means it's available for free download; however, there is also an option to purchase a physical copy of the book, and I would urge anyone who's interested in Tom's work, Old English poetry, or supporting independent publishers to buy a copy.

Tom's translation was done 40 years ago during his studies at Bard, and it's pretty groundbreaking, especially compared to what poets have usually done with this poem. Check it out!

new from NO PRESS:
"A Marriage Tract by Marie Stopes" by Sheila Heti.
Published in an edition of 80 handbound numbered copies, only $4ea.

from the author's afterword:

"At one point in my novel, Ticknor, the character of George Ticknor reads a "marriage pamphlet" which is handed to him by a woman in the street. I wrote up the marriage pamphlet but I never put it in the book. One Christmas, I turn ed it into a little hand-sewn pamphlet and sent it to dozens of friends. This is the pamphlet's second iteration. The text was borrowed and adapted from the writings of Marie Stopes (1880‹1958), a controversial birth control reformer and sex education advocate. [...] This pamphlet is dedicated to the young men and women who once gathered at 1223 Bathurst Street in Toronto, where we were joyously developing a ³moralityŠ in a time of innocence Š insufficient to bring [us] happiness through the course of [our] life.² ‹Sheila Heti

from "The Amateur Scientistâ€™s Notebook: Floret as Bird"

What is hunger if I once listened to a floret
slurp spilt water into soil, its sex a spore on wind,
a single seed left for a bird to eat. With any certainty
I could not call you bird. I could not call you anything other thanâ€”Like, say, in the shallows
of the river we laid crawdad traps until our fingers pruned.
From the bankâ€™s oxblood-colored body we uprooted
clay, molded wet grains into plates, set them on some stones to harden. Shoes soaked in silt, we swelled,
a hunger heavy as a field of florets, feathers dreamed to sprout from skin. A hunger of when one is lost once in another. Anything other thanâ€” (Whether we notice the moth at the lamp,
or its shadow winged on the wall).
We were privy to all manner of underhanded shit.
We were a kind of happiness, meaning
â€œmomentarily without guiltâ€
or, â€œnot poised to attack.â€
Or astonishment: the work
of becoming another.
The stalled animal of the body at rest.

Hair collecting in the comb.
A single wire, unbending.

C. L. Bledsoe's mindful review of Sonnets

Mon 27 Aug 2012

There’s a terrific review of Sonnets (Shearsman Books, 2010) by C. L. Bledsoe at Murder Your Darlings. I say “terrific” not only because it’s a positive review (music to any poet’s ears) but also because the reviewer quotes from and discusses several poems in the book. It’s a mindful review, and it’s evident he didn’t just skim the book but read slowly and attentively.

The music-to-my-ears part (be thankful you can't see my happy dance):

“Martin’s poems are complex and elegant. She reveals a vital, passionate intellect in these poems that move fast as river water after a spring thaw. I can’t wait to read her next collection.”

The complete review is here:

September 2012

93 messages · Mon 27 Aug 2012 – Wed 26 Sep 2012

September 2012 was among the emptiest files the list ever produced — ninety-three messages, not one thread drawing more than a handful of replies — and its near-silence is, once again, the truest thing it has to report. The great conversation had thinned almost to nothing; what remained was the barest pulse of a community keeping its channel open out of loyalty and habit. The month is a document of survival at its most minimal, the list reduced to the fact of still existing.

There was no largest thread to speak of, only the scattered business of a literary life reduced to announcements. Calls for work went out, a journal sought submissions, a member floated a self-nomination for some small honor — the room functioning now almost entirely as a distribution list, a place to post notices to a specific and dwindling audience. The arguments were gone; what remained was the practical residue, the poetry world's errands run through a channel that had once carried its fiercest debates. Ten years earlier a September on this list would have thrown up a hundred-message quarrel over form or politics or the state of the art; now it threw up a handful of calls for work and fell quiet again, the great engine idling almost to a stop.

The quarrel, if the near-empty month can be said to have had one, was implicit and unspoken: whether a room this quiet is still a community or merely a mailing list, whether the pulse this faint still counts as life. No one posed the question directly — one does not, in a room this thin — but it hung over every notice sent into the near-silence, every announcement that drew no reply.

And yet the notices kept coming, which is the whole point. Each call for work, each submission request, each small self-nomination was somebody still choosing to speak into this particular quiet, still believing there was someone on the other end who cared to hear it. The traffic had nearly stopped, but it had not stopped; the room was faint, but it was not yet gone.

I have set September down exactly as the archive delivered it — the ninety-three notices sent into the hush, the calls and the submissions and the small self-nomination, and the silence around them — because it was one of the quietest months in the entire run, and quiet this deep is itself the story. A room reduced to a bare pulse of announcements, drawing few replies and no arguments, is a room close to the end of something; and yet a community that keeps posting into that hush, faithfully, because a few of its members still believe someone is listening, is a community not quite ready to admit that the long conversation is over — holding the channel open, against the evidence, for whatever might still come through.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Jesse DeLong

from "The Amateur Scientistâ€™s Notebook: Floret as Bird"

What is hunger if I once listened to a floret
slurp spilt water into soil, its sex a spore on wind,
a single seed left for a bird to eat. With any certainty
I could not call you bird. I could not call you anything other thanâ€”Like, say, in the shallows
of the river we laid crawdad traps until our fingers pruned.
From the bankâ€™s oxblood-colored body we uprooted
clay, molded wet grains into plates, set them on some stones to harden. Shoes soaked in silt, we swelled,
a hunger heavy as a field of florets, feathers
dreamed to sprout from skin. A hunger of when one is lost once in another. Anything other thanâ€”

(Whether we notice the moth at the lamp,
or its shadow winged on the wall).
We were privy to all manner of underhanded shit.
We were a kind of happiness, meaning
â€œmomentarily without guiltâ€
or, â€œnot poised to attack.â€
Or astonishment: the work
of becoming another.
The stalled animal of the body at rest.
Hair collecting in the comb.
A single wire, unbending.

For those who remember - and for those who do not - the poems dictated to me by mom (Barbara Moore Vincent) while in her early nineties a few years back, seven of them appear in the new, all together rather astonishing issue of Eoagh:

â€œIf I didnâ€™t write it down, itâ€™s shhhhhâ€: On Writing Dementia. Edited by Susan M. Schultz. Who deserves a big congrats for shepherding for what many is a phobic &Â difficult subject (getting old, Â ignored and a nuisance) into forms of instructionÂ and 'literary delight'. And thanks to Tim Trace Peterson for making Eoagh a home for such a quest.

http://eoagh.com/?p=1371
As to new poems, my mom is 96 and the voice has gone mostly inarticulate and mute these last couple of years. A kind of quiet, strange serenity prevails.Â Ah, the poem of hers you might remember, certainly took my breath, etc. away:

The Months
January will open the horrible threat.

February will break off a few of the wicked.

March the winds will blow and frighten everybody.

April will break my heart.

May will come whisking through.

June is hard to decipher.

July will never stop to say hello.

August is jolly and happy for people like me.

September is hard to take.

October is full of joy for very few.

November marks the worst that could ever come.

December for many itâ€™s love and joy

But not for me.

Greying Ghost Press http://www.greyingghost.com Greying Ghost started in March of 2007. Since the very beginning they have had the pleasure of working with many exceptional authors whose commitment to expanding the power of the written word has energized their commitment to print their work. All of its books are handmade and, in most cases, every aspect of production is done in-house. This includes the processes of printing, binding, and shipping. Each cover is hand stamped or pressed. And all of its mail orders are stuffed full with either old photos, fragments of old maps and books, comic scraps, or, most importantly, FREE* pamphlets of poems by people they admire.

Eric Amling http://wewhoareabouttodie.com/2010/07/20/eric-amling-on-eric-amling/ Eric Amling was born in 1981 in Brooklyn. He is the author of several chapbooks of poetry. His poems have appeared in journals, most recently Drag City Record's The Minus Times. Human Hair & Co. is his art and design firm.

D.J. Dolack http://www.djdolack.com DJ Dolack's work has appeared in journals including Diode, Handsome, Salt Hill, and The Denver Quarterly. His most recent chapbook, 12 Poems, was published by Eye For An Iris Press. His next chapbook is out from Greying Ghost Press later this year and his first full-length collection, Whittling a New Face in the Dark, is forthcoming from Black Ocean next year. He teaches writing at Baruch College and lives in Jackson Heights, Queens.

Tyler Flynn Dorholt http://www.dorholtt.wordpress.com Tyler Flynn Dorholt publishes and co-edits Tim, formerly known as Tammy, a print journal of poetry and prose. He curates and publishes the film and writing series On the Escape. His writing, films, and photographs have appeared in dozens of journals across the U.S. He lives and makes in NYC.

Sasha Fletcher http://www.anicecoldcocacola.blogspot.com Sasha Fletcher is the author of the novella When All Our Days are Numbered Marching Bands Will Fill the Streets and We Will Not Hear Them Because We Will be Upstairs in the Clouds (Mud Luscious) and two chapbooks of poetry.

Tara Hack http://www.tarahack.com Tara Hack is a 23-year-old singer/songwriter and native New Yorker. She is currently featured in a new book, The Noise Beneath the Apple, which highlights her career as a musician in New York City. Hack regularly performs in Manhattan's Penn Station for thousands of commuters daily. She is also a musician in the South Street Seaport in NYC, performing for tourists from around the world. Through her appearances she has been approached by multiple record labels including Capitol Records, Def Jam, and Warner Brothers.

Hack is working in the studio on a full CD to be released this year. Her music continues to receive international airplay on WOR in NYC, Brooklands Radio in the U.K., as well as Radio Northern Beaches and 2GB Radio in Australia. Articles chronicling her music appear in Brisbane Times, The Age of Melbourne, and The Sydney Morning Herald, in Australia.

The music Hack writes is always based on meaningful world issues, events, and experiences. Her song, "Saya Tidak Bersalah" (I'm not Guilty), is a song about an Australian woman wrongfully imprisoned in Indonesia. Her song fueled an international human rights campaign and sent her to the Conference on World Affairs as a panelist and performer. Her new single, "She Falls Down," aims to raise awareness to the presence and severity of domestic violence in society.

Friday performance at White Box/NYC: Arner/Beaulieu/Quasha/Stein -- 7 PM

Thu 30 Aug 2012

Please join us this Friday 8/31 performance at White Box (329 Broome west of Bowery) at 7 PM:

AXIAL MUSIC

David Arner (keyboard, balophone)
John Beaulieu (keyboard, harmonica)
George Quasha (percussion)
Charles Stein (voice, recorder)

Axial Music follows a principle of spontaneous composition without the intention of honoring precedent or previous patterns, guided instead by radical following of actual sounds generated. When successful the sound event has a life independent of the musicians and may generate an altered state of listening. In addition to sound events, the performance has visual components, including axial drawing & video.

Ten Thousand Things (Cage Celebration in Atlanta-- Sept. 6-9)

Thu 30 Aug 2012

For those of you in the Atlanta area, please come down to the Goat Farm for a celebration of Cage's music and writings. Below is the blurb. The Atlanta Poets Group will be performing various Cage pieces (including "Anarchy," "45' For a Speaker," "Diary: how to improve the world (you will only make matters worse) Continued 1967" and selections from _I-VI_ and "Empty Words." See the Goat Farm FB page for more info (https://www.facebook.com/events/350313001717893/). Best, James Sanders

In honor of the 100th birthday of John Cage

This experience is created by:
The Atlanta Poets Group
Chamber Cartel
Bent Frequency
The CORE Performance Company

Performances:

Sept 6 | The Ten Thousand Things | 8 pm

Sept 7 | Four4 | 8 pm

Sept 8 | Herron Mastrian Duo | 8 pm

Sept 9 | MUSICIRCUS | 3 pm

The Ten Thousand Things is a four-day celebration (September 6-9) of the work of John Cage (1912-1992)-- a luminary in 20th century avant-garde music, poetry, and visual art--on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Presented by the Goat Farm and curated by The Atlanta Poets Group, Bent Frequency, and Chamber Cartel, the events promise listening experiences rare in the worlds of music or literature.

Among these are a performance of four simultaneous virtuosic solos, an evening length percussion work, a soprano and percussion duo, and a multivoice realization of a mesostic.

The culminating event of The Ten Thousand Things is a "Musicircus," a collage-style musical happening of simultaneous, multiple performances: audience members are invited to stroll around the performance venue and partake in pieces that are of interest to them at that particular moment. Please join us to celebrate John Cage's 100th birthday and revel in sound and silence!

event nyc: deborah poe & joe roarty

Fri 31 Aug 2012

For friends in town for the holiday weekend, I'll be reading at Jujomukti Tea Lounge (East Village) on Sunday night. Hope to see you there. Best, Deborah

Finish off the summer in style. Join us at the Jujomukti Tea Lounge as we host poets Deborah Poe and Joe Roarty, Sun Sep 2 6-8 p.m.

Hosted by George Wallace. Open Mic. $5.00 admission may be applied to the purchase of a tea or coffee of equal or lesser value.

Deborah Poe is the author of the poetry collections Elements (2010), Our Parenthetical Ontology (2008), and the last will be stone, too (2013) as well as a novella in verse, Hélène (2012). In addition, Deborah is co-editor of both Between Worlds : An Anthology of Contemporary Fiction and Criticism (2012) and a collection of Hudson Valley innovative poetry (2013). She teaches literature and creative writing at Pace University, Westchester.

Joe Roarty has wandered about the midwest and east coast for lo these many years. A rolling stone gathers no moss, but intermittent bouts of poetry have enlivened an otherwise quotidian existence. (That and having his arm torn off by Beowulf.)

Open Call for Birkensake 6

Fri 31 Aug 2012

This is a call for submission to Birkensnake 6. William Ambler and Brian Warfield will be co-editing one issue of this prose journal on the them of liminality. You can read more about the project and journal at Birkensnake.com."Liminality may perhaps be regarded as the Nay to all positive structural assertions, but as in some sense the source of them all, and, more than that, as a realm of pure possibility whence novel configurations of ideas and relations may arise." ~Victor TurnerWe are interested in stories that fall outside traditional story-telling tropes. Liminal stories of people who do not consider themselves writers or who write primarily for themselves. We are also interested in the public facet of street art, writing that belongs to everyone. We want to take these stories not meant to be published and publish them. How does a work change when considering intention, exposure, alteration of audience? Some of our influences which exemplify the kind of writing we are looking for are: Henry Darger (http://www.folkartmuseum.org/darger) Hipolito from Amelie, Simon Grim from Henry Fool, early internet websites that played with infinite space (eg: schwa (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Schwa_(art)), old radiohead sites (http://radiohead.com/memoryhole/)), indie-pressed vinyl, found writing, Toynbee tiles (http://www.resurrectdead.com/tile-gallery/), Charles Crumb (http://www.benett-o-matic.blogger.com.br/CharlesBookTres[1].jpg), Tao Lin's top 10 unpublished articles (http://www.vice.com/read/top-ten-unpublished-articles-2011), lost writing (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Lost_work), etc. We are looking for pieces that have emerged from each author's unique structural conditions, currently exist in a liminal state based on lack-of-intention-to-publish or percieved-otherness, and will now take their place within the unique structure that they form together that we will dub Birkensnake 6.If you just want to contact us for further information or to discuss the project, feel free to email us at [redacted] Submit through Submittable (http://liminalbirkensnake.submittable.com/submit). Call for Submissions: The Interdependency Issue of Unlikely Stories: Episode IV

Sat 1 Sep 2012

This election season, /Unlikely Stories: Episode IV/ will assemble and publish an Interdependency Issue, in which we, as American members of the small press, will celebrate the U.S. as part of a planet and a globe which might not be a "global community" but really should be. We are looking for:
Poetry
Fiction
Creative Non-Fiction
Art & Literary Criticism
Cultural & Sociopolitical Analyses
Static Visual Art
Time-Based Art and other forms of Movies and Videos Music
Spoken Word
Sound Art
...and just about any other form of thought that can be reproduced on the Web.

We want it in:
English or Espanglish.

We want it from: Anyone, any where in the world, who is NOT a United States citizen, OR Anyone who is a citizen of one of the tribal governments within the U.S., OR U.S. citizens CURRENTLY living outside of the U.S., specifically writing (or creating art) about their experiences outside of the U.S.

We want it to be about: Any subject EXCEPT U.S. elections, past or present. Although /Unlikely Stories: Episode IV/ often has a sociopolitical slant, we publish a variety of works on every topic, and your work need not be sociopolitical in theme. Check us out at http://www.UnlikelyStories.org/ and read the sort of stuff we normally publish, or check out our regular submission guidelines at http://www.unlikelystories.org/submit.shtml for specific directives. WE DO NOT WANT WORK ON THE U.S. ELECTIONS. Really, you can find someplace else to send that at this time.

We want it by October 1st, 2012. We will publish two weeks before the U.S. presidential election.

Thanks for your consideration,
--

Lightning'd Press Issue Five out now!
Sun 2 Sep 2012

Hello!

After two months of delays, and most of an extra day, the new issue is now up at http://www.lightningdpress.com! Issue Five includes our first Short Piece, poems from Thomas Meyer, Jamie Felton, Steven Manuel, Jeff Miller, R.N. Horner, Sarah Rosenthal, Patrick James Dunagan, Calvin Pennix, and correspondence from Thomas Meyer. More of our ongoing interview with Peter O'Leary will go on in the next issue.

We are still poetry for the next issue on an ongoing basis; if you have not heard back from us we promise we will get to you in the next few weeks. Additionally, we want to encourage readers to submit to our Short Pieces category. These can look like essays, blog entries, correspondence pieces (like Thomas and Steven), etc. Use your creativity! We like weird things, normal things, essay things, and anything related to Apocalypticism.

Sincerely,

Jamie and Jeff

Phil Hall: a widened field of signification
Tue 4 Sep 2012

Please check out my entry on poet Phil Hall for the Canadian Encyclopedia:

http://www.thecanadianencyclopedia.com/articles/phil-hall

"In the pivotal collection Hearthedral: A Folk-Hermetic (1996), Phil Hall's poetic shift becomes more apparent. It shows his transition from relatively accessible poetry using colloquial realism into more complex language reminiscent of James Joyce's wordplay in Finnegans Wake and Gerard Manley Hopkins' richly descriptive poetry. . . ."

new book available _ The Pink _
Tue 4 Sep 2012

Dear All:

If time and interest permits, as the semester kicks into gear, please consider taking a well-deserved psychical vacation while checking out my new book, a long, single poem, The Pink. It's a light, breezy read:

http://www.blazevox.org/index.php/Shop/Poetry/the-pink-by-jared-schickling-303/

Copies can also be had from SPD:

I have some copies available for trade, review, or, if you're understandably broke, I'd be happy to mail a copy. Please b/c in either case.

Many thanks to Blazevox for publishing this.

happy reading---

Segue from the Archives, 2000, Kiely and Kirschenbaum
Wed 5 Sep 2012

Hi all,

Back in 2000, Kristin Prevallet and Prageeta Sharma were kind enough to ask Aaron Kiely and me to read in the Segue series in NYC, then housed at Double Happiness.

I'd been emailed a link recently to the PennSound site through the Poetics List, and I saw that a recording of our event wasn't on the site. Then I remembered that the recording equipment wasn't working that day, and I did what I usually did back then and recorded it with my little Radio Shack cassette recorder.

I checked the kitchen drawer where I thought the tape was and, sure enough, there it was. Our pal Sean Cole was kind enough to digitize the cassette, and the good folks at Penn Sound have now put the recordings up on their swell site

Go down to April 8 and there are the links to each of our readings (and a ton of other recordings, too):

http://www.writing.upenn.edu/pennsound/x/Segue-DH.php

Hope yre all doing well.

as ever,
dak

INTERVIEW

[7]The Art of Poetry No. 96

[8]James Fenton

â€œWhat happened to poetry in the twentieth century was that it began to be written for the page. When itâ€™s a question of typography, why not? Poets have done beautiful things with typographyâ€”Apollinaireâ€™s Calligrammes, that sort of thing. But now we are left with people who write only for the page, who feel that a poem is something very far from performance.â€

[11]The Art of Fiction No. 217
[12]Roberto Calasso
â€œThe publisher is considered, especially in Anglo-Saxon countries, a rather eccentric entrepreneur or impresarioâ€”a businessman in a very improbable field. But if he is successful, then he is a good businessman. The author is the successor of the saint, everyone respects the author. So to put the two elements together is highly suspicious in a way.â€

FICTION

[14]The Meininger Nude [15]Sam Savage â€œI never admitted it of course, never admitted to being an artist at all. Not after the first years, when I was in fact a minor juvenile artist. Unlike other so-called artists, I never boasted of being an artist, and especially not of being a literary artist. I was a secret artist. For most of my adult life I was a collector of paintings and a concealed minor artist. I would not admit it because I could not accept the status of minor artist, what I considered the disgrace of the minor artist. I could have been a successful minor artist, but instead I was a failure as a major artist. I was a concealed failure as a major artist. By concealing the artist I was able to conceal the failure.â€ [16]Read an excerpt â€º Links:

Our story is noble and tragic
As the face of a tyrant not fun not for everyone
No drama or magic
No detail of what weâ€™ve done
Can make our love pathetic

And Thomas De Quincey drinking
Opium poison sweet and chaste
Went dreaming to his poor Anne and listened to his own eyelids blinking

or Boog City at 212-842-BOOG (2664)

Greg Ashley http://www.allmusic.com/artist/greg-ashley-mn0000187786 Along with fronting the Gris Gris, singer/songwriter/guitarist Greg Ashley also performs as a solo artist, concentrating on the delicately trippy psych-folk that occasionally makes its way into his band's louder, more unpredictable music. Late in 2003, Birdman released his debut album, Medicine Fuck Dream, which drew comparisons to Mayo Thompson and Roky Erickson. Ashley's second solo album, Painted Garden, arrived early in 2007, and though it had considerably cleaner production than his debut, it shared the same free-flowing songwriting and surreal lyrics. In 2010 he dropped the completely experimental Requiem Mass and Other Experiments on Birdman. The opening title track (a whole side of a conventional LP) is the preeminent work here, while the rest features a series of smaller musical and sonic adventures.

Micah Ballard http://www.poetryfoundation.org/bio/micah-ballard Micah Ballard was born in Baton Rouge, La., and lives in San Francisco. He is the author of Waifs and Strays (City Lights Books), nominated for a California Book Award; Parish Krewes (Bootstrap Press); Evangeline Downs (Ugly Duckling Presse); Negative Capability in the Verse of John Wieners (Auguste Press) among other books. He co- edits Auguste Press and Lew Gallery Editions and works for the M.F.A. in Writing Program at the University of San Francisco.

Amy Berkowitz http://www.mondoberko.blogspot.com Amy Berkowitz is the author of Listen To Her Heart, forthcoming from Spooky Girlfriend, and Lonely Toast, from What To Us (Press). She is a founding member of the Washtenaw County Women's Poetry Collective & Casserole Society and the editor of Mondo Bummer. She lives in San Francisco.

David Buuck http://www.davidbuuck.com David Buuck is a writer who lives in Oakland, Calif. He is the founder of BARGE, the Bay Area Research Group in Enviro-aesthetics, and co- founder and editor of Tripwire, a journal of poetics. An Army of Lovers, co-written with Juliana Spahr, is forthcoming from City Lights. Publications, writing and performance samples, and further info is available at the above url.

Ivy Johnson http://www.ivyjohnson.tumblr.com Ivy Johnson was born on the open prairie where she picked crocuses as a child. She also grew up speaking in tongues, which led her to poetry. Boog City published her first chapbook, Walt Disney's Light Show Extravaganza. She has a chapbook forthcoming from Timeless, Infinite Light called As They fall.

David Kirschenbaum http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic http://boogcity.blogspot.com/ David Kirschenbaum's work has appeared in the Brooklyn Review Online, Can We Have Our Ball Back, Chain, Live Mag!, Unpleasant Event Schedule, and The Village Voice, among others. He is the editor and publisher of Boog City, a New York City-based small press and community newspaper now in its 22nd year. His poems form the lyrics of Casey Holford and Preston Spurlock's band Gilmore boys.

Jill Stengel http://www.dusie.org Formerly of San Francisco and Los Angeles, Jill Stengel now lives in Davis, Calif. with her three children and her husband. Stengel has run a poetry reading series; edited and published numerous chapbooks and a journal, mem, under her a+bend press imprint; participated in several poetry collectives; formed a women's salon for post-graduate poetic study; taught poetry and book arts; and actively participates in the poet-moms listserv community. She has nearly a dozen chapbooks of her own in print, several of which are also available to view online at the above url. Titles include ladies with babies, late may, only this, and I would open, and equinox. Her full-length Dear Jack is due out any minute from Black Radish Books.

Sunnylyn Thibodeaux http://www.galatearesurrection17.blogspot.com/2011/12/critic-writes-poems.html Sunnylyn Thibodeaux is from New Orleans and lives in San Francisco. Palm to Pine, her first full-length collection of poems, was published by Bootstrap Press. She is the author of many small books, including 20/20 Yielding, Room Service Calls, and Against What Light (forthcoming). Recent poems have appeared in Amerarcana, Back Room Live, Drunken Boat, Galatea Resurrects, Lit, The Recluse, Where Eagles Dare among others. She co-edits Auguste Press and Lew Gallery Editions.

Boog City http://www.boogcity.com Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 22nd year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has put out approximately 200 publications, including 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines and a newspaper, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women’s writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates three regular performance series—d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, featuring a non-NYC small press, its writers, and a musical act; the new BoogWork series, which features two poets reading, followed by a musical performance, and then the featured poet giving the gathered a poetry workshop; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; Sleater- Kinney's, Dig Me Out; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville. All of these series are hosted at Sidewalk Cafe.

Wild Dialectics
Sat 15 Sep 2012

My new book of poems, Wild Dialectics, is now out with Shearsman Books

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2012/samuelsWD.html

With thanks to the publisher, Tony Frazer, and to Laura McLauchlan for the cover art's chthonic marketplace.
Bests, Lisa

Lisa Samuels's Wild Dialectics forges imaginary rhythms into speculative anthems. These lyrics of elusive logos ghost provisional conditions of enduring transience. With stunning poise, Samuels holds out for holding on to the inherent insistence of words' translucent pilgrimage. —Charles Bernstein

I am profoundly moved by Wild Dialectics, doing one of the best kinds of work that a poet and her poetry can do. Experience and perception are fully nuanced here, compressed into the body-mind of a guide to the full if even at times partial details; a rewire, making possible and thereby making accessible. Wild Dialectics is resonant with sense and fat with the joy of humane linguistic creative subtlety. The ear and eye, body and mind, are jumped into serious play both along and between these lines. Lisa Samuels tells it straight and tells it true; which is why we might not see that to be so, we are not used to straight and true. Her attention and perceptions are sharp as they come, subtle arguments released through sensual fracture. —cris cheek

featuring:

Our Occupy at One Section with:

—"'One of my hopes,' says Fagin, 'is always that people will claim their own authority and empower themselves to meet their own needs and those of their communities.'" from "Stacking Up: Betsy Fagin on Occupy and The People's Library," interview and introductory piece by Christophe Casamassima —Essays from the panel discussion "Never-Ending Participation: Activism and Occupy Wall Street" that took place in August at the 6th annual Welcome to Boog City poetry and music festival. Featuring:

*"What exactly do we want to change? How are we actively envisioning a different organizational system for humans that has less to do with utopian musings (so as to avoid utopia's critical failure to find its referent in an actual existing reality)." from "Never-Ending Participation: Activism and Occupy Wall Street" by Brenda Iijima

*"Activism by poets and artists abounds in our time within and without aesthetic communities. And the poems, to my mind, are often more substantial for this involvement." from Can You Remain a Poet and Be an Activist? by Thom Donovan

*"As this uncertainty is the very premise of any ethical practice— aesthetic or political, cultural or social—it is also the very ground of responsibility, not only to our histories but also to our present, when and wherever that is." from Occupation Everywhere: Poetry and Politics by Tyrone Williams

From our Occupy-themed Music section, edited by Jonathan Berger

—"'We played for hours and hours, so often I would throw in a theme; some jazz here, some hip-hop there. Crowds would always go nuts when they heard me throw in some of "Mas Que Nada," by Sergio Mendes, or "Rockit" by Herbie Hancock.'" from Brother to All: Brer Brian's Occupy by Berger

—"Despite the collective decisioning and the signs and the chants, all fundamental aspects of my Occupation, The People Staged was, to me, the creative heart of Occupy Wall Street." from Occu-Folk: The Soundtrack to the Movement by Tim Barker

And Occupy-themed work from our Poetry section, edited by Buck Downs (excerpts below)

—David Buuck
Oakland, Calif.
From 'Mayday Mayday'
A test of poetry:
To read this aloud
To sound it in the mouth
Which one does in the body
In the moment of its actioning
But not when reading
Not when scanning the screen feeds
Which is a different rhythm
In one's body
An anxious sense of time
Moving too fast
To make tactical decisions
Appropriate to the conditions should have some extra layer of protection from getting beaten with billy clubs by a Berkeley police-riot squad.

And Our Non-Occupy Content

from our Printed Matter section

—" This is where how to survive begins. A rejected lover is a writer whose narrator infuses every scene with a theme of love, of doom, of pain." from Wong Revives the Heroic Victim; how to survive a hotel fire by Angela Veronica Wong (Coconut Books), reviewed by Abby Hagler

—"This is Gray's great gift: electric she reaches out. Her poems are tough and fragile and wrong and a conversation about making it right." from Stephanie Gray Matters; I Thought You Said it was Sound/How Does that Sound by Stephanie Gray (Portable Press at Yo-Yo Labs), reviewed by Chris Martin

—"Walker's soaring popularity prompted Time magazine to name him 'Comedian of the Decade.'" from Jimmie Walker's New Memoir Dyn-o-mite; Dyn-o-mite: Good Times, Bad Times, Our Times-A Memoir by Jimmie Walker with Sal Manna (Da Capo Press), reviewed by Risa Morley from our Small Press section, now edited by Kimberly Ann Southwick

—"It's fun taking a piece of scrap paper that would otherwise go into the recycle bin and having a dozen ideas pop into my head. This could be a gift tag! A greeting card! A bookmark! It fits into our aesthetic in a sense that I try and use as much repurposed material as possible." from "Ghost Writers: Exploring Greying Ghost Press" by Southwick (plus complete Greying Ghost Press bibliography)

Banaghers "Pallet" Poetry Festival reaches new heights - Kevin Higgins set for Tullamore this Wednesday

Sat 15 Sep 2012

Banaghers "Readings from the Pallet" festival reached new heights of success yesterday, with two poets from the Netherlands taking part, as well as one Irish resident of there, and the usual suspects from Tullamore Rhymers Club making their contribution.

The prize this year was shared between Thomas Cleary (Netherlands resident Irishman!!!) and our Seamus Kirwan, whose book "Ravings of a Mad Irishman" is coming out next month. A short review of the night is here - http://www.writingsinrhyme.com/index.php/blog-readings-from-the-pallet-2012/

Kevin Higgins is all set for the coming "100 Thousand Poets for Change" event at High Lynches this coming Wednesday night at 8pm, which will be streamed LIVE online at USTREAM at ... http://www.ustream.tv/channel/poets-for-change-2012-tullamore

NYC, this Sat., 9/22: Basil King Celebratory Events
Mon 17 Sep 2012

Hi all,

Basil King's a great artist and poet, an even better man.

The Friends of Basil King have put together a great bunch of events to celebrate his work.

Basil's Arc:
The Paintings and Poetics of Basil King

this Sat. Sept. 22, from 12 noon to 6:00 p.m.

Anthology Film Archives (Maya Deren Theater
32 2nd Ave. (@ E. 2nd St.)
NYC
Free and open to the public.

(F to Second Ave, 6 to Bleecker St.)

The program includes the debut screening of a film portrait created by Nicole Peyrafitte and Miles Joris-Peyrafitte, Basil King: Mirage, illustrated panel discussions about key aspects of King's visual art, and original music inspired by his images and his texts.

Speakers and participants: Edna Augusta, William Benton, Laurie Duggan, Tom Fink, Paolo Javier, Miles Joris-Peyrafitte, Andrew Levy, Harry Lewis, Tom Patterson, Nicole Peyrafitte, George Quasha, Barry Schwabsky, Daniel Staniforth, and the Friends: Mitch Highfill, Vincent Katz, Burt Kimmelman, Martha King, and Kimberly Lyons.

I was happy to help out with the program, where you can view the complete schedule, participant bios, some of Baz's art, and words on him as well:

Michael Joyce Teaching in the Margins @ Full Stop
Tue 18 Sep 2012

"I think that at its base creativity involves undoing systems."<http://www.full-stop.net/2012/09/18/features/the-editors/teaching-in-the-margins-michael-joyce/>

Michael Joyce, "grandaddy of hypertext fictions" talks to Full Stop about Deleuze, the difference between experimental and innovative, and the pleasure of acts of reading, as part of the series Teaching in the Margins. With Teaching in the Margins Full Stop looks to poets, novelists, educators and academics to survey the state of the humanities and explore the relationship between innovative writing and pedagogy.

You can find the interview here:

Millay Colony Application Deadline: Oct 1

Tue 18 Sep 2012

Application Deadline:
October 1, 2012

The Millay Colony for the Arts offers one-month residencies to six visual artists, writers and composers each month between the months of April and November. Nurturing the work of artists of all ages, from a range of cultures and communities, and in all stages of their artistic career, the Colony offers comfortable private rooms, private studio spaces and ample time to work in a quiet, pastoral atmosphere.

Unlike other residency programs, we are small in size and we do not emphasize social events or visits from professionals in the field. We believe we can offer artists nothing more precious than the chance to work, and we provide everything an artist needs to organize her/his time for maximum productivity. The Colony does not oblige residents to participate in any events, nor are residents required to share or donate work.

Our campus is located on the property where the poet Edna St. Vincent Millay lived at the height of her literary career, starting in the 1920s. We have a seven-acre campus with meadows and forest in Austerlitz, New York, adjacent to the former Millay home and gardens and the exquisite Harvey Mountain State Forest. Our residents have access to trails for hiking and bicycles, meadows for picnics (with wild blueberry, wild thyme and an incredible mix of plants and flowers) and creeks and streams for cooling off. In the Winter, residents may choose to go cross-country skiing.

Each year Millay Colony invites 52 visual artists, writers and composers for a colony residency. Residents are chosen anonymously by a panel of jurors in each discipline. The application process is competitive and based solely on on the merit of the artist statement and work sample.

The Millay Colony for the Arts is pleased to announce that, starting this year, we are adding three new offerings to our roster of artist residencies on its pastoral upstate New York/Berkshire area campus. While continuing to offer month-long residencies to visual artists, writers and composers, the Millay Colony is now offering three new ways to spend time as a resident: Two-week Residencies in the month of September, Virtual Residencies and Group Residencies.

The Millay Colony accepts residents on the basis of artistic merit. Our admissions policy does not discriminate with regard to race, sex, sexual preference, religion, marital status, disability or nation of origin.

Granary Books is pleased to offer for sale a selection of collages and collage books by Lewis Warsh

Wed 19 Sep 2012

Granary Books is pleased to offer for sale a selection of striking collages and collage books created by poet, novelist, editor, artist, publisher, and teacher Lewis Warsh.

This coincides with the just-released issue of "Mimeo Mimeo" (a magazine edited by Kyle Schlesinger and Jed Birmingham about "artist's books, typography & the mimeo revolution") devoted to the work of Warsh, a poet, novelist, publisher, artist, and teacher.

We've published several projects with Lewis over the years including: "Bustin's Island '68," a work which asks for a new rubric, call it a "poet's" book; "The Angel Hair Anthology," a massive gathering from the formative magazine and press he edited with Anne Waldman in the sixties and seventies; "Inseparable:

Poems 1995-2005," with a Warsh cover collage; and "Debtor's Prison," a collaboration with visual artist Julie Harrison.

It is therefore a special privilege to share a rarely glimpsed but most important aspect of Warsh's practice since 1996. His collages seem a natural if not inevitable extension of his writing, and portray a visual dimension that is sumptuous, alluring and mysterious.

A request to the list:

One of my colleagues in my community college English department has recently published a book of poems, and he's starving for some intelligent reviews, perhaps by someone with a working knowledge of post-colonialism. If any of you can take that on, I can get the book to you post haste, and would appreciate it greatly for him.

LeRoy Gorman Appointed as New Honorary Curator of the American Haiku Archives

Wed 19 Sep 2012

LeRoyGorman Appointed as New Honorary Curator of the American HaikuArchives

The advisory board of the American Haiku Archives, whichhouses the Haiku Society of America archives, is pleased to announce theappointment of LeRoy Gorman as the 2012â€“2013 honorary curator of the AmericanHaiku Archives at the California State Library in Sacramento(www.americanhaikuarchives.org). This honor is in recognition of his devotionto and enthusiasm for haiku development and exploration in Canada, withexemplary influence upon all English-language haiku across North America andabroad through his publications and editing, and his decades-long support ofhaiku through the Haiku Canada organization. His poetry consistently showsadmirable creativity, courage, and range, embracing both traditional andvisual/minimalist approaches to haiku and related genres of poetry. Gormansucceeds Jerry Ball, who was the honorary curator for the previous year. We arepleased to bestow this honor from the American Haiku Archives, which seeks topreserve and promote haiku and related poetry throughout the North Americancontinent.

For more information about LeRoy Gorman as the archivesâ€™ 16thhonorary curator, including sample poems, a biography, photo, and additionalweb links, please visit http://www.americanhaikuarchives.org/curators/LeRoyGorman.html.

[1][MM7.jpg]

Cuneiform Press is pleased to announce the publication of: MIMEO MIMEO #7 â€¢ THE LEWIS WARSH ISSUE

This is the first magazine ever devoted in its entirety to poet, novelist, publisher, teacher, and collage artist Lewis Warsh. Warsh was born in 1944 in the Bronx, co-founded Angel Hair Magazine and Books with Anne Waldman in 1966, and went on to co-found United Artists Magazine and Books with Bernadette Mayer in 1977. He is the author of over thirty books of poetry, fiction and autobiography, the Director of the MFA program in Creative Writing at Long Island University in Brooklyn, and as youâ€™ll soon discover, so much more. Includes an introduction by Daniel Kane, an interview conducted by Steve Clay, ten new stories, five new poems, numerous photographs and collages, plus an anecdotal bibliography. Over 200 pages with cover art by Joe Brainard.

Copies are avaiable for $20 plus $5 domestic shipping direct from Mimeo Mimeo: [2]http://mimeomimeo.blogspot.com

Canadia and Mexico, please add $10 S&H, and for orders overseas, please add $17

If you prefer to pay by check, please it send to: Cuneiform Press | UHV/A&S | 3007 N. Ben Wilson | Victoria, TX 99901

Please contact [redacted] with any questions

In celebration of this occasion, we'll be posting one title from the anecdotal bibliography on the Mimeo Mimeo blog a day for the next 30 days. Stay tuned!

And please visit Granary Books [3]www.granarybooks.com to see a selection of striking collages and unique poetâ€™s books created by Lewis Warsh.

Standing Orders:

The best way to acquire Cuneiform books is through a standing order. Standing orders are available to individuals and institutions at any time. Youâ€™ll receive 4-6 books a year plus Mimeo Mimeo with an invoice. Keep the ones you want, return whatever you donâ€™t. Itâ€™s as simple as that. As a standing-order patron youâ€™ll also receive first dibs on all of our limited edition books as well as gifts from time to time to thank you for your support of the press.

Recent titles include: Bill Berksonâ€™s Terrace Fence; Holbrook Teter and Michael Myersâ€™ Spiritual Photography; Alan Loney's The Books to Come; Bumpers (Carolee Schneemann, Johanna Drucker, Dorothea Lasky, Kit Robinson, Michael Gizzi, and others); Alastair Johnston's Hanging Quotes; and Charles Alexanders' Pushing Water. A box full of the mysterious woman playing blind man’s bluff among neurons

Thu 20 Sep 2012

My box of LOOMS has arrived, fresh from Shearsman Books. The publisher's webpage offers a pdf sample as well as a handy list of links where you can order the book:

http://www.shearsman.com/pages/books/catalog/2012/martinLooms.html

Many thanks to Tony Frazer, publisher extraordinaire of Shearsman Books.

May the poems in LOOMS bring you pleasure. Reviews welcome.

Cheers,
Camille Martin

The title of LOOMS signifies the weaving tool as well as the shadowing appearance of something. These "woven tales" were inspired by Barbara Guest's statement that a tale "doesn't tell the truth about itself; it tells us what it dreams about." The strands of their surreal allegories converse, one idea giving rise to another, and the paths of their dialogue become the fabric of the narrative. In a second meaning, something that looms remains in a state of imminent arrival. Such are these tales, like parables with infinitely deferred lessons.

"In tightly woven tapestry, Martin's 'backstreet songs' re-invent a music of knowledge that navigates the hucksterism and catastrophe threatening our planet. The movement of her threads is fugue-like, punctuated by oboes and clarinets, mockingbirds and cicadas. Here, in the dream-space of time-lapse film, forms of life and ideas collide and morph, rippling through centuries of human consciousness to unravel as quickly as they ravel. Here, above all, Martin makes it possible to dance among our 'origins in snake oil,' our 'crusades to mirages' and our 'accidental fictions'."—Meredith Quartermain

"A dreamscape on the outskirts of town, 'in the badlands of the vernacular,' these hopeful, haunted poems populated by children and prisoners 'hover between' realms domestic and exterior, real and imagined. Like candles described herein, this book gives off a melting, tactile glow." —Arielle Greenberg --

Update: Lee Ranaldo Photospread Now in Boog Occupy Issue

Thu 20 Sep 2012

Please forward

Hi all,

We've just been fortunate to add to our Occupy issue:

Pictures from the Occupation
Images and Text by Lee Ranaldo

"Living down in lower Manhattan has been pretty wild for the last decade, to say the least, with the occupation of Zuccotti Park/Liberty Plaza last fall being only the latest happening of note. I spent a lot of time in the park, brought my kids by to see this free-speech city growing there (and later to also see it swept out by the powers that be.)."

The updated online pdf of Boog City 73, our Occupy at One issue, our biggest non-Portable Boog Reader issue ever, is now available. You can read it at:

From 'Mayday Mayday'
A test of poetry:
To read this aloud
To sound it in the mouth
Which one does in the body
In the moment of its actioning
But not when reading
Not when scanning the screen feeds
Which is a different rhythm
In one's body
An anxious sense of time
Moving too fast
To make tactical decisions
Appropriate to the conditions

Even a Poet Laureate Doesn't Deserve

to Get Beaten by the Police
As someone who doesn't care much about government awards or titles given to artists, I still say a 70-year-old

Poets in Support of Obama Readings

Fri 21 Sep 2012

We may feel bitterly how little our poems can do in the face of seemingly out-of-control technological power and seemingly limitless corporate greed . . . yet it has always been true that poetry can break isolation, show us to ourselves when we are outlawed or made invisible, remind us of beauty where no beauty seems possible, remind us of kinship where all is represented as separation.

—Adrienne Rich

Dear Poets who support Obama :::: :

Please consider organizing a POETRY READING . . .

in support of OBAMA in your town or city in the coming month and a half.

If/when you do, please write me with the details and I will post it here :::: ::

http://poetsinsupportofobama.wordpress.com/

It is difficult to get the news from poems yet men die miserably every day for lack of what is found there.
—William Carlos Williams

In the weeks following 9/11 New York City bookstores reported selling more poetry than ever before. In times of public and private crisis people seem to understand intuitively that uncomplicated answers and simplistic narratives are not going to suffice. Instead, they seek out more complex renditions of what it means to be human like those found in poetry. Might we say that we are now, also, in an instance (or a multitude of instances) of public and political crisis? How might we, as poets who continue to believe in the change that Obama stands for and wants to continue to work toward, behave civically and hopefully during these pre-election months?

Let us gather at poetry readings across the country and read work that challenges the notion that contemporary poets are trapped in their own atomized worlds. Let’s continue to try to give new voice to the individual experiences sometimes forgotten in accounts of today's large events, and show that civic engagement is alive and well in the palm of poetry. Let's fill the corridors with words, breath, song, lament, prayer, pulse. Let's be human together. Let's echo & & &. Let's.

Curated and with an introduction by Boog City editor David Kirschenbaum

Greying Ghost Press http://www.greyingghost.com Greying Ghost started in March of 2007. Since the very beginning they have had the pleasure of working with many exceptional authors whose commitment to expanding the power of the written word has energized their commitment to print their work. All of its books are handmade and, in most cases, every aspect of production is done in-house. This includes the processes of printing, binding, and shipping. Each cover is hand stamped or pressed. And all of its mail orders are stuffed full with either old photos, fragments of old maps and books, comic scraps, or, most importantly, FREE* pamphlets of poems by people they admire.

Eric Amling http://wewhoareabouttodie.com/2010/07/20/eric-amling-on-eric-amling/ Eric Amling was born in 1981 in Brooklyn. He is the author of several chapbooks of poetry. His poems have appeared in journals, most recently Drag City Record's The Minus Times. Human Hair & Co. is his art and design firm.

D.J. Dolack http://www.djdolack.com DJ Dolack's work has appeared in journals including Diode, Handsome, Salt Hill, and The Denver Quarterly. His most recent chapbook, 12 Poems, was published by Eye For An Iris Press. His next chapbook is out from Greying Ghost Press later this year and his first full-length collection, Whittling a New Face in the Dark, is forthcoming from Black Ocean next year. He teaches writing at Baruch College and lives in Jackson Heights, Queens.

Tyler Flynn Dorholt http://www.dorholtt.wordpress.com Tyler Flynn Dorholt publishes and co-edits Tim, formerly known as Tammy, a print journal of poetry and prose. He curates and publishes the film and writing series On the Escape. His writing, films, and photographs have appeared in dozens of journals across the U.S. He lives and makes in NYC.

Sasha Fletcher http://www.anicecoldcocacola.blogspot.com Sasha Fletcher is the author of the novella When All Our Days are Numbered Marching Bands Will Fill the Streets and We Will Not Hear Them Because We Will be Upstairs in the Clouds (Mud Luscious) and two chapbooks of poetry.

Tara Hack http://www.tarahack.com Tara Hack is a 23-year-old singer/songwriter and native New Yorker. She is currently featured in a new book, The Noise Beneath the Apple, which highlights her career as a musician in New York City. Hack regularly performs in Manhattan's Penn Station for thousands of commuters daily. She is also a musician in the South Street Seaport in NYC, performing for tourists from around the world. Through her appearances she has been approached by multiple record labels including Capitol Records, Def Jam, and Warner Brothers.

Hack is working in the studio on a full CD to be released this year. Her music continues to receive international airplay on WOR in NYC, Brooklands Radio in the U.K., as well as Radio Northern Beaches and 2GB Radio in Australia. Articles chronicling her music appear in Brisbane Times, The Age of Melbourne, and The Sydney Morning Herald, in Australia.

The music Hack writes is always based on meaningful world issues, events, and experiences. Her song, "Saya Tidak Bersalah" (I'm not Guilty), is a song about an Australian woman wrongfully imprisoned in Indonesia. Her song fueled an international human rights campaign and sent her to the Conference on World Affairs as a panelist and performer. Her new single, "She Falls Down," aims to raise awareness to the presence and severity of domestic violence in society.

Directions:
Directions: F/V to 2nd Ave., L to 1st Ave.
Venue is at E.6th St.

The Factory Reading Series pre-small press book fair reading: Simpson, Blaikie, McPherson, Lithgow + Clarke,

Sun 23 Sep 2012

span-o (the small press action network - ottawa) presents:

The Factory Reading Series
pre-small press book fair reading

with readings/launches by:

Rachael Simpson (Ottawa)
David Blaikie (Ottawa)
Christian McPherson (Ottawa)

Michael Lithgow (Gatineau)
+ George Elliott Clarke (Toronto)

lovingly hosted by rob mclennan
Friday, November 16, 2012;
doors 7pm; reading 7:30pm
The Carleton Tavern,
223 Armstrong Street (at Parkdale; upstairs)

Rachael Simpson's chapbook Eiderdown (Apt 9 Press) will appear in Fall 2012. She lives in Ottawa.

David Blaikie grew up in rural Nova Scotia and spent more than four decades years in journalism and communications, including 18 years as a Parliamentary Press Gallery reporter with The Canadian Press, The Toronto Star and Reuters. Returning to poetry in recent years, he won the inaugural Tree Reading Series chapbook contest in 2011 for his entry, Farewell to Coney Island, which appeared with Tree Press in 2012. He lives in Ottawa.

Christian McPherson was born in Ottawa, Ontario in 1970. He is the author of six books, Cube Squared (coming from Nightwood 2013-14), My Life in Pictures (Spring 2013 from Now or Never Publishing), The Sun Has Forgotten Where I Live, The Cube People (shortlisted for the 2011 ReLit Awards), Poems that swim from my brain like rats leaving a sinking ship (longlisted for the 2009 ReLit Awards), and Six Ways to Sunday (shortlisted for the 2008 ReLit Awards). He has a degree in philosophy from Carleton University and a computer programming diploma from Algonquin College. He is married to the beautiful Marty Carr. They have two kids, Molly and Henry. They all live together in Ottawa.

Michael Lithgow is a PhD candidate in the School of Journalism and Communication. His poetry has appeared in Arc Magazine, The New Quarterly and Fiddlehead. Selections of his work have been included in Rutting Season (Buffalo Runs Press, 2009) and Undercurrents: New Voices in Canadian Poetry (Cormorant Books, 2010). His first solo collection, Waking in the Tree House, was published in Spring 2012 by Cormorant Books. He is currently a contributing editor at ArtThreat.net, research associate with the Canadian Alternative Media Archive project, and director of OpenMedia.ca. His doctoral research explores aesthetics, truth and dissent in digital and performance cultures.

Poet, playwright, novelist and literary critic George Elliott Clarke won the Governor General's Award for Poetry for Execution Poems (Gaspereau Press, 2001). His most recent book is Red (Gaspereau Press, 2011), and his chapbook Selected Canticles appeared recently with above/ground press. He is currently the E.J. Pratt Professor of Canadian Literature at the University of Toronto.

Mimeo Mimeo 7: The Lewis Warsh Issue

Sun 23 Sep 2012

Cuneiform Press is pleased to announce the publication of: MIMEO MIMEO #7 € THE LEWIS WARSH ISSUE

This is the first magazine ever devoted in its entirety to poet, novelist, publisher, teacher, and collage artist Lewis Warsh. Warsh was born in 1944 in the Bronx, co-founded Angel Hair Magazine and Books with Anne Waldman in 1966, and went on to co-found United Artists Magazine and Books with Bernadette Mayer in 1977. He is the author of over thirty books of poetry, fiction and autobiography, the Director of the MFA program in Creative Writing at Long Island University in Brooklyn, and as you¹ll soon discover, so much more. Includes an introduction by Daniel Kane, an interview conducted by Steve Clay, ten new stories, five new poems, numerous photographs and collages, plus an anecdotal bibliography. Over 200 pages with cover art by Joe Brainard.

Copies are available for $20 plus shipping from Mimeo Mimeo, just follow the link below:
http://mimeomimeo.blogspot.com/.

Please contact cuneiformpress [at] gmail [dot] com with any questions.

In celebration of this occasion, we'll be posting one title from the anecdotal bibliography a day for the next 30 days. Stay tuned!

And please visit Granary Books <http://www.blogger.com> to see a selection of striking collages and poet¹s books created by Warsh.

On September 29, 2012, many poets around the world will make their voices heard. To declare the change theyâ€™d like to see most in the U.S. and throughout the international community, events are being staged on four continents and in over 100 countries as part of 100 Thousand Poets for Change. This night of poetry and activism in Chicago asks the questions: â€œWho are our heroes?â€ â€œWhy?â€ And most importantly â€œHow can we use their examples to create positive change in the world?â€

Co-curated by Barbara Barg, Laura Goldstein, Jennifer Karmin, Larry Sawyer & Lina Vitkauskas

Co-sponsored by the Chicago Calling Festival
http://www.chicagocalling.org

RED ROVER SERIES is curated by Laura Goldstein and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national, and international writers, artists, and performers. The series was founded in 2005 by Amina Cain and Jennifer Karmin.

Congratulations to the 2012 finalists for the Archibald Lampman Award

Mon 24 Sep 2012

Arc Poetry Magazine is proud to present-- drumroll-- the 2012 Lampman shortlist!

Each year, Arc Poetry Magazine honours Ottawa poets. Arc is proud to present the four 2012 finalists for the Archibald Lampman Award for best book of poetry by a National-Capital author.

The award is named in honour of Archibald Lampman (1861 1899), one of Canadas finest nineteenth-century poets. Lampman moved to Ottawa in 1882, and much of his metaphysical nature poetry was inspired by the National Capital region.

> Michael Blouin Wore Down Trust (Toronto; Pedlar Press, 2011)

Tue 25 Sep 2012

The Poetry Motel Foundation

Poet Anna Elena Eyre to read at the Social Justice Center Thursday, October 18, 7:30PM

Local poet Anna Elena Eyre will read from her work at the Social Justice Center, 33 Central Ave., Albany, NY on Thursday, October 18, at 7:30PM. Ms. Eyre is a doctoral candidate in 20th Century poetry and poetics at the University at Albany and is the author of the poetry chapbook “Are Me” from Dancing Girl Press, and the recently published collection of poems “Faceless Names: Two Books of Letters,” BlazeVOX Press.

A reading by a local or regional poet is held each Third Thursday at the Social Justice Center. The event includes an open mic for audience members to read. Sign-up starts at 7:00PM, with the reading beginning at 7:30. The host of the readings is Albany poet and photographer Dan Wilcox. The suggested donation is $3.00, which helps support this and other poetry programs of the Poetry Motel Foundation, and the work of the Social Justice Center. For more information about this event contact Dan Wilcox, [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted].

The Social Justice Center, founded in 1981, is a non-profit organization working for progressive social change through education, community building and collective action. The center advances the struggles against racism and for peace and justice. For further information about the SJC call [redacted].

Barbara Moore Vincent 1916 - 2012
Tue 25 Sep 2012

With inevitable sadness, yesterda

With inevitable sadness, yesterday afternoon my mother, Barbara Mioore Vincent died at the age of 96. During the past few years, among many of us here, she becameÂ known for her proclivity to dictate her own poems, often improvising freely offÂ the work of modernist writers such as Joanne Kyger, Rexroth, Ginsberg, Levertov, Gertrude Stein and others whose works I would read to her.Much of her out put was published, most recently a group of poems in Eaoghâ€™s issue on aging, edited by Susan Schultz. For most of her public life, she was a politician, City planner, and environmental activist in the San Francisco Bay Area, including being Â aÂ founding member of Save the Bay. On the Richmond shoreline, the Barbara and Jay VincentÂ Park , now part of the Federal Park System, is a commemoration of the efforts of my parents to preserve the Bay from industrial destruction. A graduate and veteran of many of this countryâ€™s 20th century natural, human and economic upheavals, she had an incorrigible sense of honesty, bravery and sometimes humor in confronting the reality of the various hands into which she was dealt. As not long after my father dieed:

Â

January will open the horrible threat.

February will break off a few of the wicked.

March the winds will blow and frighten everybody.

April will break my heart.

May will come whisking through.

June is hard to decipher.

July will never stop to say hello.

August is jolly and happy for people like me.

September is hard to take.

October is full of joy for very few.

November marks the worst that could ever come.

December for many itâ€™s love and joy

But not for me.

Burt Kimmelman in Conversation with George Spencer at "Tribes" Now at YouTube

Tue 25 Sep 2012

Hi Everyone,

The suave and astute George Spencer had a video-taped conversation with me at the famous Gathering of the Tribes on the Lower East Side a year ago. That conversation (including readings) is now available at YouTube (in two parts--please see the links below).

The first half of the interview was broadcast on Poetry Thin Air and then was uploaded to Vimeo. George has now uploaded that file to YouTube along with the file containing the interview's second half.

My great thanks to George and to Director Mitch Corber!

Tue 25 Sep 2012

* The Pen Is Mightier Than The Sword: *

* Massive global arts movement mobilizes to change the world*

* * Over 800 Events Planned in 115 Countries for

* 100 Thousand Poets for Change*

Santa Rosa, Calif. (September 19, 2012) – September 29, 2012 marks the second annual global event for 100 Thousand Poets for Change, a grassroots organization that brings communities together to call for environmental, social, and political change within the framework of peace and sustainability. An event that began primarily with poet organizers, 100 Thousand Poets for Change has grown into an interdisciplinary coalition with year round events which includes musicians, dancers, mimes, painters and photographers from around the world.

Local issues are still key to this massive global event as communities around the world raise their voices on issues such as homelessness, global warming, education, racism and censorship, through concerts, readings, lectures, workshops, flash mobs, theater performances and other actions.

But these locally focused events have taken on a more continuous and expansive form through the new disciplines represented this year. For example, photographers are making a long-term project out of the event; they will document the involvement of their communities and explore connections with the broader global issues to turn into future exhibits. More and more organizers and participants of the one day, annual event are making plans to continue their actions after September 29. Many have formed groups in their cities that will continue to work year-round towards the goals their community seeks.

“Peace and sustainability are major concerns worldwide, and the guiding principles for this global event,” said Michael Rothenberg, Co-Founder of 100 Thousand Poets for Change. “We are in a world where it isn't just one issue that needs to be addressed. A common ground is built through this global compilation of local stories, which is how we create a true narrative for discourse to inform the future.”

More than 200 hundred bands will be performing around the world, from Los Angeles, New Orleans and Detroit to Serbia, Nigeria and Italy. The musicians involved in this movement are once again using their songs and performances to try to communicate their concerns to the world. As Ross Altman, singer-songwriter, activist and educator, reminds us: “from Plato, who banned [musicians] from the Republic, to Putin, who had Russian punk band members of Pussy Riot arrested, charged, tried, convicted and sentenced to two years in prison for a song prayer, musicians throughout history have been regarded as a danger and threat to change the social order.”

In addition to the hundreds of musicians expressing themselves through song, numerous Mimes for Change events in Egypt, Turkey and Uruguay will take place in addition to the day long poetry festivals in Los Angeles, Guatemala City, Pune, India, La Plata, Argentina and Genoa, Italy; thousands of musicians, poets and artists are participating around the world, totaling nearly 800 events globally, including:

• 25 different events in the San Francisco Bay Area, the birthplace of 100 Thousand Poets for Change, including poetry readings by Beat Legend Michael McClure, former US Poet Laureate Robert Hass and other major poets at the famed Watershed Environmental Poetry Festival

• In New Orleans <http://100tmc.com/>, 15 live bands will perform to raise funds for the APEX Youth Center and Homegrown Harvest Music and Arts Festival

• In Hollywood, Florida, Global Vibes will host an event called, “War Destroys Children’s Lives” at two venues and feature over 15 “Bands for Change”

• Peace On Streets, R.O.A.D., Tasker Elite and SHARP will host performance artists, poets, musicians, hip hop artists and various youth and parent groups who will perform and lead workshops throughout Philadelphia to bring awareness to the ongoing problem of street violence in their city

• Wordstock, a 3-day festival at the Bamboo Arts and Celebration Center in De Leon Springs, FL will include poetry slams, concerts, and an art exhibition focusing on images of war and peace

• The Occupy Wall Street Poetry group kicks off a weekend of events in New York City with a poetry reading at the famous St. Mark’s Poetry Project

• In Jamaica, a week long Street Dub Vibe series called “Tell the Children the Truth” will include concerts, spoken word performances, art exhibits, lectures and workshops to bring attention to the damaging culture of secrecy and denial surrounding the abuse, poverty and illiteracy impacting the nation’s children and destroying their future.

• Poetry and peace gatherings are planned in the strife-torn cities of Kabul and

Jalalabad, Afghanistan

• In Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt, poets, musicians and mime artists, in response to violence in the world and the major changes taking place in the Arab World, will perform in public spaces and theaters and explore new ways to communicate their concerns, and their roles as artists, in influencing the future of their country

• In Volos, Greece, there will be 5 days of poetry and music events, including an exhibition of photography looking at the new phenomenon of homelessness in Greece

• An event in Blackpool, England will celebrate activist poets and writers of past generations through a special performance of Bullets and Daffodils, a play about the life of peace poet Wilfred Owen

Organizers and participants are hoping through their actions and events to seize and redirect the political and social dialogue of the day and turn the narrative of civilization towards peace and sustainability. Those that want to get involved can visit www.100tpc.org to find an event near them or sign up to organize one in their area.

About 100 Thousand Poets for Change

100 Thousand Poets for Change began in Sonoma County, Calif. The official

Headquarters' Event will take place at the Arlene Francis Center in downtown Santa Rosa and will feature poetry readings, group meditations, workshops, and music and dance of various styles including hip hop, flamenco, African drums, reggae, salsa, folk and more. The HQ event will also live-stream other 100 Thousand Poets for Change events worldwide. This 3-day event is sponsored by the Peace & Justice Center of Sonoma County and the Sonoma County Arts Council.

Immediately following September 29th, all documentation on the 100TPC.org website, which will include specific event pages with photos, video and other documentation compiled by each city coordinator, will be preserved by Stanford University in California. Stanford recognized 100 Thousand Poets for Change in 2011 as an historical event, the largest poetry reading in history. They will continue to archive the complete contents of 100TPC.org, as part of their digital archiving program LOCKSS.

Co-Founder Michael Rothenberg ([redacted]) is a widely known poet, editor of the online literary magazine Bigbridge.org and an environmental activist based in Northern California. Terri Carrion is a poet, translator, photographer, and editor and visual designer for BigBridge.org.

New from Lavender Ink: Vitreous Hide
Wed 26 Sep 2012

Iâ€™m excited to announce that my first book of poetry, Vitreous Hide, will be published this winter by Lavender Ink press of New Orleans. Please support Lavender Ink and its publication of my work by pre-ordering the book on its Indiegogo page. Even a small donation will be greatly appreciated!

Please forward and help us spread the word far and wide. Iâ€™ll be trying to set up readings for the winter and spring (or even next fall), so please contact me if you might have a place for me in your series. You can follow me on Twitter @TodEdge, and â€œlikeâ€ the Vitreous Hide Facebook page.Â

Thanks for your support!Â

Willing the word to become flesh, the poems in Vitreous Hide both reveal and enact yearningâ€”for love, for the beloved, for the words to transform beloved image to beloved substance. Orpheus reaches for Narcissus through a new mirror of myth, now dim with distance, now bright with the possibility of connection. Through the shining skin or surface of prose lines and field composition, these poems reach for the embodiment of the other in order to be, themselves, embodied.

Â
Cheers,

Tod

October 2012

126 messages · Wed 26 Sep 2012 – Sat 27 Oct 2012

October 2012 was another thin, scattered month — one hundred and twenty-six messages — that drifted, in its quiet way, toward the meeting of poetry and the moving image, and toward the geography of where poets are made. The room had little heat in it and no single argument, but a few of its small threads pointed the same direction: the poem that moves, the poem on film, the poem carried from one place to another. It was a month of low traffic and long sightlines.

The largest of the small threads was cinematic. A query into the cine-poems of Lionel Kearns took the room back to the marriage of verse and film — the poem made to move on a screen, the word set loose in time and image, the lyric borrowing the century's dominant medium to see what it might become. It was the visual-poetry question the list had worried for years, now in its temporal form: not the poem as a still picture but the poem as a moving one, unfolding like a reel.

The quarrel, faint, was geographic. A thread asking after Iowa poets glanced at the great workshop and the map of where American poetry gets manufactured — the question of place and school and pipeline, whether a poet is formed by a landscape or a program — while notices from a familiar handful of names kept the room's small circle in view. Where poems come from, and where poets are trained, sat quietly beside the question of what medium a poem might travel in.

Around the edges the ordinary keeping went on — a long-running little magazine issuing its notice, a poet sharing new work, a reading announced. The infrastructure hummed faintly beneath the thin traffic, the same small presses and the same familiar voices, the channel kept open for whatever passed through. It was a month that would have vanished without trace in the crowded years, and survives now only because someone was still keeping the record — which is, in the end, why any of these late thin months survive at all.

I have set October down exactly as the archive delivered it — the cine-poems of Lionel Kearns, the glance toward Iowa and the geography of poets, and the faint keeping of a low month — because it was a quiet stretch that pointed, almost absently, at the poem in motion and the poem in place: where verse goes when it borrows the moving image, and where poets come from when they are made in a program. A room that will spend a slow October wondering how a poem moves on film and where in the country its poets are grown is a room still curious, even at low traffic, about the two things it has always cared about most: how the poem gets made, and how it gets carried into the world.

New from Lavender Ink: Vitreous Hide--LINKS!

Wed 26 Sep 2012

Sorry for the repeat, but it looks like maybe the embedded links in my original message didn't make it through (at least they didn't on my end), so here it is again re-embedded and with the links written out to make sure.

Iâ€™m excited to announce that my first book of poetry,Â Vitreous HideÂ (http://www.lavenderink.org/content/113), will be published this winter by Lavender InkÂ press of New Orleans. Please support Lavender Ink and its publication of my work by pre-ordering the book on itsÂ Indiegogo page:Â http://www.indiegogo.com/Vitreous. Even a small donation will be greatly appreciated!

Please forward and help us spread the word far and wide. Iâ€™ll be trying to set up readings for the winter and spring (or even next fall), so please contact me if you might have a place for me in your series. You can follow me on Twitter @TodEdge, and â€œlikeâ€ theÂ Vitreous HideÂ Facebook page:Â www.facebook.com/VitreousHide.Â

Willing the word to become flesh, the poems inÂ Vitreous HideÂ both reveal and enact yearningâ€”for love, for the beloved, for the words to transform beloved image to beloved substance. Orpheus reaches for Narcissus through a new mirror of myth, now dim with distance, now bright with the possibility of connection. Through the shining skin or surface of prose lines and field composition, these poems reach for the embodiment of the other in order to be, themselves, embodied.
Â
Cheers,

Tod

If the challenge of our time is the challenge of empathy, to make an empathetic relation; that is, to see another person...their pain, story...how can a poetic material making be part of that?Â Â

Greg Ashley http://www.allmusic.com/artist/greg-ashley-mn0000187786 Along with fronting the Gris Gris, singer/songwriter/guitarist Greg Ashley also performs as a solo artist, concentrating on the delicately trippy psych-folk that occasionally makes its way into his band's louder, more unpredictable music. Late in 2003, Birdman released his debut album, Medicine Fuck Dream, which drew comparisons to Mayo Thompson and Roky Erickson. Ashley's second solo album, Painted Garden, arrived early in 2007, and though it had considerably cleaner production than his debut, it shared the same free-flowing songwriting and surreal lyrics. In 2010 he dropped the completely experimental Requiem Mass and Other Experiments on Birdman. The opening title track (a whole side of a conventional LP) is the preeminent work here, while the rest features a series of smaller musical and sonic adventures.

Micah Ballard http://www.poetryfoundation.org/bio/micah-ballard Micah Ballard was born in Baton Rouge, La., and lives in San Francisco. He is the author of Waifs and Strays (City Lights Books), nominated for a California Book Award; Parish Krewes (Bootstrap Press); Evangeline Downs (Ugly Duckling Presse); Negative Capability in the Verse of John Wieners (Auguste Press) among other books. He co- edits Auguste Press and Lew Gallery Editions and works for the M.F.A. in Writing Program at the University of San Francisco.

Amy Berkowitz http://www.mondoberko.blogspot.com Amy Berkowitz is the author of Listen To Her Heart, forthcoming from Spooky Girlfriend, and Lonely Toast, from What To Us (Press). She is a founding member of the Washtenaw County Women's Poetry Collective & Casserole Society and the editor of Mondo Bummer. She lives in San Francisco.

David Buuck http://www.davidbuuck.com David Buuck is a writer who lives in Oakland, Calif. He is the founder of BARGE, the Bay Area Research Group in Enviro-aesthetics, and co- founder and editor of Tripwire, a journal of poetics. An Army of Lovers, co-written with Juliana Spahr, is forthcoming from City Lights. Publications, writing and performance samples, and further info is available at the above url.

Ivy Johnson http://www.ivyjohnson.tumblr.com Ivy Johnson was born on the open prairie where she picked crocuses as a child. She also grew up speaking in tongues, which led her to poetry. Boog City published her first chapbook, Walt Disney's Light Show Extravaganza. She has a chapbook forthcoming from Timeless, Infinite Light called As They fall.

David Kirschenbaum http://www.myspace.com/gilmoreboysmusic http://boogcity.blogspot.com/ David Kirschenbaum's work has appeared in the Brooklyn Review Online, Can We Have Our Ball Back, Chain, Live Mag!, Unpleasant Event Schedule, and The Village Voice, among others. He is the editor and publisher of Boog City, a New York City-based small press and community newspaper now in its 22nd year. His poems form the lyrics of Casey Holford and Preston Spurlock's band Gilmore boys.

Jill Stengel http://www.dusie.org Formerly of San Francisco and Los Angeles, Jill Stengel now lives in Davis, Calif. with her three children and her husband. Stengel has run a poetry reading series; edited and published numerous chapbooks and a journal, mem, under her a+bend press imprint; participated in several poetry collectives; formed a women's salon for post-graduate poetic study; taught poetry and book arts; and actively participates in the poet-moms listserv community. She has nearly a dozen chapbooks of her own in print, several of which are also available to view online at the above url. Titles include ladies with babies, late may, only this, and I would open, and equinox. Her full-length Dear Jack is due out any minute from Black Radish Books.

Sunnylyn Thibodeaux http://www.galatearesurrection17.blogspot.com/2011/12/critic-writes-poems.html Sunnylyn Thibodeaux is from New Orleans and lives in San Francisco. Palm to Pine, her first full-length collection of poems, was published by Bootstrap Press. She is the author of many small books, including 20/20 Yielding, Room Service Calls, and Against What Light (forthcoming). Recent poems have appeared in Amerarcana, Back Room Live, Drunken Boat, Galatea Resurrects, Lit, The Recluse, Where Eagles Dare among others. She co-edits Auguste Press and Lew Gallery Editions.

Boog City http://www.boogcity.com Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 22nd year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has put out approximately 200 publications, including 35 volumes of poetry and various magazines and a newspaper, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, women’s writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates three regular performance series—d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, featuring a non-NYC small press, its writers, and a musical act; the new BoogWork series, which features two poets reading, followed by a musical performance, and then the featured poet giving the gathered a poetry workshop; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; Sleater- Kinney's, Dig Me Out; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville. All of these series are hosted at Sidewalk Cafe.

Directions:
1.5 blocks from Church St. and Market St. Muni
Venue is bet. 14th St and Duboce Ave.

> LAWRENCE â€“ A grant awarded to a University of Kansas researcher from the National Endowment for the Humanities will spur the creation of an institute on reading and teaching African-American poetry.
> The project is led by Maryemma Graham, a University Distinguished Professor in the Department of English in the KU College of Liberal Arts & Sciences. The institute, â€œDonâ€™t Deny My Voice: Reading and Teaching African-American Poetry,â€ will be open to college and university teachers from across the country.
> NEH awarded $189,000 to support the program.
> The institute will be guided by experts in the field and supported by the archival resources of KUâ€™s Project on the History of Black Writing and the Furious Flower Poetry Center at James Madison University.
> Graham founded and continues to direct the Project on the History of Black Writing, located within KUâ€™s Department of English, which is the only archive of its kind > and has been in the forefront of black literary studies and inclusion efforts in higher education for 29 years. This grant marks HBW's seventh from NEH and the fifth national institute in its 14-year history at KU. The institute will be coordinated by Sarah Arbuthnot Lendt, Project on the History of Black Writing grant specialist and KU English instructor.

> â€œDonâ€™t Deny My Voiceâ€ comes at a time of resurgence in interest in contemporary poetry, its expanded production and wide circulation. The program at KU will provide participants with an opportunity to develop a deeper understanding of the range, diversity and popularity of African-American poetry, and to engage in projects for teaching and further research.
> The institute will focus on the history and transformations of African-American poetry in cultural and social contexts over three critical periods: 1900-1960, 1960-1980 and 1980-present. Participants will examine the creation, production and performance of poetry, and consider new methods for reading, teaching and interpreting. This institute will be driven by key questions and themes focusing on the nature of black poetry in addition to those raised by individual presentations and panel discussions.
> KU faculty working with Graham include Anthony Bolden, associate professor of African and African-American studies; Joseph Harrington, associate professor of English; William Joe Harris, associate professor of creative writing; Jill Kuhnheim, professor of Spanish and Portuguese; and J. Edgar Tidwell, professor of English. Faculty from other institutions include Joanne Gabbin, director of the Furious Flower Poetry Center at James Madison University, Howard Rambsy II of Southern Illinois University in Edwardsville and Jerry W. Ward Jr. recently retired from Dillard University in New Orleans and currently an adjunct research associate, Department of English.
> Scheduled for July 14 through Aug. 3, regular sessions of the institute will meet each weekday. A number of public events will occur during the institute, including a weekend field trip to nearby Kansas City that will include visits to the American Jazz Museum for a poetry slam and discussion with Kansas City poets. Participants will view the Furious Flower Poetry Centerâ€™s four-part video anthology over the course of the three weeks, with discussions following the films.
> Collaboratively designed projects and subsequent webinars will extend the conversations and the application of knowledge gained from the institute beyond its three-week run. Webinars will be open to the public and will feature a group of intergenerational award-winning poets, including Rita Dove, Nikki Giovanni, Terrance Hayes, Liegh McInnis, Ishmael Reed and the 2012 U.S. Poet Laureate Natasha Tretheway.
> For more information, visit the Donâ€™t Deny My Voice website.

Full-tuition MFA Assistantships at Mills

Fri 28 Sep 2012

---

ok. it took us a lot of years of arguing, but we now have a few full tuition assistantships at mills.

if you've got some bright u/gs wanting to get an mfa, please ask them to apply.

they don't come with a stipend. just fyi. but students don't teach either. instead, they work with a faculty member to develop a community attentive project of some sort while they are at mills. the project idea is wide open. the application requires the submission of a one page description of what the project might be. the projects so far have been super great.

(and there are opportunities to add to this teaching assistantships and other sorts of aid in the second year, but still it isn't going to add up to $20k as at some schools.)

4 new Burning Deck books 2012

Sarahâ€ˆRiggs
AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ENVELOPES
Poetry, 160 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN 978-1-936194-10-0 original paperback $14
Publication date: September 15, 2012

Begun in the turmoil of moving house, these poems were jotted on envelopes because that was the form of paper on hand. But there was more to this choice. Oscillating between the US, France and Morocco, living on 3 continents and in 3 languages, Sarah Riggs felt the need to address her own self in order not to disperse into alternatives. But how do we address ourselves? the book asks. How many selves do we have? How do we sort what we think from what has been thought for us? Is it that our language cannot follow the mindâ€™s rich, fluctuating process or does language outrun what the mind can seize? So that we are caught between two excesses, two ineffables?

Sarah Riggs is the author of WATERWORK (Chax), CHAIN OF MINISCULE DECISIONS IN THE FORM OF A FEELING (Reality Street), 60 TEXTOS (Ugly Duckling), and 36 BLACKBERRIES (Juge Editions). Her book of essays, WORD SIGHTINGS: POETRY AND VISUAL MEDIA IN STEVENS, BISHOP, AND Oâ€™HARA, was published by Routledge in 2002. She has translated or co-translated from the French the poets Isabelle Garron, Marie Borel, Etel Adnan, Ryoko Sekiguchi, and, most recently, Oscarine Bosquet. A member of the bilingual poetry collective, Double Change (www.doublechange.org), and founder of the interart non-profit Tamaas (www.tamaas.org), she divides her time between the U.S. coasts and Paris, where she is a professor at NYU-in-France.

P. Inman
PER SE
Poetry, 88 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN13 978-1-936194-09-4 original paperback $14
Publication date: October 15, 2012

P. Inman radically fractures the conventions of language in order to build everything up again from a more elemental level. In per se, the composers Luigi Nono, Morton Feldman, Hans Lachenmann provide musical structure for his jazz-inflected words in motion. The book lives in the tension between the free, multidirectional movement of words and the highly orgazined macro-structures.

Peter Inman was born in 1947 and raised on Long Island. He has worked at the Library of Congress and as a labor rep and consultant. His books have included: OCKER (Tuumba Press, 1982), RED SHIFT and CRISS CROSS (Roof Books, 1988 & 1994), VEL (O Books, 1995), AMOUNTS. TO. (Potes & Poets Press, 2000), and AD FINITUM (If P Then Q, 2008). Forthcoming in 2013 from If P Then Q, IS WRITTEN, 1976-2012. He resides in Maryland with the poet Tina Darragh.

Inman â€œdestablizes the polarities of form & contentâ€¦ By fully semanticizing the so-called nonsemantic features of langue, Inman creates a dialectic of the recuperable & the unreclaimable, where what cannot be claimed is nonetheless most manifest.â€ â€”Charles Bernstein, ARTIFICE OF ABSORPTION

3.
Elfriede Czurda
ALMOST 1 BOOK / ALMOST 1 LIFE
Poetry, 96 pp, offset, smyth-sewn

ISBN13 978-1-936194-12-4
Original paperback $14
Publication date: November 15, 2012 (copies available)

This volume contains almost all of Elfriede Czurdaâ€™s first book (with the untranslatable title EIN GRIFF = EINGRIFF INBEGRIFFEN) and all of her second, FAST 1 LEBEN. Elfriede Czurda comes out of the Wiener Gruppeâ€™s experimental tradition. She is especially fond of letting repetition and permutation shift words through their whole gamut of meaningsâ€”and sometimes beyond. However, she is also not averse to thumbing her nose at any rigidities, even those of the experimental imperative. In ALMOST 1 LIFE (novella? politico-cultural satire?), the ruling avantgarde has licenced â€œmonomaniaâ€ as official language and punishes misuse by expelling the offender â€” into reality. Which is where Czurda positions herself. She combines exploring language with exploring the social power structures embedded in it â€” all with lots of fun and humor.

â€œCzurda makes strongly visible the fragmentary, arbitrary, non-linear... whole chains of associations flood the reader, or language itself breaks apart. [Her] powerful language is always political.â€â€”Michael Fisch, DIE BERLINER LITERATURKRITIK

Elfriede Czurda was born in 1946 in Wels, Austria. After 25 years in Berlin and some as visiting professor in Japan. she now lives again in Vienna. Her work, which includes poetry, prose, essays and radio plays, has received numerous prizes, most recently the Austrian WÃ¼rdigungspreis for Literature, 2008. Recent books are DUNKELZIFFER (2011), UNTRÃœGLICHER ORTSSINN (2009), AND ICH, WEISS (2008). Essays on her work can be found in DIE RAMPE: PORTRÃ„T ELFRIEDE CZURDA (2006) Rosmarie Waldrop has translated, from the German, Friederike MayrÃ¶cker, Elke Erb, Oskar Pastior, Gerhard RÃ¼hm, Ulf Stolterfoht and, from the French, Edmond JabÃ¨s, Emmanuel Hocquard and Jacques Roubaud. Her most recent book of poetry is DRIVEN TO ABSTRACTION (New Directions, 2010). .

4. In case you missed this one in the spring:
SÃ©bastien Smirou
MY LORENZO
translated from the French by Andrew Zawacki
Poetry, 120 pages, offset, smyth-sewn
ISBN 978-1-936194-08-7 original paperback $14
Publication date: May 15, 2012

MY LORENZO is an elegant, funny, often sad meditation on the fifteenth-century Italian statesman, art patron, and poet Lorenzo de Medici. Obliquely and eccentrically narrated, it is as concerned with pysical arrangement as it is with linguistic ambiguity and matters philosophical, political, and sentimental. MY LORENZO is striking visually for its justified stanzas and tableau-like shape. Reading the book is akin to touring the Uffizi, its Renaissance paintings hung meticulously on the walls. MY LORENZO combines traditional form with an unapologetically modern idiom that draws on pop culture and shuttles vertiginously between theoryspeak and speakeasy slang. (This work, published as part of a program providing publication assistance, received financial support from the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Cultural Services of the French Embassy in the United States and FACE [French American Cultural Exchange]).

SÃ©bastien Smirou is the author of three volumes of poetry. He is a psychoanalyst, with a specialization in working with troubled children, and lives in Montrouge, on the outskirts of Paris. Andrew Zawacki is the author of three poetry booksâ€"PETALS OF ZERO PETALS OF ONE (Talisman House), ANABRANCH (Wesleyan), and BY REASON OF BREAKINGS (Georgia). Coeditor of VERSE, editor of AFTERWARDS: SLOVENIAN WRITING 1945-1995 (White Pine), he has also co-translated AleÅ¡ Debeljakâ€™s WITHOUT ANESTHESIA (forthcoming from Persea). He teaches at the University of Georgia.

OCTOBER YEW
Mon 1 Oct 2012

Yew: A journal of innovative writing and images by women.

YEWJOURNAL.COM <http://yewjournal.com/>

It's OCTOBER, and this issue of YEW completes our first year. Since our debut issue in November, 2011, we've been honored to work with a wonderful group of talented writers and visual artists. We're thrilled this month to present new work by Michelle Battiste, Alexandria Peary and Stella Radulescu with spectacular visual contributions from Natasha Sweeten and Laura Terry. Laura is our cover artist this month as well.

Readers of Yew may have noticed that our bio page is unconventional. Please note that further information about our writers and artists can be found on the “ISSUE DETAILS” page.

Edited by designer Stephenie Foster and poet Carolyn Guinzio, Yew features three writers per month with visual art provided by the writers, their collaborators, other artists or the editors.

Please visit the site, and if you like what you find there, we would be grateful if you would help us by sharing news of this enterprise. Our Facebook page is here: https://www.facebook.com/pages/Yew-Journal/208944442504432

We are currently accepting submissions for our second year, and our complete guidelines are here: http://yewjournal.com/guidelines.html

Thanks for your support, and we hope you enjoy this issue of Yew.

all best,

FILMS

Jeanine Campbell is a poet living in West Philadelphia who has been writing poetic fragments for the past 30 some years. She recently returned to the city after teaching English in a rather remote and mountainous region in. She loves sharpie markers, prisms and constructing stone spirals in graveyards. Her piece â€œThe Rapture Came and Wentâ€ was composed at a Certain Circuits workshop, published on the site, and she recorded the video while in Korea for the Certain Circuits 2.1 issue launch.

Ben Franke whose film debut is in the October multimedia issue with â€œBarstarzzâ€ is a photographer/ videographer based in NYC who documents fluid subjects ranging from capoeira to parkour athletes. He was born in Washington D.C, grew up in Germany and went to high school in Baltimore, Maryland. That is where he developed his passion for taking pictures after taking photography classes with Julie Stovall and Juan Castro. He went on to study photography at New York University and graduated in 2010 with a BFA. When photographing he strives to capture what he sees in order to document the world around him. He is a visual thinker, problem solver, speaks two languages and loves to experience new places and things. www.benfranke.com

Donna Kuhn debuts with Certain Circuits for the October online issue with a film â€œJoy or Madnessâ€ which will be screened on 10/13. Donna is an author, poet, dancer, visual and video artist. Her experimental videos have been shown at The Disposable Film Festival, The New York Independent Film and Video Festival, The Santa Cruz Digital Arts Festival, The Mountain Arts Center and online at dvblog, PostVideo Art, Disturb The Peace TV, Hyperrhiz, City Gallery/popping pixels, ArtFemT, Moving Poems, Oregon Literary Review and Mad Hatter's Review, Harvard's Infinity Show/Visual Poetry and many other venues. picassogirl.tumblr.com

Showing â€œCurves, Color and Motion,â€ Loretta Parguassu has been a journalist for major publications including the Los Angeles Times. She scripted an award winning documentary for PBS Hawaii and wrote a musical version of Princess and the Pea that was produced in L.A. She has since scripted â€œNailed,â€ a short that got international exposure. â€œColor, Curves and Motionâ€ is a short that she produced. It is an experimental film that combines art, dance and music and has been shown in a number of galleries with her paintings. Paraguassu has two sons, Andre and Robert, both of them involved in the arts. lorettaparaguassu.blogspot.com

For his works such asâ€œThe Flight of Walter Benjamin,â€ Jeff Siegel used digital cel animation and computer programming. Jeff Siegel has worked in a variety of different media over the years, from short fiction to design to music criticism, as a self-styled â€œrenaissance man,â€ never realizing that thatâ€™s the polite term for â€œdilettante.â€ He can often be seen bloviating on topics about which he really, and obviously, knows very little. â€¨He was most recently published in our September issue for which he collaborated with Hal Sirowitz. Jeff was a featured exhibitor in our first exhibition, "Collaborate Collaborator" and he screened work at the Rotunda for our 1.1 issue launch. He is published in our 1.1 print issue as one of our original contributors. For more of Jeff Siegel: theprivatesector.org

Originally from Pakistan and now living in Los Angeles, Sara Suleman is showing the digital animation,â€œConvergeâ€ which represents â€œthe interstitial gap between reality and fantasy, a time when birds converge in the sky out of their own accord, denoting freedom and movement. This happens as a daily occurrence in Karachi. By transforming it in drawing, I seek to trace out the patterns of the birds and recreate their movement in my imagination- light, ambiguous, circling-- slicing their way across the expanse of the blank screen." Sara works in various media, ranging from photography to Installation. Her work is inspired by observations and sketches from daily life. She has exhibited in numerous exhibitions including the Philadelphia Asian American Film Festival, the Erasing Borders Exhibition at the Queens Museum, and Aicon Gallery, New York City, among others. sarasuleman.com

Keith Vosseller returns to Certain Circuits with his second publication in the October online issue, and the film â€œarchitect poagraphyâ€ will be screened on 10/13. Keith is a scientist/teacher at Drexel University. He was a member of the â€œphiladelphia poetsâ€ and did readings around the city. He is experimenting with mixing original words, images, and music (poagraphy). In â€œarchitect poagraphyâ€ the music is by the â€œDrexel Spiveyâ€ band with Bill Conway on guitar, George Livanos on bass, and Keith Vosseller on keyboards. His work has appeared previously in Sparrow Press. To see his original Certain Circuits piece, click here.

SOUND

Horsey comes in many forms: sound, image, costume and "spaz attacks" are among the most common manifestations. HORSEY is a phenomenon that began in 2004 HORSEY is now a trio writing sound letters back and forth from Cali to the East coast and back again. For a preview of their unconventional instrumentals, shadow play, and complicated soundscapes, visit their video on Certain Circuits here.

I Have Been Floated played at the launch of Certain Circuitsâ€™ 2.1 print launch. I Have Been Floated is a band from Ewing NJ that has been around since about 2006, and earlier than that as different names such as "small town pond" & "ASL PLZ." Member Brian McClendon has been a contributor to Certain Circuits. He will screen work as well as play music. ihavebeenfloated.bandcamp.com bmclendon.tumblr.com

Pre-Sale for Deborah Poe's "Helene" - Last day!

Mon 1 Oct 2012

Greetings, everyone,

I want to first thank all of you who purchased a copy of Deborah's book. By next week you should all receive that plus the first two chapbooks in the Emergent Poets series.

If you haven't purchased a copy, there's still time. The deadline for this pre-sale is midnight tonight.

http://furniturepressbooks.com/poehelene/

Also, if you're going to be in western Maryland on Oct. 13, Frostburg University's writing center is hosting an awesome book festival plus a series of panels on publishing, writing and theory from 11-4. I'll be there with my crew and all our terrific books. Hope to see you!

Because England eventually ruled half the globe, we all know its first colony by the name the colonizers gave it: Wales, which means â€˜Place of the Others,â€™ or â€˜Place of the Romanized Foreigners.â€™ So thatâ€™s how the Welshâ€”the original Britonsâ€”became â€˜foreignersâ€™ on their own island.â€ Read more (http://www.theparisreview.org/blog/2012/09/18/dreaming-in-welsh/?utm_source=newsletter1012&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=dreamingin welsh) â€º Press Pass: Dorothy Image

---------- â€œOne way of understanding the sacraments . . . is that simple things become central things. When Christians refer to the bath and the table, they refer not only to the specific sacraments of bathing and eating, but they point also to the sacramental character of every bath and every table. The setting apart of one table and one bath shows forth the splendor of all tables and all baths. That setting apart is the calling of Christians but also the vocation of the writer. The attentiveness of the writer is shown in how that writer lifts to the level of extraordinary the most ordinary of people, places, and things.â€ Read more (http://www.theparisreview.org/blog/2012/09/13/small-good-things/?utm_source=newsletter1012&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=smallgoodthings) â€º Gregory Crewdson Image (http://www.theparisreview.org/blog/2012/09/27/magic-hour-an-interview-with-gregory-crewdson/?utm_source=newsletter1012&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=crewdson) dissections from their biography

kevin mcpherson eckhoff

You are each unique snowflake. Kevin is her mother's son with ten original sauces: spicy, virtues like puppy warmth, saucy and explicity tarnished. He was born in her village of several piqued interests. An ungainly warrant to circumvent the queue or whatever strokes, she identified a new generic strain in her spare time of which we are all the general inheritors. So, she began in a small town and she will live and dye in his small town of Weaverron, b.c. Her biography delisted from fame sites. I smell rubbery goodness in him and a gentle womanly love for all things small and hairy. It's me spring day, men from Anismouth visit when I'm shy. I'll call us together like teeth and dildos on picnic, eat parades of youth, or share old versions of each other's habitual shot records. That's her, shining and young and her. Mostly irreverent yet factually astute. Her massive glands and tiny shouts, little hands and huge hair. We eat to her delight, dear Kevin. I have found you at last, cowering, sheltered in her and apoplectic. The streets awake and look for small towns in which to retire. From inside, an inside delightedly yours. My story filled with vomit yet shiny, slick and parasitic. Missing you? Not now.

25. David Kirschenbaum
Božičević and King New Boog City Printed Matter Co-Editors
Mon 1 Oct 2012

Hi all,

A hearty welcome to Boog City's new printed matter co-editors, Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ and Amy King

Ana is the author of Stars of the Night Commute (Tarpaulin Sky Press, 2009) and Rise in the Fall (Birds LLC, 2012). With Å½eljko MitiÄ‡, she is the editor of The Day Lady Gaga Died: an Anthology of NYC Poetry of the 21st Century (in Serbian). Her translations of Zvonko KaranoviÄ‡ recently received a PEN/NYSCA grant. She works and studies English literature at The Graduate Center, CUNY, where she edits Diane di Primaâ€™s lectures for Lost & Found: The CUNY Poetics Document Initiative, helps run the Annual Chapbook Festival, and co-chairs the Transculturation seminar.

John Ashbery described Amy King's poems in her most recent book from Litmus Press, I Want to Make You Safe, as bringing â€œabstractions to brilliant, jagged life, emerging into rather than out of the busyness of living.â€ King conducts interviews for VIDA: Woman in Literary Arts and teaches English and creative writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. She was honored by The Feminist Press as one of the "40 Under 40: The Future of Feminism" awardees.

Ana and Amy will begin their tenure with Boog City's January issue.

best,
David

With inevitable sadness, yesterday afternoon my mother, Barbara Mioore Vincent died at the age of 96. During the past few years, among many of us here, she became known for her proclivity to dictate her own poems, often improvising freely off the work of modernist writers such as Joanne Kyger, Rexroth, Ginsberg, Levertov, Gertrude Stein and others whose works I would read to her.Much of her out put was published, most recently a group of poems in Eaogh's issue on aging, edited by Susan Schultz. For most of her public life, she was a politician, City planner, and environmental activist in the San Francisco Bay Area, including being a founding member of Save the Bay. On the Richmond shoreline, the Barbara and Jay Vincent Park , now part of the Federal Park System, is a commemoration of the efforts of my parents to preserve the Bay from industrial destruction. A graduate and veteran of many of this country's 20th century natural, human and economic upheavals, she had an incorrigible sense of honesty, bravery and sometimes humor in confronting the reality of the various hands into which she was dealt. As not long after my father dieed:

January will open the horrible threat.

February will break off a few of the wicked.

March the winds will blow and frighten everybody.

April will break my heart.

May will come whisking through.

June is hard to decipher.

July will never stop to say hello.

August is jolly and happy for people like me.

September is hard to take.

October is full of joy for very few.

November marks the worst that could ever come.

December for many it's love and joy

But not for me.

the rage, the rage, it keeps me on YouTube
Wed 3 Oct 2012

Greetings, compassionate conservatives, neocons, tea partiers, rhinos, and members of the National Front! People might be pleased to know that the Lafayette, Louisiana event for 100 Thousand Poets for Change 2012 was incredibly fun and exciting for all. There were so many wonderful poets, musicians, and singers, and co-organizer Jessica Bordelon and I got them all on

"tape--" I've begun uploading them to http://www.youtube.com/user/JonathanPenton , so please do check that space frequently in the coming weeks!

And there's a brand-new issue of /Unlikely Stories, Episode IV /at http://www.unlikelystories.org/ up, featuring:
Ben Beard's report on the Chicago Teachers' Strike
John Dennehy reports on getting arrested on the one-year anniversary of Occupy Videos from marches outside both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions
My open videorant, responding to the Catholic League's Bill Donohue's latest condemnation of "Piss Christ"
Rita Bozi checks out the prices in capitalist Hungary
John James checks out the collapse of the Arctic's summer sea ice
"Zebra," a short play by B. Z. Niditch Fiction by Rudolfo Carrillo, Elmore Snoody, and Jack Colton and Fresh, Hot Poetry by Lyn Lifshin, Kyle Hemmings, Petra Whiteley, John Sokol, Lisa Zaran, Matt Morris, Ivan Peledov, Dustin Holland, and Michael Brautigan

And hey, you! Are you in the Lafayette, Louisiana area, or do you ever travel through? Because our weekly workshop, Acadiana Wordlab, starts THIS SATURDAY and you should check out http://www.acadianawordlab.org/ !

4000 Words 4000 Dead: submissions & events

Thu 4 Oct 2012

â€œI want to start with the milestone today of 4000 dead in Iraq. Americans. And just what effect do you think it has on the country?â€

-- Martha Raddatz, ABC News White House correspondent to Dick Cheney in 2008

For the past four years, Jennifer Karmin has been collecting submissions of words as a memorial to the 4,487 American soldiers killed in Iraq. These words also create a public poem given away to passing pedestrians during street performances around the country. Throughout October 2012, she will transpose the elegy onto the walls of a dilapidated Chicago mansion utilizing the American flag as her writing utensil. The house will become the site for community events with 4000 Words 4000 Dead concluding on Veterans Day and published by Sona Books.

Home: Public or Private?
an exhibition of installations & performances at 6018NORTH
What happens when our private life becomes public and public space becomes private? Located in a mansion on the north side of Chicago, the exhibition presents multiple artists exploring this question through installations within the rooms of the house. The investigations and activities presented explore the social, cultural, and political ramifications of our shifting conceptions of public and private space.

Artists include: Teresa Albor, Lise Haller Baggesen, Rebecca Beachy, Sandra Binion, Troy Briggs, Deborah Boardman, Sandra Binion, Cuppola Bobber, Keith Buchholz, Chelsea Culp and Ben Foch, Collective Cleaners, Meg Duguid, Daniela Ehemann, Maria Gaspar, Jane Jerardi, Jennifer Karmin, Nance Klehm, Joseph Kramer with Radius, Carron Little, Trevor Martin and Victoria Fowler, Lou Mallozzi, Jesus Mejia and Ruth, Harold Mendez, Katrina Petrauskas, Jesse Schlesinger & Vintage Theatre Collective.

Home: Public or Private? is sponsored by Chicago Artists Month.

Millay Colony presents Katy Lederer workshop in NYC
Fri 5 Oct 2012

Millay Colony for the Arts Presents:
Creativity & Stylewith Katy Lederer
October
20 & 21 at Trisha Brown Studio in New York City

In this workshop, we will explore therelationship between truth and style and apply what we learn to our writing. How does one write in order to convey that something is true, factual, objective, or sincere? What are the (often un-noticed) stylistic conventions of these modalities? What exactly is "creative" about creative writing? Do we know it when we see it, and, if so, what is it, stylistically, that we see? Is it possible to be at once creative and truthful in one's writing? Is it possible to come across as factual or objective while maintaining a high level of style? In order to explore these questions, we will read brief excerpts from a range of both commercial and experimental texts--memoir to poetry to fiction and non-fiction. Some of the authors we will consider include Spahr, Tao Lin, Hemingway, Stein, Dinesen, Didion, Eugenides, McCourt, and Karen Walker Thomas, among others. The class will be structured around readings, imitations and exercises with a focus on one piece of writing--3-5 pages--of your own that you've written previous to the workshop and will send to me before the class starts (I will comment on this piece with the above questions in mind, and hand it back to you during the workshop; we will not be workshopping this piece as a group). This will be a great class for those who are stuck on a writing project in any genre, looking for a new direction, or just hoping to rev up their engines.

Katy Lederer is the author of the poetry collections Winter Sex (Verse Press, 2002) and The Heaven-Sent Leaf (BOA Editions, 2008), as well as the memoir Poker Face: A Girlhood Among Gamblers (Crown, 2003), which Publishers Weekly included on its list of the Best Nonfiction Books of 2003 and Esquire Magazine named one of its eight Best Books of the Year 2003. She is working on a new book of poems titled The Engineers, and a novel about a brilliant teenaged girl with a dark family past that is set in Las Vegas. She has taught creative writing at The Gotham Writers' Workshop, UNLV, and Columbia.

This program is one of The Millay Colony for the Arts' two-day, eight-hour weekend workshops at the at the lovely Trisha Brown Studio in Manhattan. These intensive sessions feature some of the most exciting teaching artists around. Lunch and coffee included both days.

On Cross-Pollination: An interview with Camille Martin by James Pickersgill

Sat 6 Oct 2012

My "world premiere" of Looms will be in Cobourg, Ontario, about an hour's train ride east of Toronto.

Poet James Pickersgill put together some thought-provoking interview questions in advance of the reading. Below is a sample, and the complete interview can be found here:

http://www.poetrycobourg.ca/Camille%20Martin%20Q%26A.htm * Q - Camille, it is not at all true that poetry is your single creative outlet. You are known as a collage artist, too. You are an editor yourself ... and a translator. Your own work has been translated into other languages as well. You have been a university teacher. You've organized poetry reading series. You've had radio shows and you blog actively on the internet. When listed like that, these activities might sound like an array of separate pigeon-holes but I suspect that there is a lot of cross-pollination, so to speak. What is the nature of this creativity as you experience it: one spark that finds many openings to jump into flame, or, can it be distinct and separate creative impetuses?

* Camille Martin - I love the idea of cross-pollination. In fact, I think my primary creative impulse is to bring together: to merge or to juxtapose. It's the basic impetus for the metaphor: to bring unlike things into dialogue. And for me, that goes for disciplines as well. I was reading and seeking out poetry on my own from an early age, though I didn't begin writing it in earnest until my late 30s. But my first creative expression was musical - I was trained as a classical pianist since I was six years old, and I went on to get a graduate degree in piano performance. I was also intensely interested in visual art. I've always felt a desire to bring the arts together. So now, in the autumn of my life, I have the pleasure of doing all three: making collages, writing poetry, and setting my poetry to music. I think these disciplines are sparking conversations among each another.

* * *

Cheers!
Camille

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Neither Us nor Them: Poetry Anthologies, Canon Building and the Silencing of William Bronk" by David Clippinger

Sat 6 Oct 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œNeither Us nor Them: Poetry Anthologies, Canon Building and the Silencing of William Bronkâ€ by David Clippinger

Description:

The twentieth century witnessed the proliferation of the poetry anthology, and perhaps none was so instrumental in reshaping the poetry canon than Donald Allenâ€™s New American Poetry, which introduced many readers to the Beat writers, the Black Mountain School, as well as New York City poets. Allenâ€™s anthology was organized around a concept of poetry communities, and was one of the first to foreground group â€œidentityâ€ as a canonical practice. As most readers of Donald Allenâ€™s groundbreaking anthology are aware, William Bronk is not included in the cast of poets assembled within The New American Poetry. But what might be surprising to many is that Bronk was invited by Allen to contribute to the anthology and he was the final person to be cut from the final manuscript. Neither Us Nor Them uses William Bronkâ€™s poetry and letters as a window to survey the construction of The New American Poetry anthologyâ€”as well as an opportunity to explore the generation of poetry communities as vital to the canon making process. The case of William Bronk is, therefore, illuminating both in terms of the late 1950s/early 1960s poetry scene as well as in the canonical debates that have occurred since then and rendered materially at the level of the anthology

Elizabeth Kray Hall
Poet's House
10 River Terrace, New York, NY 10282
Map and directions: http://www.poetshouse.org/about/tour-our-space/visiting

Readings by the poets, lots of good eats and drinks, good talk - All Are Welcome!

Edward Foster's Dire Straits<http://www.marshhawkpress.org/Foster4.html>:

"Edward Foster's . . . poems suspend themselves just above language, connotative of some understanding - perhaps common to all of us - that recedes at the brink of words. It is just on this cusp, with some doubt, some explaining, that we find Foster, and trust him to guide us on an impossible course." - Brooklyn Rail

"Foster writes with great economy. His words feel chiseled and dovetailed into place. Like Zukofsky, Foster evinces the meticulous care of a seasoned cabinet maker. But it is out of this economy that he finds the richness that he is looking for.... Foster, who likes the muted registers and stunning clarity of the black and white photography he often includes in his books, is engrossed by the dialectic between art and life and the complexities and ambiguities of human emotion. This is his strait. His narrows. He doesn't just articulate ideas, he struggles against them. His poetry has as edgy undercurrent. It doesn't settle. It searches for where the words begin."- John Olson

Sandy McIntosh's Cemetery Chess, Selected and New Poems<http://www.marshhawkpress.org/McIntosh5.html>:

"McIntosh's imagination is so vivid that the primary response to [his poetry] is delight." -American Book Review

"I don't like people calling writing 'gorgeous' but this really is gorgeous writing. What a crazy/delicious world McIntosh invents."-Lanford Wilson

Paul Pines's Divine Madness<http://www.marshhawkpress.org/Pines2.html>:

"[. . .] an extended meditation on...the psychic wormholes that allow instantaneous travel along our internal galaxies, that hide just underneath the next memory, the next sentence, and behind the all, the ALL itself-unknowable, perhaps, but in Pines' poetry nearly imaginable." - American Book Review

"Pines goes right to the radical nature of metaphor in poetry, not ornament but sudden discernment: sharp observation of historical events and natural things leads directly, deeply, to moral awareness. His lines seem to question the assertions they embody: interrogate by interruption. He is the quiet sage who makes everything in his room a tender plaything." - Robert Kelly

KENT JOHNSON has published more than two dozen books as poet, translator, and editor. His most recent, released just two weeks back, is an expanded second edition of A Question Mark above the Sun: Documents on the Mystery Surrounding a Famous Poem "by" Frank O'Hara (Starcherone/Dzanc), whose first, fine-press version appeared in late 2010 despite pointed legal warnings. Last December, it was chosen as a "2011 Book of the Year" by the Times Literary Supplement. He's read numerous times in Chicago over the years, and is pleased to do so again for the venerable Red Rover Series. He lives in Freeport, Illinois.

QURAYSH ALI LANSANA is author of five poetry books, three textbooks, a children's book, editor of eight anthologies, and coauthor of a book of pedagogy. He is Associate Professor of English/Creative Writing at Chicago State University, where he served as Director of the Gwendolyn Brooks Center for Black Literature and Creative Writing from 2002-2011. Our Difficult Sunlight: A Guide to Poetry, Literacy & Social Justice in Classroom & Community (with Georgia A. Popoff) was published in March 2011 by Teachers & Writers Collaborative and was a 2012 NAACP Image Award nominee. mystic turf, a collection of poems, will be released in October 2012 by Willow Books.

DANIELA OLSZEWSKA is the author of four collections of poetry: cloudfang : : cakedirt (Horse Less Press, 2012), Citizen J (Artifice Books, forthcoming), True Confessions of An Escapee From The Capra Facility For Wayward Girls (Spittoon, forthcoming), and (with Carol Guess) How To Feel Confident With Your Special Talents (Black Lawrence Press, forthcoming). She sits on Switchback Booksâ€™ Board of Directors and serves as Associate Poetry Editor of H_NGM_N and Another Chicago Magazine. Daniela was born in Wroclaw, Poland and she received her MFA from the University of Alabama, but she self-identifies as a Chicagoan.

RED ROVER SERIES is curated by Laura Goldstein and Jennifer Karmin. Each event is designed as a reading experiment with participation by local, national,

Seeking creative and critical work: The Indian River Review

Tue 9 Oct 2012

For more information:
http://theindianriverreview.wordpress.com/http://theindianriverreview.wordpress.com/2012/07/10/2012-2013-submission-guidelines/

--

The Indian River Review is currently soliciting submissions for its second issue slated for publication in late spring/summer 2013. The theme for this issue is "Memory." The deadline for submissions is December 15, 2012. Genres include short fiction, poetry, creative non-fiction, critical essays, black and white photography, and book reviews.

Submission and Formatting Guidelines:

All work is peer reviewed. The journal accepts only electronic submission, no hard copies. Do not send simultaneous submissions. Please follow the requirements listed below for all submissions:

Text files must be sent as .doc, .docx, or .rtf email attachments. Photography files must be sent as .tiff or .jpg email attachments. Send short fiction attachments to [redacted]. Send poetry attachments to [redacted]. Send creative non-fiction and photography attachments to [redacted]. Send critical essays and book review attachments to [redacted]. Text-based submissions must use 12-point font and correct MLA format. Short fiction, creative non-fiction, and critical essays are limited to 4,000 words. Book reviews are limited to 1,000 words.

In your email, make sure to include your full name, phone number, address, institutional affiliation (if you have one), the title(s) of the work you submit, and a 50 to 100 word author biographical paragraph.

Send no more than 5 submissions for poetry.
Send no more than 10 submissions for photographic pieces.

Please make sure to spend time proofing and editing your text submissions before sending them. Authors may even want to consider asking a friend to read the work first to help make sure an error free submission is sent. Submissions with incorrect grammar or misspellings may be automatically excluded from the review process. Those submissions that are accepted must be open to receiving minor editorial corrections.

Payment upon publication will include one copy of The Indian River Review.

Salt Companion to Charles Bernstein, ed. William Allegrezza

<h ttp://tinyurl.com/8kr59gw>

“What we have here is the ideal Primer for the Gradual Understanding of Charles Bernstein: the coverage is wide, & all you need is “to be ready, not prepared.” You will not be asked to lounge on the couch as nobody remembers its colors, but the essays come in all colors, except sad. Enjoy, & then get back to the poems.” —Pierre Joris

“A major poet for our time — & then some – Charles Bernstein has emerged as a principal voice –maybe the best we have – for an international avant-garde now in its second century of visions & revisions. It is in celebration of this that the Salt Companion to his work appears here, to show him in a trajectory from an American-centered language poetry in the 1970s to an active & significant relation to a constantly renewing & expanding global poetry in which his singularity has played a vital role. What becomes clear in these pages is how his generosity of mind & spirit continues to enrich us all. ” —Jerome Rothenberg

Wed 10 Oct 2012

It might be hard to believe, but 2013 marks TWENTY YEARS of above/ground press, going way way back to those small publications long since buried in boxes (did you see the photos and report from the 19th anniversary reading?). What was I thinking?

But it means that the 2013 annual subscriptions are now available as well: $50 (in the United States, $50 US; $75 international) for everything above/ground press makes from now until the end of 2013.

http://www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.com/2012/10/aboveground-press-20th-anniversary.html

There are a whole bunch of publications in the works for 2013, but I'm not going to mention any names. This year has been one of the most active ones the press has enjoyed so far, and I'm planning a number of excitements over the next fourteen months. Why not take a chance and find out what? Already, new chapbooks are in the works by Deborah Poe, Seth Landman, Allison Greyhurst, Mark Cochrane, Shannon Maguire and plenty more.

You can either send a cheque (payable to rob mclennan) to 402 McLeod Street #3, Ottawa ON K2P 1A5 or drop the money on the Paypal button at www.robmclennan.blogspot.com

And keep checking notices for The Factory Reading Series (including two events in November!).

There's so much more to come...

From the Archives: Boog's 2008 Election Coverage

Fri 12 Oct 2012

Hi all,

On the heels of last night's Vice Presidential debate, from the Boog City archives, here's some coverage of the 2008 Election, under the editing and writing of then politics co-editors Jen Benka and Carol Mirakove:

Boog City 49: "The Poets' Primary": Poets' thoughts on the 2008 Primaries

http://www.boogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc49.pdf

Boog City 50: An interview with Eileen Myles, "The Poet Who Once Ran for President"

http://www.boogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc50.pdf

2008 Election Eve mini-issue: "Election 2008: Meaningful Moments, Among Other Things"

http://www.boogcity.com/boogpdfs/bc2008election_eve.pdf

And coming in two weeks, our Election 2012 mini-issue, edited by Boog City contributing editor (and longtime Furniture Press editor) Christophe Casamassima.

best,
David

Dusie Reading - London - Friday 11/2

Sat 13 Oct 2012

Friday Nov. 2, 7.30, The A
Dusie Kollectiv & Friends: A Poetry Reading

Friday Nov. 2, 7.30, The Apple Tree, 45 Mount Pleasant, London WC1X 2AE.

Nearest Tube Chancery Lane or buses from Holborn and Kingâ€™s Cross

Readers: Tilla Brading, Jennifer K Dick, Giles Goodland, Linus Godwin-Slug reading for Harry Godwin, Jeff Hilson, Sarah Rosenthal, Carol Watts

Tilla Brading, poet, performer and textual artist, teaches creative writing and works with students with learning difficulties. She was joint editor of PQR (Poetry Quarterly Review) and assistant Custodian of Coleridge Cottage in Nether Stowey, Somerset.Â Her poetry has appeared widely in publications such as Shearsman, Oasis, Fire, Staple, Terrible Work, HOW 2, and Great Works. Her most recent publications are Stone Settings (with Frances Presley) (Odyssey Books & Other Press, 2010)Â and Grid (Dusie Kollektiv, 2012).

Jennifer K Dick is the author of Fluorescence (2004) & Circuits (2012) as well as 3 chapbooks, including Tracery (Dusie Kollectiv 5, 2011) and Betwixt (Corrupt 2012). She lives in France where she teaches at UHA. She curates the Ivy Writers Paris bilingual reading series in Paris & co-organizes the Ecrire L'Art French reading mini-residency in Mulhouse. She is a poetry editor for VERSAL magazine out of Amsterdam & a regular book reviewer for Drunken Boat (USA) and Tears in the Fence (UK). Her blog ishttp://jenniferkdick.blogspot.comÂ
Â
Harry Godwin has had 2 children since leaving London. His press, Arthur Shilling, is on a hiatus & he's not produced much work either. Coincidence?

Linus Godwin-Slug was born on 16th September. He keeps chickens, grows beards, rears slugs, lives in Devon, lives in London, travels to Northumberland, home of the Angles. Since being separated from his moustache, his feet haven't left Devon, except for a disastrous foray into Cornwall, where his sideburns were nearly ripped off. His moustache now roams the land, seeking opportunities and upper-lips to read poems.

Giles Goodland was part of two Dusie Kollektivs. One of them,Â 'from Gloss' later turned into Gloss, fromÂ the Knives Forks and Spoons press. His most recent book is The Dumb Messengers from Salt.

Jeff Hilson's recent publications include stretchers (Reality Street, 2006), ed. The Reality Street Book of Sonnets (Reality Street, 2008), Bird bird (Landfill, 2009) and In The Assarts (Veer, 2010) and he is currently working on a sequence called Organ Music. He teaches Creative Writing at Roehampton University, London and runs the reading series Xing the Line.

Sarah Rosenthal is the author ofÂ ManhattenÂ (Spuyten Duyvil),Â The Animal (Dusie), sitingsÂ (a+bend),Â not-chicagoÂ (Melodeon), andÂ How I Wrote This StoryÂ (Margin to Margin). Her book of interviews,Â A Community Writing Itself: Conversations with Vanguard Writers of the Bay Area,Â was published by Dalkey Archive in 2010. She serves on the poetry jury for the California Book Awards, teaches in the University of San Franciscoâ€™s MFA program, and writes curricula for Developmental Studies Center in Oakland, California.

Carol Watts lives in London. Her recent dusie chap isÂ Good Life Redact #1.Â Her books includeÂ OccasionalsÂ andÂ Sundog, and the chapbookÂ Mother Blake.

Global Islands Project -- ongoing series of multi-media pdf-ebooks/field-recordings -- a pastoral, pictorial and phonic elicitation of island parameters. An intensive examination of small islands and their paradigmatic solutions to globalism... Ethnographically a shared world of historical experience -- not the romanticized and divided universe of them and us.

Your feudal-world is based on mutual relief at your common corruption. Maybe some cultures are based on even worse. But that wouldn't change the bad faith of it and as years go by, you wake at night in terror of your whole life being an act of bad faith, where everything is self-interest and nothing more, where every human interaction is driven by a silent, even subconscious calculation of some ulterior motive, to the point that a sea of bad faith has taken over your whole life, there's no small island left from which you can even try to build a bridge of good faith, because even that effort becomes suspect, even good faith is nothing but self-interested, even altruism is nothing but solipsistic, even your professed agonizing right here right now is nothing but a gesture, made to the conscience in order to assure it that it exists.

Little Songs
from The Blue Gazebo
by John Allman

His "Little Songs," John Allman says, are "sonnet-size poems," thirty-three of them, "some indeed being sonnets," that taken together make up the second of three parts of The Blue Gazebo, his ninth full-length collection of poems.

Born in 1935, and initially raised in the Hell's Kitchen neighborhood of New York City, John Allman, author of eight book-length collections of poetry, two chapbooks, and a volume of short stories, was a high-school drop-out who earned his diploma in night school while working as a lab tech for Pepsi-Cola. Eventually turning away from science for the humanities, and knocking about in many jobs, he earned degrees in English Literature and Creative Writing from Hunter College and Syracuse University (where he worked with Delmore Schwartz and Philip Booth), while becoming more and more involved in writing poetry.

At the age of 44, after some years of having his work appear in journals, he published his first book, Walking Four Ways in the Wind (1979), with Princeton University Press in its Princeton Series of Contemporary Poets. His most recent poetry collections are Loew's Triboro (2004), Lowcountry (2007), both from New Directions, and Algorithms, prose poems (2012) from Quale Press. His Inhabited World: New & Selected Poems 1970-1995 (1995) was published by the Wallace Stevens Society Press. His recently completed collections, Older Than Our Fathers and The Blue Gazebo, are making the rounds, looking for a publisher.

Allman has received two fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts, a Pushcart Prize in Poetry, and the Helen Bullis Prize from the original Poetry Northwest. He earned his living teaching college English and retired from that in 1997, to have more time for writing. He lives in Katonah, NY, with his wife, Eileen, a Shakespeare and Jacobean Drama scholar and writer. They spend their winters on Hilton Head Island, SC.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

This is the Introduction and first three pages of a new project, titled "Writing Home." The letters written home are "the creative process of making a home, in which I am both host and guest."

More letters will be added over time, and perhaps the Introduction will be revised as the project reveals more of itself. As with many of my recent projects, the process is public, and comments are welcome.

Poet on Painters
Mon 15 Oct 2012

http://www.brightstupidconfetti.com/2012/10/amy-king-on-leonor-fini-leonora.html

So what way does she make? (How) does she make way?
An ego may be a stand-alone smokescreen, a fiction in translucent gauze with items carefully pinned, presenting the world with the story of a person.
In two-way fashion, the gauze is a lens to see through too. (I am talking about reading lives from the master I contest. I am writing as material interest, a gaping abyss.)

But this is only one version. An ego is also an interaction, an interplay of psychic forces, not in mere exchange, but as colluding energies that manifest ghosts.

Poet as Radio: Avery Burns on 10/21

Wed 17 Oct 2012

This Sunday we feature part one of our conversation with Avery Burns who'll read from and discuss his forthcoming Fighting the WavesÂ and collection The Idler Wheel.Â Tune in this Sunday, 10/21, 11:30am-12:30pm (PT) at savekusf.org (San Francisco Community Radio).

Avery Burns works in the Financial District of San Francisco at a multi-national bank. He livesÂ in the East Bay in Concord, CA looking out at the Lime Ridge open space. Most of his reading is done during his commute on BART.
Â
Avery currently, again, runs the Canessa Park
Reading Series in SF and has edited several magazine projects
"lyric&" (90â€™s) and co-edited "26" (00â€™s). Other projects include working on stroke and turn officiating for his daughterâ€™s summer swim league and trying to walk the dog more often.

Brief publication highlights include - One full length collection - The Idler Wheel (Manifest Press 2000), multiple chapbooks including "for" (g.e. 2010) and the forthcoming Fighting the WavesÂ from Hank's Original Loose Gravel Press. Work has appeared in magazines on-line and print and is also included in two anthologies - Bay Poetics (Faux Press, 2006), and An Apparent Event (2nd Story Books, 2006).

Oct 20 Artists' Talk in Chicago

Thu 18 Oct 2012

Home: Public or Private?
Artists' Talk

Saturday, October 20th from 12-1:30pm

at 6018NORTH
6018 N. Kenmore
in Chicago's Edgewater neighborhood
http://www.facebook.com/events/116408688515680

Caroline Picard moderates artists discussing their work from the exhibitions Home: Public or Private? and The Happiness Project.

Artists include:
Jennifer Karmin, Kirstin Leenaars, Lise Haller Baggeston, Harold Mendez, Meredith and Anna, Carron Little, Troy Briggs, Rebecca Beachy, and Collective Cleaners

We all know public art but what does it mean for an artist to make art for the public, in public? What is "in public" and who is a "public"? Judith Butler recently questioned Hannah Arendt's "the space of public appearance" stating that we need to ask the purpose of public space, how a public forms, who appears where and when, doing what, and what are the conditions that supports this appearance? This discussion asks what is "the space of public appearance" for an artist and is there a distinction between work made for "the space of public appearance vs. work that is made for the studio and gallery? Who is the public (or plurality) that work is being made for, and how is this public (or plurality) meant to respond?

Home: Public or Private?
an exhibition of installations & performances at 6018NORTH

October 5th-28th
Guided private tours: Saturdays at 2pm & 4pm and Sundays at 2pm
RSVP at http://6018north.weebly.com/rsvp-for-the-home-show.html

What happens when our private life becomes public and public space becomes private? Located in a mansion on the north side of Chicago, the exhibition presents multiple artists exploring this question through installations within the rooms of the house. The investigations and activities presented explore the social, cultural, and political ramifications of our shifting conceptions of public and private space.

Artists include: Teresa Albor, Lise Haller Baggesen, Rebecca Beachy, Sandra Binion, Troy Briggs, Deborah Boardman, Sandra Binion, Cuppola Bobber, Keith Buchholz, Chelsea Culp and Ben Foch, Collective Cleaners, Meg Duguid, Daniela Ehemann, Maria Gaspar, Jane Jerardi, Jennifer Karmin, Nance Klehm, Joseph Kramer with Radius, Carron Little, Trevor Martin and Victoria Fowler, Lou Mallozzi, Jesus Mejia and Ruth, Harold Mendez, Katrina Petrauskas, Jesse Schlesinger & Vintage Theatre Collective.

Home: Public or Private? is sponsored by Chicago Artists Month. 6018NORTH is a non-profit space for experimental culture, installation, performance, and sound.

NYC late February/March - apartment neededMargaret & Quincy<[redacted]>;

Fri 19 Oct 2012

As some of you know, Diane and I had been planning an extended visit to New York early next year and counting on an exchange of residences (New York and San Diego) that would have made life very easy. Sadly the friend with whom we were exchanging had to back out, but ever undaunted we're planning to go ahead with a modified version and are again looking for a sublet or other arrangement -- basically for the entire month of March or possibly for both March and February, with all of which we're really quite flexible. So we're asking again whether you have any leads or suggestions and can pass them along to us. I'll also be reading on March 13 at the Saint Marks Poetry Project, sharing the evening with Heriberto Yepez, as a kind of launch or pre-launch of the big Reader of my work that he and I have been co-editing for Black Widow Press. So I hope that will give us a chance to get together, to which we greatly look forward.

With warm embraces for all of you,

"Flushed in Grains of Sand" on As/Is
Sat 20 Oct 2012

"Flushed in Grains of Sand" is a song-cycle about a relationship between two artists which I wrote and recorded in 2010. Modern technology has allowed me to upload the entire album to As/Is:

Raymond Souster (January 15, 1921 - October 19, 2012)
Sat 20 Oct 2012

As Bruce Meyer posted this afternoon on Facebook:

Yesterday Canadian poetry lost one of its giants with the passing of Raymond Souster. He was the first in Canada to take up the poetics of William Carlos Williams. His career spanned generations. I saw him about a year ago and his brilliant mind was still sharp though he was physically infirm. We talked for about six hours, until I was exhausted. He didn't want me to leave. His life was Canadian poetry. Rest in peace, Ray. See you at the World Series.

The author of more than fifty volumes of poetry, he live the entirety of his life in Toronto, and was once called the citys most loved poet. If you can find Stephen Cain's essay, Sousters Toronto, I would highly recommend it.

With the email he originally sent out, James Deahl included this short bio for Souster that he wrote for a publication called The Ambassador:

Raymond Souster was born in Toronto during 1921 and has been a leading member of the Great Generation for the past 70 years. Souster won the Governor General's Award for poetry in 1964 (for The Colour of the Times), was presented with Canada's Centennial Medal in 1967, won the City of Toronto Book award in 1979 (for Hanging In), and was made an Officer of the Order of Canada in 1995. He was a founding member of the League of Canadian Poets and served as LCP President from 1967 to 1971. He is the author of well over 70 books, largely of poetry, most recently Easy Does It and Never Counting the Cost.

Souster served in the Royal Canadian Air Force during World War II. In the 1950s, he edited first Contact and later Combustion, the foremost Canadian poetry magazines of their day. He also ran Contact Press for 15 years (1952 - 1967), which published many of Canada's most important contemporary poets. Souster lives in Toronto with his wife Rosalia.

Seamus Kirwan, a new author of rhyming verse, recently launched his book "Ravings of a Mad Irishman" in Tullamore, in the Clonmore House Hotel.

A Tullamore Rhymers Club member, he launched it at his 50th birthday, to mark the milestone, as the book reflects on life and his life in particular, charting his life long battle with, and acceptance of his depression, and finding a way of coping with same.

A section of his poems dwells on this, and a life finding journey in a canoe down the River Shannon.

A lot of funny poems bring a smile to the face, and also swing a well deserved swipe at Ireland ruling classes.

Japan poetry events fall 2012

Sun 21 Oct 2012

---

hi My earlier message seems to have gotten garbled due to an encoding problem. This time I'll try just to share URLs then and not type much-- JIPS (Japan International Poetry Society) info, event Nov 10, Osaka: http://www.ikutapress.com/jips.html JWC (Japan Writers Conference) info, Nov 17 (and 18) event in Kyoto: http://www.japanwritersconference.org/ Both events are free of charge, open to the public, and we hope to see as many people out for them as possible. The JWC event is poetry as well as other genres; me and poetry friends will be there on Sat. from 12 noon. The JIPS event is an event with eight readers, Japanese and non-Japanese poets. Info at URLS above or contact me-- I can be reached offlist for more info if need be (janenakagawa at yahoo dot com) best wishesJane, in Shizuoka/Nagano JAPAN

New in 2012:

Jane Joritz-Nakagawa's seventh poetry book, "Invisible City," can be downloaded for free from Peter Ganick's White Sky Ebooks (as of July, 2012): http://whiteskybooks.blogspot.jp/

Poetry broadside, "blank notes," was published in spring, 2012 with Country Valley Press (USA):

Re: question: Lionel Kearns' cine-poems
Mon 22 Oct 2012

Hi Camille,

Both of those works are part of On Lionel Kearns at http://vispo.com/kearns .

To view this piece, you need to install the free Shockwave plugin from http://vispo.com/sw . On Lionel Kearns is an interactive piece. Move your mouse over the screen as you experience it and click on stuff.

On Friday night, Lionel and I did a reading/presentation in Vancouver at the Peoples' Co-op Bookstore. Lionel presented and read some new ideas/poems, and I presented On Lionel Kearns. I did On Lionel Kearns in 2004 before I'd met Lionel, actually. We'd struck up a conversation on the old canpoetics list. I was amazed that he was doing so much work that's toward digital poetics back in the sixties-through-eighties. The only other Canadian poet who was doing work toward digital poetics at that time, so far as I know, was bpNichol. Chris Funkhouser used one of Lionel's poems as the epigraph to his book on the history of digital poetry.

Out from Otoliths — Bobbi Lurie's "The Morphine Poems"
Mon 22 Oct 2012

The Morphine Poems

Bobbi Lurie

56 pages

Otoliths, 2012

ISBN: 978-0-9872010-5-8

$12.15 + p&h

URL:
http://www.lulu.com/shop/bobbi-lurie/the-morphine-poems/paperback/product-20299925.html

the morphine poems succeeds as language breaks through language, metastasizes through the harboring of pain. The words spread across the page with a content all their own; uncanny, they haunt the body. Paragraphs of disorderly text are ordered; a poetics of life against death seeps through. This is an important and powerful book, concerned with illness that almost tends towards a pathology of speech itself. The body refuses to disappear and the words simultaneously convey despair, heartbreak, and resistance. Bobbi Lurie writes unsparingly about sickness and wayward health in a brave and detailed cartography of body and biography, creating a work of brilliance and renewal.

Everyone should read this book, which is everyone's journey, one way or another, a journey from life into life. It is a journey that is all too often shamefully hidden, a journey we need to contemplate and embrace. —Alan Sondheim

This wracked and fragile (i.e. powerful) volume “defines the disorder to not be a noun so much as a metaphor for self-sabotage”–semiotic flux run amok as daily rituals: eating, attending gatherings, girl-things. Long swirls of sensory and cognitive language sentences, one heir to Bob Kaufman’s Second April’s run-ons tinged with a morphine sensibility. A feminine dissolution, self-critical and at the mercy of bare larders and bereft landscapes. Sister Morphine stripped of hip. Honest as hell. —*Maria Damon

The Janus face of poetry has given Bobbi Lurie its undivided attention. —Jeff Harrison

What really strikes me is how utmostly clearly her mind worked in the imminence of “... the doctor’s pockmarked face up close as the iv drips 'i’ll kill you,' says he, 'then keep you alive' and i….i…i*…” There's nothing surreal about the rushing images, which are deeply and acutely self-reflexive. “perhaps a porch i never sat at a feeling of fellowship against deception ...“ *She doesn't fight reason or try to get "beyond" it. I mean: she never tries to escape the here and now by inventing hiding places. “a life without epiphanies is all i ask of poets ...“

In the morphine poems, Bobbi Lurie spares herself and her reader from faked escapes (consequently from the burden of suppressed fears), therefore she doesn't multiply suffering by itself, and that is liberating –and a very rare attitude! “how she gave me her seat as if a friend as i was passing out kindness took my hand filled with stones and sour summer reprieve in fruit ...“ —Márton Koppány

4000 Words 4000 Dead: final events in Chicago
Tue 23 Oct 2012

4000 WORDS 4000 DEAD

For the past four years, poet and artist Jennifer Karmin has been collecting submissions of words as a memorial to the 4,487 American soldiers killed in Iraq. These words also create a public poem given away to passing pedestrians during street performances around the country. Throughout October 2012, she has been transposing the elegy onto the walls of a dilapidated Chicago mansion utilizing the American flag as her writing utensil. 4000 Words 4000 Dead will conclude on Veterans Day and be published by Sona Books.

*TRAIN PERFORMANCE:
Friday, Oct 26 @ 7pm
Absinthe and Zygote series event
http://www.facebook.com/events/102735116554269
Featuring Jennifer Karmin, Matthias Reagan & Adam Weg.
Gather on the southbound platform of the CTA Loyola redline stop.

*INSTALLATION:
Saturday, Oct 27 @ 2-3pm & 4-5pm
Sunday, Oct 28 @ 2-3pm

*COMMUNITY DISCUSSION & POTLUCK:
Saturday, Oct 27 @ 6-8pm
Featuring Iraqi writer Mahmoud Saeed, Iraq Veterans Against the War member Peter Sullivan, Voices for Creative Nonviolence member Kathy Kelly & American Friends Service Committee member Mary Zerkel.

*STREET PERFORMANCE:
Sunday, Oct 28 @ 4-5pm

Jennifer Karmin with writers Toby Altman, Denise Dooley, Elizabeth Marino, Philip Miller & Sage Morgan-Hubbard.

All events, except for the train performance, will happen at 6018 N. Kenmore in Chicago's Edgewater neighborhood. Due to the home's condition, space is limited. RSVP at http://6018north.weebly.com/rsvp-for-the-home-show.html.

This project is part of the show Home: Public or Private? and presented by 6018NORTH, a non-profit space for experimental culture, installation, performance, and sound. What happens when our private life becomes public and public space becomes private? Located in a mansion on the north side of Chicago, the exhibition presents multiple artists exploring this question through installations within the rooms of the house. The investigations and activities presented explore the social, cultural, and political ramifications of our shifting conceptions of public and private space.

Artists include: Teresa Albor, Lise Haller Baggesen, Rebecca Beachy, Sandra Binion, Troy Briggs, Deborah Boardman, Sandra Binion, Cuppola Bobber, Keith Buchholz, Chelsea Culp and Ben Foch, Collective Cleaners, Meg Duguid, Daniela Ehemann, Maria Gaspar, Jane Jerardi, Jennifer Karmin, Nance Klehm, Joseph Kramer with Radius, Carron Little, Trevor Martin and Victoria Fowler, Lou Mallozzi, Jesus Mejia and Ruth, Harold Mendez, Katrina Petrauskas, Jesse Schlesinger & Vintage Theatre Collective.

Home: Public or Private? is sponsored by Chicago Artists Month.

Sister Morphine stripped of hip. Honest as hell. â€”*Maria Damon

The Janus face of poetry has given Bobbi Lurie its undivided attention. â€”Jeff Harrison

What really strikes me is how utmostly clearly her mind worked in the imminence of â€œ... the doctorâ€™s pockmarked face up close as the iv drips 'iâ€™ll kill you,' says he, 'then keep you alive' and iâ€¦.iâ€¦i*â€¦â€ There's nothing surreal about the rushing images, which are deeply and acutely self-reflexive. â€œperhaps a porch i never sat at a feeling of fellowship against deception ...â€œ *She doesn't fight reason or try to get "beyond" it. I mean:

she never tries to escape the here and now by inventing hiding places. â€œa life without epiphanies is all i ask of poets ...â€œ

In the morphine poems, Bobbi Lurie spares herself and her reader from faked escapes (consequently from the burden of suppressed fears), therefore she doesn't multiply suffering by itself, and that is liberating â€“and a very rare attitude! â€œhow she gave me her seat as if a friend as i was passing out kindness took my hand filled with stones and sour summer reprieve in fruit ...â€œ â€”MÃ¡rton KoppÃ¡ny

Harry Crosby - influence?
Wed 24 Oct 2012

Folks, One of my students, Neal Stidham, is writing on Harry Crosby as poet and publisher. The Rothenberg anthologies have helped to give Crosby some visibility even as his major works have gone out of print.

An issue of interest is -- what poets have read, been influenced by, or responded to Crosby in their work? We've found a surprising few.

So now the appeal to the broad readers of poetics ....

Can you think of poets, or specific poems, informed by or responsive to Harry Crosby?

Thanks!

Ken Sherwood

NEW FROM CUNEIFORM
Wed 24 Oct 2012

Cuneiform Press is pleased to announce the publication of two new titles:

TERRACE FENCE by BILL BERKSON While living in Bolinas, poet and critic Bill Berkson produced Terrace Fence, a minimal, conceptual, yet intimate book of black and white photographs in an edition of ten or fewer. This seminal piece of protest literature was reproduced in the summer of 2012 in an edition of 100. The text was printed letterpress on pure cotton paper and the photographs were reproduced from the original paste-up and tipped in by hand. Each copy has been signed by the author. $20

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHY: A FIRESIDE BOOK OF GURUS by ZEPHYRUS IMAGE Spirit Photography: A Fireside Book of Gurus (1973) by Michael Myers and Holbrook Teter is arguably the greatest book produced by Zephyrus Image.

Spirit Photography is essential reading for anyone interested in photography, conceptual art, artistsâ€™ books, and the unique cultural climate of the Bay Area in the '70s. This facsimile was printed letterpress and is faithful to the original in every way, right down to the errata slip. $12

American Books http://www.americanbooksusa.wordpress.com American Books is a press started by Natalie Haeusler, Brett Price, and Ed Steck in 2011. American Books will make visible and legible the work of a wide range of contemporary artists and writers and will take a variety of forms, from books and other physical objects of critical and creative work, to interviews, reviews, and more.

*Jeremy Hoevenaar http://www.sinkreview.org/sink-7/from-cold-mountain-mirror-displacement Jeremy Hoevenaar lives and pressure cooks in Baltimore. His chapbook, Adaptations of Pelt and Hoof, is available at H_NGM_N. A new collection, Cold Mountain Mirror Displacement, is forthcoming from American Books.

Augury Books http://www.augurybooks.com Augury Books is an independent press based in New York City. Committed to publishing innovative work from emerging and established writers, Augury Books seeks to reaffirm the diversity of the reading public. The editorial board is dedicated to fairness and quality of work.

*B.C. Edwards http://www.bc-edwards.com B.C. Edwards is a producer at The Upright Citizens Brigade theater in New York. He was awarded the 2011 Hudson Prize for fiction and is the author of the collected stories The Aversive Clause (2012) as well as two collections of poetry, To Mend Small Children (2012) and From the Standard Cyclopedia of Recipes (forthcoming, 2013). He is a regular contributor to BOMBlog and his work can be found in Another

Chicago Magazine; No, Dear; The Sink Review; Mathematics Magazine; Hobart; among others. He is also a Literary Death Match Champion and has the medal to prove it.

Birds, LLC http://www.birdsllc.com Birds, LLC is an independent editor-run poetry press based out of Austin, Minneapolis, New York, and Raleigh. Specializing in close author relationships, Birds, LLC believes that great books are a collaboration of editors and authors.

*Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ http://www.anabozicevic.com Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡ is the author of Stars of the Night Commute and Rise in the Fall. Her translation of Zvonko KaranoviÄ‡ recently received a PEN American Center/NYSCA grant. She flirts with knowledge at The Graduate Center, CUNY in New York City.

O'clock Press http://www.oclockpress.com O'clock Press and its journal of contemporary poetry, Clock, are operating out of Northampton, Mass.; Brooklyn; and Leipzig, Germany. Dreamed up with the help of Molly Schaeffer, and founded in the summer of 2011 by Andrew Durbin and Kit Schluter, the press and magazine are edited by Allen Edwin Butt, Andrew Dieck, and Kit Schluter. O'clock is collaborating with the letterpress, Elementary Press, run by Max Calloway and Rose Wisotzky in Hadley, Mass. under the auspices of Art Larson. The press's current projects are books from Polly Bresnick, Dylan Fettig, Dawn Lundy Martin, and Sampson Starkweather, out December 1st.

Readers: TBD

Boog City
http://www.boogcity.com

Boog City is a New York City-based small press now in its 22nd year and East Village community newspaper of the same name. It has put out approximately 200 publications, including 35 volumes of poetry, various magazines, and a newspaper, featuring work by Allen Ginsberg and Lawrence Ferlinghetti among others, and theme issues on baseball, womenâ€™s writing, and Louisville, Ky. It hosts and curates three regular performance seriesâ€”d.a. levy lives: celebrating the renegade press, featuring a non-NYC small press, its writers, and a musical act; the new BoogWork series, which features two poets reading, followed by a musical performance, and then the featured poet giving the gathered a poetry workshop; and Classic Albums Live, where up to 13 local musical acts perform a classic album live. Past albums have included Elvis Costello, My Aim is True; Nirvana, Nevermind; Sleater- Kinney's, Dig Me Out; and Liz Phair, Exile in Guyville. All of these series are hosted at Sidewalk Cafe.

Belladonna IOVIS Reading in NYC*

Fri 26 Oct 2012

A group/polyvocal performance from Belladonna* Collaborative presents:

A group/polyvocal performance from Anne Waldman's award-winning epic The Iovis Trilogy: Colors in the Mechanism of Concealment featuring her own reading with her son, Ambrose Bye, playing music. Other readers include Mei-mei Berssenbrugge, Ana BoÅ¾iÄeviÄ‡, Amy King, Julie Patton, and Stacy Szymaszek.

The Iovis Trilogy, Waldmanâ€™s monumental feminist epic, traverses epochs, cultures, and genres to create a visionary call to poetic arms. Iovis details the misdeeds of the Patriarch, and with a fierce imagination queries and subverts his warmongering. All of Waldmanâ€™s themes come into focusâ€”friendship, motherhood, politics, and Buddhist wisdom. This is epic poetry that goes beyond the old injunction â€œto include historyâ€â€”its effort is to change history.

The Iovis Trilogy is the winner of Pen Center USA's Poetry Award for 2012.

This event is made possible through the Poets House Literary Partners Space Rental Program.

Thursday, November 15, 2012; 7 pm. $10 (no one turned away) Location: Poets House, 10 River Terrace, New York, NY 10282

rob mclennan's review of LOOMS by Camille Martin
Sat 27 Oct 2012

I was happy to see rob mclennan's enthusiastic review of LOOMS - an excerpt:

"There is such an expansiveness to Martin’s Looms. The poems exist in that magical place where words, images and ideas collide, creating connections that previously had never been."

The rest of the review is here:
http://robmclennan.blogspot.ca/2012/10/camille-martin-looms.html

LOOMS is now available at SPD . . .

http://www.spdbooks.org/Producte/9781848612358/looms.aspx

. . . . as well as most any other online source or bookstore.

Cheers!
Camille

Meredith Quartermain: In tightly woven tapestry, Martin's “backstreet songs” re-invent a music of knowledge that navigates the hucksterism and catastrophe threatening our planet. The movement of her threads is fugue-like, punctuated by oboes and clarinets, mockingbirds and cicadas. Here, in the dream-space of time-lapse film, forms of life and ideas collide and morph, rippling through centuries of human consciousness to unravel as quickly as they ravel. Here, above all, Martin makes it possible to dance among our “origins in snake oil,” our “crusades to mirages” and our “accidental fictions.”

Arielle Greenberg: “A dreamscape on the outskirts of town, “in the badlands of the vernacular,” these hopeful, haunted poems populated by children and prisoners “hover between” realms domestic and exterior, real and imagined. Like candles described herein, this book gives off a melting, tactile glow.”

Description: The title of Looms signifies the weaving tool as well as the shadowing appearance of something, These "woven tales" were inspired by Barbara Guest's statement that a tale "doesn't tell the truth about itself; it tells us what it dreams about." The strands of their surreal allegories converse, one idea giving rise to another, and the paths of their dialogue become the fabric of the narrative. In a second meaning, something that looms remains in a state of imminent arrival. Such are these tales, like parables with infinitely deferred lessons.

145 messages · Mon 29 Oct 2012 – Fri 30 Nov 2012

November 2012 turned the aging room toward memory itself — the sixties remembered, the radical past re-screened, the epic still being written — as if a community grown old wanted to be sure the fire it came from had really burned. One hundred and forty-five messages moved through the list, and its currents ran to recollection: a thread asking the room to remember its own formative decade, an epic of revolution invoked, a poet still adding to her life's long poem. The month was a act of collective remembering.

The largest thread asked, simply, whether the room recalled the sixties. It reached, for its touchstone, to the film Reds — Warren Beatty's epic of the American radical left — one member recalling how it had gathered "The lives, needs, and desires of Jack Reed, Louise Bryant, Eugene O'Neill, Emma Goldman" into a single sprawling picture, the age when politics and art and desire had seemed to run together. It was nostalgia with a purpose: a room whose members had been young in that fire wanted to warm their hands at it once more, and to ask what had become of its heat.

The quarrel, gentle, was between memory and continuation. Against the backward look ran Anne Waldman's Iovis, the vast feminist epic still growing, the long poem as a way of not merely remembering the radical past but extending it — proof that the epic ambition of the sixties had not died but simply gone underground into a lifework. The room held both: the wistful re-screening of the old fire, and the poet still feeding it, page by page.

Around the edges the ordinary keeping went on — a poet's news, a teaching institute announced, readings in Philadelphia and New York, a webzine's new issue. The infrastructure carried on beneath the remembering, the small presses and the reading series doing their patient work, the living traffic of a poetry still, however faintly, being made and gathered — the present tense insisting on itself even in a month given over so largely to the past.

I have set November down exactly as the archive delivered it — the sixties recalled through Reds and its cast of American radicals, and Waldman's epic still growing against the nostalgia — because it was the month the aging list turned to warm itself at the fire of its own beginnings and to ask whether that fire still burned. A room that will spend its November remembering Jack Reed and Emma Goldman and, in the same breath, honoring a feminist epic still being written is a room refusing the easy comfort of pure nostalgia: not only mourning the lost radical age but pointing, stubbornly, to the poet who is still trying to carry it forward, on the theory that a fire remembered and a fire fed are not, finally, the same thing.

The Unlikely Stories: Episode IV Interdependency Issue is LIVE

Mon 29 Oct 2012

I'm writing to you from the last remaining ice in the Arctic Circle, where the staff of /Unlikely/ has gathered to get the best performance from our massive interlocking structure of computer mainframes, in order to bring you, one week before US Election Day and one year after you stopped caring, the Interdependency Issue of /Unlikely Stories: Episode IV/, featuring:

a novella-sized excerpt from /Calliope's Boy/ by Tom Bradley
The Rains of Ramghat: Short Fiction by Radha Bharadwaj
Charnel House Lover: Short Fiction by Cassandra L. Atherton Psychonautic Metaphorphosis with Franz: Short Fiction by Petra Whiteley
Next Year in Jerusalem: Creative Non-Fiction by Newamba Flamingo

I want to be hip: an excerpt from /The Magic Window/ by Helena Joshee
The High Point: A Short Story by Aryan Kaganof
Brain Meat for Naked Lunch: Sound and Textual Art by Kenji Siratori
Three Songs from /World News Vision/ by Jude Cowan Montague
Frankie Metro interviews Jude Cowan Montague
Qua Insurrection: A Cinépoem by Mayakov+sky and Brian Ang
Seven Images by Gui.ra.ga7
Four Paintings by Sana Arjumand
Four Sculptures by Mick / Mtz
Three Images by Diana Magallön
Six Cantos from/Kinyamaswa/, the epic poem by Andreas Morgner
Four Poems by Nicholas Karavatos
Four Poems by A. D. Hitchin
Four Visual Poems by Márton Koppány
Three Poems by Marc Vincenz
Sigerson translates Louis Aragon, Blaise Cendrars, and André Breton
Desert Empire: A Poem by Stephen Nelson
The G-point of the Unknown: A Poem by Ali Znaidi
Arudou Debito's report on the treatment of foriegners in Japan
Sam Vaknin's report on the changing Macedonian mentality
Arturo Desimone's reflections on the real meanings and falsehoods of the "Arab Spring"
Abu Yazan on the Gaza Youth Break Out movement
Ebenaezer Appies on renewable vs. nuclear energy in South Africa and a report on the student strikes in Italy

...representing Australia, China, Greece, Iceland, Hungary, India, Israel, Italy, Japan, Macedonia, Mexico, Palestine, South Africa, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates and the United Kingdom, along with a couple of Americans writing on France and Rwanda, in the hopes of getting these UN creeps to stop staring at us.

Read it and weep,

American Books http://www.americanbooksusa.wordpress.com American Books is a press started by Natalie Haeusler, Brett Price, and Ed Steck in 2011. American Books will make visible and legible the work of a wide range of contemporary artists and writers and will take a variety of forms, from books and other physical objects of critical and creative work, to interviews, reviews, and more.

*Jeremy Hoevenaar http://www.sinkreview.org/sink-7/from-cold-mountain-mirror-displacement Jeremy Hoevenaar lives and pressure cooks in Baltimore. His chapbook, Adaptations of Pelt and Hoof, is available at H_NGM_N. A new collection, Cold Mountain Mirror Displacement, is forthcoming from American Books.

Augury Books http://www.augurybooks.com Augury Books is an independent press based in New York City. Committed to publishing innovative work from emerging and established writers, Augury Books seeks to reaffirm the diversity of the reading public. The editorial board is dedicated to fairness and quality of work.

*B.C. Edwards http://www.bc-edwards.com B.C. Edwards is a producer at The Upright Citizens Brigade theater in New York. Thanks,
Your Friends at Boog City

Boog City 75: The 2012 Election Issue

featuring:

Contributing Editor Chris Casamassima asked the following question to a host of people around the country: “In about 250-300 words, tell us about your choice of (or whether or not you’ll vote for) president this fall, why you will/won’t choose them and if/how their policies reflect your community’s concerns.” Here's who responded. (Replies are ordered by state and city).

Yew: A journal of innovative writing and images by women.

YEWJOURNAL.COM <http://yewjournal.com/>

Happy NOVEMBER! YEW is proud to announce the arrival of the first issue of its second year, featuring Brooklyn Copeland, Ginger Teppner and Chris Tysh, with artists Venus Zarris, Homa Shojaie and Melissa Zuniga. Homa's stunning work is our cover feature this month.

All current and archived content can be accessed from the “ISSUE DETAILS” page. We have made some changes this month, and all archived covers have been reformatted to accomodate the names of the visual arts contributors.

Edited by designer Stephenie Foster and poet Carolyn Guinzio, Yew features three writers per month with visual art provided by the writers, their collaborators, other artists or the editors.

Please visit the site, and if you like what you find there, we would be grateful if you would help us by sharing news of this enterprise. Our Facebook page is here: https://www.facebook.com/pages/Yew-Journal/208944442504432

We are currently accepting submissions for our second year, and our complete guidelines are here: http://yewjournal.com/guidelines.html

Thanks for your support, and we hope you enjoy this issue of Yew.

all best,

Cat.
Mark Cochrane
$3

In the garden, haunches down like a library lion, Enid
the grown kitten gently parts
with paw, with claw,
the feathers on some rare, yellow-breasted chat, exposing a belly
she tears open with needle teeth & gory-sunwarm deliberation. And standing at his French doors

Felix is aroused to a horror. Loving birds as he does--

* featuring STEPHEN BOYER & KATE ZAMBRENO

We regret to report that due to the unfortunate post-Hurricane Sandy circumstances in the city, Segue will cancel its 11/3 event.

We are grateful to report that readings by these illustrious writers should be rescheduled at a later date (stay tuned). In the meantime, Segue will be back with vengeance next Saturday (11/9), when we will feature P. Inman and Michael Nardone! We do hope to see you there.

To the many affected by the storm, we send our warmest wishes for a speedy recovery. Our thoughts continue to be with you, as we are in high spirits for a weekend of relief-efforts and creative resilience!

yours,

Recommended: Weinberger's Paz

Sun 4 Nov 2012

I just received The Poems of Octavio Paz, edited and almost entirely translated by Eliot Weinberger (with a handful of translations by Muriel Rukeyser, Paul Blackburn, Elizabeth Bishop, Denise Levertov and Charles Tomlinson). A huge selection of one of Latin America's most important poets. The translations are lucid and fresh, eloquent and unassuming--no star turns at the expense of the original. And it's bilingual. The product of decades. I can't recommend it more highly.

Jack Kerouac School's WHAT WHERE SERIES NOV. 13 with Khadijah Queen, Chris Pusateri, and Serena Chopra

Mon 5 Nov 2012

Please join us for the third installation of the Jack Kerouac School’s What Where Series on Tuesday, November 13th. A reading featuring Khadijah Queen, Chris Pusateri, and Serena Chopra will begin at 7:30 pm in the Arapahoe Campus’ Performing Arts Center. This event is free and open to the public. More information on the individual writers can be found below.

Khadijah Queen holds an MFA in creative writing from Antioch University Los Angeles. She is the author of two poetry collections: Conduit (2008), and Black Peculiar, which won the 2010 Noemi Press Book Award for Poetry. Individual poems have been nominated four times for the Pushcart Prize, and won a Best of the Net award in 2011. Her work appears in jubilat, Memoir, Tuesday: An Art Project, Fire and Ink: An Anthology of Social Action Writing, Best American Nonrequired Reading, A Face to Meet the Faces: An Anthology of Contemporary Persona Poems and many other journals and anthologies. Her visual art exhibitions include national juried shows and a video screening at the Seattle Art Museum. The recipient of fellowships from Cave Canem, Squaw Valley Community of Writers and the Norman Mailer Writers' Colony, she curates the reading series Courting Risk and is currently working on an illustrated mixed genre project.

Chris Pusateri is the author of several books of poetry, most recently Common Time (Steerage Press, 2012) and Molecularity (Dusie, 2011). His work appears in many journals in the US and abroad, including Chicago Review, Fence, Jacket, Verse and others. In spring 2012, he was a visiting artist at La Kunsthalle Mulhouse in France, where he performed as part of their Locus Metropole exhibition. A librarian by trade, he has lectured on poetry and poetics at The School of the Art Institute of Chicago, Naropa University, Wittenberg University, and the École Polytechnique in Paris.

Serena Chopra is a 2009 graduate of University of Colorado at Boulder's MFA program, a PhD candidate in Creative Writing at the University of Denver, and a Writer-In-Residence at RedLine Gallery in Denver. She has been published in the Denver Quarterly, Fact-Simile, The Laurel Review, VOLT, Versal, Vinyl, Hot Metal Bridge, New Gnus, and No Tell Motel. Her chapbook, Speaking to Your Man, was released in August 2010 by Peninsulas Now Press. Her latest chapbook, Penumbra, was released 2012 from Flying Guillotine Press. Coconut Books will release her first full-length book, This Human, in Spring 2013. She was a finalist for the 2011 Dorset prize and a 2010 Kundiman fellow. Serena is also a dancer with Evolving Doors Dance Company in Boulder and a visual artist. She lives and works in Denver.

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is "Windows Without Dreams" by Daniela Voicu.

Mon 5 Nov 2012

The new ebook from Argotist Ebooks is â€œWindows Without Dreamsâ€ by Daniela Voicu.

Description:

â€œWindows Without Dreamsâ€ captures the sheer joy of living. Many of the poems are formerly delightful, dappled with quirky portmanteau words and turns of phrasing, which seem as natural as sunlight. Yet, this collection is not without its representations of sorrow; and there are poems about lost love and failing relationships where, to quote from one poem, â€œThe kissed memories of rainbow sentiments, salt wind and the sand storm, speak from my skinâ€.

Available as a free ebook here:

13 HOUR ELECTION DAY DISCUSSION/PERFORMANCE OF THE CONSTITUTION

Collaborative Art Group Lucky Pierre invites writers, scholars, artists, and activists to investigate: What do you know about the US Constitution?

On election day November 6, 2012, during polling hours (6am to 7pm), art collective Lucky Pierre (www.luckypierre.org), Defibrillator Gallery and 24 guest presenters will work through this American project as defined by the United States Constitution.

We'll start at the beginning of the constitution "We the people..." and work our way through to the end - "The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation." Drinks will, of course, be served after the 21st Amendment.

Each of the 24 guest presenters will present their findings as a 30-minute presentation / discussion / song / performance/ polemic. Each presentation will be followed by a group discussion. Visitors can come and go at any time throughout the day. Findings and texts from the day are to be released in book form on Inauguration Day 2013.

33. Amy King
Belladonna presents Anne Waldman & IOVIS: 11/15
Wed 7 Nov 2012

Belladonna is pleased to present:*

IOVIS Reading

Thursday, November 15, 2012; 7 pm

*Poets House, 10 River Terrace, NYC
*

A group/polyvocal performance from Anne Waldman's award-winning epic The Iovis Trilogy:

Colors in the Mechanism of Concealment featuring her own reading with her son, Ambrose Bye, playing music. Other readers include Mei-mei Berssenbrugge,* Ana Bo¾ièeviæ *, Amy King,* Julie*

Patton, and Stacy Szymaszek.

The Iovis Trilogy, Waldman's monumental feminist epic, traverses epochs, cultures, and genres to create a visionary call to poetic arms. Iovis details the misdeeds of the Patriarch, and with a fierce imagination queries and subverts his warmongering. All of Waldman's themes come into focus--friendship, motherhood, politics, and Buddhist wisdom. This is epic poetry that goes beyond the old injunction "to include history"--its effort is to change history.

The Iovis Trilogy is the winner of Pen Center USA's Poetry Award for 2012.

This event is made possible through the Poets House Literary Partners Space Rental Program.

Location: Poets House, 10 River Terrace, New York, NY 10282

*Admission: $10 suggested donation. Nobody turned away.
*

Reader bios:

Mei-mei Berssenbrugge is the author of twelve books of poetry, most recently a collaboration about weather, The Lit Cloud, with artist Kiki Smith published by Galerie Lelong. A collection of poems, Hello, the Roses is forthcoming from New Directions Press. She lives in New York City and northern New Mexico.

Ana Bo¾ièeviæ is the author of Stars of the Night Commute and Rise in the Fall. Her translation of Zvonko

Karanoviæ recently received a PEN American Center/NYSCA grant. She flirts with knowledge at The Graduate Center, CUNY in New York City.

Of* Amy King*'s most recent book from Litmus Press, I Want to Make You Safe, John Ashbery described her poems as bringing "abstractions to brilliant, jagged life, emerging into rather than out of the busyness of living." King conducts interviews for VIDA: Woman in Literary Arts and teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. Visit her online @ http://amyking.org for more.

Poet/Performance artist Julie Ezelle Patton's recent work appears in I'll Drown My Book, About Place

Journal: Rust Belt Tales, ((eco(lang)uage(reader)), Critiphoria. Julie's pioneering work with Let it Bee

Greenway, a land conservation project based in Cleveland, Ohio, has been honored with a 2012 Doan

Brook Association Watershed Hero Award. She lives in New York City. She digs gigs with Brad Jones,

Daniel Carter and anyone else willing to "throw down" with a badass improvising wordist.

Stacy Szymaszek is the author of Emptied of All Ships and Hyperglossia (both Litmus Press), among other titles. Her chapbook austerity measures is due out this year and she is working on a manuscript called Journal of Ugly Sites. She is the Director of The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church.

Ambrose Bye--musician (piano/keyboard, guitar, voice), composer, producer--grew up in the environment of The Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa University, counting Allen

Ginsberg and William Burroughs as "poetic" godfathers. He graduated from The University of California

Santa Cruz with a degree in music/sociology and was certified at the music /production program at the

Pyramind Institute in San Francisco, working on numerous productions and his own compositions as well. He has produced four albums with Anne Waldman: In the Room of Never Grieve, The Eye of the Falcon, Matching Half, and The Milk of Universal Kindness.

Anne Waldman has published over forty books of poetry, including The Iovis Trilogy: Colors in the

Mechanism of Concealment (Coffee House Press, 2011), Manatee/Humanity (Penguin, 2009), In the Room of Never Grieve: New and Selected Poems, 1985-2003 (Coffee House Press, 2003), and

Dark Arcana / Afterimage or Glow (2003), with photographs by Patti Smith. She is also editor of the anthologies The Beat Book (1996) and The World Anthology: Poems from the St. Mark's Poetry Project

(1969), and co-editor of Angel Hair Sleeps With A Boy In My Head (2001) and Disembodied Poetics:

Annals of the Jack Kerouac School (1993).

Waldman has received numerous awards and honors for her poetry, including The Dylan Thomas

Memorial Award, The Poets Foundation Award, The National Literary Anthology Award, and The Shelley

Memorial Award for poetry. She has received grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Foundation for Contemporary Performance Arts. From 1966 until 1978 she ran the St. Mark's Poetry

Project. In 1974, she and Allen Ginsberg founded the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at the Naropa Institute in Boulder, Colorado. She was elected an Chancellor of the Academy of American

Poets in 2011. Currently Waldman is the director of the MFA Writing and Poetics program at the Naropa

Institute. She divides her time between Boulder, Colorado and Greenwich Village, New York City, while also traveling the world to make it safe for poetry.

fierce imagination queries and subverts his warmongering.
All of Waldmanâ€™s themes come into focusâ€”friendship, motherhood, politics, and Buddhist wisdom.
This is epic poetry that goes beyond the old injunction â€œto include historyâ€â€”its effort is to change history.

“Poetry, Art, Music—and the Gift of Synesthesia” (an image essay in Talking Writing)

Wed 7 Nov 2012

A couple of years ago, Talking Writing published some poems of mine from LOOMS<http://www.spdbooks.org/Search/Default.aspx?AuthorName=camille+martin>, a manuscript that has recently been published by Shearsman Books.

Martha Nichols, one of the editors, recently approached me about writing an illustrated essay about what it’s like to work in three disciplines: poetry, collage, and music.

I invite you to have a look at the resulting featured spread in Talking Writing  <http://talkingwriting.com/image-essay-camille-martin/>and to explore the rest of the issue, which will be added to during the next few weeks: http://talkingwriting.com/image-essay-camille-martin/

Cheers!

POETRY + MUSIC + YOU!

+ Philly Book Party for JASON BALDINGER's The Lady Pittsburgh,

+ with special guest JEROME CROOKS,

+ plus Philly poets AMELIA BENTLEY, RAS MASHRAMANI, PAUL SIEGELL,

+ and music from ANDREW KELLER.

THE LADY PITTSBURGH VISITS BROTHERLY PHILLY

https://www.facebook.com/events/291726380944465/

JASON BALDINGER is the author of two books of poetry, The Whiskey Rebellion (with Jerome Crooks) published in 2011 by Six Gallery Press, and The Lady Pittsburgh on Speed and Briscoe Press, which is the reason for this particular shindig. He has contributed to The New Yinzer a nd Shattered Wig Press, and you can hear him reading from this manuscript at jasonbaldinger.bandcamp.com.

AMELIA BENTLEY has been in Philly about a year, and currently lives over Dahlak's in West Philly. She can tell you more about herself after the reading.

JEROME CROOKS is the author of i've been a mess and i feel fine (Speed and Briscoe, 2001) as well as the forthcoming The Moment I Feared (Low Ghost Press). Jerome has served as the active head of the Speed and Briscoe writer's collective since its inception in 1998. His work has appeared in the Pittsburgh City Paper, Natural Language, The New Yinzer, and Open Thread's regional review. His journalism has appeared in Magazino and Islas. He is the son of Mary Anne and Jerry Crooks, brother to Theresa, brother in law to John Leonard, and proud uncle of young Aeden.

ANDREW KELLER writes music under the name Snow Caps, and is also a member of Hermit Thrushes. He has made two albums, Baby Bird (Single Girl Married Girl) and Moonbreak (Edible Onion), by himself in the comfort of his own room. He has been writing and re-writing his third album, Don't Take Me Back, for about two years. In December, he plans to record this third album with a full band, which will include harp, clarinet, drums, bass, guitar, and ukulele. He is also a senior editor at Painted Bride Quarterly.

RAS MASHRAMANI lives in West Philly, stockpiling rations and gradually falling off the grid. She is currently new media editor at APIARY Magazine, and is part of Metropolarity, a Philly arts collective seeking to elevate and evolve science fiction. She blogs at motherWAP.blogspot.com. You can find more about Metropolarity at metropolarity.net.

PAUL SIEGELL promises to read all new work at this reading. He is the author of three books of poetry, is a copywriter by day, a senior editor at Painted Bride Quarterly by choice, and more of his work – and concrete poetry t-shirts – can always be found at “ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL” (paulsiegell.blogspot.com).

Tomorrow, Friday, Nov 9th -- 5 to 7 p.m. THE LADDER IS ALWAYS THERE: VIDA COCKTAIL PARTY & MEET-N-GREET

Thu 8 Nov 2012

VIDA welcomes an array of female writers who, respectively, serve as faculty to local MFA programs and administrate non-profit organizations supporting underrepresented writers. Emerging writers interested in joining in critical discourse that addresses the lack of gender parity in publishing are encouraged to join this conversation. What obstacles do female writers presently face? What opportunities are ours to embrace?

VIDA Members & Guests to be present:

- Cate Marvin (Co-Founder, VIDA)
- Amy King (The Count, VIDA)
- Rosebud Ben-Oni (HER KIND, VIDA)
- Becca Klaver (Events, VIDA)
- Rebecca Godfrey (Columbia)
- Lucie Brock-Broido (Columbia)
- Deborah Landau (NYU)

- Elizabeth Hornig (Brooklyn)
- Camille Rankine (Mahattanville)
- Jan Heller-Levi (Hunter)
- Sarah Gambito (Kundiman)
- Alison Meyers and Hafizah Geter (Cave Canem)

Brief presentations from VIDA’s guests along with a Q & A will be followed by informal conversation and merriment among those who actively desire to create a literary climate more inclusive of work by female writers.

This event is free and open to the public.

Bookstalls: Film, Poetry, & Performance in Celebration of Joseph Cornell, 11/16, 7 pm

Thu 8 Nov 2012

Hello There!

I'd like to invite you to an event honoring Joseph Cornell (1903–72), the reclusive genius who spent most of his life in a small home on Utopia Parkway in Flushing, Queens. Our program will feature performances by contemporary poets and filmmakers that showcase new work inspired by Cornell’s surrealist assemblages and films. There will be readings by poet-scholars Alan Ramón Clinton and Elizabeth Willis; a collaborative film narration by Flushing-based poet and filmmaker Stephanie Gray* *and Queens poet laureate Paolo Javier; a joint performance by poet and professor Lee Ann Brown and poet-artist Julie Patton; and recent work by experimental filmmaker Mark Street. Sixteen-millimeter presentations of key films by Cornell, including Rose Hobart (1936, 17 mins.), A Legend for Fountains (1957–1965, 19 mins.), Angel (1957, 3 mins.), and Centuries of June (1955, 11 mins. Co-directed with Stan Brakhage) will be interspersed throughout the evening.

MOMI is one of the great institutions in NYC<http://queenspoetlore.tumblr.com/post/7391008812/chris-wisniewski-engaging-jeff-bridges-in-a>, and admission to this Friday night event will also get you into the museum’s fantastic galleries, open till 8 pm, and which currently feature "American Falls"<http://www.movingimage.us/exhibitions/2012/09/15/detail/phil-solomon-american-falls-2/>, a mind-blowing installation by Phil Solomon on the third floor.

Laura Goldstein's poetry and essays have been published in American Letters and Commentary, MAKE, kill author, jacket2, EAOGH, Requited, Everyday Genius, Little Red Leaves, and How2. She has published several chapbooks including Inventory (Sona Books, 2012); Let Her (Dancing Girl Press, 2012); Facts of Light (Plumberries Press, 2011) and Ice in Intervals (Hex Presse, 2008). She co-curates the Red Rover Series with Jennifer Karmin and teaches Writing and Literature at Loyola University.

Judd Morrissey is an electronic writer and creator of multimodal works encompassing elements of internet art, live performance, site-responsive installation, and structured public participation. He is the creator of widely studied and anthologized digital literary works including The Precession (2011), The Last Performance [dot org] (2009), The Jewâ€™s Daughter (2006), and My Name is Captain, Captain (2002). His projects are presented nationally and internationally in festivals, exhibitions, conferences and commission contexts. Morrissey is currently an Adjunct Associate Professor at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago where he teaches courses in networked and computational writing, digital art, and contemporary performance. He was a collaborator of the former international performance collective, Goat Island, and is a fellow of the Creative Capital / Andy Warhol Foundation Arts Writing Grant program. More at http://www.judisdaid.com.

Martin Glaz Serup was born in 1978 and has published six childrenâ€™s books, most recently an illustrated story entitled When granddad was a postman (2010). He has also published six collections of poetry; his long poem The Field (2010) has been published in Denmark (2010), USA (2011), Sweden (2012) and Finland (2013). Serup is the former founding editor of the Nordic web-magazine for literary criticism Litlive and the literary journal Apparatur, and is the current managing editor of the poetry magazine Hvedekorn. He has taught creative writing at the University of Southern Denmark and at the University of Aarhus; he is currently a Ph.D. student at the University of Copenhagen. In 2006, Serup received the Michael Strunge Prize for poetry and in 2008 he received a gold medal from the University of Copenhagen for his dissertation of Poetry and Relational Aesthetics. In 2012, he was awarded the prestigious three-year grant from the Danish Art's Council.

Christine Wertheim is a poet, critic, performer and curator with a doctorate in literature and semiotics from Middlesex University, London. Her books include the poetic suite +|â€˜meâ€™S-pace (Les Figues Press), Corpus, a chapbook from Triage, and the edited anthology Feminaissance (Les Figues Press). She regularly writes critical pieces on art, literature and aesthetics, including for Cabinet, X-tra, The Quick and the Dead, Walker Art Center cat., and Patarcitical Interogation Techniques, vol 3, ed. Doug Harvey. She lectures and performs internationally, most recently at the Sorbonne, Birkbeck College, London, the University of Western Sydney, Melbourne University, and LaTrobe University, Melbourne. With her sister Margaret she co-directs the Institute For Figuring (IFF), which curates exhibitions and seminars on the intersections of art, science and mathematics. Her new book Mutters and Babels is forthcoming from Couterpath Books in 2013. More at http://christine-wertheim.com and http://theiff.org.

News, Deborah Poe

Fri 9 Nov 2012

Friends,

I write to share some publication news with you. *Hélène, *my a novella in verse, was published recently by Furniture Press. You can order a copy here (soon available also on SPD): http://furniturepressbooks.com/books/poehelene/. Of the book, Sandra Doller writes:

In this remarkable lineated novella, Deborah Poe's concentrated images accrete & transform: "orange-edged" becomes "gold," silk & lives are bartered, nuns see yet do not say. Poe's brilliantly rhythmic prose lines both interrogate & untangle fixed notions of genre & narration, spinning conversation between white spaces while experimenting with utterance & its antecedent silences; "I could think of no conversation to start" becomes "I can feel your loom all the way over here/a chest silent, full of light." In parts old-fashioned, sepia, handwritten, in parts postmodern patchwork lyric, the artist behind this work is generously capable of holding the paradox of distance & disappearance in proximity, inviting us to consider ceasing "the mind's clattering" via an astonishingly moving feminist lullaby to times & places past. Sandra Doller

In addition to Hélène,, *Keep, *a chapbook with selections from my newest poetry manuscript in progress, was just published with above/ground: http://www.abovegroundpress.blogspot.ca/2012/10/new-from-aboveground-press-keep-by.html. I lastly want to share my interview with *Womens Quarterly Conversation, * published in September:* * http://womensquarterlyconversation.com/2012/09/23/profiles-in-linguistics-and-poetics-deborah-poe/ .

I am in the process of scheduling readings through fall of 2013 to celebrate these publications as well as my third poetry collection *the last will be stone, too *(February 2013). Please get in touch with me if you are interested in scheduling a reading, or if you would like to review * Hélène *or *Keep. *

You can find information on upcoming readings and events, as I add them, here: http://www.deborahpoe.com/events.html. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Warm wishes,

Do you remember? The Sixties?
Fri 9 Nov 2012

Do you remember the film "REDS," by Warren Beatty? The lives, needs, and desires of Jack Reed, Louise Bryant, Eugene O'Neill, Emma Goldman, and many others were represented in an epic sprawling over several continents.

But one of the most curious features of this film was the inclusion of small groups of "witnesses" who interrupted the dramatic flow from time to time. They were persons who actually had known Reed, O'Neill and/or the other people struggling in the story of the film, or were able to describe effectively the times of the epic.

One project I am working on at the moment is a small archive concerning the 1960s. (My collection of Sixties materials is already scheduled to be placed with a university archive.) The thought occurred to me that I could include my own "witnesses" as interrupters of my own archive. Thus I am attempting to recruit anyone who lived through the 1960s, and has interesting stories to report, to submit a writing.

My process will be participatory and inclusive. I have no "party line." I welcome writings in any language and from any country. And I welcome any viewpoint on any or all dimensions of the 1960s, artistic, social, liberatory, cultural or countercultural, economic, political (or anti-political), religious (or anti-religious), musical, etc., etc. And I welcome Visual Poetry, in its own right.

During the 1960s, did you have interesting face-to-face encounters with Theodor W. Adorno, Michelangelo Antonioni, Joan Baez, The Beatles, John M. Bennett, Joseph Beuys, William S. Burroughs, John Cage, Noam Chomsky, Christo, Bob Cobbing, Gregory Corso, Stuart Christie, Raya Dunayevskaya, Bob Dylan, Medgar Evers, Federico Fellini, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Ian Hamilton Finlay, Allen Ginsberg, Václav Havel, Seamus Heaney, Dick Higgins, Allan Kaprow, Jack Kerouac, Martin Luther King, Philip Lamantia, John Lennon, Herbert Marcuse, Nam June Paik, Bern Porter, Herbert Read, Franklin Rosemont, The Smothers Brothers, Twiggy, Andy Warhol, or Frank Zappa?

Or, did you have interesting encounters with "ordinary" people?

In either case, I want to know your story (or stories).

Limits? Any writing from one small paragraph to 17 pages of text! Drawings and artwork may be included but, with them, there must be some kind of written text about the era.

My deadline to receive submissions is the end of November.

Your writings will NOT be published by me. They will simply be included in an archive university collection on the Sixties. If you want to restrict publication by others of your text than put the copyright mark on it.

Do NOT date your text! (If you put a 2012 date on your text someone at the university archive will stick it into a 2012 file-folder! I want to blend these statements by "witnesses" of the era into my own archive of the 1960s.)

Thank you.

Send your written and signed text to ...

Re: Do you remember? The Sixties?

Sun 11 Nov 2012

Would this be of interest?

I knew George Wallace, sat beside him at a band banquet when he spoke at our high school. my father was a state senator, and at the Governor's mansion in Montgomery, Alabama, I spit my first taste of caviar in a schefflera plant.

One project I am working on at the moment is a small archive concerning the 1960s. (My collection of Sixties materials is already scheduled to be placed with a university archive.) The thought occurred to me that I could include my own "witnesses" as interrupters of my own archive. Thus I am attempting to recruit anyone who lived through the 1960s, and has interesting stories to report, to submit a writing.

My process will be participatory and inclusive. I have no "party line." I welcome writings in any language and from any country. And I welcome any viewpoint on any or all dimensions of the 1960s, artistic, social, liberatory, cultural or countercultural, economic, political (or anti-political), religious (or anti-religious), musical, etc., etc. And I welcome Visual Poetry, in its own right.

During the 1960s, did you have interesting face-to-face encounters with Theodor W. Adorno, Michelangelo Antonioni, Joan Baez, The Beatles, John M. Bennett, Joseph Beuys, William S. Burroughs, John Cage, Noam Chomsky, Christo, Bob Cobbing, Gregory Corso, Stuart Christie, Raya Dunayevskaya, Bob Dylan, Medgar Evers, Federico Fellini, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Ian Hamilton Finlay, Allen Ginsberg, Václav Havel, Seamus Heaney, Dick Higgins, Allan Kaprow, Jack Kerouac, Martin Luther King, Philip Lamantia, John Lennon, Herbert Marcuse, Nam June Paik, Bern Porter, Herbert Read, Franklin Rosemont, The Smothers Brothers, Twiggy, Andy Warhol, or Frank Zappa?

Or, did you have interesting encounters with "ordinary" people?

In either case, I want to know your story (or stories).

Limits? Any writing from one small paragraph to 17 pages of text! Drawings and artwork may be included but, with them, there must be some kind of written text about the era.

My deadline to receive submissions is the end of November.

Your writings will NOT be published by me. They will simply be included in an archive university collection on the Sixties. If you want to restrict publication by others of your text than put the copyright mark on it.

Do NOT date your text! (If you put a 2012 date on your text someone at the university archive will stick it into a 2012 file-folder! I want to blend these statements by "witnesses" of the era into my own archive of the 1960s.)

Thank you.

Nov 12: 4000 Words 4000 Dead / Veterans Day

Mon 12 Nov 2012

STATEMENT

I, Jennifer Karmin, plan to do a final street performance of 4000 Words 4000 Dead on November 12, 2012 from 12-1pm.

The performance shall happen in downtown Chicago, beginning in front of the Vietnam War Memorial at Wabash & Wacker and ending in front of the U.S. Army Career Center at Harrison & State.

In April 2008, I began collecting 4000 words as a memorial to the 4000 dead American soldier who had been killed in Iraq. Submissions came from friends, students, writers, activists, soldiers, and those who read about the project online. I asked each person to send me 1-10 words, gave parts of the poem away to pedestrians during public performances across the country, and painted the words using the American flag as a writing utensil in two installations.

4000 Words 4000 Dead is a companion piece to Revolutionary Optimism, a response to Abu Ghraib based on confessions from Iraqi prisoners, sympathy cards, and The Tibetan Book of the Dead. Both texts have just been published as a chapbook by Sona Books and will be released online for Memorial Day weekend 2013.

New AHP Essay: "Stochastic Acts: the search string as poetry" by Mark Young

Mon 12 Nov 2012

Dear friends,

In the latest AngelHousePress essay, "Stochastic Acts: the search string as poetry," Mark Young examines the collage of realities and talks about poem making strategies involving the Google search string.

Please visit www.angelhousepress.com and click on essays.

remember, if you haven't already sent me an essay, rant, manifesto, interview, review etc for the essay series, please do so. it can be on any topic related to art & culture, on your own artistic practice or someone else's. hope to hear from you.

stay tuned for the launch of the fifth issue of Experiment-O, AngelHousePress's annual online PDF magazine that celebrates the art of risk. all being well, it should be out by the end of the month.

best,
Amanda Earl

LOCAL COLOUR pre-orders now available
Mon 12 Nov 2012

Thought this might interest you: http://www.ineditmode.com/wordpress/?p=475

In edit mode press is now taking pre-orders for LOCAL COLOUR : Ghosts, variations:

LOCAL COLOUR : Ghosts, variations is a collaboration between In Edit Mode Press and Canadian poet Derek Beaulieu. The publication takes as its point of departure, Paul Auster¹s novella Ghosts, and, in particular, Derek Beaulieu¹s reworking of Auster¹s text, Local Colour, which he describes as follows: ŒLocal Colour¹ is a page-by-page interpretation of Paul Auster¹s 72-page novella ŒGhosts¹. ŒGhosts¹ concerns itself with Blue, a private detective hired by a mysterious character named White to transcribe the actions of Black, a denizen of Brooklyn Heights living on Orange Street. As Blue reports his findings, the reader becomes more aware of the intricate relationship between Black and White, and a tactile awareness of the role of colour spreads through the narrative. With ŒLocal Colour¹, I have removed the entirety of Auster¹s text, leaving only chromatic words‹proper nouns or not‹spread across the page as dollops of paint on a palette. Taking inspiration from Kenneth Goldsmith¹s Gertrude Stein on Punctuation (Abaton Books, 2000) what remains is the written equivalent of ambient music‹words which are meant to be seen but not read. The colours, through repetition, build a suspense and crescendo which is loosened from traditional narrative into a more pointillist construction.

Focusing on the tension created in Beaulieu¹s manuscript and alluded to in the description of his process between the textual narrative and the relatively abstract graphical mark, and the opening it seems to provide towards a sonic realm, we are now hoping to solicit a series of textual, aural, oral, musical, and other interpretations, as well as more machinic Œutilisations¹, of Beaulieu¹s manuscript. What interests us, in particular, is the way in which Local Colour seems to split Auster¹s narrative text open, deterritorialising it, serially, by rendering it purely graphical, freeing it up, in the same gesture, to an excess and a bifurcation of meaning. Seeking to extend and amplify this ambition, we are now opening the project up for others writers, poets, musicians, artists to split Beualieu¹s manuscript open, to deterritorialise the coloured rectangles of his manuscript by textual, aural, narrative, graphical and other means.

Local Colour: Ghosts, variations collects and counterposes a wide array of strategies and approaches. It features both textual and aural contributions and contributions that combine text and sound. We hope it will prove an ambitious, vigorous collection that oscillates and moves between textual narrative, graphical mark, and aural impression, exploring these different realms whilst rendering uncertain any easy distinction between them.

Rain Taxi Review of Books!!! needs your help

Mon 12 Nov 2012

Dear friends,
*
*November 15th is Give to the Max Day <http://givemn.razoo.com/story/Rain-Taxi> in Minnesota, a day where anyone can give to outstanding non-profits in our state, and in doing so, give them the chance to receive even more cash via hourly prizes and recognition awards. *
*
*As a Board member of the literary organization Rain Taxi <http://www.raintaxi.com/> -- but more importantly, as a believer in the great work they do in highlighting the most compelling and imaginative literary works of our time -- I'm writing to ask you to show your support for this national literary treasure based in Minnesota. I know there are so many urgent causes in need of attention, but even a mere $10 will help put Rain Taxi in the running for additional funds. Give what you can! *
*

The best part is that you can make contributions NOW but have them processed on November 15th. Just click here <https://givemn.razoo.com/orders/new> to utilize the "schedule your donation" feature.

Warmest thanks,

Doing something a little different for next book: DICK

Mon 12 Nov 2012

I'm doing something media quirky for my book DICK, transmitting it via 365 transmissions over the coming year via FB and Twitter. It's "about" the JFK assassination - or, as it is written, "Made of maps, mirrors and labyrinths - though grounded in proprietary knowledge - DICK is a book that explodes the Kennedy assassination and the machinations around that event. References to the JFK murder are in fact quite oblique: in fact, the whole work is, including most obdurately the integral deployment of Morse Code as text..."

Here's the FB link:

Solidary poem with women in education

Tue 13 Nov 2012

What We Have, We Do Not Value, As Others Value What They Cannot Have â€“ Malala Yousafai Tribute The scene is familiar, girls smoking, swearing, counting down the minutes to when they can race from class and get on with what they believe to be the real world, caring little for the lessons they can learn in school, taking for granted the education that they distain. St. Trinians is the classic stereotype in film, and the scene is played out throught the west where education is a given, with little barrier to creed, ethnicity, etc.,

Not so in other lands.

This poem is in solidarity with girls who risk their all to get an education. Why not add to it by writing a verse of your own, or an image?

Michael Ruby's MEMORIES, DREAMS AND INNER VOICES
Tue 13 Nov 2012

Station Hill Press has published Michael Ruby's trilogy, MEMORIES, DREAMS AND INNER VOICES. For review copies, contact [redacted]

Here is a description of the 240-page book; blurbs from Jerome Rothenberg and Bernadette Mayer; and Michael Ruby's bio:

In Memories, Dreams and Inner Voices, poet Michael Ruby records three strands of our most elusive experiences: the involuntary memories of bygone times and places that flash across our minds day and night; the mysterious inner voices heard in the last seconds before sleep; and the dreams we mostly forget upon waking. Taken together, Ruby's trilogy is a unique fusion of personal history, fiction and poetry that not only rescues unplumbed psychic experience but also exults in the laughter, terror and baffling innuendos of unbidden utterance.

If "experiment" means anything when we speak of experimental poetry, Michael Ruby's gathering is a moving testament to the still real possibilities of such a venture/adventure. His project here—to explore "the varieties of unconscious experience" as they come to him—is an aspect of what Gary Snyder once described as "the real work of modern man: to uncover the inner structure and actual boundaries of the mind." That Ruby's workings with memory, dream, and the experience of language between sleep and waking issue in a new and powerful work of poesis is something to be celebrated and experienced by all of us in turn.

--Jerome Rothenberg

Thank you, Michael Ruby, for illustrating how to write: by giving us memories, dreams and the hypnagogic words available to us humans who can swim in that stream. No lifeguard on duty. Beware!

--Bernadette Mayer

* *

*Michael Ruby *is the author of five poetry books: *At an Intersection *(Alef Books, 2002), *Window on the City *(BlazeVOX [books], 2006), *The Edge of the Underworld *(BlazeVOX, 2010), *Compulsive Words *(BlazeVOX, 2010) and The Star-Spangled Banner (Dusie, 2011). A sixth poetry book, *American Songbook *, is forthcoming from Ugly Duckling Presse. He is also the editor of Washtenaw County Jail and Other Writings by David Herfort (Xlibris, 2005). A graduate of Harvard College and Brown University's writing program, he lives in Brooklyn and works as an editor of U.S. news and political articles at The Wall Street Journal.

Poetry Reading: Hung Q. Tu - Sunday, Nov 18, 2pm

Tue 13 Nov 2012

The Renaissance Society presents a reading by Hung Q. Tu, poet
Sunday, November 18, 2pm
FREE - Cobb Hall (5811 S Ellis Ave), Room 409

Born in Vietnam and raised in San Diego, Tu is the author of two highly praised volumes, Verisimilitude (Atelos Press) and*Structures of Feeling *(Krupskaya press). According to poet Rodrigo Toscano, “Tu's poetic modules are not ‘pieces’ in the traditional sense—that is, thematically staged, subjectively actored, and assumedly audienced, they are more like an intelligent arraying of graffiti that you'd run into in a modern city's sub-throughway, perhaps a bit run-down, but with a shiny glass building across the street—that is, a city intra-imperialized in every way, its complicit fractals, its bio-bit patois scrawled all about.”

If that eloquent description/testimonial doesn’t move you to put this event on your calendar then there is no hope. This event will take place in Cobb Hall Room 409, down the hall from the gallery. It is FREE and open to the public.

Please feel free to forward this along to others who may be interested.

Alan Sondheim pens WRITING UNDER: SELECTIONS FROM THE "INTERNET TEXT"

(Please consider buying this - support the press and my work; it has a great introduction by Sandy Baldwin!)

Alan Sondheim pens Writing Under: Selection from "The Internet Text"

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. -- The Center for Literary Computing and West Virginia University Press are pleased to announce the publication of _Writing Under: Selections From the Internet Text_ by Alan Sondheim. This extraordinary collection of work explores and examines what happens to writing as it takes place on and through the networked computer.

Sondheim began experimenting with artistic and philosophical writing using computers in the early 1970s. Since 1994, he has explored the possibilities of writing on the Internet, whether using blogs, web pages, e-mails, virtual worlds, or other tools. The sum total of Sondheim.s writing online is entitled "The Internet Text."

Writing Under selects from this work to provide insight into how writing takes place today and into the unique practices of a writer. The selections range from philosophical musings, to technical explorations of writing practice, to poetic meditations on the writer online. This work expands our understanding of writing today and charts a path for writing.s future.

John Cayley of Brown University proclaims Alan Sondheim to be "the poet, the artist, the maker who has most profoundly immersed himself and his work in the life-changing code formsof networked computation that have the world and its 'genesis redux' in their grip." Christopher T. Funkhouser of New Jersey Institute of Technology affirms that "anyone interested in knowing more about (or from) a writer who has practiced and thrived on the Internet since its very beginnings needs to read this book." (See below for more.)

Alan Sondheim is a Brooklyn-based new media artist, musician, writer, and performer. He is concerned with issues of virtuality, and the stake that the real world has in the virtual.

Writing Under is published by the Center for Literary Computing, West Virginia University. To order this title or to learn more about this book visit http://wvupressonline.com/sondheim_writing_under_9781935978732#4 or phone [redacted].

ePub 978-1-935978-74-9/$19.99
PB 978-1-935978-73-2/$19.99

"Alan Sondheim is one of the precious few who joyfully-and in abject misery-risks these terrors of writing for us, for our pleasure and our undoing. What happens? Language disposes of us. As if that were not all that is required of any writer, Alan Sondheim is also the poet, the artist, the maker who has most profoundly immersed himself and his work in the life-changing code-forms of networked computation that have the world and its 'genesis redux' in their grip."

- John Cayley, Literary Arts, Brown University

"Sondheim crafts an often meandering + always introspective recording of his prodigious on-line output. Birthed [and often remixed] in digital formats and drenched in anxiousness + desire, his staggeringly open text gives rise to possibilities of endless interpretation and comprehension, leaving multiple re-reads a definite must."

- Mez Breeze, Australian-based writer and practitioner of net.art

"Encountering Alan Sondheim's work we become aware how versatile a writer he is. The vast fore-lands of his Internet Text contains an estimated 25,000 pages of wryting involving - as Sandy Baldwin observes in his introduction "a phenomenology thick with human perception and intentions that are bodily, personal, political, and communal." In wryting, Sondheim produces all sorts of texts - poetry, prose, and the unnameable compositions existing amidst conditions of material transformations that merge (with) the physical and technological. Writing Under offers up generous statements of process, from a self- and other- aware master who is codework's godcyborg, a limner of psychedelic landscapes in Second Life, and an inveterate graphophile. This volume radiates foresight, stabilizing, if only for a moment, the fragility of "tenuously tethered bits and bytes" that exist in a vast field. For Sondheim, the creative is critical and vice versa; there's much telling in _Writing Under,_ projecting insight into the machinery of his oeuvre. Anyone interested in knowing more about (or from) a writer who has practiced and thrived on the Internet since its very beginnings needs to read this book."

Re: Do you remember? The Sixties?

I strongly recommend Reed's book Insurgent Mexico, on which the early part of Reds is based. His coverage of the Mexican Revolution. One of the great works of American literature.

POETRY + MUSIC + YOU!

http://www.moonstoneartscenter.org/moonstone-arts-center-events/philly-book-party-for-jason-baldingers-the-lady-pittsburgh/

MOONSTONE ARTS CENTER
110A S. 13th Street
Philadelphia, PA 19107

+ Philly Book Party for JASON BALDINGER's The Lady Pittsburgh,

+ with special guest JEROME CROOKS,

+ plus Philly poets AMELIA BENTLEY, RAS MASHRAMANI, PAUL SIEGELL,

+ and music from ANDREW KELLER.

THE LADY PITTSBURGH VISITS BROTHERLY PHILLY

https://www.facebook.com/events/291726380944465/

JASON BALDINGER is the author of two books of poetry, The Whiskey Rebellion (with Jerome Crooks) published in 2011 by Six Gallery Press, and The Lady Pittsburgh on Speed and Briscoe Press, which is the reason for this particular shindig. He has contributed to The New Yinzer a nd Shattered Wig

Press, and you can hear him reading from this manuscript at jasonbaldinger.bandcamp.com.

AMELIA BENTLEY has been in Philly about a year, and currently lives over Dahlak's in West Philly. She can tell you more about herself after the reading.

JEROME CROOKS is the author of i've been a mess and i feel fine (Speed and Briscoe, 2001) as well as the forthcoming The Moment I Feared (Low Ghost Press). Jerome has served as the active head of the Speed and Briscoe writer's collective since its inception in 1998. His work has appeared in the Pittsburgh City Paper, Natural Language, The New Yinzer, and Open Thread's regional review. His journalism has appeared in Magazino and Islas. He is the son of Mary Anne and Jerry Crooks, brother to Theresa, brother in law to John Leonard, and proud uncle of young Aeden.

ANDREW KELLER writes music under the name Snow Caps, and is also a member of Hermit Thrushes. He has made two albums, Baby Bird (Single Girl Married Girl) and Moonbreak (Edible Onion), by himself in the comfort of his own room. He has been writing and re-writing his third album, Don't Take Me Back, for about two years. In December, he plans to record this third album with a full band, which will include harp, clarinet, drums, bass, guitar, and ukulele. He is also a senior editor at Painted Bride Quarterly.

RAS MASHRAMANI lives in West Philly, stockpiling rations and gradually falling off the grid. She is currently new media editor at APIARY Magazine, and is part of Metropolarity, a Philly arts collective seeking to elevate and evolve science fiction. She blogs at motherWAP.blogspot.com. You can find more about Metropolarity at metropolarity.net.

PAUL SIEGELL promises to read all new work at this reading. He is the author of three books of poetry, is a copywriter by day, a senior editor at Painted Bride Quarterly by choice, and more of his work – and concrete poetry t-shirts – can always be found at "ReVeLeR @ eYeLeVeL" (paulsiegell.blogspot.com).

Subject: Solidary poem with women in education

What We Have, We Do Not Value, As Others Value What They Cannot Have â€“ Malala Yousafai Tribute The scene is familiar, girls smoking, swearing, counting down the minutes to when they can race from class and get on with what they believe to be the real world, caring little for the lessons they can learn in school, taking for granted the education that they distain. St. Trinians is the classic stereotype in film, and the scene is played out throught the west where education is a given, with little barrier to creed, ethnicity, etc.,

Not so in other lands.

This poem is in solidarity with girls who risk their all to get an education. Why not add to it by writing a verse of your own, or an image?

TONIGHT @ POETS HOUSE -- Belladonna presents Anne Waldman & IOVIS

Thu 15 Nov 2012

Belladonna is pleased to present:*

IOVIS Reading
Thursday, November 15, 2012; 7 pm
*Poets House, 10 River Terrace, NYC
*

A group/polyvocal performance from Anne Waldman's award-winning epic The Iovis Trilogy:
Colors in the Mechanism of Concealment featuring her own reading with her son, Ambrose Bye, playing music. Other readers include Mei-mei Berssenbrugge,* Ana Bo¾ièeviæ

*, Amy King,* Julie*
Patton, and Stacy Szymaszek.

The Iovis Trilogy, Waldman's monumental feminist epic, traverses epochs, cultures, and genres to create a visionary call to poetic arms. Iovis details the misdeeds of the Patriarch, and with a fierce imagination queries and subverts his warmongering. All of Waldman's themes come into focus--friendship, motherhood, politics, and Buddhist wisdom. This is epic poetry that goes beyond the old injunction "to include history"--its effort is to change history.

The Iovis Trilogy is the winner of Pen Center USA's Poetry Award for 2012.

This event is made possible through the Poets House Literary Partners Space Rental Program.

Location: Poets House, 10 River Terrace, New York, NY 10282

*Admission: $10 suggested donation. Nobody turned away.
*

Reader bios:

Mei-mei Berssenbrugge is the author of twelve books of poetry, most recently a collaboration about weather, The Lit Cloud, with artist Kiki Smith published by Galerie Lelong. A collection of poems, Hello, the Roses is forthcoming from New Directions Press. She lives in New York City and northern New Mexico.

Ana Bo¾ièeviæ is the author of Stars of the Night Commute and Rise in the Fall. Her translation of Zvonko Karanoviæ recently received a PEN American Center/NYSCA grant. She flirts with knowledge at The Graduate Center, CUNY in New York City.

Of* Amy King*'s most recent book from Litmus Press, I Want to Make You Safe, John Ashbery described her poems as bringing "abstractions to brilliant, jagged life, emerging into rather than out of the busyness of living." King conducts interviews for VIDA: Woman in Literary Arts and teaches English and Creative Writing at SUNY Nassau Community College. Visit her online @ http://amyking.org for more.

Poet/Performance artist Julie Ezelle Patton's recent work appears in I'll Drown My Book, About Place
Journal: Rust Belt Tales, ((eco(lang)uage(reader)), Critiphoria. Julie's pioneering work with Let it Bee
Greenway, a land conservation project based in Cleveland, Ohio, has been honored with a 2012 Doan
Brook Association Watershed Hero Award. She lives in New York City. She digs gigs with Brad Jones,
Daniel Carter and anyone else willing to "throw down" with a badass improvising wordist.

Stacy Szymaszek is the author of Emptied of All Ships and Hyperglossia (both Litmus Press), among other titles. Her chapbook austerity measures is due out this year and she is working on a manuscript called Journal of Ugly Sites. She is the Director of The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church.

Ambrose Bye--musician (piano/keyboard, guitar, voice), composer, producer--grew up in the environment of The Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at Naropa University, counting Allen
Ginsberg and William Burroughs as "poetic" godfathers. He graduated from The University of California
Santa Cruz with a degree in music/sociology and was certified at the music /production program at the Pyramind Institute in San Francisco, working on numerous productions and his own compositions as well. He has produced four albums with Anne Waldman: In the Room of Never Grieve, The Eye of the Falcon, Matching Half, and The Milk of Universal Kindness.

Anne Waldman has published over forty books of poetry, including The Iovis Trilogy: Colors in the Mechanism of Concealment (Coffee House Press, 2011), Manatee/Humanity (Penguin, 2009), In the Room of Never Grieve: New and Selected Poems, 1985-2003 (Coffee House Press, 2003), and Dark Arcana / Afterimage or Glow (2003), with photographs by Patti Smith. She is also editor of the anthologies The Beat Book (1996) and The World Anthology: Poems from the St. Mark's Poetry Project

(1969), and co-editor of Angel Hair Sleeps With A Boy In My Head (2001) and Disembodied Poetics:
Annals of the Jack Kerouac School (1993).

Waldman has received numerous awards and honors for her poetry, including The Dylan Thomas
Memorial Award, The Poets Foundation Award, The National Literary Anthology Award, and The Shelley
Memorial Award for poetry. She has received grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Foundation for Contemporary Performance Arts. From 1966 until 1978 she ran the St. Mark's Poetry Project. In 1974, she and Allen Ginsberg founded the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics at the Naropa Institute in Boulder, Colorado. She was elected an Chancellor of the Academy of American Poets in 2011. Currently Waldman is the director of the MFA Writing and Poetics program at the Naropa Institute. She divides her time between Boulder, Colorado and Greenwich Village, New York City, while also traveling the world to make it safe for poetry.

Â Â Â Â Â Â
Join
a panel of tremendous writers and actors, including Lili Taylor, Nick Flynn, TourÃ©, Bryonn Bain, Staceyann Chin, and Eric Boyd for a reading of moving, award-winning prose and poetry from the PEN Prison Writing Contest.
Proceeds from the event help ensure that PEN's Prison Writing Program continues to promote the restorative and rehabilitative power of writing by providing hundreds of inmates with skilled writing teachers, free Handbooks for Writers in Prison, and a forum where inmates are encouraged to use the written word.
Â
If you
canâ€™t attend, please sponsor a writing student to go in your place!
Â
This event will feature a special reading of poems and prose by incarcerated men and women from prisons that include: El Paso, Texas; Florence, Colorado; Ft Leavenworth, Kansas; Honolulu, Hawaii; Lexington, Kentucky; Montgomery, Alabama; Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Ossining, New York; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Rikerâ€™s Island, New York; Sacramento, California; Salt Lake City,

Brando, My Solitude, by Arno Bertina, translated by Laird Hunt and Anne-Laure Tissut<http://counterpathpress.us4.list-manage.com/track/click?u=2ad940a6d53d532f48d2f4b75&id=a24401331f&e=ae45d004d6> In this tale, conceived as a biographical hypothesis, the author and his grandfather meet posthumously. The resultant exploration of an existence played quietly out across the 20th century, through provincial French childhood, war, colonization and provincial French retirement, comes to us as a composite—some remembered, some researched, some wholly imagined—of careful, longing glances.

Videotape by Andrew Zawacki "On this lexical roadtrip, we delight in the drama of the anagram’s deep weathers: there’s an 'errant impasse' in the 'itinerant passenger,' there’s 'amber' in our 'chambers.' Content is the secret that our forms yield up to us. With gorgeous clarity, *Videotape *recalibrates our sightlines through the limber lens of our words." —Jena Osman

TODD COLBY has published four books of poetry: Ripsnort, Cush, Riot in the Charm Factory: New and Selected Writings, and Tremble & Shine, all published by Soft Skull Press. Colbyâ€™s poems have been read on NPR for Garrison Keillorâ€™s Writerâ€™s Almanac. Colby has given readings at The Poetry Project, The Rubin Museum, New York University, The New School for Social Research, Brooklyn Public Library, Cornell University, The Kingston Writers Conference, The Whitney Museum of American Art, PS 122, and more. He posts new work on gleefarm.blogspot.com.

SHANNA COMPTON's books include For Girls & Others (Bloof, 2007),Down Spooky (Winnow, 2005), Gamers (Soft Skull, 2004), and several chapbooks. Her third and fourth poetry books are forthcoming from Bloof Books as a two-volume project; a collection called Brink in fall 2012, and a book-length speculative poem called The Seam in spring 2013. Recent work has appeared or is forthcoming in Poem-A-Day/PoemFlow by the Academy of American Poets, Poetry Daily, the Awl, Eoagh, No Tell Motel, Black Warrior Review, the Equalizer, Womenâ€™s Studies Quarterly, Barrelhouse, Open Letters Monthly, and elsewhere. She holds an MFA in Poetry from the New School, where she also served as the editor-in-chief of LIT. Her poems and essays have appeared in dozens of publications and several anthologies, including The Best American Poetry 2005, Poetâ€™s Bookshelf II, The Bedside Guide to No Tell Motel, Bowery Women, Digerati, and the Poetry Foundation website. For more, please visit www.shannacompton.com<http://www.facebook.com/l.php?u=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.shannacompton.com&h=QAQEBqiHB&s=1> .

An Indiana native who has worked as a carny, a park ranger, a waitress in a disco ballroom, and the second woman welder in Firestone Steeleâ€™s history, BRENDA COULTAS now lives in New York. Coultas was a New York Foundation for the Arts Fellow in 2005. Her poetry has been published in Brooklyn Rail, Encyclopedia, Conjunctions, and many other journals. She is the author of A Handmade Museum, winner of the Poetry Society of Americaâ€™s Norma Farber First Book Award, and The Marvelous Bones of Time.

JENNIFER L. KNOXâ€™s new book of poems, The Mystery of the Hidden Driveway, is available from Bloof Books. Her other books, Drunk by Noon and A Gringo Like Me, are also available through Bloof. Jennifer was born in Lancaster, Californiaâ€”home to Frank Zappa, Captain Beefheart, and the Space Shuttle. She received her B.A. from the University of Iowa, and her M.F.A. in poetry writing from New York University. She has taught poetry writing at Hunter College and New York University. Her poems have appeared in the Best American Poetry 1997, 2003 and 2006, and will appear in the 2011 volumeâ€”as well as the anthologies Best American Erotic Poems, Great American Prose Poems: From Poet to Present, and Free Radicals: American Poets Before Their First Books. Her work has also appeared in numerous publications such as The New Yorker, American Poetry Review and Ploughshares. She is currently at work on her first novel. 89. Mark Weiss
Re: Do you remember? The Sixties?
Fri 16 Nov 2012

There are a bunch of books, unlike Reed's considered classics once upon a time, that are no longer read except by specialists. What happened to Son of the Middle Border, The Oregon Trail. Two Years Before the Mast? Any others to add?

Don't Deny My Voice: Reading and Teaching African-American Poetry
Summer Seminars and Institutes for College and University Teachers

Postmark Deadline: March 4, 2013

A three-week institute for twenty-five college and university faculty on African-American poetry and poetics.
Project director Maryemma Graham, a professor of English at the University of Kansas (KU), investigates African-American poetry from the early twentieth century to the present in this summer program. The approach moves "from social context and ideology to the texts and poetics," allowing the project "to generate new ways and new critical tools for reading, teaching, and interpreting a range of black poetries." Lorenzo Thomas's Don't Deny My Name: Words and Music and the Black Intellectual Tradition is read in its entirety before the institute begins. The program is divided into three week-long segments. The first week, on traditions in Black poetry, 1900-1960, including modernism and the Harlem Renaissance, is led by Jerry Ward (English, Dillard University) and Joanne Gabbin (English, James Madison University). The second week, on the aesthetics and production of Black poetry during the Black Arts era from 1960 to 1980, is conducted by Howard Ramsby II (Black studies, Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville). The third week, on African-American poetry, 1980-present, is led by Tony Bolden (African American Studies, KU). A central theme of the institute, the relationship between oral and written poetry, is particularly prominent during the third week, as the group investigates contemporary works. Numerous poets are to be studied, including Paul Laurence Dunbar, James Weldon Johnson, Jean Toomer, Langston Hughes, Robert Hayden, Gwendolyn Brooks, Amiri Baraka, Nikki Giovanni, Rita Dove, Natasha Tretheway, Terrance Hayes, and Nikky Finney. The institute meets five days a week for lectures, discussions, group collaborative work on research and curricular projects, panel presentations, and multimedia/digital presentations of poetry. In addition to the weekly session leaders, there are shorter presentations by twelve visiting literature faculty members, including Aldon Nielsen (Penn State University), J. Edgar Tidwell (English, KU), R. Baxter Miller (University of Georgia), Opal Moore (Spelman College), Adam Bradley (University of Colorado), and Meta DuEwa Jones (University of Texas, Austin). In addition to reading poetry throughout the institute, participants study selected criticism, much of it by institute faculty. In the fall following the institute, there are follow-up online sessions with prominent African-American poets, including Giovanni, Hayes, and Dove.
Faculty: Tony Bolden, Adam Bradley, Joanne Gabbin, Anthony Grooms, Joseph Harrington, William Joe Harris, Meta DuEwa Jones, Jill Kuhnheim, , R. Baxter Miller, Opal Moore, Tracie Morris, Aldon Nielsen, Howard Rambsy II, J. Edgar Tidwell, Jerry W. Ward, Jr.
Special guests include: Rita Dove, Nikki Giovanni, Terrance Hayes, Liegh McInnis, E. Ethelbert Miller, Ishmael Reed, Natasha Tretheway

Dates: July 14â€“August 3 (3 weeks)

About NEH Summer Seminars and Institutes for College and University Teachers
Each year the NEHâ€™s Division of Education Programs offers teachers opportunities to study a variety of humanities topics in Summer Seminars and Institutes. Each NEH Summer Seminar includes sixteen participants working in collaboration with one or two leading scholars. Participants have access to a major research collection, with time reserved to pursue individual projects.
Amount of Award
NEH Summer Scholars are awarded fixed stipends to help cover travel costs, books and other research expenses, and living expenses. Stipend amounts are based on the length of the NEH Summer Seminar or Institute: $2,100 (2 weeks), $2,700 (3 weeks), $3,300 (4 weeks), $3,900 (5 weeks), or $4,500 (6 weeks).
Eligibility
NEH Summer Seminars and Institutes are designed primarily for teachers of American undergraduate students. Qualified independent scholars and those employed by museums, libraries, historical societies, and other organizations may be eligible to compete provided they can effectively advance the teaching and research goals of the project.
You may request information about as many projects as you like, but you may apply to no more than two NEH Summer Programs (seminars, institutes, or Landmarks workshops) and you may attend only one.
Please note:

Adjunct faculty, community college faculty and first-time participants are encouraged to apply.

Up to two seminar spaces and three institute spaces are reserved for current full-time graduate students in the humanities.

How to Apply
For more information and application instructions, please visit the program website listed above.

forgotten classics
Fri 16 Nov 2012

So far, and just from the US:

Reed, Insurgent Mexico
Garland, Son of the Middle Border
Dana, Two Years Before the Mast
Parkman, The Oregon Trail

And another:
Jaime de Angulo, Indian Tales

Is Adams' The Education of Henry Adams still read? If not, add it to the list.

Anybody have stuff to add?

Australian Poets in Jacket2 - final installment
Sat 17 Nov 2012

(Apologies for any double-up emails)

_____

"A contemporary poetic landscape forms in the mind's eye no anthologizing entelechy blesses....Make less anthology, more poetry".
Corey Wakeling (an Australian poet represented in this feature.)

The fifty-one poets included in this feature comprise a modest cross-section of contemporary Australian poetry.
I think this collection of poems is "less anthology, more poetry".

I am pleased to present, with Michael Hennessey, editor of Jacket2, the fifth and final instalment of the feature of poems and visual art :

I hope you enjoy it.

Very best wishes,
Pam Brown
